U.S. can kidnap, prosecute wrongdoers abroad

Supreme Court rules in Alvarez-Machain appeal

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today the U.S. government may kidnap people from a foreign country and prosecute them over that nation's objection.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices said an extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico does not prohibit U.S. officials from prosecuting a Mexican doctor in the highly publicized torture killings of a U.S. drug agent and the agent's pilot.

The court refused to order Dr. Humberto Alvarez-Machain returned to Mexico.

He was charged with using his medical skills to keep Enrique Camarena alive while the Drug Enforcement Administration agent was tortured and interrogated in Mexico in 1985. Also killed was DEA pilot Alfredo Zavala Avelar.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said, the kidnapping may have been "shocking ... and in violation of general international law principles."

But, he said, it is still up to the Bush administration and not federal judges to decide whether Alvarez-Machain should be returned to Mexico.

The "abduction was not in violation of the extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico," Rehnquist said.

He was joined by Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia, Anthony M. Kennedy, David H. Souter and Clarence Thomas.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice John Paul Stevens, said, "I suspect most courts throughout the civilized world will be deeply disturbed by the monstrous decision the court announces today."

Joining him were Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Alvarez-Machain was abducted from his office in Guadalajara, Mexico, in 1990 and forced aboard a plane bound for El Paso, Texas, where he was arrested by U.S. officials and taken to California.

Nineteen persons, including Alvarez-Machain, were charged with taking part in the killings. The physician has remained behind bars pending the outcome of his high court case.

Alvarez-Machain, who never had been arrested before for any crime, has maintained his innocence.

The United States and Mexico entered into an extradition treaty in 1980, but the U.S. government never asked Mexico's government to extradite Alvarez-Machain.

Under the treaty, Mexico would have been obliged to prosecute the physician if it denied an extradition request.

U.S. District Judge Edward Rafeedie in Los Angeles ordered Alvarez-Machain returned to Mexico, and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year upheld the ruling. The Bush administration appealed to the high court.

Rafeedie said the DEA offered a $50,000 reward for the kidnapping of Alvarez-Machain, gave the go ahead for the abduction and afterward relocated many of the kidnapers in the United States with $6,000 a week in living expenses.

Also, he ruled that Mexico's government formally protested the kidnapping to the United States and asked for the return of Alvarez-Machain.

A high court doctrine first announced in 1886 permits the prosecution of kidnapped suspects. But the court before now did not address whether an extradition treaty can bar prosecution of someone abducted from a foreign country.

Today's ruling has a direct bearing on the government's prosecution of Rene Verdugo-Urquidez, who was convicted of murder in the Camarena-Avelar killings.

Verdugo-Urquidez is serving a sentence of 240 years plus life for his role in the murders and will not be eligible for parole until he is 96.

He was captured by Mexican police near San Felipe in 1986 and taken to the U.S. border where he was handed through a hole in the fence to U.S. agents.

Pending the outcome of the Alvarez-Machain case, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had said the conviction of Verdugo-Urquidez must be overturned if U.S. officials authorized that kidnapping.

The Supreme Court in 1990 ruled against Verdugo-Urquidez in a related case. The justices said U.S. agents do not need court warrants to conduct searches in other countries.

The Mexican home of Verdugo-Urquidez was searched in 1988 by DEA agents looking for evidence he smuggled marijuana into the United States.

The case is U.S. vs. Alvarez-Machain, 91-712.

Pampan recalls baseball's legends

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Jesse Mayes was a versatile fellow in his heyday.

He labored in the oil fields, shined shoes, owned a couple of cafes and drove a taxi cab...just to mention a few of his vocations. Mayes also worked hard at enjoying America's national pastime.

Now 85 years old, Mayes remains a baseball fan of a bygone era when there was no artificial grass, indoor stadiums or instant replay.

"I was never an athlete, but I've always loved baseball. It's always been my favorite sport," said Mayes, who has lived in Pampa for the past 63 years.

Mayes has seen most of the legends play — Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, Dizzy Dean, Lou Gehrig, Ted Williams — and he'd still be going to games if it weren't for failing eyesight.

"I'd go in a minute if I could, but I couldn't even see to get to the grandstands," said Mayes, who is blind in one eye and has to use a magnifying glass to read.

Mayes was born in Erick, Okla. and left home as a young man to seek his fortune in New York City. He drove a taxi in the Big Apple for two years and rarely missed a game at the Polo Grounds, Ebbets Field or Yankee Stadium.

"In those days it just cost a nickel to ride the subway to any of the ballparks," Mayes said. "I saw Babe Ruth play many times. Later when I moved to Pampa, I saw Warren Hacker play for the Oilers (Pampa's minor league team) and then in 1952, I went to see him pitch when he was called up to the Chicago Cubs."

Mayes has been to five World Series'. He says the 1926 fall classic between the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees, which went to a seventh game before being decided, was the best of the bunch.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, an aging alcoholic pitcher for the Cardinals, was one of the series heroes, Mayes recalled.

"Alexander was a drunkard, but he did some darn good pitching in that series," Mayes said.

The Yankees won the opener, 2-1, but Alexander started on the hill in the second game and pitched the Cardinals to a 6-2 win.

Jesse Haines threw a 4-0 shutout in the third game to give the Cardinals a two games to one lead, but Babe Ruth hit three home runs in the fourth game to pace the Yankees to a 10-5 win.

The Yankees also won the next outing, 3-2, to take a three games to two lead, but the 39-year-old Alexander came through again by pitching the Cardinals to a 10-2 win in the sixth game.

"I knew tickets were going to be hard to come by for that seventh game the next day, so I bought 10 tickets, went out to Times Square that night and scalped them," Mayes said.

Haines started on the mound for the Cardinals in the deciding game and Wente Hoyt got the call for the Yankees. With the Cardinals leading, 3-2, the Yankees loaded the bases with two outs in the seventh inning on Haines, who had worn a blister on the index finger of his pitching hand.

"It almost looked like Haines had been hit by a batted ball," Mayes said. "His finger was in bad shape."

Cards' player-manager Rogers Hornsby decided to take Haines out and go with Alexander to face Tony Lazzeri in the bases-loaded situation.

"Lazzeri was one of the best contact hitters in baseball and Alexander struck him out," Mayes said. "Neither team scored another run."

Mayes said Ty Cobb was the best all-around player he ever saw and Walter Johnson was the best pitcher.

"There's never been a better player than Cobb. He was a good hitter, good fielder and a heckuva baserunner. Johnson could throw harder than anybody and he was also the most respected player in baseball. He never argued an umpire's call," Mayes said. "The Washington Senators had a poor team for most of the 21 years Johnson pitched for them and he was the winning pitcher in most of their games."

Nowadays, Mayes must be content to watch the sport on television.

"Baseball hasn't changed too much," he said. "It was a little rougher back then. They tried to hurt each other on the basepaths and the pitchers threw at the batters more."

Baseball played a dominant role in Mayes' childhood. He was introduced to the game as a small boy when he was asked to help take care of the equipment for a sandlot team in Erick.

"Erick was only about 70 miles from Pampa and we played them several games," Mayes said. "I can remember staying overnight many times."

Mayes also had relatives living in or around Pampa, which helped influence his decision to move here.

"I had a brother 16 years older than me who was a cowboy," Mayes said. "He broke wild horses and was acquainted with a lot of people in this area."

Mayes' first job in Pampa was shining shoes for a brother-in-law, who owned a barber shop.

"I did that for five years and was making as much money as the barbers. 1929 and '30 those were good years, but after that things started going downhill. By the time '32 got here, we were in the depths of the depression," he said.

During that period of hard times, Mayes was married and had a family, but he was able to make a living with a variety of jobs.

After working in the oil fields for several years, he went into the restaurant business in 1951 and opened up The Pennant Club, which was located right across the street from the old Oiler ballpark. He closed The Pennant Club in 1963 and opened up The Rathskeller two years later. Mayes sold The Rathskeller and retired in 1982.

Terry receives two-year sentence; firm fined $15,000 in tax cases

AMARILLO — A White Deer man was sentenced to two years in prison and his corporation fined $15,000 in U.S. District Court today on charges of filing false U.S. individual income tax returns for 1986, officials of the U.S. Attorney Office said.

Ernie Bill Terry, 61, of White Deer, pleaded guilty to the charges in federal court in Amarillo. Sentencing was conducted by U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson at 9 a.m. today, said Mark Nichols, assistant U.S. attorney.

Judge Robinson ordered Terry to report to an as-yet unnamed prison on July 7 to begin serving the two-year sentence, Nichols said. He said his office made no statements during the sentencing phase.

During 1986, Terry diverted to personal use approximately $59,473 of corporate income from his corporation, B&B Solvent Inc., which was not reported on his personal income tax return, according to court documents.

B&B Solvent Inc., also pleaded guilty to filing a false U.S. corporation income tax return for 1986 as the same income was not reported on the corporate income tax return. The firm was assessed a $15,000 fine on this charge, Nichols said.

Court records show Terry used the money to take care of a personal loan at First National Bank in Pampa and to pay personal expenses at a Las Vegas casino.

The unreported income related to certain sales of condensate from B&B Solvent Inc. to H&P Trucking in Amarillo during 1986, that federal officials say Terry requested be paid for in cash or cashier's checks. The sales were not recorded on the books of B&B Solvent Inc. and were not reported for income tax purposes either by the company nor by Terry who spent the money for personal use.

Terry waived indictment and pleaded guilty to count one of an information filed by the U.S. Attorney's Office in April which charged that he reported taxable income on his 1986 income tax return of $15,721.65 knowing the correct amount was actually $75,196.

The company pleaded guilty in April to count two of the information which charged the corporation reported taxable income of $45,811.77 on its 1986 tax return when the correct amount was $105,285.37.

Historic cows

McKNIGHTSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Old Civil War generals never die: They just get put out to pasture near Gettysburg.

