Marian Stroup Keeper of the arts

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

Pragmatic Ray McReynolds, a cow trader from Canyon married a band director named Jewel and from that union Marian Stroup was born.

Stroup, whose forebears were Panhandle settlers, has made her home in Pampa for better than 30 years. She is particularly well known in the community for two facets of her life - as a patron of the arts and business woman.

Because of her efforts on behalf of the visual and performing arts in the Panhandle she was honored with the Golden Nail Distinguished Volunteer Award in April.

Stroup was selected from about 160 nominees. The awards are set up to encourage and honor those who financially and in-kind support the arts in the Panhandle. The Golden Nail winners are chosen by an anonymous jury appointed by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce arts committee.

"I felt very honored and very surprised. When there are 165 - 170 entities nominated, you feel honored to be nominated," she said.

Indeed the list of volunteer work is impressive - for eight years, Stroup served on the Golden Nail committee. She is president for the second time of the Pampa Fine Arts Association and is president-elect of BRAVO!, the support group of the Amarillo Opera. Stroup has served on boards for Pampa Area Art League, Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art and Amarillo Arts Center.

Stroup said that from her mother she developed an appreciation for the arts which prompted an interest in working in the field.

"Mother, of course, started teaching me piano when I was five... I took voice lessons, elocution lessons as they called it back then. I played the E-flat alto saxophone," she said.

"It gives me a sense of personal fulfillment. I enjoy the arts. I've sometimes thought I had an advantage because it was part of my learning years. 'We do not live by bread alone...' I like being surrounded by beauty. I like music, I like being surrounded by beautiful sculptures, paintings. I like beautiful performers," Stroup explained of the pleasure she receives from the arts.

She has a soft spot in her heart for opera because it requires that two skills - music and drama - meld together for a beautiful production.

"I probably like the musical events most. I'm sure that's by virtue of my background. I love the piano and other musical instruments," she said. As a child, Stroup played duets and other numbers arranged for two and four pianos. Stroup said that she still plays the piano for her own pleasure and relaxation.

As a child, she sang when she had the opportunity in church and school choirs and madrigal groups.

Her father, she described as the complete opposite of her mother. "He was a pragmatic businessman. A cattleman and a cow trader."

"He let me at a very early age begin to help him in his office," Stroup explained. She typed, used the adding machine, and learned to use grain elevator scales during harvest.

"I've always thought that was why my interests were so varied. My parents were so different and they gave me the opportunity to share their interests," Stroup explained.

In her business life, she is co-owner with her husband, Jack Stroup, of E.E. Ethridge Claim Service. She began to work there in 1956 or 1957, she said.

"When I went to work there I knew I had found my niche. It is fast moving. Every file is different. I asked questions, I studied," Stroup said. "Mr. Ethridge was kind enough to allow me to learn and in the early sixties, I was allowed to buy a little partnership in the business."

In 1966, Stroup and then co-worker Jack Stroup bought Ethridge's interest following his death. They married in 1971.

Other family members have joined in the business. Her daughter Teri Keeling of Canyon, works part time in the Amarillo office. Son-in-law Jim Keeling manages the Plainview office. Stroup's son, Steve Heare, manages the Borger office.

When asked about what it is like to work with family members, she replied, "You try to forget you're family when you walk in the front door of the office."

Priorities for the coming year center around her leadership position with BRAVO!. Gene Murray, who retired from Canyon Independent School District and plays the part of Uncle Henry in "Texas", has written a full length opera, "The Legend of Columbus", scheduled to premiere in Palo Duro Canyon on Aug. 2. BRAVO! will promote the performance.

"Working as I do, I can't do everything. I have to pick and choose. I've always been fortunate I don't require much sleep," Stroup said. "As a result, I've always felt that was a blessing so I can do a lot of different things."

She plays with her grandchildren, fishes with her husband, tickles the ivories and encourages her plants. Her life is balanced between long hours at work and pleasure with her family.

"I've enjoyed every phase of my life. I had a good life with my children's dad and we raised two wonderful kids. I've enjoyed my career," Stroup said.

President plans $150 million forest conservation program

Critics say Bush walking election-year tightrope

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush, trying to walk an election-year tightrope as he prepares for the Earth Summit in Brazil, is railing against environmental extremism in one breath and offering money for trees in the next.

In a major environmental speech today, Bush planned to announce a $150 million increase in U.S. aid to help developing countries conserve their forests. That more than doubles the $120 million in bilateral forestry assistance in Bush's 1993 budget, said an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Bush also is calling on other developed nations to join the effort and double the $1.35 billion total now spent on forestry protection worldwide. He will take that proposal to Rio de Janeiro when he attends the Earth Summit with some 160 other heads of state, officials said.

Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Reilly, without discussing specific details of the initiative, said Sunday it was a "major new thrust to increase protection of forests." The president's speech today at Goddard Space Flight Center in suburban Maryland is seen as an effort to blunt criticism the United States has received for watering down an Earth Summit agreement on global warming.

Meanwhile, the president also is keeping a political eye on constituencies that are economically affected by environmental regulation.

He told a California agricultural audience Saturday that he only decided to attend the environmental conference in Brazil after beating back what he considered an overly restrictive and scientifically unsupported global warming pact the Europeans were pushing.

He said he would not allow "the extremes in the environmental movement to shut down the United States on science that may not be as perfected as we in the United States could have it."

The administration also has announced he will not sign a biodiversity treaty to preserve the world's plants, animals and natural resources at the Earth Summit. Officials said U.S. patents on biological inventions would not be protected, and questioned how money would be directed to developing countries to enact the treaty.

In today's speech, a draft of which was obtained by The Associated Press, Bush depicts the United States as a world leader on the environment and skips the tough rhetoric against extremists.

He also was announcing a "Technology Cooperation Corps" of U.S. business people who would work with the government to help other countries obtain environmentally sound technology; and a program to share U.S. data on global warming with other governments, researchers and business.

One of his foremost environmental critics, Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., on Sunday accused Bush of a shortsightedness on the environment.

"Unfortunately, in the treaties that have been designed for signature at Rio, President Bush prevented the world from reaching some meaningful commitments that would get this process off to a good start," Gore said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"The task of saving the earth's environment is going to become the central organizing principle in the post-Cold War world," said Gore.

Instead of leading the movement, however, he said Bush "has abdicated that responsibility and instead is focusing on the short-term objections of those who want to hang on to outdated, polluting ways of the past."

Reilly defended the administration's record and said Bush is participating in a "historic process" that won't end with the Earth Summit that starts Wednesday.

"There's no question that we have made a commitment ... to move toward stabilization of greenhouse gases," said Reilly. "That is a moral obligation."

Watt an idea! A bulb that lasts 20 years

By RODD AUBREY
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Its developers are calling it the biggest breakthrough since Thomas Edison got a filament to glow without interruption: a light bulb that works by radio signals and lasts up to 20 years.

The new electronic bulb - which needs one-quarter of the energy that standard bulbs use - was to be introduced today at a meeting here of the Edison Electric Institute, an association of utility companies.

Its developers say the electronic bulb gives off as much light as an incandescent bulb and fades as it gets older, instead of going out. It will fit in most sockets. It can also be dimmed.

The drawback is the cost - $10 to $20 each when it reaches the market early next year, compared with about $2 for an ordinary 150-watt bulb.

"It's the first major change in what we know as the incandescent light bulb since Edison invented the bulb" in 1879, said Stan Hulett, a public relations consultant for Intersource Technologies of Sunnyvale, Calif.,

which helped develop the bulb.

Intersource said the bulb lasts between 15,000 hours and 20,000 hours - or 10 to 14 years if used four hours a day, which is typical in homes. Standard incandescent bulbs last 750 to 1,500 hours, or six months to a year.

Company president Pierre Villere said the biggest problem will be changing the minds of people who are used to replacing light bulbs.

"It's truly a lighting appliance," Villere said by telephone from his suburban New Orleans office. "You buy it once, you install it in a socket and in a home environment it's good for 10 or 20 years."

The electronic bulb uses a magnetic coil to generate a radio signal that mixes with the same gas used in conventional fluorescent lamps. A plasma is formed, making the phosphor coating on the inside of the glass glow.

Incandescent bulbs have a filament that glows when electricity passes through it. Fluorescent bulbs use electrodes to make gases inside the bulb glow.

The developers of the new bulb say it will also generate far less heat than incandescent bulbs, allowing users to save money on air conditioning and enabling grocery stores to light produce and meat counters without worrying about wilting or cooking the food.

Karl Johnson, manager of commercial building systems at the Electric Power Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., said the new bulb will be a significant improvement if the developer's claims are true.

But he said paying $10 for a bulb "tends to be a barrier," especially when the bulbs might not fit into all sockets.

He also said radio-frequency signals generated by the bulbs could interfere with reception of radio broadcasts. Intersource said no such problems exist.

Columbus-based American Electric Power Co., one of the nation's largest investor-owned electric utilities, is investing $6.5 million in the project.

"If we can develop highly efficient, economical lighting systems, we can save a great deal of energy," AEP Chairman Dick Disbrow said.

Intersource plans to market a replacement bulb for 75-watt flood lamps in stores, offices and factories, then will offer bulbs for home use later in 1993.

Study: Drug advertisements misleading and fail to comply with FDA regulations

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Drug advertisements in medical journals - a prime source of information for physicians about new treatments - often mislead doctors and violate federal regulations, endangering patients, researchers say.

The commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration acknowledged the problem but said the agency cannot handle it alone.

In a study supported in part by the U.S. Health and Human Services Department, researchers found that of 109 full-page ads printed in 1990 in 10 major medical journals, 100, or 92 percent, failed to meet at least one FDA rule.

The most frequently cited error was inadequate scientific documentation. Reviewers often could not locate the references listed, or found they did not support the manufacturer's claim.

The report's lead author, Dr. Michael Wilkes of the University of California at Los Angeles, said studies have shown many doctors use the ads as their major source of information about new drugs.

Misleading ads can lead to inappropriately prescribed drugs, drugs that can have side effects or drugs that are more costly than alternatives, he said.

"No one is taking responsibility in this area. It's a disgrace, because people are being inappropriately treated," Wilkes said.

Wilkes said the FDA should tighten enforcement of its regulations.

In an editorial accompanying the study in today's Annals of Internal Medicine, FDA Commissioner David Kessler wrote, "The problem of misleading drug advertisements is real."

But, he continued, "In the long run, the pharmaceutical industry itself will have the greatest influence on the quality of drug promotion."

Wilkes disputed that. "I don't believe the industry can police itself or doctors themselves," he said. "Everybody looks out for their own interests."

The journals examined included the one in which the study appeared. Each ad was reviewed by two doctors and an academic pharmacist suggested by the editors of the 10 journals.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, a trade organization, sharply criticized the report, saying the FDA already has sound advertising regulations that the industry follows.

Cheryl Graham, acting director of FDA's division of drug marketing, advertising and communications, also faulted the study.

In the two years since the misleading ads appeared, the division's staff has increased from four to 12 members, and since Oct. 1, the FDA has issued six public warning letters and nearly 100 private notices of violations, Graham said.

