Sheriff Free denies racial slur used against ex-deputy Brown

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

AMARILLO - Gray County Sheriff Jim Free testified Wednesday that he "never" used any type of racial slur against former deputy Lynn Brown and that he had "high hopes" for Brown in his office.

He said he had made it known that he would not tolerate any racial slurs or discrimination from his personnel. Free's testimony came during the civil rights lawsuit trial filed by Brown against Gray County in U.S. District Court.

"Professionally, I have learned his (Sheriff Jim Free's) reputation to be untruthful."

Texas Ranger

On Tuesday, former sheriff's secretary Sue Matthew testified she heard Free call Brown a "nigger" on two occasions. In Wednesday testimony, former Chief Deputy Ken Kieth said he had heard Free on one of those occasions.

Kieth, who has 25 years of law enforcement experience, said he and others were sitting in the sheriff's office when he looked out the window and saw Brown drive up in his patrol vehicle.

"I said, 'There's Lynn,' and he (Sheriff Free) said, 'That's my nigger. Everyone should own one.'

Free, speaking of Matthew and Kieth testifying he called Brown a "nigger," said, "It is not correct."

Texas Ranger Alvin Schmidt, who investigated Free in 1990, testified that he has learned the reputation of Sheriff Free in the Amarillo area and in Gray County.

"Professionally, I have learned his reputation to be untruthful," Schmidt said.

Schmidt, who holds advanced levels of law enforcement certification, has been with the Texas Ranger division of the Department of Public Safety for five years. He served 22 years with the DPS prior to being named a Texas Ranger, he said.

Free said that he was looking for good, qualified officers when he took office in January 1989 and he considered Brown to be a good officer.

"I talked to several officers with the Pampa Police Department. I visited with George Wallace. He said he (Brown) was a fine officer," Free said.

Brown, the first black deputy in the history of Gray County and the only one to date, was sworn in as a deputy on Jan. 2, 1989. Both parties in the lawsuit have stipulated that Brown is a highly qualified peace officer.

Brown was fired from the sheriff's office on Feb. 3 after the sheriff alleged he had violated departmental policy by failing to radio in while off-duty in his county vehicle, for insubordination and other

City receives $100,000 grant for composting

A matching grant for $100,000 from the Texas Water Commission will make a composting project at the Pampa landfill a reality.

City of Pampa officials learned this week that the city was chosen from among 41 applicants to receive state funds to develop a composting program.

"We worked hard and came up with a really great plan I think will work," said Phil Conner, assistant finance director and a co-writer of the grant application. Rick Stone, solid waste superintendent, and John Kiel of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, also worked on preparing the application, he said.

Conner explained that Pampa proposes to take grass clippings and yard wastes and mix them with sludge from the city's waste water treatment to make compost.

In the pilot program, he said, grass clippings and yard wastes will be taken from 1,700 homes in the city. Eventually, the city plans to allow all residents to bring their clippings to the site. They will then receive compost in return.

Nathan Hopson, director of public works, said state mandates require that solid waste deposited in landfills be reduced by 40 percent by 1994. "Composting is a way to do that," he said.

In addition to giving the compost to citizens who bring in grass clippings, Conner said the city of Pampa will be using the compost to cover the landfill and at city parks.

Others who are contributing to the composting project, Hopson said, are Scarab Manufacturing of White Deer who helped with the specifications and who agreed to advise city officials as the project progresses and Wal-Mart and Glad Industries who have donated plastic bags for the compost to be placed in.

City Manager Glen Hackler said Pampa was one of the top three applicants for the composting grant.

"We were up against some big cities - Lubbock, Big Spring and others," he said. "I'm really proud of the way we did in light of that."

Since the grant is a matching grant, meaning the city of Pampa must also contribute $100,000 to the project, Conner said the city's contribution will be in man power, use of equipment and some funds which have already been budgeted.

Conner and Stone are scheduled to attend an informational meeting on the matter in Austin Monday to learn more about the contract provisions and various program and financial procedures.

Perot taps unlikely outsiders to run campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) - The man running for president as a can-do outsider is pinning his White House hopes on two blunt, controversial insiders who have flouted the political establishment even as they've been pillars of it.

"This is the first step in the normalization of Ross Perot," Georgia Rep. Newt Gingrich, the No. 2 Republican in the House, said after the Dallas tycoon on Wednesday hired Republican Ed Rollins and Democrat Hamilton Jordan to manage his independent presidential bid.

Perot, expected to declare his candidacy this summer, has made a point of avoiding politics as usual. When he needed experienced hands, he turned to two men who are as outspoken and unconventional as he is.

Rollins "has been kind of a free spirit in the Republican Party," said former Carter White House press secretary Jody Powell, who once considered going into business with Rollins.

As for Jordan, he said, he's been gone from Washington for a dozen years "and even while he was here, he was mostly damned for not being enough of an insider."

Rollins and Jordan have spotty electoral track records and backgrounds filled with conflict. Both were accused Wednesday of signing on for the money, said to be in the $1 million range. But both said they were taking pay cuts to help Perot and suggested that, like many Americans, they are frustrated by government paralysis.

Rollins, 49, said his defection was triggered by disappointment in President Bush's handling of the Los Angeles riots and in "a tiredness, a lack of vision, a lack of agenda" he sees even among his friends in the administration.

"I'm still a Republican. I still hope to help Republicans in the future. If by doing this I can't, so be it," Rollins said today on CBS's "This Morning."

Jordan, 47, called Perot "the future of this country" at a time when neither major party understands what it is voters want and the nation needs. He said he volunteered his services initially and would have been happy to continue as a volunteer.

Jordan comes to the campaign from Whittle Communications, the media firm that distributes an educational video news program complete with commercials and plans to create a nationwide network of privately financed schools. He was named vice president of the Knoxville, Tenn.-based company only two weeks ago.

Rollins joined the Sawyer-Miller consulting firm early in 1991 and reportedly was considering a joint consulting venture with retiring Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn., before the Perot offer came.

Rollins and Jordan bring long but uneven resumes.

Jordan was the architect of the outsider, anti-Washington strategy that put Jimmy Carter in the White House 16 years ago. But Carter lost his 1980 re-election bid and Jordan himself lost a 1986 Senate primary race in Georgia.

Rollins, a former White House political director, managed President Reagan's landslide 1984 re-election campaign.

Benzene found in Kingsmill H₂O

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

Texas Water Commission and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) tests conducted in early May confirm benzene and other volatile organics in levels far above acceptable standards can be found in the Kingsmill community water supply, records show.

Dave Phillips, human resources director for Hoechst Celanese, said their tests, taken at the same time as the TWC, show results comparable to tests conducted in January, reported earlier as being in the range of seven to 18 parts per billion. Five parts per billion is the maximum acceptable level.

"There's no revelation there that I can see," Phillips said.

Members of the Kingsmill Community Water Supply Corp. were notified of the Texas Water Commission results by letter Monday.

Peggy Ward, manager/operator of the Kingsmill water supply, said today that she had received a fax from EPA confirming volatile organics found in the Kingsmill well last week.

"This is good news," said Ward. "I'm not saying having benzene in the water is good news. It's not good news. But it is good news that they found it. It's a relief to know that it's not just us. Water isn't supposed to smell. Water isn't supposed to taste and you're not supposed to see it. Getting someone to believe us about this is a nightmare."

Don Manning, District 1 manager of Texas Water Commission, said in his letter to the corporation that, using results from the tests he has applied for an urgent need grant of up to $400,000 from the Department of Commerce, he did not accept a grant application filed in March because he did not have tests showing benzene could be found in the water, he said.

TWC and Hoechst Celanese representatives met May 7 to take split samples from the well at three-minute, eight-minute, 15-minute and 30-minute intervals, Manning said.

"The first sample showed benzene," he said. By the end of the sampling, however, no recordable levels of benzene were shown, he said. The levels of benzene ranged from the highest of 79.9 parts per billion to 5.2 parts per billion.

In the information provided to the Kingsmill Community Water Supply Corp., Manning said, "This office recommends a new well be placed at a point no less than one mile west or southwest from the present Kingsmill well. Treating the water is a viable solution, but could be costly over the years. Reworking the present well is not recommended because the groundwater will remain unreliable for years to come."

Manning said Wednesday that he recommended the well be drilled to the west "at least a mile" in order to get away from the apparent groundwater contamination. He explained that the ground water flows to the east in that area.

Phillips said Hoechst Celanese officials believe the Kingsmill well is a localized problem, probably resulting from the way the well was built. He said company officials are continuing to work with the TWC and the Kingsmill water supply board to come to a resolution of the problem. He added that the company will also continue to sample water wells neighboring the plant for any contamination.

Last February, company officials offered to pay to have the well reworked.

Manning confirmed that his office is working with Hoechst Celanese representatives to solve the well problem.

"I believe it is coming from Celanese but I don't have proof of that," he said, adding, "And there are other factors in that area that could be contributing (to the contamination)."

In the health evaluation form sent to the water corporation, Manning listed as the source of contamination as follows: "probability is from groundwater problems next door at the Celanese Chemical Co."

Manning said in a telephone interview Wednesday that other "things" have been found in the water that may help pinpoint the source of the contamination. He did not say what those "things" are.

Ward said the EPA fax sent to her office reports tests show methanol, diethyl ether and two types each of butane and propane - all above acceptable levels - in the Kingsmill water. Diethyl ether was 39 parts per billion. Maximum acceptable level is 4.6 parts per billion.

"These are the volatile organics. We don't know about the semi-volatile organics and heavy metals," she said.

Kingsmill Community Water Supply Corporation consists of 34 water taps supplying 64 property owners, Ward said. Approximately 119 residents are affected.

Residents have reported for some time that the water smelled, tasted bad and was discolored. They have also reported skin rashes and burns that they say are a result of bathing in the water and using the water for laundry purposes.

Carolyn Hood, a Kingsmill resident, said today that, based on the findings of the TWC, a lawsuit will be filed. "There is going to be a lawsuit filed," she said, adding that she has already talked with Amarillo attorney Wayne Barfield concerning the matter.

"This bears out what we thought was going on," Hood said. Hood said she believes Hoechst Celanese is responsible for the well contamination.

"I feel like they ought to go ahead and pay the people for their property out there - not just for market value, but for what it will cost to start over and build from the ground up - and compensate us for what we've gone through and let us get on with our lives - what we have left."

Buchanan faces heart surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican presidential contender Patrick Buchanan will undergo elective heart surgery on Friday to replace a defective valve apparently caused by an illness as a young man.

His sister, Angela Bay Buchanan, said that full recovery is expected. She said the conservative television commentator was told in April that he should have the surgery this year and he decided to wait until after the primary season had ended.

"It's always a concern but we're extremely hopeful and so are the doctors that everything will be just fine," said Bay Buchanan, who serves as her brother's campaign manager.

Buchanan, 53, will have his aortic valve replaced with an artificial valve, campaign spokesman Dan Giroux said. He entered the Washington Hospital Center today, and is expected to remain there for eight days, Giroux said.

He said doctors expect Buchanan will be fully recovered by the Republican National Convention.

Pool days

Seventy-degree temperatures doesn't exactly signal swimming weather for many, but the switch from school days to pool days was no problem for the youngsters who frolicked in the M.K. Brown Swimming Pool Wednesday. The pool is open Monday through Sundays from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., and on Monday and Tuesday evenings for "Family Night."

