County to celebrate 90th anniversary

Boffo birthday bash at Lake McClellan

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Plans remain on track for Saturday's birthday bash for Gray County, celebrating 90 years of history.

Festivities will center around Lake McClellan, which will be looking healthier than ever after a week of rain.

Elizabeth Meers, an organizer of the event, said plans call for the party to go on as scheduled. If rain forces a postponement or cancellation, she said it will be announced through radio stations KGRO 1230 AM or KOMX 100 FM.

However, County Treasurer Scott Hahn said the weatherman is cooperating.

"We expect to have the largest crowd for any activity of this nature ever in Gray County," he said. "We understand the weather is going to cooperate and Saturday will be a beautiful day. We have a large line-up of entertainment. We encourage people to come for as long as their schedule permits."

The celebration will feature a variety of food and selected arts and crafts.

Those attending are asked to bring lawn chairs for viewing entertainment.

"We started working on this back in 1991 and it has come together beautifully, including a number of area businesses supporting us through underwriting this," Hahn explained.

Acts will include the Adobe Walls Indian Dancers, poetry, square dancing and water skiing demonstrations.

The Carroll Doshier Game Preserve near Claude will also be on hand with displays of exotic game birds from his hunting area.

"Admission and entertainment will be free," Hahn stated, "so the only money they will need is for food and anything they want to buy. They can also fish throughout the day as long as they have a license."

History buffs interested in Route 66 will be able to scratch their itch with a booth of memorabilia from the famous highway, which winds through McLean and other area communities.

A mountain bike will be held at 11 a.m., featuring novices, followed by advanced riders.

Young fans of fishing can participate in a fishing rodeo throughout the day.

Children of all ages will be enamored by the Plum Creek Brigade of Amarillo, which displays clothing, tools and lifestyles of those living in the early 1800's.

Booths will open at 9 a.m. and at 10:30 a.m. media personality Bob Izzard will serve as master of ceremonies during opening remarks.

The day will conclude following a 9 p.m. reenactment of the rescue of two German children from Indians near the lake in the 1800's.

Food booths will include ice cream, hamburgers, corn dogs, hot dogs, barbecue, coffee and doughnuts.

Perhaps the culinary highlight of the day will be the McClellan Creek Chuck Wagon Camp with Son of A Gun Stew, Cowboy Chili and Texas beans.

Hahn said those heading south from Pampa on Highway 70 and following the signs will have no trouble finding the party.

"There will be people and signs directing them to where the parking is," he said. "There will be transportation via tractors pulling flatbeds to the actual area all day long and back."

Bush seeks global defense plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration is proposing to friendly nations, including Russia, the creation of a global defense group - potentially using U.S. Star Wars weaponry - to protect against any future nuclear ballistic missile attacks.

The administration hopes to win Russian acceptance of the idea, which it says is still evolving, when President Bush meets with President Boris Yeltsin in mid-June, a senior Pentagon official recently told Congress.

Administration officials say they believe Yeltsin will be receptive, but some private arms-control experts predict the Russians will see little in it to benefit them.

The administration acknowledges that with the former Soviet Union as a strategic and diplomatic partner, there is no immediate nuclear threat to either superpower from any country.

But it claims that in the future, Russia, particularly, could be threatened by emerging nuclear technology in several nations, including China, Iran, Iraq, India, North Korea, Syria and Pakistan.

The idea, if put into practice, could accomplish at least three major goals of the administration:

- Free the U.S. antimissile effort, the Strategic Defense Initiative, from the legal constraints of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. As long as the ABM treaty is kept in force, no large-scale SDI system could be built.

- Provide a new opening for persuading Congress to go beyond the immediate aim of building a ground-based antimissile system to protect only American territory. The administration wants to put antimissile weapons in space, too, and give U.S. commanders the capability to shoot down missiles anywhere in the world.

- Strengthen the new strategic partnership with Russia, which is to become the sole custodian of the nuclear weapons of the former Soviet Union. Russia has a limited antimissile capability now and may be interested in expanding it.

The fledgling proposal comes at a time when Congress is raising major questions about the need for SDI and its costs. The Congressional Budget Office said Wednesday it looms as the most expensive weapons system in history, and would cost nearly $8 billion annually - far above administration estimates - if funded over the next five years.

Stephen Hadley, assistant defense secretary for international security policy, told a House Armed Services panel recently that the administration was weighing the possibilities of creating a global antimissile organization. The member countries would first decide how the group would function, then could begin putting the system into effect before the turn of the century, he said.

The concept as outlined by Hadley would have three parts:

- Sharing of information that provides an early warning of ballistic missile launches.

- Cooperation in helping the organization's members "to improve or to acquire for the first time" antimissile capabilities. This appears to mean the sharing of U.S. antimissile technologies, but Hadley's statement did not elaborate on this.

- Cooperation in missile defense "activities." This would appear to refer to the actual use of antimissile systems - perhaps, for example, the coordinated use of U.S. missile interceptors and Russian launch-detection information to protect U.S., Russian or other territory under ballistic missile attack.

The Pentagon declined requests to interview Hadley or his aides on the subject.

In his statement to Congress, Hadley emphasized that the idea was in the formative stages and that it raised many tough questions.

For example, would each member of the group be required to commit to defending all the other members - the all-for-one and one-for-all basis of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization that for decades pitted the East bloc against the West?

New treatment eases AIDS patients' dilemma: Death or blindness

BOSTON (AP) - Imagine this: One medicine will keep you alive. Another will save your eyesight. But you cannot take both.

That is a dilemma for many people with AIDS. They can take AZT, a medicine that slows HIV, the AIDS virus, or they can take ganciclovir, a medicine that stops a blinding eye infection.

But since both drugs cause anemia, many cannot tolerate them together.

"A lot of people need to make a choice," said Dr. Jay S. Duker. "Go off AZT and shorten your life, or stay on AZT and go blind."

To give patients a third choice, researchers have developed a new way of delivering the eye medicine so it won't cause anemia. The strategy: Implant minuscule sustained-release pellets inside the eyeball.

This keeps the drug out of the bloodstream and inside the eye, where it is needed. And it is released at a slow, steady rate without the ups and downs of daily infusions.

This idea is just one of dozens of new approaches being developed to control opportunistic infections - the usually harmless germs that attack people with AIDS-weakened immune defenses. The pharmaceutical industry estimates that more than 40 drugs are being tested against these viruses, bacteria and other microscopic invaders common among AIDS patients.

Of all of the AIDS-related illnesses, one called cytomegalovirus, or CMV, retinitis is among the most frequent - and the most devastating. It strikes about 20 percent of AIDS patients. Untreated it means certain loss of sight.

In a treatment still considered experimental, doctors have surgically implanted the pellets in about 30 patients. Most of the cases have been handled by Dr. Rajiv Anand of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, and Duker at New England Medical Center in Boston.

"So far, we've had fairly spectacular results," Anand said.

The procedure has been 90 percent successful in halting the patients' sight-destroying CMV infections.

Until now, standard therapies for CMV retinitis have been ganciclovir and a newer medicine called foscarnet. Although foscarnet does not cause anemia, as ganciclovir and AZT do, about one-third of patients still cannot take it because it harms the kidneys.

Given the conventional way, both drugs have other drawbacks: They require daily intravenous infusions taking two or three hours to complete. Patients must have catheters permanently implanted to receive the infusions. And the virus typically returns after two months of treatment, requiring still higher doses.

Doctors say the pellets inside the eyes circumvent several of these drawbacks. They last for six months - a yearlong type will be tested soon - and in that time they block recurrence of the virus.

Some patients regard freedom from daily infusions as reason enough to get the pellets, even if they can still take AZT. Among them is Kevin Kraus, an assignment editor at a Miami television station.

"The thought of remaining on IV ganciclovir for the rest of my life didn't appeal to me," Kraus said. "I work full time. You can't spend two or three hours a day infusing."

He has earned a pellet in his right eye since January and has been free of retinitis.

The dot-shaped, plastic-covered pellets are about half the size of a peppercorn. The medicine they hold seeps slowly through holes in the plastic.

Surgeons install the pellets in 20 minute under local anesthesia. They cut the white of the eye and place the pellet in the eye's liquid center.

The pellets were devised by Dr. Thomas J. Smith and colleagues at the University of Kentucky.

Smith, now in private practice in Boston, said the approach was first envisioned for treating glaucoma. Doctors relieve the condition by drilling a laser hole in the eye to relieve pressure. However, the hole often heals shut. The pellets deliver a drug that prevents the hole from closing.

