Thefts by elderly create gray area in enforcement

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

When is a crime not a crime? A new high-tech security system at a local discount store has led to a bumper crop of shoplifters caught over the last three months.

Among the offenders were three senior citizens arrested in just one week.

Critics of the store's stringent policy were outraged.

On March 1, a 71-year-old man was reportedly videotaped stealing sinus medicine. Four days later a 66-year-old woman was taped as she slipped Tums in her nurse. Then, on March 7, a 90-year-old woman was led away from the store in handcuffs.

She was observed leaving the store with Metamucil she had failed to pay for and put in her purse.

Alco pressed charges against all three, leading them to plead guilty in municipal court. Each was assessed a fine and released.

City officials said one sat in jail for several hours, ashamed to call her children and tell them what happened.

Alco manager Tom Brown said $155,000 in losses from shoplifting in 1991 led to installation of elaborate video detection systems and hiring a security officer.

Asked about the store's policy of having grandparents arrested, Brown said, "If they passed by the opportunity to pay for it, that's not my decision. And if you discriminate between people just because one is older than another, that's not fair. It's easy to be sued for discrimination."

Critics of the store's policy charge they are not taking into account the fact that elder adults may suffer Alzheimer's or simply forget to pay.

"I have nothing to do with what their intent is," Brown said. "If the judge wants to show leniency because of intent, that's out of my hands."

Brown said his supervisors issued a clear mandate: Reduce loss or find another job.

Suzie Wilkinson, executive director of Shepard's Crook Nursing Agency, is one of those outraged by the situation.

"We saw a 90-year-old lady's name in the paper who had been in here," she said. "I think she is absent-minded. I told Tom Brown we would be happy to pay for whatever a person over 65 took if they would just put it on our account, let us know and drop the charges. I told him we would investigate their situation to find out if they needed help."

"He told me, 'No.' He said he didn't care if they were nine or 90, they were going to jail. I can't believe someone could have so little compassion."

Wilkinson said she met with Brown and attempted to explain the dire financial conditions in which the elderly often find themselves.

"He said he had old people coming in and stealing medicine from him all the time and he would press charges," she said of Brown's response.

Shepard's Crook closed their store account. The 90 agency employees have also vowed to boycott Alco and are hoping others will do the same.

Brown responded, "This is a company policy, but they are launching a personal attack on me. I got home last night and my wife was crying because of all the harassing, hateful phone calls she has been getting over this. That is a personal attack on me and my family."

Along with arresting old people, Alco has called police to arrest a comparatively large number of children.

Municipal Court records indicate in the last nine weeks 16 juveniles have been arrested in Pampa for shoplifting. Twelve were caught at Alco. All were nabbed red-handed. Some for only a candy bar, but the police were called.

"If we begin to say that we don't press charges on an 11-year-old, then what about a 13-year-old?" Brown asked. "If we don't press charges against a 66-year-old woman who steals something even though she has $20 in her purse, what about a man who is 55? Where do we draw the line? What do we allow?"

He continued, "Shoplifting is a real problem everywhere and it is on the rise. It's a problem all over Pampa, but we are doing something about it. We want people to know if they shoplift in Alco, they will get caught."

Brown pointed out shoplifting is against the law, no matter the age of the offender.

"There was one lady we caught who had her granddaughter with her when she did it," Brown said. "Do we let her go? Then what about the lady shoplifting with a baby in her arms?"

An irate Wilkinson said, "I asked him (Brown) if he realized (the 90-year-old woman arrested) had very high blood pressure and could have had a stroke and died from the anxiety of being arrested. He told me that it was her decision to steal, not his."

Wilkinson said the American Association of Retired Persons - AARP - discussed Alco's policy during their last meeting and is considering an official response to the store.

Texas Department of Public Safety troopers investigate the scene of a one-vehicle accident on Interstate 40, east of Groom, Saturday afternoon.

Family escapes serious injury in I-40 one-vehicle accident

GROOM - Eleven members of a family were transported to Coronado Hospital by ambulance following a one-vehicle rollover on Interstate 40 Saturday afternoon.

The family, originally from Russia, was traveling west on Interstate 40, 4.1 miles east of Groom, when the right rear tire of the van blew out, the van ran into the median and rolled twice, said Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Lynn Holland Jr.

Holland, who was patrolling Interstate 40, said he had checked the vehicle on radar traveling at 74 mph, and after waiting for traffic to clear, had turned around and was behind the van about a quarter- to a half-mile when he witnessed the accident at 2:09 p.m.

"I was behind the vehicle, but had not activated any emergency lights when I saw a big cloud of smoke come out of the back when the right rear tire blew," Holland said.

The 11 occupants consisted of seven children, their parents and one set of grandparents. The family had been to Pennsylvania to pick up the grandparents and was returning to the residence at Hesperia, Calif.

The driver of the van, Peter Polischuk, and the seven children received non-incapacitating injuries of cuts and bruises, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

The children's mother, Lyubov Polischuk, 34, was being assessed at the hospital at press time.

The grandparents, Stepan Polischuk, 68, had fractures and Nadezhda Polischuk, 63, was in X ray at press time. - Beth Miller

Man's 12-day incarceration raises question of legality

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Several area district attorneys and a Pampa defense attorney say proper procedure was not followed in the holding of a man arrested by Pampa police following a vehicle chase through town on Feb. 23.

David Borsheim, 18, address listed as 524 Powell, was arrested by police that day and initially placed in jail on anticipated charges of aggravated assault on a peace officer and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, both felony charges. He was transferred to Gray County Jail, where he was confined until 12 days later, on March 6, when he was released on a personal bond.

Borsheim was taken before Precinct 1 Justice of the Peace Bob Muns on Feb. 23, who set a $5,000 bond on the unauthorized use charge and an $8,000 bond on the aggravated assault charge.

On Feb. 24, the day after the arrest, Pampa Police Chief Jim Laramore had the aggravated assault on a peace officer charge marked off the police jail log and said the elements were not there to charge Borsheim with the aggravated assault. He said if the elements had been present a warrant would have been issued.

Randall County District Attorney Randy Sherrod, Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill, former 31st Assistant District Attorney John Mann and Pampa defense attorney James M. "Rowdy" Bowers all agree that on the unauthorized use charge, Borsheim was held improperly because a formal complaint was not filed in the case.

Bowers places the blame with the Pampa police and says Laramore made a mistake. "If a person's been in jail over 48 hours and hasn't been charged, it's Laramore's screw-up," Bowers said.

"It was up to the police to get a complaint filed. Without a complaint and 12 days in the bucket, I'd say they held him illegally," Bowers said. "There's no doubt about it. But there's nobody over there who wants to claim responsibility for that."

Hill said, "A complaint needs to be filed fairly quickly after a person is arrested (on a felony charge and without a warrant), certainly within 72 hours. That's not a law, that's just the best thing to do and by far the safest way so you don't have a problem."

Sherrod said his office normally uses a 48-hour rule. "If you don't have a complaint filed within that time, depending on the case, the general rule is we pop them out of jail," Sherrod said, adding that "there may be some exceptions."

He also added that he did not know all of the facts of the Borsheim case, but said "it would not be handled that way in this county."

He said that although the criminal aspect could be pursued through indictment on the case, he believes there could be a "substantial problem" relating to the violation of the defendant's civil rights.

Mann said, "I agree they should have filed a complaint. In any felony case, something should definitely be filed, preferably in 48 hours, but no later than 72 hours. Either charge them or release them, but don't lose them."

Laramore, in an earlier interview said that because the arrest was an "on view arrest" a complaint was not needed. He also said that the justice of the peace held an "examining trial" when he set Borsheim's bond and that under Article 16.17 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it was up to the magistrate to either issue an order within 48 hours or release the defendant.

Mann said, "I would respectfully disagree with Chief Laramore. They didn't need a complaint to arrest him (because of the alleged on view violation), but they must have a formal complaint to hold him which is filed with the magistrate and he could issue a warrant."

"They are confusing the right of the warrantless arrest with the right to later formally charge that person in court when the court formally opens for business the next day. They have an obligation to file the proper paperwork."

Mann also said that the initial setting of bond by a justice of the peace is not an "examining trial." An examining trial is described in Black's Law Dictionary as a preliminary hearing to determine whether there exists probable cause for binding one over to the grand jury.

Laramore said that he believes his department followed proper procedure. He said the reports were forwarded to the district attorney's office.

"We did everything we normally do," Laramore said.

Because of the timing of the arrest, which was a day after former District Attorney Harold Comer announced his resignation and four days before he pleaded guilty to official misconduct, Pampa Police Sgt. Ken Hopson said the paperwork on the arrest was sitting at the district attorney's office for days and not being acted upon.

Laramore said on a weekend situation, paperwork sits until Monday when it is typed and then assigned to CID (criminal investigative division). "So it could be a four-day situation," he said.

Hopson said that after the police department realized the paperwork on Borsheim was sitting at the non-functioning district attorney's office, it was then forwarded to County Attorney Bob McPherson.

McPherson said he plans to present the paperwork to the new district attorney. He added, "I think there's a misunderstanding in the whole shebang."

Regarding Laramore dropping the aggravated assault charge, the chief said, "One of the elements in aggravated assault is bodily injury. There wasn't any bodily injury involved (in the Borsheim case)," Laramore said in a March 6 interview. "Past history has shown that without bodily injury involved the (former) DA (Harold Comer) will drop the case."

Hopson, who also sat in on the March 6 interview said regarding the aggravated assault charge, "The elements are there according to the Penal Code book, but because of previous track record with the district attorney, he will not accept it and that's where you get into experience of police officers who have been here for a while like all three (Laramore, Hopson, and Lt. Steve Chance) of us. We know what he will and won't accept."

Bowers, who helped get Borsheim out of jail, said he believes the aggravated assault charge was dropped because he alleges the officer involved in the chase, Morse Burroughs, violated the departmental pursuit policy.

Chautauqua-related suit settled

A lawsuit against Pampa Fine Arts Association, regarding an incident at last year's Chautauqua, was filed and settled last week in 223rd District Court.

The lawsuit was filed by Jay Holt and Rose M. Holt, individually and as next friends of Heather Holt, their 3-year-old daughter. The Hols alleged in the lawsuit that the Pampa Fine Arts Association was liable for damages that the child received while on a pony ride at the annual Labor Day celebration on Sept. 2.

Another child reportedly grabbed the tail of the pony the 3-year-old was riding and the horse reportedly threw the child head first onto a black-topped trail going through Central Park. She was hospitalized for several days after the incident.

According to the court documents, Pampa Fine Arts Association and its insurance carrier, Cimarron Insurance Group, agreed to pay $13,000 to settle the lawsuit filed Tuesday, along with court costs.

The $13,000 was divided by giving the parents $9,329 for damages sustained by them from the injuries to their child, and $3,671 was to be paid to the child for personal injuries sustained.

In exchange for the $13,000 settlement, the Hols agreed to release the Pampa Fine Arts Association and its insurance from future liability.

Kingsmill grant up for discussion

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners Court is scheduled to again discuss a grant application for water for the Kingsmill Water Supply Corp. during a regular meeting Monday.

The grant application item is scheduled to be discussed beginning at 10 a.m., according to the agenda. The Commissioners Court meeting is set to get under way at 9 a.m. in the county courtroom on the second floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

County Attorney Bob McPherson said Friday that he has now received the requested signed documents, including a hold-harmless agreement from the Kingsmill Water Supply Corp. He said he plans to recommend to the Commissioners Court that the county proceed with asking the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to draw up a grant application for an emergency urgent need funds grant.

The Kingsmill community, because it is not incorporated, cannot seek the grant on its own. The community has requested the county to seek the application and funding.

The community's water supply recently has been contaminated and the community is seeking a new source of water.

In other business, the Commissioners Court is scheduled to discuss volunteer fire service with Hoover area residents at 10:30 a.m.

Other items on the agenda include:

- discuss bids for food service for new jail, along with other jail discussion.
- consider the resignation of Joe VanZandt, county extension agent.
- discuss county supplement pay for extension agent.
- discuss letter from Potter

County regarding forensic pathology services.

Indictments lead to arrests of three on charges of delivering cocaine

Panhandle Regional Narcotics Trafficking Task Force, in conjunction with the Pampa Police Department, served indictments charging delivery of a controlled substance on three Pampa residents Friday afternoon.

Arrested on the indictments, which were unsealed Friday, were the following:

• Sheila Dawn Grays, 27, 1072 Prairie Dr., was arrested at her residence on an indictment charging delivery of a controlled substance (cocaine). She was transferred to Gray County Jail and later released on bond.

• David Perez Gutierrez, 36, 802 E. Campbell, was arrested at his residence on two indictments charging delivery of a controlled substance (marijuana and cocaine). He remained in the city holding facility at press time Saturday evening.

• Roy Dowd Britt, 28, 1124 Prairie Dr., was arrested at Gray County Jail on two indictments charging delivery of a controlled substance indictments. He remained in Gray County Jail at press time Saturday evening.

Bond on each charge for each defendant was set at $20,000.

Terry Young and Rick Hall, with Pampa police and the task force, said the arrests are the result of indictments returned by a 31st District Court Gray County grand jury in the past couple of months.

Although police said the delivery charges against the three people arrested Friday do not involve large amounts of drugs, they said they were "going after the delivery instead of quantity."

The deliveries mainly consisted of "single person usable amounts," police said.

The arrests began about 5 p.m. and were completed by about 5:30 p.m.

The investigation, which led to the indictments, began in mid-November, Young said.

Others involved in the arrests and investigation were members of the Borger Police Department and Perryton Sheriff's Office, which both have agents who are members of the task force. - Beth Miller

Legality

Bowers said that the officer's reports read that he pulled up beside the vehicle Borsheim was driving at least four times while involved in the pursuit.

However, Laramore said Friday that the policy was not violated. He said that prohibited practices under the policy include "pull along side the violator," and he said Burroughs did not pull "along side" the Borsheim vehicle, but positioned the patrol vehicle with front wheels to the back wheels of the Borsheim vehicle.

Although most of the district attorneys contacted say the chief was within his bounds to dismiss the charge, because a complaint had not yet been filed, one district attorney, Sherrod, said he did not believe the chief had the power to dismiss the charge.

"In my opinion, no, he did not have the right to dismiss the charge. I don't understand how anyone can dismiss it but the proper prosecutor," Sherrod said.

Hill, however, said he believes the chief had the authority to dismiss the case, if a complaint had not been filed by the prosecuting attorney. "Certainly the chief of police does not have the authority to dismiss cases that are filed by the prosecuting attorney," Hill said, adding, however that because a complaint had not been filed in this case, "I really don't see a major problem."

Mann agreed with Hill, saying the chief of police could decide not to follow through with the charge, if a complaint had not been filed.

Elderly

However, two AARP members who asked their identities not be revealed said they see no reason for the organization to get involved.

"I used to work in retail," one said. "I know how people steal. Just because they are old, that doesn't make it right."

The other noted, "Wrong is wrong and right is right and that is that. Stealing is wrong. Age is no excuse. If it were, I could get away with murder."

A random survey of managers of Pampa retail outlets who spoke on condition of anonymity indicated Alco's stringent policy is the exception rather than the rule.

One store manager said, "Calling the police is the last resort, not the first. The issue isn't how many people you throw in jail, it's stopping theft. You can do that by telling them you saw them and asking them to give the merchandise back or pay for it."