Actor Robert Morley dies

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

British actor Robert Morley, shown in a 1980 file photo, died Wednesday at age 84, according to an announcement made in London by his son.

LONDON (AP) - Robert Morley, who died Wednesday at 84, made a career of being his own witty self on stage, in films and as a writer.

"I'd rather just put on a suit, preferably the one I am already wearing, and step on the stage so the people can recognize me," said Morley, whose girth, shaggy eyebrows and owl eyes made him widely recognizable.

Morley died in a hospital in Reading four days after suffering a stroke, said his son Sheridan, who did not announce funeral arrangements. The actor's wife, Joan, son Wilton, daughter-in-law, Margaret, and grandchildren were at his bedside.

Among his fund of stories was an equivocal compliment paid to him by the much-married Rex Harrison: "Of course, Robert, it's all been so different for you: one wife, one family and, if I may say so, one performance."

Born May 26, 1908, Morley rebelled against his father's hopes that he would become a diplomat and won a place at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

"Showing off has been my profession. I learned all about acting in about three months selling vacuum cleaners door to door. I still tell people that is the best way to become an actor," he said in an interview with the Daily Mail two years ago.

He wrote eight plays and five books of reminiscences, including "Around the World in 81 Years," published two years ago. He was a prolific contributor to Punch and Playboy magazines and also was known to American television viewers as a spokesman for British Airways.

His first big success on stage was in the title role of "Oscar Wilde," which he reprised in New York in 1938.

Memorable film roles included the munitions magnate Andrew Undershaft in George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" and the title role in "Oscar Wilde." He appeared with Humphrey Bogart in "The African Queen" and with a crowd of stars in "Around the World in Eighty Days." In a triumph of type-casting, he played a corpulent gourmand in "Who is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe?"

He also appeared in Otto Preminger's 1979 film "The Human Factor," based on a novel by Graham Greene. Morley said he might have liked to be a writer like Greene - "except that he wants to die in a state of grace and I told him, 'It's a very difficult thing to do.'"

Morley claimed he was cured of ambitions to play Shakespeare by touring in 1934 with Sir Frank Benson, then at the end of a distinguished stage career.

"Very often he (Benson) would go on as Malvolio and play the first scene of 'As You Like It.' If he made the wrong entrance he got on the wrong play and we had to try and talk him back. The audience never seemed to mind, though," Morley once said.

Morley often expounded on his socialist beliefs, which seemed at odds with his taste for food, drink and horseracing.

Comedian Derek Nimmo recalled Wednesday: "We were having dinner with some Australian friends of mine. He spent hours going on about communism - and then asked them to drop him off at the Ritz where he would rest before going on to Monte Carlo."

In old age, Morley said he was untroubled by the prospect of death.

"You always look at a script to see if you are being written out too soon. You look at the last few pages to see if you are there at the end," he said in the interview with the Daily Mail.

"It's the same with life. You want to make sure you are there at the end and have the last line."

DOE awards $3.3 million contracts for construction at Amarillo Pantex

AMARILLO - U.S. Department of Energy's Pantex Plant has awarded two construction contracts totalling more than $3,375,000, according to P.M. Ramey, manager of the DOE's Amarillo area office.

Triad Western Constructors, headquartered in Cortez, Colorado, took the largest of the contracts, worth more than $2,970,000 for a major renovation of Pantex Plant's sanitary wastewater collection and treatment system.

The Amarillo firm of Wiley Hicks, Jr., beat out four other firms to replace overhead doors on the Plant's Vehicle Maintenance Facility with a low bid of $399,000.

Both projects are expected to get underway during the middle of June 1992, with the Triad job scheduled for completion in early August 1993. The Wiley Hicks project is expected to be completed in early September 1992.

Officers reprimanded for Gulf War death

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Army general is reprimanding three officers for alleged negligence in a "friendly fire" incident that killed a U.S. soldier during the Persian Gulf War, a Pentagon source says, but the victim's parents are demanding harsher punishment.

Sgt. Douglas "Lance" Fielder, 22, of Nashville, Tenn., was killed on Feb. 27, 1991, when troops of the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment mistook him and three fellow combat engineers for Iraqi soldiers and fired at them after the cavalry troops had strayed outside their assigned battle area.

A Pentagon source said Wednesday that letters of reprimand were filed against the three 3rd Cavalry officers six weeks ago by Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr., commander of the Forces Command, which has jurisdiction over all Army troops based in the continental United States.

In the letters, Burba found the officers negligent for allowing their 3rd Cavalry troops to cross the boundary line, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

One of the officers, Col. Douglas H. Starr, has retired from the Army and a second, Capt. Bo Friesen, has said he intends to resign, the Post said.

The third, Lt. Col. John H. Daly Jr., remains in the service. The newspaper noted that reprimands can damage the promotion chances of career officers.

Although the three officers have been sent the letters, the documents are not yet a permanent part of their military records. "These individuals still have the opportunity to appeal," said the Pentagon source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Burba reversed four earlier investigations that had recommended exoneration of the officers, Fielder's father said Wednesday night in an interview.

Ron Fielder, a Nashville policeman, said the Army has refused to give him or his former wife, Debbie Shelton, copies of the reprimand letters.

"We were told it was none of our business and none of the public's business," he said.

He said Friesen's letter reprimands him for crossing a grid line and going out of a sector without permission.

"I think it took them 15 months and five investigations to decide that much," he said. "In four investigations, they found nothing wrong. We continued to push it and they decided something was wrong."

Recession deeper than administration claimed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The past recession, which the Bush administration consistently portrayed as shallow and mild, was in fact deeper than previously believed, according to new government figures on job losses.

The Labor Department on Wednesday released a new estimate that said 2.20 million jobs were lost from June 1990, the month before the recession began, to January of this year.

That represented an increase of nearly one-third from the previous estimate of job losses during the period - 1.57 million.

While the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics insisted that there were no political motivations to the undercount, Democrats immediately seized on the new figures as proof of their contention that the administration has been minimizing the amount of economic pain from the recession.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., chairman of the congressional Joint Economic Committee, said the revised BLS figures "more accurately represent what Americans have known all along - that this was a severe recession and a disaster for workers."

Sarbanes said the current recovery will be the weakest on record. He said that at the current pace of economic activity, it will take six years to recover all of the jobs lost in the recession.

By comparison, he said, every other recovery period since 1945 has managed to recoup all job losses in 13 months or less.

"The recession, far from being over, is continuing in the form of a jobs recession that shows no signs of turning around in the foreseeable future," Sarbanes said.

The Labor Department said today that the number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits rose for the first time in three weeks. The department said 407,000 newly laid off workers filed claims for the week ending May 23, an increase of 4,000 from the previous week.

Analysts said the uptick in jobless claims underscored how sluggish the current recovery is, although they noted that the four-week moving average for claims continued to decline.

The new estimate for job loss during the recession was made Wednesday as part of the government's annual benchmark revision of its employment statistics.

Pampa's cleanup efforts eligible for governor's achievement award

Keep Texas Beautiful Inc. (KTB) announced Wednesday that Pampa was among 49 Texas communities selected as finalists in the 1991-92 Governor's Community Achievement Awards.

Since 1968, this awards program, supported by the Governor of Texas, and co-sponsored by the Texas Department of Transportation, has recognized communities in nine population categories for their grassroots efforts in local environmental improvement through litter prevention, waste reduction and recycling, beautification, public education, and litter law enforcement.

"These 49 cities are the top contenders for state-wide recognition of their grassroots efforts to keep Texas the cleanest, most beautiful state in America," said Nancy Chancellor, KTB Board Member from Lufkin, and Chair of the Governor's Awards.

"I am so excited!" said Pam Locke, executive coordinator of Clean Pampa Inc. who learned the organization was a finalist Wednesday. "I knew we would do well."

Pampa's entry was based on several projects now under way in the city including a new recycling center and a landscaping project at the west entry to the city on U.S. 60. Clean Pampa has also logged 1,800 volunteer hours in the past year.

Locke said that she had already made arrangements to be present at the awards program in San Antonio in July.

Should Pampa be chosen as a winner in Category 5 for cities with populations ranging from 15,001 to 25,000, it will receive $50,000 which will be used for more beautification projects in the city.

The finalists in population and alphabetical order are as follows:

Category 1 (up to 1,000 population) - Oyster Creek, Seven Points, Zavalla;

Category 2 (1,001 to 2,500) - Eldorado, Lorenzo, Port Aransas, Whitewright;

Category 3 (2,501 to 5,000) - Diboll, Fairfield, Farmersville, Georgewest, Richwood, Smithville, West Columbia, Whitehouse;

Category 4 (5,001 to 15,000) - Athens, Burkburnett, Clute Dalhart, Dickinson, Ft. Stockton, Mineral Wells, Richland Hills, Weatherford;

Category 5 (15,001 to 25,000) - Alice, Burleson, Denison, Lake Jackson, Pearland, Pampa, Seguin, Waxahatche;

Category 6 (25,001 to 60,000) - Lewisville, Lufkin, Haltom City, Harlingen, North Richland Hills;

Category 7 (60,001 to 100,000) - Denton, Midland, Tyler, Wichita Falls;

Category 8 (100,001 to 300,000) - Abilene, Bryan/College Station, Plano, Waco; Category 9 (300,000 +) - Austin, El Paso, Houston, San Antonio.

Judging of the finalist cities will take place in Austin during this week. The nine winning cities, one from each population category, will share a total of $700,000 in landscape projects, funded by the Texas Department of Transportation. The announcement of the winners of this highly competitive program will be made on Friday, and the awards will be presented at KTB's 25th Anniversary Convention, July 10, in San Antonio.

"On behalf of Keep Texas Beautiful, its officers and directors, I want to extend a very sincere thanks and congratulations to every city that entered the Governor's Awards and thereby continued to make Texas the number one state nationally in preventing litter, in addressing solid waste challenges, and in the beautification of our natural environment," said Bill Yenne, KTB board chair from Lake Jackson.

Keep Texas Beautiful Inc., the non-profit state affiliate of Keep America Beautiful Inc., provides grassroots solutions to Texas' solid waste and litter issues. KTB works with volunteers, elected officials, business and industry, the Texas Department of Transportation, the Texas Water Commission and the U.S. EPA to eliminate litter and create a cleaner and more beautiful environment.

KTB is celebrating 25 years of grassroots environmental leadership July 7-10 in San Antonio at the Annual KTB Convention. Anyone interested in receiving a schedule of convention workshops can call 1-800-CLEAN-TX.

High court blocks Granviel execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - The U.S. Supreme Court will consider hearing a claim by attorneys for convicted killer Kenneth Granviel, who avoided the Texas death chamber early today when the high court granted him a stay.

Granviel, 41, had faced lethal injection before dawn for a Fort Worth killing spree in which seven people were fatally stabbed nearly 18 years ago.

He was convicted of killing 2-year-old Natasha McClendon, one of five members of her family slain in October 1974. Two other women were killed in a similar fashion in Fort Worth four months later.

Attorneys for Granviel contended their client was mentally incompetent and insane and should not be executed.