Ray and Mary Grimes name each Charolais breeding bull raised on their farm after a military strategist from the Union or Confederacy.

It's their way of remembering the area's Civil War heritage, while making sure the commercial herders who buy their cattle remember them.

"You don't live near Gettysburg without being a Civil War buff," said Mrs. Grimes, whose farmhouse is on the route along which Confederate troops marched to the famous battle, about six miles to the southeast, in 1863.

Owners and breeders of Charolais cattle are required to register a name and number for each head. The Grimeses began using Civil War names 10 years ago, using a street map from Gettysburg, where many National Battlefield roads are named after the 22 generals who fought there.

Residents and visitors gather recently in the stately Schneider House lobby.

Historic landmark now 65

On Saturday, June 11, 1927, the grand opening of the Schneider Hotel was held at 7 p.m.

It was the same week the Maytag company opened in town and the Wade's store sold two packages of 25 cigarettes for $1.25.

"I remember when I was the Kiwanis Club sweetheart who played the piano during the opening songs of the club," Josephine Lawfon, a longtime Pampa resident, recalled. "It was the place social events were held."

The rooms were beautifully decorated, she said, with offices in the lobby, a barber shop, and wire service.

Owners Alex and Lena Schneider came from Switzerland in 1886. In 1912 they purchased the Holland Hotel located at the corner of Atchinson and Russell streets and remodeled it.

Pampa's population grew in 1927 along with the oil discoveries in nearby areas. The community was becoming less dependent on agriculture and cattle.

The Schneider's realized Pampa would continue to grow and prosper with the oil boom and, after 15 years of planning, a new Schneider Hotel was finished in July 1927 complete with 101 rooms.

When the hotel had its grand opening more than 400 people attended the event. Every room was full - the porch, lobby and dining room. In his address, Mayor F.P. Reid commended the builders and operators. Hundreds of cars were parked about the big structure, and it was announced that regular meals - family style - would be served in the future, reported The Pampa News.

Numerous social clubs also held dances there for youth entertainment, Lawfon said. Everyone talked about how wonderful the food was in the dining room.

"I still cook cabbage like they did," Lawfon said. "I liked it so much I asked for the recipe. Everyone was real proud of the hotel," she said.

Thursday The Schneider House celebrated its 65th birthday with a Mexican fiesta luncheon for its residents and their guests.

"The anniversary fell on our monthly covered dish dinner, so we decided to celebrate with the dinner," Pat Bolton, manager, said. "There were nearly 40 people there and we discussed the anniversary."

Currently The Schneider House Apartments, 120 S. Russell, is the home of 50 senior citizens.

The citizens spend time inside the five-story structure which once was the high point of activity for the town.

"It was once called million dollar row," Bolton said. "With the hotel, city hall, and the fire department, they were all that was in town."

"Everything on the outside is the same as it was because we are registered in the National Book of Historical Places," she said.

Now all that remains are the pillars, half moon windows above the main level windows and doors, the stairway, elevator shaft and porch.

"Through those doors was a liquor store, barber shop and in the corner between the pillars there was a water fountain," Bolton said, as

"When I was 12-years-old, I worked at the counter," she said. "I think it was one of my first jobs and I thought I was really important."

On the other side of the building there were more apartments lining the hallway of what used to be the huge dining room.

Portraits of the original owners and some of the workers are displayed in the lobby of the apartment building to remind the residents and visitors of the history of the beautiful structure.

"We are just thrilled to work in this building," Bolton said.

Search warrant nets $36,000 marijuana bust

BORGER - Panhandle Regional Narcotics Traffic Task Force members, including Pampa officers, netted marijuana worth $36,000 in a Saturday night raid on a Borger residence.

"Approximately 10 pounds of marijuana, several firearms and a bullet-proof vest was seized," Borger Chief of Police Mike Smith, said today.

Officers executed a search warrant at 1130 Elmore at approximately 11 p.m. Saturday. In the search, officers found marijuana with an estimated street value of $36,000 and arrested two persons at the residence, said Pampa Task Force officers, who asked that their names not be used.

"The search warrant was a result of investigation by the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Traffic Task Force," Smith said.

Edwardo Riquez, 32, and Dana Lynn Riquez, 31, both of 1130 Elmore, Borger, were arrested, police said.

"Both were charged with aggravated possession of marijuana and no tax stamp," said Smith.

Bond was set for Edward at $100,000 by Judge Leon Dewese and $500,000 on no tax stamp, he said, and Dana's bond was set at $25,000 on aggravated possession of marijuana and $5,000 on no tax stamp.

"We believe Edwardo is currently on parole from the federal prison system in relation to drugs," Smith added. - Angela Leggett

Baseball was so much a part of Mayes' life that he named one of his sons after big leaguer Carl Mayes, a star pitcher of the early 1900s.

"Carl was quite a pitcher with an unusual style. He threw underhanded and hard. He killed a batter (Ray Chapman) when he hit him in the head at the Polo Grounds in 1920," Mayes said.

Mayes also developed a liking for football, especially since his son, Carl, nicknamed "Red" excelled on the gridiron for the Harvesters and the University of Oklahoma.

"Red" was in the same OU backfield with Heisman Trophy winner Billy Vessels and scored the only touchdown when Texas beat Oklahoma, 9-7, in 1951. He saw limited playing time after sustaining a broken finger against Arkansas.

"What helped Carl was his speed. He was awfully fast," said the elder Mayes. "I had a lot of pleasant moments watching him play in high school."

Red played professionally in the National Football League with the Los Angeles Rams and finished up his career in the Canadian Football League. He's now a retired salesman and lives near Nacodoches.

Mayes is knowledgeable about a number of non-sports subjects, but his thoughts never stray far from his favorite...baseball.

"Pie Traynor of the Pirates was the best third baseman who ever lived. He was a great big guy, but he could sure handle himself around third. Freddie Lindstrom of the Giants was only 18 years old when he played in his first World Series in 1924. Rogers Hornsby, who came from Winters, Texas, was a great hitter. There's no way you could leave him off any all-star team. He was also a good manager," Mayes said.

Mayes said the 1958 World Series won by the Milwaukee Braves was the most surprising series of all.

"The Yankees were the favorites and I sure never expected the Braves to beat them, but they did," he said. "Milwaukee won the seventh game at Yankee Stadium," he recalled.

Mayes' eyesight may be dim, but his baseball memories are sharp as ever.

Love a parade

More women now serious candidates for state positions

AUSTIN (AP) — Political observers say one thing is certain: Women no longer are considered longshot candidates with no hope of winning office in Texas.

"I think the difference is women candidates are being taken seriously. We've always had some who were willing to run," said Melissa Millicam, president of the Texas Women's Political Caucus.

Take the state's highest office holder for example, Gov. Ann Richards.

Female mayors in major Texas cities and countless female officeholders are credited with helping Richards become governor and bolster the chances of other female candidates, political observers say.

"It started when everyone woke up to the fact that women were mayors of seven major cities," said Florence Shapiro, a former Plano mayor and Republican who is challenging state Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall.

Richards said the help runs even deeper.

"I wouldn't be governor today," Richards said, "if it were not for all the elected officials who have been doing such an incredible job on the school boards and on the commissioner courts and city councils."

"Everybody looks at them and says, 'Well, hey, they've done a pretty good job there. Maybe we ought to promote this one on up,'" said Richards, a former Travis County commissioner.

Now four women are trying to break into the male-dominated Texas Congressional delegation. And three women are vying for statewide office.

Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero of Austin is seeking election to that office, to which Richards appointed her two years ago.

If she wins, Ms. Guerrero, who is Hispanic, would become the first woman and first member of an ethnic minority elected to that position since the agency was created more than a century ago.

Six women are competing for the Texas Senate, which has three women among its 31 members.

Thirty-four women are running for the Texas House of Representatives, which has only 18 women among its 150 members. Twenty of those candidates survived contested primaries this spring.

State District Judge Rose Spector of San Antonio, a Democratic candidate for the Texas Supreme Court, and 5th Court of Appeals Justice Sue Lagarde of Dallas, a Republican candidate for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, are hoping to break the all-male grip on those two courts.

There's even a mother-daughter team on the ballot in Angelina County. State Board of Education member Mary Perkins of Lufkin is seeking re-election.

Her daughter Holly Perkins-Meyers won a three-person race in the Democratic primary for a county court-at-law judgeship and faces no opposition in November.

Advocates see little assistance in changes to child-protection laws

DALLAS (AP) — Changes in the state's child protection system may not be tough enough to prevent the crimes that led to the deaths of 97 Texas children last year, advocates say.

An overhaul of all social service and health agencies effective Sept. 1 will turn child abuse investigations over to a new Department of Protective and Regulatory Services. The agency will have authority to remove from their homes children identified as being at risk.

But some worry the new law isn't sufficient.

"Will it make a difference? I am afraid it is window dressing, that it just transfers responsibilities and nothing will change," said Randy Burton, a Houston lawyer who has warred with Children's Protective Services since the mid-1980s.

CPS currently has to prove that the child is in imminent danger, or involved in an immediate crisis, to justify removal.

Ann Heiligenstein, state director of CPS, said the agency investigated 90,601 reports of abused or neglected children in 1991 and confirmed 34,759 cases.

Unconfirmed doesn't necessarily mean the reports weren't true. But they could not be proved, or the people named could not be found.

This year's tally includes 2-year-old Donny Martin of Garland, who died May 16 from "blunt force trauma" to his stomach, an autopsy showed.

For months, the child's father and day-care workers had reported to CPS that Donny might be a victim of child abuse. Donald Martin says he was told his son was not at risk.

The child's common-law father, Robert Morris Rose Jr., remains jailed on a first-degree felony charge of injury to a child.

"They're the only state agency I know of that is allowed to — literally — bury its mistakes," Burton said.