Another stated, "As a practical matter, we're going to treat children and old people different than some 19-year-old. Maybe we shouldn't, but we do. You have to find out what's going on. There are other ways to deal with this other than having them put in jail."

Still another explained, "We assume they just forgot to pay for it. Maybe they did or didn't, but that's our assumption. We get the money or the stuff. We only call the police if there is no other way out."

Each of those polled said they recognize senior citizens do shoplift. However, they said economic, sociological and sympathy factors play heavily into how they deal with each case, along with the value of the item taken.

At the same time, as one store manager pointed out, stores should still have the right to prosecute people caught shoplifting in their businesses without fear of retaliation.

Extension Service sponsors program on acceptance for disabled children

WHEELER — Texas Agricultural Extension Service along with the Wheeler County Extension Homemakers and Home Economics Advisory Committee is sponsoring a countywide program "Pathways to Acceptance for Children with Disabilities."

Letitia Clay will speak in Shamrock on Monday at 7 p.m. at the Shamrock School cafeteria. She will speak in Wheeler on Tuesday, at 7 p.m. at the Wheeler Church of Christ fellowship hall.

Since becoming involved with Partners in Policymaking, a new program of the Texas Planning Council for Developmental Disabilities, Mrs. Clay, along with her husband, has successfully obtained an inclusive, individualized education with age appropriate peers for their son, Rodney. She has given presentations at state-wide conferences regarding inclusive educations, presented educational rights workshops, and testified before the Texas State Senate and MHMR Review Task Force regarding state school closures, with the San Angelo Standard Times publishing article she wrote regarding the same.

Currently, she is serving as Area Development Director for PATH, (Partnerships Assisting Texans with Handicaps), as a Regional Advocate of the Association for Retarded Citizens in Texas helping other parents obtain appropriate educational plans for their children.

Clay's presentation, Pathways to Acceptance, will include her own personal history, suggestions for parents, professionals, and individuals that are interested in people with disabilities. There will be a Question and Answer period after the presentation. Clay is the daughter of Rodney and Martha Baker of Shamrock. She attended school in Shamrock and graduated in 1977. She is married to M.D. Clay, the son of Coy and Willie Pearl Clay, also of Shamrock.

Republicans canvass votes from Tuesday primary election

A Friday canvass of the vote in the Republican primary showed that 3,650 people voted, 10 more than previously reported after Super Tuesday, said Susan Triplehorn, Gray County Republican Party chair.

Triplehorn said a few votes difference was noted in a few races, but no race outcomes were changed.

Those helping with the canvassing of the votes were Hal Cree, Janice Hoffer, Jo Wisdom, Jean Sims, and Rocky Lucas.

Also on Friday, the candidates in the three April 14 runoff elections drew for places on the ballot, Triplehorn said.

John Triplehorn drew the first position on the ballot in the sheriff's runoff, with Jim L. Free to be second.

In the Precinct 1 constable runoff, James H. Lewis will be first on the ballot with Larry Joe Fulton to be second.

In the Precinct 4 constable runoff, Curtis Dalton's name will appear first with Joe Billingsley listed second on the ballot.

Top O' Texas Kiwanis plan membership dinner

Persons interested in joining the Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club may attend a membership drive meeting set for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Western Sizzlin', 23rd and Hobart streets.

Dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by the meeting at 7 p.m. Guest speaker is to be Wilson Foreman, former state representative and former governor of the Texas-Oklahoma district of Kiwanis International.

A native of Eastland, Foreman served as state representative for 16 years with a near-perfect attendance record. He chaired three committees including the Committee on Education and was chosen Outstanding Member of the Legislature by the Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association of Texas and received an honorary doctor of political science by the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Foreman has served in numerous capacities as a Kiwanian, both as a club officer and as a Key Club advisor. Prior to serving as governor, he built or helped build 11 new Kiwanis clubs, recruited more than 250 members and was chosen as Outstanding Kiwanian of the Year by both his club and his division.

Under Foreman's leadership as district governor, the district built 43 new Kiwanis clubs, brought 84 clubs up to Charter II strength, raised more money than had ever been raised in one district for the International Kiwanis Foundation, had a net gain in the district of 576 members and organized four new Kiwanis clubs immediately after he came to office as governor. He has served on five international committees.

He holds a bachelor of business administration degree from the University of Texas and attended law school for two and a half years. Foreman is a 32nd degree Mason and member of the Ben Hur Shrine. He and his wife Dottie have three daughters and six grandchildren. They presently live near Georgetown.

Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club is actively involved in the community. Among its civic interests are sponsoring two community entertainment shows a year which also give tickets to service organizations in the area. The club gives away 10 free dinners each Thanksgiving and Christmas to needy persons. In January, club members built bookshelves for Baker Elementary School. And the club donates a belt buckle to the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show as well.

The club sponsors a Sophomore of the Year, and participates in the Special Olympics program. At a recent Special Olympics meet in Pampa, the club served 120 pizzas to the participants. The club also sponsors a city park and assisted in the Lake McClellan clean-up project.

A special interest of the club, as well as all Kiwanis clubs, is the Children's Miracle Network Telethon. The local club plans to set out jars for donations for the event to help in raising funds for children's hospital needs. Top O' Texas Kiwanis also sponsors the KGRO birthday calendar each day.

Cholesterol Discovery Passes Mom's Test

WASHINGTON — The mother of a research scientist recently lowered her cholesterol more than 20% without changing her eating habits.

After a visit to her doctor, a Florida woman learned that her cholesterol level was an elevated 308 and she was encouraged to change her eating habits. When she returned 10 weeks later, the doctor was astounded that her cholesterol level had dropped to 243. Asked if she achieved the amazing results just by dieting she replied, "No I didn't diet at all, in fact I ate the things I shouldn't eat like bacon, sausage and ice cream. The only thing I did different was take some tablets my son gave me."

The woman's son is Dr. William Morris, director of research and development at National Dietary Research, an organization that seeks nutritional solutions to health problems. Dr. Morris admits that the tablets called Vancol 5000 were designed as a dietary supplement to be used with a low fat diet plan. "She just wanted to put the tablets to the test," says Dr. Morris. "Of course I was pleased with the results she achieved, but now we're working on reducing some of the fat in her diet to lower her cholesterol even further."

Vancol 5000 is a chewable food tablet that contains extracts from foods known to lower cholesterol. According to the exclusive distributor for Vancol 5000, inquiries about the new discovery are being received from all over the country and has peaked the interest of doctors used to prescribing expensive cholesterol lowering drugs. A 30 day supply of the Vancol 5000 Cholesterol Lowering Plan is only $29.98.

Democratic candidates determine place on ballot with flip of the coin

Kenneth Kieth and William D. (Bill) Totten will be the first on the ballot for the April 14 Democratic primary runoff for Gray County sheriff and Precinct 1 constable, respectively, said John W. Warner, Gray County Democratic chair.

At a meeting held last week, Totten won a coin flip over Jerry Dean Williams for first place rights on the ballot in the constable race. Kieth was successful on the coin toss against Randy Stubblefield in the sheriff race.

Stubblefield polled 802 votes to 582 for Kieth in Tuesday's Democratic primary. Lynn Brown finished third in the close race with 562 votes. Terry Cox had 428 votes with two votes being added to his total by a canvass conducted by the Democratic Party on Wednesday.

Williams led the race for constable of Precinct 1 with 349 votes. Totten finished with 231. Bobby D. Conway polled 135 votes to force the runoff.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Desert findings should be open

The discovery of what seems to be the ancient city of Ubar on the Arabian Peninsula is a magnificent mix of history, archaeology, fable, and space age technology.

Ubar was centered in an area that produced frankincense. Only in recent years have archaeologists discovered how an ancient pre-capitalist free trade system extended across most of Asia, Europe, and Africa. The trade volume was low, but provided the critical cross-cultural ties and tensions that bring progress.

Since Ubar existed until about the year 200 A.D., its caverns could include long-lost manuscripts. Ancient texts of both the New and Old Testaments of the Bible are rare and sometimes fragmentary. Most Bibles today are based on copies several generations removed from the original. Other lost texts include many books by Aristotle, Plato, Cicero, Julius Caesar, and the ancient Greek playwrights.

It's probable that none of these texts will be found at Ubar. Old paper easily crumbles to dust. Even so, other discoveries of long-lost cities could yield such manuscripts. Archaeology is still a young science. No one knows how many buried cultural treasures remain to be discovered.

One thing is for sure: Such excavations should be done in the open, with nothing hidden from other archaeologists, papyrologists, or scholars in related fields. The Dead Sea Scrolls academic scandal of last year shows why. For 40 years, most of the scrolls were kept secret by a closed group of scholars working in the West Bank. Then last year the Huntington, Calif., Library, which had film copies of the scrolls, unveiled the copies, breaking the monopoly.

It will take years, perhaps decades, to figure out what the scrolls mean. Some scholars — perhaps with an ax to grind — claim that the scrolls, which purportedly were written just before the time of Christ, will disprove parts of Judaism and Christianity. However, doubt was cast on this theory by scrolls expert Neil Altman. Writing in the Boston Herald last December, he cautioned: "(E)vidence now seems to show the Dead Sea Scrolls were written much later. Some may date from the medieval period and some even may be 20th century."

The controversy shows the importance of immediate, widespread disclosure of all documents, fragments, photographs — indeed of everything associated with the discovery. We should not fear of inquiry.

Berry's World

A potpourri of enigmas

Racial issues are important, but there are some that receive little attention. At birth, a black male today can expect to live 64.8 years. On the other hand, life expectancy of white males is 72.3 years. I'm not calling for affirmative action in death, but here we have a situation where black males are paying increasingly higher Social Security taxes but dying before the first check arrives. Justice requires that we blacks receive our Social Security checks at 58, so we can have seven years of taxpayer-sponsored retirement, or pay lower Social Security taxes. If Congress won't go along, at least we can boast to those who carp about the disproportionate number of blacks on welfare that we're returning the favor to the whites on Social Security.

Continuing on race. Take a liberal who lives in a nice neighborhood. What do you guess he'd do if people dealt crack on street corners near his house or shot up schools where his children attended? He'd call 911 and demand immediate action to round up the vermin. What does a liberal do when crack dealing, crack houses and drive-by shootings occur in poor black or Hispanic neighborhoods? The liberal first blames Reagan. Then he mumbles about rooting out the underlying sociological causes leading to sociopath behavior. But the last thing he'll do is insist that poor blacks and Hispanics have the right to live in civility regardless of the problems. Is this some special insight or simply patronizing, pandering contempt for the poor?

Just one more racial enigma. Why is it that civil rights organizations, and their liberal fellow travelers, fight tooth and nail to support and defend prominent blacks like D.C.'s crack-smoking, sexually deviant ex-Mayor Marion Barry, Detroit's foul-mouthed city-wrecking Mayor Coleman Young, and sex-harassing Illinois Rep. Gus Savage and yet spared no ammunition in their ruthless attack on a man of impeccable character and morals like Judge Clarence Thomas? Is there no truth to the old folk saying, "Birds of a feather fly together"?

Japan's political notables charged that Americans are illiterate, lazy and often overpaid, and now we're in a huff. My query is: Are we mad because it's false or because it's true and somebody (Orientals at that) had the nerve to say it? It seems to me that literacy is a problem — or else tell me why there are all those literacy programs and why SAT scores are in retreat. How long would our businesses stay afloat if cash registers didn't compute the change? How about laziness? Cheerful, competent service from retail clerks is becoming a thing of the past. As you travel past highway construction projects, how many times do you see workers leaning on their shovels? Or bringing it down to the family level, ask your kid to run an errand that requires walking six or seven blocks. How about CEOs of America's strapped companies getting seven-figure salaries and union bosses getting six figures? It's unheard of in Japan.

By the way, we can't lay all of the blame on our education system. Otherwise, we'd have to explain why it is that nearly 50 percent of Southeast Asian youngsters, who hit our shores poor and speaking no English, attend the same schools as the rest of our youngsters and score among the top quarter of those taking standardized achievement tests. Could it be that Asians are genetically superior or do they work harder? I'm putting all my money on "work harder." I'm chauvinistic enough to think Americans can run circles around any people on earth, but first we have to get off one and on two.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, March 15, the 75th day of 1992. There are 291 days left in the year. This is "Buz-zard Day" in Hinckley, Ohio.

Today's Highlight in History:
On the Ides of March, 44 B.C., Roman Emperor Julius Caesar was assassinated by a group of nobles that included Brutus and Cassius.

On this date:
In 1493, Christopher Columbus returned to Spain following his first voyage to the Western Hemisphere.

In 1767, the seventh president of the United States, Andrew Jackson, was born in Waxhaw, S.C.

In 1875, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York, John McCloskey, was named the first American cardinal, by Pope Pius IX.

In 1913, President Wilson held the first open presidential news conference.

In 1944, during World War II, the Italian town of Cassino was devastated by Allied bombs.

In 1956, the musical play "My Fair Lady," starring Rex Harrison and Julie Andrews, opened on Broadway.

In 1965, before a joint session of Congress, President Lyndon B. Johnson called for new legislation to guarantee every person's right to vote.

Atlanta 'people who were here first'

Baseball season is almost upon us again and the Atlanta Braves are still the Atlanta Braves. But how long can that last?

Protests likely will continue alleging the name is an insult to Native Americans, previously known as Indians because Christopher Columbus didn't know a lot about geography.

Columbus sailed to the New World 500 years ago and when he landed he thought he was in India, so that's what he called the people he saw there — Indians.

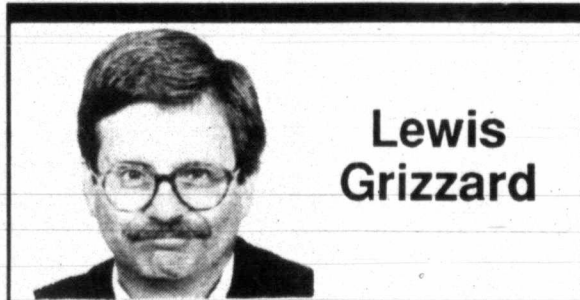

Actually Columbus landed in Miami and the people he saw there were drug dealers, but since he also didn't know anything about automobiles he mistook the Mercedes convertibles they were driving for elephants, and there you are.

Personally, I don't think Native Americans is exactly right either since America got its name from an Italian.

I think The People Who Were Here First is a lot better regardless of how difficult it might be to teach kids to say, "Let's go outside and play Cowboys and The People Who Were Here First."

To be politically correct then, the Cleveland Indian baseball team would be known as The Cleveland The People Who Were Here First.

The Kansas City Chief's football team would be called The Kansas City The People Who Were Here First's Big Bosses, and the Washington Redskins football team would become the Washington a Slang Word for The People Who Were Here First.

Lewis Grizzard

The Atlanta baseball team would go by The People Who Were Here First's Tough Guys.

A newspaper in Oregon has adopted something close to that. It will no longer use the nicknames of teams that are offensive to The People Who Were Here First.

The Braves will be referred to, for instance, as "The baseball team in Atlanta." This reminds me of what happened to the University of Georgia's band.

It had been called The Dixie Redcoat Band for as long as the university had a band. But in the '70s there came a demand to remove "Dixie" because it was insulting to blacks, currently known as African Americans.

The Georgia band became simply The Redcoat Band. My stepbrother-comedian-radio-star-philosopher Ludlow Porch wrote a letter to the Atlanta papers taking this even further.