In the writ ruled on by the Supreme Court about six hours before Granviel was to be put to death, Granviel's attorneys said the competency hearing to determine whether he could stand trial was unfair.

The Supreme Court is considering the same issue in another case involving a California claim and agreed to consider a request to hear Granviel's claim.

"That will be dealt with in the normal course of business," court spokeswoman Toni House said.

No vote was noted in the court's decision, although the lack of a dissent indicated the ruling was unanimous.

"Granviel is a really seriously mentally ill person and all his claims have really highlighted that," Mandy Welch, one of his attorneys, said. "We're glad that the court has shown some concern for that."

Lawyers also had filed a 45-page petition with a federal court in Fort Worth contending Granviel was insane and led a "lifetime of trauma" due to paranoid schizophrenia. They also argued jurors were not allowed to consider Granviel's mental problems before they sentenced him to death.

Those claims remained unresolved before the district court.

State attorneys had sent a psychiatrist to Granviel's prison cell Wednesday to examine him and believed the former machinist would not be disqualified from execution. Prosecutors long have contended Granviel was competent.

Granviel would have been the ninth convicted killer executed in Texas this year and the 51st since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982. The totals are by far the highest in the nation.

Granviel originally was scheduled to become the state's first prisoner to be executed by injection in September 1977. His execution date, however, was stayed as defense attorneys challenged the constitutionality of the then-new execution method.

In 1981, his conviction was overturned by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. He was retried two years later, convicted and again sentenced to death.

Trial

Although by March 1989, there had been at least three incidents of racial incidents reported to the sheriff by Brown, Free said he did not document any of those in Brown's personnel file.

"Looking back, if a slur had been made, it should have been documented," Free said.

Asked if he had taken action and called a departmental meeting to discuss the issue of racism, Free said he did not. He also said he did not have any documentation of his efforts to try to put a lid on racial complaints early on in his administration.

"I have found this out. Things needed to be documented," Free said.

Plaintiff's attorney David Hamilton asked Free if he had ever used the terms "colored folks or colored people." Free said he had used that terminology and had been quoted in The Pampa News. However, he said he did not find those terms racial.

He also said he did not find a question by Sgt. Dave Keiser to Brown to be racial. Free said he, Keiser, Brown and other deputies were at a civil process school in Tulia when Keiser asked Brown, "Is it just me you don't like or all white people?"

He said he just saw the statement as a "personality conflict" between Brown and Keiser. He said he told Keiser he would not put up with arguing between the two deputies and said he cautioned him several times.

Regarding an incident in November 1990 with attorney Rowdy Bowers and Brown, Free said he was told by Keiser and by Bowers that Brown had threatened the attorney following a disagreement.

However, Bowers testified Wednesday that he does not recall ever talking to the sheriff about the incident and said Brown did not threaten him in any way.

"Lynn and I had a discussion about his brother's sentence," Bowers said, adding he had known Brown for more than 15 years.

"Lynn and I have been on and off. By that I mean I'm not his favorite person and he's not mine," Bowers said.

Of the November 1990 incident, Bowers said, "Maybe I raised my voice some. I've been known to do that ... I don't remember the outcome except no one got hurt and no one got beat up."

Bowers said he had "no recall" of Brown ever threatening him, adding, "Nor am I in fear of him now or was I at that time."

Keiser hand-wrote a two-page statement about the Bowers incident in which he alleges Brown threatened Bowers with his life. That statement was at a later point put in Brown's personnel file.

Free was questioned as to why that was included in Brown's file without his knowledge and asked why Brown was not allowed to respond.

In a March 1990 incident, which Brown alleges Keiser called him a "nigger," former Gray County inmate Arthur Lee Williams testified Wednesday.

Williams said he heard Keiser call Brown a "nigger," but gave a statement at the time saying he did not because he was a trusty in the jail and Keiser was giving him special privileges that he did not want taken away.

He said he was telling the truth now because he wanted to get the incident straightened out.

Free said he had Keiser take a statement from Williams after the sheriff's office received the racial discrimination complaint filed by Lynn Brown.

Asked repeatedly if he thought it was wise to have the officer accused of committing the racial slur take statements on the case, Free said he saw no problem with that.

The sheriff testified that Brown was not promoted because he had problems getting along with the other deputies and associating with them. He said Brown being black had no bearing on any of the promotion decisions.

Free was questioned about the departmental policy implemented in August 1991 which says that promotional exams would be given along with other criteria for promotions. However, Free said all promotions were at his discretion.

Free also said he never saw three letters which Brown said he wrote to him asking if there was a problem and asking to be allowed to rotate shifts as other deputies because he was on the midnight shift for at least four months.

He said he never discriminated against Brown on the basis of race.

"I was raised up with the blacks and I like them. I have no problems with them," Free said.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Most convenient isn't always best

American compassion is legendary around the world. Throughout our history, we have given refuge literally to millions of those fleeing oppression. Each American is, in a real sense, a pilgrim from tyranny to liberty.

Unfortunately, at times our government has sacrificed that tradition of compassion on the altar of political expediency. During the late 1930s, hundreds of thousands of Jews sought to flee Nazi Germany to the safe harbor of America. But President Franklin Roosevelt cruelly turned them away.

As H.L. Mencken wrote in The Baltimore Sun on Nov. 27, 1938, "In the same breath in which the Hon. Mr. Roosevelt declared that he 'could scarcely believe that such things (the Nazi assault on the Jews) could occur in a Twentieth century civilization,' he assured the newspaper correspondents that he had no intention of proposing a relaxation of the immigration laws. In other words, he is sorry for the Jews, but unwilling to do anything about it that might cause him political inconvenience at home."

Mencken's proposal: "There is only one way to help the fugitives, and that is to find places for them in a country in which they can really live. Why shouldn't the United States take in a couple of hundred thousand of them, or even all of them?" Roosevelt rejected Mencken's proposal. As a result, almost all of those hundreds of thousands of Jewish refugees perished in the Holocaust.

We should keep that in mind when discussing the plight of the 34,000 Haitian refugees seeking to come to the United States in recent weeks. President Bush has repeated the Roosevelt solution: He is sending the refugees back to their native land, where they will suffer severe persecution. The reason, again, is political convenience.

The White House has dredged up an old excuse: That most of the refugees are fleeing "economic" troubles, not political persecution. But what's the difference if government persecution leads to jail — or to the loss of a job, leading to starvation?

Moreover, Bush himself has contributed to the suffering by continuing to impose economic sanctions on Haiti. This has severely hurt the country's economy, paradoxically increasing the dictatorship's grip. Has Bush forgotten how the tyrannies of Eastern Europe were loosened, and so made ready for toppling? Some small flowers of political, religious, and economic liberty pushed up through the concrete of totalitarianism, giving people something for which to work and hope.

Economic and political liberties are parts of one whole, not separate departments. Ending the economic sanctions on Haiti would encourage private power structures separate from the government, thus hastening the restoration of liberty. And the granting of asylum to all political/economic refugees would restore the American tradition of compassion while saving hundreds, perhaps thousands, of lives.

Why we won't do more for poor

The Los Angeles riots gave liberals the chance to say to the American people what fundamentalist ministers say to their congregants in times of natural disaster: This is not an accident but the wages of sin, and if you do not repent, woe be unto you.

In the catechism of the left, the years since 1981 have been a hideous orgy of capitalist excess and rampant selfishness, manifested most conspicuously in the shameful neglect of the poor. Now the poor have risen up to take what has wrongly been denied them, and it serves us right. As the bumper sticker on politically correct cars says: If you want peace, work for justice.

In fact, Ronald Reagan and George Bush didn't eviscerate federal social programs. For that matter, they didn't do much of anything with them, though they allowed steady growth in welfare spending.

But liberals have a point: Reagan and Bush were elected partly out of disillusionment with government efforts to help the poor. Americans are less sympathetic to anti-poverty programs than they used to be, and more resentful of welfare recipients. These attitudes block liberal ambitions like a fallen sequoia across a mountain path.

Liberals blame American voting habits on ignorance or greed, a contrast to the compassion that brought about the New Deal. Lawrence Mead, a political scientist at New York University, says attitudes have changed because the poor have changed. Social welfare programs used to be designed mainly to help people who were poor even though they worked hard. Now they help people who are poor because they don't work.

Social Security, union rights, unemployment benefits and the minimum wage — the great reforms of the Roosevelt era were attempts to make toil more rewarding. The programs of the 1960s and '70s, however, were generally based on mere need — Aid to Families with Dependent Children, food stamps, Medicaid, job training. Disenchantment has set in because the government seems to be rewarding sloth and getting more of it.

Stephen Chapman

Mead's recent book, "The New Politics of Poverty" (Basic Books), argues that the distinguishing feature of the poor today is that most of them work little or not at all. In 1959, fewer than a third of the people heading poor families did no work in the course of a year, but by 1989, more than half didn't work. Back then, 31 percent of the people heading poor families labored full-time all year; today, only 16 percent do.

People who don't work, it turns out, are likely to be poor, and those who do work are not, no matter how menial the job. Poverty afflicts one out of five non-working people and more than half of non-working single mothers. But only 2 percent of American who work full-time all year are poor, and only 7 percent of fully employed single mothers suffer poverty.

Why don't the poor, who most need the rewards of labor, do more of it? Mead considers the familiar explanations and finds each wanting.

No jobs? Only one out of every 11 poor adults blames a lack of jobs for his failure to work. When Massachusetts' unemployment rate fell to 3 percent in the 1980s, welfare applications increased. Racial discrimination? Before the civil rights era, blacks worked more than whites, not less.

The minimum wage doesn't pay enough to support a family? Very few people working for the minimum wage head poor families, and most minimum-wage workers aren't poor. Single mothers can't afford child care? Only 40 percent of working welfare mothers pay anything at all for their child care, and for those who do, the average cost is only $22.50 a week.

Mead says there are two main reasons most poor people don't work. One is that welfare provides aid without obligation, promoting passive dependency. The other is that the idle poor are demoralized and fatalistic, convinced that nothing they do will improve their lot.

In his view, the only remedy is to enforce work as a condition of government help. That approach would reduce public suspicion of welfare recipients, save money by discouraging chronic dependency, and give the non-working poor the push they need to learn to function in a working world.

Americans don't hate the poor or begrudge programs to help the helpless and the hard-working, but they rightly oppose giving money to people who refuse to do anything for themselves. They can see that while modern programs have eased the pain of poverty, they have also subsidized the kind of behavior that fosters poverty — not to mention crime, family disintegration and social disorder.

Proclaiming that Americans have an obligation to do more for the poor brethren, but no right to demand anything from them, is political folly as well as moral claptrap. Welfare will be unpopular as long as it doesn't require of the poor what the rest of society requires of itself.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 4, the 156th day of 1992. There are 210 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
Fifty years ago, on June 4, 1942, the Battle of Midway began during World War II, resulting in America's first major victory over Japan and marking a decisive turning point for the United States in the Pacific theater.

On this date:
In 1812, the Louisiana Territory was renamed the Missouri Territory.
In 1892, 100 years ago, the Sierra Club was incorporated in San Francisco.

In 1896, Henry Ford made a successful test run with his car in a nighttime drive through the streets of Detroit.
In 1940, the Allied military evacuation from Dunkirk, France, ended.
In 1944, Allied forces liberated Rome.

