Pampa celebrates prisons

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa in the future is expected to have more prison beds per capita than any city in Texas other than Huntsville.

The announcement was made by attorney Bill Waters during a Monday luncheon at the Community Building celebrating the area's latest acquisition - a new corrections unit which is expected to provide an estimated 125-150 new jobs.

The new prison could open as early as January 1993, about three months after the anticipated October opening of the Jordan Unit. An estimated 317 jobs are planned at the Jordan unit.

"My partner Ken Fields opined this morning that failure is always an orphan, but success has many parents," Waters said to a crowd of more than 100. "It is good to see all you parents here today."

Waters and other prison steering committee members praised the Pampa area for displaying "unprecedented community support" that included nods from Amarillo, White Deer, Skellytown, Lefors and other nearby towns.

Hero of the celebration, however, was Hoechst Celanese Chemical Plant and Manager Jerry Moore for the donation of a large office building to be relocated at the prison site east of the city.

"We are going to have to have a fundraiser," Waters laughed. "We're going to have to pay Celanese a whole $100 for this building. We also need to recognize IRI and (Chief Executive Officer) Vic Raymond for the contribution of steel for cell blocks."

Officials said without those "sweeteners" in the Pampa proposal, the area stood virtually no chance of getting a second prison unit during Friday's awarding in Austin.

"There were other towns that had some tremendous turnouts (in Austin) and had some great proposals but didn't get anything," Raymond said. "We couldn't have gotten off the ground without the help of Jerry Moore and Celanese."

Speakers stressed that if the building becomes the centerpiece of a pre-parole corrections unit, as has been discussed, that does not mean any inmates will be released in the Pampa.

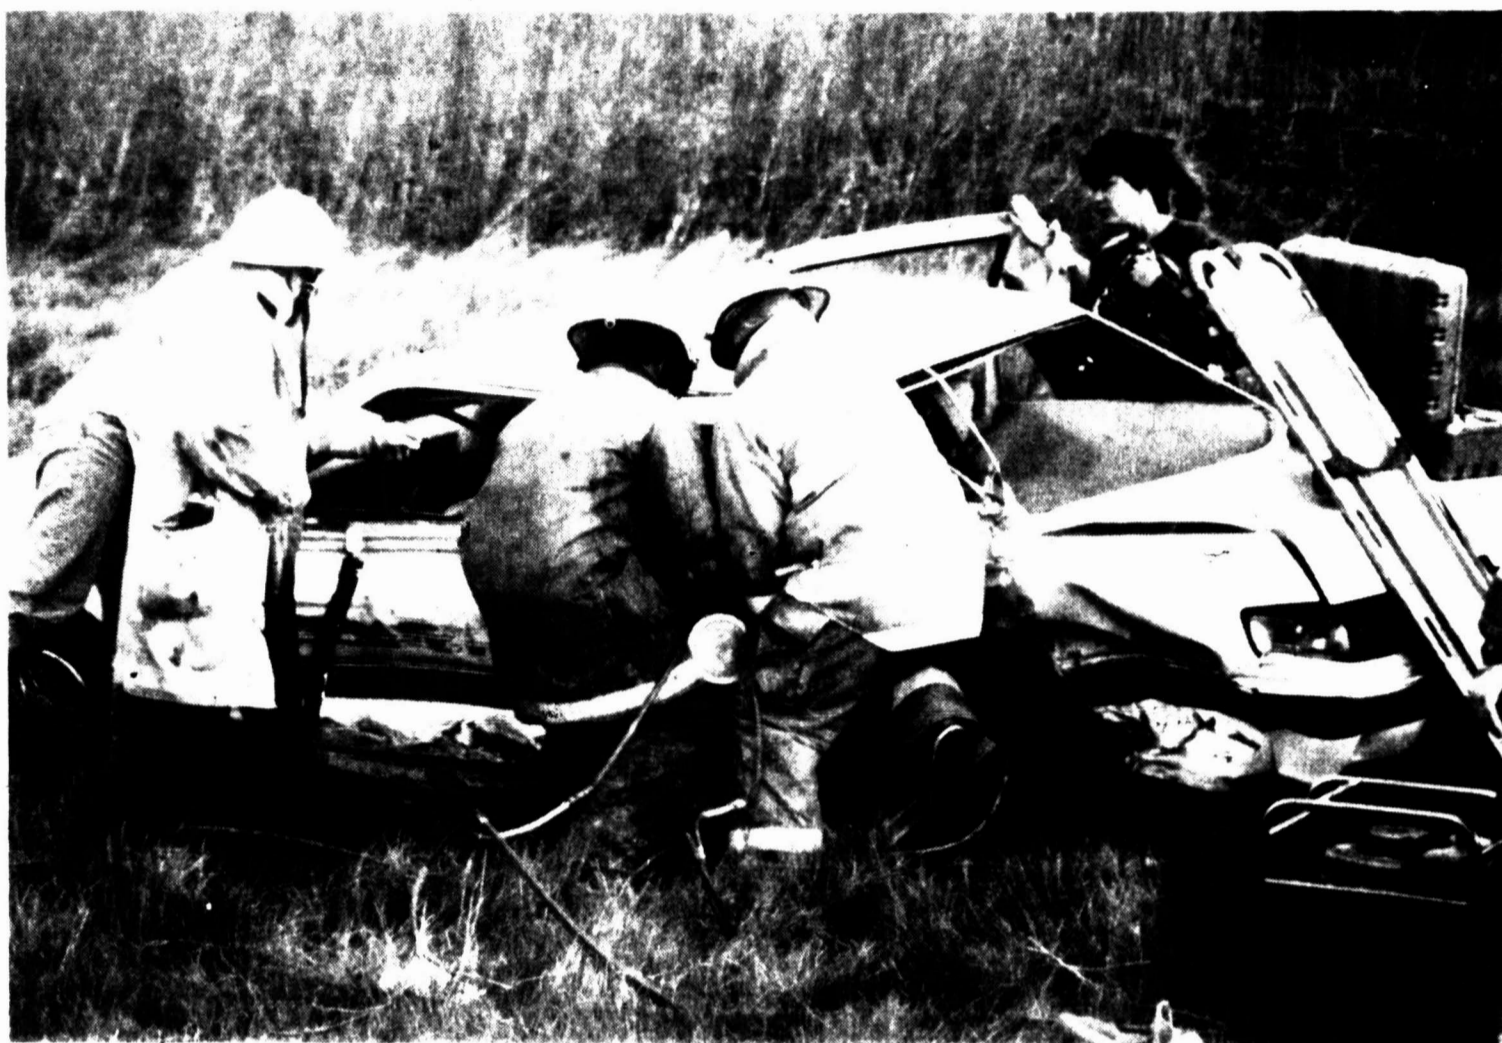

"All inmates will still go back to Huntsville before they are released," City Manager Glen Hackler said. "We want to assure everyone of that so there is no question."

Prison steering committee members said it is not absolutely clear the new unit will be a pre-parole facility, saying it could also be used as a return-to-custody center or rehabilitation unit of some sort.

Hackler commended area supporters for "being there every step of the way."

"This is a new era of economic growth in Pampa," he said. "It is directly attributable to each of you."

With the two prison units and Pampa's planned economic development tax, Hackler said Pampa is positioned to rebound from more than a decade of slumps in the oil and agriculture markets.

Firefighters with Pampa Fire Department use the Jaws of Life to extricate Russell Dee Bowen, 50, Pampa, from a vehicle following an accident this morning as nursing student Valisa Phillips, upper right, assists with medical needs.

Collision injures two

Two men were hospitalized this morning as the result of a two-vehicle accident west of Pampa on U.S. 60.

The accident occurred about 7:30 a.m., 2.8 miles west of Pampa.

Pampa Fire Department was called to the scene to use the Jaws of Life to extricate one of the men, who was trapped in his vehicle.

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Lynn Holland Jr. said the accident occurred when an eastbound 1990 Chevrolet pickup, driven by Mario Arcos, 40, of Lubbock, crossed into the westbound lane and struck a westbound 1984 Ford Thunderbird, driven by Russell Dee Bowen, 49, 1704 Beech.

Holland said Bowen "tried to take evasive action, breaking to the shoulder" but Arcos' vehicle struck Bowen's vehicle in the left driver's door, trapping Bowen in the vehicle.

Arcos told the trooper that he "blacked out" and when he came to, the accident had occurred. He was in stable condition in Coronado Hospital this morning, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Bowen was undergoing surgery for a compound fracture of the knee this morning at Coronado Hospital. He was listed in stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Three nursing students - Valisa Phillips, Paul Helms and Pamela Russell - on their way to school at Amarillo College witnessed the accident and attended to the men until AMT Paramedic Service arrived at the scene, Holland said.

Citations are pending, according to the trooper.

Lefors council declares war on wayward dogs

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS - Lefors City Council wants to put some teeth into the city's loose dog problem, deciding Monday to advertise for contracting of an animal control service.

Lefors City Marshal Max Kellison told the council, "I've had a lot of dog calls in the last 30 days. I'd like to see ya'll get in a contract situation with Pampa and gather about half of these and haul them off."