He said the word "Red" had to do with communism and also needed to go, which left The Coat Band. Then he dealt with the entire word "Redcoat," which is what the British were called in the Revolutionary War.

"To use 'Redcoat,'" wrote Ludlow, "would be an affront to descendants of those who fought for American independence."

"Next, the word 'Band.'" That brought to mind Poncho Villa and his 'band' of desperados, which glorifies criminals.

"From this point forward," Ludlow wrote, "we should refer to the University of Georgia musicians simply as 'The.'"

During the protests of the Atlanta nickname and the fact its fans showed up the cheer wearing feathers and war paint, a newsroom wit passed around a list of every major league baseball team nickname and why they could be politically incorrect.

"Dodgers" is insensitive to those who ran away to Canada to avoid the draft during the Vietnam War.

"Phillies" is an insult to women.

"Twins" is insulting to couples who can't have children.

The point here is if we really get picky we can find something politically incorrect about everything.

"Meanwhile, I'll take the baseball team in San Diego to push the baseball team in Atlanta in the National League West this season, but I can't use the San Diego nickname."

It's offensive to non-Catholics, like us Methodists.

Where is Pat Buchanan's bid going?

By William A. Rusher

We now have the results of several Republican primaries, and it is possible to calculate a trajectory for Pat Buchanan's bid.

Clearly, about a third of Republican primary voters nationwide are sore enough at President Bush to vote for Buchanan instead. That, however, is very far from saying that they won't vote for Bush over the Democratic nominee, if it comes down to that. Most of them simply want to "send Bush a message" that they deeply resented the breaking of his "No New Taxes" pledge, and that they think he should stand up to the Democrats in Congress more, rather than forever compromising with them.

Buchanan's own rhetoric and ads have stressed that a vote for him will "send Bush a message." Pat scarcely even pretends that he himself is, this year, a serious contender for the presidency. It is a safe bet that Buchanan knows that 1996 will see the really big battle for the soul of the Republican Party, and that he means to play a major role in the battle.

Very well, then — what course should Buchanan follow for the rest of this year?

I have asked that question of many of my friends who are Buchanan supporters, and it's amazing how fast they run out of gas. Usually they assert that he should battle Bush right to the end of the primary season (which may be harder to do than it sounds, if Pat keeps on losing to Bush and contributions begin to diminish).

OK, but what then?

There are, of course, die-hards who will tell you that, if Bush beats Buchanan at the convention, Buchanan ought to run in November as an independent. But that is tantamount to asserting that he should act as a spoiler, trying to destroy Bush even at the cost of handing the presidency over to the Democrats. To his credit, Buchanan has never even hinted at such a thing. On the contrary, he has said flatly that, if Bush is nominated, he will endorse him.

We may picture, then, Pat Buchanan approaching the rostrum in Houston to a huge ovation by his supporters. He will be, at least temporarily, Mr. Conservative, and there will be no lack of TV commentators to point out that he is getting off to a fast and early start in the 1996 competition.

What kind of speech should Pat give? A ruling salute to conservatism, we may be sure. But what shall he say about Bush?

Buchanan himself hinted once or twice, earlier this year, that even if he eventually had to endorse Bush, his endorsement might be tepid unless Bush mended his ways. But Bush has already thrown NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer to the wolves, pretty clearly as a gesture to conservatives, and it's safe to assume he will find other ways to please them between now and July. Buchanan, therefore, will have plenty of excuses to argue that Bush "got the message" implicit in the Buchanan vote totals. The only question will be, how should Pat play his hand?

A carping, broadly negative attitude toward the renominated president might be fatal—not to Bush (though it certainly wouldn't help him) but to Buchanan. If by any chance Bush subsequently lost the election, plenty of people would blame Buchanan. But even if Bush won, Buchanan would go through the ensuing four years with a reputation as a sore loser—the very worst buildup for whatever ambitions he has for 1996.

Buchanan's job at Houston, in short, is to play the Happy Loser, preparing to do battle for George Bush against whatever nominee the Democrats finally pick. I predict we will see George and Pat standing there, arms around each other's shoulder, waving and smiling at the crowd.

To the Hustlin' Harvesters '91-'92

You are a Team.
Not a team of mistakes,
but a team of excellence.
Not a team
with an argumentative spirit, but a team
with a winning spirit.
Not a team of complaints,
but a team of compliments.
Not just a team,
but a team that will always be remembered in the hearts of everyone.
You started out
so young and small,
but as the year grew on,
You became so strong.
What you have achieved as a team
most people only dream about.
You are a team,
not just anyone's team,
But the Hustling Harvesters of 1991-92.

Misapplication of the law

To the editor:
A friend of mine spent the night in the Pampa city jail last week. She is not the kind of person you might think of when you read this statement. She is a sixty-six year old grandmother. She doesn't have a criminal record. She's just an average middle class citizen of our community, not much different from you or me. Her "crime" consisted of an innocent act that I know I could easily be guilty of. She went into a local discount store on her way to play bridge with friends. She was late and in a hurry. She didn't get a shopping basket because she only went in to pick up one item - a roll of antacid tablets. Then she realized that she needed a few more items for a trip the following week. She couldn't remember exactly how much money she had with her, so she took her wallet out of her purse to see. She had the tablets in her hand and inadvertently placed them inside her purse when she returned her wallet. She proceeded to pick up several other items, paid for them and left the store.

Thank you for taking the time to read this far. You now know more than the store employee who accused her of being a criminal or the police officer who took her to jail without giving her a chance to explain. She was then detained for approximately sixteen hours without much further explanation.

I find it impossible to believe that the people involved in this parody of justice could have committed this act without at least some suspicion that she was not, in fact, a shoplifter. I realize that my friend did, according to the letter of the law, commit an unlawful act. I question whether the spirit of the law was given the same consideration by the people involved. Is this the true intent: to make an example of a senior citizen. I thought all that went out with scarlet letters and the amputation of the hands of thieves in less civilized periods in history.

She was, according to the letter of the law, given the right to make one phone call before being placed in a jail cell. Unfortunately, her granddaughter answered the phone and she decided not to tell the child where she was. She instead left a message that she was in trouble and would call back in an attempt to reach the child's mother. This second phone call was denied by officials at the Pampa Police Department. As a result, an entire family spent an agonizing night searching for my friend and thinking of every possible misfortune that might have befallen her, except, of course, that she was in jail.

My point is that this could happen to anyone who is a little absent-minded, a little preoccupied, or a little careless - attributes most of us most surely claim from time to time. This is a serious example of both misapplication of the law and abuse of power.

Is this the kind of representation we want for the people of Pampa?

Writer plans to boycott store

To the editor:
We are very distressed over the recent arrest of a very dear friend. She was handcuffed inside a local variety-type store on Hobart Street and taken to the police station and detained overnight - all because during her shopping, she had picked up a roll of Tums, opened her purse to see how much money was in her wallet, and, without thinking, accidentally dropped the Tums into her purse. She bought and paid for another item - without ever giving another thought to the Tums in her purse. As she left the store, at that time she was detained. This lady (and she is an honest and real lady) had never even had a parking ticket. Her car was left unlocked in front of the store, and she had left her home unlocked while she ran what was to be a short errand. Upon reaching the police station, she was allowed one phone call. As fate would have it, her granddaughter answered the phone, and she was unable to speak to her daughter. Not wanting to upset the child by telling her where she was, she hung up. The police assured her they would call her daughter, but her daughter never received a call. Her children called every relative they could think to call, including relatives in Kansas. Her children combed the streets and roads outside town, and her son-in-law went to file a missing persons report when he happened to find her at the police station - but that was the next day.

We know stores are plagued with shoplifters, but this lady, who is retired from a responsible position with a major firm, was hardly the type that would shoplift anything - much less a tiny package of Tums!

We want this to serve as our notice that none of the undersigned will be shopping at this store in the future.

'Scouting for food' successful

To the editor:
The scouting for food was a great success. Collected was over 4,000 pounds of food. Special thanks to all the Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts for their help. Extra thanks to the parents who drove all those scouts. Also thanks goes to all the people who donated food, radio station for their coverage, and The Pampa News for their help in advertising.

We will dig again!

To the editor:
Excitement ran high as we drove up to the gate at the Pampa Army Air Field, I could almost hear the cadet corps marching on the parade grounds. It would not have surprised me if I had heard the crack of the B-25 exhaust as it flew overhead. We came, we dug, and we left with one alarm clock carcass; but two things happened: We excited Pampa again and my phone has rung with new leads. We will dig again!

I love the people of Pampa, I loved them in '43 and now "I are one." We want to thank the Curtiss Company for their backhoe and the Gene Jennings Family for operating it. Thanks to Eubank's Rental for their backhoe and Bill Hagerman for operating it. Thank you, Billy Carter, for your backhoe and for operating it. Thanks, also, to Rex McAnelly for his cooperation, and Police Chief Jim Laramore for taxing one of the backhoes out and back. Many others were involved and a thank you one and all for your good old Pampa Spirit.

Caring makes agency possible

To the editor:
Last Saturday, March 7th, the Boy Scouts of America conducted a house to house canned food drive for food to be used to help feed the needy in their various communities.

The Pampa Cub Scouts and the Boy Scouts and their leaders, under the direction of their new Scout Executive, Jack Crider, with the coordination of Linda Huddleston, participated in this drive. A total of 4,110 pounds of canned goods was collected and donated to the Good Samaritan to be given to the needy of our community.

Each of these young folks and their leaders are to be congratulated on a job well done. And to each household who cared enough to share with the less fortunate, a sincere THANK YOU from the volunteers at the Good Samaritan. Your caring makes it possible for us to continue our mission of ministering to the needs of our community.

Wm. J. Ragsdale, executive director
Good Samaritan Christian Services Inc.

Is there more to the story?

To the editor:
At a time when more and more Americans are increasingly becoming cynical and distrustful of public officials and politicians, a happening occurs here at home that cements these feelings.

The slap on the wrist meted out by our state attorney general's office to our former district attorney (Harold Comer) is sickening - for all who aspire to "justice for all." In the end it appears to me that politicians will and do "look" after each other.

Mr. (Foster) Whaley, in a letter to the editor March 8, made a flat statement that Mr. Comer made a mistake of judgment, "with no intent to retain the funds in question."

I assume that he has absolute proof of this - or is this his opinion?
How many of us when called to answer for breaking our laws can get a felony charge changed to a misdemeanor? Will the help, I suppose, of the prosecuting agency? Most certainly, not all those who took a lot less than $10,000, and are now in prison.

And, yes, I agree with Warren Chisum there are still a lot of rumors making the rounds about this situation. What better way to dispel these rumors than to have let justice take its course and for a trial to have been held. Our trials process is there to bring out the facts as well as put rumors to rest. It can work both ways. This way more rumors start and spread.

Why was such a plea bargain arranged? Was there more to this story? I strongly believe that our public officials should be held more accountable when breaking our laws because they violate the "trust" that we voters place in them. Mr. Comer's actions cannot and must not be viewed as "minor" for this reason - alone! And, I believe, we all will be losers, if we allow our public officials, especially - one holding the responsibilities of District Attorney, to be able to break our laws and not be held fully accountable - as you or I would!

Dallas accountant finds company helping others find mistakes

By EVAN RAMSTAD
AP-Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Howard Schultz profits from other people's mistakes. So, he hopes, do the people who make the mistakes.

Schultz in two decades has built the nation's largest service that looks for overpayments companies have made to their vendors and suppliers.

The 400 or so accountants at his company, Howard Schultz & Associates, have about 1,000 clients. During the last five years, annual recoveries for them have exceeded $100 million, Schultz said.

"What we perform is what I like to term a management review of a clerical function," he said.

"People involved at the clerical level look at each transaction by itself. We have the advantage of the historical review. We look at a buying pattern."

For example, if a company is paying $100 or $200 monthly to a vendor and then one month pays $1,000, Schultz says his accountants will check that out. Often, they find, someone in the accounting office mistakenly typed an extra 0 into a computer.

"Our audit objective is in the neighborhood of one-tenth of one percent," Schultz said. "So in any $100 million, we look to get between $100,000 and $200,000 worth of findings."

"The percentage is small. The dollars we generate can be large," he said.

About 70 percent of Schultz's customers are in the grocery business, either retail, wholesale or food service. The rest are retailers, including some of the nation's largest like J.C. Penney

Co. and Dayton Hudson Corp. Schultz got his start as a retailing accountant with Allied Stores Corp., Skillern Drug Co. and Sanger Harris, then the Dallas division of Federated Department Stores and now Foley's.

As controller of Sanger Harris in the late 1960s, Schultz asked an employee to go back through the books and see if the company had paid any of its vendors or suppliers too much.

"It was such an undertaking that it gave me the idea for a business because what happened is he more than paid his way," Schultz said.

He tried to develop ways to prevent the mistakes.

"No matter what I did, I couldn't stop it," Schultz said. "It was just the inadvertent misunderstandings, miscommunications and failure to follow systems."

In 1970, he and the accountant who originally started looking for Sanger Harris' overpayments set out on their own, creating a new niche in accounting — accounts payable auditing.

Schultz was nervous at first. "Computers were just coming into play," he said. "I thought computers are probably going to eliminate the business."

He found just the opposite. "Computerization enhanced the business potential," Schultz said. "The reason it did is there were less people involved. Typically in operations in the 1950s and 1960s, you would have many more eyes looking at these pieces of paper."

"There would always be the experienced person somewhere along the line who would say 'Hey, there's something wrong here.'"

As his client base spread, Schultz began contracting with accountants in cities across the country to do the auditing work. He now describes the company's operating arrangement as a "semi-franchise" with 10 operating regions and independent accountants reporting to managers in each.

Initially, the company and its clients split 50-50 the overpayments recovered from through the audits. As Schultz became more successful, the company's percentage went down.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Danny Bainum

For the armed forces who served in Desert Storm last year, a major chocolate company came up with the Desert bar that kept its shape even at 140 degrees. It's handy for trips to the beach or picnics.

Pita crisps are great with dips and more healthful than fried snacks. Split whole-wheat pitas and cut each into eight wedges. Bake at 350 for 5 to 8 minutes, until lightly browned.

Lots of herbs and fresh-ground pepper can stand in for salt in many favorite dishes.

Cookie dough has to be chilled before it's shaped. Butter-based dough will be the firmest. Any made with 100 percent corn oil margarine will be softer, even after chilling.

Roast chicken tarragon is like a trip to France, courtesy of 1/4 cup plain yogurt, 1 Tbs. Dijon mustard, and a tsp. of dried tarragon or thyme. Brush over chicken in a shallow pan. Roast uncovered in a 375-degree oven for 75 to 90 minutes, until drumstick moves easily.

Congressmen try to explain checks to folks back home

By LAWRENCE L. KNUZSON
Associated Press Writer

Red-faced members of Congress scrambled Saturday to disclose and explain a trail of rubber checks and ask the folks at home to forgive and forget at the ballot box next fall.

In places such as Coon Rapids, Minn., and Gaylord, Mich., lawmakers raced to put their spin on the story, perhaps motivated by the House decision to make public within 20 days the names of all 355 current and former members who wrote bad checks on accounts at the House bank.

A Newsweek poll released Saturday, however, found that 78 percent of those surveyed say they're unlikely to re-elect their representative if he or she is among the worst offenders.

From Rhode Island to West Virginia, Republicans and Democrats alike told of bouncing checks — a few or hundreds.