Best thing Dan Quayle has ever said

The word used to be whispered because it was not polite to throw it around loosely in mixed company.

It was a condemning word, a word that would bring heightened interest whenever it was mentioned. The word is "bastard."

I have never liked the word because the one so labeled had done nothing whatsoever to warrant such a harsh word.

The word, the label, means illegitimate. Not genuine. It even implies an outcast.

But a child of unwed parents has no more responsibility for the circumstances he or she greets at birth than a child born in wedlock.

I've always thought it is the unwed parents who should be stuck with a derogatory label not the child.

It is the child, not the parents, who suffers most when marked by society as an unkind to the rest of the flock.

I know I was different as a child, because I was the only one in my circle without a father living in my home.

That was back when divorce was a bad word.

It hurt. It hurt when older children would taunt me and ask me, "Where's your daddy?"

Perhaps some of the weaknesses and some of the fears I have as an adult may be traced back to being raised in a single parent home.

But I did know my mother and my father were married at the time of my birth. Had I been illegitimate the situation would have been even worse than being a child of divorce.

The vice president of the United States is being labeled a buffoon because he said a fictional television character having an illegitimate child "mocked" the importance of fathers by bearing a child alone.

Dan Quayle — and I quote from a news article — said many of the problems that led to the recent riots in Los Angeles stem from "a breakdown in traditional families with babies born irresponsibly" and fathers reneging on support. The New York Daily News ran this headline: Quayle to Murphy Brown: "YOU TRAMP!"

The vice president has said a number of stupid things since becoming vice president. But it wasn't stupid of him to say that it doesn't make it any easier to convince poor, urban, young women not to have illegitimate children in television episodes featuring someone who could easily be called a role model giving birth to an illegitimate child in front of 38 million viewers.

In fact, it may be the very best thing Dan Quayle has said since becoming vice president.

I realize and Dan Quayle realizes Murphy Brown is a fictional character, but Warren Beatty and Annette Bening aren't. They also produced an illegitimate child, and believe it or not, they were hailed as couple of the year on magazine covers.

Dan Quayle hit it on the head. He spoke of "a poverty of values."

Isn't that the truth? When something as important as making sure you're married before you have a baby is lost on the rich and famous, it, in fact, trickles down to the havenots, and God help us what value will be the next to go.

Danny Boy, I heard ya.

George can't live without his nukes

Fifty-five days after the Bush ascendancy, Vice President Dan Quayle promised the new management would pursue "well thought-out agendas" because "quick fixes are often bad fixes."

I thought he was talking about caution and restraint and prudence. It never occurred to me that what he really meant was lethargy and torpor and stupefaction.

For the past six months, we have been faced with a crisis that could pulverize the planet, and George Bush has just wrapped up a plan that might resolve the predicament seven years from now.

I refer to the recently completed agreements with the former Soviet republics, which inherited hundreds of strategic nuclear bombs when the empire collapsed. The new nations are now official parties to the START treaty, which George Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev initiated in July 1991. The agreement gives the republics of Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus seven years to destroy their nukes or transfer them to the Russian republic where they are supposed to be dismantled.

So what does all this really mean? It means that after the START pact is approved by the parliaments of the four republics, after it is ratified by the U.S. Senate, after it is signed by all parties and after the terms of the treaty have been fully met — seven years after the signatures are affixed — the United States and Russia will only have 18,400 strategic weapons left.

I can't speak for you, but I feel a whole lot safer realizing this.

Joseph Spear

I know, I should be praising Bush for a brilliant diplomatic achievement. I'm sorry, but I think he has moved with the agility of a giant ground sloth on this matter. He has within his purview the potential to rid the globe of the threat of nuclear destruction and he is dithering it away.

Why hasn't he confronted humankind's greatest menace in the same way he challenged Saddam Hussein? Why hasn't Mr. Foreign Policy at least attempted to rally world leaders to the greatest cause of modern time? Cajoled them, pressured them, sweet-talked them into seizing this moment to hammer out a universal nuclear disarmament agreement? For once in his life, why can't George Bush display a modicum of the vision thing?

Many experts believe it could be done. In an article for the Washington Post, Arjun Makhijani of the Institute for Energy and Environmental Research and Katherine Yih of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War suggested that the principal nuclear powers — the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China — first agree to remove all warheads from delivery systems and store them in internationally monitored repositories.

The authors continued: "Removing weapons from worldwide patrol would reduce the threat that near-nuclear weapons states feel from the nuclear weapons powers, which they use as justification for pursuing their own nuclear weapons programs." Thus such undeclared nuclear nations as Israel, India and Pakistan might be coaxed into storing their plutonium and enriched uranium under international supervision.

If that sounds too utopian for you, consider a couple of things that Bush could do unilaterally. He could announce the United States will forego nuclear testing for the rest of the year, as Russia and France have already done. He could accept Russian president Boris Yeltsin's offer to retarget weapons — simply point them away from each other.

Any why doesn't he? I have two theories:
1. He and his factotums just can't imagine living without their nukes. As Secretary of State James Baker put it last December, Russia should keep its nuclear arsenal because "the concept of deterrence...has kept the peace for the past four decades." He added, "I am not prepared to subscribe to the philosophy of denuclearization."

2. It's prudence, after all, the attitude that things will get done in time. Let's see now, what were we working on? The Treaty of Versailles? SEATO? Somebody bring me my briefcase.

Vermont's tranquility shattered by urban-style violent crimes

By MAURA GRIFFIN
Associated Press Writer

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Vermont has long been a pleasant day's drive away from the crowds, congestion and crime of the big city.

Now, a rash of violent crimes has left law enforcement officials and residents wondering whether that's still the case.

"They say Burlington is turning into the Bronx," said Doddi Ducharme, who lives in the Old North End, the toughest neighborhood in Burlington, which with 40,000 people is Vermont's largest city.

"This is no longer someone's hometown," said Police Chief Kevin Scully. "It's a little big city. We are undergoing a tremendous change."

Burlington residents were shaken by the recent slaying of a 16-year-old girl in apparent retaliation for informing on drug traffickers. Days earlier, a 34-year-old woman was stabbed to death in her apartment.

In October, an employee went on a shooting spree at a battery plant in Bennington, killing the plant manager and injuring two others.

The same month, a woman who had quit a white-collar job in Boston to live in the resort town of Stowe was found bludgeoned and strangled at a waterfall.

This week, a man was found dead with a ski pole through his neck in the town of Newfane.

Perhaps the first sign of things to come was the slaying a year ago of a bodyguard and debt collector for a drug dealer, said Chittenden County State's Attorney William Sorrell. Three alleged dealers were arrested in that case.

"We're now seeing big-city approaches to the drug trade that we haven't seen before," Sorrell said.

"More people from New York, Philadelphia and Boston have muscled their way into the local scene and created competition. And they are playing the game in a different way."

Vermont, just a few hours' drive from Montreal, Boston and New York City, has long been a tourist destination. Year-round attractions include hiking, skiing, maple sugar farms and autumn leaf watching.

But the rural charm of a state with a population of just 500,000 may also be a lure for criminals, Scully said.

"I think we are viewed in the cities as fertile ground where people can carry out conduct without interference of law enforcement," he said.

Ducharme said the situation in her Burlington neighborhood has gotten so bad she doesn't believe police can protect her. "If you tell the cops, the dealers will come get you and the cops can't do anything," she said.

Scully admitted he has his hands full, but in an echo of his big-city counterparts said he can't do a thing without the community's help.

"Even if we had 1,000 police, everyone would not be rendered absolutely safe," he said.

Burlington, Vt., Police Chief Kevin Scully stands in the city's Old North End Wednesday where the recent murder of a 16 year old has struck fear in residents.

Air fare sale not big deal for everyone

NEW YORK (AP) — Just because the airlines are running a big fare sale doesn't mean you can get the price you want on the flight you want — as thousands of frustrated travelers are finding out.

The airlines have developed an intricate system of selling seats on the same plane at vastly different prices, to make sure they get the maximum business from all types of customers.

So while American Airlines tried recently to simplify fares with a four-tier structure intended to bridge the gap between cheap tickets and the expensive seats, it still can be hard to get bargains on desirable flights.

Airlines have been swamped this week with millions of calls from people trying to take advantage of the sale, scheduled to end Friday, that cut the lowest fares in half for travel in the lower 48 states. By early in the week, many of the cheaper seats were gone.

"It's starting to get a little tough," Ivar Sivqveld, director of operations at Mainline Travel in Minnetonka, Minn., said Wednesday afternoon.

Average travelers may be confused or even angered, but there is a method to the madness.

The carriers estimate who will fly on a given flight, including how many people will show up at the last minute willing to pay full price. After accounting for those last-minute passengers, the airlines try to fill the rest of the plane with people who have the time to go for advance bargain rates.

The airlines call it "capacity control" or "yield management," but it basically means business travelers who fly on short notice, or first-class travelers who aren't worried about the money, will always find seats available.

"Obviously you're trying to maximize revenue," said Neil Monroe, a spokesman for Delta Air Lines. "You're trying to make sure you won't sell seats at a leisure-type fare when there may be a business traveler who wants that seat later at a higher price."

That means there will be different numbers of lower-priced seats available on every flight. No one knows how many, except for airline executives who keep those figures a closely guarded secret and can adjust the number of cheaper seats up or down if they feel the need.

This stamp design of Elvis in the early years was the winning choice in a public vote. The announcement was made today at Graceland.

Young Elvis licks old version

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — America has chosen its presidential nominee. And now it's picked its King.

The Postal Service today was to release the results of the balloting held to decide whether the Elvis Presley stamp to be issued next year will depict him as a sleek young rock 'n' roller or an older, jumpsuited Las Vegas act.

Presley's former wife, actress Priscilla Presley, was to announce the results at Graceland, the singer's former home in Memphis that draws more than 650,000 tourists a year.

Voting was conducted by mail April 6-24, and postal officials received more than 1.1 million of the more than 5 million ballots prepared. Most of the ballots apparently ended up in Elvis fans' scrapbooks, officials said.

The vote marked the first time the Postal Service has asked the public to select postage stamp art.

Officials commissioned two portraits, one of Presley in his "Hound Dog" years, cradling a '50s-style microphone, the other representing him in his later years as a Vegas showman, when he avored bejeweled jumpsuits and capes.

Critics objected to the project's $300,000 promotional costs, but the Postal Service said it expects to make money on the stamp as a collector's item.

Elvis fans have argued for years that their hero's likeness should grace a postage stamp. But others said the singer's drug abuse made him a poor subject for such an honor.

The Postal Service said the stamp will recognize Presley's contribution to American music, not endorse his way of life.

Yugoslavia says U.N. sanctions must be lifted

By DUSAN STOJANOVIC
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serbia called today for the lifting of international sanctions against it following the release of a U.N. report that apparently clears its government of exclusive blame for the war in Bosnia.

Sporadic fighting continued overnight in Bosnia-Herzegovina, including the capital Sarajevo. Violence across the newly independent republic claimed at least 45 lives Wednesday, and Bosnian leaders pleaded for foreign intervention.

On the sixth day of U.N. sanctions against Serbia and its ally Montenegro, there was little sign of hardship in the Serbian capital except for long lines of cars at service stations. Belgrade's stores remained well-stocked.

