

Texas Lottery millionaire to be announced at party

BY PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Two months of planning culminates today during a glitzy downtown party to announce the first Texas Lottery millionaire.

The Lottery's first weekly 'Millionaire a Week' drawing was to include ice skaters, 10-gallon hats, a $40,000 neon-lighted stage and seven Texans who all hoped to walk away wealthy.

The grand-prize drawings will be held each Thursday through Sept. 3 in different cities around the state.

Officials said they have been planning the initial hour-long show for more than two months.

"We never really intended for these to be big, grandiose activities, but we certainly anticipate that this one will be the biggest because it is the first," said Steve Dalbey, a member of the committee planning the jackpot presentations.

The program was scheduled to begin shortly before noon with two ice skating numbers, including one to the lottery jingle.

Dallas skaters Kevin Day, 28, and Elisa Curtis, 22, were to escort the seven jackpot finalists down a red carpet and onto the stage after their performances.

Once on stage, the finalists were to pick one of seven 10-gallon cowboy hats from a giant hatrack. The hats include numbers that correspond to seven pingpong balls drawn by a security representative.

The minimum prize for a finalist is $10,000. The prizes increase to $15,000 and $25,000.

The sixth and seventh balls were to pick the two remaining finalists. The plan included the finalists simultaneously opening wall safes to find out who wins $1 million. The second-place finisher wins $50,000.

San Antonio radio personality Sonny Melendrez, the master of ceremonies for all 12 jackpot drawings, said he was glad to have been picked over nearly two dozen others for the job.

"The next best thing to winning a million dollars in cash is giving away a million dollars in cash," Melendrez said. "Over the past few years, I have given away hundreds of thousands of dollars, homes and cars. But the Texas Lottery's 'Millionaire a Week' is the ultimate game show."

Outstanding Masonic service

Blake Laramore, second from left, was recently awarded the Golden Trowel for outstanding service to the Masonic Lodges of Texas. The award was presented in ceremonies at the Pampa Masonic Lodge #966 where Laramore is a past master and longtime member. Also pictured are, from left, J.B. Fife, Right Worshipful District Deputy Grand Master; Laramore; his wife, Billee Laramore; and Ken Kieth, Worshipful Master of Lodge #966. Laramore received his Master Mason degree in 1958. He is a member of the York Rite, a charter member of the Lubbock Scottish Rite and a member of Khiva Shrine Temple in Amarillo. He served as Worthy Patron of Pampa Chapter #65 Order of the Eastern Star on two occasions. In 1971, he was District Deputy Grand Master of the 98th Masonic District and has performed Masonic funeral rites in more than 250 services throughout the state.

Three die in Midwest tornadoes

By MICHAEL C. BUELOW
Associated Press Writer

Deadly tornadoes and thunderstorms battered the Midwest for the third straight day, tearing a roof off a prison, destroying scores of homes and leaving many cities — including parts of Chicago — in the dark today.

At least three people were killed Wednesday and about 40 were injured, one critically, as the storms struck Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio. A fourth death Wednesday was linked to storms the night before.

"I looked out the window and watched a pine tree bend like a willow and then the roof came off of a house across the street," said Fred Untch of Boone Grove, Ind., where about 20 homes were damaged.

More than 645,000 customers throughout the region were left without electricity.

In Wisconsin, a twister destroyed 68 homes and damaged 164 in the towns of Oregon and Dunn, bedroom communities of Madison. About 30 people suffered minor injuries, authorities said.

"People were at work. If it had been four or five hours later, we could have had easily 50 to 60 deaths," Dunn Town Chairman Edmond Minihan said.

Mike Gregg, who was working in Madison when the twister struck, said his $160,000 Oregon home was a total loss. "It had the most beautiful lawn and the biggest trees you ever saw, and now there's nothing," he said. About 300 Dunn residents needed shelter, said town clerk Roz Gausman.

The tornado tore roofs from two housing units at the Oregon Correctional Center. Nearly every building at the prison and an adjacent prison farm was damaged, and many livestock were killed, Deputy Warden Sandy Sweney said.

Three prisoners suffered minor injuries, she said. The inmates were transferred to an undamaged prison nearby.

In Indiana, storms spun off at least 10 tornadoes and unleashed 3 to 5 inches of rain that caused flooding. At least seven people were hurt, including a highway worker in Porter County who was critically injured when he was hit by a falling tree and an Anderson man who was trapped in his bed by a tree that fell through his roof, authorities said.