Fred Seale, director of the state agency's Region 5, which includes Dallas and Tarrant counties, said caseworkers live daily with the possibility that a mistake in judgment could be fatal.

He said he shares some frustrations voiced by critics.

Burton, for instance, says child abuse is treated as a social ill, not as a crime. Burton contends that trained criminal investigators, not state social workers, should investigate complaints of abuse.

He also pointed to what he sees as a conflict between the agency's central mission — "to preserve the family unit" — and its responsibility to remove endangered children from harm.

The apparent conflict in goals is supposed to be eliminated when the September changes kick in, state Children's Protective Services officials said.

"We have to find a better way to provide treatment of the kids in our care. What we have now isn't working," Seale said. "If we don't, tomorrow's kids are going to be more disturbed than what we have today."

Youth At Risk's claims questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — A youth program for troubled teenagers has misled the public with false endorsements and unsubstantiated success claims, a newspaper has reported.

The Austin American-Statesman said in Sunday editions that claims made by Youth At Risk Austin are distorted or can't be independently verified.

San Francisco-based Breakthrough Foundation/Youth At Risk promises "dramatic results" with teen-agers who have histories of drug dependency, criminal histories and poor school performance. The group has 34 chapters across the nation.

In Texas, chapters have been organized in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Abilene and Lubbock.

"Trust me. Trust me," says Sarah Ready Bush, executive director of Youth At Risk Austin. "Washington checked us out," she says, pointing out that the Breakthrough Youth At Risk program was chosen as one of President Bush's Points of Light in 1989.

But research by the Austin American-Statesman raised several questions:

—Brochures claim dramatic results such as "Felony Crime: reduced by 50 percent" among participants. These are not substantiated.

—Working relationships with agencies and non-profit groups in Austin, as claimed, are exaggerated.

—Claims of corporate support from such entities as IBM-Austin, Lexus of Austin and the H.E.B. Foundation are false.

Some experts criticize the program's techniques as dangerous, the newspaper reported.

Suspicion has grown so much that state Rep. Glen Maxey, D-Austin, and Austin Mayor Bruce Todd have withdrawn or declined their support in recent weeks. The Austin Independent School District also has distanced itself.

"They have things to hide, definitely," says Betty Phillips, a leading child and mental health advocate and chairwoman-elect of the Travis County Child Welfare Board.

Ms. Phillips analyzed four independent evaluations of Youth At Risk programs in other cities.

"Not one of the 'dramatic results' listed in the group's literature was validated according to accepted standards for research," she said.

Child advocates and national cult experts are particularly concerned about the program's alleged ties to controversial "est" guru Werner Erhard, who drew a large following in the 1970s and 1980s with his charismatic messianic notions about transforming the world.

Erhard left the country two years ago amid allegations of molesting family members and questions about unpaid tax bills.

Supporters move to halt execution of Karla Faye Tucker

HOUSTON (AP) — Supporters trying to save Karla Faye Tucker from an execution date only days away say they feel her death row conversion is authentic, and she does not deserve to die for her 1983 role in two grisly pickax murders.

The 32-year-old Houston woman is scheduled to die by lethal injection on June 30. She would be the second woman executed in the United States since capital punishment was restored in 1976. Her attorney, George Secrest, is seeking a stay and a new trial.

"Everybody sees Jesus at the jail house," Sgt. M.B. Rankin told the Houston Chronicle in Sunday's editions. "But this woman isn't just talking. She is genuine. She shouldn't die."

Rankin is a relief officer who was stationed on the Harris County Jail's 12th floor during Ms. Tucker's recent stay. Before she was transported back to death row on June 4, Ms. Tucker regularly led a Bible study group of female inmates at the jail.

The woman who dropped out of junior high school because she failed seventh grade three years in a row got her GED in prison, then 30 hours of college credit through correspondence courses.

She taught herself sign language, "So I could take these two hands that used to hurt and let them help," she says.

"I would expect that many people on death row are doing the same things that Ms. Tucker has done, but for some reason which I don't quite understand, Karla Faye Tucker is getting all this support, and it just doesn't seem fair," Joe Magliolo, a former Harris County district attorney who won Ms. Tucker's conviction in 1984 and now is an assistant U.S. attorney, said Sunday.

"Is it because she's a woman? Is it because she's young?" he asked. "I don't know."

"She took and pickaxed two people to death," Magliolo said. "I think since the jury said — 12 individual citizens said — she deserved to die for what she did, then that's the verdict."

Ms. Tucker says she will be disappointed if she has to die: She's been told she won't be able to donate her organs for transplants because the serum used to kill her will damage or destroy them.

"I had really hoped to be able to give my body to help others," she said. "That way, I could give life back for the life I took."

Her supporters also will be disappointed, but for different reasons. Despite her crime, they say she shouldn't die.

Those advocates include former prosecutors, police officers, and two relatives of the victims.

Many say their plan to write letters to beg for her life, claiming that the Karla Faye Tucker on death row isn't the same person as the prostitute and drug abuser who once bragged to friends that she became sexually aroused each time she plunged the pickax into her victim.

Ms. Tucker was convicted in 1984 of the June 13, 1983 murder of Jerry Lynn Dean, 26, of Houston. She also had been charged with capital murder in the slaying of Dean's girlfriend, Deborah Ruth

Tilton's attorneys file contempt motion against Morales

DALLAS (AP) — A lawyer for Robert Tilton says a contempt motion has been filed against Attorney General Dan Morales to prevent the state from reopening an investigation into the televangelist's church.

Tilton's attorney, J.C. Joyce of Tulsa, said a contempt citation was filed against Morales Thursday in a federal court, which earlier issued a permanent injunction against the attorney general. Tilton, appearing on his weekly televised show Sunday, also lambasted Morales for comments the state official made last week concerning the television preacher.

"It amazes me that a public official makes a derogatory statement to people that would elect him into office," Tilton told his congregation Sunday. He told followers he was "humiliated" by Morales' harsh remarks.

Morales had made the comments Friday after U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks harshly criticized him for ignoring an agreement made with Tilton's lawyers not to release a videotape to the news media.

But in a 20-minute segment of his sermon, Tilton delivered a stinging attack on Morales. "He has no legal right to criminally or civilly investigate us, and we have by the way filed a suit against him for contempt of court. It has already been filed. We're not going to let him get away with his mouth," Tilton told a cheering congregation.

Morales was appealing Sparks' order, which prevents his office from investigating the televangelist under state deceptive activities laws.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Here's a bargain buy for Congress

With the increasing integration of world markets, countries must streamline regulations on investment. The most efficient capital markets will attract the most investment, leading to economic growth. Whereas markets suffering from inefficient, unwieldy regulations will be weighed down, leading to economic decline. Major centers of international investment include not only New York, but Tokyo, London, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, and Hong Kong.

Recently the Securities and Exchange Commission proposed changes that in some ways would streamline investment in mutual funds, in other ways hinder investment. Current rules largely date back to 1940 and reflect a time before instant worldwide telecommunications, microcomputers, and faxes. Moreover, during the 1940s the United States bestrode the world as an economic colossus. Today we face stiff competition everywhere.

Happily, the SEC proposed partial deregulation to free investor choice of mutual funds and to ease access to foreign funds. According to news reports, the proposal "would free the growing industry to create novel kinds of funds, undertake broader and more creative advertising, and develop products to attract more participation by corporate pension funds, money-management companies, and other similar institutions."

Such reforms would give more meaning to the "mutual" in mutual funds. The utility of mutual funds is that they give an investor the opportunity to find a fund that matches the investor's own inclinations, but which performs all the hard work: scouting companies, testing products, reading reports, checking company histories, and so on. Expanding the types of funds, as the SEC proposes, would stiffen competition and so benefit investors.

Of course, any investment, in stocks or even in the safest mutual fund, involves speculation. That's why government busybodies get a hearing: they promise to make investment "safer." However, the essence of any market is opportunity, not security. Some opportunities fall flat; companies and investors go broke. The more freedom people have to pounce on good opportunities, the better off we all are.

Unfortunately, the SEC proposal includes some foolish ideas. According to news service reports, "It calls for legislation that would force funds to have a majority of independent directors on their boards and give the directors more power." Why? There's a simple way to find out if the fund is being directed competently: The fund increases in value. The market, not government, will punish funds run badly. And the market, not government, will determine which type of directorship is most efficient and profitable.

Congress should buy the SEC's bullish, market-freeing proposals, while shoring the bearish, market-restricting proposals.

"Where did we go wrong?"

Cop-out

At his press conference on June 4, George Bush did his best to whip up support for a balanced budget amendment. He made a good effort in a bad cause. This amendment won't fly. I venture that confident prediction before the House votes this week on a couple of versions of this pretty pretense.

The House may go along. After all, the simplistic proposition has popular appeal. A vote in favor of an amendment should placate the angry voters. Besides, senators who are not up for election may be trusted to kill it.

Two broad arguments support a motion to lay the resolution aside. The pending proposals are wrong on their merits. They are wrong in principle also.

Let the president have his say: Our political system has failed to meet its fiscal responsibilities. The president has tried to get Congress to restrain federal spending. He has tried diplomacy. He has tried compromise and confrontation.

None of this has worked. He is more convinced than ever that a balanced budget amendment "is the only way to force the federal government, both the Congress and the executive branch, to live within its means." The amendment is common sense, pure and simple. Forty-four states operate under mandatory balanced budgets. The federal government, said Bush, must now do the same.

In advancing that last contention, the president hopped nimbly over an important fact. The federal government and the state governments have a fundamental difference: Congress can coin money and the state legislatures can't. The president's argument fails.

Two versions of a balanced budget amendment have commanded significant support. We pundits have written a good deal about the resolution sponsored in the House by Charles Stenholm, D-Texas. On May 28, Majority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., offered an alternative proposal. Both resolutions suffer the same flaw at the threshold: They would draw a president into the budget-making process in a radically new way.

