Feds bust drug ring kingpins

MIAMI (AP) — Top U.S. managers of Colombia's growing Cali drug cartel were in custody today, accused of smuggling of 22 tons of cocaine confiscated in frozen broccoli shipments and fence posts, federal authorities said.

"We believe they were key, principal managers here in the United States on behalf of the Cali cartel," said William Rosenblatt, head of the U.S. Customs Service in Miami.

The arrests and seizures arose from two separate drug probes, Operation Wizard II and Operation Cornerstone.

Cornerstone last year turned up about 15 tons of cocaine hidden in hollowed-out fence posts at a Miami warehouse, said Tom Cash, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration here.

Then on April 16, investigators following up on a phone tap found 6 tons of cocaine hidden in a shipment of frozen broccoli and okra at Port Everglades in Fort Lauderdale, he said. An additional ton of cocaine was seized later.

Both shipments were organized by Harold Ackerman, whom Cash called the Cali cartel's "ambassador" in the United States.

Ackerman, a Colombian, and nine others from various Latin American countries are in custody at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Miami following arrests over the last three days, said Cash.

An 11th person charged was still at large this morning; other charges may be brought as the investigation continues, authorities said.

Officers seized nearly a half-million dollars in U.S. currency plus jewelry, cars and other items were confiscated from Ackerman's home in a posh Miami Beach suburb.

The Cali cartel, based in the Colombian city of Cali, has largely replaced the better-known Medellin cartel as the principal supplier of cocaine to the United States and Europe.

Cash estimated the Cali cartel, headed by Miguel Rodriguez Orejuela, was responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine now entering the Miami area.

He noted similar packaging found in Miami was used as far away as Warsaw, Poland, and Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Acting U.S. Attorney James McAdams said indictments in the case are pending, and the 10 people in custody are being held on arrest warrants. They are likely to face conspiracy and drug possession charges, he said.

The nation's largest single seizure of cocaine in history totaled 21.4 tons. That was in September 1989 in the Los Angeles area.

Investigation nets couple suspected of burglaries

By BETH MILLER and BEAR MILLS Staff Writers

Pampa police and the Gray County Sheriff's Office on Monday arrested a couple suspected of thefts and burglaries in at least four states, officials involved in the investigation said.

Lloyd and Valerie Wohlford, both 28, of 1008 E. Murphy, were arrested after officers went to their residence following up a traffic complaint.

Police Lt. Allan Smith said officers had received several Crime Stoppers tips implicating the couple in a string of burglaries.

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free said, "We've been working on tips about a month. We all worked together and this was solved through all the agencies working together on it."

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Paul Sublett said the sheriff's office had received information from Panhandle and Elk City, Okla., about a month ago regarding alleged burglaries the couple had been involved in on storage buildings.

He said Deputy Mike Lane had been working with Detective Arden Dorney of Elk City Police Department on the case for about a month.

"We had been following up and trying to find him. I had been asking different questions of PD officers and found Tim Roberts had written him (Wohlford) a ticket about three weeks ago."

Police and sheriff's deputies got information Monday that the Wohlfords were residing on Murphy Street, Sublett said, and police began following up on the traffic incident.

While at the residence, officers reportedly received verbal consent to conduct a search and began finding merchandise reported stolen in California, Colorado, Texas and Oklahoma.

While officials arrive from the various agencies to identify and retrieve property, officers are keeping a 24-hour watch on the alleged stolen property and the Murphy Street residence.

Smith said it is alleged, "They would bring in a U-Haul and load up from a storage building. We have recovered property from three burglaries in Pampa, as well as burglaries in Panhandle, Borger and Elk City (Oklahoma)."

Police Officer David Lee said illegal lock picks were found at the residence, as well as bolt cutters, explaining how the Wohlfords gained entrance into storage buildings.

"In Elk City, he (the suspect) would burglarize four or five storage buildings and move the stuff over into a storage building he had rented," Lee said. "When they (the victims) would report the burglaries, he would move the stuff out of his storage unit and make a false report that he had been hit, too."

Lee and Smith said antique furniture and other items have been recovered that were stolen from Elk

City, Oklahoma City and Woodward, Okla.

"We also found some $500 mountain bikes that were stolen from Colorado," Smith said.

While searching the house, police and deputies reportedly found between two and four ounces of marijuana at the residence.

Mrs. Wohlford was charged with possession of an illegal substance.

Mr. Wohlford is being held on a San Diego, Calif., U.S. Marshal's Office warrant charging automobile theft. He is also being held on a Carson County warrant charging burglary of a storage building. He is also reportedly a suspect in other automobile thefts, officials said.

Free said his office has received teletypes from four or five other law enforcement agencies saying they are on their way to Pampa to follow up on their investigations of burglaries.

The couple had moved to Pampa about two months ago from California, Free said.

"There's no telling how much they've gotten rid of," Free said of the large volume of stolen items.

Others assisting in the investigation included agents from the Panhandle Regional Narcotic Trafficking Task Force, Panhandle Police Department, Borger Police Department and Elk City, Okla., Police Department, and the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Other charges are pending against the couple, officials said. The investigation is continuing.

Judge orders arrest of 5 protest leaders

Cites contempt by anti-abortion foes in Buffalo

By JOEL STASHENKO Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge this morning ordered the arrest of five anti-abortion leaders on contempt charges for allegedly violating his injunction forbidding them from blocking access to abortion clinics.

But even as U.S. District Court Judge Richard J. Arcara issued his order, protesters on both sides of the abortion struggle squared off again at a downtown clinic.

Abortion-rights lawyers charged that the five abortion foes led demonstrations at clinics Friday and Saturday that were in violation of Arcara's injunction, issued in February. It prohibits abortion protesters from getting within 15 feet of clinic entrances, including doorways and parking lot gates.

The five are: Jeff White of Los Angeles; Joe Slovenec of Cleveland; Kenneth Reed of Citrus Heights, Calif.; Joseph G. Kelley of Sag Harbor, N.Y.; and James Anderson of Spokane, Wash.

"I've heard that there are some federal marshals looking for me," Slovenec said this morning outside the Erie Medical Center clinic, where today's protest was taking place. "I don't really care a whole lot about the injunction. I have an injunction from God to rescue children from death."

Anderson and Kelley were arrested this morning, and White and Slovenec planned to surrender this afternoon, said Rev. Robert Schenck of Tonawanda, N.Y., a leader of the abortion protests. He said Reed had returned home to California.

"We will not be intimidated," Schenck said. "We will not turn back. We are not going to be bullied out of this town."

Operation Rescue said it would rally in downtown Buffalo this afternoon to protest Arcara's decision. The judge issued the contempt order after receiving a motion requesting it Monday night from a lawyer for abortion rights advocates. Today's protest resulted in the arrest of about 75 demonstrators.

Anti-abortion forces tried to break through a line of abortion-rights activists surrounding the clinic, but were immediately halted by police. Most of the arrests were of abortion foes, but police also took at least two abortion-rights advocates into custody. In all, there were about 150 protesters from each side at the demonstration, which broke up late this morning.

The executive director of the clinic, Louise Frawley, said the center opened at 7 a.m. and has been seeing patients who have been escorted to the door by police and abortion-rights supporters acting as escorts.