The council agreed, and voted unanimously to have Mayor Gene Gee write an advertisement asking for input from those interested in performing animal control service in Lefors.

In other business, the City Council unanimously approved a name change, subject to the change being OK with the liability insurance carrier, of the Lefors fire and ambulance services to Lefors Emergency Services.

Fire Chief Lanny Atchley said the change is needed to get the county records straight. He said county records show at least four different names for the volunteer group, which provides fire and ambulance services.

The council also agreed to allow the fire department to continue using the city's tax identification number.

In unrelated business, the council approved, in a 3-1 vote, the second reading of an ordinance establishing a $3.25 base charge for solid waste service for all city customers with natural gas service. Councilman Derl Boyd voted against the ordinance. Councilman Wendell Atkins was absent from that portion of the meeting.

After an executive session, the Council voted 4-1, with Councilman Larry Fulton voting against, to give City Secretary Phyllis Crutcher a raise by way of free water and gas utilities, and to keep city employee Carl Connell's salary at $1,120 a month. Connell's salary was increased three months ago when he began the duties of trash hauling and the Council said it would review that salary at the end of three months.

In other business, the council:

- unanimously approved the transfer of $25,000 from the $47,373.58 gas account to an interest-bearing account.

- unanimously voted to purchase 45 glass dinner plates for the Civic Center for 50 cents each.

- tabled discussion on constructing a stage in the Civic Center until Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) regulation can be reviewed.

- unanimously approved a one-year law enforcement liability insurance policy for $450 and a one-year liability policy for the City Council for $284.

- unanimously approved taking bids for a new tractor/mower.

- received an update on the water well project from Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. Courtney Sharp of PRPC presented the Council with a revised proposed contract between the city and Pat Youngblood regarding water rights.

- tabled action on hiring a summer employee.

- unanimously approved a $25 donation to the Lefors Art and Civic Club for the Easter egg hunt on Sunday.

- tabled action on the city marshal's request to rent a former boot shop for $50 a month to house the offices of the city marshal, city judge and justice of the peace.

Filing deadline approaches for those who owe IRS

WASHINGTON (AP) - April 15, 1991, 6 p.m., six hours to deadline. It was a good time to file tax returns for the last eight years.

Or so the woman said when she walked into a tax preparation service with eight years of check stubs and receipts.

"She said the IRS was breathing down her neck like a dragon," recalled Betty Hackworth, who manages a Jackson Hewitt Tax Service office in Virginia Beach, Va. "It took four tax preparers the rest of the night, but we got the returns in the mail before midnight."

Then there was the guy who pedaled his bicycle up to the tax office a half-hour before the filing deadline, looking for a quick refund. "We couldn't help because he didn't have any money and he didn't qualify for a refund loan," Ms. Hackworth said.

Such procrastinators will have lots of company trying to beat this year's Wednesday midnight filing deadline. As many as 20 million have waited to the last minute to file, and thousands of professional tax-preparation shops and Internal Revenue Service offices are likely to get a little hectic about sundown.

Five million taxpayers are expected to extend the procrastination - mailing a Form 4868 and getting until Aug. 17 to file. But they will have to estimate how much tax they owe and send a check with Form 4868.

Still penalties await those who owe the IRS and fail to file by the deadline. But lost in the fuss every year is the simple fact that there is no late filing penalty for those due refunds. That means 80 percent of taxpayers could wait weeks to file and lose nothing but the use of their refunds.

As April 15 nears every year, "There's always panic," said Donna Halligan, boss of seven Jackson Hewitt offices in Syracuse, N.Y. "They expect us to pull off miracles at the last minute."

"We've seen a little bit of everything," added Harry Buckley, president of tax operations at H&R Block, Inc., headquarters in Kansas City, Mo. "We've had spouses fighting, people crying, people afraid the IRS is going to take their house tomorrow because they can't pay."

Tax professionals say this year has been different in two ways:

Many people are filing new W-4 forms to keep withholding at 1991 levels so they will get big refunds a year from now. Otherwise, withholding for most will drop as part of President Bush's efforts to stimulate the economy.

"They know the government is not paying them interest on their money, but they like the idea of getting a refund they can use for a vacation or a big purchase," says Ray Hite, who manages H&R Block offices in the Washington, D.C. area. "Five or 10 bucks a week is not going to do anything for them."

The sluggish economy caused more people to file returns early - in January and February - in order to get their refunds. Large numbers of them have paid extra to get even quicker service.

In many cases taxpayers have paid $40 or $50 to have a professional prepare their return, another $30 or $35 to have the return transmitted electronically and an extra $25 or $30 for a refund anticipation loan so they can get their money within a day or two.

Get out and vote

Carolyn Law, left, and O'Neta Brewer, employees of the Gray County Clerk's Office, answer election telephone calls and complete paperwork. Today is the runoff election for races in Gray County. Polls are open until 7 p.m.

PISD to host public hearing

Pampa public school trustees are scheduled to host a public hearing 7 p.m. tonight at the middle school library on policy changes regarding transfers and bus-eligible students.

District officials said the proposed changes are designed to relieve overcrowding at some elementary campuses and provide a consistent way of determining which schools bus students attend.

Under the proposed guidelines:

- Space will be reserved at each campus for move-ins, something that has not always happened in the past.

- Approval of new transfer requests will be postponed until 10 days after the start of school.

- Priority will be given to existing transfers over new requests.

- Students living outside the city limits but within two miles of a school are automatically considered living in that school zone.

- Elementary students living more than two miles outside the city limits and north of a line made by extending 23rd will attend Austin.

- Elementary students living south of 23rd and east of the Barnes extension will attend Wilson.

- Elementary students west of the Barnes extension and south of 23rd will attend Lamar.

- Mann will be eliminated as a bus-receiving school.

Superintendent Dawson Orr said he doesn't know how many people will attend the hearing, but is counting on good public input on the plan.

"I don't have a clear set of expectations," he said, "but we have made an effort to notify parents of all transfer and bus-eligible students so that they can come and share with us. We are hoping for a good attendance."

Police investigate stabbing

A 27-year-old man was stabbed late Monday night after he reportedly forced his way into the home of a senior citizen.

Police reports indicate that shortly after 11 p.m., Larry Nunamaker of 853 E. Craven was with a female companion when he knocked on the door of David Franklin Richardson, 60, of 312 Rider.

Lt. Allen Smith said, "There was a knock on the door and it was opened and a female suspect entered and ripped the phone wires out of the wall. The second suspect (Nunamaker) entered and came toward (Richardson)." Smith said reports show Richardson retreated to the kitchen, warning Nunamaker and the female to stay back.

"He armed himself with a butcher knife and when the guy kept coming toward him, he was stabbed," Smith said.

Reports show Nunamaker fled the house and later appeared at Coronado Hospital seeking treatment for a stab wound near his heart. He was transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo where he was listed in stable condition following surgery this morning.

Police records show Nunamaker filed an aggravated assault report against Richardson for stabbing him.
 Richardson filed a criminal mischief charge against Nunamaker, but no reports against the 32-year-old female were shown filed at press time.
 Smith, of the aggravated assault report against Richardson, said, "We have to take the report, but whether or not the district attorney accepts the charges is up to him."
 The incident is under investigation. - Bear Mills

Lefors school board meets tonight

LEFORS - Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet in regular session at 7 p.m. today to discuss the senior class trip and a computer contract for the 1992-93 school year.

An update on the May 2 election and a report on Lefors High School UIL contest are also scheduled.

According to the agenda, an executive session is planned to allow a Lefors ISD employee to address the board. The Texas Open Meetings law requires that any employee may demand to speak to the board in open session. However, the employee has the right to request the meeting be closed to the public.

Routine items of consideration of minutes of prior meetings, public comments and monthly expenditures are also listed on the agenda.

The board meets in the elementary school library.

Richard Paul Springer of Arcadia, Calif., tries in vain to make an anti-nuclear statement at the podium after smashing a crystal award present to former President Reagan, left, during Reagan's address to a luncheon of the National Association of Broadcasters in Las Vegas Monday. Reagan was jostled, but not seriously injured, as security agents wrestled Springer away.

Perot's style may wear thin on campaign trail

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

AP news analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot might not wear very well as a presidential candidate. A style that now comes across as colorfully cantankerous could look imperious and evasive later on.

Perot hasn't said he'll run, but that he expects to know by early June whether his volunteer supporters can get his name on all 50 state ballots for the Nov. 3 election.

The billionaire businessman from Texas set the 50-state test as his standard for becoming an independent candidate for a job he keeps saying he doesn't really want.

That professed immunity from White House ambition is part of Perot's defense against critical questions that evidently irk him. "We've gone right to little gritty personal stuff," he complained the other day. "Okay, terrific, but it has nothing to do with the real problems of our country."

"I don't want the job. Let's start right there. That makes me weird, right, because everybody else out there would kill his mother to get the job."

That stance is advantageous in a time of resentment against Washington and politicians in general. But nobody who doesn't want the job is pushed into competition for the White House. Modern campaigns are too demanding, and sometimes demeaning, for an unwilling draftee to tolerate. That may be wrong, but it's so.