Under the present Constitution, a president has no substantive power over the preparation of a federal budget. The Constitution says only that a president "shall recommend to the Congress their consideration of such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient." He is not required to submit a budget at all.

The founding fathers put control of the purse squarely in the hands of the Congress. Yes, a president may shape the course of legislation by his power of veto, but that is a power to be exercised on down the line. The basic power to tax and spend, to create public debt, and to provide for the common defense and the general welfare is initially a congressional power.

Both Stenholm and Gephardt would alter this structure with consequences we cannot easily foresee. Stenholm says the president and Congress "shall agree" on a budget in which estimated outlays do not exceed estimated revenues. Gephardt lays the whole responsibility on the White House: Prior to each fiscal year, the president "shall propose" such a budget.

Both proposals provide procedures by which the whole purpose could be nullified. Gephardt has messed up his resolution by elaborate exceptions for Social Security. Neither resolution provides any effective mechanism of enforcement. Ultimately the Supreme Court might find itself charged with the unwanted responsibility of imposing taxes and cutting expenditures on its own. This way lies chaos.

Wholly apart from the language of these ill-advised resolutions is a larger objection. Exactly as Bush suggested, a balanced budget amendment represents a confession of failure. The sponsors are conceding that Congress is unable to restrain its appetite. No amount of leadership, no sense of statesmanship, no appeals to principle or to conscience will suffice. "Be it resolved," the Congress is saying, "that we cannot be trusted to spend the people's money responsibly."

This of course is the bitter truth. The 101st Congress is demonstrably feckless. The recent skirmish over rescissions demonstrated with appalling clarity the inability of both Congress and the president to curb needless spending.

We must not give up. The answer to irresponsible deficits lies in our electing responsible people. That responsibility cannot be avoided by a paper manifesto, and that's all these resolutions amount to. This constitutional amendment is a constitutional cop-out.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, June 15, the 167th day of 1992. There are 199 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 15, 1215, King John signed the Magna Carta at Runnymede, England, granting his barons more liberty.

On this date:

In 1775, the Second Continental Congress voted unanimously to appoint George Washington head of the Continental Army.

In 1844, Charles Goodyear received a patent for his process to strengthen rubber. (Even so, Goodyear did not benefit from the invention, and died in poverty in 1860.)

In 1846, the United States and Britain signed a treaty settling the boundary between Canada and the U.S. in the Pacific Northwest.

In 1849, James Polk, the eleventh president of the United States, died in Nashville, Tenn.

'Poverty pimps and civil rights hustlers'

In his recent speech in Phoenix, President Bush used a very scary analogy. He referred to the Los Angeles riots as "the deadliest domestic disturbance since the Civil War."

That should wake us up! If only we could learn something from that orgy of killing, looting, and burning, it would not be a total waste. Some scholars are trying.

John Kasarda of the Kenan Institute has been seeking to understand, for example, why Asians in America prosper where blacks fail.

Asian immigrants, even those less educated than many blacks, have prospered in many inner-city areas where blacks have slipped entirely off the socioeconomic ladder.

He cites two contributing factors, both related. Our cities, which used to be manufacturing centers with lots of industrial jobs, have now become mostly centers for information processing, creating jobs requiring more education and greater skills.

This left unskilled black workers out of work, restless, rebellious.

Asian immigrants, on the other hand, have a tradition of self-employment. With little or no help from government, they turn to their fellow immigrants for help in raising money to start businesses, from video stores to groceries, from laundries to restaurants.

Self-employment, says Kasarda, allows them to circumvent discrimination and generate their own employment.

Black Prof. Walter Williams of George Mason University says much of the hopelessness in black communities has been generated by "professional misleaders" telling them how unfortunate they are.

And by five generations during which the rest of us perpetuated dependency with handouts.

For today's young, living off "government money" is as ingrained as the work ethic for earlier generations.

So, says Williams, we have some organizations, in the name of "civil rights," inciting rioting, focusing jealous resentment on Asian merchants — beating them, killing them and torching the businesses they have struggled to build.

Williams defines the "misleaders" as "poverty pimps and civil rights hustlers."

If self-employment prospers Asians, it would seem logical for blacks to emulate them, yet self-employment among blacks is the lowest of any minority group.

In preponderantly black Washington, D.C., only 3 percent of blacks are self-employed. In St. Louis, 2 percent.

This suggests that money presently spent on welfare programs to perpetuate "a plantation economy" might better be directed into programs that encourage entrepreneurship.

As Malcolm X liked to say, "Only a revolution in mentality will change anything."

A 'tru' man of our time

Does this sound familiar? As the presidential campaign opens, it becomes apparent that it will not be a two-party contest. Many Americans want to nominate a man whose positions they do not know. The incumbent president is trashed by the press, his coalition is flying apart, and his approval ratings are down below 40 percent.

We're talking about 1948, not 1992, but there are lessons that apply. The man with no positions is not Ross Perot, but Dwight Eisenhower. The president is not George Bush, but Harry Truman. And the story is vividly told in David McCullough's wonderful new epic biography, "Truman" (Simon & Schuster, $30).

Old Harry is in the pits as the election year begins. But he understands America. He knows Americans want to like their president, and that they like plain people, not politicians, and certainly not congressmen. He knows that the president can control some events, to his benefit. He knows that most Americans admire common-man Democrats, not liberal Democrats. And he knows that Americans like "outsiders" — even if he's the president whose party has controlled the White House for 16 years!

So Harry Truman gets in his choo-choo-train for long "whistle-stop" trips, bashing the Republican Congress, and everywhere he goes, the crowd yells "Give 'em hell, Harry."

Which he does. "You are the government," he says. "The government belongs to you and me as private citizens.... This is a crusade of the people against the special interests..." And: "You are the government, I am only your hired servant..."

Ben Wattenberg

(And you thought Ross Perot made that stuff up all by himself.)

The crusading president takes tough actions. He desegregates the armed forces and eliminates discrimination in the civil service. A third-party candidate, segregationist Strom Thurmond, challenges him. (Truman will lose some small Southern states because of his stand — and will win some non-small, non-Southern states, like Ohio, Illinois and perhaps California — by the margin of the heavily pro-Truman Negro vote.)

Pundit Arthur Krock writes: "The president's influence is weaker than any president's has been in modern history." But Truman decides to stand up to the Soviet blockade of Berlin. The resulting Berlin airlift sends a muscular signal that America is in the global arena to stay and to play. It's good policy and good politics, even though it disturbs the soft-on-the-Soviets former vice president, Henry Wallace, who mounts a presidential campaign, fervently backed by trendy Lefties.

Truman blasts out his homespun liberal credo: "We must fight isolationists and reactionaries, the profiteers and the privileged class.... Our primary concern is for the little fellow...." He denounces Wall Street "bloodsuckers" and the "Republican gluttons of privilege ... cold men ... cunning men ... (who) want a return of the Wall Street economic dictatorship." And always, Truman reminds the voters of how far they've come economically, after enduring hard times. His Republican opponent, Tom Dewey, is so confident of victory that he boldly comes out for "unity."

There are lessons to be learned. George Bush should blast out his own credo, if he can figure out what it is. Say something bracing, Mr. President, even that American never had it so good. Bill Clinton can trot out a little more class warfare if he can keep it away from gitchy-goo leftism. Ross Perot should learn that isolationism is a big-time loser. And the scribbling class might remember that even weak presidents have power.

How does it end? In early September of 1948, 50 pundits are surveyed. By 50-0, they predict Dewey will win. Truman says to an aide: "I know every one of these 50 fellows. There isn't one of them has enough sense to pound sand in a rat hole."

The polls tighten. Could this fourman race end up being decided in the House of Representatives. No. The dominoes fall in rows, as they usually do. Truman, the common-sense Democrat, the outsider, the incumbent (a little bit of Bush, Clinton, and Perot) wins the popular vote 50 percent to 45 percent. The electoral vote goes 303-189 for Truman.

And wise-guy actress Tallulah Bankhead wires Truman: "The people have put you in your place."

Pet peeves form vexing collection

DEAR READERS: A while back, I had a column on the misuse of words and other irritants, and named a few. I then asked readers to send in their pet peeves concerning common mistakes in grammar and pronunciation. How's this for a collection?

The "lie" and "lay" confusion: To "lay" means to set or put — to "lie" means to recline. Remember, chickens lay eggs. People lie down.

The use of "all are not" when the person means "not all are." Example: Saying, "All women are not beautiful," when one means, "Not all women are beautiful."

We frequently hear "between you and I." Wrong! It's "between you and me." Another irritant is "try and" instead of "try to." For example, one may try to win — then lose. But how can one try and win — and then lose?

One hears supposedly educated people say "between she and I" instead of the correct "between her and me."

And how about the word "irregardless"? Just plain "regardless" will do, but regardless of how "irregardless" grates on one's nerves, it has nosed its way into the dictionary. (It means "regardless.")

Talk about overusing a word, I nominate "basically." People who start every other sentence with the word "basically" usually have limited vocabularies.

My pet peeve — double negatives: "I don't know nothing" and "We don't go nowhere" are the worst offenders.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Some people think the plural of "you" is "youse." It's not. "You" is both singular and plural.

The word "forte" (meaning strong point) is pronounced "fort" — not "for-tay!"

Also, people use the word "snuck" instead of "sneaked." Although "snuck" somehow sneaked into the dictionary, it's not used by people who use proper English.

Ask someone to define "hoi polloi," and it's a good bet that he will say "high-tone or upper class." Actually, it means "the masses" — or the general population.

"Nuclear" is pronounced "nuke-lee-er" — not "nuke-you-ler!"

And how about "he's got," "she's got" and "they've got"? The correct word is "has." ("He has," "she has" ... "got" has got to go!)

The month of February has two "R's" in it — but we keep hearing "Feb-yoo-ary."