The U.N. report, made public Wednesday, said Serb fighters in Bosnia are no longer under direct control from Belgrade and have launched some of the worst violence in violation of orders to show restraint.

It also said Croatian soldiers were on the offensive in Bosnia, where an estimated 5,700 people have been killed since Feb. 29 when the republic's majority Slavic Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Yugoslavia.

Since the secession vote, Serbs have seized about two-thirds of the republic with the aid of the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army.

The report by Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali was not available to the Security Council on Saturday when it imposed harsh sanctions against Serbia and Montenegro, the remnants of the Yugoslav federation after Slavonia, Croatia, Macedonia and Bosnia seceded.

It differs from previous assessments that lay much of the blame for the fighting on the Yugoslav army, and it casts doubt on the effectiveness of the effort to halt the fighting by imposing sanctions on Yugoslavia.

"The report returns and strengthens our trust in the United Nations," said Branko Kostic, the head of Yugoslavia's collective presidency. He urged the lifting of sanctions.

"The sanctions were intended to intimidate Yugoslavs, and someone did not want it published before the unprecedented (U.N.) resolution was passed," Kostic said in an interview. Branko Brankovic, an adviser in Yugoslavia's Foreign Ministry, said the result of the new report should be "the lifting of the sanctions against Yugoslavia and the punishment of the real culprits."

The Vecernje Novosti newspaper, close to Serbia's president, Slobodan Milosevic, said that all three sides in the Bosnia war are to blame, including the Serb forces there.

The U.N. report says the loss of Serbian control over the irregulars began month ago when the Yugoslav army began discharging soldiers, most of whom have taken their weapons — including artillery — and joined Serb militias.

There also are increasing signs of a rift between Bosnian Serb leaders and Milosevic, by far the strongest politician in the new Yugoslavia.

Milosevic hinted he could resign to ease international sanctions on his republic.

Milosevic told Britain's Channel 4 TV he was prepared to quit "if it is a price for lifting of sanctions, a just solution."

About 50,000 people demonstrated against his policies in Belgrade on Sunday.

Senate votes to fund public broadcasting

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans would get more opportunity to talk back to their public broadcasting stations, but less chance to hear or see sexually oriented shows, under legislation passed by the Senate.

The bill, approved 84-11 Wednesday, authorizes $1.1 billion for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting over three years, but with new strings attached.

It would allow so-called indecent programming to be aired on both public and commercial radio and television stations, but only between the hours of midnight and 6 a.m. in most areas.

The money authorized in the bill starts with fiscal 1994 and is the same amount already voted by the House.

But the Senate's bill carries other provisions, including a requirement that CPB provide time for public comment on the quality, creativity, diversity, balance and objectivity of the shows and take those views into account when assessing overall national programming.

If CPB decides the programming is one-sided, it must supply the funds to air opposing views.

The different provisions of the House and Senate bill probably will be resolved by a conference committee of the two houses.

Most public broadcasting is produced by local stations and programmers hired by the Public Broadcasting Service. Money from CPB provides about 17 percent of the support needed for the entire system, with the rest coming from individual donations and corporate and foundation grants.

CPB has strict guidelines for the use of its money, but does not produce any shows itself. It was established as a buffer between the federal government and programming to avoid any appearance of federal control over the media.

Sheila Tate, CPB board chairman, said the Senate bill spells out additional procedures to hear public comment, but doesn't change CPB's mission to protect balance and objectivity.

"It is something we welcome because public broadcasting should be accessible to the public," she said of the bill.

The part of the measure that could lead to dramatic changes is a section restricting the hours most indecent programming may be shown.

Stations that go off the air at midnight could air such programs at 10 p.m. But it means much of the primetime programming aired now could come into question.

It applies only to over-the-air radio and television broadcasts, not cable, which means ABC, CBS, NBC or Fox shows would be affected, but not MTV, the Comedy Channel or HBO, for example.

Indecent programming is defined as that which contains descriptions of "sexual or excretory activities or organs" in terms "patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards." Currently, such programming is allowed between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. by the Federal Communications Commission.

The courts have struck down congressional attempts to prohibit indecent programming around the clock, saying there must be a daily period when such material is permitted on the airwaves.

The National Association of Broadcasters says the Senate's latest attempt also defies the First Amendment.

"If this measure becomes law, we may join with others to challenge it in court," the NAB said.

Conservative Republicans, citing the growing federal deficit, tried to reduce the size of the public broadcasting bill to $825 million over three years.

They said the commercial success of products based on Big Bird and other characters from public TV's "Sesame Street" prove that show, for example, can support itself.

But supporters, including Republican Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, said Congress should continue to support the television and radio system that for 25 years has taken free education and culture to the far reaches of the United States.

The $1.1 billion in the bill would be distributed by CPB to local public radio and television stations, PBS and National Public Radio during 1994-96.

There would be $310 million in fiscal 1994, $375 million in 1995 and $425 million for 1996. Current appropriations are $251 million in fiscal 1992 and $253 million in 1993.

Officials look for alternative jails

HOUSTON (AP) — Police are looking for alternative sites to hold people who may be arrested during protests and blockades planned by the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue during the Republican Convention, an official says.

Operation Rescue is the group that staged aggressive blockades at abortion clinics in Buffalo, N.Y., and Wichita.

Authorities say they may have to use temporary facilities to hold those arrested in convention-related protests.

"We are exploring alternative sites other than the city jail," Maj. Ed Macaluso, head of the Harris County Sheriff Department's Detective Bureau, said Wednesday. "But for security reasons I certainly wouldn't divulge where that is."

Abortion protesters arrested in the Buffalo area were held in a National Guard armory due to a shortage of jails.

Computer vs. wrist - pain is the winner

By DR. IRVING KARTEN
New York University School of Medicine

One of the wonders of 20th century technology — the computer and its keyboard — is being blamed by medical scientists for an increase in a common wrist injury known as carpal tunnel syndrome (CTS). CTS is seen in many workers who do repetitive tasks by hand, including telephone operators, envelope stuffers, cashiers and meat processors. It is estimated that upwards of 100,000 Americans undergo surgery for CTS each year, although in most cases, more conservative treatment and preventive steps can resolve the problem. Carpal tunnel syndrome is characterized by tingling, numbness or a burning pain in the fingers, as well as weakness of the hand muscles and even shooting pain in the arm. These symptoms are caused by swelling in the wrist which pinches the median nerve as it goes through a narrow passage (the carpal tunnel) of the wrist. Any activity which involves repetitive bending of the wrist, including workers on a computer keyboard, can create sufficient swelling to bring on this problem. However, because there are many other diseases that can cause pain or numbness in the hands, a medical evaluation is essential. In testing for CTS, the physician places an electrode on the index finger and creates a very small electrical impulse just above the wrist. If the time it takes the impulse to reach the fingertip is slower than normal, it is an indication that the nerve is not functioning properly and carpal tunnel syndrome may be present.

The problem is normally treated by using a splint on the wrist to prevent flexing, especially at night. In more serious cases cortisone injections can be helpful. If CTS has reached a point where there is substantial muscle weakness in the hand, surgery may be necessary. The period of disability can vary widely from patient to patient, depending on the length of time the symptoms have been present and the resulting weakness in the muscles. Those who work long hours entering data into a computer can be trained to avoid unnecessary bending of the wrist and other work habits harmful to the wrist. A soft pad on the desk where the forearms rest and a chair high enough so that the typist's eyes are level with the screen may also help reduce discomfort.

Guest's beef about tip uncalled for

DEAR ABBY: Your letter re "tipping" rang a bell with me. Recently I took a lady friend (at her invitation) to a dinner and jazz function. The bill came to $59, which included a $24 cover charge. I filled out the credit card and added a $6 gratuity. My lady friend peered over my shoulder and said, "That's just 10 percent!" Her tone was very disapproving, implying that I was cheap, so I politely explained that one does not pay gratuities on cover charges, and considering the poor service we received, I thought the tip was generous. I added that whoever pays determines how much the tip should be, and furthermore, it is inappropriate for a guest to advise her/his escort on how much to tip.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I would like your thoughts on this matter, please.

TICKED OFF
DEAR TICKED OFF: I agree with you. It was extremely bad manners for your lady friend to have "peered" over your shoulder at the bill, and even worse to have commented on the size of the tip.

of Bayer aspirin that expired two years ago, also some Tylenol with an expiration date four years ago — and other things such as Nyquil, Bufferin, Maalox, all with expiration dates years beyond keeping!

Time passes so quickly, Abby. Please print this. I'll bet a lot of people will get some big surprises. Some prescription drugs may lose their potency only after a while, but others can be dangerous.

LUCILLE IN LONG BEACH

DEAR LUCILLE: Thanks for a valuable letter. Readers, when in doubt, ask your pharmacist.

DEAR ABBY: While watching the news, I was shocked to hear about a baby sitter who gave a baby some very old, spoiled medicine, and the baby died!

I immediately checked all the stuff in our medicine chest. I had a bottle

DEAR ABBY: The question that bothers me is this: My daughter was married in the 1950s. She passed away from cancer two years ago. If my son-in-law marries again, will he still be my son-in-law? They had no children.

Please put your answer in the paper. It might help some other person who is in the same situation and needs to know.

He always called me "Little Mama" ... so that is how I will sign this letter.

LITTLE MAMA IN GEORGIA
DEAR LITTLE MAMA: Whether he marries or not, legally, he is no longer your son-in-law. Emotionally, perhaps yes. But not legally.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a thank-you note that reads as follows: "Thank you for the lovely gift," signed "Mrs. and Mrs. Newlywed"?

I was shocked to receive such a note. It was so cold and impersonal, it could have been run off on a copy machine.

I was very hurt because I had spent a lot of time and money selecting a gift I thought would be perfect for this couple. I would like to add that the bride is a relative of mine.

DISGUSTED
IN BERTHOUD, COLO.
DEAR DISGUSTED: Obviously, the bride and groom are woefully ignorant about how to write a thank-you note. However, their note did serve to acknowledge that your wedding gift was received.

Sadly, there are some who can say, "Well, that's more than I received."

War on fleas continues with canine care

Editor's note: The Top O' Texas Kennel Club has scheduled a dog dip for 1-4 p.m., Saturday, at Hastings Plaza. All dogs must be over 4 months of age, and on a leash. A donation per dog is requested. For more information, contact Randy at 669-9206 or Mona at 669-6357. If it rains, the dip will be rescheduled.

By MONA WHEAT
Special to The Pampa News

To clean up fleas outdoors, mow, rake and remove organic debris. Contact a commercial pest control service to spray your exterior premises. If you choose to do it yourself, there are granules which can be put down with a fertilizer spreader that lasts if it rains. If you spray, do a good job of it. Spray the entire area outside your home, and don't cheat on the recommended dilution in an erroneous attempt to save money. You won't kill the fleas, and all your other efforts will wasted money and time. Spray the grass, flower beds, walkways, driveways, where the ground meets the house, 4" up on the house, and under mobile homes. It is imperative that the sprayed area dry completely before humans or animals return. In warm weather, generally an hour is sufficient.

With the help of a veterinarian, decide which of the many products available would be best to use on your dog. Some products work best in combination with others — such as the wham-bam knockdown swiftness of pyrethrum and rotenone with the less rapid kill power of organic phosphates and carbamates, which attack the flea's nervous system.