The pellets may be used for other eye problems, such as inflammation and bacterial infections, and can also be put inside the brain to deliver cancer-fighting drugs.

However, most pellet research so far has been aimed at stopping AIDS-related blindness. CMV retinitis develops late in the course of HIV disease. Patients typically live about a year after the eye disease begins.

"We are offering them this chance for a normal lifestyle at this stage of their disease," Duker said.

Doctors plan to test the ganciclovir pellets on 200 more patients at 10 or 12 hospitals around the country.

While the drugs AZT and DDI attack the AIDS virus directly, much of the success in improving the life spans and general well being of people with AIDS has been the discovery of treatments for opportunistic infections.

Medicines are now being tested to better control other AIDS-related problems, including herpes, Kaposi's sarcoma, cryptococcal meningitis, toxoplasmosis, weight loss and muscle weakness.

State releases new AIDS statistics

New information released by the Center for Disease Control through the Texas Department of Health indicates AIDS is now the third leading killer of adults 25-44.

Cases of AIDS have increased by 33 percent in women during the last two years, while infection among homosexual and bisexual men has decreased by 10 percent, the CDC reports.

In addition, detected cases of AIDS have increased 11 percent in blacks and 13 percent in Hispanics.

While it took eight years for the first 100,000 cases of AIDS to be spread, it only took two years for the next 100,000 Americans to be infected.

Fifty-five percent of all cases between September 1989 and November 1991 were transmitted by homosexual or bisexual men, while 24 percent have been spread by injectable drug use - a 20 percent increase.

Meanwhile, there has been a 44 percent increase in the spread of AIDS among heterosexuals, according to the CDC.

This year, they predict, another 40,000 Americans will be infected with HIV, the virus that spawns AIDS.

That will increase figures that currently indicate one in every 100 adult males and one in every 800 adult females in the United States is infected.

Sherrer moves to Carver Center

Travis Elementary School Principal Mike Sherrer will be transferred to a Carver Center central administration position for the 1992-93 school year, Pampa Superintendent Dawson Orr confirmed today.

Sherrer, who served two years as Travis principal after moving to Pampa from Amarillo, will be working with the city's six public elementary schools, Orr said.

"Mike has requested to be reassigned and we are planning to have him at the central office to work with the elementary schools," Orr stated.

"At this point he will provide administrative leadership for our federal programs such as Chapter 1, help with appraisals and general administration, coordination and support."

Sherrer could not be reached for comment this morning on his new assignment.

Orr said Sherrer will continue as Travis principal through June 29, taking over his new duties August 1.

The superintendent said the district is close to hiring a new principal for Austin Elementary School following the retirement of Bill Jones.

Orr said he believes the district also will be able to locate a new Travis principal from the statewide pool of candidates.

Concerning the vacancy created at Pampa Middle School when principal Ron Wood announced he was leaving to take the helm at Panhandle High School, Orr said two candidates were interviewed Wednesday and a third is meeting with district administration today.

Orr said all of those under consideration for principal jobs in Pampa are people with previous administration experience.

"We don't feel the people we are looking for can be seeking their first administration job," he said. "We believe this job requires a good deal of experience." — Bear Mills

Police seek street sign, park vandals

Pampa police and Crime Stoppers are searching for the person or persons responsible for a string of criminal mischiefs around the city.

Crime Prevention Officer Bryan Hedrick said the spree began May 23 and, according to police incident reports, continued through Wednesday.

Most of the vandalism, theft and damage has occurred in the northeast section of Pampa along 30th in the area commonly referred to as the Tree Streets.

Street signs at the corners of Aspen and 30th and Aspen and Beech were pushed over with cars and a barricade damaged at Beech and 30th.

There were also street signs stolen at Duncan and 30th, Aspen and 30th and Beech and 30th.

Damage was also reported Wednesday in Fraser Park near Evergreen and 16th.

Since April, several incidents occurred in Central Park including removal of chains from swing sets, people sawing up park benches, cutting limbs off trees and dumping unknown chemicals on the grass.

Unknown offenders also stole a Neighborhood Crime Watch sign from the corner of Neel and Crawford within the past two weeks.

Hedrick said anyone with information leading to the arrest or indictment of the person or persons responsible could be eligible for a cash reward by anonymously calling the Crime Stoppers line, 669-2222.

Alternate plans announced if fund-raiser is rained out

If the weather continues to be cold and wet Saturday, the mud volleyball tournament to benefit the Gray County Area Chapter of the American Red Cross will be postponed, said Lynda Duncan, chapter manager.

After a week of near-constant rain, there's no problem finding enough mud for the tournament. However, unseasonably cool temperatures could hamper the volleyball players.

Unless the weather is sunny and warm Saturday, Duncan said, the tournament will be moved to 10 a.m. June 6 at Recreation Park, east of the city.

Saturday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a chance for showers with temperatures in the 70s.

State comptroller: Fraud unlikely in Texas Lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Several thousand Texans this evening will get their first lottery tickets, but they still can't claim any prizes won until Friday.

Lottery Director Nora Linares says about 3,000 tickets have been sent to each of 14 cities around the state where lottery kickoff parties are planned for tonight.

Those tickets will be given free to partygoers as the lottery prepares to start operating its instant-win game at 6 a.m. Friday.

With final technical glitches being cleared up, Comptroller John Sharp said Wednesday that the chances of someone defrauding the new Texas Lottery are slim.

"This is easily going to be the most secure lottery every put up," Sharp said. "Fraud is very, very difficult to do."

The comptroller and Lottery Director Nora Linares said technicians and lottery employees are finishing installation and training for ticket-validation equipment at the 14,712 retail stores where $1 instant-win tickets will be sold.

The tickets — offering a chance at prizes ranging from $2 to $10,000 — must be activated before sale and validated when redeemed. A winning ticket can be validated through a telephone-computer hookup only once, an act that will be recorded at the lottery's central computer.

Sharp said that should make it impossible for someone to try to cash in phonies or redeem previously claimed tickets.

"In order to get your money from this system, it has to be validated from the bar code on the back of the ticket ... In terms of someone printing fake tickets and things like that, we've virtually eliminated the possibility of fraud," he said.

Sharp also indicated that because ticket sales are starting 47 days earlier than the lottery's original deadline, the game may generate more than the $461 million profit he has forecast for the current two-year state budget.

If the lottery earns its expected $1 million daily, the gambling game could net $508 million for the Treasury.

About 127 million tickets have been shipped to retail merchants statewide, Ms. Linares said.

Retailers are being encouraged to redeem smaller winning tickets on the spot. For those winning prizes of $600 or more, regulations call for tickets to be cashed at lottery claim centers located in 24 cities.

Ms. Linares said the lottery will withhold 20 percent of winnings from the big prizes for the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS also will be notified of people winning $600 or more.

Also, the lottery will check to see if winners owe back state taxes, child-support payments or state-backed students loans. If so, debts will be deducted from prizes, she said.

Sharp said lottery franchises proved very popular along the Texas-Louisiana and Texas-Mexico borders, probably because of lotteries that have been operated on the other sides.

The largest category of retailers licensed, more than 7,000, were convenience stores. But several large chains, including HEB grocery stores and Winn-Dixie, have chosen not to sell tickets for now, Ms. Linares said.

Surgeon declines to discuss efforts to save Kennedy

LUBBOCK (AP) — One of the doctors who worked to save President John F. Kennedy refuses to break his 29-year vow of silence as other doctors come forward with theories about the president's assassination.

Dr. Malcolm Perry, director of vascular surgery at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, says he will not talk publicly about his efforts to treat the mortally wounded Kennedy.

In the May 27 edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Perry is described as the "surgeon who worked the hardest to try to save the patient." Perry performed a tracheostomy in an effort to create an air passage for Kennedy.

But Perry remains mum as others come forward.

Six physicians who worked to save Kennedy spoke out in the JAMA article in defense of the conclusion that Kennedy was struck by two bullets that entered from behind.

Such a conclusion supports the 1964 Warren Commission finding that Kennedy was killed by a single gunman, Lee Harvey Oswald.

The doctors' findings are contrary to a recent book written by former Parkland Hospital physician Charles Crenshaw.

Crenshaw asserts that Kennedy was shot in the neck from the front, which raises questions of a second gunman.

Perry's tracheostomy on Kennedy initially left pathologists dumbfounded.

"The tracheostomy performed on the president at Dallas in an attempt to save his life obliterated the exit wound through the front of his neck near the Adam's apple," U.S. Navy pathologist James Joseph Humes said in the JAMA article.

Pathologists did not know that Perry had performed the tracheostomy until seven hours after the autopsy's completion.