"I feel comfortable right now that we are doing a good job of overseeing ads," she said.

In a separate editorial, the co-editors of the magazine, Drs. Robert and Suzanne Fletcher, suggested creating an independent review board that would include representatives from the health professions, government, media and manufacturers.

Wilkes wants the FDA to require published corrections and to impose financial penalties on manufacturers for misleading or false ads.

Defense committee chairman backs ban on nuclear testing

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said today the United States should stop testing nuclear weapons as a signal of its commitment to curbing the proliferation of arms of mass destruction.

"In the days when we relied on nuclear weapons as the equalizer vs. Soviet conventional forces, it was necessary to conduct nuclear weapons tests primarily for modernization. But no more," Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., told graduates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A copy of the congressman's speech was released in Washington.

Aspin said the Bush administration has been preaching non-proliferation to other countries while continuing to test nuclear weapons. Imposing a testing ban would be a step toward securing international agreement on a non-proliferation effort, he said.

"The Pentagon opposes more limits on nuclear testing, but pressure has been building in this country and elsewhere to halt testing," Aspin said.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin imposed a unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing in October and has urged the United States to match his effort.

Published reports last week said the administration was considering plans for scaling back testing before Bush's meeting with Yeltsin this month. The White House, in response, said testing is already at a low level and there are no plans to limit tests further.

Aspin's decision to call for a nuclear test ban comes as a growing number of other lawmakers have made a similar appeal.

Rep. Mike Kopetski, D-Ore., is expected to offer an amendment to the fiscal 1993 defense budget this week that would impose a one-year moratorium on testing, provided the former Soviet republics continue their ban.

The measure has at least 218 co-sponsors in the House, including Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Aspin predicted today that the House will approve the amendment.

In the Senate, Republican Mark Hatfield of Oregon plans to offer a similar measure that has 41 co-sponsors, including Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

A number of arms control associations have announced their opposition to the defense budget Aspin's committee has written, citing the $4.3 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative and the conditional authorization of 20 B-2 bombers.

Spurgeon Keeny, president of the Arms Control Association, said that although he was pleased with Aspin's position on nuclear testing, he remains disheartened by the SDI number.

"I'm a little afraid this is somewhat cynical support," Keeny said, referring to Aspin's nuclear testing position. "I'm not impressed with the overall proposal to proceed with the massive Strategic Defense Initiative."

Although other arms control associations have taken a position on the defense budget, Keeny's has not.

Summit attendance list still unclear

By PETER MUELO
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The U.N. summit on the environment opens this week billed as the largest meeting of world leaders in history. But what it will accomplish — and who exactly will attend — remains unclear.

The gathering is formally called the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, and runs from Wednesday to June 14.

The U.N. press office says 142 princes, presidents and prime ministers have promised to come. The Brazilian government says 83 leaders have confirmed.

President Bush is expected for less than 48 hours at the summit portion of the conference starting June 11.

The conference's size alone is historic. But its importance might turn out to be more.

One day historians may look back on the meeting as a momentous occasion marking the end of the Cold War and the beginning of a "green war" against the spoiling of the Earth's resources.

Or it might turn out to be a dud, a conference that tried to do too much too soon.

The agenda includes protection of the atmosphere, the oceans, forests, threatened species and fresh water, and the cleanup of toxic and hazardous wastes. As if that weren't enough, the leaders will also address poverty, population growth and the restructuring of the world's economy.

Diplomats hope to devise a way to transfer money and technology from the wealthy industrialized countries to the poor developing countries.

But world leaders have been unable to agree on who will pay for pollution cleanup, which U.N. summit coordinator Maurice Strong has estimated will cost $125 billion a year.

Optimists hope for a breakthrough consensus on goals or funding.

But many ecologists accuse the Bush administration of blocking progress and watering down the documents.

The meeting's ultimate outcome will depend partly on what negotiators devise as a follow-up. They are discussing the creation of new U.N. agencies to foster environmentally benign development and implement accords reached in Rio.

Meanwhile, the delegates are arriving in a spruced-up city.

A 35,000-member security force has swept Rio, which has a population of 6 million, of the beggars, urchins and vendors who normally swarm the streets. Residents have commented on the relative lack of street crime.

Conference negotiations begin Wednesday, when 700 U.N. officials and 3,500 delegates put the finishing touches on the documents to be signed, U.N. press coordinator Monique McClellan said.

The delegates will observe two minutes of silence for the Earth before President Fernando Collor de Mello opens the conference at the Riocentro convention complex, 25 miles west of downtown Rio next to an auto speedway.

Much of the work of the conference has already been done. Here is the tally after three years of negotiations:

—A treaty to curb the carbon dioxide emissions that can lead to global warming has been drafted. Under pressure from the United States, provisions to require reductions in carbon dioxide emissions were removed in favor of optional goals. The United States produces about one-fourth of the world's carbon dioxide.

—The climate control convention was supposed to be the jewel in the crown," said Joshua Karliner, Greenpeace's coordinator for the summit. "Now, it looks more like a rhinestone."

—An agreement to preserve diverse biological species and ecosystems also was reached, but its fate is uncertain. The United States announced late Friday that it wouldn't sign the treaty, which it called "fundamentally flawed."

But the agreement is likely to get the support from 30 nations needed for it to go into effect.

—An effort to devise an "Earth Charter" laying out simple principles for environmentally benign development failed. Instead, the conference will produce a less ambitious "Rio Declaration," which will not be legally binding.

—Negotiators failed to devise a treaty to protect the world's forests. Instead, they will issue a "Statement on Forest Principles," which will not be legally binding.

—Finishing touches will be put on Agenda 21, a 900-page, non-binding program of action for environmentally safe growth. It addresses toxic waste, the transfer of "clean" technologies, and what money will be provided to Third World countries for non-damaging development.

Marriage vows bittersweet for Borger pastor

BROKEN ARROW, OKLA. — Susan Freese got married Saturday night. Eight hours earlier, she had buried her father.

Royal M. Freese, 59, of Broken Arrow died Thursday of a heart attack suffered while at the wheel of his pickup. His daughter was riding with him and was not injured.

"By the time I got to the hospital, probably an hour later, the daughter had pretty well decided her dad would want her to go ahead with the wedding," the Rev. Richard Hedger, pastor of First United Methodist Church in Bixby, said from his home late Saturday night.

There was some discussion of waiting until Monday to hold the funeral. But Hedger said it was decided to go ahead with it Saturday morning, in part to accommodate relatives who were already en route when Freese died.

"In setting up the funeral, the only time that seemed to be appropriate was the same day," said Hedger, who conducted both services.

Ms. Freese, 24, of Norman and her brother, Eric, each spoke at the funeral. Then they had several hours to visit with friends and family before the wedding.

"They had a lot of chances to do some grieving there and to tell the story, which is therapeutic also," Hedger said.

No mention of Freese's death was made during the wedding, he said, except when Eric presented his sister on behalf of his mother, Joelen, and father.

"They just made an intentional decision they were going to celebrate the wedding and not dwell on the loss there," the minister said.

Hedger, at Ms. Freese's request, told guests after the wedding to celebrate when they got to the reception, and not use it as a chance to express grief.

Hedger said the family's firm religious beliefs helped them get through the day. He noted that Ms. Freese's new husband, Mark DeMoss of Borger, Texas, is a Baptist preacher.

"With their belief in resurrection, they knew they'd get to share some time in the future together," he said.

Perot's backers declare Tuesday's primary results a 'non-issue'

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's going to be a frustrating day Tuesday for many Ross Perot backers, whose attempts to vent their anger at the two parties will be stymied by primary rules that don't allow for protest votes for a candidate who's not on the ballot.

But workers on the Texas tycoon's not-quite-ready independent presidential campaign say now's not the time to vote for Perot anyway, and they don't want to damage the campaigns of Democratic front-runner Bill Clinton and President Bush — yet.

"What we want to do is be on the ballot in November, not influence the Democrats' primary ... not try to sabotage somebody else's business," said Perot spokesman James Squires.

Whether the Perot camp wants it or not, primary voters are already trying to vote for their man.

In Kentucky, Perot backers urged voters to vote "uncommitted" as a sign of support and 28 percent of Democrats and 26 percent of Republicans did. In Oregon and Washington on May 19, Perot backers wrote in his name and while the votes were not counted, they were estimated to be around 15 percent in Oregon and 20 percent in Washington.

Two of the six states voting in Tuesday's final round of primaries — California and Ohio — don't have an "uncommitted" slot to punch, so Perot's backers can't use that as a way to channel their support. And neither state plans to count write-in votes for Perot.

"What happens Tuesday is a non-issue. We're focused on Nov. 3," said Perot's California coordinator, Bob Hayden. "What are Perot's supporters going to do Tuesday? I don't know. I expect many of them will stay home."

Even though Perot's California supporters have little reason to be enthused about Tuesday's primary, Perot obviously hasn't forgotten about them. At a rally Friday in Orlando, Fla., he asked the band to strike up "California, Here We Come."

In the other four states that vote Tuesday — New Mexico, New Jersey, Alabama and Montana — the uncommitted, no-preference vote or write-ins could be a factor, although nobody's pushing it as they did in Kentucky.

In New Mexico, Perot's backers reminded voters with a press release that they could vote uncommitted, but decided not to buy television time to get that message out.

"It's sort of by the grapevine," said John Bishop, one of Perot's New Mexico coordinators. "We're not saying do this or don't do that. We're just saying this is an avenue by which you can express your support for Ross Perot."

In 1988, only 3 percent of New Mexico's voters pulled the uncommitted lever, Bishop said, "so anything will be a tremendous showing" of support for Perot.

Because California's voters can't express support for Perot, his would-be votes may go to either Democratic challenger Jerry Brown or GOP challenger Patrick Buchanan, but nobody in the Perot camp is encouraging that avenue, either.

With Perot leading or running close in California polls matching him against Bush and Clinton in a fall showdown, Hayden said some California voters are likely to write in his name, anyway, even though their vote won't be counted.

Perot's California supporters plan to spend primary day at polling places recruiting volunteers, gathering more signatures to get him on the November ballot and "helping register people to vote for the next go-round," Hayden said.

The rules vary in the other four states that vote Tuesday:

—New Jersey. Anybody can write in Perot, or in some districts, vote uncommitted.

—Alabama. The Democratic primary ballot includes an uncommitted option, but it was unclear whether the Republican ballot would. The secretary of state's

Thunderstorms produce floods, trigger tornadoes

CORPUS CHRISTI, (AP) — Heavy thunderstorms that produced flash flood producing rainfall across a vast area of South Texas also triggered two tornadoes in the Corpus Christi area.

The two tornadoes were sighted Sunday afternoon in western areas of Corpus Christi, officials said.

Street flooding was reported Sunday in several South Texas towns and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

At Corpus Christi, water as high as 4 feet flooded streets, freeways and storm drains. The National Weather Service said 4 inches of rain fell at Corpus Christi.