At least 43,000 homes and businesses in northern and central Indiana lost power.

In Illinois, thunderstorms dumped more than an inch of rain Wednesday, downing trees and causing power outages. A 12-year-old in Chicago was electrocuted when she touched a downed power line, police said.

About 54,000 Chicago residents and about 157,000 suburban residents were without electricity late Wednesday, said Michael Kelly of the Commonwealth Edison Co.

Record-store chain pulls 'cop killer' song

By The Associated Press

A record-store chain said it would remove the album with the song "Cop Killer" from its 300 stores in 19 states, and a New York sheriff's group urged officers nationwide to boycott Time Warner Inc.

The New York State Sheriff's Association demanded that Time Warner subsidiary Sire Records pull copies of "Body Count," an album by rapper Ice-T, off music store shelves. Ice-T called the critics "ignorant pigs" and said the lyrics were a comment on police brutality, not an attempt to make people commit a crime.

In "Cop Killer," he talks about being "bout to dust some cops off" and shouts "die, pig, die" in the profanity-laced chorus.

"We're not talking about a song," Peter Kehoe, executive director of the Sheriff's Association, said Wednesday at a news conference held next to a memorial for slain police officers in Albany.

"We're talking about a diatribe of hate and violence that is set to music."

"This is outrageous conduct by a socially irresponsible corporation," Kehoe said.

In a statement responding to the boycott, Time Warner said it stands behind its commitment to the free expression of ideas, adding that

"just banning the song will not make violence and rage disappear."

Texas' largest association of police unions last week called for a similar boycott, and Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt on Tuesday urged record stores in his state not to sell copies of the album.

Super Club Music Inc., based in Atlanta, said Wednesday it would stop selling "Body Count" at its 300 stores in 19 states that go by the names Turtles, Record Bar and Tracks.

The decision was taken because of complaints from police, religious groups and Alabama's governor, said Kimberly Garwood, spokeswoman for the retailer.

The sheriff's group is sending a list of Time Warner products, such as Time, Sports Illustrated and People magazines and HBO cable service, to agencies across the state, Kehoe said.

Ice-T said that in his album "the enemies are racists, racist parents and brutal police."

"It's not done maliciously in any attempt to make anybody go out and hurt, commit a crime," he told The Dallas Morning News.

"In the song 'Cop Killer,' I'm saying that they are so brutal, they are putting people to the point that people might want to go do that. ... That's called poetic license, and obviously these ignorant pigs don't know nothing about music."

The 35,000-member National Black Police Association says it won't join the boycott. Police would do better to try to get at the root of black discontent and trying to change it, said Ronald Hampton, the group's executive director.

"Where were these police groups when the police beat up Rodney King?" Hampton asked. "Why were they not appalled by the actions of their brothers? It rings of hypocrisy."

Some music store owners predicted the calls for a boycott would only steer attention to "Cop Killer" and boost sales.

"People who didn't even think of buying it will buy it," said Theodore Bone, owner of T & L Records in Huntsville, Ala. He said he wasn't selling the recording.

AQHA's Rhinestone Roundup to have distinctly feminine flair

AMARILLO - Things will be mighty Western at the American Quarter Horse Heritage Center & Museum on Saturday and the festivities will have a feminine flair, with two members of the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame on hand to entertain with Western music and trick roping.

Musician Patsy Montana will perform her brand of yodeling and cowgirl music beginning at 1 p.m., followed at 1:30 p.m. by a trick and fancy roping demonstration by Joan Wells, Women's World Champion Trick Roper.

Both Montana and Wells are performing at the American Quarter Horse Heritage Center in conjunction with Rhinestone Roundup, a weekend celebration and hall of fame induction ceremony for the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center located in Hereford.

Montana was recognized in 1987 as a National Cowgirl Hall of Fame Western Heritage Honoree for her work in paving the way for other female country and Western singers. She became the first woman to sell more than one million records with "I Want to be a Cowboy's Sweetheart" in 1936. She has written more than 200 songs and in 1970 received the Academy of Country Music Pioneer Award.

Wells was recognized by the Cowgirl Hall of Fame as a 1989 Cowgirl Honoree. This Lincoln, Nebraska resident has performed throughout the nation bringing the vanishing folk art of trick roping to thousands of spectators and keeping the color and history of the Old West alive.