However, combinations can be tricky and deadly for humans and animals. Always read directions, and follow them to the letter.

Treat Fido to a flea bath, then sponge or pour a flea dip over his body. Allow the dog to drip dry. Do not towel dry the dog. Treat your dog as often as recommended with the product you have chosen.

Some dogs and people are extremely sensitive to flea-control products. Caution must be taken with puppies, old dogs, sick dogs or dogs with allergies.

Classic signs of toxicity include excessive salivation, vomiting, respiratory distress, diarrhea, trembling, slow heart rate, weakness, lethargy, hyperactivity, and constricted pupils. If any of these signs appear, call your veterinarian immediately.

If chemicals scare you, there are alternatives. To kill fleas on your dog, dilute a dishwashing liquid 1/2 and 1/2 and bathe your dog; leaving it on for 5 minutes works well. For exterior control, plant mint or a variety of herbs in your yard. Brewer's yeast sprinkled on your dog's food daily is a wonderful aide in the flea war.

Forget the ties and socks; This is what Dad wants

Summer is here. School is out. Without warning FATHER'S DAY will arrive on June 21st. What do you give the man who has everything? Here's my top ten gift suggestions and all are better than that ugly tie he received last Christmas.

1. The newest and best fishing innovation of 1992 is "POWER BAIT" by Berkley. Power baits are soft plastic lures that contain special scents and flavor ingredients that "increase your fish catch 2 to 1 over ordinary plastic worms." The professional anglers who must catch fish are very quickly using these baits because they really work. They are available at all good tackle shops and worth the extra cost.

2. HONEY HOLE - The trophy bass fishing magazine of Texas costs only $18. Jerry and Debra Dean are anglers who publish my favorite magazine about Texas lakes. Each month, some 25 local experts from all across Texas report current lake conditions. Any bass angler would be delighted with a year's subscription. Write Honey Hole, P.O. Box 9027, Ft. Worth, Texas 76147.

3. Head for the mountains of New Mexico but first call Ron Simmons at MORENO RANCH (505-377-6931) near Eagle Nest Lake. Make reservations for either a guided or an unguided fishing trip that is guaranteed to make Dad a "happy camper."

4. Phantom Tackle Company has the hottest new topwater lure, a "Phish Stik". Rigged Texas style, this unique plastic lure will dance circles around other surface lures. Big bass love this bait.

5. Dr. OUTDOORS (P.O. Box 2938 in Harlingen, Texas 78551) Using nature's healer, aloe vera, their products not only protect against the harmful effects of the sun but help heal those bothersome cuts and scratches. Made in Texas, of course.

6. For a special fishing trip, consider renting a HOUSEBOAT at LAKE AMISTAD (512-774-4157). The fishing is great at Amistad, and surely Dad will want the entire family on this unique vacation.

7. Let Dad select his own gift from the world's largest seller of fishing products. Send your name and address to Bass Pro Catalog, 1935 S. Campbell, Springfield, Mo. 65898-0123. Their seasonal catalog is free.

8. Lake Texoma STRIPER TRIP. Call either Little Glasses Marina at 405-795-2068, or John Hoffman Guide Service at 405-564-3567. There is outstanding fishing with some really nice people.

9. For the hunters - Burnam Brothers (P.O. Box 1148, Menard, Texas 76859) are the world leader in all kinds of game calls and hunting accessories.

Torrid Jordan blazes Portland

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan's shots reached the basket so quickly, they didn't seem to have enough air time to qualify for 3 points apiece.

Larry Bird rainbows they weren't. Nor were they the high-arching one-handed pushes popularized by Magic Johnson and Michael Adams.

They were line drives, like arrows shot from a bow. Six of them. And they pierced the hearts of the Portland Trail Blazers as surely as they pierced the middle of Chicago Stadium's nets Wednesday in the Bulls' 122-89 victory in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

Jordan scored 18 of his Finals-record 35 first-half points on 3-pointers. He finished with 39 points and 11 assists and gave Chicago the edge going into Game 2 here Friday night.

"You've got to give the guy credit," said Clyde Drexler, the Portland All-Star who was supposed to be Jordan's near-equal but who was no match for His Airness this night. "We left him open for the 3s and he buried them."

And so Michael Jordan has done the impossible, finding yet another way to bury an opponent. This time, with what both Drexler and Chicago coach Phil Jackson called a "barrage" of ballistic 3-pointers.

Jordan claimed that he was simply operating "within the framework of our offense."

But there's no way that offense calls for Jordan to shoot from downtown Chicago. Jordan is a career 28 percent 3-point shooter and has averaged only 1.2 attempts per game. In his first 16 games of this postseason, he was 5 for 16 from long range.

Perhaps lack of practice explains why he launches 3s with the same flat trajectory as his 10-foot fadeaway jumpers. And why Portland was so unprepared for Wednesday's 6-for-10 outburst.

"Those are the shots we want Michael to take," said Drexler, who scored only 16 points on 5-for-14 shooting in his one-on-one duel with Jordan. "Those shots will be available to him in Game 2. And in Games 3, 4 and 5."

Jordan will take them if the situation is the same as it was Wednesday, when his six 3-pointers set a one-half Finals record and tied the single-game mark.

"My shot was falling from everywhere," he said, "so I ran to the 3-point line and let them go."

Nice and flat. Just over the rim. Smack into the net. Rip City, as they say in Portland.

Actually, the game was close for a while. Portland made its first seven shots and 11 of its first 14 to take a 25-17 lead. Jordan had 8 points on 3-for-7 shooting and had missed two of his three 3-point attempts.

Jordan scored the Bulls' next 10 points on two 3-point liners and two drives around Drexler to give his team momentum.

Jackson rested Jordan at the start of the second quarter. When Jordan returned 6:43 before halftime, Chicago led 45-44.

Then ... "We couldn't stop him," Portland's Danny Ainge said, simply.

Jordan from 15 feet. Jordan for 3. Jordan steal and 15-footer. Jordan from 15. Jordan for 3. Jordan with an emphatic, two-handed rebound jam. Jordan from 3 again.

Meanwhile, Portland was handling the ball like it was a live grenade, committing four turnovers late in the first half and shooting two airballs.

It was 66-51 at halftime.

"They tried to get back in the game and they started to force shots," Jordan said. "That's what teams do when they fall behind."

Unbelievably, it got worse for the Trail Blazers, even though Jordan went from shooter to dishmas-

Chicago's Michael Jordan reacts after making an NBA Finals' record of six 3-pointers in a half on Wednesday. The Bulls beat Portland in Game 1, 122-89.

ter. He took only six second-half shots, making two, but set up seven baskets — including four in the first 3 1/2 minutes of the half. The Bulls led 104-68 after three, the biggest margin ever at that stage of a championship round game.

The Trail Blazers are comforted by the fact that even their second-worst playoff defeat ever still counts as only one loss.

Boston beat Los Angeles 148-114 in Game 1 of the 1985 Finals, one of the largest victory margins ever, but the Lakers rebounded to win the series. Why, just last season, the Bulls lost Game 1 of the Finals before routing the Lakers in four straight for the title.

"It's hard to bounce back from a loss like this," Portland's Terry Porter said. "We just have to throw this one out and say, 'The heck with it.'"

'Indy' a 'what if' horse in Saturday's Belmont

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - If A.P. Indy wins the Belmont Stakes on Saturday, just call him the "what if" horse.

A.P. Indy, trained by Neil Drysdale, missed the first two legs of the Triple Crown — the Kentucky Derby and Preakness — with an injury.

But, coming off a 5 1/2-length victory in the Peter Pan on May 24, A.P. Indy will be listed among the early favorites today when 10-12 3-year-olds are expected to enter for the Belmont.

"The Peter Pan was probably the most impressive race I've seen him run," said Tom Bohannon, trainer of Preakness winner Pine Bluff.

And that's saying something. On April 4, A.P. Indy won the Santa Anita Derby by 1 3/4 lengths, beating Bertrand and Casual Lies, who was second in the Derby and third in the Preakness. It was his sixth straight victory since losing the first race of his career.

In Kentucky on May 2, A.P. Indy probably would have gone off the second favorite to Arazi, who wound up eighth. But A.P. Indy was scratched on the morning of the Kentucky Derby with what later was determined to be a cracked left-front hoof. He passed up the Preakness two weeks later while recuperating from the injury.

In the Peter Pan, Drysdale said A.P. Indy erased any lingering doubts about his condition. "I was looking for a good effort to confirm that his foot is not bothering him," Drysdale said. And he got it.

He'll race in the Belmont with a fiberglass patch over the crack, as he did in the Peter Pan. Now, Drysdale said, it doesn't matter that he missed training time.

"How much training was lost before the Peter Pan is irrelevant because we won," Drysdale said.

Pepperdine pitchers have captured much of the attention as they recorded two shutouts in the College World Series, but the Waves' Steve Rodriguez knows he has at least one fan in the stands.

The second baseman's father, Victor, flew in from Las Vegas, Nev., to watch his son play in the NCAA championship.

Saturday night, the junior made his father proud with a pair of hits, including a two-run homer, in a 6-0 win over second-ranked Wichita State. He also made a defensive play on a bad hop that Coach Andy Lopez called an example of Rodriguez' athletic skills.

He also went one-for-five and had a hand in more defensive gems in Monday's 7-0 win over fourth-ranked Texas.

Pepperdine faces Texas (48-16) again today at 6:36 p.m. CDT in a West Division semifinal game. A Pepperdine win will put the Waves in their first CWS championship game on Saturday.

A Texas win will force a second semifinal game Friday night.

Stewart forgets success

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - Maybe success didn't spoil Payne Stewart, but it sure messed up his golf game.

"I haven't had any fun on the golf course in a long time," Stewart said before today's opening round in the Memorial tournament.

And it all stems from his victory in the U.S. Open last June.

"When we achieve some success, we say, 'I've got to get better.' So I went to some people whose opinions I respect, and they told me to do some things, gave me some advice. I tried to do it.

"It didn't work for me."

Essentially, Stewart said, "I was trying to be too mechanical, thinking about my swing."

"Hey, that's not Payne Stewart. I'm a 'feel' player."

"I wasn't playing any good, and when you're not playing good, you're not having any fun," the fun-loving Stewart said.

So he made a change, back to his old way; forgetting the mechanics and playing the way that won him two major titles.

"The way for Payne Stewart to get better is to just be himself," he said.

He made the adjustment four weeks ago in Dallas.

"I saw some good results in Dallas, and I saw some good results in Fort Worth," he said. "Then, last week at the Kemper, I started making some putts. I hit four balls in the water for the week and I finish two shots out of the lead."

"That tells me I'm doing the right thing. I've lightened up on myself. I'm starting to have some fun again."

At least a portion of his difficulties, Stewart said, were self-inflicted — again as a result of his Open triumph.

"I put too much pressure on myself," he said. "You go in as the Open champion and you start thinking, 'Hey, these people are expecting me to play like an Open champion,' and you just put too much pressure on yourself to perform."

"I know he wants to do both (sports). That's not even an issue," Poston said. "He's happy to be with the Braves organization, and he's also happy to be with Green Bay."

Cal State Fullerton's Jeremy Carr doubles ahead of Miami's Luis Hernandez's tag.