"I'm not driven to do this," Perot

I've had for what, 12 years?"

Perot has been speaking on national issues for years, always rejecting the idea of candidacy until now. He opened the prospect of an independent bid for the White House two months ago, saying in a television interview that he'd do it if volunteers got him on every ballot. So the heat has not been intense. He complained to one persistent editor that the questions were rude and adversarial.

Nagging questions go with the campaign territory. But Perot doesn't show much patience with them. He promises results, with few specifics as to how he proposes to attain them. Perot suggests that the campaign should be a discussion of problems that need to be solved, with itemized answers to come later, after "you're in, you've got access to the details..."

Would he seek a tax increase?
"I don't have the numbers. When I know I'll tell you."

Where would he cut wasteful federal spending to curb the deficit?

"If I ever get stuck up there, give me 30 days and I will have access to the numbers and I can tell you."

He supports abortion rights, but what about federal funding of abortions for poor women?

"I haven't spent 10 minutes thinking about it, I will, when I become a candidate."

Protester rushes Reagan

Former president struck by glass, but was not hurt

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Former President Reagan wisecracked, "Was that a Democrat by chance?" after an anti-nuclear activist rushed the stage during a speech and smashed a crystal statue. Reagan was hit by flying glass but wasn't hurt.

Secret Service agents tackled the man Monday before he could take the microphone.

A witness said the man had walked up stairs on the side of the stage. A Secret Service spokesman said he didn't know how the man got past agents.

Reagan, 81, was hustled off the stage but returned to finish his luncheon address to the National Association of Broadcasters, which had given him its Distinguished Service Award and presented him with the 2-foot crystal statue.

He drew laughter as he asked, "Was that a Democrat by chance?"

"I think I'm going to go out and see who that guy is," Reagan said as he ended his 20-minute address at the Las Vegas Hilton. He pushed up his sleeves as if preparing to fight, grinned and waved as he left the stage.

Richard Paul Springer, 41, of Arcata, Calif., was arrested on a preliminary charge of assault on a federal officer, a Secret Service agent, said Secret Service spokesman Carl Meyer in Washington. He awaited arraignment today.

Springer had darted to the podium, raised the 30-pound statue over his head and smashed it.

"Excuse me, President Reagan," he said as he tried to grab the microphone.

Reagan appeared shocked as three Secret Service agents knocked the man into the podium and wrestled him to the floor. As he was led away, Springer shouted, "There's a nuclear test Tuesday ... tomorrow afternoon!"

Reagan was jostled and was hit in the head by a chunk of glass, spokeswoman Cathy Goldberg said.

Springer founded the 100th Monkey anti-nuclear group, said Lisa Law, a group organizer. She said he was leading a week-long series of events protesting nuclear testing at the Nevada Test Site, 65 miles from Las Vegas.

The Secret Service's Meyer said Springer wore a badge required of those attending the convention, but he didn't know whether Springer had a legitimate reason to be there or how he got onto the stage.

"I was in utter shock," said radio and TV talk show host Larry King, who was inducted into the association's Broadcasting Hall of Fame.

Leroy Schneck, a broadcaster from Warren, Pa., said he was near the stage when he saw the man walk up stairs to the right of the stage, walk toward the back and suddenly turn and run to the podium.

Reagan survived an assassination attempt in 1981, when he was shot outside a hotel in Washington. Doctors removed a bullet one inch from his heart.

Investigators test salt dome storage

BRENNHAM (AP) — Investigators are testing a salt dome storage facility for any leak that may have triggered last week's massive gas explosion, which killed three people, injured 17 others and caused at least $6.6 million in damages.

Funeral services are scheduled today for the third victim of last Tuesday's explosion. Delores Medve, 27, who suffered severe burns, died Sunday at Houston's Hermann Hospital.

The National Transportation Safety Board and the Texas Railroad Commission said Monday they still were investigating the cause of the explosion, which occurred near the Seminole Pipeline Co. salt dome storage facility.

Lena Guerrero, commission chairwoman, said the investigation now centers on the injection well used by Seminole to move gas products in and out of the salt dome cavern.

Investigators believe there may have been a release of liquefied petroleum gas products from the storage cavern prior to the explosion that rocked the rural countryside, she said in a statement released in Austin.

Mike Benson, spokesman for the NTSB in Washington D.C., said the federal agency also was looking at the cavern and injection well.

Several witnesses have said they saw water geysers rising just above the dome shortly before the blast, Benson said. A holding pond of salty water that sits on atop the dome is used in the injection system, he said.

"Witnesses saw those columns of fluid going up. That leads one to believe that that occurred from some escape of gas," Benson said.

Investigators previously had been looking at two underground pipelines located in the blast area.

Gary Garrison, railroad commission spokesman, said state officials decided to shift the focus of their probe because they could not find any problems with the two pipelines.

"We want to find where this leak could have emanated from," he said. "At this point, we haven't ruled out anything. But we thought that since the pipelines themselves apparently were not ruptured, we expanded our investigation to include the salt dome storage cavern."

Fifth baby born with rare brain disorder

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A fifth baby has been born in Cameron County this year suffering from a disorder in which the brain fails to develop, a health official says.

The anencephalic baby was born last week, said Dr. Judy Henry, an epidemiologist with the Texas Department of Health in Austin.

"Seems like the numbers are going up again," she said. "We may get as many this year as we did last year."

Three anencephalic babies were delivered during a 36-hour period last spring in Brownsville, triggering an investigation by state and federal health officials of the abnormal birth series. More anencephalic births later occurred.

In all, the agencies are investigating 20 cases of anencephaly and 10 cases of babies born with spina bifida or an encephalosele reported since 1989. The disorders are known collectively as neural tube defects.

The NTDs detected this year are not included in the study.

Anencephalic babies are born missing all or part of their brains. They are either stillborn or die soon after birth. One such baby in Florida recently became the center of a controversy when a court refused to let her parents donate her organs to other infants before her death.

State and federal health agencies are investigating 20 cases of anencephaly and 10 cases of spina bifida, an anomaly of the spine, reported in Brownsville from 1989 through the end of 1991. A report is expected later this year.

Anencephaly occurs in two to three of every 10,000 births in the United States and three or four per 10,000 in Texas, according to the state.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Selling NASA is a better option

On occasion, government successfully can conduct a single large project, though with tremendous waste. The U.S. government won World War II and the Gulf War. And it put an American on the moon.

What government fails at miserably is everything else. It cannot efficiently run factories, airlines, trains, or medical care. Nor can it relieve poverty, as the 25-year "war" on poverty has shown. It cannot even run a space program, as we see by looking at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The Apollo moon shot - one of those single minded government missions that worked - lulled people into thinking NASA was an exception to the rule of government bureaucratic incompetence. But after the Apollo program NASA reverted to type.

Writing in a recent New York Times, University of California professor Timothy Ferris concluded, "Badly politicized ever since the Apollo moon program wound down, NASA has become one more big, fat, arteriosclerotic bureaucracy. Its constituency is the aerospace industry, not the public, and its manned missions are designed not in space but in the halls of Congress."

Ferris quoted Ivy Hooks, a former NASA Engineer, who said, "The early NASA people were entrepreneurs...In the 25 years after NASA was founded, it became a bureaucracy, and in a bureaucracy quality doesn't rise." For support of that conclusion, we need only look to the nearsighted Hubble Space Telescope.

Ferris proposed breaking up NASA. He didn't go far enough: NASA should be privatized. It should be entirely sold off to private companies, it's $14 billion annual budget refunded to hard-pressed taxpayers. The Pentagon could keep its own launch facilities or, better yet, lease facilities from private space companies, such as it leases private airlines to ship troops and supplies around the world. Vice President Dan Quayle is working for a shake-up at NASA. And President Bush chose Daniel Goldin to be NASA's new administrator. As the chairman of the TRW space firm, Goldin understands both the government and private parts of space exploration, including burgeoning private space efforts. He also is reputed to be an efficient cost-cutter.

Unfortunately, Goldin also supports a taxpayer-funded manned mission to Mars expected to cost $500 billion in a time of $400 billion annual federal budget deficits. Maybe his experience with meeting a budget in the private sector will show him that the money just isn't there for this Martian boondoggle.

McDonnell Douglas Space Systems Co. with its Delta 187 rocket, and other companies, already are advancing private explorations of the Final Frontier. Now Congress and the White House need to gain the political will to shift all or most space efforts into efficient, private hands.

An invitation to government snooping

It's rare to see a criminal defendant win an acquittal by pleading that he was entrapped, and it's rarer still for the acquittal to come directly from the current Supreme Court, which generally gives police the benefit of every doubt. If the conduct of government agents who lured Keith Jacobson into breaking the law was bad enough to make the Rehnquist court queasy, you know it was awful.