The protest "doesn't seem to have too much of an effect at all," she said. "A lot of our patients are in already."

On Monday, about 200 protesters from each side faced off outside another Buffalo clinic, but there were no arrests or violence.

With 225 demonstrators still in a makeshift jail after being arrested at earlier protests, Operation Rescue leaders said that they couldn't afford to have too many supporters taken into custody Monday.

"We felt it would be better to hold back and conserve our manpower," said anti-abortion leader Pat Mahoney.

Operation Rescue spokesman Gary McCullough said Monday that the anti-abortion group's operatives have scouted clinics in cities "with reasonable driving distance" of Buffalo. He would not identify those cities.

"In our national events in the past we have gone to neighboring cities, to target baby-killers more effectively," he said. "Whether we go or not is a decision usually made hours before we do go."

But abortion-rights leaders said demonstrations outside the Buffalo area would show that Operation Rescue's campaign to close any of the four abortion clinics operating in or near the city has failed.

"Operation Rescue has been a real bust," said Patricia Ireland, president of the National Organization for Women.

Arson possible in house fire

Fire investigators believe arson is to blame for an early morning blaze that heavily damaged a house today at 624 S. Somerville.

Tom Adams, fire marshal, said the occupant of the house, Timothy Russey, was not at home at the time the fire was first reported.

He noted that numerous chairs, beds and other materials in the house shows signs they were individually set on fire in an attempt to burn down the home.

No dollar estimate was available on the amount of damage, Adams said this morning.

Nine firefighters responded to the fire call shortly after 1 a.m. and remained at the scene past 9 a.m. dealing with hot spots, according to fire reports.

Officials encourage anyone with information leading to the arrest or indictment of the person or persons responsible for setting the fire to call Crime Stoppers at 669-2222.

Trail leads water crews to pungent paunch pit

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

City of Pampa water crews laying lines to serve Recreation Park recently made a most pungent discovery.

While working north of the park on a city easement beside a closed meat packing plant, backhoes uncovered numerous paunch pits - areas where the entrails of cattle were dumped nearly 20 years ago.

"It was a little rich," said supervisor Charlie Smith of the smell. "It got our attention."

Documents show city officials immediately notified the state Health Department and Texas Water Commission of the situation.

On Monday Joe Sneed, an official with the Health Department's division of occupational health, told the city if precautions are taken, water lines can be run through the pits without any public health hazard.

"My main interest is protecting the (workers) and then you want to make sure if there is disease in any of those pits, it is not carried off," Sneed said. "They can do it safely and they have a good plan. There isn't anything for the citizens to worry about."

A proposed city plan calls for removal of all paunch in a four-foot area around where the water line will be laid. New dirt will be put in its place and the PVC pipe wrapped in several layers of plastic placed in the new earth.

Sneed said all personnel working around the pits will need to wear protective clothing and self-contained breathing apparatus to prevent exposure to any harmful bacteria.

"It's amazing how long this stuff has lasted under there," Sneed said of the cattle bones and intestines found in numerous pits. "I would have thought the bacteria would have eaten it all up. (The city) could have four or five of these (paunch pits) to go through."

Sneed said after working in or around the pits, employees should at once be taken to shower with an antibacterial soap.

"Make sure they don't smoke or eat until they have bathed," he told city officials supervising the work.

Officials said they are currently weighing their options prior to proceeding with work in the paunch pits.

City Manager Glen Hackler said even though the state has given him to go-ahead to allow work to continue, he would prefer to re-route the pipe and secure another easement.

"Our priority is the safety and health of the public," Hackler said. "That's why, since the first day, we contacted the TWC and TDH to get their review. At this point they have indicated the city's initial plans were acceptable, but we feel like we ought to explore other courses of action and see if we can't find another route for this section of line."

The new line reportedly will be part of a loop in the city water system, used to water grass in Recreation Park and serve water fountains.

Sneed noted, "What they (the packing plant) did 20 to 25 years ago (with animal bones and intestines) is certainly not how we would let them do it now. But none of us knew better back then."

While the threat of bacterial exposure is the primary health concern, city employees said the smell coming from the paunch pits is the greatest source of frustration and, at times, nausea.

Banquet draws laughter, tears

By BEAR MILLS
 Staff Writer

Pampa Classroom Teachers Association honored its membership Monday night amidst laughter and tears during their annual banquet at the Community Building.

The laughter was courtesy of John Erickson, author of the Hank the Cowdog series and one of the Panhandle's most famous writers.

Reading excerpts from his books, Erickson reminded teachers why Hank is so popular.

Erickson also shared several songs from the taped versions of his books.

"We're going to share a little Panhandle culture tonight," Erickson said as he began singing "Disorientation," the lament of Hank, a cowdog living on a ranch in Ochiltree County.

He later commented, "I remember in high school coming to Pampa (from Perryton) for track meets and we always wondered why you put your football field next to the graveyard. After the meet we understood. You had a guy throwing shot put named (Randy) Matson."

Erickson told the teachers, "I hope your kids enjoy the Hank books because they belong to them."

On a more somber note, teachers reached for tissues as tribute was paid to retiring educators Chet Reeves, Reba Hanks and Bill Jones.

Jones has taught and served as an administrator for 36 years, while Hanks has taught elementary school for 32 years. Reeves is retiring after 15 years on the high school level.

Each was honored for their ability to care for children and effectively pass on the secrets of success.

Outgoing PCTA President Teri Hackler told the group they are doing a better job than most people have given them credit.

"Teachers in the United States, in Texas and in Pampa are doing a good job motivating and educating children," Hackler said, noting that comparisons with the school systems in Japan and Europe are often misleading.

"According to information I found in the Los Angeles Times, overall young Americans still rank among the best educated in the world," Hackler said.

She noted that in Europe and Japan only certain children are provided an education and then that elite group is compared with all students in the United States in comparing performance.

"George Lucas, creator of Star Wars, upon accepting his (Academy) award, thanked his teachers, kindergarten through college, for their perseverance and struggles," Hackler said of the importance of educators. "Mr. Lucas, speaking on the powers movies have, said that power could never match the power of a teacher to whisper in a student's ear."

"We, as teachers, have the power to affect the future by lighting the sparks and whispering the right words in the right ears."

Taxpayer plaintiffs seek hearing in federal court on CED taxes

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Efforts to settle a taxpayer lawsuit against the state overuse of the current school property tax system "appear to be at an impasse," a lawyer for the taxpayers has told a federal judge.

Lawyer Jim Keahey on Monday asked U.S. District Judge James Nowlin to schedule a hearing on an injunction, which Keahey has requested against collection of county education district taxes for the 1992-93 school year and beyond.

Keahey said in documents filed in federal court that it appears Gov. Ann Richards will not call a special session on school finance "unless forced to by the funding shortfall created from this court's enjoining collection of the CED (county education district) tax."

He cited a news report indicating that likelihood.

Any settlement of the suit would require legislative action, Keahey said.

The federal lawsuit was filed after the Texas Supreme Court found the CED tax unconstitutional, but allowed its collection for this school year and the next. The 1991 taxes were due this January, and the 1992 taxes will be due in January 1993.