Cal State Fullerton humbles Miami

By STEVE KLINE
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Top-ranked Miami has lost two in a row only once this season, and the Hurricanes are banking on that kind of dominance to lead them into Saturday's College World Series championship game.

Miami dropped a pair of games to Florida in February.

Fifth-ranked Cal State-Fullerton, a 7-5 victor over Miami on Wednesday, must repeat the feat on Friday if it wants to play for the title.

"The way everyone's talking, we might as well pack our bags and go home," said Titan third baseman Phil Nevin. "Nobody thinks we can beat Miami twice. But we've never lost a (three-game) series this year."

Fullerton coach Augie Garrido agreed.

"Because I've been around so long, I know anything is possible in this game," Garrido said. "I don't know whether we're going to win or whether we're going to lose. Our focus is best effort."

Fullerton gave its best effort Wednesday.

The Titans (45-16) battered starter Jose Prado (4-2) for four hits and five runs in the first inning. Phil Nevin, the No. 1 overall pick in Monday's major league draft by the Houston Astros, hit a two-run homer in the second for a 7-0 lead as Cal State-Fullerton snapped Miami's five-game winning streak.

Nevin is hitting .700 in the series with two homers and nine RBI.

"It's just one of those things," he said. "I'm seeing the ball real well right now. I'm being patient at the plate. I think that's the biggest thing."

A Hurricane victory on Friday would put Fraser, retiring this year after 30 years, within one win of his third national title. He won CWS titles in 1982 and 1985.

He said his team's position is tough after the loss to the Titans.

"Everybody is all equal on our side now. We've got to come back out Friday and play well. We've got to start Jeff Alkire. He's our ace. You'd hope that you could win today and save him for the final game, but that's not the way it is," Fraser said.

Jeremy Carr's double and walks to Nevin and Jason Moler loaded the bases in the first inning and Tony Banks opened the scoring with an RBI single. Steve Sisco's single to left scored Nevin and Moler, and Nate Rodriguez's looping single to center scored Banks and Sisco for a 5-0 lead.

Nevin's 22nd homer of the year, a two-run shot to left field in the second, was matched by Miami's Kevin DiGiacomo's 11th homer of the season in the sixth off Dan Naulty (13-3) and Donald Robinson's fourth of the year in the seventh.

Pepperdine pitchers have captured much of the attention as they recorded two shutouts in the College World Series, but the Waves' Steve Rodriguez knows he has at least one fan in the stands.

The second baseman's father, Victor, flew in from Las Vegas, Nev., to watch his son play in the NCAA championship.

Rangers squeak by New York after errant throw

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

New York's Shawn Hillegas made an errant pickoff throw after Jeff Huson put Texas in position to win through his own failure.

Hillegas (0-2) was attempting to pick pinch-runner John Cangelosi off third base with none out, but fired the ball wide of third baseman Charlie Hayes. Cangelosi came home with the run that gave the Rangers their 17th victory in the last 19 games against the visiting Yankees.

Kevin Reimer opened the inning with a single. Huson was unsuccessful in trying to sacrifice before moving Cangelosi to third on a hit-and-run single. Hillegas faked to third, faked to first and then wheeled and double-clutched before throwing the ball away to make a winner of Kenny Rogers (1-2).

Elsewhere, it was Oakland 7, Boston 6; California 4, Baltimore 3 in 10 innings; Detroit 10, Milwaukee 4; Cleveland 8, Seattle 3; and Kansas City 3, Chicago 1.

Some nights ... make that weeks ... no, months ... there is just no stopping Kirby Puckett. Juan Guzman realizes that, and doesn't mind being less than perfect because of one of the greats of the game.

"I can't win them all," Guzman said after Puckett's second grand slam in six days helped the Minnesota Twins hand the Toronto right-hander his first loss this season, 11-3 Wednesday night. "After the grand slam, I said, 'Well, today's not my day. I think I'm going to lose this one.'"

"Puckett's a good hitter. Everybody knows that." What many were wondering before Puckett hit his first career grand slam last Friday night was why it took so long. To be precise, it took Puckett 5,191 at-bats to hit his first. It took him just 23 more to hit his second.

"I'm just seeing it and hitting it," said Puckett, who tied a career high with five RBIs. "It must be my week, that's all."

He's been hot for more than a week. Puckett, the American League player of the month for May, is hitting .432 with six home runs, 23 runs scored and 27 RBIs in his last 22 games.

Still, Puckett wasn't expecting much against Guzman (6-1), now 16-4 as a major leaguer.

"He's so hard to hit, I just hope he makes a mistake," Puckett said. "I was just trying to put the ball in play. He had a good slider and a good fastball. If he didn't have anything today, it was probably his forkball. He was bouncing that in the dirt all day."

Kevin Tapani (6-4), who allowed three runs on 11 singles in 5 2-3 innings, won his fifth straight game. His ERA has increased from 4.89 to 5.12 in his last four starts, but the Twins have scored 40 runs in those games.

American League

The Twins, who snapped a two-game slide, have won five of their last seven and 16 of 22. Toronto had won five straight games.

After Guzman pitched two perfect innings, Scott Leius opened the third with a single and went to third on Jeff Reboulet's one-out single. Chuck Knoblauch walked with two outs to load the bases for Puckett, who hit a 1-1 pitch over the fence in left-center.

Toronto rallied in the sixth on run-scoring singles by Dave Winfield, John Olerud and Derek Bell.

But the Twins made it a runaway in their half of the inning when Puckett drove in his fifth run with a single and Pedro Munoz hit a three-run homer, his sixth. Puckett last had five RBIs on July 15, 1990.

Athletics 7, Red Sox 6

Jose Canseco homered twice, Mark McGwire added his major league-leading 20th and Terry Steinbach broke a sixth-inning tie with a two-run single as Oakland swept visiting Boston in three games.

Canseco hit a two-run homer in the first off John Dopson and added a solo shot in the third, his 12th. McGwire also homered in the third.

Dopson then threw behind Jamie Quirk, who charged the mound, leading to both being ejected. Steinbach, who got his winning hit off Mike Gardiner (3-4), replaced Quirk. Jeff Parrett (5-0) won. Dennis Eckersley got his 20th save in 20 chances and his 24th in a row to stand one short of Tom Henke's major league record for consecutive saves.

Angels 4, Orioles 3

Pinch-hitter Lee Stevens' first RBI this season at home — an infield grounder in the 10th inning — capped a comeback for run-starved California.

The Angels, scoring more than three runs for the only time on their nine-game homestand, tied it in the seventh on Gary DiSarcina's first big-league homer, a two-run shot. He also made a run-saving play at shortstop.

California loaded the bases in the 10th against Alan Mills (2-1). Stevens, who had gone 59 at-bats at Anaheim Stadium without an RBI, batted for Luis Sojo and hit a slow roller up the first-base line. Jose Gonzalez beat the throw home from charging first baseman David Segui to win for Scott Bailes (3-0).

Tigers 10, Brewers 4

Cecil Fielder hit a pair of two-run homers, driving in five runs as visiting Detroit cooled off Milwaukee to end a six-game losing streak.

Fielder, with just one homer since April 23, hit an RBI single in a five-run first and homered in the fourth and the sixth innings, giving him 10 this season.

Kevin Ritz (1-1) worked 5 1-3 innings for his first victory in 30 appearances since Sept. 5, 1989. Bill Wegman (5-5) gave up four unearned runs in the top of the first.

Robin Yount hit his fourth homer for Milwaukee, which had won five of six.

Indians 8, Mariners 3

Sandy Alomar hit his first career grand slam to cap a seven-run fourth inning, giving Cleveland its seventh victory in eight games.

Cleveland erupted for its biggest inning this season with seven consecutive hits, including Carlos Baerga's leadoff homer and Alomar's slam.

Clay Parker (0-1) allowed Baerga's fifth home run and five singles. Alomar then hit Jim Acker's first pitch for his second homer to make it 7-0 for Scott Scudder (4-5), who sent visiting Seattle to its third straight loss.

Jacoby had his second homer in the eighth.

Royals 3, White Sox 1

Brian McRae singled home the go-ahead run, and struggling Mike Magrane pitched Kansas City over slumping Chicago.

Magnante (2-4) gave up five hits in seven innings, lowering his ERA from 7.90 to 6.54. His only other major league victory also was over the visiting White Sox, who have lost eight of their last nine games.

Greg Hibbard (5-4) walked Mike Macfarlane leading off the seventh inning and pinch-runner Brent Mayne was sacrificed to second by Gary Thurman before McRae's decisive single. Jeff Montgomery got his 10th save.

Four-run first inning paces Astros past Montreal

By The Associated Press

Thanks to a long first inning, a long home run by Jeff Bagwell and a long, effective performance by the Houston bullpen, Astros pitcher Pete Harnisch's long winless streak is over.

The Astros batted around in a four-run first inning, got a 408-foot home run from Bagwell in the fifth and four scoreless innings from relievers Joe Boever and Doug Jones in beating the Montreal Expos 5-3 Wednesday night, earning Harnisch his first victory since May 1.

Harnisch, winless in six starts, was thrilled to end his drought on a night when he admittedly wasn't very good.

"I never found my rhythm tonight," he said. "I was never in control. I've been struggling all year, but tonight we score four in the first inning and that salvaged it."

"I can't say enough about the bullpen. They didn't even make me squirm about winning this one. DJ (Doug Jones) had great stuff again. As ugly as I pitched, they bailed me out."

Harnisch (3-5) allowed three runs and five hits while walking four and striking out four in his five innings.

National League

Boever came on and threw three scoreless innings, then Jones pitched a perfect ninth for his 13th save in 16 chances.

In other games, Cincinnati outscored St. Louis 8-7, Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles 6-5, Philadelphia beat Atlanta 4-1, and San Diego topped Chicago 5-1.

Reds 8, Cardinals 7

Cincinnati overcame a 6-2 deficit with four runs in the sixth and two more in the seventh to win for the eight time in its last nine games. St. Louis lost its third straight and sixth in seven outings.

Barry Larkin and Chris Sabo started the four-run sixth with consecutive home runs off Donovan Osborne, and Paul O'Neill and Reggie Sanders added run-scoring hits.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 5

Jeff King drove in three runs with two singles and Pittsburgh withstood another pinch-hit home run by Los Angeles to win its fourth in six games.

King rapped an RBI single in the first and a two-run hit in the third to erase a 2-1 Dodgers lead, and Steve Buechele, Mike LaValliere and Cecil Espy added RBIs to make it 6-2.

Phillies 4, Braves 1

Curt Schilling pitched seven shutout innings and Darren Dalton homered for his first hit in 20 at-bats against John Smoltz (5-5) as Philadelphia ended Atlanta's five-game winning streak.

Padres 5, Cubs 1

Bruce Hurst threw a six-hitter for his first career victory over Chicago and San Diego took advantage of sloppy play by the Cubs to salvage the final game of a three-game series.

Graf advances to French Open Finals Mathis, Webb Greenbelt Bowl Queen candidates in Childress

PARIS (AP) — Steffi Graf rallied from a nightmarish first set to beat Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 0-6, 6-2, 6-2 in the French Open semifinals today, avenging last year's trouncing by the Spanish player.

