Kelso's hooked on bulls

By J. ALAN BRZYS Managing Editor

Ross Kelso is riding a dream and cantankerous rodeo bulls - for all its worth.

So far it's paying off handsomely.

The 19 year old from Mobeetie currently competes with the Panhandle State University rodeo team and a week ago in the bull riding event won his first intercollegiate rodeo.

A freshman majoring in agribusiness, Kelso beamed with pride when he showed the handmade prize buckle he captured April 18 at PSU's Deke Latham Memorial Rodeo which attracted more than a dozen rodeo teams to the Guymon, Okla., campus.

In the long go-round held early in the morning, Kelso drew a bull with no name - known only by its Jetter-D brand.

He scored an ample 64 points, good enough to qualify for the short go.

Speaking of PSU rodeo coach Lynn Gardner, who holds a doctorate degree, Kelso said, "He's really taking care of us.

"We really appreciate having him around. He's probably one of the smartest men I've ever met."

Kelso said PSU is "very much a rodeo school."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS. TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Rebuilding Afghanistan

As Korean communist dictator Kim Il Sung recently celebrated his 80th birthday in Pyongyang, in Afghanistan communist dictator Najibullah was deposed in Kabul. Before being selected as dictator by the ex-Soviet regime in Moscow, Najibullah had been the murderous head of the KGB-run Afghan secret police.

Najibullah's ouster brings to a close the long fight of the Afghan mujahedeen to reclaim their country. Afghanistan's suffering is a reminder of the horrors imposed by communism. The Soviet Red Army, along with Najibullah and his puppet regime, murdered more than a million Afghans, ripped up precious farmlands, sprayed poison gas on recalcitrant villages, and kidnapped thousands of Afghan children for Marxist indoctrination in the Soviet Union.

Never should we forget the sufferings borne by Afghans, Eastern Europeans, Russians, Ukrainians, and other people - and still borne by North Koreans, Chinese, and Cubans. Life, liberty, and property are the indivisible foundations of society. Any ideology or policy that violates those foundations should be resisted fiercely.

We also should remember the many Americans who helped the Afghan mujahedeen reclaim their country. One was Dana Rohrabacher, now an Orange County, Calif., congressman. As a Reagan speechwriter, he became a point man for Afghan policy, actually facilitating the delivery of Redeye missiles to the freedom fighters, as Fred Barnes chronicled in Reader's Digest. Aid to the Afghans was not popular everywhere. Many in media and academia criticized Mr. Reagan for calling the Soviet Union an "Evil Empire" and for instituting the Reagan Doctrine of aiding freedom fighters

As Americans debated, the Afghan people were strafed by Red Army Hind helicopter gunships; their children were maimed by bombs disguised as toys. But aid to the mujahedeen was sent, allowing them to fight for their own country.

With victory now comes the task of rebuilding Afghanistan. As difficult as it is, now the United States should refrain from giving Afghans government aid. Certainly, the Red Cross (or the Red Crescent as it is called in Islamic countries) and other private charities should send medical aid. But the U.S. government should do nothing. Why? Because economic aid is a form of international welfare that only hurts recipient countries. Having repulsed the Red Army, Afghans do not need to be invaded by U.N., IMF, and World Bank

Afghanistan is a rich land with an industrious people. It will attract enough foreign capital from private sources for rebuilding. American charity and private investment are the best (and only) aid Americans should send to fertilize the new buds of freedom in Afghanistan.

Symbols and substance

Yes, in one way, it's unfair. To jump on members of the House for writing rubber checks is to apply the forbidden rule of ex post facto. The members stand convicted of committing an offense that was not an offense when they committed it.

And, yes, it is true that the House bank kept sloppy records, and it is true that no tax funds were risked. Of the 435 members of the House, at least 166 had no overdrafts at all. Many had no more than one or two.

But protesting members miss the point. The people are bursting with outrage not against the check kiting as such, but for the symbol it conveys. It symbolizes an attitude. We read that a leading Republican from Michigan wrote 878 overdrafts and a powerful Democrat from California wrote 851. The majority leader bounced 28, the majority whip bounced 76. The chairman of the Ethics Committee had 551. What do these symbols tell

Most of these worthies are protesting, but like the queen in Hamlet's play, they protest too much. They miss the point.