One of only six women currently performing trick roping internationally, Wells executes multiple rope spins, intricate butterfly routines, the Ocean Wave and the Big Loop. She also performs the Texas Skip with grace, skill and precision. Wells was only four years old when she began mastering the art of trick roping.

Other participants in the Cowgirl Hall of Fame's Rhinestone Roundup will visit the Heritage Center Saturday morning following a Cowgirl Poetry Breakfast at The Big Texan.

In addition, an American quarter horse will be available for viewing in the museum's outdoor demonstration arena on Saturday afternoon.

Visitors to the American Quarter Horse Heritage Center & Museum can attend these special performances at no additional cost above the admission fee.

Heritage Center visitors can enjoy an entertaining array of exhibits and movies, as well as "Seeds of Change: The Horse Returns," a Columbus Quincentenary temporary exhibition produced in collaboration with the Smithsonian Institution.

Open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., the Heritage Center is located along Interstate 40 East at Quarter Horse Drive in Amarillo.

FATHERS DAY JUNE 21st

CBS-TV speculates former FBI head was 'Deep Throat'

WASHINGTON (AP) — CBS-TV speculated Wednesday night that L. Patrick Gray, then the acting FBI director, is the most likely person to be "Deep Throat," the mysterious source for Watergate reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein.

In a special telecast on the 20th anniversary of the Watergate break-in, CBS correspondent Mike Wallace said Gray was the person "who best fits the given description" of the source.

L. Patrick Gray, in a 1972 file photo.

Wallace said Gray lived in a bachelor apartment only four blocks from Woodward and could have gone undetected as he descended to a parking garage, in his apartment building to meet with the Washington Post reporter on numerous occasions.

In addition, CBS said, Gray could easily have checked out signals that Woodward placed on his apartment balcony while walking to work or taking a morning jog.

Gray and Woodward had similar backgrounds in the Navy and shared "a well-known fascination with government," Wallace said, and "in Gray's language and personal style, he fits Woodward's description of Deep Throat in detail after detail."

As to Gray's possible motive for helping provide leads for news stories that ultimately led to the resignation of President Nixon, CBS theorized that as he was "dragged into the Watergate scandal, he became increasingly disgusted with the whole business" and "came to loathe dealing with all the president's men."

The 76-year-old Gray, who now lives in the New London, Conn., area, has an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached for comment Wednesday night. His name has surfaced in previous speculation about the identity of Deep Throat, and CBS quoted his lawyer as saying Gray categorically denies being the person.

Woodward, Bernstein and former Post Executive Editor Benjamin Bradlee have declined over the years to identify the source.

EPA report: Secondhand smoke poses severe risks to children

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Environmental Protection Agency report concludes that secondhand tobacco smoke poses severe health risks to children, causing thousands of respiratory illnesses annually, sources familiar with the study say.

The draft EPA report, being presented to the agency's science advisory panel today, also raises concerns that tobacco smoke may be linked to mysterious sudden infant death syndrome, or SIDS.

The cause of SIDS is not known, but the EPA study suggests there may be relationship with infants' exposure to secondhand tobacco smoke either before or after birth. It offered no conclusive proof.

The report, which is based on an examination of dozens of scientific studies and aims to assess the health risks from tobacco smoke to non-smokers, has been under review at the EPA for more than a year.

Agency spokesmen said they could provide no details about the draft study until it was presented to the advisory board, which reviewed a preliminary draft previously and asked that the section on impact to children be expanded.

More than a year ago, the advisory panel generally endorsed the study's findings that secondhand tobacco smoke should be classified as a carcinogen and a known cause of lung cancer.

The preliminary study estimated that tobacco smoke in the air may account for as many as 3,800 cancer deaths, but sources said that figure was being revised in the latest draft.

They said the new study concludes that secondhand tobacco smoke is believed to account for more than 200,000 serious respiratory ailments in children annually, including bronchitis and pneumonia.

The report also suggests a direct link between secondhand tobacco smoke and asthma, an affliction that affects tens of thousands of children. It says children are twice as likely to develop asthma if they live in homes where at least 10 cigarettes are smoked daily.

John Banzhaf, executive director of the anti-smoking group Action on Smoking and Health, called such findings a major step toward getting legislation passed on the federal and state levels to ban smoking in the work environment and in public places and may be used in custody cases.

"It will provide strong additional support for legislative efforts to ban smoking in public places," he said.

Previous studies have suggested that passive smoke may pose serious health problems for children.