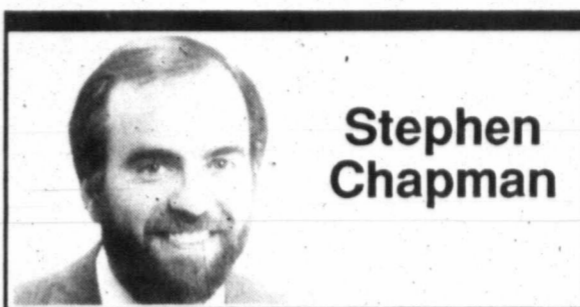

In fact, the abuse was worse than the justices realized, and it needs a stronger remedy than they provided.

Jacobson is an unmarried 61-year-old Nebraska farmer and a decorated veteran of Korea and Vietnam who was a model citizen, with the sole exception of a drunk driving conviction in 1958. But in 1984, postal inspectors raiding an adult bookstore in San Diego found records showing he had once ordered two nudist magazines containing non-sexual photographs of underage boys - which were legal at the time.

Shortly afterward, Congress passed a law banning production, distribution or possession of child pornography. So the government decided to see just how much temptation Jacobson could resist. It spent two and a half years plying him with mail from phony pro-pornography groups before finally offering him magazines featuring boys engaged in sex. He took the bait and was promptly arrested.

A bare majority of the Supreme Court overturned his conviction, finding no evidence that Jacobson would have broken any law without this tireless encouragement. "In their zeal to enforce the law," wrote Justice Byron White, "government agents may not originate a criminal design, implant in an innocent person's mind the disposition to commit a criminal act, and then induce commission of the crime so the government may prosecute."

The case hinged on whether Jacobson was

Stephen Chapman

"predisposed" to commit this sort of crime. Prosecutors said the fact that Jacobson had once bought questionable fare and then ordered hard-core kiddie porn when given the opportunity provide his criminal proclivities. The court wisely disagreed, noting that the 1984 material was legal then and that it took a lot of enticement to lure him into the trap.

When agents raided Jacobson's house, they found nothing except the old nudist publications and the magazines they had sold him. He evidently never did what the government says he was inclined to do - until federal agents persuaded him to do it.

His case highlights two serious problems with sting operations. One is that while most people are law-abiding, many of them - presented with the right opportunity at the right time - could be coaxed into breaking the law. For the government to go around manufacturing opportunities where they wouldn't otherwise exist is not combating crime but creating it.

The other drawback is that these investigations invade the privacy of innocent people. Not many Americans relish the idea of government agents prying into what they read, what they watch on their VCRs or what their sexual interests are - even if the prying doesn't lead to prosecution.

Now, some stings don't endanger the innocent. If undercover police set up a chop shop to buy stolen auto parts, or pose as prostitutes in a red light district, or open an adult bookstore to see who requests child pornography, they'll ensnare only those who set out to break the law. But when they decide to invade the privacy and test the self-control of a particular person by forcing an illicit temptation on him, they should be subject to some constraints.

The flaw in the "predisposition" test is that the government is allowed to prove it after the facts, with evidence it didn't have when it chose its victim. If police had found incriminating evidence against Jacobson afterward, their overzealous conduct apparently would have been excused. This is the opposite of the rules for searches. In those cases, police must have good reason beforehand to think the suspect has committed a crime and, whenever practical, must convince a judge to issue a search warrant.

The Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit reversed Jacobson's conviction on an innovative ruling: that the government didn't have a reasonable prior suspicion that he was a criminal, and that the investigation therefore was illegal. This departs from Supreme Court doctrine and may be questionable constitutional law. But if the courts won't stop police from randomly testing the honesty of anyone they choose, Congress should.

The alternative is to invite more of the kind of treatment visited on Keith Jacobson, who had never committed a crime and, left alone, probably never would have. If Americans are happy to let government agents snoop into every corner of their private lives, they'll probably get their wish.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 14, the 105th day of 1992. There are 261 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 14, 1865, President Abraham Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth while attending the comedy "Our American Cousin" at Ford's Theater in Washington. Lincoln died the following morning.

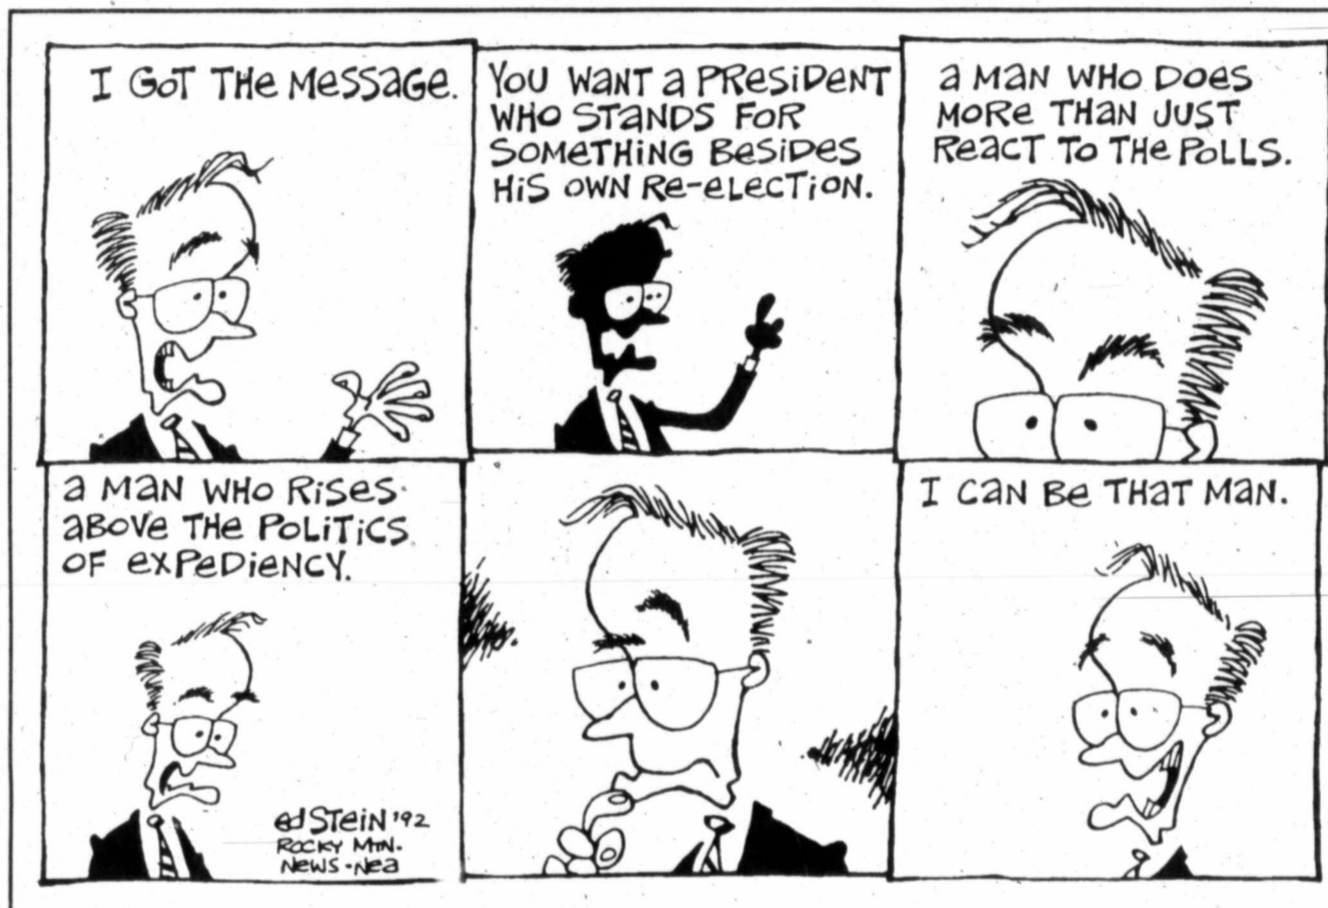

On this date:
In 1775, the first American society for the abolition of slavery was organized by Benjamin Franklin and Benjamin Rush.

In 1828, the first edition of Noah Webster's "American Dictionary of the English Language" was published.

In 1902, J.C. Penney opened his first store, in Kemmerer, Wyo.

In 1912, the supposedly unsinkable RMS Titanic ran into an iceberg in the North Atlantic and began sinking.

In 1939, Viking Press first published the novel "The Grapes of Wrath" by John Steinbeck.

One way to shorten dribble-a-thons

I have appointed myself a committee of one to do something about basketball. Don't get me wrong. I don't have anything against basketball, the game.

I still enjoy an occasional game of half-court, two-on-two as long as everybody in the game is as old as I am and doesn't start trying to do anything silly - like jump.

What concerns me is the number of basketball games played each year and how long the basketball season lasts.

Finally we saw the end of this college basketball season, which starts in the middle of football season.

About 8,000 college teams play each other for five months, and then about half of them get invited to a tournament that lasts another month.

On top of that, that's another month listening to a man named Dick Vitale, who has screamed most of the hair off his head. He screams on television and says things like, "Great play, baby!"

As a matter of fact, no matter what Dick Vitale screams, it always ends, "Baby!"

This committee of one would fire Dick Vitale and make him go sell used cars somewhere.

"Hey, look at this baby, baby!" he could scream at customers.

Secondly, this committee realizes you could turn the collegiate national championship tournament into a three day affair instead of the month long dribble-a-thon that it is.