We frequently hear that a man has "prostrate" trouble, when actually he has "pros-tate" trouble.

Another error — using the word "myself" instead of "me." Example: "If you have any questions, see Bobby or myself after the meeting." "See Bobby or me" is correct.

The "infer" and "imply" mix-up: The writer "implies"; the reader "infers." (It's like pitching and catching.)

Please do not say "o" instead of "zero." Or use the word "that" when "who" is correct. ("That" refers to inanimate objects — "who" to people.)

Now, lend me your ear: Don't use "loan" as a verb, as in, "Loan me a twenty." It should be, "Lend me a twenty." "Loan" is a noun; "lend" is a verb.

Finally, the misuse of the word "ask." Some say "ax" instead of "ask." I would much rather be "asked" than "axed." Wouldn't you?

This one's for everybody, from teens to seniors! Blue Calhoun by Reynolds Price

It was an early scorcher that April day in 1956. Blue Calhoun, then thirty-five, was about to meet his fate. Her name was Luna and she was sixteen. From that day on, through the next thirty years, their love was to bring about consequences of the most shattering — yet ultimately healing — kind for everyone they knew.

In Blue Calhoun, Price has created a truly unforgettable character.

Before I Wake by Steven Spruill

Dr. Amy St. Clair awakes from a terrifying dream. She senses a presence nearby. Is the recent turmoil in her life causing her to have the same nightmare over and over? Or was someone there, in her bedroom, drugging her, forcing her to recall what she cannot, must not, remember?

Body of Truth by David Lindsey

Murder and Third-World intrigue haunt this new novel by the author of Mercy. Lena Muller has disappeared in Guatemala without a trace, and the young woman's wealthy father has hired private detective Jim Fossler to find her. Six months later, Fossler calls his friend, Houston homicide detective Stuart Haydon, with an urgent request for help in the case. Haydon immediately boards a plane for Guatemala, and when he arrives, he uncovers a surreal world of American expatriots, corrupt military officials, and Guatemalan guerrillas.

French Silk by Sandra Brown

French Silk is a riveting novel of romantic suspense. The ire of Jackson Wilde, a nationally known televangelist, is raised by the provocative photos found in the pages of French Silk, a lingerie catalog produced by Claire Laurent. Wilde's murder short circuits this wrath; it also makes Claire the number one suspect in the case. Enter handsome assistant district attorney Cassidy, who attempts to put a restraining order on his feelings for Claire as he investigates the killing.

The End of the Pier by Martha Grimes

Deputy sheriff Sam DeGheyn suspects that the man who was convicted for the grisly rape-murders of two women is innocent, and he is conducting a quiet investigation to prove his theory. The murders, he believes, are connected to another killing that was blamed suspiciously on a vagrant. While Sam searches for the truth, the town's single women, including Sam's own lover, Maud Chadwick, are in mortal danger. A Return to Love by Marianne Williamson

The author of A Course in Miracles and a lecturer on the power of "pure love" continues her program of spiritual psychotherapy. A Return to Love explains how individuals can channel the God within them to specific targets of psychic pain. Whether the pain is caused by relationships, career, or health, Williamson explains how to whip up a miracle to phase it out. The inspirational guide also demonstrates how to use the potent force of love to achieve inner peace and to make the choices that will improve the world for future generations.

The Left-hander Syndrome by Stanley Coren

Recently, scientists have been taking a new and closer look at left-handedness and the broader phenomenon of sidedness, including left or right foot, eye, and ear preferences. Different in many ways from their right-handed counterparts, left-handers suffer more from a variety of physical and psychological problems, and even die earlier. Now, the leading authority on sidedness offers the first accessible summary of these startling new discoveries and their meaning for left-handers.

June declared breastfeeding awareness month

Gov. Ann Richards declared June to be breastfeeding awareness month for the state of Texas, according to information from the Texas Department of Health.

Citing "physical and emotional benefits of breastfeeding for both infant and mother" and research showing "breastmilk is the best milk for babies," Richards said breastfeeding promotion is one goal of the statewide Healthy Texans Year 2000 project. The U.S. surgeon general has made breastfeeding a national health priority for all mothers.

The Texas Department of Health promotes breastfeeding and officially recognizes it as the best form of nourishment for infants.

Dr. David Smith, Texas commission of Health said, "Breastfeeding is now the norm in Texas for high-income mothers. But although breast milk is less expensive, healthier and easier to digest than baby formula, most low-income mothers in Texas still choose to bottle-feed their children."

The TDH special supplemental food program for women, infants and children (WIC) continues a breastfeeding promotion campaign, which it launched in October 1990.

The WIC clinic for Gray County, located at TDH offices in the Hughes Building, 408 W. Kingsmill, encourages breastfeeding for its participants. It also offers food packages and educational classes for pregnant and postpartum women and children under age five.

Bulls rally past Trail Blazers

It's NBA title No. 2 for Chicago

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — It was better. Somehow, even though they didn't crush their opponents, even though they won ugly more often than not, even though they bickered with each other along the way, NBA Title No. 2 was better for Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls.

Maybe, just maybe, it was better because they had all that adversity to overcome.

With almost every player contributing, the Bulls staged the greatest fourth-quarter rally in Finals history Sunday, beating the Portland Trail Blazers 97-93 and winning the series four games to two.

"I feel very joyous," said Jordan, who smiled broadly as he glistened with sweat and champagne but didn't caress the trophy as he did in 1991.

"It was an unbelievable season. We went through a long test of adversity and trials, me as an individual and us as a team. It might not have all been pretty, but today we stand tall.

"Last year, it was more for the city and the organization and the fans. This year, it's a little more selfish. This one is for my teammates and me."

Jordan scored 33 points, giving him 215 in the series, and earned his second successive playoff MVP award. But he wasn't even in the game when the Bulls started to rally from the 79-64 deficit they faced after three quarters.

Once dubbed "Michael and the Jordanaries," the Bulls showed their leader isn't the only Chicago player with extraordinary talent and tenacity — one of the many reasons this title was sweeter to most of them.

"It's a lot more gratifying," said Scottie Pippen, the much-maligned second-best player on the Bulls and the only starter on the floor when they began the fourth period with a 14-2 run. "I know I personally got a lot of criticism, but we were able to stay together. Tonight was very sweet. We battled from behind against a very good club."

Pippen finished with 26 points and little-used center Stacey King led the key surge with five points.

"This ring means a lot more than the first," King said. "Down 15 points in a championship game, you're playing teams too good to think you can come back. It meant a lot to me, personally, to perform like this."

Jordan re-entered with 8:36 to play and the Bulls down 81-78. He scored 12 points in the last 6:01 to reaffirm his status as "the best player on the planet," according to Portland's Danny Ainge.

"Michael's just too good. The Bulls made the big plays," Ainge said. "I'm satisfied that we gave a good effort. They outplayed us. The best team won."

Clyde Drexler and Jerome Kersey led Portland with 24 points each. Drexler, second to Jordan in regular-season MVP voting, finished a distant second in his personal duel with his future Olympic teammate.

Regularly matched man-to-man with Jordan, Drexler averaged 24.8 points on 41 percent shooting. Jordan shot 53 percent and scored 35.8 points, the best average ever for a winning player in the Finals; he became the first to receive regular-season and postseason MVP honors in consecutive years.

Portland, a favorite to win the title the last three seasons, lost in the Finals for the second time. Last year, they were upset in the semifinals by the Los Angeles Lakers, who were routed in a five-game series by the Bulls.

"Chicago's a very fine team. They have a certain arrogance and I see why," Buck Williams said. "They got the baskets when they needed them. They won when they needed to, like the third and fifth games at our place."

"There's only one winner. We sent a lot of teams home, the Lakers and Phoenix and Utah. Today, we got sent home. In life, there has to be a second-place team."

Jordan, Pippen and the bench made sure that Chicago remained second to none. The Bulls rallied to top San Francisco's 12-point, fourth-quarter comeback against Philadelphia on April 23, 1967.

Chicago's victory was clinched when Kersey missed a 3-point shot with 4.7 seconds left. John Paxson, the smallest player on the court, scrambled for the rebound, dribbled out the remaining few seconds and set off a jubilant celebration that continued for almost a half-hour.

Players were brought back onto the court as fans rattled the rafters at old Chicago Stadium with songs and cheers. Jordan stood atop the scorers table with two fingers raised — one for each title.

Hours later, car horns blared on Rush Street and people danced outside Halsted Street's blues clubs. There was some violence and looting and Jordan urged fans to enjoy themselves, "but let's not tear up the city. It's our city."

Fans were celebrating the first consecutive titles by a Chicago team since the Bears won NFL titles in 1940 and 1941. The Bulls, who won last year's championship in Los Angeles, became the first Chicago club to win a title at home since the '63 Bears.

Bonds injured in Pirates' win over Mets

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates have managed nicely without Bobby Bonds. Now they might have to play without Barry Bonds for a while.

Bonds hurt his right side while hitting in the ninth inning, twisted to the ground in pain and immediately left Sunday's game at New York.

The injury came moments after Pittsburgh had taken the lead in a game it eventually won 5-4 over the Mets, and was the only thing the Pirates were talking about in the clubhouse.

"You see your pennant hopes going right down when you see him go down," said Andy Van Slyke, whose sacrifice fly off John Franco in the ninth inning broke a 4-all tie. "If we lose him, I'd imagine our pennant hopes would vanish."

With Bonds, the Pirates' pennant hopes look pretty good.

The Pirates came into New York in first place in the NL East, four games ahead of both New York and St. Louis. Pittsburgh returns home to begin a 10-game homestand tonight with a five-game lead over the Cardinals.

Officially, the Pirates said Bonds had a muscle strain and would be day-to-day. But the league's home run leader and former MVP was unable to put on his shoes and socks after the game, needing teammate Steve Buechele to perform the tasks, and leaned heavily on strength coach Warren Sipp's shoulder as he slowly walked out the back door of the locker room.