A study last year by the government's National Center for Health Statistics found that children in non-smoking households were likely to be healthier than children who live with smokers.

That study found 4.1 percent of young children in households with current smokers were in fair to poor health, compared with 2.4 percent of children who were never exposed to tobacco smoke.

The Tobacco Institute, an industry group, dismissed the study at the time as inconclusive. The industry group also criticized the EPA's preliminary findings in April 1991 when its early draft report on secondhand tobacco smoke was submitted to the science advisory panel.

U.S.-Russian relations turn corner

Summit proves unexpectedly successful

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and Boris Yeltsin turned a corner in U.S.-Russian relations at a summit highlighted by a historic arms accord and the Russian president's impassioned speech that sparked new congressional support for his beleaguered economy.

"He said everything Americans want to hear," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee that oversees policy toward the former Soviet bloc.

Hamilton called Yeltsin's speech Wednesday to a joint meeting of Congress "a command performance," and said Yeltsin "has probably changed the momentum" on prospects for congressional support of a $24 billion package of Western aid to Russia.

"Previously it really had been stalled. I would expect it now to move forward," Hamilton said.

It was a good day for U.S.-Soviet relations all around. Bush granted Russia most-favored nation trade status, and the two leaders cemented several accords — the most dramatic a sweeping arms reduction deal.

In addition, Yeltsin pledged anew to spare no effort in seeking out American prisoners of war missing during the Cold War.

Yeltsin's speech to Congress marked the emotional high point of the two-day summit. He invited "the people of the United States to join us in partnership in the name of the worldwide triumph of democracy."

Senate Majority Leader George

President Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin hold up the pens they used to sign a handful of agreements on investment, space, scientific and military cooperation and a sweeping arms accord Wednesday at the White House.

Mitchell, D-Maine, and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said they thought Yeltsin's speech might loosen the congressional logjam on the aid package.

For one, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a former Vietnam POW, said Yeltsin had addressed his concerns that had led him to resist the aid package initially.

After his speech, Yeltsin joined Bush to sign seven accords on armaments, investment, space and scientific and military cooperation. Their aides concluded a raft of lesser agreements.

The arms deal would slash long-range nuclear arsenals to about one-third current levels by the end of the century.

Beyond the deals and pledges, Yeltsin showed that a post-Soviet Moscow was willing to play second fiddle to Washington on arms and other issues. And his American partners embraced Yeltsin as warmly as they had former Soviet Washington had been stiff and formal, showed a new feel for American politics by pledging to give U.S. authorities complete access to formerly secret Soviet archives on defectors and prisoners of war who ended up in Russia.

Bush praised Yeltsin for addressing the "extraordinarily sensitive" issue.

"As president of Russia, I assure you that even if one American has been detained in my country and can still be found, I will find him. I will get him back to his family," Yeltsin told a cheering Congress.

Keeping that promise may involve frustrations for both sides, however, because of the chaos in the archives and in Russia overall.

"We know who died, where they are buried," Yeltsin said. But some are unaccounted for. "We have simply no information about them. And this is why we say that maybe some of them are still alive and are still in Russia."

Bush told a wrap-up news conference that, in turn, American authorities would help track down Russians missing from the war in Afghanistan.

"The heartbreak is on both sides, the tragedy is on both sides," Bush said.

It became clear that the Bush-Yeltsin summit, which had received little advance fanfare, was a carefully orchestrated celebration of the demise of communism in the former Soviet Union.

"Freedom and communism are incompatible," Yeltsin said in his congressional address, which was interrupted 28 times by ovations and chants of "Boris! Boris!"

"I will not go back on the reforms," said Yeltsin, drawing lawmakers to their feet in applause. "And it is practically impossible to topple Yeltsin in Russia!"

President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Bush promised to "live up to the letter" of the arms agreements. But he refused to commit himself to spending any "peace dividend" savings for America's cities or domestic problems.

Saying the American people want action on the budget deficit, Bush said, "I would not pledge that any savings that might accrue to us because of this far-reaching agreement would go to some federal spending project."

Yeltsin, hoarse and clearly tired by Wednesday evening, was to meet with Democratic presidential contender Bill Clinton for 20 minutes this morning before bidding farewell to the Bushes and heading for Wichita, Kan., where his schedule includes a visit to a farm, a meat processing plant and Wichita State University. From there he heads to Canada for a state visit.