That's the galling thing: They miss the point. We live by symbols. The flag is a symbol. The cross, the yarmulke, the union label, the old school tie – all these are symbols. Patterns of conduct tell us something. We infer the slattern from the filthy

In the matter at hand, we draw an inexorable conclusion: The fellow who is irresponsible in writing his personal checks is going to be irresponsible in writing public laws.

That is what the uproar is about. Not one voter in 10 million can grasp the magnitude of a $4 trillion debt. Few taxpayers can reach informed decisions on the Seawolf submarine. The aborted tax bill was beyond even its sponsors' understanding. Too much! Too much!

But everybody understands a rubber check. Everybody understands the free prescription, the cut-rate haircut, the privileged parking at an airport, the subsidized meals at Capitol restaurants. All these symbolize a kind of lordly indifference to the lives of ordinary people.

Belatedly, Speaker Tom Foley has consented to a few reforms. The House is to have an administrator chosen by bipartisan agreement. Gymnasium fees will rise from $100 a year to $100 a quarter. The House bank has closed its wickets. There is talk of curbing abuses of the mail franking privilege.

It is a fair assumption that for a while - for a while - Congress will cut back on the more palpable junkets to Europe and the Orient. Facing an angry electorate, many a member is prudently retiring. Next January will bring the greatest turnover on Capitol Hill in 30 years.

The waves on the Hill have sent ripples down Pennsylvania Avenue. Except for Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, members of the Cabinet will not mad. Experience tells me they probably won't.

be traveling on jet planes obligingly provided by the Air Force. Even Secretary of State Jim Baker will be traveling by commercial carrier. The word is out that the heat is on.

The developments are immensely gratifying, but ... Perhaps you could feel the "but" coming. The reforms are great, but do they reflect a change in attitude? Once the storm blows over, will it be back to business as usual?

Forgive my pessimism. Nothing much is going to happen. Nothing of significance, anyhow. By Election Day in November, time will have dulled the edge of anger. When a new Congress convenes, the same power structure will control the legislative process. Few of the 300 committees and subcommittees will be abolished. A single senator, pursuing a vendetta or a whim, will be able to tie up a nomination for months. In the House, parliamentary sleight-of-hand will stifle minority rights.

And the sham! The incessant, infuriating sham will continue. That tax bill was pure sham. The other day the Senate ratified a U.N. treaty on civil rights. By the time the job was done, the Senate fortunately had attached so many reservations that the treaty had no meaning. It was all make-believe and play-pretend, with no purpose other than to impress nations of the Third World - nations that could not possibly care less about U.S. ratification of an empty accord.

Sham is a way of life on the Hill. It is the posturing that gets to be unbearable, the pontificating, the gassy speeches to empty halls, the phoniness of so much that Congress does.

Maybe my pessimism will prove unwarranted. I devoutly hope so, for I wish the people would stay

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, April 27, the 118th day of 1992. There are 248 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On April 27, 1805, a force led by U.S. Marines captured the city of Derna, on the shores of Tripoli.

On this date: In 1509, Pope Julius II excommunicated the Italian state of Venice.

In 1521, Portuguese explorer Ferdinand Magellan was killed by natives in the Philippines.

In 1791, the inventor of the telegraph, Samuel Morse, was born in Charlestown, Mass.

In 1822, the 18th president of the United States, Ulysses S. Grant, was born in Point Pleasant, Ohio. In 1865, the steamer Sultana exploded on the Mississippi River near Memphis, Tenn., killing more than 1,400 Union prisoners of war. In 1932, American poet Hart

Crane drowned after jumping from a steamer while en route to New York; he was 32.

In 1937, the nation's first Social Security checks were distributed. In 1947, it was "Babe Ruth Day"

On feeling depressed

THERE is PRAYER in AMERICAN SCHOOLS...

You can't always tell - the person who seems most cheerful in your presence might be a "closet depressive.'

Doctors can be fooled when symptoms of depression are camouflaged by a smiling face.