There were numerous reports of motorists stranded in high water. "We had cars stalled all over the city," Corpus Christi Police Chief Henry Garrett said. "One had water up to its doors. We had to go in and make sure no one was still in it."

No one was seriously injured, police said.

Power outages were reported in some areas of Corpus Christi as well as in the Odem-Taft area, Central Power and Light Co. spokesman Larry Jones said.

The Corpus Christi Greyhound Race Track was forced to delay its program for more than an hour Sunday afternoon when flooding made conditions too dangerous for the dogs to compete. It was the first delay of more than 15 minutes in the 18-month existence of the facility.

Flooding also was reported in San Patricio and Refugio counties, and 7 inches of rain were reported near Woodsboro. A 4 inch rainfall in about one hour was reported near Pipe Creek just northwest of San Antonio. Waco received .44 inches of rain in six hours, while Mineral Wells and Stephenville each reported .19 inches.

A flood and flash flood watch was in effect early today for western and central portions of the South Plains.

Forecasters said as much as 2 inches of rain fell Sunday night and early today in the area and more could be expected.

At Lubbock, almost an inch of rain fell at the airport in one hour early today. In Southwest Lubbock, about two inches of rain fell in a 30-minute period, the NWS reported.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Quayle finds truth painful

The hullabaloo over Vice President Dan Quayle's comments regarding Murphy Brown's decision to become a single mother would be comical were it not so painfully illustrative of the serious subject he addressed.

In Los Angeles, Quayle was speaking in broad context about a lamentable lapse in the nation's moral attitudes and disintegration of the two-parent family when he said, by way of example, "It doesn't help matters when prime time TV has Murphy Brown - a character who supposedly epitomized today's intelligent, highly paid, professional woman - mocking the importance of fathers by bearing a child alone and calling it just another 'lifestyle'."

Quayle's emphasis on a serious national issue - the breakdown in family life - has been lost in the resulting chatter. His passing reference to Murphy Brown and her baby has brought media derision and furious backpeddling from the White House. Quayle is described by his detractors as insensitive and hopelessly out of touch with the "real world." The White House managed to distance itself from Quayle's remarks by applauding Murphy Brown for not aborting the baby, but still supported Quayle's belief in the importance of the nuclear family. Even Gov. Bill Clinton joined the circus, noting the vice president's inability to recognize that Murphy Brown "has something relevant to say."

The seriousness of Quayle's speech needs emphasis. "And for those concerned about children growing up in poverty," he said, "we must know this: Marriage is probably the best anti-poverty program of all. Among families headed by married couples today, there is a poverty rate of 5.7 percent. But 33.4 percent of families headed by a single mother are in poverty today."

He went on to explain how the nation's welfare system encourages dependency and subsidizes broken families. "Ultimately, marriage is a moral issue that requires cultural consensus, and the use of social sanctions. Bearing babies irresponsibly is, simply, wrong. Failing to support children one has fathered is wrong." Those comments, and the reference to Murphy Brown, do not play well to our supposed cultural leaders, but none-the-less reflect a majority opinion. That opinion, though, is seldom heard.

Intellectuals and the entertainment industry scoff at such quaint notions and unfortunately that attitude affects an ever-increasing segment of the population. The fictional Murphy Brown won't raise her child in poverty, but millions of impressionable young Americans who copy her lifestyle will. Quayle at least has the courage to bring into public discussion the results of decades of adhering to a poverty of values. He wants to focus on "family, hard work, integrity and personal responsibility." The discussion should continue.

The other 49 paragraphs

Vice President Dan Quayle spoke at a luncheon in San Francisco on May 19. His theme was the necessity to return to old moral values of right and wrong. His speech ran to 50 paragraphs. This was Paragraph 43:

"It doesn't help matters when prime-time TV has Murphy Brown - a character who supposedly epitomizes today's intelligent, highly paid, professional woman - mocking the importance of fathers by bearing a child alone, and calling it just another 'lifestyle choice.'"

The American press reacted as predictably as the dogs of Dr. Pavlov. Quayle rang a bell and mouths watered. Platoons of sociologists, pressed for timely quotes, fired their little popguns. The Washington Post curled its editorial lip. The crackers-and-brie set sneered and snickered. Predictably, the Bush White House came down with the impotent dithers.

In all this commotion, Quayle's serious message scarcely could be heard. Forget Murphy Brown. In the other 49 paragraphs Quayle spoke with clarity and force. He said:

"When I have been asked during these last weeks who caused the riots and the killing in L.A., my answer has been direct and simple: Who is to blame for the riots? The rioters are to blame. Who is to blame for the killings? The killers are to blame..."

"There is simply no excuse for the mayhem that followed the Rodney King trial. To apologize or in any way to excuse what happened is wrong. It is a betrayal of all those people equally outraged and equally disadvantaged who did not loot and did not riot. No matter how much you may disagree with the verdict, the riots were wrong. And if we as a society don't condemn what is wrong, how can we teach our children what is right?"

Quayle spoke for all those who believe that casual fornication, out of wedlock, is wrong. He made a valid point: The media profoundly influence the shaping of contemporary conduct. If this were not so, we would not have beer commercials. Of course the media's glorification of sex has consequences. Among the consequences:

"In 1965 the illegitimacy rate among black families was 28 percent. In 1989, 65 percent - two-thirds - of all black children were born to never-married mothers."

The vice president did not even remotely suggest that Murphy and the media are solely responsible for illegitimacy among blacks. Neither did he blame such Great Society programs as general welfare and public housing. The responsibility is personal. Just as rioters produce riots, and arsonists produce arson, so do irresponsible couples produce families without fathers.

"Unless we change the basic rules of society in our inner cities," Quayle said, "we cannot expect anything else to change. We will simply get more of what we saw three weeks ago. New thinking, new ideas, new strategies are needed."

Government has a large part to play. Governmental policies, said Quayle, must be premised upon such values as "family, hard work, integrity and personal responsibility." It is government's obligation to restore law and order. Those are "code words for safety, getting control of the streets, and freedom from fear."

Government, said Quayle, can encourage the residents of public housing to become homeowners. Enterprise zones will create jobs in inner cities. The parents of poor children must be given a choice of public or private schools. Policies of public welfare must be reformed to create incentives for saving and to remove the penalties for marriage.

"Empowering the poor will strengthen families. And right now, the failure of our families is hurting America deeply. When families fail, society fails. The anarchy and lack of structure in our inner cities are testament to how quickly civilization falls apart when the family foundation cracks."

"Children need love and discipline. They need mothers and fathers. A welfare check is not a husband. The state is not a father. It is from parents that children learn how to behave in society; it is from parents above all that children come to understand values and themselves as men and women, mothers and fathers."

This was the speech that The Washington Post mocked as "a pretty comic performance." The speech was "hardly original." The Post found it "morally klunky." For my own part, I thought Quayle was squarely on target. Such unsophisticated talk of old-fashioned families may bore the finger-bowl crowd. The rest of the country won't be bored at all.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, June 1, the 153rd day of 1992. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Two hundred years ago, on June 1, 1792, Kentucky became the 15th state of the Union.

On this date:

In 1796, Tennessee became the 16th state.

In 1801, Mormon leader Brigham Young was born in Whitingham, Vt.

In 1813, the U.S. Navy gained its motto as the mortally wounded commander of the U.S. frigate Chesapeake, Capt. James Lawrence, was heard to say "Don't give up the ship" during a losing battle with a British frigate.

In 1868, James Buchanan, the 15th president of the United States, died near Lancaster, Pa.

In 1888, California got its first seismographs as three of the devices were installed at the Lick Observatory.

The thin blue line

There is something in Washington, D.C., I want you to see. It is in Judiciary Square. That would be between Fourth and Fifth streets and between E and F streets.

It's a three-acre park. It is guarded by four enormous lions. Nothing ominous. On the contrary, these are bronze lions keeping watch over their cubs.

Again, that you might not miss the significant symbolism, the lions are protecting their playful nearby cubs. Judiciary Square. It is bordered by the flags of our country and by another flag, a singular one that identifies this hallowed ground as a National Memorial for our nation's lawmen and women - who shortened their lives trying to lengthen ours.

You will walk along tree-lined pathways beside marble walls inscribed with their names.

Sit, please - beside-the-placid reflective pool. Close your eyes and try to picture Wednesday evening, May 13, 1992.

Then and there assembled thousands converged on the memorial grounds to sit in reverential silence listening to a procession of firm voices intone the new names recently added.

Paul Harvey

For we are killing our law enforcement officers one every 56 hours.

As the roll call proceeded in alphabetical order of our several states unconsciously I tensed in my own chair there on the lawn as they called "Oklahoma"...

And within a breathless moment a voice intoned - among the gallant 12,928 dating back as far as 1794 - the date of Dec. 20, 1921, and the name of my father. If the Memorial Park is powerful by day it is spellbinding at night. Especially that Wednesday - by the light of a thousand hand-held candles.

Attorney General William Barr addressed the assembled with quiet eloquence.

When it was my turn, I was not sure that I could.

An almost full moon filtered through the trees. Flags hung limp as the wind held its breath.

I spoke as best I could of the significance to survivors of this time and of this place.

I recognized more than most that noise makes news - that one gunshot makes more noise than a thousand prayers - but it is not more important.

And in four decades on the new beat I count less than one-half of 1 percent of policemen and/or policewomen who dishonor that uniform. And that is a better average than you'd find among clergymen.

The evening ended as a chorus of policemen sang "Amazing Grace," and across the sky there suddenly appeared a long narrow beam of laser light - representing the thin blue line, the scant 500,000 men and women who stand between us and anarchy.

So, as I say, there's something I want you to see in Washington, D.C.

Three acres sheltered by our government's great criminal justice buildings. Three immaculately lawns (c) acres that are quiet now - except, if you listen closely, is it breeze in the trees? Or is it from over there along the graceful wall? Whispers saying, "Thank you for remembering."

Waiting for Perot - and three VPs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Even non-presidential candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower did not keep the electorate twisting in the winds of indecision as long as non-candidate Ross Perot has.

But the Texas billionaire continues to tantalize the American public with his cunningly cute non-candidacy and Mario Cuomo-like dalliance.

"My polls show that he cuts across all segments of the American public," said Mervin Field, head of the highly regarded Field survey. His poll was the first to show Perot leading both Bush and Clinton.

Field was one of the many polling and survey experts at the annual meeting of the American Association for Public Opinion Research in this sun-drenched Garden of Eden by the Gulf.

When scholarly papers weren't being debated, conversations easily drifted into speculations about why voters find Perot so attractive. Many older voters see in his feisty success story some of Harry Truman's blunt-speaking, give-'em-hell style that upset a favored Thomas E. Dewey in 1948.

Voters of all ages are sick with disgust by a morally corrupt Congress that seems more concerned with its members' perquisites than its constituents' needs.

Women now see more clearly than ever the danger posed to their equality by a male-dominated fiefdom infested with sexist inquisitors like Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

And blacks caught between the Scylla of Republican contempt and the Charybdis of

Chuck Stone

Democrats indifference are hungering for signs that Perot might be willing to reach out to them.