If the governor does intend to promptly call a special session, and Nowlin is so advised by the state attorney general, Keahey asked that the motion for a hearing be held under advisement to give parties additional time to negotiate.

Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for Richards, said the biggest factor determining a special session is whether enough lawmakers will support some proposed constitutional amendment on school finance.

A two-thirds vote of the Legislature is required to put a proposed amendment before voters. Richards' office said she still is getting feedback from lawmakers. Richards has cited May 11 as a likely date if a special session is convened.

"The judge's decision will have an impact, but really the larger issue remains getting the legislative support necessary to put a measure on the constitutional amendment ballot," McDonald said.

He added, "It would be helpful to have a decision by the judge."

In the CED tax system, 188 taxing districts made up of one or several counties levy property taxes for public education.

The system was meant to equalize education funding. But the Supreme Court found that it violates the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax and by levying a property tax without voter approval.

However, the court gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to fix the system.

Taxpayers in the federal lawsuit said collection of an unconstitutional tax, without opportunity for a refund, violates their due process rights under the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Nowlin has certified an estimated 8 million-plus Texas taxpayers as plaintiffs in the case.

Keahey is not asking that the hearing include plaintiffs' request for a declaration that CED collection of the tax violates the U.S. Constitution. He has said such a declaration would allow plaintiffs to seek relief in state court for taxes already paid.

Keahey has proposed a settlement to the state in which the CED tax would be repealed, and a constitutional funding system put in place. In return, taxpayers would forgo their claims for refunds of 1991 taxes.

Aftershocks still possible, official warns

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — As the cleanup from a weekend earthquake continued and schools prepared to reopen, the state's disaster officer warned that another aftershock in the 6-point range was possible along the northwest coast.

Dick Andrews, director of the California Office of Emergency Services, said Monday that aftershocks might continue for several weeks. He said rumblings in the 4.0 range on the Richter scale were probable and that one or more in the range of 5.0 or 6.0 were possible.

Several barely discernible aftershocks were reported late Sunday and Monday as residents started cleaning up the rubble from Saturday's earthquake and two strong aftershocks early Sunday.

Humboldt County officials asked Monday that President Bush declare the quake zone a disaster area. A similar designation was already made by Gov. Pete Wilson, who is scheduled to tour the area today.

A federal declaration of disaster would clear the way for federal aid, including low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration.

The quake and the aftershocks caused an estimated $51 million in damage and about 50 injuries.

Hardest hit was the lumber town of Scotia, where the first aftershock caused a fire that destroyed a shopping center and caused $15 million in damage.

Arlene Mock, who worked in a hardware store that was leveled in the fire, watched some of the cleanup efforts Monday, then left to try to get back on track.

Edward D. Jones & Co.

Opens Second Office in Pampa

After 11 years of service to the residents of this area, Edward D. Jones & Co. has added a second broker in Pampa. Jones, a St. Louis based securities firm, specializes in providing personal service and conservative investments to individuals.

Investment Representative Roger David has serviced this area since 1988. Customers will be glad to know that he will continue to operate from his convenient location at 222 N. Cuyler.

On June 17th, 1991 Roger David and Edward D. Jones & Co. welcomed a new investment representative, Richard Russell a long time Panhandle resident to Pampa.

According to Jones Managing Principal, John Bachmann, a second broker in Pampa will allow the firm to continue its tradition of personal service.

"We're very excited to have a second broker in this area," said Bachman. "Thanks to Roger David, residents of Pampa are very familiar with our face-to-face style of doing business. When it comes to long-term investments, investors expect & deserve personal attention. A second broker will allow us to bring that level of service to more individuals."

"I'm confident that Richard Russell will build his business like Roger did - with genuine concern for the financial well being of his customers."

Roger shares Bachmann's enthusiasm for the firm's expansion. "I'm pleased that Richard has joined Edward D. Jones & Co. His Philosophy is conservative and he believes as I do, that the only way to do business is one-on-one."

Pampa is a dynamic community and the need for our services is growing. With a second broker in town we'll be able to help more investors."

Jones' newest location on the map is 1540 N. Hobart. Although his doors have not been open long, Investment Representative Richard Russell says Edward D. Jones & Co. already feels like home.

I was attracted to Jones by the Opportunity to work with individuals on a one-on-one basis. I was also impressed by the satellite communications system. Making the right investment decisions requires up-to-the-minute information. The Jones system delivers that kind of information. I appreciate all that Roger has done to make me feel welcome and I look forward to a long career with Edward D. Jones & Co.

Adding offices is nothing new to Edward D. Jones & Co. Although the firm traces its roots to 1871, it was in 1950 that the founder's son, Edward D. "Ted" Jones Jr. began building the company's unique network of one-person branch offices. From its first branch office in Mexico, Missouri the firm has grown to include 1,806 offices in 47 states, including 187 here in the state of Texas. Today Jones is the largest investment firm in the country in terms of branch offices.

In keeping with the company's conservative investment philosophy, Jones investment representatives sell low-risk securities, such as federally insured certificates of deposit, tax-exempt bonds, U.S. Government securities, mutual funds and high-quality common stocks.

Roger David and Richard Russell invite you to call or stop by for more information on the investment opportunities available through Edward D. Jones & Co.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Dread disorder hits Americans

A serious illness has entrapped a group of prominent Americans. The illness leads to personal and public excesses and visible loss of judgement. Those directly affected by the dread disorder number only in the hundreds, but the actual victims of the disease include 250 million Americans.

No treatment is known to be effective, except for radical surgery to remove the victims from the environment. The disease is called SIRI - Seniority-Induced Reality Immunity - and seems to claim victims only among members of Congress. The radical surgery is called term limitation.

What are the symptoms of SIRI?

When Speaker of the House Tom Foley surveys his hilltop empire these days, he evidently sees something invisible to the rest of us, because he seems content. Foley is the Big Cheese among 435 big cheeses; as the boss, he has thousands of employees to order around; he can spend trillions of dollars of other people's money and he is third in line to sit in the Oval Office.

Yet that empire is decaying and shrinking. Many of the big cheeses are in trouble for writing rubber checks on the House bank that has been accused of being poorly run (by some of Foley's minions). Others of his minions have been indicted for embezzling money from the House post office, and at least one other for selling cocaine there.

Some members of the House have been accused of sex scandals. Former speaker Jim Wright was driven from office after allegations of all manner of financial wrongdoing. Two weeks ago came new allegations that congressmen (who were on tax-payer funded junkets) wrote bad checks at U.S. embassies around the world and that some congressmen used the House post office to launder money, converting it from public funds for office expense into personal pocket change.

While this is going on in the nation's most expensive theme park, federal spending and the federal deficit keep exploding. The tax bills of Americans rise as their personal incomes drop.

Foley surveys the wreckage of his domain and concludes that Americans are a little upset right now, but that there is nothing seriously wrong and things will settle down before the November elections.

If his perception is distorted, Foley has an excuse: He suffers from an advanced case of SIRI. He was first elected to the House in 1964 and served as a Senate staff aide for three years before that.