Lewis Grizzard

To do that, whoever is in charge of college basketball would have to let me pick the teams that would be going to the tournament. I'd pick about eight, since it's usually the same eight teams that really have a chance to win the championship every year.

I'd start with Duke and Nevada Las Vegas, if and when Nevada Las Vegas gets off probation.

In fact why bother with eight teams? Just let Duke and Nevada Las Vegas play every year regardless of Nevada Las Vegas' standing with the collegiate police.

Both teams always have great players and great records and it would be a terrific game and who would complain if Northwest East Southland A&M didn't get in the tournament and didn't lose to Duke or Nevada Las Vegas by 50 points in the first round.

Now that the committee has figured out what to do about college basketball, it moves on to the pro games.

Professional basketball's season lasts even longer than the college season and it is even more predictable. Until Magic Johnson ran into a little dose of reality, you simply could have held one world championship game at the end of the regular season between the Los Angeles Lakers of Magic and the Chicago Bulls of Michael Jordan.

Nobody else had a chance. With Magic gone, maybe you'd pick Chicago and three other teams with the best records, and let 'em fight it out over the weekend. As it is now, the professionals, who make up teams in every city large enough to have two Chinese restaurants, play from October until April to eliminate Sacramento, and then they start over and hold playoffs until the middle of summer.

This committee would order no basketball game could begin after March 1 so everybody could get ready to enjoy the Masters golf tournament.

I'd do something else about basketball, too. When somebody hits one of those long shots, it counts as three points. So I'd make the dunks count one. What's the big deal about some guy eight feet tall bending over and placing the ball in the basket?

Or maybe I would put the basket on the floor and give the little guys the edge for a while.

For a committee of one, I've got some great ideas. See you at the golf course, baby.

New things aren't necessarily better

For my eighth birthday I asked for a Cinderella watch and got it. I felt like the luckiest of little girls to have that magnificent jewel - beautiful Cinderella looking up at me serenely every morning as I wound her, promising me that someday, too my prince would come.

And boy, could that old gal keep time. In fact, even after I retired her as too uncool at age 13, she continued to run in my jewelry box for another 15 years when I'd remember to pick her up and gently stroke her stem. What a great invention! I thought at the time, because I was a simple child who was never much good in science. You wind her once in the morning and she tells you how much time you have before recess is over, or how many more minutes you can talk on the phone until your dad grabs it out of your hand.

The phone. Now there was another great invention, I thought, especially after we went off the party-line system. I could call my friends or they could call me several times a night, and I always heard it as long as I was within two furlongs of my house. (Cinderella used to look up at me from the jewelry box and tell me that real soon my Prince Charming would phone, too.)

It's been a long journey from there to adulthood, to finding out old Cinderella was lying about that Prince Charming deal. But if Prince Charming does call, I will not hear him. I have three telephones, none of which I can hear when I'm out in the yard or even in the bathroom in the mornings listening to the din of National Public Radio. The scientific brain trust has taken perhaps the most significant invention of the 19th century and reduced its signal to something like that of a cricket calling its mate, or at best a turkey wattle. How does Alexander Graham Bell's marvelous lifeline call us in 1992? A nervous Barney Fife turkey call: "Bludh!-duhd!-duhd!-duhd!-duhhhh."

I parted with my wonderful AT&T phone, one with the hearty "RING! RING!", a few years ago when all the TV consumer reporters told me I was contributing to the national deficit by continuing to lease a phone when there were so many inexpensive phones to buy on the market. I kept looking for a phone with bell, so I could sate my spoiled-consumer whim to actually hear it, but none of them had one - except for the AT&T store, which still had a few of the old models like I'd been leasing, rebuilt. "We don't make them anymore," the salesman told me.

I bought stem-winding watches until a few years ago when I couldn't find one I thought was attractive enough. All the pretty ones were "quartz" watches that required batteries, and my new watch and I got along pretty well until the battery ran out. I pried open its back with a knife and found the dead little cell beneath a metal tab that I couldn't budge with my fingernail, so I stuck the tip of the knife under that, too. The battery went flying across the room and will not, I'm convinced, be found until I move. I took the watch to a discount store and up to the watch-battery counter.

"I'm sorry, we can't sell you a new battery unless we have the old one to look at," the salesman told me. I told her it might be under the recliner, but if it was, it was down in one of the cracks of the sculptured carpet and I couldn't see it. "Do you have the paper that came with the watch?" Papers? Cinderella had had papers, and a warranty from Timex. The only paper that came with my new high-fashion quartz watch was a price tag 15 times higher than Cinderella's had been.

Pope John Paul II ministers non-stop during Holy Week

By MERCER CROSS
National Geographic

VATICAN CITY — For seven strenuous days at Easter, the 71-year-old leader of the world's largest religious body will follow a schedule that would drain the energy of a much younger man.

Pope John Paul II will vigorously engage in a Holy Week of virtually non-stop ritual, starting on Palm Sunday and ending on Easter Sunday, April 19, the holiest day on the Christian calendar because it celebrates the risen Christ's triumph over death.

John Paul, the 264th pope, ministers — sometimes controversially — to the spiritual needs of 906 million Roman Catholics worldwide.

Yet much of what he will do during Holy Week is humbling, further underscoring the human touch that the former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla has imprinted on the papacy to which he ascended in October 1978.

On Holy Thursday, for example, he will wash the feet of 12 priests to memorialize Jesus' washing of the feet of His 12 disciples at the Last Supper.

On Good Friday, he will hear the confessions of lay people in St. Peter's Basilica, a custom he initiated a dozen years ago. In the afternoon he will conduct a commemoration service of the Lord's Passion.

Later, the pope will make the 14 Stations of the Cross in the Roman Colosseum. Into the night, shouldering a large cross, he will climb an adjoining hill and speak to a huge crowd.

Holy Saturday will be another long day, as Pope John Paul celebrates the Easter Vigil that night in the basilica.

On Easter morning, the pope will appear before the biggest throng of the year in St. Peter's Square — more than 250,000 people overflowing into the streets beyond.

Millions more will get a look at the pontiff through a worldwide television broadcast as he delivers his Easter message to the city and the world. He will offer blessings in more than 50 languages.

The next day, normalcy will start returning. On ordinary weekday mornings, at Mass in his private chapel, the pope is usually joined by 20 to 40 invited worshippers.

In his capacity as bishop of Rome, he systematically visits the parish churches, large and small. "He's a very peripatetic pope in that way," Archbishop John P. Foley, the Vatican's head of communications, says.

The pontiff also has traveled on a more global scale than have any of his predecessors. His journeys, Foley says, have taken him the equivalent of 20 trips around the Earth — or a round trip to the moon.

Controversy is the constant traveling companion of this first Polish pope.

"I think he and Gorbachev will go down as the great leaders of the second half of the 20th century, much more than any American president," says the Rev. Thomas J. Reese, an American Jesuit who specializes in the study of Catholic Church politics at the Woodstock Theological Center in Washington.

"His impact on what happened in Poland and, following that, what happened in the rest of Eastern Europe and then into the Soviet Union has been fantastic. He helped to end the Cold War," Reese adds.

In Brazil last October, on his 53rd pastoral trip outside Italy, Pope John Paul reiterated familiar appeals for social justice, land reform, environmental protection and saving abused street children. He emphatically restated his opposition to birth control and to married priests.

A magnetic leader who attracts vast crowds wherever he goes, the pope delivers what many Catholics, particularly in the United States, view as a mixed message: strong humanitarianism on one hand, rigid theological orthodoxy on the other. He is criticized for appointing conservative bishops.

The Rev. Gerald P. Fogarty, a Catholic historian and professor of religious studies at the University of Virginia, sees nothing unusual in Pope John Paul's seemingly contradictory positions. "A theological conservative is a social progressive," Fogarty says.

American Catholics generally perceive the pope as authoritarian, Fogarty says. "While he's extremely successful on the Eastern European scene, his style is sometimes foreign to us. I think at times that he doesn't quite understand that nationally we have been able to have a loyal opposition that can disagree vocally but still obey."

"What is really impressive," says the Rev. Robert Trisco, professor of church history at the Catholic University of America in Washington, "is his ability to attract young people, as he's been doing each summer in Europe" with a series of religious services and lectures in different countries.

Inside Vatican City, at the request of Mother Teresa of Calcutta, India, the pope has established a 72-bed hospice with a kitchen that feeds hundreds of hungry Romans every day.

Friends can't console convict's parents

DEAR ABBY: The son of our former neighbors died recently. I'll call him "John." There was no funeral service, no memorial service, and no obituary in the local newspaper.

My heart aches for John's parents. I didn't send a sympathy card, or even make a telephone call, because I was confused as to the "right" thing to do. Let me explain:

John was found guilty of murder, and he was executed by the state. I never knew him as an adult, but I remember him as a little boy who came to our house to play with our children. He was a lovable child who sang songs with our daughter and made her laugh. John's parents were decent, churchgoing people, and no one could have asked for better neighbors.

What happened later in John's life, we do not know. But I do know that his parents must have died a thousand deaths before their son was put to death.