In Coon Rapids, five-term Democrat Gerry Sikorski said his stomach churned and ached as he leafed through his banking records and found he had written 671 bad checks on the now-closed House bank.

And Michigan Republican Bob Davis, who as recently as last week had refused to say whether he'd written any overdrafts, admitted that he was "one of the worst examples," bouncing more than 800 times.

Sikorski told about 100 people at a jobs and education fair he sponsored that his overdrafts added up to $119,966 over the 39-month period under investigation. A member of Congress is paid $129,500 a year.

He apologized for the overdrafts, but said he sees a silver lining.

"The people that have raised it have said, 'We're with you, we support you, you've done good things and hang in there,'" he said. While many of his constituents voiced similar remarks, some weren't so kind.

"I don't think they (in Congress) have any idea of what's going on with the ordinary citizen," said Walt Duggan, 62, of Coon Rapids. "Once they get up there they're in a fantasy land."

Another Minnesota Republican, Vin Weber, a rising star in the House GOP, worked the phone from his home in Washington, admitting he wrote 125 bad checks totaling $47,987.

"I'm ready to take my medicine," Weber said. "I'm a big boy. I can handle that."

At a town meeting in his hometown of Gaylord, Mich., Davis blamed his own "sloppy book-keeping" for bringing him to what he called one of the worst days in his 25-year political career.

A spokesman said a cash figure for Davis' bounced checks wouldn't be released until his records are compared with those of the General Accounting Office, which investigated the affair.

Davis insisted that no one got hurt in a scandal some are calling "rubblegate."

AP learns names of 21 worst check offenders

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Tommy Robinson and Rep. Bob Mrazek, D-N.Y., top the worst-abuser list among 355 current and former House members who wrote bad checks at the members' bank, The Associated Press learned Saturday.

Robinson wrote 996 bad checks and his overdrafts exceeded his next paycheck for 16 of the 39 months under investigation, congressional sources told the AP.

Robinson served three terms in the House as a Democrat before switching to the GOP in 1989 in an unsuccessful attempt to unseat Gov. Bill Clinton.

Mrazek wrote 972 bad checks, with a negative balance that exceeded his next paycheck for 23 of the 39 months, the sources said. Mrazek is seeking the Democratic Senate nomination in New York.

The House voted 426-0 early Friday to disclose the names of 296 current and 59 former members who wrote bad checks at their special bank during the 39 months that ended Oct. 3. The bank has since closed.

Twenty-four of those were to be labeled "abusers" under a formula devised by the House ethics committee.

The names weren't immediately released by the committee under a schedule that gives the 24 — 19 current and five former members — 10 days to correct any mistakes.

The AP obtained names of 21 of the top 24, a list that has only three Republicans. None of the Republicans was named.

Besides Robinson and Mrazek, the remaining members, the number of bounced checks and the number of months their negative balance exceeded their next paycheck are as follows:

- Rep. Charles Hatcher, D-Ga., 819 checks, 35 months
- Former Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., 858 checks, 16 months
- Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., 743 checks, 30 months
- Rep. Charles A. Hayes, D-Ill., 716 checks, 15 months
- Rep. Ronald D. Coleman, D-Texas, 673 checks, 23 months
- Rep. Carl C. (Chris) Perkins, D-Ky., 514 checks, 14 months
- Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., 499 checks, 20 months
- Rep. Ed Towns, D-N.Y., 408 checks, 18 months
- Rep. Harold E. Ford, D-Tenn., 388 checks, 31 months
- Rep. Edward F. Feighan, D-Ohio, 397 checks, eight months
- Former House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., 316 checks, 12 months
- Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., 329 checks, 10 months

—Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., 273 checks, 9 months

—Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, 217 checks, 21 months

—Rep. Jim Scheuer, D-N.Y., 169 checks, eight months

—Rep. Joseph Early, D-Mass., 140 checks, 15 months

—Former Rep. Doug Bosco, D-Calif., 124 checks, 13 months

—Former Rep. Jim Bates, D-Calif., 89 checks, nine months

—Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, 81 checks, eight months

Former Speaker Jim Wright, who was not on the list, wrote 139 bad checks with a face amount of $37,000. It was not known how many months he exceeded his next paycheck.

The ethics committee criteria identified as abusers account holders whose deficiencies exceeded their next paycheck 20 percent of the time during the 39 months under review. For those who were in Congress the entire 39 months, that would amount to eight months in which the overdrafts exceeded the next pay check.

Because of the Democrats' 268-166 majority, it has been assumed that the Democratic Party would be hurt worse than Republicans when all the names are released.

The ethics committee compiled account histories on the members using codes, so that even panel members didn't know the identities of the rubber check writers during the investigation.

On Friday, however, acting ethics committee chairman Matthew McHugh, D-N.Y., said he had obtained the names in two separate lists — one containing the 24 top abusers and the second with the remaining 331 current and former members.

Submarine workers rally at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Workers afraid of losing their jobs because President Bush wants to eliminate funding for the Seawolf nuclear-powered submarine rallied Saturday outside the White House.

Nearly 1,000 workers and union officials gathered in Lafayette Park, but Bush was at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Bush proposes cutting $50 billion in defense spending over the next five years, about $17 billion of which would come in eliminated spending on the Seawolf.

Harvesters can be proud of achievements

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

AUSTIN — The Pampa Harvesters shouldn't feel too gloomy about being surprised by Georgetown in the Class 4A state semifinals Thursday night.

After all, Georgetown has made a habit of upsetting ranked teams in the state playoffs. The Eagles beat No. 4 Jacksonville in the first round of the playoffs and No. 3 Channelview for the Region 3-4A championship.

Substitute center Matt Shell, who helped make it possible for Georgetown to edge top-ranked Pampa, 65-64, in overtime, said the season has been like a dream for the the unranked Eagles.

"It's just been incredible," Shell said. "To beat teams like Pampa, who are considered a slot

With Pampa ahead, 62-60, Shell threw up a desperation 15-foot baseline jumper just before the buzzer sounded to tie the score after four quarters to send the game into overtime.

"I hadn't shot well all night. I'm just glad I was able to hit one that got us into overtime," Shell said.

Georgetown (29-9) lost to No. 2-ranked Dallas South Oak Cliff, 73-60, in the Class 4A championship Saturday night.

Pampa, ranked No. 1 throughout the season, threatened to pull away from Georgetown on three different occasions during the regulation period. The Eagles, however, always found a way to quickly erase a Harvesters lead.

After a seesaw first quarter that left the score deadlocked at 16-all, Pampa's David Johnson drilled a 3-pointer to start the second quarter. After Georgetown's Corey Bailey hit one of two foul shots, Randy Nichols scored inside to give the Harvesters a 21-17 advantage. Jeff Young hit a foul shot and Nichols scored again inside to push Pampa to its biggest lead of the night at seven, 24-17.

Georgetown rallied on a short jumper by Glen Senclair and a 3-point goal by Chris Phillips to narrow the gap to two, 24-22.

Pampa stayed on top the remainder of the second quarter and led at the half, 30-29.

In the early part of the third quarter, neither team could gain control as the lead switched back and forth five times. Then Johnson got a hot hand and hit consecutive 3-pointers to give Pampa a 5-point lead, 40-35. After Georgetown's

Phillips scored on a pull-up jumper, Johnson drew a foul from Brian Michener on a 3-point attempt. Johnson converted all three foul shots and Pampa was up by six, 43-37, with 3:28 to go in the third quarter.

Georgetown just wouldn't stay down. Bailey put in a trey, Senclair swiped a pass and scored to trim the lead to one, 43-42.

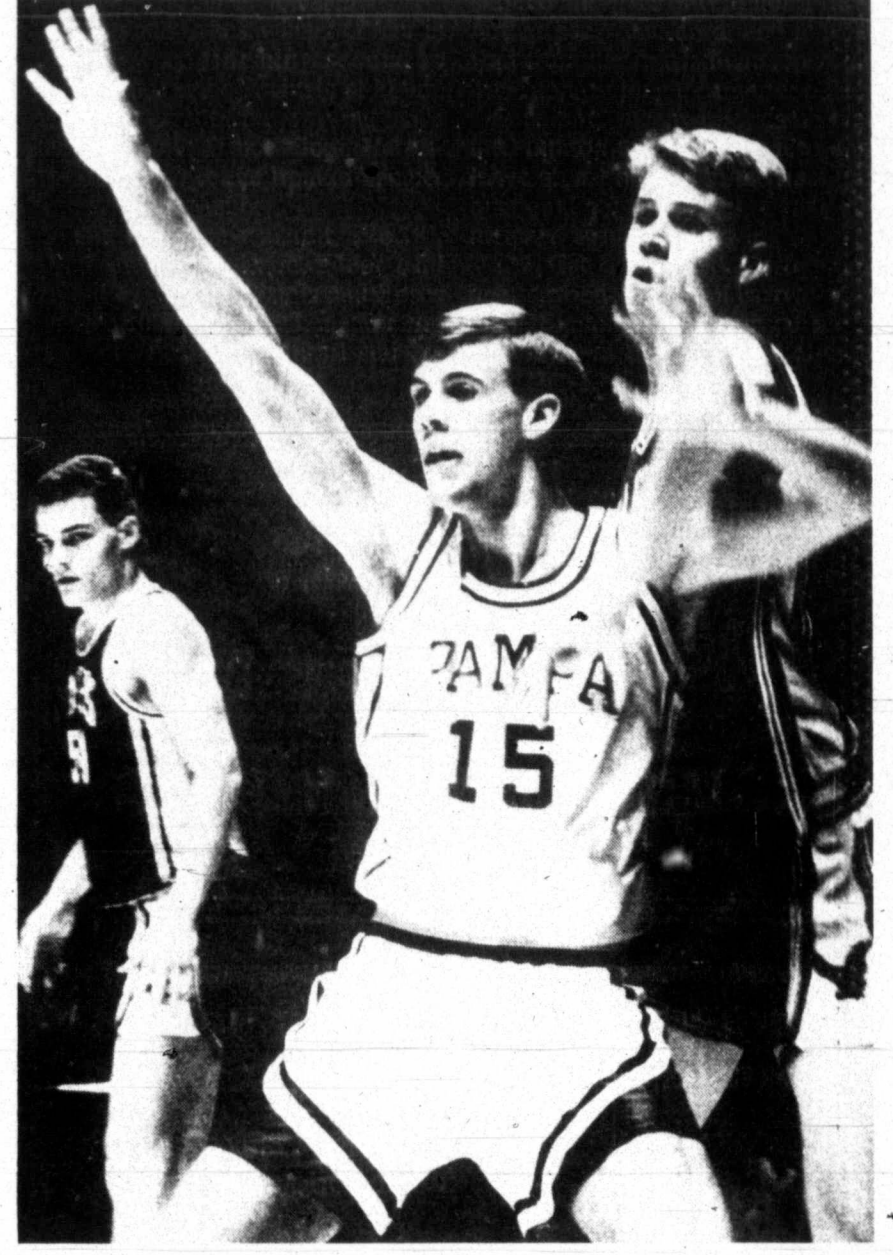

Pampa maintained the one-point lead going into the fourth quarter and stayed on top until the 5:46 mark when Senclair hit a 3-point bucket to give Georgetown a 53-51 advantage. No more than three points separated the two teams until the final minute when Dwight Nick-elberry and Wilbon each hit foul shots to give Pampa a four-point lead (62-58) with just 38 seconds remaining.

After Mitchener scored on a put-back to make it, 62-60, Wilbon missed a foul shot on the other end with 15 seconds to go. Georgetown coach Maurice Varnell immediately decided to go for a game-winning 3-pointer. With eight ticks left, Phillips launched a hurried outside shot that bounced off the side of the rim, but Shell grabbed the rebound and scored to tie things at 62-62 after four quarters.

Georgetown led the entire extra period, scoring all three of its overtime points from the foul line. With the Eagles ahead, 65-62, Wilbon's basket cut the deficit to one. After a Georgetown turnover, Pampa went for a final shot with 16 seconds to go, but the Eagles tightened up their defense and forced Wilbon to take an off-balanced jumper which failed to fall, giving Georgetown yet another Cinderella win.

"At the half we felt good about our chances to win. In fact, we felt good about our chances all along, even with a few seconds to go in the game," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "We just couldn't get our shot at the end."

Pampa edged out Georgetown in shooting percentages from both the floor and foul line, but the Eagles owned a 52-40 edge in rebounding.

Senior forward Randy Nichols (15) of Pampa motions for a pass in front of a Georgetown defender in the first half of the semifinal contest.

Pampa was 21 of 52 from the floor (40.3 percent) and 17 of 24 from the foul line (70.8 percent). Georgetown was 23 of 67 (34.3 percent) from the floor and 15 of 25 from the foul line (60.0 percent).

Senclair, who had only six points in the first half, finished as Georgetown's top scorer with 17. Michener followed with 12 points.

Three Harvesters, led by Johnson's 18 points, scored in double digits for the Harvesters. Young tossed in 17 points and was Pampa's top rebounder with 10 boards. Nick-elberry, the only underclassman among Pampa's starting five, added 16 points. Nichols led the Harvesters in assists with four while scoring 6 points.

Pampa, which had a 16-game win streak going into the state tournament, closes out with a 33-3 record.

Pampa's Cederick Wilbon protects the ball from Georgetown's Corey Bailey (12) after grabbing a defensive rebound in Thursday's Class 4A semifinal tilt in Austin.

Couples roars past Floyd in Honda

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — It was a more confident, comfortable Fred Couples who swept past his old friend and golfing mentor to assume control of the $1.1 million Honda Classic.

A week ago and 30 miles away at Doral, Couples spoke of being intimidated by the veteran Ray Floyd and observed, going into the final round, that "he won't be worried about me, and I'll be worried about him."

Couples, almost certainly the best player in the world over the last nine months, exhibited a different demeanor Saturday after a 7-under-par 65 enabled him to replace Floyd as the leader after three rounds.

There was no talk of intimidation. Instead, Couples observed: "Right now I feel like, not that the game is easy; but I can't play better than I've been playing. So I need to really pay attention to what I'm doing."

The recent record supports his observation. Couples was runner-up to the 49-year-old Floyd last week, won in Los Angeles the week before that, has had only one round over par this year and has won four times in the last nine months.

He has finished sixth or better in 15 of his last 20 worldwide starts.

But he has his work cut out for him going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $198,000 first prize. Seven players, including the formidable Floyd, are within four strokes.

With a 202 total, 14 under par on the Weston Hills Country Club course, Couples holds a one-shot advantage over Mark Brooks, who shot 64 with a double bogey. He also had an eagle and eight birdies.

Blaine McCallister, a left-handed putter and former winner of this title, is another shot back at 204 after a 68.

Floyd, the 36-hole leader, slipped to a 71 and is tied at 205 with Greg Hickman and Corey Pavin. Hickman shot 67, Pavin 70.

They are followed at 206 by Fuzzy Zoeller, with a 69, and Keith Clearwater, 70.

Floyd, who last week became the oldest player in 17 years to score a PGA Tour victory, dropped three shots back in this one with after a struggling finish.

"Subconsciously you keep thinking you've got to have one of these rounds, so now I hope that I have that behind me," he said.

"I'm still in position to win the tournament. Three shots is not insurmountable."

A weak finish, however, made his Sunday task considerably more daunting.

He missed a 4 1/2-foot par putt on the 14th, missed a 12-foot birdie putt on the 15th, one-putted to save par on the 16th, then bogeyed the 17th after jerking a 2-iron far to the left of the green.