But the voters who have already jumped party ship to Perot's political lifeboat haven't the slightest idea where he stands on most gut issues. Nor do they care. As Wendell Wilkie said, "It's all campaign oratory, anyway."

More important to this turned-off segment of the 1992 electorate is political upheaval that they hope will accomplish two goals: throw the rascals out and provide a spiritual catharsis.

Voters are also intrigued with Perot's potential for winning enough votes to permanently retire the favorite target of America's comedians, Dan Quayle. But that may be too charitable a characterization for the nation's highest-ranking feather-brain, who blamed the Los Angeles riots on the "Murphy Brown" television show.

Is it any wonder that voters have been waiting for Perot for a long time?

Having raised potentially high hopes for Perot's candidacy, I am just enough of a historian and political scientist to realize that he absolutely cannot win the presidency, although I would love to see that happen - as of this moment, anyway.

Perot's only hope is to siphon off enough of the 537 electoral votes from Bush and Clinton to prevent a majority and thereby send the election to the House of Representatives.

That kind of standoff could be avoided if Bush switches to a more electable running mate. Almost nobody with an I.Q. above 50 would disagree that a Bush-Gen. Colin Powell ticket would dramatically improve the president's prospects. Such a ticket could make this the first year since 1936 with a Republican presidential candidate positioned to win a majority of black votes.

On a more realistic side, however, it is ironic that both Bush and Clinton would benefit from vice presidents who share a common athletic charisma - a former football quarterback, Republican HUD Secretary Jack Kemp, and a former basketball forward, Democratic New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley.

A woman, says pollster Field, would help Bush, but would not do much for Clinton or Perot.

As for Perot, his domineering personality, cackling style and outside-the-beltway philosophy so overwhelms his candidacy that picking a vice president to add political stature would probably be futile.

Is there a demographically and ideologically perfect ticket? The double-P - Perot and Powell - would wrap it up. But that's the trouble with perfection - it's always so unattainable.

In Texas, do-si-do makes comeback

By DANETTE BAKER
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — If viewed from above the mass of dancers would resemble a human kaleidoscope, with ever-changing designs decided upon by the caller.

As the couples follow the directed dance steps, the women's brilliantly colored petticoats splash color on the scene. An occasional "ya-hoo," yelled by an enthusiastic dancer breaks the rhythm of sliding feet.

"This beats the bar scene," said John McCrorey, as he wiped the sweat from his brow. "You don't have to put up with the alcohol and the drunks."

McCrorey, a 20-year old Texas Tech university student, had just finished his first "real" square dance since beginning lessons in January.

Toni Robinson, 22, another one of the rookies, had also grown tired of the local bars. "I was tired of getting hit on," she said. "That's one thing you don't have to worry about here."

It sounds like the do-si-do is making a comeback.

"I think we're just seeing the crest of another wave," said Bill Fowler, an 18-year-veteran dancer. "It seems like the popularity comes in spurts."

But for Fowler, square dancing never went out of style. Every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night you'll find him on the dance floor at one of the 19 area square dance clubs.

"I hardly sit one (a dance) out," he said, tapping his cowboy boot to the beat of the music — obviously itching to get back out there. "Unless it's a ladies' choice and I don't get chosen."

Fowler's attitude is exemplary of a true square dancer.

"It's unusual to see people not dancing at a square dance," said Patsy Sneed. She and her husband, Bill, are presidents of the Kuntry Kuzzins club. "We don't do much talking except at the break because people are there first and foremost to dance."

The diverse backgrounds and occupations of square dancers reflect the history of the dance itself. Although definite answers elude even dance historians, it's probably safe to say that like the language of our country, the dance evolved through contributions of immigrants who sought freedom in America.

The dance gained state recognition last May when Gov. Ann Richards ranked it among the state symbols as the official state folk dance. The resolution stated that the dance was "first recorded in this country in 1651 and was described as a choreographic melting pot, containing elements of the Morris and Maypole dances of England, as well as the French ballroom dances, and church dances of Spain." The resolution also mentioned traditions of nations such as Ireland, Germany, Italy, Poland, Austria, Russia, and Mexico as contributing to the dance performed across the state by about 22,000 dancers.

Delores and John Agnew joined those ranks about one year ago at the invitation of Lanny and Kay Ragland of the Diamond Jubilee club.

"He was all ready, but I wasn't too excited," said Delores Agnew. "I agreed to go one time. After that I was hooked."

"It's like snow skiing, once you try it you just keep coming back."

Bill Fowler and his late wife, Genell, took lessons with the Kuntry Kuzzins group after seeing their exhibition dance at the South Plains Mall in the early 70s. "We decided to try it mainly to get away from the boob tube," he said. The Fowlers danced together for 14 years until her death a few years ago.

Fowler said he has seen many changes in square dancing, especially in the calls.

"For one thing there are about twice as many now as when I learned," he said. "We started dancing after 12 lessons, now they take 20 to 25."

"Just about anyone can learn," Fowler said, adding that he had never danced before taking up square dancing. "If you're able to walk, you can dance."

However, Mrs. Agnew said it wasn't as easy as it looked. "You really have to concentrate so you don't mess up."

But occasionally someone does miss a step. "Ninety percent of the dancers don't mind. That's good because you never know, you might be the next one to mess up," she said.

If a square gets off step, the couples will regroup and wait for a call they can execute from their position, Mrs. Agnew explained.

Square dance moves are executed by four couples forming a square. The same square will usually dance two songs, or a tip, with the first song instructed by a hash call and the next a singing call.

For the hash, the callers give the steps in beat to background music, while in the singing call, steps are sung between words of the song.

In addition to dancing in a square formation, most dancers also learn to round dance.

Instead of forming numerous squares, the dancers will assemble in one circle, and partners remain together throughout the dance as the cuer — the individual calling the steps for the round dance — instructs the couples to two-step, waltz or fox-trot.

"This is more like the ballroom dancing," Mrs. Sneed said. "It's smooth and you usually don't hear much hollering."

Two novice couples, Barbara and Richard Jones and Mary and Bill McClean, haven't graduated from square dance lessons yet, but they have already decided to learn the round dance, too.

"We want to do it all," Mrs. McClean said. "We've barely started, but we're gung-ho."

The couples have planned a square dance vacation for this summer.

"We've heard there is a place in Colorado where that's all you do," Mrs. Jones said. "We can't wait."

Although any square dancer could name various reasons for joining, most will cite the same reason for continuing to dance — the people.

"It doesn't matter who you are or what you do," Mrs. Sneed said. "When you come through that door, everyone is a square dancer."

Aging parents get little from one who got most

DEAR ABBY: I have an "in-law" problem that I need to resolve, and I would like a little objective advice from you.

While raising their family, my husband's parents very obviously favored "Lori," their only daughter. When the grandchildren arrived, Lori's children were adored, while the children of their two sons were ignored.

Now, when Papa and Mama have to move out of their home of 30-plus years — and into a nursing home — guess who is taking all the furnishings of value, and is doing nothing to help?

Lori has been a selfish, spoiled child all her life, while her brothers (my husband and his brother) received next to nothing (materially and emotionally) from their parents.

Now, when it comes time to help the folks who are both in very poor health, Lori is "too busy" to be bothered, and my husband and his brother are doing everything. Of course, I am also pitching in to see that my in-laws are well cared for. I go to the nursing home at least three times a week to make sure the folks have everything they want and need. I also sit and visit with them. Lori will pop her head in the door maybe once a week, but she's too rushed even to sit down.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Abby, as an in-law, how should I handle this selfish woman? Do you think I should say something to her?

STEAMED IN INDIANA
DEAR STEAMED: Anything you could say to remind Lori of her lack of consideration and selfishness would fall on deaf ears. But if it will make you feel better — go ahead and tell her exactly how you feel.

Because Lori has always been the favorite child, she has come to view herself as something special. She believes that she's entitled to special treatment; so, expecting her to "do something" for her aging and ailing parents would be asking too much of a selfish person who has been a taker all her life.

DEAR ABBY: Are you able to help me with this question? I hope so because I have asked a number of people, and so far nobody has come up with a helpful answer.

Can you explain to your readers how to distinguish people from the following countries from each other? Our neighborhood has people from all these places, and they say that anyone who can't tell one from the other is a bigot and racist: Thailand, Cambodia, China, the Philippines, Japan, Korea, Laos and Vietnam.

People from the above countries all look alike to me, and I have no idea how to know whether a person is from Korea or Cambodia. I know I'm not a bigot. Am I just plain stupid? Help!

A.H.F. IN GARDENA, CALIF.

DEAR A.H.F.: You are not stupid. Neither are you alone in this dilemma. The people whose roots are in the countries you have named are Asians, and they are often mistaken for each other. Don't feel embarrassed. If it's important to you — ask. And it will probably make you feel better to know that most Asians think all Americans look alike.

Even the macho suffer during divorce

By COSMOPOLITAN
For AP Special Features

Men tend to be so isolated in the macho myth that a real man doesn't need women — which means when a woman leaves them they go from disbelief to denial to pain.

"I'm struck by how little these men seem to have been prepared by what was coming, the woman's walking out," South Florida psychotherapist Lynn Langdale said.

"When she leaves him for good, he said, 'I gave her everything a woman could ask for, but she just wanted to turn me into a wimp. Let her try a few wimps out. She'll be back looking for a real man soon,'" Langdale added.

Langdale pointed out that she had been telling him all along what was wrong — he just was not listening.

"I believe that men's difficulty with women is aggravated by their emotional isolation from other men," said Boston psychotherapist Susan Millman. "Women have a vast array of emotional information — a kind of female folk wisdom — available to them, not least of all in their friendships with each other."

"Each man is isolated in his own macho myth of what a man should be. The first rule, of course, is that a 'real' man does not need women."

Millman said the way men use the word "them" is the key — as if women were interchangeable. "Men tend to regard women's emotions the way they do their own, as not very important," Millman said. "So in any conflict between the man's perception of reality and the woman's feelings, it is her feelings that must bend."

Men may ignore their feelings, but they do feel pain.

"The first great separation in every man's life is growing away from his mother," said New York City neuropsychiatrist Hyman Weitzen. "In the unconscious process, most men repress how fearful and painful it was. We mostly remember the freedom and pleasure there was in becoming our own man."

"Divorce echoes that first separation anxiety. It takes time for the divorced man to relearn the pleasures of being his own man again."

The failure of a marriage is a major disappointment, even if it was the man's idea.

"Very important issues of competition and self-esteem enter here," Weitzen said. "The man can decide he was at fault. If he were a better man, this would not have happened, and so on."

People with low self-esteem are prime candidates for addiction.

"Alcohol, for instance, punishes and degrades," Weitzen said. "So the addict is giving his hated self what it so richly deserves. At the same time, alcohol is a consolation for feeling so bad. So he drinks more."

He said the first goal in therapy is to restore self-esteem.

"Narcissism has been a psychiatric subject for a long time," he said, "but I think it is the woman's movement that gave positive self-esteem the attention it deserves. Almost everything we do — every bit of behavior — can be traced to expressing, defending and repairing self-esteem."