And so, to all parents who have lost a child in this tragic way, and to all their friends — like me — who said nothing because we didn't know what to say, I'd like to tell you now, "I'm sorry."

OLD NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: You are a kind and compassionate person. Thank you for a very moving letter. Many parents will identify with it and find comfort and consolation in your words.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

It is not too late to share your happy memories of long ago with these bereaved parents. Do not hesitate to write them a message of condolence. They need to hear what you want to share.

DEAR ABBY: I thought I'd seen everything in your column, but this problem is unique.

A little background: I'm a 48-year-old man with a 22-year-old son, whom I raised as a single parent. I thoroughly enjoyed being a parent and doing domestic chores, so I went to school last year to get my certificate as a "child care specialist" — otherwise known as a "nanny."

Frankly, I think the $2,000 in tuition was wasted. Since I graduated, I've sent out 50 resumes and made 10 to 20 phone calls a week. So far, only one person has called back. When I do get a live person instead of a recording, it's always, "Oh, we wanted a woman!" Or, "If we didn't have daughters, we might consider you" — despite the fact that the three families I've worked for have all had girls.

Abby, if women want to eliminate sexism in our culture, I think they should start at their own doorsteps. If we want our nation to become kinder and gentler, we have to accept men as caring and nurturing individuals.

I know you can't do anything about society's attitudes, but I feel better just being able to unload this. Thanks for listening.

GARY JONES,
BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

DEAR GARY: Your situation is a new twist, but "society" and our culture do not easily accept male nannies. (They should be called "mannies.") I have no doubt about your being every bit as qualified as a female for that position. Let's hope that silly prejudice is done away with soon. Tomorrow is not too soon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you can't be a leader today, don't be a leaker. Letting another make decisions for you is no guarantee that the choices will be the right ones. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Aries' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A likable but indolent friend might try to shift burdens to you today, because this individual doesn't want to be saddled with anything inconvenient.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A new group you're trying to find a place with has a member who is rather unpopular, for good reason. This character might try to become attached to you, so be careful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone you're closely associated with can put on pretenses today and get away with it, but you can't. Don't attempt to be something you're not.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Just because significant distance presently separates you from someone you love doesn't mean you shouldn't give this individual a call or, at the least, a card. Get with it today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Of itself, money is not evil, but the love of it can sometimes cause people to lower their standards in order to acquire it. Don't let this happen to you today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be equally nice to everyone you encounter today. There's a chance you might waste time trying to cozy up to someone for a favor that doesn't look like it will be granted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Beware of romantic involvements today that are off limits. Misjudgment on your behalf could create complications that will have a ripple effect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An insincere acquaintance might try to manipulate you today into believing that what this individual is doing is really for your benefit. Don't take the bait.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might feel powerful inclinations to be the center of attention today. There's a chance you may do something rather absurd just to have all eyes focused on you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's commendable to praise those who are deserving — if there is proper justification. However, to flatter someone today for less noble reasons could backfire on you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone who has trouble managing personal finances might volunteer to take care of something for you today. If you acquiesce and let this individual do it, you could be sorry.

Misfortune strikes PHS girls at Amarillo Relays

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Bad luck seemed to envelop the Pampa High girls' track team before and during the Amarillo Relays last weekend.

Prior to the meet, hurdler-high jumper Michelle Abbott pulled up lame and had to drop out.

During the meet, Marcy Leal was disqualified in the 3200 and Betrice Jackson fell in the 1600-meter relay, taking valuable points away from the Lady Harvesters, who finished fifth after winning their first five meets of the season.

Leal had come in second behind Tascosa's Auvrey Payne with a 12:37 time, but she was disqualified for going off the track.

"She got pushed and had taken one step onto the grass. That took away some of our points," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez.

Pampa was off to a fast start in the 1600-meter relay when Jackson, the second leg, tripped and fell in a tight pack on the backstretch. The Lady Harvesters wound up fourth with a 4:16.76.

"I have to give Betrice a lot of credit. She got right up and finished the race," Lopez said.

There were some bright spots for the Lady Harvesters.

In the preliminaries, Pampa's 1600 and 800-meter relay teams all had their best times of the seasons. The 1600-relayers knocked a whopping eight seconds of their previous best with a 4:03.01.

Shanna Molitor finished second in the 100 with an 11.97, her best time of the season.

Besides Molitor's silver medal, the only other Lady Harvester to finish as high as second was Kelly Haines in the discus.

"I felt like we could have finished second if it hadn't been for our misfortune and injuries. I didn't feel like anybody would beat Abilene High. They've got a very strong team," Lopez said.

Abilene High, the defending Class 5A state champion, ran away with the meet title, scoring 156 points compared to 83 for runnerup Tascosa.

Abbott, who has won four hurdles and three high jump events this year, was sidelined with a pulled calf muscle, but Lopez said she should be ready for the district meet.

Another Lady Harvester, Katina Thomas, is also out of action with a pulled muscle.

The District 1-4A meet for both girls and boys is Thursday and Friday at Randall High School, starting at 10 a.m. both days. The finals are Friday afternoon.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the regional meet.

The Lady Harvesters are the defending district champions, having won district six of the past seven years.

Pampa boys, who placed fourth in the North Plains Relays last weekend at Dumas, are entered in the district meet. Pampa's possible regional qualifiers are Mark Hampton in the long jump, Luis Resendiz in the 3200, Chris Whitney in the shot put and Justin Collingsworth in the discus.

No-hitter debate

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

for a no-hitter.

The definition of a no-hitter still seems to be a matter of opinion.

A committee on statistical accuracy, chaired by commissioner Fay Vincent, determined the meaning of a no-hitter last season. The group decided to define no-hitters as games of nine innings or more that ended with no hits.

But a lot of people at Cleveland Stadium thought they saw Boston's Matt Young pitch a no-hitter on Sunday. Young pitched eight hitless innings, but lost 2-1.

Since the Indians were the home team, Young didn't get a chance to pitch the ninth.

Young gets credit for a complete game. But he doesn't get official credit for the no-hitter, according to Major League Baseball.

"They didn't get any hits. Game's over," Young said. "People can make rules all they want. But I look at seven walks and I don't feel I pitched that well. Sure, there were no hits, but I still put seven guys on base. It's kind of anticlimactic."

The statistical accuracy committee met late last season mostly to strike the asterisk next to Roger Maris' name in the record books. But they also were asked to decide whether Montreal's Mark Gardner should get credit Gardner pitched nine no-hit innings against Los Angeles on July 26, 1991. But in the bottom of the 10th, Lenny Harris and Eddie Murray singled.

Some recordkeepers said it was a no-hitter, others said it wasn't. The committee decided it wasn't. But they didn't stop there.

The committee's definition stripped 50 no-hitters from the list, leaving 225 in major-league history. They got rid of rain-shortened no-hitters and the no-hitters broken up in extra innings — like Harvey Haddix's perfect game. Haddix pitched 12 perfect innings for Pittsburgh against Milwaukee on May 26, 1959, until Joe Adcock's double in the 13th scored the winning run.

"It was disappointing to find out it wasn't a no-hitter, but it's still the record," Haddix said.

Some people think the committee may have gone too far.

Like Young, Andy Hawkins of the New York Yankees pitched eight no-hit innings but lost 4-0 to Chicago at Comiskey Park on July 1, 1990.

Officially, they are not credited with no-hitters. But there's still room for interpretation.

"You can call it anything you want. Everybody has a right to an opinion," said Seymour Siwoff of the Elias Bureau, a member of the eight-man committee. "I'm not ignoring him. Hawkins is in the record book."

Righthander Buddy Plunk has been selected as player of the week by the Pampa coaching staff. Plunk was the winning pitcher in Pampa's 12-8 win over Hereford last Saturday and also knocked in a run with a sacrifice fly.

Rangers' home opener spoiled by Angels, Abbott

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Jim Abbott figured out a way to solve the Texas Rangers' prolific and powerful lineup Monday night — he ignored it.

"I tried to put that lineup out of my mind. I kept telling myself, 'Just throw strikes and trust your stuff,'" Abbott said after spoiling the hot-hitting Rangers' home opener by scattering six harmless singles over 7 1-3 innings in the California Angels' 3-0 victory.

The Rangers had scored 53 runs on 75 hits, including 35 for extra bases, in a club record-tying 6-1 start, which included a four-game sweep of Seattle and two victories over the defending world champion Minnesota Twins — all on the road.

"I knew it was going to be a good battle," Abbott said. "But it's all a matter of trust, which means I threw my fastball as hard as I could without thinking about what they might do to it."

They didn't do much to it. "You've got to recognize when somebody's good," said Ruben Sierra, who went 0-for-4. "People have got to realize we're only human. If we score 10 runs every night, we'd never lose, but that's not going to happen."

Abbott (1-1) walked two and struck out four before being relieved by Bryan Harvey after giving up back-to-back singles with one out in the eighth. Harvey struck out Rafael Palmeiro and Sierra on six pitches to end the threat, then worked a perfect ninth, striking out two, for his second save.

"Abbott had outstanding stuff," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "We helped him by swinging at some high pitches. And Harvey had even better stuff."