"I seemed to be between clubs all day long," Floyd said.

Couples, on the other hand, had it going his way.

He scored a two-putt birdie on the first hole, then ran off a string of four in a row beginning on the fourth hole.

After playing the front in 31, he matched a birdie against a bogey on the 10th and 11th, then needed only a 7-iron second shot to the green on the par-5 12th and two-putted for another birdie.

A 9-iron to six feet on the 13th put him seven under for the day and he happily parred in over the extremely difficult finishing holes.

Technology prevails in Florida Derby

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Technology took the lead near the quarter pole and won the Florida Derby on Saturday, sending the Hammer clan home on a sour note.

Not nominated for the Kentucky Derby on May 2, Technology made the Florida Derby his first stakes victory, beating the odds-on favorite Dance Floor by 4 1/2 lengths.

Dance Floor, owned by rap musician Hammer and his family, who were at Gulfstream Park for the race, was third, behind Waki Warrior and Technology, with a half-mile left in the 1 1/8-mile race, in perfect position. The only problem was, Technology took off like a rocket, and Dance Floor was left in his contrail.

Pistols and Roses, the second choice in the field of 12 3-year-olds, was third, a head back of Dance Floor.

Technology, trained by Sonny Hine and ridden by Jerry Bailey, was coming off a big victory in an allowance race at Gulfstream Park on Feb. 22. But in his only stakes appearance, last September, he was third in the Dragon Breeders' Cup at Philadelphia Park, and he had never gone more than 1 1-16 miles.

The victory was his second in three starts this year and third in four career starts. He earned $300,000 of the $500,000 guaranteed purse, increasing his career earnings to $330,803.

In order to get Technology into the Derby, owner S.C. Savin now must make the second nomination deadline of April 1.

Dance Floor, trained by D. Wayne Lukas and ridden by Chris Antley, was coming off an impressive victory in the Fountain of Youth on Feb. 22 at Gulfstream and went off as the 4-5 favorite. He ran fourth most of the way, then began to move up on Waki Warrior, Technology and Black Question in the turn for home.

Waki Warrior and Black Question both faded out of sight, but Technology refused to quit. And by the time the field straightened out for home, he was too far ahead to catch.

Pistols and Roses, winner of four in a row before finishing second to Dance Floor in the Fountain of Youth, ran fourth most of the way and made his move with Dance Floor. He finished third, a neck in front of another closer, Tank's Number.

Technology returned $26.20, $7.20 and $4.40. Dance Floor paid $3 and $2.20, and Pistols and Roses was $2.80 for show. Time for the race was 1:50 3-5, and all starters carried 122 pounds.

Dance Floor will probably go next to the Blue Grass at Keeneland on April 11, but he will go with another blemish on his record.

The unbeaten D.J. Cat held on for a neck victory over longshot Binalong in an earlier 3-year-old stakes at Gulfstream, the seven-furlong Swale. D.J. Cat, owned and trained by Happy Alter and ridden by Bailey, stalked the pace throughout, never farther back than third, and took the lead from the fast-fading Concorde's Tune approaching the quarter pole.

Binalong, meanwhile, came from the sixth on the backstretch to challenge on the outside in the final turn, but could not get by D.J. Cat as they matched strides to the wire.

D.J. Cat, a Kentucky Derby nominee, carried 114 pounds, two more than Binalong, and returned $3, $3 and $2.60 as the 1-2 favorite, timed in 1:23 1-5.

Court battles continue for Navratilova

DALLAS (AP) — Court battles in the legal arena aren't over for tennis star Martina Navratilova, who is suing her former attorney for his advice on a palimony pact.

The malpractice lawsuit against Fort Worth attorney Jerry Loftin is still pending even through Navratilova and her former lover settled their 10-month case Friday.

Terms of the settlement with former beauty queen Judy Nelson were not disclosed.

Nelson, who lived with Navratilova from 1984 until their breakup last year, contended the nine-time Wimbledon champion broke a "non-marital cohabitation agreement."

Loftin became Nelson's attorney in the lawsuit seeking half Navratilova's earnings during the seven years the women lived together. Navratilova blamed Loftin for not looking out for her interests.

Saturday, Loftin said he was glad the women settled their dispute. He declined to comment on his upcoming malpractice lawsuit.

Navratilova publicist Linda Dozoretz said a grievance hearing before a committee from the State Bar of Texas has been set for April 8 in Fort Worth.

Austin attorney Carol Birch said Friday's settlement helps clarify damage Navratilova suffered.

"What we're alleging is that but for Loftin's conduct, she wouldn't have been in the situation she was in, there wouldn't have been a lawsuit and she wouldn't have had to pay money to settle it," Birch said Saturday.

Birch said she does not know when the lawsuit against Loftin is expected to be heard in court.

Navratilova said the expenses of battling Nelson finally forced her to settle out of court.

"It's too costly, and now I can just get on with everything," Navratilova told KXAS-TV in Fort Worth. "The lawyers are laughing all the way to the bank."

Attorneys on both sides disclosed that Nelson will receive the couple's $1.3 million home in Aspen, Colo.

"They made a deal they can both live with," Austin attorney Gary DeShazo said. "I think it's OK. It's a case that should have been resolved earlier ... Nobody's ecstatic over it."

In September, Navratilova, 35, described Nelson, 45, as selfish and vindictive after the end of their relationship.

'Bama dumps Arkansas

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Without the Shaq, LSU's house came tumbling down. Playing with suspended center Shaquille O'Neal on the sidelines, No. 23 LSU fell short Saturday, losing to No. 9 Kentucky 80-74 in the semifinals of the Southeast Conference tournament. The Wildcats moved into the SEC finals today against No. 17 Alabama, which defeated No. 6 Arkansas 90-89 in Saturday's other semifinal.

College Basketball

O'Neal drew an automatic one-game suspension for his fight with Carlos Groves of Tennessee after an intentional foul in Friday night's game. Coach Dale Brown, angered at the treatment of his star, said he would recommend that O'Neal, a junior, pass up his final year at LSU and declare for the NBA draft.

"I do not want to see this young man blatantly fouled and hurt," Brown said. "He doesn't play pro ball. If he's going to get hurt and people are going to intentionally foul him, he needs to get money to get hurt."

"I am recommending to Shaquille's family that he turns NBA."

Brown tried to finesse the Tigers past Kentucky. "Had we shot a little better, we win it," he said. "Wimps wilt and men stand up and are counted ... This team showed tremendous character and I'm extremely proud of them."

The effort was doomed as Kentucky exploited the 7-foot-1 O'Neal's absence in the middle. The Wildcats (25-6) got 43 points from their front line, led by John Pelphrey's 18, and put the game away with a 13-0 run midway through the second half. Meanwhile, O'Neal's replacements, Harold Boudreaux and Geert Hammink, combined for just 11 points and 9 rebounds.

Alabama (25-7) joined Kentucky in the SEC finals by edging Arkansas (25-7).

Elliot Washington's 3-pointer with 2 seconds left won it and gave the Crimson Tide a shot at its fourth straight SEC tournament title and fifth in six years.

Todd Day had 39 points for Arkansas and James Robinson scored 26 for Alabama - but in the end, the issue was settled by Washington, who finished with just 6 points.

Top-ranked Duke used 17 points apiece from Bobby Hurley and Brian Davis to reach the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament with an 89-76 hammering of Georgia Tech. The defending national champion Blue Devils (27-2) will go after their first ACC championship since 1988 today against No. 20 North Carolina (21-8), an 80-76 winner over No. 18 Florida State (20-9).

Duke opened fast, firing to a 23-6 lead and limiting Tech (21-11) to one field goal in the first 10 minutes.

George Lynch had 21 points, 14 in the second half, and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead North Carolina past Florida State. The victory set up a rematch of last year's ACC championship, in which the Tar Heels pummeled Duke 96-74.

No. 3 Kansas (25-4) used a 17-4 run in the final minutes to defeat No. 24 Oklahoma (21-8) and reach the finals of the Big Eight tournament. The Jayhawks play No. 11 Oklahoma State for the championship today after the Cowboys (26-6) defeated Iowa State 69-60.

Byron Houston's 18 points and a career-high 19 rebounds keyed Oklahoma State while Darwyn Alexander added 17.

Rex Walters led Kansas with 21 points, including 11-for-11 on free throws, and the Jayhawks took advantage of a knee injury to Oklahoma center Bryan Sallier to go on an 18-0 run and open a 41-25 lead at the start of the second half.

But the stubborn Sooners cut the deficit to 66-62 with 5:02 to go before Kansas put the game away. Damon Patterson led Oklahoma with 20 points.

In the Big East, Syracuse wiped out Seton Hall's 10-point lead in the second half and beat the 15th-ranked Pirates 70-66.

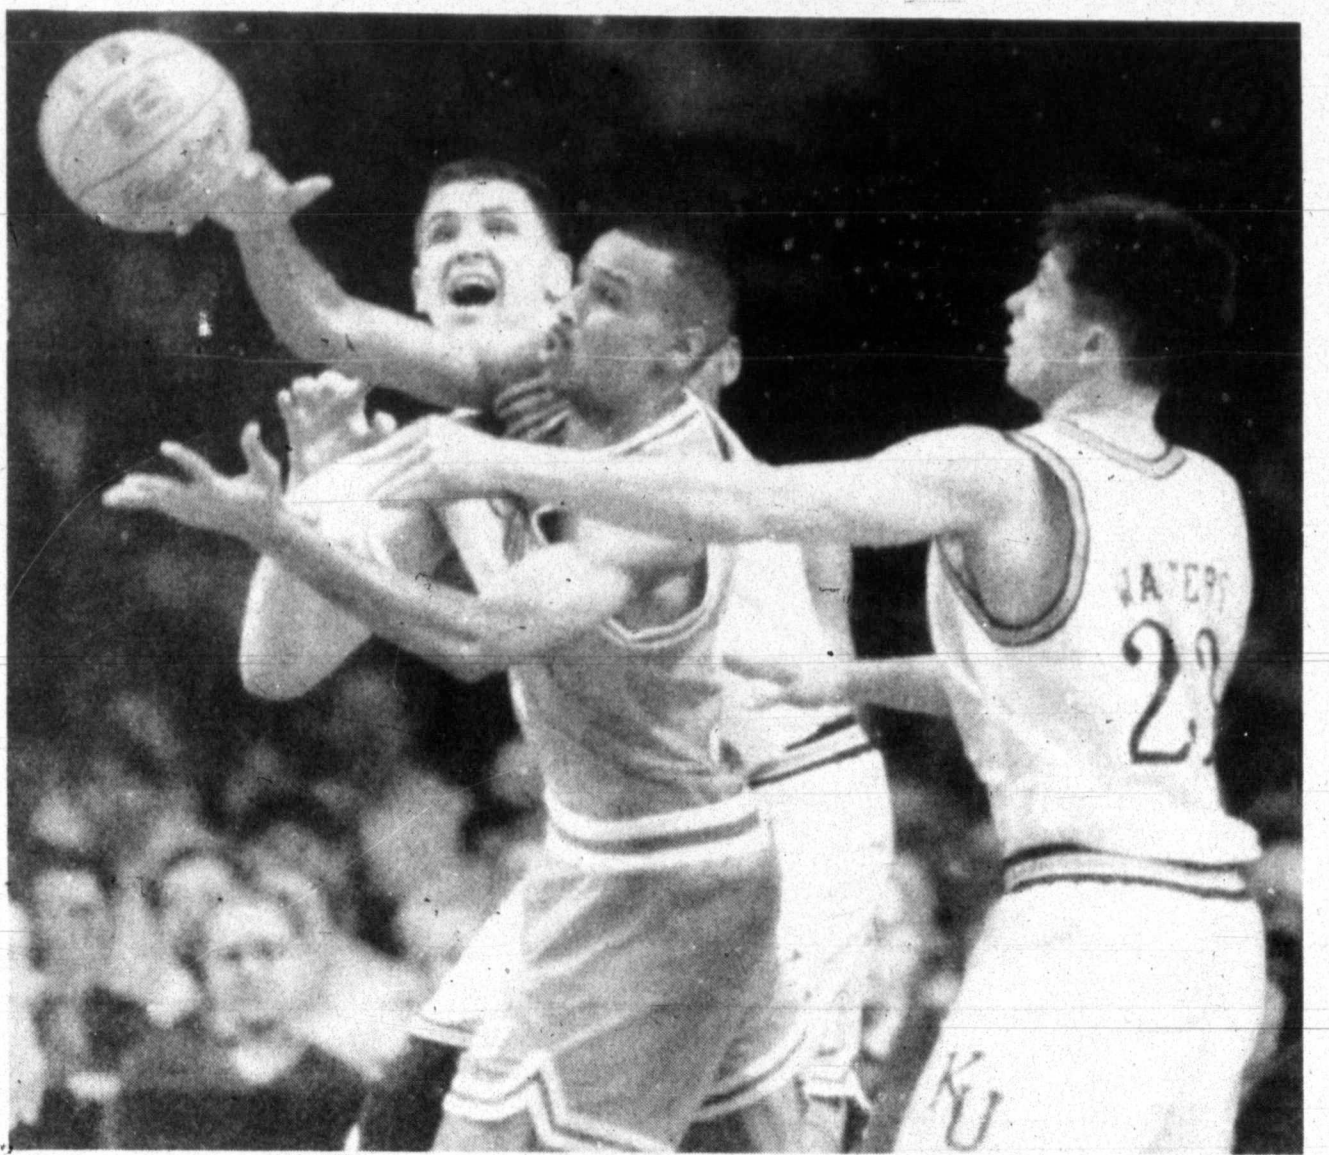

Michael Edwards, who scored all 12 of his points on 5-for-6 shooting in the second half, stole a pass and went the length of the floor for a layup that put the Orangemen (20-9) ahead with 41 seconds remaining. Then Terry Dehere, who led Seton Hall (21-8) with 18 points, missed a jumper in the lane with 3 seconds left. David Johnson, who led Syracuse with 20, grabbed the rebound and dropped in two clinching foul shots.

The victory moved Syracuse into the Big East championship game for a conference-record ninth time. The Orangemen face No. 21 Georgetown in Sunday's title game after the Hoyas defeated No. 25 St. John's 68-64. It will be the fifth time Georgetown and Syracuse have played for the title, with Hoyas having swept the first four.

Alonzo Mourning's 25 points led Georgetown past St. John's, but the Hoyas missed 6 of 12 free throws in the final 35 seconds as the Redmen nearly overcame a seven-point deficit in the last minute.

Elsewhere, Miami of Ohio and Evansville won their league tournaments to earn automatic bids to the NCAA tourney.

David Scott scored 18 points, including a jumper with 10 seconds left, as Miami (23-7) defeated Ball State 58-57 for the Mid-American championship. Parrish Casebeer scored 39 points, leading Evansville over Butler 95-76 for the Midwest-Collegiate title.

In regular-season play, Don MacLean scored 25 points in his last game at Bailey Pavilion, helping eighth-ranked UCLA win the Pacific-10 title with an 85-77 victory over Arizona State. It is the first Pac-10 championship for the Bruins (25-4) since 1987.

Rodney Chatman hit a 12-foot jumper as time expired, giving No. 10 Southern Cal a 70-69 win over No. 2 Arizona. It was the second straight loss for the Wildcats (24-6). Harold Miner led Southern Cal (23-5) with 21 points and became the second Pac-10 player since Lew Alcindor to score more than 2,000 points in three years.