"The light came on when I talked to Dr. Perry," Humes said in the article. "Of course the bullet exited through the neck."

Groups criticize list of extra-hazardous employers

AUSTIN (AP) — Organized labor and business lobbyists criticized as misleading a list of extra-hazardous employers. But for different reasons.

The Texas Workers' Compensation Commission on Wednesday identified 46 businesses that have job accident rates in excess of similar size companies in similar fields.

The listing was the first one made under the workers' compensation reform law that was passed in 1989.

Under the law, the extra-hazardous companies can either work with the Workers' Compensation Commission to put into practice accident prevention plans, or appeal their designation.

But Joe Gunn, president of the Texas AFL-CIO, said the list lacked credibility.

He said minor injuries are counted the same against employers as a fatal job accident, and that workplaces with infirmaries are able to avoid detection because if the injured person reports to the facility each day there is no official lost work time.

"I don't think a mashed finger and a death ought to be counted the same," he said.

Linda McKee, a spokeswoman for the Workers' Compensation Commission, said fatalities are counted differently than injuries, but among injuries there is no distinction based on the severity.

McKee said officials have heard about employers hiding their injured workers, but added, "The law stipulates that the employer is required to report an accident when the employee loses more than one day of work time."

Dane Harris, president of the Texas Association of Business, attacked the list from a different angle.

He said many times an employer has an unsafe record because the employees don't have safe work habits.

"Some of these statistics can be attributed to situations that are not necessarily related to a lack of safety

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Invasion

The government is picking on Native Americans again. Recently, federal agents invaded five reservations in Arizona and seized more than 700 gambling machines.

At one reservation, Fort McDowell, enraged Yavapai Indians fought back. In a tactic worthy of Sitting Bull fighting Custer, tribe members maneuvered "battered pickups and giant earthmovers" to blockade from 25 to 50 FBI agents and federal marshals inside a casino for eight hours. The Associated Press reported.

Remember, reservations historically are independent "nations" able to run their own affairs. Unfortunately, the forked-tongue U.S. government, in the 1988 Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, revoked some of the Indians' sovereignty. It prohibited gambling on reservations located in states, such as Arizona, that ban gambling.

As a result, hundreds of jobs have been lost. AP reported, "Gilbert Jones, the (Yavapai) tribe's vice chairman, said the (seized) machines were worth about $3 million." From Oct. 1 to March 31 the gaming operations at Fort McDowell alone brought the Indians $19 million.

How will the Indians survive without their jobs? Arizona Gov. Fife Symington has promised the Indians unemployment benefits. But the last thing the Indians need is more government handouts.

For 120 years Indians have suffered from such "aid." The result? After an exhaustive, eight-part investigation, The Arizona Republic concluded that federal programs were "robbing Indians of their self-esteem and keeping them in a degraded position of dependence."

We just saw 40 years of welfarism in the inner cities go up in smoke in the Los Angeles riots. When will we learn that, whether on the reservations or in the inner cities, welfarism breeds degradation, dependency, and despair? In recent years some Indians have begun developing reservation resources, building hotels and casinos to lift thousands of their tribe members from dependency to dignity. Such enterprise should be encouraged, not prohibited.

Under pressure from pro-Indian sentiment across the land, Symington "promised to negotiate with the Fort McDowell tribe" about using some machines. AP reported. But he won't negotiate with the other four reservations because they have initiated a lawsuit over the issue.

In fact, "sovereign" Indians should have to negotiate with no one. Governors and state Legislature should raise no objections to the operation of casinos on sovereign Indian territory. And the federal government should replace its harmful welfarism with a recognition of Indians' sovereignty.

Awful price of fighting war on drugs

Evelyn Charlene Ellis married Hubert Owen Ellis before making the depressing discovery that he had murdered his first wife. Having been choked and threatened with death by her husband—a heavy drinker who owned several guns—she knew better than to cross him.

But when undercover agents arrested him in Alabama for drug dealing, they also punished her by seizing the 60 acres where their home was located, which she owned. Since the land had been used to "facilitate" a drug violation, Mrs. Ellis was treated as a party to the crime—as if she could have stopped it.

A federal appeals court said that although she had good reason to be terrified of her husband, and although a lower court had found she was essentially his "slave," she had a duty to either report him to the police or flee, whatever the risk. She failed to do either, the court said, and has to suffer the consequences of her wrongdoing.

Unlike Mrs. Ellis, Kevin Perry may not be innocent, but he's a petty offender at worst. The New Hampshire man and his wife were arrested in 1988 for growing four marijuana plants behind their home and pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor, for which they paid a fine. Their troubles were just beginning. Shortly afterward, the authorities seized their mobile home, worth $22,000. It took more than a year of litigation before the government agreed to return it—for $2,500.

Punishments that are wrong for the innocent and often excessive for the guilty—that's the effect of an increasingly popular law enforcement method known as asset forfeiture, which allows the government to confiscate the property of people who fall under the suspicion of police fighting the war on drugs. It's a rigged game in which the usual rules of our criminal justice system don't apply.

One of those rules is the presumption of innocence. If law enforcement officials want to put you in prison for a drug offense, they have to prove your guilt. But if they want to take your money and other property, they only need some halfway plausible reason ("probable cause") to think you've committed a crime, however minor.

Once they've taken it, of course, you can get it back. All you have to do is prove you've done absolutely nothing wrong. The government doesn't have to prove a thing. Even if you've been found innocent of the criminal charges that accompanied the seizure, you're presumed guilty in the battle to get your property back.

Overcoming the burden of proof can be hard even for the most upright citizens. How does a mother prove she didn't know her son was using the family car to transport drugs? How does a landlord prove he didn't know a tenant was a drug dealer? How does a farmer prove he didn't know an interloper was growing cannabis on a remote plot of his land?

The effort is also expensive, and even if you win, you're still out the money to pay your lawyer, which can be more than the value of the property you've recovered. In any case, getting a lawyer may be impossible because if you have enough money to pay him, the government may confiscate the money as the fruits of crime.

Bad cops know most victims have no recourse. In black areas of Washington, D.C., reports USA Today, "police routinely confiscate small amounts of cash and jewelry on the streets and in parks—even when no drugs are found or charges filed." That's right: Police stop and search citizens on the flimsiest of hunches, find no contraband, take their money ($4 in one instance) and then send them on their way—having meted out punishment for a crime no one has proven.

People with badges are normally assumed to be acting to uphold the law, not seeking their own gain. When it comes to relieving reputed drug violators of their property, however, police and drug agents have an unusual incentive: Law enforcement agencies get to keep what they seize. Every seizure is a windfall for them.

What all this illustrates is how far we've gone to combat the largely fraudulent menace of drugs. We've given up normal law enforcement because it doesn't work very well against crimes which, unlike robbery or rape, have no direct victim. So we resort to methods that aim at instilling terror in the populace, inflict punishment wildly out of proportion to the crime, erode respect for the law, penalize innocents as well as offenders and leave our liberties at the mercy of overzealous cops.

All this is justified as the price of winning the war on drugs. But we're not winning—and the persistence of drug use and drug trafficking attests. All we're doing is proving that the sacrifices required for victory are worse than the consequences of surrender.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 28, the 149th day of 1992. There are 217 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: One hundred years ago, on May 28, 1892, the Sierra Club, dedicated to the cause of conservation and preserving nature, was organized in San Francisco.

On this date: In 1863, the first black regiment from the North left Boston to fight in the Civil War.

In 1934, the Dionne Quintuplets—Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne—were born to Elzire Dionne in Callender, Ontario, Canada.

In 1937, Neville Chamberlain became prime minister of Britain.

In 1940, during World War II, the Belgian army surrendered to invading German forces.

In 1957, the National League gave its approval for the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants baseball teams to move to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

'Murphy Brown' and her baby

Somebody who watches a lot more network television than I do was telling me about what was going on in a network sitcom, "Murphy Brown."

Candace Bergen, I learned, plays the title role in the show, which involves a television news staff. Wasn't there a popular program several years ago about a television news staff as well?

I seemed to recall Mrs. Dick Van Dyke played in it, but I could be wrong. I gave up most network TV when I first got cable and would watch World War II documentaries on A&E. The good guys always win in those.

Anyway, my friend said to me, "Murphy Brown is pregnant on the show."

"Oh yeah, Who's her husband?" I asked.

"She doesn't have one."

"Wait a minute," I said. "You mean a clean-cut lady like Candace Bergen is going to have an illegitimate child on network television?"