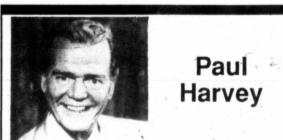

Parents, who should be in the best position to recognize early symptoms of depression, often

The most recent study by the New York State Psychiatric Institute affirms that one in four Americans may have multiple symptoms of depression at some time in their lives and that most all such are treatable before they become a life-threatening dis-

Early symptoms include sleep or appetite problems, guilt, fatigue, lack of interest in sex.

And this is strange: Most suicide attempts eventuate from lesser symptoms. "Less-depressed patients account for 26 percent of suicide attempts; major-depression patients 23 percent.

Minor depression also accounts for more lost work days than does major depression. In lost time and productivity, depression is costing society some $5 billion a year.

The University of Oklahoma, in a separate study, determined that most physicians do not recognize depression in their patients. "Only about half of the patients who enter a primary care clinic sion. suffering depression are accurately diagnosed by a physician.'

The physician should be alerted by any unusual increase in office visits. Also by such symptoms as headache, abdominal pain, backache, insomnia and fatigue.

And smoking.

The National Institutes of Mental Health ascertained a relationship between smoking and mental health. Among 704 patients diagnosed with depression, 472 were smokers and 232 were not.

In multiple separate measurements, depressives, by a ratio of two-to-one, are more likely to be

Dr. Michael Parchman of the University of Oklahoma, says "Depressed patients need a 'ticket' to get into the physician's office. They can't just call and say that they are 'blue' or that they are 'crying much of the time.' Also there is still a social stigma attached to going to a psychiatrist. So they go instead to a primary care physician to get help and those primary care physicians must learn to diagnose depres-

prophet's cry

A few thousand years ago, an unknown yokel named Isaiah tried to shake up the nation of Israel with a message from God: Israel soon would succumb to invading armies and its people would be carted off into gloomy captivity. For years the prophet of doom was laughed at, denounced, and roughed up. But he was also right. Just look under "B" for Babylonian Captivity for the rest of the story. One of this century's greatest economic prophets - equally scorned by his peers - has been equally vindicated. The man: Frederich A. Hayek, who died earlier this year. The message: Only capitalism can guard individual liberty; socialism will always lead to bondage and national decay.

After witnessing the remarkable free-market revolutions that have changed the face of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, we may find that message somewhat less than visionary. But not in 1944, when Hayek published "The Road to Serfdom," in which he argued that there wasn't a ruble's worth of difference between the state socialism of our enemy, Nazi Germany, and our ally, communist Russia. Both systems, he said. were the enemies of freedom.

Edwin Feulner

This sent the liberal apologists for "Uncle Joe" Stalin into a frenzy. Socialism was taking hold in the democracies in Europe and among the American intelligentsia. A centrally planned, egalitarian, prosperous, orderly society - it all looked so good on paper. But never in practice. In practice, socialism meant coercion and tyranny. That was part of the genius of Hayek, to see the fatal flaw of socialist economies, with their emphasis on state power over individual liberty. At the same time, he grasped the central value of capitalism, with its reliance on individuals making free and responsible decisions in an open market place. over.

Not only did he see these truths, he spent the last 45 years of his life promoting the moral superiority of capitalism over socialism. An Austrian native, Hayek had watched helplessly as fascism and communism swept away freedom for millions across Europe, and he was determined to warn the West not to tread the same dark

Like other prophets, Hayek's beginnings were humble enough: Three publishing houses rejected his now-classic "Road to Serfdom;" one even called it "unfit for publication by any reputable

All that would change. Millions of copies were snatched up within months of publication. The slender volume did more to popularize freemarket thinking than any other book of its era. Hayek went on to write more than 50 books, collect the Nobel Prize for economics and win the highest American civilian award, the Medal of Freedom.

Few men have been so clearly proven right by the verdict of history. While we mourn Hayek's passing, we can celebrate the triumph of his vision - a vision of freedom being embraced the world

Redskins pick Howard; Dickerson goes to Raiders

Heisman Trophy winner Desmond Howard of the University of Michigan talks to the Washington Redskins Sunday. The Redskins picked Howard in the first round.