"It's like someone took a knife and cut up into you," Bonds told Buechele.

"He felt a twinge in batting practice, but said he was OK," trainer Kent Biggerstaff said. "He felt a very sharp pain when the injury occurred and was unable to catch his breath. He went into spasms. We'll know more later about how long he'll be out."

Elsewhere in the NL it was Atlanta 4, San Diego 2; Chicago 5, Montreal 1; Houston 15, San Francisco 7; St. Louis 5, Philadelphia 2; and Cincinnati 5, Los Angeles 1.

NL roundup

Pittsburgh took advantage of second baseman Willie Randolph's error in the ninth for its third consecutive one-run decision over New York. The Pirates won for the 10th time in 12 games, while the Mets have lost four in a row and 12 of 16 to fall seven out.

"I haven't seen things as bad as this. I'm numb in disbelief," Mets starter Dwight Gooden said. "Things are happening that we didn't expect."

Denny Neagle (3-4) got two outs in the eighth and Stan Belinda retired two batters for his ninth save. Jeff Innis fell to 4-3.

Braves 4, Padres 2

At Atlanta Stadium, Charlie Leibrandt (6-2) pitched 8 2-3 strong innings and Ron Gant and Jeff Blauser homered as the Braves beat San Diego for their fourth straight victory and 13th in 15 games.

Gant hit his ninth homer in the second inning off Bruce Hurst (6-5), who had won three in a row and five of six decisions.

Cubs 5, Expos 1

At Wrigley Field, Danny Jackson (2-7) gave up one run in seven innings for only his third victory in 28 starts for Chicago. The Cubs won their season-high fourth straight game.

Derrick May had a two-run double in a four-run third off Ken Hill (5-4), and Mark Grace, returning to the lineup after missing three games with a sore toe, had a single and a double.

Astros 15, Giants 7

At the Astrodome, Pete Incaviglia hit two homers and drove in a career-high seven runs as Houston routed San Francisco. It was the eighth time Incaviglia has hit two homers in a game, and his seven RBIs tied the club record set by Rafael Ramirez on Aug. 29, 1989, against Chicago.

Dave Righetti (1-4), making his second start since leaving the bullpen, gave up six runs, nine hits and five walks in 3 1-3 innings. Reliever Rob Murphy worked 1 1-3 innings for the victory.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 2

At Busch Stadium, Rheal Cormier won his first game in six decisions and Tom Pagnozzi drove in two runs for St. Louis.

Cormier (1-5) allowed one run and six hits in seven innings. He was sent to the minors for one week earlier this month and had not won since last Oct. 2.

Reds 5, Dodgers 1

At Riverfront Stadium, Cincinnati swept a three-game series from Los Angeles for the first time since 1986. Greg Swindell (6-2) allowed nine hits in 8 1-3 innings with seven strikeouts and no walks.

Jose Offerman's error, his 14th, let in a pair of first-inning runs for Cincinnati. Chris Sabo added a solo homer, his fifth, Barry Larkin had an RBI single and reliever Steve Wilson threw a pair of wild pitches to let in the Reds' final run in the seventh.

Rob Dibble got the final two outs for his ninth save.

Cardinals' shortstop Ozzie Smith races to put the double play tag on the Phillies' Ruben Amaro. Smith broke the National League record with 1,305 career double plays by a shortstop in the fifth inning Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

A's Welch comes off disabled list to beat Rangers

By The Associated Press

Bob Welch owns the Texas Rangers. Dave Fleming has owned just about every American League team except the Milwaukee Brewers.

Welch came off the disabled list before Sunday's game and held the Rangers to two hits over 5 2-3 innings as Oakland swept a three-game series at home from Texas for the first time in eight seasons.

Welch (3-3) combined with four relievers on a five-hitter for the 6-1 victory and moved to 5-0 in nine career starts against the Rangers.

"But I've gotten my butt kicked by them a couple of times and somebody picked me up," said Welch, who threw 85 pitches. "I don't consider them an easy team to pitch against at all."

Fleming, Seattle's surprising rookie, has had an easy time pitching this season, with a team-record tying nine straight victories. But he got pounded early in a six-run second inning and took the loss during Milwaukee's 14-4 dismantling of Seattle.

Fleming's outing, which last just two innings, raised his ERA from 2.88 to 3.49. In two starts against Milwaukee this season, his ERA is 29.70.

Elsewhere in the AL on Sunday, it was Toronto 6, Boston 2; New York 4, Cleveland 3 in 10 innings; Detroit 7, Baltimore 4; Minnesota 8, Chicago 7; and California 5, Kansas City 1.

Oakland led 5-0 after four innings off Kevin Brown (9-4). Willie Wilson had an RBI single in the second and Jerry Browne drew a bases-loaded walk, the third run-scoring walk issued by Rangers pitchers in two games.

AL roundup

Jose Canseco doubled in the third and scored on two grounders to make it 3-0. The next inning, Walt Weiss walked and scored when catcher Geno Petralli fielded Browne's bunt and threw it into right field.

Browne ended up at third on the play and scored on Randy Ready's single.

"We didn't blow them out by any means," Welch said. "The first two games were tight and could have gone either way."

The Athletics survived Texas' top guns of Nolan Ryan, Bobby Witt and Kevin Brown over the weekend to move out to a 3 1/2-game lead in the AL West.

Brewers 14, Mariners 4

At the Kingdome, Milwaukee tied a club record with 22 hits. Paul Mojitor and rookie Dave Nilsson had four hits apiece and Robin Yount had a two-run homer.

In their six-run second, the Brewers got seven hits off Fleming. Nilsson had a three-run double, rookie Pat Listach singled in a run and Dante Bichette doubled in the final two.

Fleming (9-2) wasn't too disappointed over his first loss since April 9.

"These things will happen," Fleming said. "I know I will fail now and then. I just hope it doesn't happen very often."

Milwaukee's Ricky Bones (3-2) gave up solo homers to Tino Martinez in the second, Edgar Martinez in the fourth and Dave Valle in the fifth. Bones went six innings, giving up four runs on seven hits.

Blue Jays 6, Red Sox 2

At SkyDome, John Olerud's three-run double lifted Toronto and Juan Guzman (8-1) held Boston to six hits in six innings.

Starter Mark Gardner (3-6) loaded the bases with Boston up 2-1 in the sixth before Danny Darwin walked in the tying run and Olerud doubled to the gap in left-center.

Duane Ward gave up a hit over the last three innings for his seventh save.

Yankees 4, Indians 3, 10 innings

Consecutive doubles by Mel Hall and Roberto Kelly in the 10th inning off Ted Power (1-1) lifted New York to its second straight win following a four-game losing streak.

Reliever Rich Monteleone (4-1) got the victory despite yielding the tying run in the eighth. Steve Farr pitched the 10th for his ninth save.

Albert Belle's two-run homer in the sixth inning was his 13th of the season, but only his second at Cleveland Stadium.

Tigers 7, Orioles 4

At Tiger Stadium, Tony Phillips and Lou Whitaker drove in two runs apiece and Chad Kreuter had his second homer of the season for Detroit.

With the score tied 4-4, Milt Cuyler led off the seventh inning with a double that knocked out Jose Mesa (2-7). Phillips then had an RBI single off Storm Davis and, after stealing second, scored on Whitaker's single.

Frank Tanana (5-5) gave up four runs on six hits, walked six and struck out three. Mike Henneman worked the final two innings for his ninth save.

Twins 8, White Sox 7

At the Metrodome, Kirby Puckett lined an RBI double to left off reliever Scott Radinsky (2-3) in the ninth inning to rescue Minnesota, which had blown a six-run lead.

Frank Thomas capped the comeback for Chicago with a two-run homer that made it 7-6 in the sixth. Thomas also had a run-scoring double in the fifth, when the White Sox scored five times to get within 6-5.

Tom Edens (4-0) pitched two scoreless innings for the win.

Angels 5, Royals 1

Luis Sojo drove in four runs with a single and his second homer of the season and Julio Valera (3-5) gave up six hits over 7 2-3 innings for the victory.

California first baseman Lee Stevens was 2 for 4, including his first homer at Anaheim Stadium since Sept. 18, 1990.

Sojo's homer, off Mark Gubicza (6-4), was the Angels' first three-run shot since April 30.

Dave Stockton celebrates after sinking a birdie putt on the final hole Sunday for the victory.

Stockton claims Senior Players Championship

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) - Dave Stockton feels like he's on a roll.

Stockton, who captained the U.S. Ryder Cup team to victory last autumn at Kiawah Island, overcame a two-shot advantage by a faltering J.C. Snead on the final hole Sunday to win the Senior Players Championship.

Stockton birdied the last three holes and finished with a 69 for an 11-under 277, one shot better than Snead and late-charging Lee Trevino.

"People say I haven't won anything since 1976. Hell, I just won last year," Stockton said of the Ryder Cup. "I count that as a victory. All 12 of those guys count that as a win."

"I'm still riding an emotional high from that Ryder Cup win. That was a great experience for me."

Sunday's win was special, too. The event is a major on the Senior PGA Tour, which the 50-year-old Stockton joined in December, two months after the Ryder Cup triumph on the South Carolina coast.

That made it the third major title for Stockton, who counts the 1970 and 1976 PGA Championship titles among his 11 wins on the regular PGA Tour.

"This is fun," Stockton said.

"I've been getting these vibes. This is fantastic."

Yet it was painful, too. Stockton got the victory only because Snead collapsed with a double-bogey on the 72nd hole.

"I try to mind my own business," Stockton said. "I try not to watch the scoreboard when I'm out there. But I almost fainted when J.C. pulled his tee shot into the water on 18."

"I talked to J.C. earlier. I tried to tell him to just play the golf course."

Stockton, who won $150,000 of the $1 million purse, became the first first-time winner on the Senior circuit this year.