No. 5 Ohio State got 26 points from Jim Jackson and walloped Minnesota 94-63, clinching at least a tie for its second, straight Big Ten championship. The Buckeyes (23-5) won their sixth straight and will share the title with Indiana for the second straight year if the Hoosiers beat Purdue on Sunday.

No. 14 Michigan got 22 points from Jalen Roise, 15 in the second half, and rolled to a 68-59 victory over Illinois (13-15). The victory left the Wolverines (20-8) tied for third in the Big Ten.

Ryan warms up against Red Sox

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves will get their first look at Nick Esasky in game conditions Sunday when the first baseman plays in a "B" game against the Montreal Expos.

Esasky, acquired as a free agent on Nov. 17, 1989, played only nine games with the Braves in 1990 before being sidelined ever since with symptoms of vertigo.

Esasky's dizziness and unsteadiness was diagnosed at the Mayo Clinic in August 1990 as stemming from a viral infection.

He played eight seasons with Cincinnati and Boston before joining the Braves and had 122 home runs and 427 RBIs with those two teams. He had only six hits in 35 at bats with no homers and no RBIs with Atlanta.

Dwight Gooden, recovering from surgery on his right rotator cuff, is also scheduled to pitch in a "B" game for the New York Mets against the Los Angeles Dodgers at Vero Beach, Fla.

The Mets say Gooden will make about 50 pitches. He threw a simulated game on Thursday and did not experience any soreness in the shoulder.

Meanwhile, Nolan Ryan is just starting to get warmed up. He pitched 4 2-3 innings for Texas Saturday against Boston, allowing three hits and fanning one.

"This was better than the last time," Ryan said after his second outing of the spring. "I did throw some quality innings. I had about 70 pitches and 34 of them were in that last inning."

Ryan, 45, is in his 26th spring training. He left with the score tied at 2.

"I feel good and that's the number-one goal," Ryan said. "I was disappointed I didn't finish better. I'm still a long ways from being ready for the season."

On Tuesday, Ryan allowed three hits and three runs in four innings with two walks and two strikeouts.

Ryan gave himself a C grade for his first start "because I didn't have command of my pitches." He said he still needed another 20 innings to get sharp for the start of the season.

"I've got to throw more strikes," he said. "I know what I wanted to get done today but I just couldn't get it done. My curve was working good."

Ryan, disabled last season with a muscle problem in his shoulder, feels fine this spring.

"My goal is to be healthy," he said, "and if I'm healthy and don't contribute then I know it's time to move on."

Texas pitchers Jeff Russell and John Barfield will miss an indefinite amount of spring training time while they nurse arm injuries. Russell is bothered by a bone spur in his right elbow while Barfield has a sore shoulder.

Russell, the Rangers' ace reliever, has only gotten two outs this spring. The elbow was X-rayed Saturday and the bone spur discovered.

"Jeff will probably experience some discomfort at times during the regular season and it might keep him from pitching for a week," manager Bobby Valentine said. "But we are encouraged that it's not something like a ligament."

PHS golfers compete at San Angelo

Pampa High golfers, competing against mostly Class 5A schools, had a two-round total of 647 to finish eighth at the San Angelo Classic Thursday and Friday.

Andrews shot a 618 to win the tournament championship.

Individual scoring for Pampa is as follows: Jay Earp, 80-77-157;

Brandon Brashgears, 79-79-158; Mark Largin, 83-81-164; Corey Stone, 81-87-168; Ryan Handley, 84-94-174.

Both Pampa boys' and girls' teams are entered in the Hereford Tournament Friday and Saturday.

District 1-4A play is scheduled to start March 26.

Canadian is sixth with 16 points.

Friday's individual results for Canadian and Wheeler are as follows:

Pole vault - 2. Layton, Canadian, 12-0.

Girls' Division

High jump - 3. Boedeker, Wheeler, 4-10.

Long jump - 2. Kessie, Canadian, 15-7.
Triple jump - 3. Chapman, Wheeler, 31-4.

Los Angeles Dodgers baserunner Brett Butler (22) keeps his toes tight to second base after stealing as second baseman Lou Whittaker makes a late tag Saturday.

Russell underwent surgery in 1990 for bone chips and had tendinitis last July.

Minnesota Twins manager Tom Kelly said Saturday there is a good chance third baseman Mike Pagliarulo will spend the first seven days of the regular season on the disabled list. Pagliarulo is scheduled to undergo surgery Tuesday on his perforated eardrum.

'Stars & Stripes' closes gap in round-robin racing

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes closed the gap against America3, the yacht.

And today's race against America3's sister ship, Defiant, will determine if Conner can close the gap on America3, the syndicate.

Conner ended a pair of losing streaks by sailing Stars & Stripes to a dominating and desperately needed victory over America3 on Friday in the third round-robin of the defender selection series.

"I think it was a breakthrough in showing that America3 is not invincible and there are some conditions, even in our present configuration, that we sail well in," Conner said, citing lighter seas and the fact that Stars & Stripes took advantage of wind shifts.

Friday's race was a complete departure from the previous six between the yachts. Stars & Stripes had trailed at every turning mark in six straight losses to America3 (America Cubed).

But Stars & Stripes led from the start and defeated America3 by 1 minute, 5 seconds on a brilliant day on the Pacific Ocean. Stars & Stripes covered the 20.03-mile course in 3 hours, 1 second in winds ranging from 8-12 knots with little swell.

Stars & Stripes earned four points and jumped back into second place with 15 points, three ahead of Defiant. America3, which suffered only its second loss in 13 races spanning two rounds, is well ahead with 40 points.

Conner still needs to defeat Defiant today to hold second place.

That's important because the scoring changes for the fourth round. The point leader after round three gets two wins and the second-place boat gets one win heading into the 12-race fourth round-robin. The two yachts with the most wins at the end of round four advance to the defender finals.

Defiant and America3 close the third round-robin on Sunday.

The victory ended an overall four-race losing streak for Stars & Stripes, including Tuesday's race against America3, when its $500,000 carbon-fiber mast snapped just after rounding the first weather mark, in the process ripping a $50,000 mainsail. Stars & Stripes, Conner's only boat, is sailing with its only backup mast.

Does Uncle Sam want YOU?

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

"I've met people on the drag - 27 years old - who've worked five years at a feedlot for $5 an hour and have kids; and I said 'huh-huh, I'm not gonna end up like that.'"

This is the declaration of James Owens, a Pampa High School senior, who cast his lot with the U. S. Navy. He is one of many young people in America who've not opted for college, vo-tech school or the marketplace and but instead selected the armed forces as the place to get a start on adult life.

Owens and his mother and stepfather, Mary and Lance Davis, are very comfortable with his decision to join the Navy. He has been promised training and a job in crypto-tech maintenance. Owens described his job as "top secret", and said he would learn to repair decoder machines which receive coded intelligence. He plans to enter in October.

Educational opportunity and job security are two considerations which gave the military an edge up on other choices, according to Owens.

"The way I figure, you can come out of the Navy in four to six years with training and money for college. If you go straight to college, you come out with just an education. And, knowing me, I probably wouldn't study," Owens said.

I just figured it would be good to be paid to learn, rather spend money on college. If you don't have enough money for college and don't think you'll get a scholarship, I think this is the way to go," he continued. "With the job I've got, if I get in and like it, I guess I'll stay in. It's a necessity job, a high-tech job."

His mother echoed his belief. "No matter how much the military cuts back, I don't think they'll cut back on those who maintain their machines," she said.

Mary Davis described her son as an "A-B honor roll" student. She said school is not hard for him.

So Uncle Sam does want you. Well, some of you anyway.

The military continues to enlist men and women for the service, but on the other end, is offering incentive packages to some mid-rank personnel to decrease their numbers, according to Navy Times.

The face of the globe changed in 1991. The Soviet bear was beset from within. Ethnic division and demands for governmental change weakened the giant nation. In turn, American military forces are "drawing down", or looking at methods to lower the numbers in their ranks.

Petty officer Dan Treadwell staffs the Navy recruiting office in Pampa. Treadwell was an influence in Owens' decision to join the Navy.

In an interview, Treadwell said recruiting practices have not changed, but standards for recruits have changed in the past four months.

The minimum score required on the ASVAB - Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery - has risen from 31 to 50.

"When the ASVAB scores jumped, it eliminated a lot of candidates with English problems," he said. Treadwell explained the Navy will help a recruit upgrade English skills.

The required minimum score of 50 on the ASVAB reflects the B-C, or average student. At Pampa High School, the average ASVAB score is 60.2, he said.

Treadwell said that moral standards have been made more stringent. Two convictions for "driving while intoxicated" will eliminate a possible recruit who is otherwise qualified for naval service.

From the class of 1992, Treadwell hopes to enlist 19. Nine have signed on; the rest, he said, are "fence sitters."

Amy Sgt. 1st Class Bob Mercer covers recruiting in Gray County, plus nine other Panhandle counties from his Borger office, summed up Treadwell's information. "We are taking less and less. We are looking for smarter individuals. We are looking for higher quality individuals - someone who can pick up computers easily. We've found over the years, the higher they make on the ASVAB,

"The main reason we have this truck is to say 'Stay off drugs, stay in school.' The Army isn't taking just any old thing."

- Staff Sgt. Brian Clark

the more easily they are trained."

A colleague, Staff Sgt. Brian Clark, spoke to Pampa High School students in February from an 18-wheel truck which travels the nation spreading the Army message through personal appeals and audio-visual presentations. His theme to them is twofold.

"The main reason we have this truck is to say, 'Stay off drugs, stay in school.' The Army isn't taking just any old thing," he said emphatically.

Clark's traveling partner, Sgt. 1st Class Don Parsons, agreed saying, "We're not looking for quantity. We're looking for quality."

One example of a change in Army acceptance standards in the last year is that a General Educational Development certificate alone is no longer sufficient. A high school diploma is required, unless one has successfully completed 15 hours of college work, along with the GED.

Clark pointed out that 91 percent of Desert Storm forces were high school graduates. He said in his eight years of Army service he noticed a trend toward a high quality individual, therefore, a higher quality soldier.

Air Force Tech. Sgt. Joe Wyatt explained that recruiting continues despite drawdown efforts by the services. Wyatt said that military personnel numbers were like a triangle with the Commander in Chief at the top, and the airman at the bottom. In 1988, 65,000 were recruited for the Air Force. The goal, he said, in 1989 was 30,000. The military leaders thought attrition would take care of the excess mid-rank personnel. However, with the sluggish economy, he said, that did not occur. The triangle shaped organization became a tear-drop shape. The Pentagon planners are offering incentives to some to leave the Air Force and the recruiting goals have been increased from 30,000 to 39,000 for 1992. He said that should return the Air Force personnel levels to a triangle shape.

The Marine Corps takes a little different approach to recruiting, according to Master Sgt. Ron Marricle of the Amarillo office. The Corps offers similar education and job training benefits as other branches of the service, but Marricle stressed that the Corps is looking for the special individual. "I think the big emphasis is the old stuff - God, country and Corps. We're looking for someone who wants to be a little special."

He said that Corps standards have not changed.

"I think we've been leading the armed services in quality control for years," Marricle said. He believes that he is seeing the highest quality recruits in his 15 years of service.

During Desert Storm he was approached by older individuals and prior service people. "A lot who go into the Corps are looking for action," he said.

He concluded, "If you are selling jobs, education, money, they're not interested. If you sell esprit de corps, rallying around the flag, then the recruits keep coming. If you sell patriotism, you don't run out."

Leg jerks during sleep common past age 65

NEW YORK (AP) - It's not going to provide much exercise, but people 65 and older commonly have a periodic jerking of their legs while they sleep, a study says.

Forty-five percent of a randomly selected sample of people in that age range showed five or more leg twitches per hour of sleep, as measured by a monitor as the participants slept at home.

The prevalence of the condition in younger adults is not known, but it is thought to be less than in the elderly, said researchers from the University of California, San Diego, and San Diego State University.

Their study included data on 420 volunteers from the community. Results were presented in the December issue of the journal Sleep.

The condition they studied is called periodic limb movements in sleep, or nocturnal myoclonus. Typical symptoms also include insomnia, physical restlessness, excessive daytime sleepiness and sometimes cold feet.

It may be a small world, but ignorance is still vast

DEAR ABBY: Every year I begin my 12th-grade geography course by reading an article you printed a few years ago. My students are always shocked to learn the statistics that show how ignorant many Americans are about the world. I was, therefore, surprised and dismayed when you placed Korea in Southeast Asia. This shows how pervasive the problem is.

Here's the article you printed that I use:

DEAR READERS: In celebration of its 100th birthday, the National Geographic Society commissioned Gallup—the Rolls-Royce of pollsters—to find out how much the average American knows about geography.

The results were startling. One in five of those polled could not name one country in Europe. Three out of four could not find the Persian Gulf on a map. One in four could not find the Pacific Ocean. One in two couldn't locate South Africa. Worse yet, 50 percent couldn't find New York state on a map, and 14 percent could not even find the United States!

Compared with a similar poll taken 40 years ago, the results show a steady decrease of geographic knowledge. The reason: Only 25 percent of the schools in the United States of America include geography in their curriculum.

Even though there are more Americans traveling today than ever before, there seems to be a diminishing interest in geography. This brings to mind the story about the well-traveled American who called a friend to say that she had just returned from Majorca.

"Where is it?" the friend asked. She replied, "I don't know. We flew." Respectfully,

PATRICK GRANT,
UNIVERSITY PREP
ACADEMY, SEATTLE

DEAR MR. GRANT: Oops! The face with the egg on it is mine! According to The 1992 Universal Almanac, both North and South Korea lie in EASTERN Asia.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Pray, where were all my sharp-eyed editors when I needed them?

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from "A Compulsive Gambler," who stated that he/she now lives in Okinawa, Japan.

Abby, Okinawa is not in Japan. It is an island that is part of the Ryukyu chain of islands in the Pacific. Just thought you'd like to know.

NELSON T. HALL,
VAUXHALL, N.J.

DEAR NELSON T. HALL: According to The Information Please Almanac, after Japan surrendered to the United States on Sept. 2, 1945, the Pacific islands, including Okinawa, remained under U.S. occupation.

However, following Japan's Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's visit to Washington, D.C., in 1969 during the Nixon administration, the United States agreed to return Okinawa and the other Ryukyu Islands to Japan in 1972. The U.S. Postal Service in Los Angeles says that "to reach someone in Okinawa, the correct address is Okinawa, Japan."

So, while Okinawa may not appear to be in Japan, it is considered a part of Japan.

News of friends, neighbors brings breath of fresh air

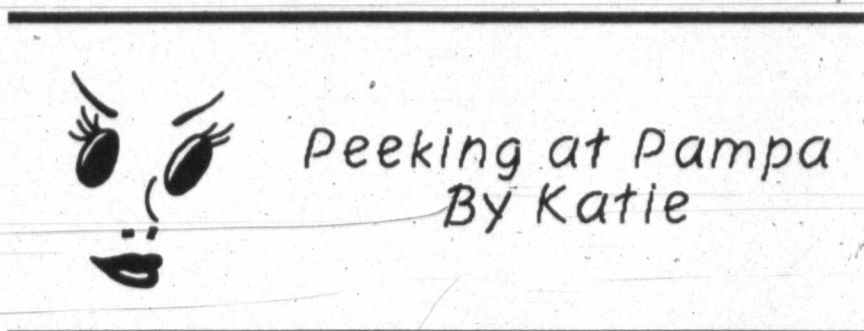

When Winter returned, she brought a killing frost and a bit of snow. Then March made a bid for first place with strong winds. Perhaps news of our friends and neighbors will warm us up.