It isn't known exactly how long it takes for SIRI to invade the system of ordinary Americans elected to Congress. However, it has been conclusively shown that SIRI has been constantly linked to those involved in the check-kiting scandal. After all, Democrats and Republicans, liberals and conservatives, rural representatives and big-city pols are all caught up in the scandal. Among the 19 current members identified as the worst abusers of the House bank, the average seniority is 16.5 years. No one on the list has fewer than 10 years of seniority.

To cure the illness, Foley wants to hire an administrator. Such a person would be just one more employee hired and controlled by those with seniority. Clearly the only cure for SIRI is to remove those affected from Congress. If the United States would operate on Seniority-Induced Reality Immunity with term limitation, a number of other ills would undoubtedly be cured as well.

HOT POTATO

Americans talk mad, vote moderate

David Duke made his exit from the presidential race Wednesday, four and half months after he entered it but early enough to get out the door ahead of Patrick Buchanan and Jerry Brown, two other candidates who bet wrong about a resentful public's willingness to consider extreme or unconventional alternatives in this year's election. Unlike Duke, Buchanan and Brown have managed to attract a noteworthy number of votes and plenty of attention from the news media, but like him, they have ended up as losers.

The mood of the country lately is alleged to be ominously reminiscent of Paris in 1789, with discontent bubbling, authority teetering and guillotines being oiled for heavy use. But if the citizenry has been sorely provoked by one irritant after another, from the sluggish economy to the House bank scandal, it hasn't been radicalized. The talk may be mad, but the votes have been moderate.

That's been an unpleasant surprise to those who wanted to lead the assault on the Bastille. Hard as it is to believe now, Duke's pathetic performance in the Republican primaries was not taken for granted at the beginning. It was just last November that he got 39 percent of the vote (and a majority among whites) in Louisiana's gubernatorial election.

When he announced for president, some experts thought his populist, anti-establishment, race-baiting themes could enable him to embarrass George Bush in the South - and maybe even, as a third-party candidate in the fall, cost the GOP a few Southern states. Instead, Duke found out he had no support outside Louisiana or inside: He was virtually invisible in most of the primary returns and he got only nine percent of the vote in his home state.

Stephen Chapman

Buchanan and Brown have done better, but not enough to make any difference. Despite the flurry of publicity he got after capturing 37 percent of the vote in New Hampshire, and despite the alarms he set off in the White House, Buchanan's campaign never had any prospect of becoming more than a nasty nuisance. Running against an inept incumbent in an anti-incumbent year, he has yet to win a primary - and, for that matter, has yet to match his showing in New Hampshire.

Brown has managed to win here and there, but the list of victories is a lot shorter than the list of defeats. And even where he managed to out-poll his rivals, he couldn't persuade a majority of the voters.

In Connecticut, his most significant triumph, he got just 37 percent against one opponent (Paul Tsongas) who had already pulled out of the race and another (Bill Clinton) who had done everything he could think of to self-destruct. In New York, Brown managed the trick feat of losing to a non-candidate, getting 26 percent to Tsongas' 29.

Spurning those candidates with the most incendiary views, voters embraced those who posed the smallest threat to the status quo. The presidential campaign has resembled a Fourth of July parade, with lots of noise on the fringes but all the meaningful action right in the middle.

The result is like a fight between cats that have been neutered and declawed. George Bush is about as far from being a conservative as a Republican president can be, and Bill Clinton is about as far from being a liberal as a Democratic standard-bearer can be, and each is probably ideologically closer to the other than to the militant factions of his own party.

Both are campaigning on a promise to bring about change, but voters don't really believe either offers the faintest hope (or risk) of any drastic reforms. Both have gotten where they are by practicing compromise and avoiding controversy. Both essentially promise to keep things as they are, only a lot better.

The newest savior answering the call of the electorate is Ross Perot, who talks as though he plans to dismantle Washington with high explosives but whose specific positions are as tame as Cream of Wheat. If Perot is truly ready to squander $100 million of his own money to run for president, he may get enough votes (say, 5 or 10 percent) to affect the outcome. But, except in the matter of personality and style, he's probably not going to offer any genuine alternative to the other candidates. Nor is he going to keep a centrist, establishment politician from being the next president.

Economic turmoil is supposed to polarize the citizenry, but this time voters have largely sought refuge in the safe center. That's bad news for any candidate who imagines that the American people are as fed up as they say they are.

Today in history

By The Associated Press.

Today is Tuesday, April 28, the 119th day of 1992. There are 247 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: Fifty years ago, on April 28, 1942, pollster George Gallup reported that most Americans preferred to call the ongoing global conflict "World War II" or "The Second World War." (Other suggestions had included "War of World Freedom," "War of Liberty," or President Franklin D. Roosevelt's own preference, the "Survival War.")

On this date: In 1758, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, was born in Westmoreland County, Va.

In 1789, there was a mutiny on the Bounty as the crew of the British ship set Capt. William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific.

In 1945, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress were captured and executed by Italian partisans.

Living in two different worlds

I am thinking of going into politics. I want to become a high-ranking member of the White House staff.

I guess I'm best suited for vice president since there would be very little work to do.

You take our current vice president, Dan Quayle. He goes to fund raisers and plays golf. Nice work if you can get it.

I could go to fund raisers, and I love golf.

The reason I want to become a high-ranking White House official like Dan Quayle is I want to have a military aircraft available to me whenever I want to use it.

I have to fly a lot, and it's a real hassle out there with everybody else and his Uncle John flying with me.

Planes are crowded, planes are late, and, believe it or not, there are times Delta isn't ready when I am.

But if I had military aircraft standing by, I wouldn't have to deal with any of that.

I wouldn't even have to fight with other passengers to get my choice of magazines on commercial flights.

All this came to me when I read about President Bush defending his vice president's use of military aircraft.

"No, he has not," said the president when asked if the vice president had done anything wrong by using military aircraft to go to fund raisers and play golf.

I also read where a White House spokesman said the vice president also had Air Force Two at his disposal and, as the article said, "is entitled to recreation the same as anyone else."

That's true, except for the "same as anyone" part.

I'm entitled to my recreation, but I still have to fly commercial. What would even things out is if I also could get on the horn and say, "Hey, guys, crank up Air Force Two! I'm ready for some heavy duty recreation."

Of course other White Housers like John Sununu and James Baker were also charged with having their own private airplane. Sununu lost his job because of it and then took Pat Buchanan's old job on CNN's "Crossfire." Politics do make strange bedfellows.

But what else it makes is office holders who forget about the real world and what it's like living in it.

All of us like an occasional perk ourselves once in a while, but we still have to live in the real world.

Not only do we have to fly commercial, we also have to make sure there's money in our bank accounts when we write a check. We also have to go out and buy groceries and see that price scanner that stunned President Bush when he went into a supermarket apparently for the first time since he left Yale.

The problem with office holders getting a lot of perks is it goes to their heads and they become little kings and queens and forget about the rest of us. How can somebody with a huge jet awaiting his whim to go play golf relate to somebody who doesn't have a job or even a home.

How can somebody who has kited hundreds of checks over the years, just because nobody would dare suggest he was doing something wrong, understand having a house full of children and no health insurance because it's gotten too expensive.