NEW YORK (AP) - A falling star the league. rises from the bottom, while a college sensation gets to start at the top.

On a busy day of bartering, with the Dallas Cowboys making almost as many swaps as picks and the tor Ken Herock. Atlanta Falcons trading for a pick they owned when things began, the biggest moves might have involved rounds conducted Sunday. Those Eric Dickerson and Desmond

The Indianapolis Colts, who added significantly to their defense with the top two picks — Steve Emtman and Quentin Coryatt also added to their offense by subtraction when they dealt Dickerson to the Los Angeles Raiders for two mid-round choices.

Dickerson was suspended for refusing to practice last season and it was clear for weeks that the Colts wanted to get rid of the NFL's No. 3 career rusher. On Sunday, they reached agreement with the Raiders, a haven for disgruntled talents, sending Dickerson to Los Angeles for a fourth- and an eight-round choice.

The team that won the Super Bowl in January, the Washington Redskins, added to their arsenal in style. GM Charley Casserly traded up two spots on the first round, switching with Cincinnati, to take Howard, the Heisman Trophy winner from Michigan. Redskins coach Joe Gibbs called Howard a player without flaws.

"I think Charley made a bold move, and I think it's a good move for us," Gibbs said. "We were looking for a player we thought potentially could be a great player. Desmond Howard, we couldn't find anything wrong with.

Howard, one of 11 underclassmen taken on the first round — including four of the first five — was the only receiver to go in the top 30. He joins Art Monk, Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders, the best receiving trio in dream, thanks to Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson and Atlanta coach Jerry Glanville and personnel direc-

Johnson was involved in six deals and made eight selections in the five deals involved 27 choices

The Falcons couldn't quite keep up with that pace. But they did manage to send the 19th pick on the first round to New England, which then traded it to, of course, Dallas. The Cowboys, naturally, didn't hold on to it and sent it to, yes, Atlanta.

NFL draft

Glanville got the versatile kind of running back he sought with that pick, taking Tony Smith of Southern Mississippi.

The Colts weren't interested in dealing the top two picks and they became the first team since the Chicago Cardinals in 1958 to start off with a double dip. And they immediately upgraded a mediocre defense with Emtman and Coryatt.

"I want to play a part in turning this team around," Emtman said. "I'm not coming in thinking I'm anything special.'

But he is. The junior tackle was a consensus top choice. Coryatt wasn't far behind and might make a quicker impact because he'll have more help at linebacker, where Indianapolis already has Jeff Herrod and Duane Bickett.

The Los Angeles Rams took DE Sean Gilbert of Pittsburgh, another junior, before Washington swapped with Cincinnati to get Howard. Green Bay, which wanted Howard, went for hard-hitting Terrell Buckley, a bigplay safety and kick returner from Florida State.

The draft was an auctioneer's by selecting quarterback David Klingler of Houston. He will be a backup to Boomer Esiason for a while.

"It's great to know that the team's not going to throw you to the lions." said Klingler, who set 51 NCAA offensive records. "I'm going to get myself ready to play right away. I've got lots to learn.

"I never thought we'd have a chance to get him," GM Mike Brown said. "We know that this is a gamble. ... Give us a little time to make it work.

It was a good move for Miami, too. The Dolphins, coached by Don Shula, father of Bengals coach David Shula, benefitted when Klinger went to Cincinnati. Miami wanted a top cover man and got the best in the field in Troy Vincent of Wisconsin.

A pair of Stanford players went next. Atlanta, in a pick acquired moments earlier from New England. got All-American tackle Bob Whitfield, another underclassman. Cleveland opted for fullback Tommy Vardell.

Tackles Ray Roberts of Virginia and Leon Searcy of Miami then went to Seattle and Pittsburgh, respectively, and Miami further helped its defense with linebacker Marco Cole-

The Patriots made tackle Eugene Chung of Virginia Tech the highest Asian-American selection ever. Then things got tight — as in tight ends in New York. The Giants drafted Derek Brown of Notre Dame and the Jets followed with sophomore Johnny Mitchell of Nebraska.