"It is male lack of self-esteem, masked with a falsely arrogant face by boasting, aggressive and macho behavior, that causes too much of the unhappiness between the sexes."

Women complain about emotional starvation, but men call silence about suffering being strong.

"I think of it as masochism," therapist Millman said, "embracing pain as a mark of your worth as a man. As long as men feel they must deny the importance of what the woman is saying, they will not hear her, even if she says she is listening."

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you develop a strong hunch today to get in touch with a certain party, follow through on your impulse. There's a possibility you might hear some good news.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Lady Luck may be inclined to treat you generously today, especially where your financial interests are concerned. Let events run their natural course.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There's justification for your feelings of hope today. Be alert, because a new opportunity could come about through to a close friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are now in a favorable cycle for fulfilling ambitious objectives. More than one success is likely, and they could come about in very unusual ways.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your faculties for conceptualizing are both broad and accurate today. For best results in important matters, put things into play the way you envision them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a strong chance you might get involved with someone important today. Do everything within your power to develop this contact; it could produce future benefits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Happy results are indicated today in matters where you and your mate are in total accord. Disputes will lessen your probabilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There's a chance you might resurrect an old endeavor today that you had just about written off. From your fresh perspective, you should be able to see how to make it profitable.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Involvements with old friends should work out rather well for you today, but the same results might not be true with a newer acquaintance. Be careful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An ambitious objective you're presently working on can be expanded into something both larger and more impressive. You may see a way to do so today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's important that you play by the rules today, even if things are going against you. You'll get luckier with each passing hour, but only if you follow accepted procedures.

Trail Blazers plan to play tough defense in NBA finals

PORTLAND, Ore. — When Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen or any of the other Chicago Bulls soar toward the basket in the NBA Finals, the Portland Trail Blazers will be waiting, Buck Williams says.

And the greeting will be a rough one, Williams promises, unlike the way the Cleveland Cavaliers treated the Bulls in the Eastern Conference finals.

"Cleveland did not play them physically," Williams said. "You have to play this team very physically. You cannot concede any layups to this basketball team."

That means a lot of contact, the Blazers' chief defender said. "You have to make sure that you bump them."

The Eastern Conference is known for its rough play, but the Blazers know how to play that way, too, he said, as evidenced by their rugged Western Conference final series against Utah.

"We're going to come out and play hard for 48 minutes, and when the smoke clears, I just hope we're the ones that are still standing," Williams said.

He says remarks made by Chicago coach Phil Jackson and Jordan a few months ago will help the Trail Blazers.

"They were sort of derogatory," he said. "But we have to focus in on what's important now. Right now, winning the championship is more important than what was said. Right now is our chance to go out and prove Chicago wrong."

On national television just before the Bulls blew out the Blazers 111-91 on March 1, Jackson said Portland has a tendency to self-destruct down the stretch.

After the game, Jordan said the Bulls like to get the Blazers into a halfcourt game where they have to use their minds. The implication was that Portland isn't a very smart team.

Those are familiar criticisms to Portland coach Rick Adelman, who said he's sure the Bulls have a high opinion of the Blazers now.

"I think they understand we have a pretty good team and they're going to have to play well to beat us," he said.

Danny Ainge says his team shouldn't need any extra motivation when the NBA Finals begin Wednesday night in Chicago.

"We certainly don't need Phil Jackson's or Michael Jordan's remarks to get us motivated to win a world championship," Ainge said. "I think it might have motivated us the following week after those comments, and maybe they were a blessing for us."

He said the criticism helped the Blazers work harder on their weaknesses.

"Although I don't believe the comments that were said," Ainge said, "there was a little bit of truth in what they were saying."

"It might have helped us focus on what we were doing, because in the game we played at Chicago, I think everyone would admit that we were a dumb team. But for 68 or 69 games this year, we've been a pretty smart team, so I love this team and our chances."

Ainge knows the Bulls are the team expected to win.

"They have the homecourt advantage. They're the defending champions. They have the best record," he said. "They're the favorites in this thing."

The Blazers took Friday and Saturday off before going through a one-hour, 40-minute workout Sunday following an hour-long team meeting.

Bulls feel pressure has been lifted

CHICAGO (AP) — With talk of sweeping the playoffs long since past, the Chicago Bulls feel they can play under less pressure against the Portland Trail Blazers.

What the Bulls feared the most was the embarrassment of not being able to reach the NBA Finals and defend their title. Now that they've made it to the final round, they believe they can play better.

"It's a great relief; There was a great amount of pressure on us to do a good job and get back here," said Scottie Pippen, the catalyst for Friday night's 99-94 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers that wrapped up the Eastern Conference finals.

"There's definitely been a lot of pressure on me for not being able to produce," said Pippen, who struggled for four games against Cleveland before snapping out of a slump with 29 points, 12 rebounds, four blocked shots and four steals in the series-clincher. "Now we just have to go out and play, it's a great feeling."

"There is a feeling of relief in a lot of ways to get back to the finals," coach Phil Jackson said.

It hasn't been easy since so much was expected from the Bulls, who went 15-2 last year in winning the championship and then came back with a 67-15 record for the best mark in the NBA this season.

were some who thought the Bulls might go 15-0 in the playoffs this season. The expectations increased after a three-game sweep over Miami.

"Ridiculous," was Jackson's response, and the Bulls proved it, losing three games to the Knicks and two more to the Cavaliers.

There is no talk of a sweep over the Trail Blazers, although Michael Jordan called the victory in the sixth game over Cleveland "a great confidence builder for all of us."

Jordan had a miserable performance in the first three quarters of Game 6, missing 15 of 20 shots before scoring 16 points in the final period.

Courier overwhelms young foe; Seles narrowly avoids an upset

By STEPHEN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

PARIS (AP) — Monica Seles knew beforehand she wouldn't be kicked out of the French Open because of the U.N. sanctions against her native Yugoslavia. But she nearly got knocked out anyway.

Seles, the top seed and two-time defending champion, trailed 4-1 in the final set before coming back to beat Japan's Akiko Kijimuta 6-1, 3-6, 6-4, and reach the quarterfinals.

French Open

While Seles struggled to avoid a stunning upset, her counterpart in the men's field advanced with little trouble. Top-seeded defending champion Jim Courier overwhelmed 17-year-old Ukrainian Andrei Medvedev 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, to make the final eight.

"I feel this is probably my best tennis so far," said Courier, who has not dropped a set in his four matches.

Rain hit Roland Garros for the fourth day, wiping out five of the 12 scheduled matches. In one suspended fourth-round match, No. 11 Andre Agassi led Spain's Emilio Sanchez, 6-1, 6-3, 1-1. Pete Sampras, the No. 3 seed, never got on court against Carl Uwe Steeb.

But if the rain and Courier's victory were predictable, Seles' troubles against an opponent ranked No. 150 in the world were shocking. Seles had won her three previous matches 6-1, 6-0; 6-2, 6-2; and 6-0, 6-1.

Seles' shaky performance came in the wake of uncertainty over the status of Yugoslav athletes.

The U.N. Security Council on Saturday imposed sweeping sanctions against Yugoslavia, now consisting only of Serbia and Montenegro, because of its involvement in the fighting in Bosnia-Herzegovina. An ethnic Hungarian, Seles was born in the Serbian city of Novi Sad, but has lived in the United States since 1986 and is in the process of obtaining American citizenship.

Only hours before Seles took the court Sunday, tournament officials announced that they would not stop her from playing.

"We must differentiate between national teams and individual players in a sport," tournament director Patrice Clerc said. "The French championships are in fact composed of individuals."

Seles refused to discuss politics. "I'm here to play tennis and I don't want to talk about anything else," she said.

Seles attributed her troubles to the surprising play of Kijimuta, who also hits with two hands off both her forehand and backhand.

"After the first set, she really started to hit those forehands," she said. "She hit some shots that I really didn't expect her to hit."

After a brief rain delay, Kijimuta moved out to leads of 3-0 and 4-1 in the third set. But then she seemed to lose her nerve.

"I started to think maybe I can beat her," Kijimuta said. "So I started getting nervous and she started to play very well."

Kijimuta double faulted twice in the last game, including at 30-30 to go down match point. "She choked," said Seles, who cracked a backhand winner on the next point to end the match.

In other women's matches, No. 2 Steffi Graf, No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini and No. 4 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario all advanced to the quarterfinals. Graf beat No. 10 Jana Novotna 6-1, 6-4; Sabatini downed Patricia Hy 6-3, 6-1 and Sanchez Vicario defeated Kimiko Date 6-1, 6-2.

The match between No. 5 Jennifer Capriati and No. 13 Mary Pierce was postponed by the rain.

On paper, the matchup between Courier and Medvedev was one of the most intriguing so far of the tournament. But Courier was not about to fall victim to the rash of upsets that a day earlier knocked out three of the top five men's seeds — Stefan Edberg, Michael Stich and Andre Agassi.

"He is on a higher level than the other players," Medvedev said. "He is playing like a machine. He doesn't miss. He is such a great fighter. He is so confident. He is fast. He is cool. He is mentally tough."

"You feel like an idiot because you are just playing against a wall and the ball keeps coming back faster than you hit it. I can't explain it. It's a feeling. You can't win against this guy."

Medvedev said he went into the match with nothing to lose.

"I thought I could have fun and play well," he said. "But I couldn't play well because he wouldn't let me. So I thought I would just have fun, but it wasn't so funny."

Courier, who has a 20-match winning streak, said he has improved considerably since winning the French Open last year.

"I'm feeling fitter and I'm playing a little smarter," he said. "I'm more difficult to beat now. The thing I'm most proud of, in the past 12 months since I've won here, is I've become a more complete and better player and the results have shown it."

His next opponent will be eighth-seeded Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia, who looked impressive in downing Spain's Carlos Costa — the season's clay-court sensation — 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

"Goran is a very dangerous player every time he steps onto the court," Courier said. "He can really blast people off the court. He's got that game, and hopefully he is not going to be able to do that against me."

In their last meeting, Ivanisevic beat Courier in the quarterfinals of the Stuttgart indoor tournament in February.

Glasson wins Kemper Open as Daly falters on 18th POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Bill Glasson's golf career has been reborn again, a few miles away from where he enjoyed one of the finest days in his early years on the PGA Tour.

Glasson parred the 18th hole of Kemper Open Sunday and then waited around to watch John Daly bogey it, giving Glasson a one-stroke victory and his fifth career win — his first since 1989.

Glasson, 32, got his first victory on the tour in 1985, when he made a 50-foot putt on the final hole of the Kemper Open at the nearby Congressional Golf Course. He won twice in 1988, and in 1989 he won the Doral Open and finished 19th on the money list.

After that, however, Glasson's career went into a tailspin. Battling aching knees and severe back problems, he withdrew from 10 tournaments in 1990 because of his fragile back. Last year, he appeared in only 11 events and earned a mere $46,995.

He is playing this year under a special medical exemption.

"As far as I'm concerned, my first pro career ended in 1989," he said. "And I think my second has started with my win here in the Kemper again, which is kind of ironic."