I may be on to something here, folks. The reason we have a Congress and a White House that seems never able to deal with real problems of real people is they live in one world and we live in another.

Theirs is perks and planes. Ours is work and strains.

I haven't figured out exactly how I'm going to become vice president and enjoy all the trappings, but I'm working on it.

In the meantime, it's tax season again. Pay up. Your money might fly Dan Quayle on his next golf trip.

Sexcapades by politicians do matter

Warning: The following is yet another column about politicians and sex. If you absolutely cannot bear to read one more word about the issue, please go on to the next item.

However, this column will not mention any names, point any fingers or bypass the candidates' stands on issues in favor of what some journalists think you are more interested in and more likely to read about, namely naming names and pointing fingers. (Others might want to proceed precisely for that reason.)

What this column will do is attempt to answer a couple of questions a lot of you have been asking: Why is the media so interested in a politician's extra-marital affairs? And when, a la Hillary Clinton, is the media gonna get off a certain politician's back and onto some of his colleagues?

(Forgive me, men, for using only the masculine pronoun here. I would use my standard "his or her," so help me, if I'd ever heard a female politician's sexual misadventures mentioned. So far, I haven't. But take heart. I'm sure as more women are elected to public office, full equality is fast on the way.)

The last of many discussions I've had on the former question was just yesterday when a male school superintendent, a fine man who I admire, seemed incredulous that I should care about a candidate's sexcapades. "All I care about is what he stands for and what he can get done," the superintendent told me. "A wise man once said all great men are flawed - look at our other presidents."

I first demanded the superintendent apologize to Jimmy Carter's entire Sunday school class. Next I assured him I'm not a Puritan who sits home nights cross-stitching red A's for suit lapels. Good people sometimes commit adultery for a variety of reasons that stem, purely and simply, from being human. Egomaniacal womaffling, on the other hand, is as much an abuse of power and as indicative of flawed character as someone who can't leave a race track until he's lost every penny he has. It's the kind of womanizing John F. Kennedy did, the power trip that nudges a leader toward foolhardy tasks.

And in some cases, it is also symbolic of a leader's basic attitude toward women. I have read about and known personally women reporters and professionals working in government who, in the course of just trying to do their jobs, have been propositioned by male politicians.

I told the school superintendent of a woman reporter I know who was "hit on" by a prominent politician, and I tried to put it in a context he would understand:

"What would you think of a candidate who would do that to one of those bright women students you've worked so hard to educate? What kind of representation do you think he would give all those other women students you worked so hard for?"

Now, for question number two, one that was put to me most recently at a partisan gathering by an irate woman who got right in my face and demanded, "When are you people in the media going to get off (a certain unnamed politician's) case and talk about the affairs (another unnamed politician) has had?"

"What (the second politician) is doing has never been my beat," I told her wearily. "All I know is that if in the case of doing my job I learn information I feel compelled to follow up on, I will, and you'll be sure if a candidate propositions me you'll read about it now and not 20 years later in my memoirs."

What we owe you is the whole portrait of a candidate as best we can determine it, because the person you elect will enact policy that will affect your life.

Dogs who frighten child keep sister-in-law at bay

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law — I'll call her Evy — has two dogs, a poodle and a Lhasa apso. I have an 18-month-old son, "Timmy," who is Evy's godson.

When I visited Evy with Timmy, her dogs yelped, barked and jumped up on my son, frightening him. The last time we were there, the poodle came very close to biting Timmy on the cheek. The child became hysterical. I told Evy I would not visit her again unless she secured her dogs behind a barrier, and if she wanted to visit me, she would be welcome — without her dogs.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

It's been two months and neither one of us has budged. I'm afraid the longer this situation continues, the more hard feelings it will cause in the family. I hope with your wisdom you can resolve this matter.

UNPLEASANT SITUATION

DEAR UNPLEASANT: The "wisdom" you attribute to me will not resolve this stalemate. You gave Evy an ultimatum: Either secure the livestock, or I'm not crossing your threshold with your beloved godson.

To date, Evy has shown no signs of missing you. Were your demands unreasonable? Absolutely not. Is Evy being unreasonable? Absolutely.

If you miss her, and want to avoid a family feud, visit her with Timmy and carry a water pistol (filled with water); if her pooches come near your baby, let 'em have it with both barrels.

DEAR ABBY: What is so fascinating about sex? My husband told me the facts of life on our wedding night. I never asked any questions before I was married because I didn't know there was anything to ask.

I learned about abortion, homosexuality and condoms only after they became media stars. I still don't understand many sex-related phrases. I find people coupling a laughable image — not romantic.

Children's TV special on sex and growing up

NEW YORK (AP) — "What Kids Want to Know About Sex and Growing Up" is a one-hour special by the Children's Television Workshop that will air May 13 on Public Broadcasting Service stations.

The Children's Television Workshop says more than 700 parents and children from a variety of religious, socioeconomic and geographic backgrounds participated in various phases of the program's year-long development.

CTW says the special offers straightforward information about puberty, sexuality and reproduction, including question and answer sessions between children and sex educators Dr. Robert Selverstone and Rhonda Wise. The program is designed for children 8 to 12 years of age.

After five years of pain, messiness and vaginal infections, I said "no more" and abstained for 30 years. Yet I had a beautiful marriage.

As a recent widow, tall, blonde and pretty, but preferring the morals, dress and lifestyle of the '30s, '40s and '50s, I would like to date again. But are there any men out there who still abide by the old rules and treat women like ladies? In other words, a kiss goodnight, and nothing more until marriage?

LESS IS MORE IN OHIO

DEAR LESS: There are men who treat women with respect and do not demand sexual favors in return for their company. But don't expect to find another man who would stay married to a woman who regards marital relations as painful, messy and the cause of vaginal infections. Your husband was one in a million.

'Sweetheart swindler' on trial in Dallas claims to be nice guy

DALLAS (AP) — Jury selection began yesterday in the federal trial of the so-called Sweetheart Swindler, with two love-lorn women heading the lineup of witnesses expected to testify against him.

Alfred Barakett faces federal fraud and forgery charges in U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer's court. Prosecutors accuse Barakett in a three-decade scheme of bilking hundreds of lonely women.

Barakett is wanted in nine states. But the 55-year-old Canadian native insisted last week he's a nice guy.

"I'm not poison. Anybody who met me would like me," he said by telephone from the Mansfield Jail. "I'm anxious and ready for the trial to start."

A nine-count indictment accuses Barakett of bilking about $40,000 from two Dallas County girlfriends during courtships in 1985 and 1990. If convicted on all counts, he faces 120 years in prison.

Investigators contend the former shirtmaker struck up intense relationships with women, but abandoned quick marriage promises after he stole their checkbooks. They say Barakett assumed numerous aliases and may have built a six-figure bankroll with the scheme.

"It's terrible what a man can do to a woman," said ex-wife Sonia Courroy of Montreal. "I hope justice is served."

"I've done nothing wrong," Barakett said.

Courroy had dated Barakett three months before marrying him in 1966.

"He was very sweet and nice to me and very sexy with me, always giving me hugs and kisses," she said. "I didn't really love him, but I liked him."

During their Las Vegas honeymoon, Courroy said, Barakett mistreated her and gambled away tens of thousands of dollars in her savings.