Wide-body DT Chester McGlockton of Clemson went to the Raiders; Dallas took DB Kevin Smith of Texas A&M; San Francisco also got a defensive back, Dana Hall of Washington; Atlanta took Tony Smith; Kansas City grabbed safety Dale Then the Bengals, who needed lots Carter of Tennessee; and New of defensive aid, looked to the future Orleans was stunned to find Vaughn Dunbar, generally rated the best running back in the draft, available at No. 21.

The rest of the first round saw Chicago take DE Alonzo Spellman of Ohio State; San Diego draft DE Chris Mims of Tennessee; Dallas further upgrade the defense with linebacker Robert Jones of East Carolina; Denver gamble on sophomore quarterback Tommy Maddox of UCLA; Detroit go for DL Robert Porcher of South Carolina State; Buffalo draft Arizona tackle John Fina; and Cincinnati pick Darryl Williams, a big-play DB from Miami.

Tampa Bay, Phoenix, Philadelphia, Minnesota and Houston were without first-round picks in what could be the final draft. The 10-year agreement between the players and management on the draft expires with this one and players have talked about challenging the system with an antitrust suit.

Eleven linemen — six on defense, five on offense — all heavier than 280 pounds, went in the opening

Minnesota's first choice came in the second round as the result of the trade Saturday that sent Keith Millard to Seattle. The Vikings took defensive end Robert Harris of Southern.

Tampa's first pick was receiver Courtney Hawkins of Michigan State in the second round. Phoenix went for QB Tony Sacca of Penn State, Philadelphia took running back Siran Stacy of Alabama, and Houston took linebacker Eddie Robinson of Alabama State.

The first kicker taken was All-American Jason Hanson of Washington State, chosen by Detroit late in the second round.

In the fourth round, Tampa Bay took Craig Erickson, the former Miami quarterback who went on the fifth round last year to Philadelphia but didn't sign.

Anonymous incest story told to share the hope of healing brings to mind unspeakable things prohibited among family members. An area woman who wished to remain anonymous, contacted The Pampa News offering to tell her story as a victim of incest. She said she was motivated to come forward because of the crushing burden placed on victims of incest and also to share the hope of healing available to those victims. This is the final story in a series about child abuse in recognition of April -Child Abuse Prevention Month.

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS Lifestyles Editor

Marie did not know what was wrong with herself, but she knew something was powerfully out of balance in her life. Her toddler age daughter, instead of being a delight, incited Marie to fits of screaming rage. Sure, the child did naughty things sometimes, but the rage that Marie turned on her was far more intense than the child's transgressions warranted. For a period of months, the screaming fits continued. The child began to scream back, mirroring her mother's irrational behavior.

"I woke up one morning and said, 'This is my rage, I don't know where it's coming from, but I don't have the right to hand it to (my daughter)," Marie said. That very day, she set the wheels in motion to begin therapy. By the next week she was working with a therapist.

Marie's husband observed that when she screamed at the child, he heard Marie's mother's voice, both in tone and script. Marie's mother, though not normally hot tempered, would scream at her in fits of frus-

Marie, her mother and sister lived with an alcoholic who had his own pain, Marie said. Her mother's response to his behavior was work, work, work. As a result, Marie and took on a partial adult role, and grew up before their time.

When Marie went to therapy, she described her symptoms to the therapist as rage toward her child, extreme body tension and 'memory' of a violent encounter between Marie's father and sister. Marie did not know whether she recalled an actual event between the two or a childish perception of what she saw. Marie did not trust the accuracy of her own memory.

The therapist immediately gave

> Marie read the book, seeing herself in the pages, but had no recellection of any incident of incest. She said she did not believe she was the type of personality to tolerate abuse because, as a youth, she was mouthy and challenged her father.

During a period of stress between Marie and her husband, a memory of an incident of incest came to her.

"It was like a stage production. They're on the stage with a fade in of lights. It just unfolded in front of me," she said, "I shook a lot, but at this point there was no denial."

Her feelings were ambivalent. On one hand, she did not believe her recollection. On the other hand, she said she sensed it was true.