Snead, without a victory since joining the seniors in 1990, was attempting to become the first player to lead the event wire-to-wire since Arnold Palmer in 1985. He was 13-under and had a five-stroke lead on the rest of the field after 54 holes.

He led the tournament for 71 holes and still led by two shots as they prepared to play the final hole at TPC of Michigan, a 6,876-yard layout designed by Jack Nicklaus.

But Snead drove into a wetland on the left side of the 18th fairway. After a drop, his third shot landed in medium high grass above and right of the green. He chipped on from there and two-putted from 12 feet for double-bogey 6.

That gave him a 3-over 75 for the round and 10-under 278 for the tournament.

"I had 1,000 acres to hit it in with an iron," Snead said. "If I can't do that, I don't deserve to win. The third shot at 18 kicked right. I don't know how that happened."

"I've never been so disappointed in all my life."

Trevino, who had finished and was watching Stockton from a ridge above the green, mounted his charge too late. He birdied 16 and 17 to go 10 under. His 20-foot putt for birdie on the final hole broke twice, then slid past the hole. He finished with a 68.

"At the 18th, I didn't have the guts for a two-way break," said Trevino, who has won five times this year. "I hit it straight and missed by six inches."

But the $80,000 he earned vaulted Trevino ahead of Nicklaus on the all-time money list, combining earnings on both tours. Trevino has earned $6,089,331 in his career; Nicklaus, $6,076,364.

Nicklaus, who crushed Trevino to win this tournament two years ago when it was played at nearby Dearborn Country Club, skipped the event this year to practice for next week's U.S. Open at Pebble Beach.

Irving golfer captures Texas Amateur crown

DALLAS (AP) - An even-par 72 was enough to give Chip Stewart of Irving a five-under 283 and the championship of the 83rd Annual Texas Golf Association Amateur Championship.

Stewart, 45, entered Sunday's final round with a two-stroke lead and finished three shots ahead of Chris Beall of Jacksonville and Scott Fitzgerald of Dallas.

Beall won a sudden-death playoff to take the runner-up spot.

Stewart cruised through most of the round Sunday, until hitting his tee shot into the water on the 179-yard 15th hole. The resulting double bogey left Stewart with a one-shot lead over Fitzgerald.

But Fitzgerald had bogeys on the last two holes while Stewart shot par.

John Grace of Fort Worth, David Ojala of Kingwood and Bryan McMyler, a golfer at Stephen F. Austin State University, tied for fourth.

Stewart is son of the late Earl Stewart Jr., a Texas Hall of Fame golfer who won the tournament in 1947.

The tournament was played on the Dallas Athletic Club's Blue Course.

Spurs' Robinson returns to hardwood

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - San Antonio Spurs center David Robinson has returned to playing basketball, 78 days after doctors reconstructed the ligament that keeps his left thumb in place.

Robinson played Sunday in the Alvin Robertson-Pizza Hut National Pro-Am at Our Lady of the Lake University. It was his first game since the March surgery that ended his season.

The weekly league is a refuge for ex-college players and NBA veterans like Johnny Moore and Derrick Gervin. Tim Hardaway and Terry Cummings also drop by occasionally to work out.

Robinson, who departs next week to start practicing with the U.S. Olympic team, said it was time to put his thumb to the test.

"It felt like such a long time since I'd been out there," the 7-1 Robinson said. "I was ready to run. I was ready to play."

He said his thumb is "functional," although it will take a while before it is back in top condition.

"It doesn't move as well as I'd like it to, but it's a long process, stretching that muscle out," he said.

Robinson, wearing a protective splint, admittedly was tentative at times. But he scored 20 points in a little more than a half, thrilling spectators with his trademark dunks and shot-blocking.

Robinson injured the thumb March 16 when he collided with a Charlotte Hornets player during a game in San Antonio.

A happy Alan Kulwicki stands in victory lane after his triumph Sunday in the Champion 500 Spark Plug NASCAR Race.

Kulwicki breaks speed record in Champion Spark Plug 500

By MIKE OWEN
Associated Press Writer

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) - Alan Kulwicki took the lead with 11 laps to go and went on to a track-record 144.069 mph victory Sunday in the NASCAR Champion Spark Plug 500.

Kulwicki, winning for the second time this year, beat Mark Martin by 2.34 seconds in his first victory on the 2 1/2-mile tri-oval at Pocono International Raceway. He won $74,255.

Bill Elliott finished next as Fords swept the top three spots. Pole-sitter Ken Schrader was fourth and Davey Allison fifth.

Only three cautions slowed Kulwicki's pace, the best by a winning driver at Pocono since Darrell Waltrip's 142.540 mph in July 1978.

"We ran a pretty deliberate race," said Kulwicki, who also won April 5 at Bristol, Tenn. "I had a real good feeling about the way the car was handling."

Green-flag pit stops beginning with just over 30 laps to go set up the final battle among Kulwicki, Martin and Elliott.

Allison's car slipped off a jack in that round of stops, ruining his shot at a victory. Allison wound up with a 40.6-second stop, while Kulwicki made his in 24.1.

Elliott — a four-time winner this year who had taken only two tires in his stop — came away with the lead. Martin and then Kulwicki threatened him until Kulwicki took the lead on lap 181.

Kulwicki slowed in traffic on 185, allowing Elliott and Martin to get past, but he roared back on the homestretch of 190 to get the lead.

He wasn't sure he had the win even then.

"I ran over something and I thought I had a flat tire," said Kulwicki, who started sixth. "I was glad to get this over with."

Although he has been a consistently tough qualifier at Pocono, Kulwicki has had only two previous top-10 finishes in 11 races here. He finished second in July 1987.

Martin was in command through the first third of the race, but had two bad breaks on a green-flag pit stop on lap 69.

Jimmy Horton crashed, bringing out a caution, and Martin tried to leave the pits before his left front tire was secure, and a crew member fell off the side of the car while trying to get Martin's attention.

Martin backed up to his pit, and lost a lap during the caution. He got the lap back off the restart on the next caution, on lap 126.

Kulwicki's victory was the first for Fords in four races, but the 10th in 13 races this season.

The three cautions tied an 8-year-old record for the fewest caution flags at a Pocono event.

Elliott trimmed Allison's points lead to 21, moving from third to second. Kulwicki pulled within 58.

Celanese's Miller no-hits Dixie Parts

Hoechst Celanese's Jeremy Miller produced an outstanding no-hit pitching performance in Optimist Major Bambino action Friday night.

Miller pitched five innings, allowing only three walks and struck out 12 in a 12-2 victory over Dixie Parts.

To aid his own cause, Miller combined with first baseman Jason Cirone for two of the three Celanese fielding outs in the game.

Optimist roundup

The Celanese bats were also in top form, collecting a dozen hits.

Top hitters for Celanese included Miller and Cirone, each with a triple; Cirone and Jason Hall with one double each; Miller, Cirone, Brian Brown and Ollie Lowe with one single each. Dustin Hall and Allen Parker each added two singles to round out the Celanese hitting performance.

The first two innings had Celanese up by a score of 8-1 with Dixie's Josh Blackmon drawing a walk and scoring on several passed balls.

The Celanese runs were aided through two separate run-scoring sacrifice hits by Russell DuBose and RBI singles by Allen Parker.

In the third inning, Celanese tallied three runs on three hits while Miller struck out the first three Dixie batters to come to the plate.

The fourth and fifth innings were pitching duels as Dixie's Matt Harp came to the mound and held Celanese to two doubles and one run while striking out four.

Miller came back and struck out five, allowing one run in the fourth as a result of a walk and a sacrifice out by Blackmon.

Dixie's pitching duo of Jonathan Ladd and Matt Harp combined for seven strikeouts while allowing four walks and 12 hits.

Hoechst Celanese (5-3) meets undefeated Glo-Valve (8-0) at 8 p.m. Tuesday while American League leader Rotary Club (6-1) meets Cabot Corp. in the evening opener at 5:30 p.m.

Glo-Valve survived a slow start, but came back to defeat Dixie Parts, 7-3, Saturday in Major Bambino National League competition at Optimist Park.

Dixie Parts jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a walk to Jonathan Ladd, a triple by Josh Blackburn and a passed ball. They scored their only other run in the fifth inning with consecutive walks to Todd Lancaster, Blackburn, Ty Peerson and Thann Scoggin.

Blackburn had two hits and an RBI for Dixie Parts. He also pitched four innings, allowing four earned runs and eight hits. He struck out five while walking only two. Matt Harp relieved in the fifth inning, allowing no runs on one hit while striking out one and walking one.

Ryan Schumacher pitched the first three innings for Glo-Valve Service and was credited with his second win of the season. He allowed one earned run and two hits. He struck out eight and walked five. Matt Evans relieved in the fourth inning for his first save of the season, giving up one earned run on no hits. He struck out six and walked five.

Schumacher hammered out three hits, including a triple, scored two runs and had an RBI to pace Glo-Valve hitting. Amos Valmores had one hit and two runs scored.

Heath Cowan and Preston Reed had a hit and a run scored. Brian Doss, Leo Ramirez and Kris Davis also had hits for Glo-Valve.

Glo-Valve leads the National Major Bambino League with a season record of 8-0.

Max's defeated Mr. Gatti's, 13-6, last week in girls' 9-12 softball action at Optimist Park.

Winning pitcher was Lori Lindsey, who relieved Tera Dougherty after three innings. Lindsey gave up four hits while striking out three and walking two. Dougherty gave up six hits while striking out two and walking two.

Top hitters for Mr. Gatti's were Michelle Doucette with three singles; Lori Lindsey, one home run and one single; Tera Dougherty, two singles; Lisa Kirkpatrick, Candace Cathey, Rebecca McConnell and Amanda Wiseman, one single each.