Palmeiro also went 0-for-4.

"Palmeiro and Sierra are two of the absolute best players in baseball," Abbott said. "Anytime you can escape without them getting any hits, you feel very, very fortunate."

Before 41,129 fans, the second-largest crowd for a home opener in Rangers history, starter Jose Guzman was failed first by his hitters, then by his bullpen.

Guzman (1-1) scattered six hits in six innings, walking three and striking out two. He gave up an RBI double to Alvin Davis in the sixth.

Wayne Rosenthal relieved Guzman to start the seventh with the Rangers down 1-0, but faced just one batter — Gary Disarcina, who singled — before being pulled for Floyd Bannister.

Luis Polonia bunted and when second baseman Al Newman was slow covering first, third baseman Palmer double-pumped and overthrew him, allowing Disarcina to score. Junior Felix's sacrifice fly scored Polonia to make it 3-0.

Davis broke a scoreless tie with one out in the sixth when he doubled home Von Hayes, who had drawn a leadoff walk.

Guzman needed only three pitches to retire the side in the third when Junior Felix flied to left, Hayes grounded to second and Hubie Brooks fouled out to first.

Notes: Before Monday's loss, Jose Guzman had beaten the Angels seven straight times. It was his first loss to California since June 23, 1986. The shutout marked the first time the Rangers had ever been blanked in a home opener. The Angels have won three in a row after beginning the year with four straight losses. Jim Abbott snapped a six-game career losing streak in April. He is 2-8 lifetime in April and 5-1 lifetime against Texas.

Astros hand Dodgers fourth consecutive defeat

By The Associated Press

Orel Hershiser vs. Darryl Kile, a likely mismatch.

Right! Hershiser, the 1988 Cy Young Award winner who has been pitching the way he did back then, against a young Houston Astros pitcher who had never beaten the Dodgers.

Kile and the Astros didn't recognize the lopsided matchup. Kile struck out four and walked five before leaving in the seventh inning of an 8-3 victory Monday night that handed Los Angeles its fourth consecutive defeat.

"It's a good feeling just to win a game," said Kile, who also got his first major league hit after going 0 for 38. "I didn't even think about the hit. I was just surprised that it got through. The guys have been razzing me for a year about it." The hit, a single in a six-run first inning, really damaged Hershiser, who had won six in a row.

"When you make bad pitches, you're going to have bad results," Hershiser said. "I made bad pitches in the first inning and it snowballed. We didn't get anybody out and those runs just kept on coming."

They began coming as Craig Biggio singled and Steve Finley walked to start the game. They both scored on Jeff Bagwell's double. After Hershiser hit Pete Incaviglia with a pitch, Ken Caminiti reached base on a fielder's choice, scoring Bagwell.

Eddie Taubensee singled and Hershiser hit Andujar Cedeno with a pitch before Kile's hit. Caminiti and Taubensee scored on the hit and Cedeno also scored on Eric Davis' throwing error.

"We've got to play defense as well as offense," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "We've got to think defense in the field, and when we're in the dugout, we think offense."

Doug Jones earned his second save with 1 1-3 innings of relief for Houston, which dropped the visiting Dodgers (2-5) into the NL West cellar.

In other games, it was Philadelphia 3, the New York Mets 2; Cincinnati 5, Atlanta 4; and Montreal 3, St. Louis 2.

Phillies 3, Mets 2

The Mets fell to 0-4 at home as rookie Ruben Amaro had two hits and scored two runs. The Mets' 0-4 start at home is their worst since going 0-7 at the Polo Grounds in 1962, their first season.

Amaro, filling in for the injured Lenny Dykstra in center field, has seven hits in seven games, including three home runs and three doubles.

"I just want to help the team while Lenny is out," said Amaro, a Phillies bat boy in his youth. "The ball is just jumping off my bat. It's very exciting."

Reds 5, Braves 4

Tim Belcher struck out 10 to end Atlanta's six-game winning string at Riverfront Stadium. Even though Deion Sanders had the first four-hit game of his career for Atlanta, increasing his average to .433, Cincinnati built a 5-4 lead and held on.

John Smoltz lost for the first time since Aug. 15. Smoltz gave up five hits and three walks in just 2 1-3 innings, his shortest appearance since last July 6, ending his streak of seven consecutive regular-season wins.

Devils move ahead of Penguins for third place in Patrick Division

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Hockey Writer

This time of year, NHL teams are usually playing for either pride or position.

The New Jersey Devils were playing for both Monday night.

"As an athlete, you want to finish as high as possible," Peter Stastny said after the Devils' 5-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins. "The higher you finish, the better it is. Your confidence is higher, both the individual and the team. You never want to finish behind somebody."

As it is, the victory moved the Devils two points ahead of Pittsburgh for third place in the Patrick Division. It also prevented the Penguins from clinching third.

The Devils have one game left in the regular season, on the road against the New York Islanders on Wednesday night. Pittsburgh plays at home against Washington on Wednesday and is in New York against the Rangers on Thursday.

The third-place team in the Patrick Division will earn an opening-round playoff berth against second-place Washington, which tied the Islanders 1-1 Monday night. The fourth-place team will play the Rangers, who have the best record in the league.

Elsewhere in the NHL Monday night, it was Philadelphia 6, Toronto 2, and Boston 6, Hartford 3.

NHL roundup

Stastny and Valeri Zelepukin scored in a 1:27 span as New Jersey defeated Pittsburgh to win the season series from the Penguins 5-2.

The Devils, who were playing their second post-strike game in as many nights, seemed to benefit from having a game under their belts.

"(Sunday) night felt like a preseason game," said Devils goalie Chris Terreri after stopping 19 shots to break a personal eight-game winless streak (0-6-2). "This felt like it meant something. Everyone was focused and the game had more meaning."

The victory was the Devils' 38th of the season, tying a franchise record for wins in a season, set in 1987-88. The win was also the Devils' 24th at home, breaking the mark set by the 1987-88 and 1990-91 teams.

Capitals 1, Islanders 1

New York coach Al Arbour reached another milestone and his team managed a tie in Washington despite being outshot 38-15.

Arbour was behind the bench for his 1,437th game, tying Dick Irvin for the most games by an NHL coach. Arbour, 59, began his coaching career in 1970 and has led the Islanders to four Stanley Cups. Irvin coached Chicago, Toronto and Montreal from 1930-56.

New York goalie Mark Fitzpatrick made 29 saves before being forced to leave the game after Washington's Kelly Miller rammed him into the goal post with 1:48 left in regulation. Glenn Healy took over and made several outstanding saves, but the Capitals nevertheless managed to clinch the second-best overall record in the NHL.

"I've been very fortunate over the years," Arbour said. "I've worked with some great people; I've been blessed that way. But that record, well, that's just something that comes around if you last long enough."

Flyers 6, Maple Leafs 2

Only 9,137 fans, by far the smallest crowd of the season at the Spectrum, showed up for Philadelphia's first post-strike home game.

Kerry Huffman had a goal and three assists as the Flyers improved to 8-2-1 in their last 11 home games. Toronto, which like the Flyers will miss the playoffs, has three wins in its last 11 road contests (3-7-1) and is 9-27-4 on the road this season.

The Flyers' previous low crowd of the season was 16,652 against Quebec on Oct. 17.

Bruins 6, Whalers 3

Steve Heinze scored twice in just over three minutes of the second period as Boston erupted from a 3-3 tie for a fight-filled win over Hartford.

Trailing 3-1 after one period, the Whalers tied the game 2:22 into the second on power-play goals by John Cullen and Murray Craven.

Then Heinze scored at 6:27 and 9:29. Ray Bourque gave the Bruins their third goal in less than six minutes at 12:22 while Boston had a 5-on-3 advantage. It was his second goal of the game and 21st of the season.

The Bruins beat Hartford for the seventh straight time in Boston and outshot the Whalers 47-19. Five goals came on power plays, as referee Paul Devorski called 203 minutes in penalties, 158 of them in the second period.

Attendance down at hockey games

Fortunately for the National Hockey League, the playoffs start on Saturday. Maybe then, the fans will come back.

The first two nights of play following the resumption of the season after the players' strike have been noteworthy only for the large number of empty seats. The 30 regular-season games postponed by the strike were hurriedly rescheduled after the walkout ended early Saturday morning, giving teams little time to prepare.

"It's the kind of game we would have done more if it was played on schedule, but it was encouraging,"

Buffalo vice president of marketing George Bergantz said on Monday. The Sabres drew 13,412 Sunday night for their 3-1 victory over Montreal, more than 2,000 less than their pre-strike average.

Only one of four games played Monday night drew more than 10,000 fans. Both Philadelphia (9,137) and Washington (9,164) had by far their smallest crowds of the season.

"I think the crowd was good. Tonight was not a fair evaluation," said Washington coach Terry Murray, whose club averaged 16,780 per game at the Capital Centre before the strike.

PHS boys post soccer win over Canyon

CANYON - Pampa season tonight against Tascosa, said Pampa coach Scott Flynn. Tonight's match kicked off at 6 p.m.