"Today's modern woman," my friend went on, "doesn't always need a husband if she wants to have a baby. Murphy Brown is an independent woman of the '90s. If she wants to have an illegitimate child that's her business."

I guess I got told.

I was just under the impression that no matter how liberated women had become, no matter how many of yesterday's taboos have been forgotten, it was still considered unacceptable behavior to have an out of wedlock child.

Wrong again.

"It happens in the entertainment business all the time," my friend explained.

A long time ago, the worst possible thing that could happen to a female was to become pregnant and not have a husband.

You young people out there will get a kick out of this:

There was something called a "shotgun wedding" in those days.

That was when an unmarried girl became pregnant and pointed a finger at whom she contended was the father.

Her father would then explain to the young man so fingered he was, indeed, going to marry his daughter. If he balked in any way, the father of the bride would hold a shotgun over his future son-in-law, if necessary, during the ensuing ceremony.

A lot of men in those days who impregnated women, believe it or not, didn't have to be threatened to marry the mother of their baby.

It was considered the right and manly thing to do. I guess that's how backwards we were in those days.

We had this stupid thing around "honor."

I suppose it really would be an inconvenience to some of today's women to have a husband around along with the baby.

Murphy Brown is a very busy person with her career. She can put her baby in day care, or hire a full-time nanny on her salary, but the father of the child would just get in the way and might even ask her to do something wifely occasionally—like cook a meal, the Lord forbid.

Sociologists say one reason there are so many problems in poor, urban areas is that a lot of poor, young girls are having illegitimate children and the family structure has gone to hell.

What has any of that got to do with the fact that the fictional character Murphy Brown got knocked up on network television with no ring on her finger?

You tell me.

How government can aid underclass

In a recent column, I asserted that the problem of America's underclass is not, at bottom, economic at all, but moral. This flies directly in the face of the liberals' basic assumption that there is nothing wrong with America's poor that money, distributed by the welfare bureaucracy either directly (in the form of cash and food stamps) or indirectly (in the form of special education, free medical care, etc.) can't solve.

They couldn't be more mistaken. People will not shake off the mentality of dependency and become constructive members of society unless their more brutish impulses are restrained by religious or at least ethical training, and unless an allegiance to such norms as the work ethic is fostered by membership in a stable family structure. I realize that at this point the argument tends to become circular (how can a poor person born on the streets become a member of a stable family?), but the fact that the problem is knotty or even insoluble in the case of particular individuals doesn't invalidate the point, let alone justify just throwing money at such people.

There are, however, certain things of an economic nature that government can do to ameliorate the problem, even though they fall far short of solving it. One of the simplest and best is HUD Secretary Jack Kemp's proposal for "enterprise zones" in our inner cities.

Essentially, this proposal would create zones in which entrepreneurs who are willing to live, work and invest in them would not have to pay a capital gains tax in the businesses thus created. The result would be new locally owned enterprises providing new jobs for people willing and able to work, as well as new income tax revenues for government. To repeat, enterprise zones won't solve the whole problem, but they are certainly a step in the right direction.

This proposal, which is closely identified with Secretary Kemp, was adopted by the Bush administration and has been sitting in the "in" basket of the Democrat-controlled Congress for three years, gathering dust. Now, in the wake of the Los Angeles riots, it appears that bipartisan support may at last be building to pass it. It is, to say the least, high time.

What has taken Congress so long? Predictably, the Democratic leaders have tried to blame President Bush. "He didn't give it a high priority," they pout—as if they leap with alacrity to pass bills to which Mr. Bush gives a high priority. (Eliminating the capital gains tax altogether, for example?) Since when, in any case, has the Party of Compassion claimed to need a prod from Mr. Bush to do something so clearly helpful to the poor?

No, the real reason for the Democrats' sluggishness in authorizing enterprise zones is probably the fact that implementing them wouldn't require the creation of another elaborate patronage network of welfare bureaucrats, like those who administer food stamps, Head Start, Medicaid, and the rest. All it would require is a bill exempting certain types of businesses from the capital gains tax. What juicy boondoggle is there in that?

Anyway, why let a Republican administration get the credit for such an original and constructive idea? So the proposal moldered on Capitol Hill until the Los Angeles riots breathed new life into it.

It may well be that, in the process, they also breathed new life into the presidential prospects of Jack Kemp. Kemp's name has featured prominently in discussions of possible Republican nominees for years, but recently he has seemed so sidelined by a Cabinet job in a difficult and unrewarding field. If enterprise zones are created at last, and work as well as expected, Kemp will deserve—and get—another look.

Reader swears the movies are more vulgar

DEAR ABBY: I have a complaint, and I don't know to whom I should address it, so I chose you.

Why must the latest crop of films insult our values, intelligence and morals?

The language used in some of our "best" movies and some TV shows is very low-down and vulgar. I do not know a single person who uses such filthy language.

Abby, maybe I am out of step. Would you please take a poll to find out if I am alone in my complaint? I am not talking about "hell" and "damn." I mean the words beginning with "s" and "f." Thank you.

AN AVERAGE 33-YEAR-OLD FEMALE

DEAR AVERAGE: Count me as one for your side. OK, readers ... postcards only, please. Take note of this special address: P.O. Box 539, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

DEAR ABBY: During several recent trips to my brother's home, I have witnessed some behavior that I believe to be sexual abuse. I am writing to you because I believe his behavior to be subtle enough to be ignored as abusive, and I am sure my brother would not participate in it if he were made aware of it.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

He has ignored my warnings and thinks I am being extreme. The behaviors are:

1. Calling his 4-year-old daughter his "lover" while holding her and kissing her.
2. Taking baths with her and skinny-dipping with her in a small, secluded backyard pool.

My psychologist friend tells me that this kind of behavior with children 2 years old or older constitutes sexual child abuse. Please respond quickly. Maybe he will pay more attention to you. His wife is blind to all of this.

WORRIED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR WORRIED: While your brother may not be guilty of sexual abuse (standards vary from family to family), he is guilty of inappropriate behavior.

He and his wife should consult a professional to discuss what the behavior you mentioned means to him — and, if it is indeed innocent behavior, he needs to learn more appropriate ways of expressing affection for his daughter.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my 90s and have been telling my friends that I am slowing down. The other day, I had a note from a retired dean of a college. He wrote, "I am 77, and I have slowed up."

I asked my nephew which expression was correct, "slowing up" or "slowing down," and he said, "That's a good question." (No answer.)

Then I asked a Sunday school teacher. He said, "Write to Dear Abby. I'll bet she will have the answer for you, and I will be waiting to read her answer in the newspaper."

So, Dear Abby, which is correct: "slowing down" or "slowing up"?

A LITTLE OLD LADY IN OTTUMWA, IOWA

DEAR LADY: Since "slowing up" and "slowing down" mean the same thing, they are both correct. (This reminds me of that old Abbott and Costello routine — "Down is up.")

Showing dad how to fish

As part of National Kids' Fishing Month, the Fun Tournaments in June will have a special deal for the area youngsters. On June 4th at Lake Meredith and again on June 18th at Lake Greenbelt, ALL kids under 17 may fish "free," if accompanied by an adult contestant. There are thousands and thousands of kids who would love to go fishing. Find one and bring her/him to a Thursday evening Fun Tournament. It will be a memory that they cherish forever.

Adult entry fee is only $20. Registration opens at 4:30 p.m. and the fishing is from 6 until 9 p.m.

HE'S BACK

After missing nearly a year of fishing the Thursday evening Fun Tournaments because of his work schedule, Hutchinson County deputy sheriff MIKE HARBER returned to his winning ways at Lake Greenbelt. Using a "secret spinnerbait," Mike became the first three-time winner as he outdistanced the competition with a three-bass limit weighing 6.97 lbs. With 50 entries braving the rainy weather, first place was worth $350.

Second place and $150 went to Mike's boat partner(!), BRAD CARPENTER of Borger who caught bass totaling 4.70 lb. $100 third place prize money went to RICK CRUTCHFIELD of Panhandle for his bass that weighed 3.81 lbs. (NOTE - Rick just returned from fishing a BIG BASS tournament at Lake-of-the-Pines where he won $40,000!)

Fourteen of the fifty entries brought at least one bass to the scales, including two kids who out-fished their dads! Jim Allison's son DEREK of Lefors caught a 1.27 lb. bass, and JASON BAGGETT of Pampa gave his dad Jimmy a fishing lesson by catching a 1.54 lb. largemouth bass.