The scheme built from there, investigators said.

They describe Barakett as a Romeo who posed as a dapper salesman and preyed upon dating services and personal ads.

Barakett would tell each true love he was new in town, investigators say, and then would ask her to deposit checks that apparently were stolen during previous courtships and forged.

Less than 24 hours after the checks were cashed, he skipped town and started over, they said.

Another Warrior hero

By The Associated Press

A team led by Chris Mullin and Tim Hardaway doesn't need another hero. Or does it? Regardless, the Golden State Warriors will be happy to get another top-notch performance from Mario Elie, a 6-foot-5 guard who will start Tuesday night's pivotal NBA playoff game at Seattle.

The Warriors and SuperSonics are tied 1-1 in their best-of-5 Western Conference series, in part because of Elie. He started the second half of Saturday's game at Oakland with Golden State trailing 60-54, and scored 17 points in a 115-101 victory.

Coach Don Nelson is starting Elie in place of Rod Higgins, who missed most of the regular season with a thumb injury and is playing with a cast.

In Game 2, Elie made 7 of 10 shots and grabbed seven rebounds as the Warriors rallied to avoid a must-win predicament for the remainder of the series.

"It's nothing against Higgy, but we just felt it was the right thing to do," Nelson said of the lineup change. "We're going to do that and we'll sub from there."

Ironically, Elie's success came against the man he can't thank enough — Seattle coach George Karl.

"George is the reason I'm in the NBA right now," said Elie, who played under Karl last season with Albany in the Continental Basketball Association, averaging 24.4 points for the 50-6 Patrons.

Karl also appreciates Elie. "He's one of the best ... I've ever coached," Karl said.

The Golden State-Seattle winner will be in command as will the victor when the New York Knicks visit the Detroit Pistons in Game 3 of their Eastern Conference matchup.

Elsewhere Tuesday night, a pair of home teams — the New Jersey Nets and the Los Angeles Clippers — will be swept out of the playoffs unless they win. New Jersey trails the Cleveland Cavaliers 2-0 in the Eastern Conference, while the Clippers have the same deficit against the Utah Jazz.

The other series resume Wednesday, with Chicago at Miami, Phoenix at San Antonio and Portland at the Los Angeles Lakers. Chicago, Phoenix and Portland all enjoy 2-0 leads and can close out their respective series with another victory.

In Monday night's only game, the Boston Celtics became the first team to advance to the second round with a 102-98 victory that gave them a sweep of the Indiana Pacers. Reggie Lewis had 28 of his 32 points in the first half for the Celtics, who led by 18 points in the third quarter, but trailed 95-94 with two minutes to play.

Technology could win The Derby

(AP Laserphoto)

Derby hopeful Technology, with exercise rider Tony Meade, comes off the Churchill Downs track after his morning workout Monday.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Sonny Hine points out that Technology already has won two derbies. Now, he'd like to win the Derby.

Technology will be one of the favorites Saturday in a Kentucky Derby that Hine says has attracted "a mystery field."

"They're coming in from everywhere," the trainer said.

Technology is coming in off victories in the Florida Derby on March 14 and the Tropical Park Derby on April 11. In the Florida Derby, Technology beat three other 3-year-old colts that are expected to be in this Derby — Pistols and Roses, My Luck Runs North and Dance Floor, who is owned by rap singer Hammer and his family.

"Hammer's a great guy. I invited him over to my barn after the Florida Derby. I have party there every year," Hine said. "He told me that he'd seen enough of me. He said, 'I'll see you at Churchill Downs.'"

Based on his two previous derby victories, Technology could go off as the second or third favorite on Saturday. The favorite's role almost certainly will belong to the French-based colt, Arazi.

Arazi, winner of the Breeders' Cup Juvenile last Nov. 2 at Churchill Downs in his only previous U.S. start, arrived from Paris on Sunday and spent Monday at the quarantine barn.

"I really like reading about Arazi, but how much can you write?" Hine asked. "It's great for racing to have a horse like that."

Despite the cudors, Hine remains skeptical of the superstar status attached to Arazi.

"Last year, he never changed leads," Hine said. "And, he ran on Bute and Lasix. That's kind of strange. Why Lasix? They don't use Lasix in Europe, supposedly. Was he bleeding then?"

Arazi shipped in with two other European colts that are expected to enter the Derby, as well — Dr Devious and Thyer.

Dr Devious, trained by Hall of Famer Ron McAnally, is Irish-bred and has never raced outside England. Dr Devious was presented to Sydney Craig as a $2.5 million birthday present in March by his wife, Jenny, who owns a chain of weight-loss centers.

Thyer is Kentucky-bred but based in England and owned by Sheik Maktoum al Maktoum of Dubai, brother of Sheik Mohammed al Maktoum, who bought 50 percent ownership of Arazi from Allen Paulson last year for $9 million.

"How can you tell what these European horses can do?" Hine said. "They come from different places, their times are deceiving, and the conditions over there are different."

The Derby is expected to attract at least 19 entries, one short of the maximum, when post positions are drawn Thursday. It would be the largest field since 20 were entered in 1984.

"The Kentucky Derby has become an event, and if they're in any position to be able to compete, people do it," said Neil Drysdale, trainer of A.P. Indy, one of two Derby horses to work on Monday.

Run-and-shoot stoppers are just what the Cowboys ordered

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt knows what it's like to have Christmas in April. He celebrated one on NFL draft day.

"We've got a better chance on defense next year with the four guys we got," he said. "We can play the run and now we can arm ourselves against the run-and-shoot. What we made some of our guys do last year wasn't fair."

The Dallas Cowboys sought run-and-shoot stoppers in the NFL draft and believe they got them.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson got coveted cornerback Kevin Smith of Texas A&M University as the 13th overall pick, selected active middle linebacker Robert Jones of East Carolina as the 24th selection, took hard-hitting and swift strong safety Darren Woodson of Arizona State as the 36th selection, and drafted tough defensive back Clayton Holmes of tiny Carson-Newman College as the second pick in the third round.

"We've got a chance now against the run-and-shoot teams," Wannstedt said. "We can put in four cornerbacks if we want to. This is the first time we've addressed our secondary needs."

Smith was the leading interceptor in Southwest Conference history.

"He makes big plays," Wannstedt said.

The Cowboys, who lost linebackers Jack Del Rio and Darrick Brownlow to Plan B, went after Jones whom Wannstedt said "Can run with anybody we got. He's tremendous from sideline to sideline."

Owner Jerry Jones came to financial agreement with picks through the first three rounds. No money terms were announced.

Smith and Jones both got contracts for four years.

The Cowboys, blown out 38-6 by the run-and-shoot Detroit Lions in the NFL playoffs, moved to shore up a defense that had become vulnerable to passing teams.

"We had those two players identified a longtime ago as ones we would like to be Cowboys," Johnson said. "We had a few nervous moments. We traded down but traded back up because we were worried San Francisco might take Kevin."

"Smith is a talented cover cornerback. He can help us in our nickel packages and is a good punt returner."

Johnson said a lot of work went into studying Jones.