The Harvesters boosted their record to 7-1. Pampa won easily despite the loss of one of their top players, Ascencion Anguiano, who suffered an ankle injury in the first minute of play. Anguiano, who plays forward, has scored five goals this season.

Anguiano may miss Pampa's final home of the season tonight against Tascosa, said Pampa coach Scott Flynn. "I hope we still have some legs underneath us."

Don't worry, be happy: Exercise cuts anxiety

WASHINGTON (AP) - You can run from your troubles. Anxiety goes down after exercise, experts say.

However, they caution, anxiety also drops if you just sit in a quiet room with a good book, or take a long, warm shower.

A vigorous aerobic workout definitely links up with a drop in anxiety, said William P. Morgan, a researcher at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, who did some of the earliest work in the field.

But this doesn't mean exercise causes the reduction, Morgan added. The same reduction can take place after resting quietly.

"That led us to propose it may not be the exercise per se, but the distraction from the cares and the worries of the day," he said.

Morgan doesn't take this to mean that you can quit exercising. Resting quietly won't give you improved muscle tone or a reduced risk of such conditions as heart disease, he noted.

And exercise seems to have a somewhat longer benefit than do nonactive forms of relaxation, said researcher John Raglin of Indiana University. The reduction can last two to four hours after exercise, compared with about 20 minutes for nonactive forms, he said.

Even if you needn't exercise to reduce anxiety, you can still consider it another reward for your hard work. The issue is how much of a reduction, from what kind of work, done how hard.

"It isn't a huge effect, but (exercise) is having a significant effect," said researcher Steven J. Petrozello of the University of Illinois. Exercisers can notice it, he said.

When Petrozello was at Arizona State University, he and his colleagues produced a meta-analysis, combining data from over 120 studies in an attempt to overcome weaknesses in individual studies and create a broader base for statistical conclusions. Their report was published in the journal Sports Medicine in 1991.

Only aerobic exercise (for instance, walking, running or cycling) seems to reduce anxiety, Petrozello reported. Weight training did not. However, he said, relatively little work has been done on such non-aerobic exercise.

How long your workouts need to be is less clear, Petrozello said. Although some studies have reported that it seems to require about 20 minutes of working out, he doesn't consider the issue settled.

Closer analysis indicates that less work can reduce state anxiety — how you feel right now — if not trait anxiety, which is how you feel most of the time, he said.

Trait anxiety, which is more stable, also may be reduced for habitual exercisers, even if they do less than 20 minutes of exercise at a time, but more research is needed on that, the journal article says.

How hard you work doesn't seem to make much difference, the researcher said. Workouts from a moderate 40 percent of maximal aerobic capacity to a vigorous 80 percent all had about the same payoff, he said.

And whether you're a regular exerciser or doing it only once also makes little difference, he said. Both reduce anxiety.

Some researchers question the effectiveness of meta-analysis in extracting useful data from flawed studies, however. "There are those who would argue that you can't put baloney into a sausage grinder and get succulent salami out," Morgan said.

Bulls damage Hawks' playoff hopes

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan, playing less than half the game because of tendinitis in his left knee, has the playoffs on his mind in a different way than the Atlanta Hawks do.

The Chicago Bulls, although their starters all played less than 30 minutes, damaged the Hawks' playoff hopes Monday night with a 100-93 decision.

Atlanta fell into a tie with idle Miami for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. New Jersey beat Orlando 110-104 to break a tie with the Hawks and pull even with Indiana for the sixth.

Jordan, the league's leading scorer with a 30-point average, played 23 minutes and scored a season-low 12 points.

He will not accompany the team to Cleveland for Tuesday night's game. The Bulls, with a 65-14 record, already have clinched homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs.

"If it was the playoffs, I'd be playing," said Jordan, adding that the decision to skip the Cavaliers' game was made after Monday's game when coach Phil Jackson asked him if he wanted Tuesday off.

"I said yes," said Jordan, whose only other miss of a game this season was at Phoenix because of a suspension.

Jordan said some pain was felt during warmups. "It's not an aggravated pain," he noted. "It's like when you push off, like someone sticking a needle in there."

Against the Hawks, no Bulls starter played more than 29 minutes.

"I don't think we really need to be tested anymore," Jackson said. "I just want to keep the players in a rhythm."

After looking at the box score of the game, Atlanta coach Bob Weiss said, "We got beat by a ghost — the ghost of the Chicago Bulls. We couldn't beat their second team."

City of Chicago workers pour gravel from a barge in an attempt to block a hole in an underwater tunnel in the Chicago River Monday. A punctured hole in the underground tunnel system caused flooding throughout the downtown area. Thousands of workers were sent home due to power outages.

Chicago mayor says city employees knew of leak

By MICHAEL GOUGIS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — City employees knew days and possibly weeks ago about a leak that apparently let river water flood old rail tunnels and bring downtown to a halt, the mayor said. "These people will be held accountable," he warned.

Workers dumped tons of dirt, gravel and cement into the Chicago River and plugged the hole Monday night, but the heart of downtown was without power today while the labyrinth of tunnels was drained and wires were dried.

Tens of thousands of people were evacuated Monday after the water gushed through a breach in a tunnel below the river and coursed through the turn-of-the-century passages once used to deliver mail, coal and other merchandise.

"We arrived in Chicago for some urban excitement. Well, we're getting it," said Anne DeCarlis of Gainesville, Fla., who was honeymooning with her husband, Nick. They had to move to another hotel from the darkened Palmer House

Hilton, where guests wandered in the lobby, their way lighted by fluorescent batons.

In the basement of the Cook County Building, workers scrambled to save thousands of birth, death and marriage certificates, some dating to the 1870s. Office workers had to walk down flight after flight to leave skyscrapers. Fish were seen in the rising water in the restaurant area of the State of Illinois Building.

The flooding closed the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the world's main futures and options exchanges. The Mercantile Exchange was to reopen today; the Board of Trade was expected to remain closed.

No injuries were reported. At a news conference late Monday, Mayor Richard M. Daley said city employees knew about a leak for "a number of days or a number of weeks."

"These people are going to be held accountable. Each and every of those persons who had information will be accountable to me and to the people of the city of Chicago," he said. "Individuals did drop the ball."

Daley wouldn't say who knew about the leak. He said he assumed that leak was responsible for the flood.

The Army Corps of Engineers lowered the level of the river, which is connected by a series of locks to Lake Michigan, to lessen the push of water.

Authorities planned to drain the old freight tunnels by drilling a hole where the system crosses a recently built flood-drainage tunnel system. The drilling could take a week, officials said.

The evacuation threw downtown into disarray. Traffic was snarled, and commuters jammed trains and buses in an early rush hour. There was as much as 30 feet of water in basements of nine buildings. There was no street flooding, but some buildings pumped water from their basements into the streets.

"It's a feeling of a sinking ship," said Manuel DePara, a lawyer who walked down 21 flights. "First the secretaries left. Then the associates left. And finally the principals."

Arrest fails to calm nerves after seven women killed

B EAST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — The arrest of a paroled rapist who authorities say confessed to murdering five women has failed to calm residents' fears.

Instead, the unsolved slayings of two other women have given rise to a skeptical refrain heard Monday across this gritty, working-class town of 73,000 outside of Newark — "I hope they got the right guy."

Jerome Dennis, 25, of East Orange was arraigned Monday on charges of murdering five women and attempting to murder two others from this town. He also was charged with sexually assaulting three of the slaying victims.

Dennis, who covered his face with his hands throughout his court appearance, was jailed on $2 million bail.

Prosecutors refused to give a motive or say what led them to Dennis.

The slayings — four of which were discovered since Friday — had terrorized residents and led to accusations that police aren't doing their job.

Dennis was paroled Nov. 19 after serving 10 years for three rapes and had been in prison since he was 14. Arrested at his home Sunday, he confessed to five slayings, said Assistant Essex County Prosecutor Norman Menz. But more than 200 residents who packed a City Council meeting Monday night showed more skepticism than satisfaction.

"Tell me — how do you know it is the right guy?" asked Marvin Wilson. "We just can't be happy with the first one you get."

Belinda Jackson asked, "The question is, are we going to receive the appropriate protection that we deserve?"

The five slaying victims were strangled, stabbed or bludgeoned. The four identified so far were East Orange residents. They ranged in age from 16 to 41. Police said the only common thread was they were all black, as is Dennis.

Four of the bodies were found within a block of each other Friday and Saturday near an intersection. The fifth slaying was of an East Orange woman whose body was discovered Dec. 16 at an abandoned housing complex in Newark.

Dennis wasn't charged with the killings of two women whose bodies were found in the basement of an East Orange building, one in August and the other last week. He was in prison when at least one of those killings occurred.

Composer's home becomes museum

LONDON (AP) — Part of the house in London's Mayfair district where composer George Frideric Handel lived for 38 years is to become a museum devoted to him, organizers say.

They appealed Monday for financial help in the effort. The only existing Handel museum is in Halle, the German town where the composer was born and spent his first 17 years, said music historian Stanley Sadie.

Sadie appealed for $440,000 for conversion of the top three floors of the house at 25 Brook Street off Grosvenor Square.