HONEY HOLE. The Trophy Bass Magazine of Texas, takes issue with a plan of the fisheries division of Texas Parks and Wildlife's to set up a permit and fee system on fishing tournaments. Editor Jerry Dean expressed his anger over the increasing arrogance at TPW and their "Boss Hog" attitude on the date and time of a meeting of something called the Freshwater Advisory Council.

"If TP & WD wants us to give them our support for their projects, then let's demand they hear our opinions and viewpoints. At present the boys in Austin have a Freshwater Advisory Council giving them suggestions. Have any of the board members asked you for your opinion on anything? Have you had any personal contact with these individuals, or is it as I suspect, their own opinions that TP & WD receives?" asked Mr. Dean in the May edition of HONEY HOLE.

Agassi advances at French Open

PARIS (AP) - Andre Agassi routed Italy's Gianluca Pozzi 6-0, 6-2, 6-1 today to advance to the third round of the French Open with the most lopsided victory yet in the men's competition.

The 11th-seeded Agassi, who lost in the final the past two years, needed less than 90 minutes to crush Pozzi, ranked 54th in the world.

His match kicked off a hectic day in the Grand Slam event, with the schedule crowded because of rain Wednesday afternoon. On tap were 31 of the 32 men's second-round matches and 21 women's second-round matches.

The top-seeded defending champions, Jim Courier and Monica Seles, were among those in action. Courier faced Austrian-olay-court player Thomas Muster and Seles was to play German qualifier Karin Kschwendt.

In women's matches today, seventh-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain beat Veronika Martinek of Germany 6-2, 6-0, 12th-seeded Nathalie Tauziat of France defeated Ginger Helgeson of the United States 3-6, 6-1, 6-3 and Canadian-born Mary Pierce of France beat Larissa Savchenko-Neiland of Latvia 6-2, 6-3.

Sixth-seeded Guy Forget, the hometown favorite, has been the only prominent casualty on the men's side, losing in straight sets Wednesday to Belgium's Bart Wuyts. All 16 of the seeded women have survived.

Agassi said he was astounded that his match with Pozzi was so easy.

"Usually you have one or two moments where you think the match might slip away, but I didn't," he said. "He was like a ball machine out there ... I couldn't have struck the ball much better."

In off-the-court action, John McEnroe was fined $7,500 for swearing during his first-round loss to Nicklas Kulti on Tuesday. An official statement said the fine was determined after interviews with court supervisors and a review of video tape of the match.

On Wednesday, the focus was on Jimmy Connors, who lost to fourth-seeded Michael Stich 7-5, 3-6, 6-7 (4-7), 6-1, 6-2 in a first-round match.

Now that he and John McEnroe have completed quick and possibly final exits from the tournament, the 39-year-old Connors wondered what tennis was going to do without them. He said was not sure the younger breed of champions can fill the void that he and McEnroe will leave.

"Nobody has really come out and taken the hand-off," Connors said at a crowded post-match news conference. "I mean, my time and McEnroe's time we've had it. Isn't it time for somebody else to take over? I don't know if that's happening."

The 33-year-old McEnroe said Tuesday that he wouldn't be back for another French Open. Connors indicated he's leaning in the same direction.

Asked if he'd return, he replied, "Do I have to play?"

"I better take that one year at a time," he added. "But I will say that playing five sets on clay now, here, is very difficult for me. Maybe they will change my matches to two out of three sets."

Apart from the dramatic departures of Connors and McEnroe, the tournament has been marked by few surprises and by two mildly disruptive rain delays.

Connors, who like McEnroe failed to win the title here despite repeated tries, said he wasn't impressed that Courier, like Michael Chang in 1989, had won the French Open at a young age.

"If they come in here and win it, good job," Connors said. "They have got another 10, 15 years to put on their career and to continue doing that, time after time after time, match after match after match. And that is what makes a career. Not a one shot here, a one shot there. And if they can stay around and do that for 10, 15 years, then they deserve everything they get."

Jimmy Connors has his right shoulder tended to during his match Wednesday in Paris.

Connors suggested that some young players were getting too much, too soon, without paying their dues.

"Basically, there's not as much of an emphasis on winning and being the absolute best anymore," he said.

"There is an overabundance of money in the game," he went on. "The only way to make a living when I first got in the game was to win ... which in turn got you a shoe deal or a racket deal or a clothing deal or a commercial - not the other way around. That wasn't made before you won."

Beyond won-lost records, he made clear his belief that the younger players lack charisma.

"Somebody in today's tennis is going to have to come out to the forefront with their tennis - project themselves in a way where they can take over now. And not only on the court, but also sitting here talking to you guys ... that gives you something to write about, outside of Connors and McEnroe."

"Don't get me wrong. I love it. Really, I'm going to be the first one to the newstand tomorrow to see what you guys write. But isn't it time?"

Jordan rules over Cleveland, 112-89

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan knows numbers. The big ones he puts on the board and those that are ahead.

"Six is the next number, and that's our next opportunity," Jordan said Wednesday night after he scored 37 points to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 112-89 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers and give them a 3-2 lead in the NBA Eastern Conference final.

"We want to end it and move on," said Jordan. "Hopefully, this final period motivated us."

The Bulls can end the series with a victory in Game 6 at Richfield Coliseum. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played in Chicago Sunday night.

The Bulls were not looking that far ahead going into the fourth quarter when their nine-point lead had been trimmed to 73-71. Then a 15-0 run in a span of 5:40 put the game away for the defending champions.

A swarming defense, taking advantage of Cleveland's foul troubles, and scoring help from reserves Scott Williams, B.J. Armstrong and Cliff Levingston - each finishing with 12 points - completed the task.

"We had great defense in the fourth quarter," Jordan said. "We controlled everything. Cleveland became tentative because of foul trouble."

So much so that the Cavaliers did not score a field goal until Larry Nance hit with 3:41 to play, shortly before he fouled out along with John "Hot Rod" Williams.

"When your big guys are in foul trouble like that and you depend on them, it really hurts," Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens said. "Brad (Daugherty) injured his hand early in the game and couldn't hold the ball."

Daugherty, the team's leading scorer in the playoffs with a 21.5 average, finished with five points. He injured the middle finger of his right hand in the first quarter and had it taped to his ring finger.

"We don't have a lot of adjustments to make," said Wilkens. "Remember, we were in it all the way through the third quarter."

Unlike the first four games which were blowouts for the most part, there were seven lead changes and eight ties in a first half that found the Bulls on top 46-38.

The Bulls threatened to pull away several times in the third quarter, but three 3-pointers by Mark Price, who finished with 24 points, kept the Cavaliers within range.

Daugherty finally scored with 1:43 left in the third period and a three-point play by Danny Ferry cut what had been a nine-point lead to 73-71. The Cavaliers would get no closer, partly because Price missed most of the fourth quarter with a foot injury.

After Chicago's decisive run, the only excitement turned out to be Stacey King's flagrant foul against Ferry with 1:02 to play. King was ejected.

"I was going for the ball, there was nothing intentionally," said King. "He just happened to be Danny Ferry."

Ferry said, "It didn't bother me. It probably looked a lot worse than it was."

Ferry earlier in the day was fined $5,000 for punching Jordan in Game 4 Monday.

The Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan shoots over Cleveland Cavaliers' Brad Daugherty Wednesday.

Miami tops field in Series

By The Associated Press

Ron Fraser, about to retire after 30 seasons as coach of Miami, will have the top seed when it plays California to open the College World Series.

"I'd like to go out and take home a national championship," Fraser said. "If I had a wish, I'd like to end my career in Omaha."

The NCAA championship begins Friday at Rosenblatt Stadium in Omaha, Neb., and concludes June 6. Miami (53-8) and California (35-26) play as part of an opening doubleheader with fourth-seeded Cal State-Fullerton (42-15) and fifth-seeded Florida State (48-19).

Second-seeded Wichita State (56-9), which lost last year's championship game to Louisiana State, plays Pepperdine (44-11-1) Saturday in the double-elimination tournament, followed by a game between third-seeded Texas (46-15) and Oklahoma (42-22). The seeds and pairing were announced Tuesday night.

Texas coach Cliff Gustafson agreed with the seedings, saying, "Miami and Wichita State are my choices as co-favorites."

The Longhorns beat the Sooners three times during the regular season: 6-3 at Oklahoma City, and 3-2 in 10 innings and 11-10 at Austin.

"Any time Oklahoma and Texas tee up, it's anybody's ball game," Gustafson said. "In both of the wins, we were forced to come from behind."

"The Texas rivalry has always been a great one and the three previous games this season were all close," Oklahoma coach Larry Cochell said. "We look forward to the task."