Glasson had three birdies and no bogeys Sunday to finish with an 8-under 276 after four trips over the TPC at Avenel course. The victory was good for $198,000 — his biggest paycheck in nine years on the tour.

Daly, Ken Green, Mike Springer and Howard Twitty were one stroke back. Payne Stewart, Mark Cal-cavecchia, Greg Kraft, Mark Brooks and Australian Wayne Riley finished at 278.

At one point Sunday, only two shots separated the top 14 players on the leaderboard. Eventually, it all came down to the way Glasson, Daly and Springer fared on No. 18, a 444-yard par-4.

Springer was the first to reach the hole. He hit his approach into the right bunker and subsequently got a bogey to go to 7-under.

Then came Glasson, who hit a sensational shot to salvage the pivotal par.

After launching his drive just short of the bunker on the right side of the fairway, Glasson hit his approach into the rough on the right of the green, about 90 feet from the hole. He chipped brilliantly, leaving the ball within a foot before tapping in for par.

Glasson said his second shot, with a 4-wood, was as crucial as his outstanding chip.

"I swung at it awfully hard," he said. "It could have gone three feet if I didn't hit it right."

Ultimately, Daly needed only a par on No. 18 to force a playoff after making a 7-foot birdie putt on 17. However, he put himself in trouble from the outset, hooking his drive into the far left side of the fairway with a terrible lie.

"I picked the wrong hole to hit the worst drive of the week," he said. "I hooked it, and when I found the ball it looked like it was nailed in the ground."

Penguins looking to capture second straight Stanley Cup

CHICAGO (AP) — Though the Pittsburgh Penguins aren't exactly worried, they certainly would like a stronger start in tonight's fourth game of the Stanley Cup finals than they had in the first three.

The Penguins lead the Chicago Blackhawks 3-0 in the best-of-7 series and could win their second straight Stanley Cup tonight. If they can weather the first period again, their chances look good.

Goalie Tom Barrasso posted his second career playoff shutout in Game 3 on Saturday night, turning aside 27 shots. The Blackhawks peppered him with 13 in the first period, but the Penguins allowed just 14 more in the final 40 minutes.

"We have to be concerned about the way they started last night," Pittsburgh center Mario Lemieux said. "We were fortunate to come out with a win. Game 4 is not going to be any different. They're going to come at us, and we have to be better prepared this time."

"When we heard what Edmonton's game plan was — to hold them for the first 10 minutes, they'd be OK — that's what we've tried to do. But we were lucky to escape with a 1-goal lead," Pittsburgh forward Rick Tocchet said.

In Game 1, Chicago had a 3-0 lead after one period and led 4-1 at 11:36 of the second. The Penguins won 5-4. In Game 2, a 3-1 Pittsburgh victory, the Blackhawks mustered just four shots each in periods 2 and 3.

"We have to elevate our play in the first period. We can't expect Tom to stand on his head again," Tocchet said. "We're just one game away. I don't know when that will be, but we can't count our chickens yet. We're going to come out harder in the next game."

The Blackhawks say the same thing. "None of us have given up hope," said winger Rob Brown. "I don't think anyone expected us to be down 3-0, but the series is not over yet."

Only one team — the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs — has ever recovered from a 3-0 deficit in the final series to win the cup. Chicago coach Mike Keenan was asked after Game 3 whether his team would be playing for pride now.

"No, we're going to play for victory," Keenan answered. "That sentiment that you just delivered says that we're finished. And in this particular series, the team that wins the last game wins the Stanley Cup, not the one, two or three first games."

The Penguins still respect the Blackhawks enough to know they could be dangerous if allowed back into this series.

"There's nothing more we want to do than wrap it up here Monday," center Bryan Trottier said. "Sure, there's nothing like doing it in front of your hometown fans."

Toronto rallies for 3-2 win over Chicago

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Tense game, one-run lead going into the ninth inning. Your pitcher is doing well, but the closer is ready in the bullpen. What do you do, skip?

In Toronto, Chicago manager Gene Lamont pulled Charlie Hough and brought in Bobby Thigpen. Six batters later, the Blue Jays had rallied for two runs and a 3-2 victory on Sunday that sent the White Sox to their sixth straight loss.

"It was a logical move," said Hough, who had allowed only two infield singles and an unearned run. "I struggled through the seventh and eighth. That's the move I make if I'm managing. It was a big-time legitimate move and it just didn't work."

It didn't work in Kansas City, either, where Texas reliever Kenny Rogers had pitched two shutout innings and the Rangers took a 6-5 lead into the bottom of the ninth. Manager Bobby Valentine went to stopper Jeff Russell to start the inning and he couldn't stop the Royals, who rallied for a 7-6 victory.

In Milwaukee, manager Phil Garner let Ricky Bones keep going with a three-hit shutout. Don Mattingly hit Bones' first pitch of the ninth for a home run that tied it for New York, but the Brewers bounced back to win 2-1 in the bottom of the ninth.

Elsewhere, Boston beat Seattle 7-1, Minnesota downed Detroit 4-1, Baltimore beat Oakland 4-2 and Cleveland defeated California 4-3.

Hough, bidding for his first complete game of the season, struck out four and walked four with 50 mph knuckleballs. Thigpen (0-2) and his 90-plus fastballs relieved to start the ninth with a 2-1 lead.

Thigpen struck out Joe Carter, but Dave Winfield followed with his ninth home run of the season and 415th of his career, moving him past Darrell Evans into 21st place on the all-time list.

"This club definitely likes the hard stuff better," Winfield said. "It's a real change going from Hough to Thigpen. But we were up for it."

Kelly Gruber followed with a double, John Olerud was intentionally walked and Pat Border fanned for the second out.

Greg Myers batted for Rob Ducey and singled to left field. Gruber dove headfirst to beat Tim Raines' throw to the plate, twisting around Ron Karkovics' tag. Thigpen gave up his first home run of the season and blew his third save try in 15 chances.

AL roundup

Jack Morris (5-3) won with a five-hitter. He struck out six and walked two in his fourth complete game as the Blue Jays completed a three-game sweep.

Royals 7, Rangers 6
George Brett caught and passed Babe Ruth on the career hit list, Gregg Jefferies extended his hitting streak to 17 games and Brian McRae blooped a two-out single that capped a two-run rally in the ninth at Royals Stadium.

Brett, Jefferies and Wally Joyner each had three hits for Kansas City. Brett doubled to tie Ruth with 2,873 hits and later singled twice. Jefferies matched Winfield for the longest hitting streak in the AL this season.

Russell (2-2) relieved to start the ninth with a 6-5 lead and Jefferies led off with a single. Kevin McReynolds doubled with one out and Brett was intentionally walked to load the bases, setting up pinch-hitter Jim Eisenreich's tying sacrifice fly and McRae's opposite-field single.

Rusty Meacham (3-0) was the winner. Brian Downing homered and drove in three runs for Texas. The Rangers went into Kansas City with a major league-best 17-8 record, but dropped two of three for their first losing road series of the season.

Brewers 2, Yankees 1
B.J. Surhoff, batting only .176, singled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Ricky Bones, acquired in a spring-training trade that sent Gary Sheffield from Milwaukee to San Diego, pitched his best game in 21 major league appearances. But Mattingly's home run on the first pitch of the ninth pulled New York into a tie at 1, and Bones was pulled after 8 2-3 innings.

Jesse Orosco (1-1) got one out for the victory. The Brewers won it against Scott Kamieniecki (1-2) when Greg Vaughn walked with one out, stole second and scored on Surhoff's hit.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 1
Roger Clemens allowed six hits in eight innings for his fifth straight victory as Boston avoided a three-game sweep.

Clemens (8-3) struck out six and walked one as he improved his career record against the Mariners to 11-4, including 7-2 in Seattle. The Mariners' only run came on Ken Griffey Jr.'s fourth-inning homer, only the second allowed by Clemens this season.

Luis Rivera singled in two runs in the second off Randy Johnson (5-5), who left in the fifth after Mike Greenwell lined a ball off his left elbow. Jack Clark had an RBI single in the seventh and a two-run single in the eighth.

Twins 4, Tigers 1
Scott Erickson, banished to the bullpen 10 days ago, outpitched Bill Gullickson in a meeting of 20-game winners last season as Minnesota again beat Detroit at the Metrodome.

The Twins are 41-18 against Detroit, starting with a five-game victory in the 1987 AL playoffs. Minnesota has won five straight against the Tigers, outscoring them 49-16.

Erickson (3-4) gave up a season-low one run on five hits in six innings. Mark Guthrie pitched three perfect innings for his first save since last Aug. 20.

Gullickson (6-3) had won his past six decisions. He gave up a leadoff home run to Shane Mack in the first inning, but did not allow another hit until Mack singled in the sixth.

Brett goes past Ruth on all-time hit list

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jack Brett did not want to tell his famous son he was dying.

"He found out he had brain cancer and lung cancer two months ago and he didn't tell me until three weeks ago," George Brett said Sunday after reaching a baseball milestone to make any father beam with pride.

"The way I was playing ball and the way the team was playing, he said I have enough problems."
George and the Kansas City Royals were indeed wallowing in the depths. They lost their first 16 games. George was making precious little progress in his drive toward the 3,000-hit plateau. But finally, George was told, and he immediately flew to California to be with his father.

Friday night, George's first game after the funeral, he was hitless. But Saturday night he had two hits as the Royals came from behind to beat first-place Texas.

Then Sunday Brett had three hits, catching and passing none other than Babe Ruth on the all-time list as the Royals rallied for a 7-6 victory that knocked the Rangers out of first in the AL West.

"The first day back after my father's funeral was a little tough emotionally for me," said Brett, 39. "I was just going out there and for some reason I kept swinging at balls I wouldn't usually swing at. I went home and visited with my wife and she said, 'Hey, you've got to forget about it and just start playing.'"

Brian McRae's bloop single capped a two-run ninth inning off relief ace Jeff Russell (2-2) as the Rangers sustained just their third loss in 14 games.

Brett doubled and scored in the second inning, singled home a run in the third and then singled again in the seventh. The first hit was No. 2,873, tying Ruth for 28th place.

definitely not in Babe Ruth's class. To have two more hits than Babe Ruth, it really makes you feel pretty good. Unfortunately, they're not all home runs like his."

Brett's brothers finally prevailed upon their father to tell George of the situation.

"The first couple of days after I found out was tough, but I communicated with him pretty much on a daily basis since he told me," Brett said. "He's always been a big supporter of me. He would kick me in the rear end when I needed it and yell and scream at me when I needed it. I just decided to go out there and put my feelings behind me."

Brett took off a week to be with his father.

"It's tough. I wouldn't wish it on my worst enemy to have their father pass on like that," he said. "But you've got to keep on, and that's what I'm going to do."

The Rangers, who had their seven-game winning streak snapped Saturday night, lost a road series for the first time all year.

Pirates begin month in unfamiliar territory — second place

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates are starting the month of June in unfamiliar territory — second place.

San Francisco beat Pittsburgh 5-3 Sunday at Three Rivers Stadium as the Pirates ended May one-half game behind St. Louis in the NL East. It's the first time since April 1990 that Pittsburgh wasn't on top at the end of a month.