Graf, the second seed, suffered the worst defeat of her career a year ago when Sanchez Vicario beat her 6-0, 6-2 in the semifinals. Today's match began as a bizarre re-run.

Sanchez Vicario, seeded fourth, tirelessly ran down shots and Graf committed numerous unforced errors. The 0-6 first set, along with last year's first set, are the only times since 1984 that Graf has been shut out in a set.

But Graf collected herself in the second set and turned the match on its head. Her vaulted forehand, which failed her repeatedly in the first set, began producing winners, and she no longer seemed impatient or tense.

Sanchez Vicario won the first two games of the third set, but Graf dominated thereafter, pumping her fist with emotion.

Graf, smiling in relief after the match, said that even after the first set, "I felt a lot better than last year."

"I told myself to just take the games one at a time."

The 22-year-old German had only lost twice to Sanchez Vicario in 15 previous matches, but both defeats came on center court at Stade Roland Garros. In addition to last year, Graf lost to the Spaniard in the 1989 final.

Graf, the champion here in 1987 and 1988, will play in the final Saturday against the winner of the second semifinal between top-seeded Monica Seles, the two-time defending champion, and No. 3 seed Gabriela Sabatini.

The last berth in the men's semifinal was filled today when Petr Korda, in the best Grand Slam showing of his career, won 6-4, 6-7 (7-3), 6-2, 6-4 over Russia's Andrei Cherkasov.

The seventh-seeded Czechoslovak's opponent will be crowd favorite Henri Leconte of France, who rallied from two sets down to win his quarterfinal Wednesday against Nicklas Kulti of Sweden.

In the other semifinal Friday, defending champion Jim Courier faces No. 11 seed Andre Agassi in a rematch of last year's all-American final.

Korda, who never before had gotten past the third round of a Grand Slam, split the first two sets with Cherkasov late Wednesday before darkness forced suspension of play.

Leconte, who underwent back surgery last year and is ranked 200th in the world, has been buoyed throughout the tournament by euphoric, foot-stamping crowds. Center court literally shook Wednesday as he rallied to beat Kulti 6-7 (10-8), 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

If he reaches the final, his American opponent will have to contend with partisan bedlam similar to that which propelled Leconte and Guy Forget to a stunning upset of the United States in the Davis Cup final last year in Lyon.

But Agassi, after beating No. 3 seed Pete Sampras in straight sets, predicted the winner of his match with Courier will capture the title.

Shamrock playday scheduled Sunday

Shamrock 4-H Horse Club is sponsoring a jackpot playday Sunday, starting at 4 p.m. at the Shamrock Rodeo Association Arena west of town.

If more information is needed, call 806-256-2656 or 806-256-3066.

Queen candidates in Childress

Bridgett Mathis and Tracy Webb of Pampa are among the contestants entered in the 1992 Greenbelt Bowl Queen pageant Friday night, beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the Childress High School Auditorium.

The pageant is held each year in conjunction with the Greenbelt Bowl All-Star Game. Each football player selected for the game may nominate a high school girl to compete for the queen title. Mathis represents running back Sammy Laury and Webb represents tight end Phil Sexton.

Laury and Sexton, both of Pampa, were picked to play for the North squad in the all-star tilt, which kicks off at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Childress High School Stadium.

Area players also named to the North squad include running back Tuffy Sanders of McLean, fullback Mack Marshall and wide receiver Brandon Chick, both of Wheeler, and tackle Kirk Pshigoda of White Deer.

Judging for the pageant begins at 1 p.m. Friday when judges meet each contestant in individual interview sessions. Formal presentation in evening gowns begins later that night. Announcement of the '92 queen, first and second runners-up, Miss Congeniality and Miss Photogenic will be made during halftime ceremonies.

Last year's queen, Christy Cox, will serve as emcee for the pageant. Jennifer Lindley, 1991 Miss Congeniality, will assist Cox.

Because of the unpredictable West Texas weather, the pageant was moved indoors this year.

"Last year's pageant was barely over when the wind and rain started, so we elected to move indoors this year," said Kathy Lindley, pageant chairperson. "Everyone is invited to come out and show their support for all the queen nominees. There will be plenty of seats, at no charge, and you can enjoy the pageant in air-conditioned comfort."

Forty-eight high school stars from throughout West Texas make up the North-South Greenbelt Bowl all-star squads. The players began two-day practices and training Tuesday.

The game has been a showcase for high school stars throughout the years.

Houston's Frank Ryan played in one of the early Greenbelt Bowls. He later played at Rice before playing quarterback for the Cleveland Browns in the NFL.

Other Greenbelt Bowl stars include Ray McCown of Dumas and Mike Hargrove of Perryton. McCown later earned All-American honors at TCU. Mike Hargrove, now the manager of the Cleveland Indians baseball club, is a former Greenbelt Bowl MVP.

Glo-Valve edges Dunlap, 8-7

Ryan Schumacher bunted Matt Evans home with the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning as Glo-Valve squeaked past Dunlap Industrial, 8-7, in a Major Bambiino League game at Optimist Park on Tuesday.

Evans had three hits to lead Glo-Valve hitters. He also scored two runs and had one RBI. Kris Davis had a double, a single, one run scored and three RBIs to share offensive honors for Glo-Valve. Josh Rodriguez had both hits for Dunlap Industrial.

Schumacher was the winning pitcher, relieving Matt Evans in the fifth inning with the bases loaded. He allowed one unearned run in 1 1/3rd innings while walking five and striking out four. Evans allowed two hits, walked 11 and struck out seven batters.

Rodriguez went all the way for Dunlap Industrial and allowed seven earned runs and five walks. He struck out eight others.

Amos Valmores singled off Rodriguez' glove to start the bottom of the second for Glo-Valve. He came in to score when Grayson Lewis drilled a triple. A single by Davis plated Lewis, giving Glo-Valve a 2-0 lead.

Dunlap scratched back for a run in the fourth inning. Rodriguez singled, but was forced at second by Justin Roark. Roark went to second on a passed ball, to third on an error and scored on a wild pitch.

Glo-Valve roared to a 7-1 lead in the bottom of the fourth, scoring five times. Brian Doss singled, Heath Cowan walked and both scored on a double by Davis. Davis went to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a wild pitch. Leo Ramirez singled. He went to second on a fielder's choice, to third on a passed ball and later scored on a single by Evans. Evans moved around the bases on a passed ball, a stolen base and a wild pitch.

Dunlap came back to score five runs in the top of the fifth on a single by Rodriguez and seven bases on balls. The tying score came in the sixth. Rodriguez reached base on an error and went to second on a passed ball. After moving up to third on a wild pitch, Rodriguez teamed with Roark to score on a perfectly-executed double steal.

Evans blooped a single to center to begin the Glo-Valve half of the sixth inning. He went to second on a passed ball and stole third. After Kevin Henderson walked and went to second on a fielder's choice, Schumacher laid a perfect bunt down the first base line to bring home Evans with the winning run.

Glo-Valve is 5-0 for the season and leads the National League. Dunlap Industrial is tied for second with a 2-2 record.

Study predicts worldwide spread of AIDS

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A new report on AIDS predicts a far grimmer future than previously forecast, warning that more than 100 million people on every corner of the Earth could be infected by the end of the decade.

"This is a global epidemic that is heading out of control," Dr. Jonathan Mann, who coordinated the Harvard University study, said Wednesday.

"The current response cannot succeed and must be changed, because it underestimates both the scope of the problem and what will be needed to deal with it. What is needed is a new global strategy."

Mann is director of Harvard's International AIDS Center and a former head of the World Health Organization's AIDS program in Geneva. The WHO's predictions on AIDS have been far less pessimistic than his new ones.

Dr. Michael Merson, head of the WHO's AIDS program, defended his organization's predictions and its response to the epidemic. He said the WHO already has a new AIDS strategy, emphasizing better AIDS care, increased treatment of other sexually transmitted diseases and more effort at curbing AIDS in women.

The Harvard study was prepared by a team of 40 experts and will be published later this year as an 800-page book called "AIDS in the World 1992." Its predictions were based on a survey of 30 epidemiologists from around the world. The team estimates that 2.6 million people around the world already have AIDS, and at least 13 million are infected with the AIDS virus. The WHO estimates 1.5 million

AIDS cases and 9 million to 11 million infections. The study predicts that by the year 2000, between 38 million and 110 million adults, and more than 10 million children, will be infected with the virus. About 24 million adults and several million children will have developed AIDS — up to 10 times as many as today.

The WHO forecasts 10 million AIDS cases and 30 million to 40 million infections by then. "Probably the absolute numbers are less important than the message of this consensus, that the picture may be more pessimistic than others have suggested," commented Dr. Ann Mary Kimball, director of the Washington state AIDS program.

The report also predicts a sizable shift in the worldwide location of AIDS cases. It says that by the year 2000, 42 percent of all AIDS infections will be in Asia, surpassing the 31 percent in sub-Saharan Africa.

The proportion of women infected is rising dramatically, from 25 percent of the total in 1990 to 40 percent this year. The report contends that a new strategy to stop the epidemic, or at least slow it down, is urgently needed.

"When we see this accelerating increase and a response lacking, we think there is potential for a lot of danger," said Thomas Netter, an editor of the study. "Health systems become wrecked; land becomes depopulated; land lies fallow; the economically productive members of society die off."

When the epidemic was first recognized in 1981, an estimated 100,000 people around the world were already infected. Now, even by the WHO's figures, at least 90 times that many have gotten the virus.

In the last five years alone, the Harvard report says, the number of AIDS infections among Africans has tripled, from 2.5 million to over 7.5 million.

The virus has spread explosively in Asia recently. In Thailand, Burma and India, more than 1 million people are believed to be infected.

The report identifies 57 countries where there is high risk of AIDS spreading. They include several countries that have escaped the worst of the epidemic so far, including Bolivia, Egypt, Indonesia and the Philippines.

It predicts that no place in the world will escape the epidemic. AIDS cases are now being reported in such remote spots as Greenland, Fiji and Samoa.

Thousands honor Khomeini at shrine

BEHESHT-E-ZAHRA, Iran (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Iranians converged today on the golden-domed shrine of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on the third anniversary of the Islamic revolution leader's death.

About 10,000 mourners pounded their heads and beat their chests in a highly-choreographed display of traditional Muslim grief before thousands of foreign guests and dignitaries.

On cue, the demonstrators shouted thunderous chants of "Death to America" and "Death to Israel," familiar refrains of the ayatollah's followers.

An estimated 120,000 people packed into the shrine, and hundreds of thousands of others were in the surrounding complex or being brought in by buses backed up for miles.

Overcome by heat and exhaustion, some mourners fainted. First-aid workers pushed through the tightly pressed mob to revive them with splashes of water.

Disabled veterans of the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war sat in wheelchairs in a cordoned section of the complex 10 miles south of Tehran.

The shrine, the size of two football fields, was covered by plush Persian carpets and lit by dozens of glittering chandeliers.

The government promoted the event this year, invoking Khomeini's memory in a bid to re-establish its own legitimacy at a time many Iranians, grappling with economic hardship, are disillusioned with the Islamic revolution.

It flew in guests from neighboring Pakistan, Afghanistan, and the former Soviet Asian republics. So large was the list of official visitors that all hotels in the capital were full, Tehran radio reported.