Fullerton coach Augie Garrido wasn't too concerned with the pairings. "The tournament is set up in such way that the teams that play the best during this tournament all have an equal opportunity to come out the winner," he said. "With this many quality teams in the CWS, no matter how they are placed in the beginning, nothing guarantees what's going to happen next. Our job and focus remains very clear ... to get ready for a game with Florida State on Friday night and take them one at a time after that."

Pepperdine coach Andy Lopez looked at the tournament with a thought to the future.

"The chance to play an opponent such as Wichita State on national television will provide our program with tremendous exposure," he said. "Winning a tough regional tournament on the road was an excellent experience for our ball club, especially after losing the first game to Hawaii."

Classic captures Invitational Cup

Playing in continuous rainfall throughout the weekend, the Pampa Classic won the soccer championship of the West Texas Invitational Cup held in Lubbock.

The Classic, an under 16 boys' team, defeated the Amarillo Raiders last Sunday in a match that was decided in a shootout after regulation play and two overtime periods ended in a scoreless tie.

The shootout is a penalty-type kick against only the goalie, resulting in either a goal or a save. There are five shots taken by each team, and then if a winner has not been decided, the match moves into sudden death with the remaining kickers going one at a time.

The first two Pampa kicks failed while the first three Amarillo kicks were perfectly placed. The next four Pampa kicks were good and the next three Amarillo kicks were blocked by the Pampa goalie for the win.

The Classic lost to the Clovis

Spurs, 1-0, to open the tournament, but bounced back to defeat the Lubbock Wings, 1-0, and Lubbock Gators, 2-0.

After losing to the Amarillo Raiders, 2-0, in the final preliminary-round game, Pampa went into the semi-finals as the third seed.

Pampa downed the second-seeded Clovis Spurs, 3-2, in the semi-finals to advance to the championship game.

Lubbock was under a flash flood alert during the weekend with the city receiving around eight inches of rain.

"This was the third tournament final that the Classic has been in this soccer year, but it was their first championship. It made all the rain, wet and mud worthwhile. The team played with a lot of heart," said Pampa coach Fran Kludt.

Pampa Swish Camp set for June 8-13

The Pampa Swish Camp for girls will be held June 8-13 at McNelly Fieldhouse. The camp is for fifth grade Players scoring goals for the Classic were Salvador Del Fierro, Michael Lewis and Tim McCavit. Those scoring goals in the shootout were Russ Gunter, Salvador Del Fierro, Tim McCavit, and Jesus Lopez.

Midfield play, a key element in the Classic wins, was sparked by Tim McCavit, Justin Allison, Eric Richey, Jeremy Telkamp and Chris Grusendorf. Offensive pressure was kept up by the front line of Greg McDaniel, Salvador Del Fierro, Michael Lewis, Jesus Lopez and Cameron Black.

The Classic were also the Amarillo League champions for the fall and spring seasons. They plan to go to the Gatorade Regional Championship Tournament June 26-28 in the Dallas area.

Rangers rally to beat White Sox, Ryan gets no decision

By The Associated Press

What caused the SkyDome scuffle between Toronto and Milwaukee remains a matter of debate.

The Blue Jays say Jamie Navarro was throwing at Joe Carter. The Brewers say no way, Jays.

When it was all over Wednesday night, Milwaukee won 8-4 in a game interrupted by one brawl, two player ejections and several other tense moments.

AL Roundup

The brawl started when Navarro (4-4) hit Joe Carter with a pitch just above the right elbow in the fourth inning. After being struck, Carter fell to the ground, stood up a few seconds later and shouted at the pitcher. Then Carter charged the mound.

"He hit Carter, but he didn't hit him on purpose," Brewers manager Phil Garner said. "Jaime was pitching a heck of a ballgame, he didn't want to hit him. We're battling to win a ballgame and you don't want to put a couple of guys on base in this ballpark."

The Blue Jays, trailing 5-0, joined Carter in the dash for the mound and were joined by the Brewers. Some weak punches were thrown and, after about eight minutes of a lot of pushing and shoving, both benches retreated.

"The Milwaukee pitching coach (Don Rowe) punched me," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "You go out there to stop fights, not start them. They came out of the dugout and went right after Joe. I didn't want Joe out there on his own."

Carter was ejected and Toronto starter Todd Stottlemyre, Navarro and Garner were issued warnings by home plate umpire Greg Kosc.

Stottlemyre (4-4) was ejected in the sixth inning when he hit Paul Molitor with a pitch. Stottlemyre argued the ejection with Kosc, throwing his glove and cap in the air. By then, he didn't need them.

"The next inning when I came out after the benches cleared, (Kosc) just wanted to make sure that I understood if I threw anything that looked like I was throwing at a guy he was going to throw me out," Stottlemyre said. "I told him that he knows how I pitch, I like to pitch in at times and I'm not going to let a warning affect the way I pitch."

Rookie Pat Hentgen threw a pitch near Jim Gantner's head in the ninth inning, causing another staring match. Gantner took a couple of steps toward the mound before staying put.

"A 5-0 game, I didn't want to throw at Carter," Navarro said. "I tried to pitch in and the pitch got away. I couldn't do anything about it. A game like that, it's illogical to hit him. He just took it the wrong way."

Molitor and Greg Vaughn hit homers and Kevin Seitzer drove in two runs as the Brewers sent the Blue Jays to their eighth loss in 11 games.

Elsewhere in the AL it was Minnesota 5, New York 1; Cleveland 4, Oakland 2; Seattle 7, Baltimore 1; Detroit 11, Kansas City 2; Texas 4, Chicago 3 in 11 innings; and Boston 4, California 3 in 10 innings.

Rangers 4, White Sox 3
At Arlington, Nolan Ryan failed to get a win again, but Texas rallied to tie the score in the ninth inning and beat Chicago in the 11th on Kevin Reimer's run-scoring double. The Rangers' fifth straight victory moved them into a virtual tie with Oakland in the AL West.

Reimer's game-winning hit came after Donn Pall (2-1) walked Juan Gonzalez with two outs in the 11th. Floyd Bannister (1-0) pitched three innings of one-hit relief for his first major league victory since 1989.

Ryan has gone 52 days without a victory, the longest span in his 26-year career at the start of a season without a win. He gave up two runs and six hits in seven innings, striking out eight and walking none.

Indians 4, Athletics 2
At Oakland, Paul Sorrento homered twice off Dave Stewart (3-5) and Albert Belle also homered off the four-time 20-game winner as Cleveland swept the three-game series. The Indians hadn't swept a three-game series against the A's since September 1986 at Cleveland.

Sorrento's two-run homer in the fifth, an opposite-field drive that curled just inside the left field foul pole, tied the score 2-2. Belle led off the seventh with his ninth homer of the season and fifth in five games.

Scott Scudder (3-5), who hasn't pitched a complete game in 50 big-league starts, allowed two runs and eight hits in 8 1-3 innings before Steve Olin finished for his ninth save.

Red Sox 4, Angels 3
At Anaheim, Jack Clark drew a bases-loaded walk from Bryan Harvey with two outs in the 10th inning to lift Boston over California.

Harvey (0-3) retired the first two batters in the 10th before Jody Reed singled, Mike Greenwell beat out a grounder up the middle and Tom Brunansky reached on an infield grounder to first, loading the bases.

Jeff Reardon (1-0) blew the save and a win for Frank Viola in the ninth. Von Hayes led off the inning with a pinch single and moved to second on a sacrifice. Brooks followed with the game-tying single on an 0-2 pitch.

Rene Gonzales hit his sixth homer and Ron Tingley celebrated his 33rd birthday with his first homer of the season for the only runs off Viola.

Texas Rangers' Dickie Thon (10) avoids the pickoff attempt at second base as Chicago White Sox shortstop Craig Grebeck fields a wild throw Wednesday.

Twins 5, Yankees 1
At the Metrodome, John Smiley allowed one run in eight-plus innings and Minnesota scored four unearned runs after a third-inning error by shortstop Mike Gallego. Minnesota, which has won 12 of 16, stopped New York's three-game winning streak.

Smiley (4-3), a 20-game winner with Pittsburgh last season obtained in spring trade, allowed fewer than three runs for just the second time in 10 AL starts. After Roberto Kelly led off the ninth with a single, Rick Aguilera relieved and retired the side.

Melido Perez (4-4) allowed six hits and six walks in seven innings, dropping his career record against Minnesota to 2-7.

Mariners 7, Orioles 1
At the Kingdome, Erik Hanson stopped his six-game losing streak and Ken Griffey Jr. and Edgar Martinez homered for Seattle.