The longest such streak ever was April 1926 to September 1928 by the New York Yankees.

Speaking of the '20s, the Giants and Pirates pretended it was 1939.

With both teams wearing old-style uniforms from '39, the Giants — wearing uniforms bearing the name New York — haven't played like a first-place team so far," manager Jim Leyland said. "If we do, we'll be in first place when it comes."

Elsewhere in the NL it was San Diego 10, St. Louis 0; Montreal 6, Cincinnati 2; Los Angeles 6, Chicago 2; and Philadelphia 6, Houston 3 in 11 innings. Atlanta at New York was rained out.

Bud Black (2-1) withstood Buechele's two-run homer and King's solo shot for the victory, allowing seven hits in seven-plus innings. Jeff Brantley pitched two innings for his sixth save.

Loser Zane Smith (5-4) is 0-4 the last two seasons against the Giants and 5-9 lifetime.

"We pitched well enough to win but we didn't have much offense," said Leyland, who seemed out of place in a red, white and blue uniform instead of the team's traditional black and gold.

At Busch Stadium, Darrin Jackson homered and drove in four runs and Tony Gwynn had three hits as San Diego routed St. Louis. Greg Harris (2-4) and three relievers combined to two-hit the Cardinals.

The Padres scored a season-high seven runs in the second inning. San Diego got a two-run homer from Jackson, who's hit in 13 straight games, a triple and three doubles among seven hits in the inning.

Rheal Cormier fell to 0-5 and was sent to the minors after the game.

NL roundup

By winning, the Giants averted a three-game weekend sweep — they haven't been swept in Pittsburgh since 1988 — and dealt the Pirates their 12th loss in 15 games. The Pirates were 1-8 on a recent West Coast road trip that included a three-game sweep in San Francisco.

Gant posts 26-second victory over Earnhardt in NASCAR Budweiser 500

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Harry Gant's magic is alive and well. The same can't be said for Ford.

The 52-year-old Gant drove his Oldsmobile to a 26-second victory over Dale Earnhardt Sunday in the NASCAR Budweiser 500. The victory was Gant's second straight at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Gant extended his own record as the oldest driver to win a NASCAR race. He said he didn't know how long he can keep it up. "You can't ever tell. Maybe when I'm 55 or 56," he said.

The victory punctuated the end of Ford domination through the first nine Winston Cup races this year. Dale Earnhardt won in a Chevrolet last week. Jimmy Hensley finished eighth for Ford's highest ranking Sunday.

Gant, who lapped the field winning on the high-banked, 1-mile oval last September, nearly did it again Sunday — and he shut the car off with a half lap to go as his fuel pressure flickered.

"I knew we had it and, sometimes, if you try to restart it like that you can burn a piston," said Gant, who had to be pushed to Victory Lane. Gant recorded an average speed of 109.389 mph and won $65,145.

Rusty Wallace finished third, Ernie Irvan fourth and Darrell Waltrip fifth.

Gant and Waltrip had the race to themselves for the final 60 laps — Gant trying to go 98 laps without a stop, Waltrip 96. Gant passed Waltrip on lap 460 in the first turn and soon they were the only drivers on the lead lap.

Both tried to stretch their fuel to the end, and Waltrip fell off the pace with a lap and a half left.

"I thought Harry might run out of fuel, but I really didn't think we would," Waltrip said. "We thought we could make it easy, but we didn't, so congratulations to Harry."

Gant's eighth top-five finish in the first 11 races moved him from third to second place in the season standings, within 70 points of Davey Allison.

"It's what we need, but we still need to do some work," said Gant, whose 17 career wins include four at Dover.

Palmer breaks discus mark

Wendell Palmer moved into a higher age bracket in Masters Track and Field this year, but the Pampa Middle School science teacher continues to break records.

Last weekend at a meet in Ponca City, Okla., Palmer, threw the 1.5 kilo discus 155-10 feet in the 60-64 age division to break the world record held by Jose Celaya of Spain since 1971.

"That record has stood up a long time. It felt good to break it," Palmer said.

That throw also broke the American discus mark held by Dr. Bob Richards, a former Olympic pole vault champion.

Palmer also won the 2.0 kilo discus in the open division and the 1.0 kilo discus in the 60-64 division. The 60-year-old Palmer also won gold medals in the shot and javelin events.

Dating to last season, Gant has finished in the top five in 16 of his last 20 races, with five victories.

Earnhardt said he "out-gas-mileaged" the other cars.

"We just needed another lap or two and old Harry would have been history," he said. The crucial break for Gant and Waltrip came on lap 280, when a collision between Mark Martin and Dave Marcis brought out a caution. Several of the top cars had just made pit stops on a green flag, but the caution left only five cars on the lead lap.

Top-ranked Miami earns time off after winning 4-3 squeaker over Cal State Fullerton

By TOM VINT
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Top-ranked Miami earned a few days off from coach Ron Fraser, who is hoping his last season at the school will end with his third College World Series championship.

The Hurricanes (55-8) used a two-run fielding error by Cal State-Fullerton shortstop Nate Rodriguez to spark a three-run seventh inning in a 4-3 victory Sunday night. The win moves Miami, the 1982 and '85 champion, to Wednesday's 4:06 p.m. CDT contest, where the 'Canes will wait for the winner of Tuesday's elimination game between Fullerton (43-16) and Florida State (49-20).

The Seminoles, who lost to Fullerton 7-2 in Friday's first round, snapped a five-game

CWS losing streak dating back to 1989 and eliminated California 5-4 earlier Sunday. The Bears (35-27) were the first team out of the 1992 tournament, having lost 4-3 in 13 innings to Miami Friday night.

College World Series

"We had a few good things happen to us," Fraser said of his win over the Titans. "We played good defense."

So did Fullerton, except on Rodriguez's one mistake. His backhand attempt to stop Dave Berg's hard grounder skipped into left-center with the bases loaded in the seventh inning of a 1-1 game. Miami scored two runs on the play and added another on Charles Johnson's RBI single one out later.

The three-run cushion was enough for Jeff Alkire and Danny Graves, who held Fullerton to four hits. Alkire (14-2) allowed two balls out of the infield, including a single with Chris Powell aboard in the bottom of the eighth. Powell was Alkire's ninth walk of the game.

"This was probably the worst control I've had all season," Alkire said. "I really hate to say this, but I think the rest (since throwing two four-hit, complete games in the regionals) hurt me."

Graves, a freshman, came on but bounced his first pitch for a wild pitch to let Powell and Nevin move up. Powell scored on Jason Moler's ground out and Steve Sisco singled Nevin in to make it 4-3 before Graves retired the final four Titans.

"I think the game was well-pitched on both sides," said Fullerton coach Augie Garrido, whose starter James Popoff (12-3) scattered three singles after a three-hit first-inning. Popoff went to the bench after a single, two walks and Berg's grounder in the seventh.

Garrido said he believes his team has a good attitude to come back against Florida State Tuesday night. Seminole coach Mike Martin feels the same about his club.

"Hey, we're still in this thing," Martin said after snapping his CWS losing streak.

Martin's team also had to hold on to win, but Martin did it differently. He stayed with starter Tim Davis (9-4), who threw more than 160 pitches to claim the complete-game win.

"It seems like when Tim pitches, our ball club realizes that if they get him five or six runs, they can win the game," Martin said. "If we score five or six runs, we're going to be in every ballgame that we play in."

Florida State also used a three-run inning for its cushion. Ty Mueller hit a three-run homer to take a 5-1 lead in the fifth.

California scrapped back with single runs in the seventh, eighth and ninth, but Davis retired the final three hitters after Chris Clapinski led off the Bear ninth with a homer.

"I could see the activity in the bullpen, and that even makes a pitcher work harder," Davis said. "I didn't want to come out of the game."

"We were very surprised," Cal coach Bob Milano said of Martin's decision to stay with Davis in the ninth. "Obviously he had enough command of his breaking pitch and his fastball. You have to give him some credit."

PUBLIC NOTICE

THE STATE OF TEXAS
TO: THE UNKNOWN HEIRS OF
WILLIAM H. IVEY JR. and
WILLIAM EDWARD IVEY,
(deceased).

DECEASED:
GREETINGS:
YOU AND EACH OF YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED TO
appear and answer before the Honorable District Court, 23rd Judicial District, Gray County, Texas, at the Courthouse of said county in Pampa, Texas, at or before 10 o'clock a.m. of the Monday next after the expiration of 42 days from the date of issuance of this citation, which is at or before 10 o'clock a.m. on Monday, the 22nd day of June, 1992, to then and there to answer the petition of ZALUAR GRACE IVEY, Plaintiff, filed in said Court on the 30th day of August, 1991, against HUBERT IVEY, JOHN
SHIRLEY, DOTTIE SWENSEN,
MARY WARD, FRANCES
COLLINS AND CYNTHIA
LAGRONE, AND THE UNKNOWN HEIRS OF
WILLIAM H. IVEY JR. and
WILLIAM EDWARD IVEY,
(deceased). Defendants, and said suit being numbered 27,886 on the docket of said Court, and entitled: "ZALUAR GRACE IVEY, Plaintiff vs. HUBERT IVEY,
JOHN SHIRLEY, DOTTIE SWENSEN,
MARY WARD, FRANCES COL-LINS AND CYNTHIA LAGRONE, AND THE UNKNOWN HEIRS OF
WILLIAM H. IVEY JR. and
WILLIAM EDWARD IVEY,
(deceased). Defendants." The said petition discloses that the nature of said suit is as follows:

A suit of adverse possession for the Plaintiff herein to have exclusive fee simple ownership of the following tracts of real property:
Lots Numbered Forty-Four and
Forty-Five (44 and 45), in block
Numbered Eleven (11), of the Wilcox Addition, of the City of Pampa, Gray County, Texas, as is shown by a duly recorded map or plat thereof in the deed records of said Gray County, Texas, I.N. and
G. survey; Lot Number Forty-Six
(46), in Block Numbered Eleven
(11), in the Wilcox Addition to Pampa, Gray County, Texas; by plat now on file in the deed records of Gray County, Texas,
I.N. and G. survey.

Furthermore, said suit includes a request for the Court to determine that the sole record holders of said property and the sole heirs of the record holders of said property are those persons named as Defendants in said suit.
The officer executing this writ shall promptly serve the same according to requirements of law, and the mandates hereof, and make due return as the law directs.
YOU HAVE BEEN SUED. YOU
MAY EMPLOY AN ATTORNEY.
IF YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY
DO NOT FILE A WRITTEN
ANSWER WITH THE CLERK
WHO ISSUED THIS CITATION
BY 10 O'CLOCK A.M. MON-
DAY, THE 22ND DAY OF JUNE,
1992, A DEFAULT JUDGMENT
MAY BE TAKEN AGAINST YOU AND EACH OF YOU.

The attorney for the Plaintiff is
Clay L. Balchin, 108, Sixth St.,
Borger, Texas, 79007.
ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND THE SEAL OF SAID COURT on this 8th day of May, 1992.