"We followed Kevin at Texas A&M and knew what he could do but we probably studied Jones more than any player in the entire draft," Johnson said. "We looked at him backward and forward. He's a middle linebacker who can move and the system he played was similar to ours."

Johnson also knew Jones through Bob Slowik, now an assistant for Dallas who was linebacker coach at East Carolina.

"He'll give Dallas dimension of pursuit from sideline to sideline that probably hasn't been there in a long time," Slowik said.

Smith, 5-11 and 173, said he felt he should have been drafted higher than Terrell Buckley of Florida State and Troy Vincent of Wisconsin who went fifth and seventh, respectively

"I feel I'm the best but Terrell can go to Green Bay and freeze if he wants to," Smith said. "I came to agreement with the Cowboys because money is not the issue. I can put $1 million in the bank and I'm 22 so that's not bad. I just want to show I can play."

"I can count the times I was beat in college on one hand. I don't know the NFL system and it will take time. That's why I wanted to be in training camp from the start."

Both players fit in the Cowboys concept of speed. Jones, 6-2 and 236 pounds, ran a 4.75 and Smith a 4.48 in the 40. Jones had a school record 561 tackles.

In the second round, the Cowboys got a swift strong safety in Woodson of Arizona State, who can run the 40 in 4.47 and added to its talented receiver corps by taking wide receiver Jimmy Smith of Jackson State.

The 6-1, 216-pound Woodson played outside linebacker for the Sun Devils but will shift to strong safety with the Cowboys.

The Cowboys got an unexpected bonus on Saturday with defensive end Chad Hennings, the 1987 Outland Trophy award winner from the Air Force, said he will be able to get a waiver from the service and can play during the 1992 season. Dallas drafted him in 1988.

Dallas got two huge offensive linemen, James Brown of Virginia State and Tom Myslinski of Tennessee, and wide receiver Jimmy Smith of Jackson State to help on the other side of the ball.

Titles ride on upcoming rodeos

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Managing Editor

CANYON — Three rodeos remain in the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association (TSHSRA) schedule before finals and key races for championship honors tightened Saturday at the rodeo hosted by the Canyon Club.

Jessica Dean, riding with the Wheeler Club, sparked in two events at the rodeo held at the Randall County Sheriff's Posse Arena.

Dean captured the rodeo's all-around-girl title with a spectacular 2,924-second first-place score in breakaway roping, and a fine 11,980-second time good enough for second place in goat tying. Dean's 15 total points boosts her to 75 points and second place in season standings in the rookie girl competition.

Sonya Coy, who also competes with the Wheeler Club, leads the rookie race with 136 points. She picked up 11 points Saturday with a third in goat tying and a fourth in breakaway roping.

Marty McCloy of Gruver, the only cowboy to successfully ride in the saddle broncs Saturday, won all-around boy.

McCloy's 23-point total inched him closer to Spearman-Stinnett's Mark Eakin, who leads in the all-around boy season standings.

Perhaps the closest season-long contests exist in the girls' events.

Chasity Rickman, riding with the Adrian Club, holds a comfortable lead in the girls' all-around. Pushing to close the gap are Wheeler's Kimberly Cloud, Canadian's Shan Til Hext and Hub City's Shawna Davidson.

Rickman heads the field in goat tying and Tascosa's Amy Cunningham is running a close second followed by Coy in third.

Hext, with a first-place finish Saturday, jumped ahead of Rickman in barrel racing. Canadian's Kara Peirce sets in third.

In pole bending, Cloud has a 30-point lead over nearest rival Rickman. Hext is in third place.

Davidson, with 76 points in breakaway roping, holds a 30-point advantage over Canadian's Krista Krehbiel. Coy is a single point behind Krehbiel.

Randy McEntire of the Wheeler Club owns the season lead in ribbon roping and sets second in calf roping.

Jim Locke, riding with the Canadian Club, is in third place in the event.

Travis Goad, also with the Wheeler Club, took first place Saturday in team roping and finished second in ribbon roping with a 9,471 run. He also picked up fifth place in bulldogging.

Canadian's Clinton Born is dominating barebacks and Pampa's Chad McFall is second in saddle broncs behind Eakin.

In an extremely close contest in team roping, Canadian's Jered Norris and Locke are on top of the standings along with Ben Blue of Dumas. Locke and Norris rope as a team.

Rodeo secretary was Sherry Sims. Bill Clymer announced the rodeo and Doug Munsel saved bull riders.

Stock contractor was McCloy Rodeo Co. of Morse.

Contestants travel to Gruver Saturday and Sunday for performances scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. each day. The Tri-State finals rodeo is set for June 4-6 at the Range Riders Rodeo Arena in Amarillo.

In college rodeo action, Panhandle State University's Shane Goad, a sophomore from Briscoe and former TSHSRA competitor, won the team roping event April 18 at the Deke Latham Memorial Rodeo at PSU.

Pampa's Amy Cockrell, also a former TSHSRA star and currently riding with the Eastern New Mexico University rodeo team, took third in the breakaway roping event at the recent Hardin-Simmons University intercollegiate rodeo at Abilene.

Following are results of the TSHSRA rodeo held at Canyon:

All-around boy: Marty McCloy, Gruver, 23 points.
All-around girl: Jessica Dean, Wheeler, 15 points.

Penguins keep championship hopes alive

By JOHN KREISER
AP Sports Writer

Mario Lemieux turned from scorer to checker, enabling the Pittsburgh Penguins to avoid turning into ex-Stanley Cup champions.

Teams that hold the NHL's scoring champion to one assist usually beat the Penguins. But though Lemieux was nearly invisible on the scoresheet, his play in his own end was a key Monday night as the Penguins extended their reign as champions for at least two more days by beating the Washington Capitals 5-2.

"When you're not skating as well as you want to, you have to do different things to help the team," Lemieux said after the Penguins pulled within 3-2 in their best-of-7 Patrick Division semifinal series. "That's what I did tonight. My legs weren't there, so I tried to compensate by playing good defense. Some nights, you have to do that."

What the Penguins did best was check — they limited Washington to just 23 shots, none by Dino Ciccarelli, who had four goals in Game 4.

"Our game plan was to play tight defense on Dino and we did not want to take any stupid penalties," Pittsburgh's Kevin Stevens said. "He's not going to get two or four goals every night. It's not humanly possible."

Lemieux's only assist was a big one — he set up Larry Murphy's go-ahead goal at 17:32 of the second period. Jaromir Jagr and Bob Errey added third-period goals to enable the Penguins to take the series back to Pittsburgh.

In Monday's other games, the New York Rangers took a 3-2 lead in the other Patrick Division series by outlasting New Jersey 8-5. In the Adams Division, Montreal moved a game ahead of Hartford with a 7-4 victory and Buffalo stayed alive with a 2-0 victory at Boston. Game 6 in the four series is Wednesday night, with the home teams needing a victory to stay alive.

British MP Betty Boothroyd gestures during her speech to fellow members at the House of Commons in London Monday before they elected her the first woman Speaker.

Laborite breaks tradition

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The House of Commons broke a 700-year tradition Monday, electing Betty Boothroyd, a Labor Party lawmaker and former chorus girl, to wear the full wig and black robes of the Speaker of the House.