Two days later, another memory opened up. Both times she wrote down what she recalled and called for an appointment with her thera-

She contacted her sister because she felt that she could help her confirm or deny her experi-

"Honey, I didn't forget one time," her sister said. It was at this point of confirmation, Marie said, that healing began.

Neither sister knew of the other's victimization. Her sister kept the terrible secret because she believed Marie would never be abused because she was the abuser's biological child. She wanted to avoid hurting their mother, who Marie believes did not know about the incest on a conscious level.

To this day, Marie's sister is not in therapy. She sees no need for it. Marie did not have the opportunity to confront her abuser, because he died before the memory and therapy process began.

About the time of his death, Marie's body began to be extremely tense. She believed it was a her sister took on the burden of response to an ectopic pregnancy household chores. In a sense, they and further inability to conceive a child. Now she thinks the extreme tension was a response to memories of incest which were trying to break into her conscious mind. She grieved for her inability to bear a for her father.

"At the time my husband told me (my father) was dead, I felt a grin come to my face. I buried my head on my husband's chest to hide the grin. I thought it wasn't a proper reaction to a parent's death," she

The relationship between Marie attributed to his alcoholism, but now sees it as a response to his treatment of her.

Eleven years had to pass from the time of his death to the beginning of therapy. Problems with control issues plagued her. Marie said she craved control over tiny issues, like what her husband wore. She entered a support group, Adult Children of Alcoholics, and through that understood many things about herself, but not all.

Marie said her husband knew something bothered her, but until the memories returned neither of them knew what created so much turmoil inside her. They believed that the years of seeking a solution to infertility was the key. Marie said when she recalled the incidents of incest, it was like lancing

"Now we know why," she said. Two years of therapy have passed and Marie feels liberated from her terrible secret.

"Not having a secret - I didn't realize I had a secret. I knew there were things I needed to talk about but I didn't know what to tell," she

Marie feels near the end of the healing process. The only thing lacking in the process, she said, was an experience of deep pain. Sometimes, though, the pain sneaks up on her, and she senses it residing inside her. She fears the experience of feeling it. Moreover, she fears thaat her precious daughter might witness

The future is bright for Marie. She and her daughter have an enjoyable relationship.

"I see my change more in her response to me. Again, she's my mirror," Marie said.

Her marriage is better because child, but said she did not grieve she and her husband know what gnawed at Marie for so many years. Their communication, she describes as more intimate on every topic.

"Future wise, I see no boundaries from whatever I want to do. I set my own boundaries. If I want it badly enough, I can get it. The future is bright," Marie said.

wife are very staunch believers in their religion. Last year their church had their 14-year-old son send out letters to not only friends, neighbors and relatives, but to friends and relatives of his grandparents as well. The letters requested a $100 donation to help send this boy to a twomonth religious camp in Europe to help spread the word.

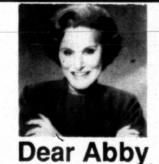

To say that we were aghast is to put it mildly. Everyone felt that if his parents wanted him to have this proselytizing experience and training, they should foot the bill themselves. (They can well afford it.)

My parents told my brother that they don't approve of this begging, and it's embarrassing to have their neighbors and relatives approached. Well, my brother ignored their wishes, and this year their son has sent letters again — this time for a two-month religious retreat in Colo-

Is there a tactful way to put an end to this begging without causing a serious rift in the family?

DEAR AGHAST: I know of no "tactful" way to tell anyone that he has a lot of guts hitting on his relatives, friends and neighbors for donations to send his son to a religious retreat — especially when he can foot the bill himself.

And don't worry about caus-ing a "serious rift" in your family. Nervy people need to be told when they have gone too far. To cave in to their demands would

DEAR ABBY: I recently read a letter in your column about a restaurant regular who gets offended by servers who ask, "Do you want any change back?"

I have been a waitress for 15 years, and I've asked customers that several times if (1) I am extremely busy asking will save time and stepsor (2) the change is obviously 15

Now this may sound rude, but it's not meant to upset anyone, just to clear the air. Oftentimes, they don't mind, and actually seem to appreci-