'Guys and Dolls' tops Tonys

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A revival of "Guys and Dolls" came up a winner with four Tony Awards, while the song-and-dance extravaganza "Crazy for You," a new show that uses old Gershwin songs, was named Broadway's best musical.

"Dancing at Lughnasa," Brian Friel's story of five unmarried Irish sisters who live together, was honored as the best play of the season Sunday night. It also won for best director, Patrick Mason, and best actress, Brid Brennan.

Gregory Hines won as best leading actor in a musical for his portrayal of jazz pioneer Jelly Roll Morton in "Jelly's Last Jam."

He thanked his director, George C. Wolfe, for giving Broadway "a musical dealing with African-American issues that doesn't have us happy and dancing all the time."

Newcomer Faith Prince, as the long-suffering Miss Adelaide in the revival of the 1950 Frank Loesser show "Guys and Dolls," was named best leading actress in a musical.

"This is why I eloped — I'm not very good at ceremonies," said a tearful Prince.

The show about Damon Runyon's dice-playing denizens of Broadway also won for best revival, directing (Jerry Zaks) and scenic design.

"Crazy for You," with music and lyrics by George and Ira Gershwin and a new book inspired by "Girl Crazy," gained three awards, including trophies for choreography and costume design.

"Falsettos," which tells of a family living in both heterosexual and homosexual circles, won for its score by composer-lyricist William Finn and for its book by Finn and director James Lapine.

In a year that saw many film and TV actors cross over to the stage, Tony winners included Glenn Close, Judd Hirsch, Larry Fishburne and Tonya Pinkins, who plays lawyer Livia Frye on the ABC soap opera "All My Children."

Pinkins won as best featured actress in a musical for "Jelly." Scott Waara, who sings "Big D" in "The Most Happy Fella," another revival of a Frank Loesser musical, was named best featured actor in a musical.

Close won as best leading actress in a play for portraying a torture victim in "Death and the Maiden." She said she hoped her small daughter "will grow up to see a world community where cruelty and abuse doesn't exist any more."

Hirsch was named best actor in a play for his role as an ill-tempered father in "Conversations with My Father." He held up a card for his hospitalized 89-year-old mother to read on TV. It said, "Mom — You are precious. I love you!"

Fishburne, a star of the film

"Boyz n the Hood," was honored as best featured actor in a play, "Two Trains Running."

"The Fantasticks," which opened in 1960 and is off-Broadway's longest running show, won a special Tony.

The 1991-92 season was marked by renewed interest in the theater generated by movie stars performing on Broadway.

Besides Close, film actors and other stars who took to stage included Richard Dreyfuss, Gene Hackman, Jessica Lange, Alec Baldwin, Alan Alda, Tony Randall, Rob Lowe, Lynn Redgrave, Raul Julia and Sheena Easton.

When the 1991-92 season began last fall, only one new American play — "Park Your Car in Harvard Yard" — was scheduled to open before Christmas.

The fall's only success was "Dancing at Lughnasa," which arrived in October from London. And the only new musical before Jan. 1 was "Nick & Nora," the season's most publicized flop, which closed a week after it opened.

Despite the recession, 24 productions opened on Broadway between the end of January and the end of April.

And audiences responded. During the last three weeks of April, more than 200,000 people saw a Broadway show each week, according to the League of American Theaters and Producers. Those numbers were the best since 1989.

and anti-monopoly legislation and said it would consider trade tariffs to protect domestic industries.

The ANC, one of 18 groups negotiating a new constitution with the white-led government, is widely expected to get the most votes when the 30-million black majority are allowed to participate in national elections.

ANC calls for mixed economy, some state intervention

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress, offering its most detailed economic plan yet, has called for an economy that would include state intervention in key industries while protecting property rights.

The ANC, the country's leading black opposition movement, has been steadily moving away from decades of socialist economic policy since it was legalized two years ago.

Wrapping up a four-day conference on Sunday, the ANC called for an economy containing important roles for the state, the private sector and the increasingly powerful trade unions.

But some economists said the ANC guidelines would undermine the country's economy, which is suffering from a 3-year-old recession but remains the most developed in Africa.

Ben van Rensburg, economist for the South African Chamber of Business, said proposals to end preferential treatment for foreign investors would hamper efforts to attract badly needed foreign capital.

"The ANC's policy has to be seen as a step in the wrong direction," van Rensburg told Business Day newspaper. "It will serve to weaken, rather than strengthen, the interest of foreign investors in South Africa."

The debate over South Africa's future economic policy has become almost as contentious as the battle over the new constitution and political system.

Whites, who dominate the economy, want guarantees that property and businesses will not be nationalized. They oppose any large-scale redistribution of wealth.

The ANC and other black organizations argue that the state must intervene to redress the huge imbalances between white wealth and black poverty.

The ANC economic guidelines addressed some of the fears expressed by businessmen. The Thousands protest against Serbian president, elections

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Yugoslav government felt the squeeze of mounting international sanctions today and faced widening domestic opposition to the war in Bosnia after a demonstration by tens of thousands of people.

Across the frontier in Bosnia-Herzegovina, warring factions agreed to a new cease-fire for the battered capital of Sarajevo, local media reported. It was to take effect today at 6:00 p.m. (noon EDT).

The truce appeared an attempt by Serb leaders in Bosnia to prove they are not responsible for the latest upsurge in fighting, despite the blame assigned by the U.N. Security Council in imposing sanctions Saturday.

Sarajevo was generally quiet Sunday after several days of intensive shelling by Serb artillery in surrounding hills.

At least 2,250 people have died in fighting in Bosnia since its Slavic Muslims and Croats, who account for nearly 60 percent of the republic's 4.3 million people, voted for independence on Feb. 29.

Tens of thousands demonstrated Sunday against Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, an authoritarian former Communist, and elections organized to legitimize his hold on the government.

About 50,000 people streamed through downtown Belgrade. Many chanted "Red Bandits," "Assassins" and "Slobo Resign."

It was the largest anti-government protest in Belgrade since March 1991, before the collapse in bloodshed of the old six-republic Yugoslav federation.

Two people died in last year's protest, and army tanks were called onto the streets to restore order.

"The enemies of the Serbian people are not abroad but in Belgrade," declared Vuk Draskovic, leader of the main opposition party, the Serbian Renewal Movement. "The Serbian people are suffering because they are the only nation in Europe that has not thrown off the corpse of communism."

Anarchy rules in Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — In the independent Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, chaos has become the order of the day and anarchy the king of the night.

As this war-weary country prepares to enter the second phase of an uncharted transition from communist to Islamic rule, uncertainty and apprehension have replaced jubilation and euphoria.

The month-old caretaker government that rose from the ashes of 14 years of Soviet domination commands little influence in the capital and virtually no authority beyond the snow-streaked mountains that ring the city.

Ineffective and divided, the new leadership is powerless against the well-armed warlords who have carved out fiefdoms in the countryside and whose laws are made at gunpoint.

Kabul has no police to patrol the streets, and Afghanistan has had no army since caretaker President Sibghatullah Mojaddidi ordered its demobilization.

At sunset the city resembles a ghost town as residents retreat behind the fortress-like walls that surround their homes. A decade-long night curfew remains in effect.

With no central security, bandits roam and loot at will, often targeting foreign embassies and residences. Some have taken over the homes of expatriates who fled in April when rival rebel groups battled for domination of Kabul.

"Every society has its thieves and

The United Nations and most of the world blame Serbia and Montenegro, the only two states in the new Yugoslavia, for the escalation of ethnic warfare in Bosnia.

The Serb-led Yugoslav army has aided Serb fighters who have seized some two-thirds of Bosnian territory since the independence vote, forcing more than 600,000 to flee their homes.

Serbian opposition parties accuse Milosevic and his ruling Socialists, the renamed Communists, for the violence.

The economic sanctions imposed on Yugoslavia by the United Nations on Saturday include a trade ban, an oil embargo and a freeze on overseas assets and airline flights. Imports of food and humanitarian supplies are allowed.

The Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency said Germany, the Netherlands and Switzerland were the first European nations to suspend the landing and overflight rights of JAT, the Yugoslav airline.

President Bush froze Yugoslav government assets in the United States on Sunday and Britain said it was doing the same today.

Sarajevo radio quoted Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, a Muslim, as saying the sanctions mark "the beginning of the end to the fascist policy" of Serbian leaders in Bosnia.

It quoted him as calling the sanctions "a deadly blow for their beastly behavior."

While casting his ballot on Sunday, Milosevic was defiant: "This is a price we have to pay because we are helping Serbs outside Serbia." The elections are for a new federal parliament and local councils in Serbia and Montenegro.

Although boycotted by the opposition and criticized by international organizations as undemocratic, Milosevic insists the elections are needed to establish state bodies of the reconstituted Yugoslav federation.

Turnout appeared light, but the electoral commission said it was about 60 percent, more than necessary to make the elections legal. Initial results were expected Monday.

robbers," said Commander Muslim, a senior defense ministry official. "Ours is no different."

"Yes there's chaos, yes there's disorder. But it's no worse than Los Angeles," he said.

Afghanistan's Islamic Leaders confidently predict order will soon be restored to the city, which saw at least 270 people killed and hundreds of buildings destroyed in the violent aftermath of President Najibullah's ouster.

Life changed almost overnight for Kabul's 1.5 million people as the new leadership sought to root out the last vestiges of Soviet influence and impose Islamic law.

Five times a day, the cry of "Allahu Akbar," "God is Great" reverberate from mosque loudspeakers. Prayer is mandatory for all civil servants — especially those who served the toppled regime.

Religious zealots have smashed thousands of bottles of Russian vodka and other spirits, and burned tons of communist literature and art. Women accustomed to Western-style dress must cover their heads and boys and girls now attend separate classes.

People no longer live in fear of the whistling rebel rockets that for years randomly rained destruction on the city. But there are still unsettling reminders of that bloody, turbulent period.

Tanks and armored vehicles, loaded with gun-packing rebels and flying the green flag of Islam still race through the streets by day, and streams of red and green tracer bullets light the night sky.

The guerillas who have known nothing but war have become bored with peace. At Kabul's hospitals, doctors say they treat dozens of people hurt by what has become known as "happy fire."

The relative peace in Afghanistan's capital is due largely to an agreement between Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, chief of the radical Hezb-e-Islami faction, and his long-time rival, Defense Minister Ahmed Shah Masood.

The pact, reached last week, calls for the resolution of the country's political crisis with national elections within six months and the withdrawal of militia loyal to General Abdul Rashid Dostum.

Dostum engineered the ouster of Najibullah's government, then kept Hekmatyar's fighters from seizing Kabul.

But many fear the agreement is doomed to failure.

Some rebel leaders oppose elections as either unworkable or un-Islamic.

Dostum, a strapping militia commander who has been compared to Genghis Khan, says he — and not the interim government — will decide when his forces leave the city and return to their base in northern Afghanistan.

The pact is also threatened by the refusal of an Iranian-backed coalition of eight Shiite parties to support the interim government unless it is given at least eight ministerial and vice-ministerial portfolios.