Miss Boothroyd, 62, the first woman Speaker, celebrated the moment by going right to work, crying out for "Order, Order!" as lawmakers in the traditionally turbulent and lively Commons clamored to offer congratulations.

Miss Boothroyd was elected when the Commons sat for the first time since the Conservative Party won a fourth consecutive victory in national elections April 9. Its majority was slashed from 88 to 21.

In a 372-238 vote Miss Boothroyd defeated the former Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Brooke, a Conservative lawmaker. She is the first Speaker from outside the governing party since World War II.

She had total backing from Labor and picked up key support from about 70 Conservative rank-and-file lawmakers who liked her style as a deputy speaker in the previous Parliament and the idea of having a woman and a Laborite, despite the party's defeat.

Miss Boothroyd, who mixes humor with the no-nonsense attitude familiar in her native Yorkshire, urged lawmakers to vote for her on merit.

"While having a competent woman as Speaker may be a good thing, having a bad woman Speaker would be disastrous," she said. "It would be a tragedy for this House ... it would be bad for the cause of women everywhere."

Then, in a reference to her days 40 years ago as one of the Tiller Girls, a nationally famous lineup of high-kicking dancers at London's Palladium, she joked, "It is true that in the past I may have been granted physical agility, but my carriage isn't all that majestic now."

Her election to the 65,000-pound ($115,000) job caused uncertainty over dress. The powerful post dates back to 1258, and the uniform has not changed much since then: full wig, black robes, breeches, tight stockings.

She'll wear the wig and robes, officials said. The rest of her attire, for the moment, is unclear.

Some published reports said Miss Boothroyd, one of 60 women in the 651-member Commons, would wear culottes instead of breeches.

"It seems to me why you have made history is relevant," said Prime Minister John Major. "You have become our Speaker-elect because the House trusts you."

Major did not vote in the contest for the strictly impartial post. But published reports said he wanted Brooke.

Miss Boothroyd, on Labor's right-wing, comes from a working class family.

She joined the party at 16 and started out as a secretary in a Labor office. She was elected to the Commons in 1973 for the district of West Bromwich West.

Corruption plagues Nigeria

By MICHELLE FAUL
Associated Press Writer

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Market vendor Beatrice Risikatu says she pays bribes to have a stall in the market, bribes to headmasters to get kids into schools, and bribes to airport officials to get on a plane.

An entire nation has become accustomed to official graft because it is impossible to survive without bribes, said Baba-Gana Kingibe, chairman of one of two parties permitted to run candidates in elections returning Nigeria to civilian rule.

"Nowhere is there no corruption," he said, but in Nigeria "every government contract has a built-in 10 or 20 percent bribe which the contractor adds on to the price and the corrupt official passes on to the people."

Mrs. Risikatu said no one trusts government officials, elected or otherwise. "If someone wants to be voted in, you know it is because they want to eat the government money and cheat us people," she said.

Bola King describes voting in Nigeria as "cash-and-carry elections," with victories going to candidates with the most money to buy votes.

Nigerians say thousands of fictitious workers are on government payrolls and actual employees often may show up but do no real work.

No one expects improvement under civilian government, which military leaders have promised will be in place by fall in this nation of 88.5 million, Africa's most populous.

"Until a few months ago, I believed the military should stay because there may be more corruption and mismanagement but it was more ordered, limited," said businessman John Adeleke. "Now, I'm in a quandary. It appears what we thought was order was cleverly disguised disorder."

The president, Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, promised to end corruption when he seized power in August 1985. Nigerian governments regularly jail officials of ousted administrations for corruption, but rarely prosecute their own.

Adeleke noted that the only high-ranking official charged under Babangida, dismissed Petroleum Minister Tam David-West, was brought before a tribunal only after he criticized the government.

David-West was convicted of using his office to enrich himself and jailed for a year until a special appeals tribunal freed him for lack of evidence.

Corruption is a common topic in this resource-rich but impoverished nation. But lawyer Gani Fawehinmi is doing more than talking — he's taking the government to court to try to prove the charge.

He brought three cases to court this month. The latest, against first lady Maryam Babangida, asks the High Court to stop her from spending government money illegally.

Last week, Fawehinmi asked the same court to order President Babangida, three senior government officials and the state-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. to account for at least $2 billion in extra oil revenue earned during the Persian Gulf war.

Fawehinmi says Nigerians were not aware the government made the extra money until The Financial Times of London reported that Nigeria in the last year made $5 billion-plus more than envisaged from oil during the gulf war.

The Financial Times reporter was deported after his article ran.

Babangida's government said it earned only an extra $2 billion. Fawehinmi said the money has not been accounted for, "and that's why I've gone to court."

The government says Fawehinmi is a troublemaker. It has not responded to his charges and has not yet answered his latest allegations in court.

Hang-on-the-wall TVs are coming, but not for awhile

HIMEJI, Japan (AP) — "Particles," laments Hidenori Akiyoshi, his head hanging. "They're our biggest problem. ... When a machine is operating, it's always creating dust."

Akiyoshi's factory, built by IBM and Toshiba, makes hi-tech color display screens that go into laptop computers and someday may be used for flat televisions that hang on a wall like a Picasso.

Someday, that is, if Akiyoshi and other engineers can overcome some of the most daunting production problems in electronics today.

Despite a commanding lead and billions of dollars in investments, Japanese companies are finding that the flat screens — called active-matrix liquid-crystal displays — are harder to make than expected.

Even a microscopic speck of dust generated by the factory's gleaming machines can render one of the $2,250 10-inch-color screens useless, Akiyoshi says.

Whether his company, Display Technologies Inc., or other manufacturers solve the production problems will determine who controls the market, which could become a gold mine because of flat screens' application to new technologies such as high-definition television.

The active-matrix color screens, only about an inch thick, are technically similar to simple LCDs used in digital watches or pocket calculators.

But they have tiny transistors etched behind each colored picture dot — about 1 million of them per 10-inch screen — which give the display a higher contrast and sharper picture similar to a standard television picture tube.

That makes manufacturing the screens much harder, and the complexity grows quickly with size. Some Japanese companies have brought down prices of smaller screens far enough to use them in pocket color TVs.

But production of larger screens for use in televisions or laptop computers is still a "black art," according to officials at Sharp, the consumer electronics giant.

"It's a very difficult process. Manufacturing technology hasn't solidified yet," says Yutaka Wada, Sharp's senior executive director for international business.

Only 8 percent of the 10-inch screens made at Display Technologies in the first month of production last September passed inspection.

Yields now are about 40 percent, which means six out of every 10 screens must still be thrown away.

"People really do pre-arrange their own funeral!"

"Today, I asked our funeral director if people ever pre-arrange a funeral service. He told me that they do... as a demonstration of love and consideration for others."

"Pre-arrangement could protect our family from having to make decisions at a time when decisions could be confusing and difficult."

"You know, this is an opportunity to involve our family in the decisions. Then, they will know our preferences and desires, too."

We invite you to learn more about the thoughtful advantages of pre-planning and funding the funeral service. Our pre-arrangement literature will be helpful to you, as well as those close to you. In quiet privacy we shall be pleased to provide informed counsel and attentive answers to your questions concerning pre-arrangement.