The Telephone Pioneers gave 200 pine and oak trees to the City Parks Department to be used at the new Recreation Park east of town. Do drive by to check the progress on the park. You will be pleasantly surprised.

Several birthdays were celebrated recently. Residents of Pam Apartments honored Leon Harris on his 75th birthday with a surprise party and not one but three pretty birthday cakes. Earline "Ikke" Earp was the birthday girl when friends took her to dinner. Attending were her husband Hood, Dorothy Jeffreys, Estelle and Skip Montgomery, Vivian and Mickey White and Jim White. After dinner the group went home with Ikke for an evening of visiting. They are a birthday celebration group. For years Ikke drove the school bus for the handicapped students, who idolized her. So did their families.

Clois Robinson was birthday honoree in his office a few days ago when his wife Ann appeared with a big, pretty cake and ice cream.

Virginia DeWitt, Social Security head, celebrated her birthday, too.

Was it an "oh!" birthday, Virginia? Birthday wishes to all—plus Homer Johnson and Bill Potts.

Congratulations to 11-year-old Mandy Wells for being the Gray County Spelling Bee champion. Mandy was no. 1 out of 17 spelling contestants. Woody and Terry are her parents. A penny says her teacher is proud of her, too!

Jane Kadingo, her two sisters and one brother left spouses and children at home to celebrate their mother's 75th birthday in Tavares, Fla. While the big celebration was family dinner, there were trips to Daytona Beach and several shopping malls to go along with hours of visiting over a period of nine days.

Several family members and friends attended the recent graduation of James Hunter at Arlington. James received his degree in electronics engineering technology from the DeVry Institute of Technology, University of Texas Arlington. Attending were his mother Gayle Hunter; Jo Puckett, mother of his wife Jana; Helen McGill. Joe's son Jeffrey Jacobs was there, too.

Jackie Stephens visited her parents, Tillie and Bill, last week after a three-year tour of Navy duty in Hawaii. One day Jackie, Tillie and Tillie's sisters, Iris Day, Novella Burns, Barbara Whitten and Betty Derryberry of Wellington had lunch together.

Another day Jackie's brother Andy, his wife Linda and their three sons came from Frith. Jackie purchased a new wardrobe suitable for Washington, D.C., her new assignment, to replace the shorts and t-shirts worn in Hawaii.

In the Navy, for eight years and re-enlisted for four more, Jackie works as an ocean system technician in highly secretive work. Tillie went to Hawaii last September for the special ceremony when Jackie received the rank of chief petty officer.

Tillie, Iris, Novella and Barbara have lunch together on the last Thursday of each month for the sake of family togetherness.

Seen while peeking around Pampa: Jim and Joyce Morris grocery shopping together. Bill Waters standing in line at the check out stand of the same store. Jo Lynn and Bill Cash enjoying dinner out. Judy Clendennen, missed at the big bank, but spotted at the drive-in of First National Bank. Marshall and Pauline Gardner enjoying the view from their front porch in mid-afternoon.

Pampa was well represented in Austin the last few days both at the state basketball championship games and for the prison decision. By now you know the results for the championship games. Coach Hale and players, we are proud of you and your fine representation of pampa!

Don't eat too much chocolate during American Chocolate Week that begins today.

Chemical pregnancy often mistaken

NEW YORK - An estimated 20 to 25 percent of all pregnancies will be "lost" shortly after conception, but the problem poses no continuing obstacle for most women who want to have children.

This type of loss is called a "chemical pregnancy."

Today's sensitive home pregnancy tests can let a woman know if she has conceived within a day or two of a missed menstrual period.

Often a patient will get a positive result, then begin to bleed a few days or a week later at or around the time of the expected period. She may mistakenly believe she's had a miscarriage.

Although there was a loss because conception did take place, this is not a bad prognostic sign. It proves a woman's fallopian tubes are open, that her ovaries produce eggs, that her husband makes sperm and that her cervical mucus is capable of carrying the sperm to the egg.

In fact, 35 percent of women who experience such early losses will become clinically pregnant the next month - have a pregnancy that is detectable on ultrasound. And 65 percent of these women will become pregnant within three months and most will successfully carry to term.

It is believed that many early losses are due to chromosomal abnormalities, maternal illness or harmful exposures.

In some cases, the loss may be due to inadequate amounts of the female hormone progesterone in the second half of a woman's menstrual cycle.

More than 70 percent of losses in the embryonic stage, or between five and 10 weeks from a woman's last menstrual period, may be simply nature's way of dealing with severe chromosomal abnormalities or major developmental defects.

Miscarriages in the fetal period of pregnancy, between 10 and 26 weeks, are often a different matter. They may be because of physical problems, such as a defect in the uterus or cervix that interferes with pregnancy, or a serious maternal illness.

If there's a defect in the cervix or scar tissue in the uterus from previous surgery, the problem can often be corrected and a future miscarriage prevented.

The 'Texas Tornado'

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Here's a replay of Tanya Tucker's day last Oct. 2: Labor, 10:30 a.m.; birth, 1:10 p.m.; named the Country Music Association's female vocalist of the year, 8:30 p.m.

"It was quite a day for me," the 33-year-old country music fireball recalled in understated simplicity, reviewing the most memorable day of her life. "It's not the usual way you win something."

For Tucker, the remarkable 10-hour span reflected her persistent yen of the unorthodox. She's the only country music singer who ever has acknowledged giving birth twice without ever being married.

Her high profile and supercharged lifestyle (nickname: the Texas tornado) have made her a tabloid target for years.

Over the years, she's dated, Glen Campbell (23 years her senior, to whom she was engaged), Merle Haggard (21 years her senior), Don Johnson, Andy Gibb and several pro athletes.

Just 1 1/2 years before her first child was born, she was treated for drug addiction at the Betty Ford Center.

She arrives 30 minutes late for a recent interview wearing a tan cowboy hat, brown vest and Western skirt. The interview was the start of a festive day for Tucker: four hours later she was guest of honor at a long-awaited reception saluting her as the reigning queen in country music.

She lights a cigarette and gazes out a window overlooking her Music Row kingdom.

"I am a free spirit," she says. "I enjoy doing what I want to do, but that doesn't always happen. I think I'm a fun time, good person."

She's been in the headlines since she was 13 when she burst onto the scene in a miniskirt singing a country version of "Delta Dawn."

At 15, she was performing on Las Vegas stages until the early morning hours, so she dropped out of high school. When she was 18, she declared: "Five years from now, I want to own the moon."

Along about this time, some reviewers began calling her "the female Elvis."

These days her 2-year-old daughter, Presley (named after Elvis), and son Beau Gray travel with her to most of her 200 performances a year. Never short of grit, she was back on stage 10 weeks after Beau Gray was born and three weeks after Presley was born.

"Babies need new shoes," she explains about her rapid return to work.

Since the mid-1980s, there's hardly been a month when Tucker didn't have a record in the upper reaches of the country charts. She's become one of the most enduring singers on the nation's 2,140 country music radio stations.

She has a sultry, soulful voice that belts out heartfelt songs about the emotions of romance, her love of Texas and the charm of cowboys.

Some of her hits: "Walking Shoes," "My Arms Stay Open All Night," "Down to My Last Teardrop," "I Won't Be Me," "Just Another Love," "Texas (When I Die)," "Strong Enough to Bend," "I Won't Take Less Than Your Love."

Her album "(Without You) What Would I Do With Me" has just been certified gold for selling a milestone 500,000 copies.

Her breakthrough record in 1972, "Delta Dawn," came out a year before Helen Reddy's pop version became a standard.

After 20 years, it's still Tucker's closing concert number.

"It's a song people want to hear after all these years," she says.

Tucker, a native of the Midland, Texas, area, also has meddled in acting. She appeared with Johnson in the movies "Dixie Bar and Grill" and "The Rebels." More recently, she had a small part on the TV show "Shannon's Deal."

She ventured into rock 'n' roll in the late 1970s, posing sensually on an album cover with a microphone cord snaked between her legs. She was a Madonna-style sexpot seven years before Madonna hit the national scene.

In fact, she and her rock 'n' roll counterpart met briefly a couple of times when Tucker was visiting the West Coast.

"We didn't get along," Tucker recalls. "Maybe it was two strong-willed persons together."

Her CMA award puts her in a class with country's elite: Dolly Parton, Loretta Lynn, Reba McEntire, Barbara Mandrell, Tammy Wynette and Kathy Mattea are among the previous winners.

In fact, she bought a new home in suburban Nashville not far from where Parton lives.

But the award hasn't preoccupied her. She's more interested in upcoming projects — such as a possible duet LP with pop star Don Henley.

"I've been so busy I haven't thought that much about the award. I think more about things I haven't attained."

Brooks up for entertainer of year

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Country music showman Garth Brooks and Georgian Alan Jackson lead nominees for Academy of Country Music Awards with five nominations apiece, including entertainer of the year.

Clint Black, Travis Tritt, Reba McEntire, Trisha Yearwood, Ricky Van Shelton, Diamond Rio, Vince Gill, Billy Dean, Mary-Chapin Carpenter and Brooks & Dunn also got multiple nominations.

Miss McEntire, Black and Randy Travis also were in the race for best entertainer.

Brooks, the new pop music darling with record sales exceeding even Michael Jackson, was also nominated for top male singer, single record for "Shameless" and for albums "No Fences" and "Ropin' the Wind."

Alan Jackson competes for a male singer trophy as well as best single, song and album nominations for "Don't Rock the Jukebox." Jackson could win two trophies in the song of the year category because prizes go to both the artist and composer.

Nominees in 11 categories were announced by "Entertainment Tonight" hostess Leeza Gibbons, actor Lee Horsley and country singer Marty Stuart during a news conference at Universal Studios Hollywood.

The academy's 3,000 members will cast ballots by mail and the winners will be announced April 29 during a two-hour NBC-TV special from the Universal Amphitheatre. Black, Tritt and Lorrie Morgan will be hosts.

'Dark Wind' plagued by problems

PHOENIX (AP) — A sirocco of criticism has blown across the movie "Dark Wind" since it was cast.

Some Hopi Tribe members complain that the movie — based on a novel by Tony Hillerman, celebrated for his portrayal of American Indian cultures — defames them and invades their privacy.

Now, there's a delay in the release of the murder mystery, which was filmed on Indian reservations in Arizona.

A full-blooded Indian, Gary Farmer, was cast in one major role, as Deputy "Cowboy" Dashee in "Dark Wind." But executive producer Robert Redford was criticized because Lou Diamond Phillips — whose father is just part Cherokee — plays Navajo detective Jim Chee.

Redford got permission from the Navajo and Hopi governments to film on their reservations, but a dissident faction within the Hopi tribe contended the tribal council lacked the authority.

The dissident faction, traditionalist religious leaders of the Hopi village of Shungopavi, is considering filing suit in tribal court against Redford and Hopi Council Chairman Vernon Masayesva.

The village's lawyer, Frances Jue of Albuquerque, N.M., is preparing a suit, which she said would be based on objections to material in a script.

The movie included scenes depicting a Hopi village as the site of illegal drug dealing, its religious leader being knocked out or drugged and mistaken for a drunk, and a Hopi ceremonial mask being thrown on the ground.

"What that does is send a message that Hopi is the center of drugs, a drug capital, if you will," she said.

The suit would seek to block commercial release of "Dark Wind," and might seek money damages, she said.

Masayesva declined to comment except to say the matter had been referred to legal counsel.

Producer Patrick Markey said he and others went to great lengths to modify "Dark Wind" to meet objections about the script. All the scenes objected to by Shungopavi's leaders were in an early version of the script, he said.

Call 9-1-1! Help, Officer, my souffle is falling...

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

Want the weather forecast? Call 911. Your toilet's broken? Call 911. Can't remember your senator's name? Call 911.

Why not? Everyone else seems to be — to the chagrin of emergency officials nationwide.

Since its debut 24 years ago in the little town of Haleyville, Ala., the 911 emergency phone number has become a nearly universal distress signal. About 75 percent of Americans now can dial those three easy digits to summon police, firefighters or medics.

But people are dialing for a lot of other reasons, too. Each year, more and more non-emergency calls clog up emergency switchboards, stealing operators' precious time and threatening the safety of those with true emergencies. Non-emergency calls account for 25 percent to 50 percent of all 911 calls in many U.S. cities, officials say.

"We're the victim of our own success," said Capt. Randy Tibbs, director of emergency communications in Seattle. "The whole focus over the years has been, 'Call 911 for everything.'"

The calls range from amusing to downright bizarre, as a recent sampling shows:

A 6-year-old San Diego boy called 911 because his brother took one of his toys. Last November, a bright display of northern lights sparked dozens of 911 calls from nervous Midwesterners. In Arlington, Texas, police rushing to a 911 call found the house empty except for a Lhasa apso named Ginger sitting by the phone.

Though it's rare for callers to get a busy signal when dialing 911, tying up emergency lines with non-emergency calls poses an obvious danger. Lost seconds can be deadly.

"There's a saying among 911 people that the most important phone call you have to answer is the one that's waiting," Tibbs said. "Of 10 calls, the first five may be non-emergencies. But the sixth call is a guy calling about his wife having chest pains, and the ninth guy's house is on fire. Answering them quickly can literally make the difference between life and death."

Another danger of 911 overload was revealed in a 1987 Justice Department study. It said many police departments are turning into "dial-a-cop" operations, reacting to whatever comes in instead of preventing crime. In many cities, the report said, drivers locked out of their cars get a quick response while homicides go uninvestigated.

If there's a bright side, it's that such problems show how firmly 911 has established itself as a modern-day SOS. Life-saving 911 calls have been placed by 3-year-old toddlers, and a Minneapolis study showed 99 percent of adults there knew they could dial 911 for emergencies. The number even has its own TV show — "Rescue 911," a CBS series that reenacts real-life emergencies.

The original idea behind 911 was simple enough: A minute or more can be shaved from response times if a panicked person can remember a simple, three-digit number instead of fumbling through a phone book for the proper fire, police or ambulance number.

But 911 really took off in the late 1970s, as computer technology made "enhanced 911" readily available. With enhanced 911, every caller's phone number, name and address flash on a computer screen, allowing rescuers to respond quickly even if the caller can't speak or doesn't know the address.

That feature alone has saved many lives — such as that of a disabled and partially blind Detroit man who fell in his home last August. The 76-year-old man couldn't reach food or help for three days, and when he finally crawled to his phone, he was too weak to talk, police said. Enhanced 911 allowed rescuers to find him easily.

Today, virtually all U.S. cities over 100,000 in population have 911 systems, most of them enhanced, said William Stanton, executive director of the National Emergency Number Association. About 25 percent of the nation's land area now is served by 911, with more small towns and rural counties adding systems each month, he said.

When 911 first becomes available in an area, the problem typically is getting people to switch from the old seven-digit numbers for emergencies, Stanton said. But after three or four years, few people remember the seven-digit numbers, or even know where to look them up. (They're usually buried with other government numbers in the phone book's blue pages.)