Top hitters for Mr. Gatti's were Lisa Dwight, triple and two singles; Tiffany Erpelding, Amanda Sampson and Laura Mouhot, two singles each; Tandi Morton and Angela Brown, one single each.

Max's has an 8-1 record and plays Farm Bureau at 8 p.m. tonight

Hearings begin on parimutuel wagering license

AUSTIN (AP) - Hearings started today on a parimutuel wagering license for a Class 1 horse racing track in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The hearing before examiner Dudley McCalla is expected to take about three weeks. McCalla's recommendation on which of the four applicants should be given the license will be forwarded to the Texas Racing Commission. The commission will award the license.

The four applicants are: Trinity Meadows Raceway, which currently operates a mid-sized track near Weatherford, west of Fort Worth; Pinnacle Park, which proposes to build the track in south Dallas; Midpointe Racing, which has said that it would build its track in Grand Prairie; and the Lone Star Jockey Club.

Ruling on Steinbrenner may be delayed

NEW YORK (AP) - Commissioner Fay Vincent may delay his ruling on George Steinbrenner, one which was expected to allow the owner back in baseball to run the New York Yankees, according to a published report.

Vincent, only saying that "something came up," indicated that his decision on Steinbrenner, which was supposed to be issued on Monday, may be postponed, according to Monday's editions of The New York Times.

On Saturday, The New York Daily News, citing anonymous sources, said that Vincent will not let Steinbrenner return until next year as a penalty for his behavior over the last two years.

The Times said Vincent would not say what came up regarding Steinbrenner or even if the commissioner would hold off his decision.

The Times, also citing anonymous sources, said several current and former Yankees officials feel there are many signs Steinbrenner had violated his agreement with Vincent by talking to club officials since the ban.

Vincent was asked in the report if he knew of any communications between Steinbrenner and team officials which would violate the agreement.

"There are matters that we're pursuing," Vincent said. Steinbrenner agreed in July 1990 to what amounted to a lifetime ban for his $40,000 payment to convicted gambler Howie Spira for information about former Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield.

Vincent had said on Thursday he would make his announcement regarding Steinbrenner on Monday.

Vincent's ruling already had been given to Steinbrenner's lawyers. The News reported that Steinbrenner's lawyer, Arnold Burns, was to meet with Vincent to get Steinbrenner's agreement to the terms in writing.

Vincent initially was going to suspend Steinbrenner for two years. But Steinbrenner objected to the word "suspension" and accepted what amounted to a ban.

Steinbrenner then instigated three lawsuits against the commissioner or firms retained by major league baseball, and is thought to be responsible for items against Vincent in New York gossip columns.

The commissioner refused to even discuss a return until the lawsuits were dropped earlier this spring. Steinbrenner then appealed to come back.

The original penalty would have ended on Aug. 20.

Austin power-punches way to Olympic trials finals

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) - Tim Austin ate like a heavyweight champion in the morning and fought like a flyweight champion in the afternoon.

"I just ate the right food," Austin joked after power-punching his way to a 78-45 decision over Aristead Clayton in the 112-pound final at the Olympic trials Sunday in the Centrum.

Austin, of Cincinnati, peppered Clayton, of Baker, La., with right jabs and hooks and solid shots to the body. Clayton kept coming back for more.

Vernon Forrest of Augusta, Ga., the silver medalist in the 1991 world championships, won the 139-pound title by rallying in the third round for a 39-31 victory over Steve Johnston of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Ivan Robinson of Philadelphia, a member of the world championship team, was upset 35-20 by Julian Wheeler of the Navy at Little Creek, Va.

Three other World Championship team members won on Sunday.

Raul Marquez of Houston bombed away with right hooks and lefts to the head and won a 71-18 decision at 156 pounds over Antwan Echols of Davenport, Iowa, who took three standing 8-counts.

Oscar de la Hoya of Los Angeles scored well with jabs and counter left hooks and won the 132-pound title on a 41-6 decision over Anthony Christodoulou of Syracuse, N.Y.

Larry Donald of Cincinnati, a bronze medalist at Sydney, outmaneuvered and outjabbed Tyrone Campbell of Houston in winning the super heavyweight title 53-19. Eric Griffin, winner of 106-pound titles at the world championships in 1989 and 1991, and Chris Byrd, the 165-pound member of the 1991 world team, won finals Saturday.

Griffin, of Jasper, Tenn., overwhelmed Mario Bueno of the Army at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., 70-16. Griffin was credited with 164 scoring blows in his semifinal and final victories.

Byrd, of Flint, Mich., whose father Joe will coach the Olympic boxing team, counterpunched his way to a 41-17 victory over Michael DeMoss of the Marines at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

The 6-foot Forrest trailed the 5-5 Johnston, a Pan American Games champion, 21-20 after two rounds, then rallied with right hands to the head. Johnston, who lost to Forrest on points in the 1991 U.S. championships final, had built his lead on left hooks.

Conferees hope now to change public perception of environment

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The Earth Summit, two years in the planning and 12 days in the running, produced the largest assembly of world leaders in history.

For what? Its biggest backers don't predict stupendous results, though they insist the stage is set for fundamental environmental reforms and, perhaps, for economic development in the poorest countries.

"After the summit, the world will never be the same," said organizer and chairman Maurice Strong, a Canadian oilman, in closing the meeting on Sunday. "Now we have a certain momentum and we've got to keep it up, for we are on a course that is leading us to tragedy."

But most critics stop short of calling it a failure. "The summit established the environment as a central political issue and the two treaties oblige signing countries to develop plans and programs to protect it," said T.J. Gauthier of the World Wildlife Fund.

Of the countries attending, 153 signed the biodiversity convention, a legally binding treaty committing them to protect endangered plant and animal species. The same number signed a global warming treaty.

Main points of Earth Summit

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Here are the main points of the five principal documents to emerge from the Earth Summit:

Biodiversity Convention
Legally binding treaty to protect plants and animals in danger of extinction.

—Requires signatories to inventory plants and wildlife within their borders, and develop plans to protect those that are endangered.

—Establishes financial mechanisms to help developing countries carry out the inventory and protection programs.

—Obliges countries that use the genetic resources of a nation to share the research, profits and technology with that nation.

Global Warming Convention
Legally binding treaty that recommends curbing emissions of carbon dioxide, methane and other "greenhouse" gases that scientists believe warm the climate by trapping the sun's heat close to earth.

—Urges nations to stabilize their greenhouse gas emissions.

—Sets up mechanisms to transfer to developing nations financial aid and technology that would minimize greenhouse gas emissions.

Rio Declaration on Environment and Development

A non-binding statement of 27 broad principles to guide environmental policy. Among its statements:

—Nations have a responsibility to ensure that activities within their borders do not damage the environment of other nations.

—Protection of the environment constitutes "an integral part of the development process."

—The needs of developing countries, especially the poorest and "most environmentally vulnerable," should receive priority.

Agenda 21

A non-binding, 800-page blueprint for action to protect the environment while encouraging development. Summit organizers say the plan would cost $125 billion a year to implement.

It includes chapters on women, children, poverty and other aspects of underdevelopment not usually associated with the environment.

Statement on Forest Principles
A non-binding, 17-point statement on protection of forests.

It maintains that sustainable management of forests is important for economic, ecological, social and cultural reasons. It also stresses the importance of indigenous peoples' rights and biodiversity.

The statement:
—Recommends that countries assess the impact of economic development on their forests, and take steps to minimize the damage.

—Establishes a process for countries to work together on the safe use of forests. This could lead to a legally binding convention.

Stand collapses at funeral

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — A grandstand holding 400 guests collapsed at the funeral of an exiled Roman Catholic priest, injuring 50 people, Cameroon Radio said Sunday.

The official radio said the accident occurred Saturday during the burial of Monsignor Albert Ndongmo in the central town of Nkongsamba.

ence on Environment and Development boosted the environment as a major international issue. It linked its well-being with that of the international economy. It confirmed, if confirmation were needed, that developments in either area inevitably impact on the other.

"Much more than 12 days ago, the world today is aware that the questions of environment and development cannot be treated separately," said President Fernando Collor de Mello of Brazil.

Virtually all 178 U.N. member countries sent delegations and the presence of 118 heads of government — including President Bush, President Francois Mitterand of France, Prime Minister John Major of Britain, and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany — attracted huge media and public interest.

It seems certain that more people know about significant topics such as global warming and its link with carbon dioxide emissions, and have become aware that 100 to 300 plant and animal species are extinguished every day.

The summit wasn't all public relations. The two treaties were signed, along with three general statements of principles on the environment and economic development.

All the good intentions could be disregarded, but some may be carried through. Signs are mixed.

—For one, the United States did not sign the biodiversity treaty, claiming it did not contain adequate protection for the patents of U.S. biotechnology companies.

The global warming treaty, at U.S. insistence, did not obligate countries to reduce carbon dioxide emissions — largely produced by burning fossil fuels — by specific amounts or deadlines. Nevertheless, Europe and Japan pledged to cap emissions at the 1990 level by the year 2000.

Malaysia did not sign the treaty to protest the lack of specific targets.

The Alliance of Small Island

States claimed that global warming could lead to the melting of polar ice, causing a rise in sea levels that could literally wipe them out.

Only about $2 billion in additional development funds were pledged by "rich" nations, notably Japan. But Germany and France pledged to raise their annual contributions in overseas aid to the benchmark figure of 0.7 percent of gross national product. Strong estimates the cleanup cost at $125 billion.

Spain said it tripled its development aid during the 1980s and would do so again in the 1990s.

Energy conservation measures were adopted Sunday over the objections of major oil producers Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

However, many environmental issues were barely touched, such as nuclear energy and toxic waste disposal.

But Strong voiced a common opinion when he said the summit must be measured by what happens from now on, not by what happened during the past two weeks.

"We have the basis of change, but we've got to push like hell to make sure it takes place," he said. "I don't think people will allow their leaders to forget what they have done here, nor what they have not done."