Hanson (2-7) won for the first time since April 12 and improved his record against Baltimore to 5-1. He allowed one run and four hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Ben McDonald (6-2) was tagged for seven runs and eight hits in five innings.

Tigers 11, Royals 2

At Tiger Stadium, homers by Lou Whitaker and Mark Carreon keyed a five-run first inning as Detroit sent Kansas City to its fifth consecutive defeat.

Cecil Fielder had three doubles, but just one RBI. Tony Phillips had two doubles and two RBIs.

Mike Boddicker (0-3), making only his third start of the season for Kansas City, was pounded for 10 runs on nine hits and five walks in four-plus innings. Scott Aldred (2-4) allowed two runs on six hits in six innings. Both Aldred's wins have come against the Royals.

Expos drop Astros; Reds nip Mets

By JOHN KREISER
AP Sports Writer

Lou Piniella won his gamble. Darnell Coles won the battle. The Cincinnati Reds won the game.

Piniella, forced to revamp his starting rotation by Tuesday night's rainout in New York, opted to bypass Tom Browning and keep Tim Lincecum on turn — even though Belcher had a 1-4 record and a 5.82 career ERA against the Mets.

NL Roundup

He was rewarded-when Belcher pitched three-hit ball over 8 1-3 innings Wednesday night as the Reds beat the Mets 1-0, New York's third straight shutout loss at home.

"I have always tried to keep three of the five starters in complete rotation," Piniella said of his revamped rotation. "The big thing was pushing (Jose) Rijo to Sunday against San Francisco. There was no way I was going to pitch him against the Giants Saturday night."

"Now Browning will go in that spot. Belcher was outstanding, but give a lot of credit to Darnell Coles. He had a real professional at-bat, never lost his concentration and got a pitch to his liking for that big hit."

Coles won his own personal confrontation with Sid Fernandez (3-5) when he singled to left on the 11th pitch to drive in Barry Larkin with the game's only run.

"I had the advantage," Coles said. "After 11 pitches, you've seen everything he throws and can lock in on him. I hit a pitch up high in the strike zone and it went to left field. No big deal."

The Mets were shut out by San Diego's Bruce Hurst on May 13, their last game before a West Coast trip, then lost 2-0 to the Reds Monday night after their return. They had scored 30 runs during the last four games of the trip.

In other games, it was Atlanta 9, Philadelphia 3; Los Angeles 9, St. Louis 2; San Francisco 6, Chicago 2; San Diego 8, Pittsburgh 7; and Montreal 8, Houston 5.

Braves 9, Phillies 3
Tom Glavine became the National League's first seven-game winner and Lonnie Smith, starting his first game since April 22, drove in two runs to help Atlanta avoid a sweep in Philadelphia.

Glavine (7-3) gave up six hits and three runs, two earned, walked two and struck out four in seven innings as the Braves won for only the fourth time in 11 games. He also singled off Cliff Brantley (2-3) to start a three-run seventh inning that overcame a 3-2 deficit.

Smith, who entered the game batting .091 (3 for 33), had a single, an RBI double in the fifth inning and a game-tying sacrifice fly in the seventh. Terry Pendleton singled in the go-ahead run and another scored when center fielder Lenny Dykstra bobbled the ball for an error.

Dodgers 9, Cardinals 2
Todd Benzinger hit a third-inning grand slam to back knuckleballer

Tom Candiotti's four-hitter over eight innings as Los Angeles won in St. Louis.

Candiotti (5-3) kept the Cardinals off balance, allowing only four singles, just one after the second inning. He struck out six and walked four.

The Dodgers trailed 1-0 before loading the bases in the third against Jose DeLeon (2-4). Benzinger then hit a 3-2 pitch into the right-field seats for his second homer of the season and the fifth grand slam of his six-year career.

Eric Karros added a three-run homer, his fifth, in a four-run ninth inning.

Padres 8, Pirates 7
Darrin Jackson doubled in the tying run with one out in the bottom of the ninth and pinch-hitter Craig Shipley singled with the bases loaded to lift San Diego past Pittsburgh, which lost its fifth straight and 11th in its last 12, finishing 1-8 on the West Coast.

Loser Stan Belinda (2-2) blew a save when he gave up Tony Gwynn's sacrifice fly in the eighth that tied it 6-6. But the Pirates went ahead in the ninth when Barry Bonds doubled off Randy Myers (2-1) and scored from third on Jeff King's grounder.

But Jackson, whose three-run homer in the 10th inning Tuesday night gave San Diego a 6-3 win, doubled in Benito Santiago to tie it. After Kurt Stillwell was intentionally walked to load the bases, Shipley, hitting for Myers,

Giants 6, Cubs 2
John Burkett won his fifth consecutive decision and Mike Felder hit a bases-loaded triple in the ninth inning as San Francisco beat the Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Burkett (5-1) allowed six hits and one run in six innings as he increased his record against the Cubs to 4-0. He has allowed just one run in 20 innings.

Greg Maddux (4-5) lost his fourth consecutive decision and for the fifth time in his last six, giving up two runs and four hits in seven innings and striking out six.

Expos 8, Astros 5
Moises Alou hit a three-run homer in the first inning, his first home run in the majors, and Montreal beat Houston in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing incident.

After Xavier Hernandez hit Tim Wallach with a pitch in the fifth inning, Hernandez came close with a pitch to Montreal's Dennis Martinez, who then walked about 10 feet toward the mound. Martinez was intercepted by catcher Ed Taubensee and both benches emptied. No punches were thrown and no one was ejected.

Martinez (5-4) won his fourth consecutive game, allowing all five runs and seven hits in five-plus innings. Loser Mark Portugal (4-2) gave up four runs and seven hits in four innings.

Andrade aims to end drought

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Billy Andrade's victory at the Kemper Open last year gave him a shot of confidence that carried over to the following week, when he won the Buick Classic.

The problem is, he hasn't won since. So, what better place to get his struggling game back on track than the site of his first victory on the PGA Tour?

"Last year's Kemper is similar to this one," Andrade said on the eve of his title defense. "I really haven't done a lot yet this year."

"This is the perfect time for me to come back here, because I'm ready to start playing some good golf."

Andrade and 155 other players were to begin the chase for the $198,000 top prize this morning on the 7,005-yard TPC at Avenel course.

After the Buick Classic, Andrade could manage only one more top-10 finish in 1991. He opened this season on a high note, managing a third-place tie at the Tournament of Champions, but has since missed the cut in seven of 14 tournaments and has not finished higher than 22nd.

"This year, I probably put a little too much pressure on myself because I did so well last year," Andrade said. "Once you win an event, it makes you want to win more. But sometimes when you want it so bad, you have a hard time getting there."

It's not that he's lost his stroke or suddenly forgotten how to sink a putt. According to Andrade, he just can't get a break.

"I'm just not getting the ball in the hole. There's a fine line between getting a good score and a bad one," he said. "Sometimes you don't even have to hit the ball well, but you get a putt to roll in the hole and then you start building on that momentum."

Thus far, Andrade has had little to build upon. He has broken 70 in only 10 of 43 rounds this year and ranks No. 91 on the money list.

"Golf comes in waves. Some days or months you're on a high, and some days and months you're just not at the peak of your game," he said. "You just have to ride it out. I just know one of these next few weeks I'm going to break through and have a great tournament."

Avenel's stadium-style course, where Andrade went 21-under par over four rounds last year, is ideally suited for his style. Although heavy rains have softened the fairways and greens, making them play longer than usual, the premium is still on accuracy as opposed to length off the tee.

"If I were describing the way I play, I'd say that I don't do anything great but I don't do anything bad, either," Andrade said. "My short game is decent but not outstanding. I'm a straight hitter but not a long hitter, and I try to get lots of roll on my tee shots."

A.P. Indy probable Belmont pick

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
AP Racing Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A.P. Indy definitely should be a factor in the Belmont Stakes.

Alydeed won't. Dixie Brass might.

A.P. Indy, who missed the Kentucky Derby and Preakness because of a bruised left front foot, strutted his stuff for the first time since he won the Santa Anita Derby on April 4 by winning the 1 1/8-mile Peter Pan Sunday at Belmont Park.

He was so impressive in his sixth straight victory after a career-opening loss in August that he probably will be the Belmont favorite, despite the presence of Preakness winner Pine Bluff and Casual Lies, the Derby runnerup who was third in the Preakness.

It was revealed during the week-end that Alydeed, who finished second in the Preakness in only his fifth lifetime start, will not start in the 1 1/2-mile Belmont because of the New York rules banning any type medication for racing. The Canadian-bred colt ran on the diuretic Lasix in the Preakness because of pulmonary bleeding in the past.