This is an artist's drawing of the largest Mayan sculpture yet found — a god dubbed "big bird" that was unearthed in Guatemala by a scientist who says the carving suggests religion spurred a major advance in the ancient civilization. The 34-foot-wide, 16-foot-high sculpture was carved about 300 B.C.

Archaeologists unearth largest Mayan sculpture ever found

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The largest Mayan sculpture yet found — dubbed "big bird" — was unearthed in Guatemala by a scientist who says the carving suggests religion spurred a major advance in the ancient civilization.

Other archaeologists said the discovery last spring was significant because it shows the Mayans were capable of producing large sculptures several hundred years earlier than thought. But one scientist questioned religion's role in the evolution of Mayan society.

The 34-foot-wide, 16-foot-high sculpture was carved about 300 B.C. at the base of the tallest temple pyramid in Nakbe, an ancient Mayan city hidden in jungle 350 miles north of Guatemala City.

"It's a bird head with an enormous beak that hangs down like an elephant trunk," said Richard Hansen, an archaeologist at the University of California, Los Angeles. "Some guys call it big bird."

Smaller, free-standing statues of the god, known as the Principal Bird Deity, were found previously in the region and also date to 300 B.C., Hansen said from his home in Rupert, Idaho.

But the stucco-covered, stone bird on the 150-foot-tall pyramid is the largest Mayan sculpture yet discovered and also the earliest major sculpture known to be incorporated into a building, he said.

"Our findings suggest religion was the final, major catalyst to propel the ancient Maya culture into a full-blown civilization,"

— Richard Hansen
Archaeologist

Hansen and his expedition determined in 1989 that most of Nakbe — a city of several hundred stone pyramids, tombs and other buildings — was constructed starting about 630 B.C., making it the earliest known center of Mayan civilization. The temple with the bird sculpture was built in the city's later stages, he said.

Until 300 B.C., Nakbe's pyramids lacked large architectural sculptures of deities and were built only to heights of about 60 feet.

The bird sculpture suggests

Mayan leaders placed "new emphasis on religion ... to control and motivate populations to provide labor and support" for pyramid building, Hansen said.

"Our findings suggest religion was the final, major catalyst to propel the ancient Maya culture into a full-blown civilization," he said.

Until now, the largest known Mayan sculpture was a 15-foot-wide, 12-foot-tall mask of a god-like figure found in Tikal, Guatemala. It dates to sometime between A.D. 600 and A.D. 900, Hansen said.

John Graham, an archaeologist at the University of California, Berkeley, said he's "very dubious that religion is a catalyst for any civilization."

The bird may be the totem of a ruling family rather than a god, he said, adding that archaeologists place "too much stress on religious interpretations anytime they dig up something they don't understand."

But Graham called the bird sculpture "a terrific discovery, very exciting, because it helps push back Maya civilization to a period when many people believed Maya life was characterized by simple, rural farmers."

USDA scientists invent new technique for trimming beef

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Agriculture Department scientists have invented a technique for removing bone, fat and gristle from beef that they say could save the meat industry about $1 million a year.

A meat cutter who now works 20 minutes on a beef chuck could shorten the time to less than four minutes with the automated technique invented by James Craig Jr., Richard P. Konstance and Wolfgang Heiland of USDA's Agricultural Research Service, says Craig.

As beef chucks move through a robotic system, water jets operating at high pressure penetrate the meat, removing the unwanted parts. A computer activates the water jets on signals from sensors on or above the conveyor line.

Three types of sensors were built, including a series of electronic needles that pierce the meat to detect bone, fat and gristle. That technique has been patented, Craig said, and patents are being sought for sensors that rely on sound wave or an electric eye.

The system "produces a higher quality end product for restructured beef," Craig said in a recent announcement describing the invention.

This type of deboned beef is prepared primarily for use in convenience foods, such as TV dinners.

Ann Whitehead, coordinator of the ARS national patent and license program in Beltsville, Md., said that if a company licensed the technology, it would have to get federal approval to use it commercially.

Patent applications have been filed for the optical and sonic sensors, Craig said.

regional offices nationwide to help rural areas and small towns with economic and infrastructure development.

The new offices will be part of the Agriculture Department's new Rural Development Administration.

The new offices, and the regions they represent are: Klamath Falls, Ore., Western Region; Levelland, Texas, Southwest Region; St. Joseph, Mo., North Central Region; Vicksburg, Miss., Delta Region; Aiken, S.C., Southeast Region; Huntington, W.Va., Mid-east Region; and Sayre, Pa., Northeast Region.

USDA said the offices would be in full operation by October.

The Rural Development Administration was mandated in the 1900 farm law and created by Madigan last December. The agency's jurisdiction includes water and waste loan and grant programs, community facilities loan and loan guarantee programs, and an industrial development grant program.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan has announced plans to establish seven

WHEAT PEST UPDATE

From Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension Entomologist, the following information is furnished. The Texas Department of Agriculture has issued a crisis exemption for use of Lorsban 4E to control Russian wheat aphid in winter wheat. There are some restrictions in some areas on not applying Lorsban 4E within one-mile radius of an active, wintering bald eagle roost area or within one-fourth mile of the margins of a lake/river being utilized as a foraging area for the bald eagle. There are also restrictions in Hemphill County around populations of the interior least tern.

The Russian wheat aphid has developed to economic levels in many areas of the Texas Panhandle (primarily the western 2/3). Many fields had already been treated with dimethoate (Cygon), disulfaton (Disyston) and/or combinations of these with parathion. Within a week to 10 days, Russian wheat aphid were building back. I hope that Lorsban 4E does a little better.

Greenbugs are also causing considerable damage in some areas. Some applicators have experienced control problems with parathion formulations (ethyl, methyl and 6-3). It appears that the insecticide resistant greenbug problems that we had in sorghum is showing up in wheat (should come as no surprise). None of the organophosphate insecticides alone are likely to control these greenbugs and that includes Lorsban 4E. One possible solution is to use combinations of insecticides. The combination that looked the best against resistant greenbugs in sorghum was Furandian 4F plus Lorsban 4E. Both of these are labeled for wheat now that Lorsban 4E has the Section 18 label. I do not know what rate to suggest. A pint of each was used in the sorghum test, but Furandian 4F is labeled for only 1/2 pint maximum in wheat. Let me know if you experience control problems with greenbugs, or if you find something that works.

REFLECTIONS

In reviewing some old news releases, I came across one from last March. It served to bring a few thoughts that I would like to reflect on.

Environmental concerns continue to increase and that is good up to certain points. There are "Extremists" who see everything in the worst possible light, and they are alarmed about everything. There is too much media alarm or attention grabbed by unfounded stories across our land. Many of these generally serve to cause harm to some form of agricultural production because they claim we are doing great harm to our environment.

One the other hand, farmers/ranchers and landowners make their living off of the land. Long gone are the days when we can wear out one farm and move west to start over with new, virgin land. We are more or less locked in to making the best with our land resources.

I will grant there are some exceptions, but by and large, most ag operators strive to maintain, if not improve, the land resource they operate. Generally, economics also play an important part in how operators take care of their land resources.

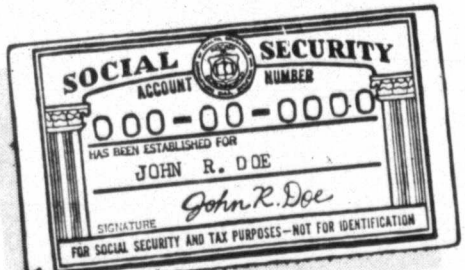

Some of the most damaging things operators can do to their land resources is to allow noxious plants to get a start and allow them to continue. These noxious plants would include but not be limited to: bindweed, Johnsongrass, mesquite, goldaster, shinoak, sand sagebrush, blueweed, jointed goatgrass, yucca, to name some of our worst land invaders.

It takes total commitment to either eradicate or control many of these plants so our land is productive for future generations.

Another important part to conserving our land resources is to protect it against wind and water erosion. Operators generally try their best but sometimes extremes of Mother Nature can cause a lot of soil erosion. The wise producers plan their operations to reduce the likelihood of erosion occurring where we are hit with floods, droughts or larger amounts of rainfall. We know they will occur, it is just we don't know when.

Jeff Carroll's voice now 'legendary'

By CHRISTINE STEPHENSON
Bryan-College Station Eagle

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — When Jeff Carroll wanted to enter college as a radio, television and broadcasting major in 1955, he was told that with his voice, nobody would listen to him.

Thirty-seven years later, Carroll's soft-twang is one of the endearing qualities that has made his radio storytelling segment popular with at least 45 stations across the state.

Carroll is the host of "Legendary Texas," a five-minute radio spot that has aired weekly on Texas A&M University's public station KAMU-FM for three years. Starting this month, the segments will be heard five days a week on stations across Texas.

Carroll's travels have inspired most of his stories, even those he originally discovered in books.

"My stories are wherever I find them," Carroll says. "But if a book says there's a hill there, I like to say, 'Sure enough, there's a hill there.'"

His favorite is a tale he calls "The Hobby and the Hurricane."

An 80-year-old Grand Banks fisherman living in New England in the late 19th century was invited to live with his son in Galveston. Not wanting to freeload, the fisherman tried to get a job, and was disappointed by being told many times that he was too old to be of any use.

The man moved to Galveston anyway and, to keep busy, started building a one-third-scale replica of a fishing vessel in his backyard. The unpainted dory was still on its chocks when the hurricane of 1900 hit Galveston on Sept. 8, killing 6,000 to 8,000 people.

The fisherman used his small boat to take victims out of the flooded wreckage of the city three at a time.

"The old fella that couldn't do anything, that was useless, saved over 200 people's lives," Carroll says.

Carroll says telling stories from the past is a family tradition. With roots on his mother's side dating back to pre-revolutionary Texas and one grandfather who was in the Confederate navy, Carroll learned from older generations the power of historic lore. And growing up in the small Texas town of Weimar, there was little to do but read.

"I'm big on buried treasures and lost mines and good stuff like that," Carroll says. "I think most kids are, and I found out that most adults are, too. It's just that they try to be a little more casual about it."

Carroll suspected Texans would resurrect their interest in the past on the eve of the state's sesquicentennial, and he began weaving his love of lore into a column he syndicated to small county weekly newspapers for about five years. Those columns have provided the inspiration for most of his "Legendary Texas" radio spots.

Now teaching two courses in Texas history at Texas A&M and one in American history at Blinn College, Carroll never lost touch with his love of history or storytelling during the 25 years he spent in the U.S. Forest Service in the Southwest, then as international director of the service's educational programs in Washington, D.C. After retiring from the Forest Service, he returned to his hometown of Weimar to run a boot shop before coming to Bryan-College Station in the mid-eighties.

During those 30 years, the self-proclaimed ham was no stranger to public performance. He appeared in several government films, television spots, theater productions and an hour-long made-for-TV film in the 1960s called "Operation Golden Eagle." Carroll even appeared in episodes of the television series "Lassie" for six weeks.

"That was when Lassie was with the Forest Service," Carroll says. "They tried to pull in people who worked in the field that actually looked right in the uniform."

In the theater of the classroom, Carroll likes to surprise his Texas history students by showing up in early 19th-century dress, complete with state-of-the-art 1833 weapons. His costume is based on an 1833 letter to New York, requesting fabric and other provisions needed desperately on the Texas frontier. Carroll usually appears with two to four friends, dressed to show the various stages of development in Texas settlement, during one of his classes on pre-revolutionary Texas.

"I'm a firm believer in experiential learning," says Carroll, who also has students take on projects such as shucking and grinding corn, then making cornbread. "I think education is the sum total of experiences from birth till death. You can never consider yourself educated if you deny the offer of a new experience."

Carroll also encourages students to tap their own families' heritage and dig up stories from family lore.

"A lot of families don't do that anymore," he says. "I have my students do some research on that. A lot of them have never heard the story about the time the pig fell through the roof, or whatever had to do with their families' growing up on the frontier."

Carroll's costumed volunteers also believe in the power of experience, making this kind of role-playing their avocation as members of the Texas Association of Buckskinners.

"They do this every weekend; they dress up and go out on a live this way, eating snakes and whatever." An $8,000 grant from the Texas Committee for the Humanities (a branch of the National Endowment for the Humanities) and matching funds from the Texas A&M Association of Former Students has made it possible to produce five segments of "Legendary Texas" a week and distribute them free to commercial and public radio stations across the state for the next year.

A mini-grant from the TCH and matching funds from H.E.B. grocery stores launched a 10-segment pilot project last summer, says Larry Jackson, station manager at KAMU-FM. During the trial run, 45 stations confirmed that they were broadcasting the five-minute segments, or about 10 percent of all of the radio stations in Texas.

KAMU-FM is still looking for another corporate sponsor to cover the increasing costs of production, Jackson says. The station has been donating its time and production staff to the project; increased funding for "Legendary Texas" would keep the station's technology current and fund special promotions and future programs.

"We feel we've squeezed enough out of the local economy," Jackson says.

If the favorable response heard at KAMU is any indication, the tales from Texas history could conceivably appeal to an even wider audience — especially to those whose minds aren't alert enough to appreciate Carroll's subtlety at 7:30 on Thursday mornings, when the segments have been broadcast on 90.9 FM.

The station also plans to use "Legendary Texas" as an inroad to other Texas stations, and to generate grants that will fund more listener-friendly programs similar in format to the popular segment "Stardate," syndicated by the University of Texas.

Names in the news

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Great Britain's Prince Philip didn't respond when a radio reporter seeking an interview called out "Yo prince! Yo prince!"

Instead, Queen Elizabeth II's husband darted into a waiting limousine outside the Ritz-Carlton hotel, where he spoke at luncheon Thursday.

The luncheon raised money for Outward Bound, which teaches survival skills through wilderness expeditions. The 71-year-old prince is an avid sportsman and environmentalist.

Deborah Gilmore of the British Consulate-General said interviews weren't on the royal agenda: "This is a private visit, not a public one. There is a difference."

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — "Family Ties" star Michael Gross, who's invested in a new rail line in Santa Fe, says his affection for trains runs in the family.

"I have been part of a railroad family for several generations," Gross said at a ceremony launching the Santa Fe Southern Railway last week.

The freight line, expected eventually to haul passengers, runs on an 18-mile branch line purchased from the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co.

Gross, a part-time resident of Santa Fe, played the father in the NBC series, now in syndication.

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker says she sought a divorce because she's tired of "pretending" her marriage to imprisoned TV evangelist Jim Bakker is OK.

"I cannot pretend anymore. Pretending becomes too hard on the physical body," Mrs. Bakker said in a letter to members of her

Orlando, Fla., church. "I have been suffering with high blood pressure, anemia, asthma, hyperventilation ... all, the doctors tell me ... related to stress and severe nervous strain."

The letter was released Thursday by her husband's Hendersonville lawyer, Jim Toms, who said he expected the divorce to be granted today in Florida.

Toms said Bakker, 52, doesn't want the divorce "but at this point this is the only thing he can give her."

Bakker, former head of the PTL television ministry, is serving an 18-year prison sentence on federal fraud and conspiracy convictions. He will be eligible for parole in three years.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — John Wayne's seven children will get this year's "Duke Award" for giving $2 million to a cancer center named for their dad.

The award will be presented at an April 4 charity ball to benefit the John Wayne Cancer Institute in Santa Monica. The actor died of cancer in 1979.

"It's always an event to get all seven together because we live in different cities and states," Michael Wayne, 57, said Thursday in announcing the event.