"I started wondering why get yourself in a position," Roger Attfield, Alydeed's trainer, was quoted as saying. "You'd be running in a 1 1/2-mile race where you can't run on medication, which you may or may not need. Why experiment?"

Dixie Brass beat older horses in the 1-mile Metropolitan Handicap Monday at Belmont for his sixth win in nine career starts, and trainer Dennis Brida was considering starting him in the Belmont.

"No one can beat this horse going a mile," said Brida, and a mile is the farthest Dixie Brass has raced. In winning the Metropolitan, the colt carried only 107 pounds, but he won the 1-mile Withers May 6 under the Belmont weight of 126 pounds.

Should Dixie Brass go in the Belmont, he could not be overlooked because the race is often won by a horse on or near the lead. Six of the last 10 Belmont winners were never worse than third.

It seems jockeys worry about the 1 1/2-mile, a distance rarely run in the United States, and they want to save something for the stretch. This allows a pace that hurts stretch runners.

The Belmont appeared perfectly suited to Alydeed, who allowed himself to be rated just off the pace until taking the lead coming out of the final turn in the 1 3/16-mile Preakness. Although he failed to hold off Pine Bluff, the race figured to move up the relatively inexperienced Alydeed.

A.P. Indy also appears suited for the Belmont because he does not need to lag too far off the pace. He also looked like a horse rarin' to go in the Peter Pan and showed no signs of the injury that caused him to be scratched the morning of the Derby.

Pine Bluff, who didn't fire in the finishing fifth in the Derby, came from off the pace in winning the Preakness. But he led most of the way in winning the 1 1/16-mile Rebel and was never worse than third in winning the 1 1/8-mile Arkansas Derby in his two starts before the 1 1/4-mile Kentucky Derby.

Looks like an interesting Belmont.

Blazers can earn title with victory

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — On the brink of elimination, the Utah Jazz is hoping Fortress Delta Center will come through one more time.

Coming off Tuesday's 127-121 overtime victory in Portland, the Trail Blazers can wrap up their best-of-7 Western Conference final 4-2 by beating the Jazz here in Thursday night's Game 6.

But with an NBA-best 45-4 home record this season — including eight straight playoff triumphs — Utah is confident it can knot the series and force Game 7 Saturday in Portland.

Experts: Hot water can burn in seconds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mary Gomez was bathing her 7-month-old daughter, India, in the bathroom sink when her 2-year-old son began yelling in the next room.

She rushed to his aid and in the seconds she was gone, her 3-year-old son came into the bathroom to "help Mommy" finish the baby's bath.

He turned on the tap. The water was so hot, it left third-degree burns on the lower half of India's body in less than a minute.

India, now 4, spent three months in Children's Hospital in Washington and has had seven surgeries. She rarely smiles or talks.

Burns can inflict devastating damage. But they'll continue to be a household hazard as long as families want guaranteed hot showers in the morning, spotless dishes from the dishwasher and ground-in dirt out of their clothes.

About 37,000 children are treated each year for scald burns, which often leave them with permanent disfigurements and psychological damage, says the National Safe Kids Campaign, a health professionals' group.

The water that burned India was 143 degrees Fahrenheit, hot enough to burn an adult's skin in five seconds and a child's in three.

There are three settings on a water heater: warm, which heats water to 100 degrees; normal, 120 degrees; and hot, 140 degrees.

"At 140, you get three showers in a row. At 120, you can get two," said Jack Langmead, vice president of the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association.

Comfortable bathing temperature is about 102 degrees. Hot tubs are usually 104 degrees to 106 degrees. A person can sit in 125-degree water a few minutes before getting burned, but at 140 degrees, a burn occurs in seconds.

Langmead said the industry changed the "normal" setting on water heaters from 140 degrees to 120 degrees in the mid-1980s because of burn dangers, but, at the urging of detergent and dishwasher manufacturers, continued to build heaters that could get water to 140 degrees. All water heaters should have warning labels on the outside of the tank.

In India's case, her lawyers won a $15 million settlement this week in a lawsuit that pointed out several safety precautions that hadn't been taken.

The water heater in the apartment hadn't been inspected in the past year as required by city law.

The gas company hadn't warned its customers of tap water scald hazards despite being told to do so by the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The water heater and its thermostat bore no warning labels.

"If you never run out of hot water, turn your thermostat down until you do," Langmead advised, adding that electric water heaters should be disconnected before changing the setting because of electrical shock dangers.

Dishwashers that heat their own water don't require 140 degree settings at the water heater and clothes will get clean in cooler temperatures unless someone in the house regularly gets into industrial grease, said Langmead.

Hardware stores sell devices for shower heads and faucets that will prevent scalding water from flowing into sinks and tubs if the water heater setting must be kept high for other household reasons.

Water burns are particularly dangerous because they tend to cover a large area of the skin. A burn from a hot stove may blister but is usually small.

Safe Kids says 45 percent of the children hospitalized with scald burns are under 5 years old.

Deaths are more common and injuries more severe from bathtub scalds than hot liquid or hot food burns. Hospitalization from tap water burns averages 17 days, Safe Kids says.

As a safeguard against bath water that's too hot, adults should swish their entire hand around in the tub for several seconds. If it feels even a little hot, it's too much for a child.

And never leave a child in a bath unattended. The water faucets are just too tempting, Safe Kids notes.

Energy bill clears House hurdle; final OK seen

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new national energy plan that boosts nuclear power and natural gas development while also promoting alternative fuels and more efficient lights and electric appliances is likely to become law by Election Day.

The prospects for congressional passage increased Wednesday when the House by a 381-37 margin approved an energy package that largely mirrors a bill previously approved by the Senate.

Lawmakers still must resolve a number of differences, including whether to impose broad restrictions on offshore oil drilling along most of the America's coastline.

But the legislation prompted general support from the Bush administration Wednesday night and a final compromise bill is expected to go to President Bush before the November election.

A White House statement said the bill represented "progress toward adopting a sound national energy strategy" and "forms a welcome bipartisan basis for moving to conference" with the Senate to craft the final version.

Energy Secretary James Watkins said it "offers the real possibility of enacting comprehensive and balanced energy legislation such as the country has not seen in 20 years."

He called the House bill "a major victory" for Bush and said he was hopeful that some remaining differences, including those over offshore drilling, might be resolved.

The Senate approved its energy bill in January by an equally one-sided 94-4 tally.

The House vote capped months of congressional wrangling that included consideration by nine committees that had some say in molding the 1,500-plus pages of legislation.

Among its key provisions:
—Easing regulatory barriers for building nuclear power plants. Utilities no longer would have to get separate licenses for construction and operation, cutting the time it takes to put a plant into service.

—Tax incentives to promote the development of renewable fuels such as solar, wind and biomass, including garbage, and for people using mass transit and van pools for commuting.

—Requirements for the government to use less energy and promote new energy standards for private construction, appliances, electric motors and lights.

—Wider use of alternative fuel vehicles in both government and private fleets in hopes of reducing the country's reliance on gasoline as the dominant transportation fuel.

—Fewer impediments to the construction of natural gas pipelines to make the fuel more widely available.

—Increased competition in the electric power industry. For the first time, all wholesale energy producers would be given equal access to utility transmission lines.

Environmentalists had mixed reaction to the House version. They were highly critical of the provisions on nuclear power, but gave praise for the tax breaks for renewable energy, restrictions on offshore drilling and conservation measures. They criticized the absence of measures to improve automobile fuel efficiency.

"It is a good bill as far as it goes," said Melanie Griffin, a lobbyist for the Sierra Club.

One area of remaining conflict is over offshore oil and gas drilling, with the House imposing a much wider ban than the Senate.

The House bill calls for no new oil or gas lease sales before the year 2002 anywhere along the U.S. coast other than the Gulf of Mexico from Alabama to Texas. Leases off North Carolina's Outer Banks, off the Gulf coast of Florida and in Alaska's Bristol Bay would be canceled, a major victory for environmentalists.

Watkins said the House version goes too far and "we will seek greater access to the Outer Continental Shelf" as a final bill is worked out between House and Senate members.

But other potential conflicts were smoothed over during the two days of floor debate.

The House rejected a measure that would have allowed citizens to more easily intervene in licensing nuclear power plants after their construction. Instead, the House by a wide margin agreed to ease the licensing process.

And on Wednesday, the House voted 235-135 to delete from the bill a requirement that refiners divert some of their oil to fill the government's Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The White House had called the proposal a tax and threatened a possible veto if it survived.