Report: Third year of decline in arms spending, fewer wars

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The world's armies bought fewer weapons and fought less often last year, but the slowdown in arms sales may have had more to do with economics than peace moves, Swedish researchers said today.

"It is the best of times in the sense that the two largest military spenders, the United States and the former Soviet Union, are permanently committed to a reduction in defense spending," the Stockholm Peace Research Institute said in its annual report.

"It is the worst of times in the sense that uncertainty is great and the possibility of conflict is high," it said. It was the third year in a row that the institute, in its World Armaments and Disarmament report, noted declines in arms spending and fighting.

But it also said that "the fall in military expenditure may be due to technological and economic reasons alone and not a product of arms control." The report was completed before the announcement Tuesday that the United States and Russia would cut two-thirds of their long-range, multiple warhead missiles over the next decade.

It also does not take into account the June 12 signing by NATO and former Warsaw Pact countries of a treaty to reduce tanks, helicopters and other war materiel in Europe.

There were major armed conflicts in 30 places in 1991, continuing what the institute called a gradual, but noticeable downward trend.

The institute had counted 31 fights in 1990, and 33 the year before. Most of the fighting in 1991 was internal.

The rate of decline in international military expenditure from 1990 to 1991 was less than the 5 percent decline from 1989 to 1990, but it was still significant, the report says.

It says the data was clouded by uncertainties over how much money was spent during the Persian Gulf war and by the disintegrating Soviet Union.

The report says China bucked the trend, with a significantly higher 1991 defense budget than for 1990.

"With the exception of the Middle East, where the situation is still uncertain following the expenditure increases associated with the costs of the Persian Gulf War, the current military expenditure trend in most regions is downwards," the report says.

It gives no overall global spending figures, but does give specifics for certain areas. The United States' national defense budget outlay, in 1990 dollar values, declined from $339.8 billion in 1989 to $308.2 billion in 1991.

Numbers were difficult to come by for the former Soviet Union because of the changes in ruble values and the fact that the 1991 defense budget was the first to be publicly scrutinized.

But the report says it is "almost certain" that Soviet military spending declined more than 14 percent from 1989 to 1991.

The value of international trade in major conventional weapons in 1991 was estimated at $22.1 billion in 1990 dollars. That would be about 25 percent less than in 1990, continuing another downward trend.

U.S. arms merchants delivered 51 percent of the major conventional weapons purchases in 1991, the institute said. The United States had 30 percent of the business in 1987.

Angola, Czechoslovakia, Iraq and North Korea — all major Soviet clients throughout the 1980s — had the most dramatic declines in weapons imports.

Asia replaced the Middle East as the primary market for major conventional weapons, taking in 34 percent of the global total in 1991 compared with 15 percent in 1982.

Prosecutors conclude Reagan knew of Iran-Contra plan from start

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special Iran-Contra prosecutors have concluded that President Reagan knew about the plan to swap arms for hostages from the beginning and was warned repeatedly that it was illegal.

That conclusion is in the indictment returned this week against former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. The indictment says prosecutors drew the picture of Reagan's role from Weinberger's extensive notes from the period.

The indictment obtained by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh charges Weinberger with five felony counts of lying and covering up the Iran-Contra affair. One count accuses him of concealing the existence of 1,700 pages of his personal notes from 1985 and 1986. The notes were found in the Library of Congress.

Weinberger, the highest-ranking Reagan administration official charged in the case, vigorously denied the allegations.

The Washington Post reported today that prosecutors hope to use Weinberger's notes and other evidence to show that in three White House meetings in November 1986, Reagan and other top administration officials agreed on a story line that hid the president's role in the arms shipments. The newspaper quoted unnamed sources familiar with both sides of the case.

Reagan's own statements on Iran-Contra have varied widely. In March 1987, he acknowledged during a nationally televised speech that the scheme was an arms-for-hostages swap. Later, he denied it.

In many cases, he simply pleaded an inability to recall. "One thing still upsetting me, however, is that no one kept proper records of meetings or decisions," Reagan said in the March 1987 speech.

The former president's Washington attorney, Theodore Olson, declined comment Wednesday on the indictment's allegations on Reagan's role in Iran-Contra.

The indictment's central allegation about Reagan — that he knew of the Iran initiative by November 1985 — is not new. Congressional committees reached the same conclusion in their 1987 report on the Iran-Contra scandal.

"Yes, we knew different pieces of this," but the Weinberger indictment fleshes it out, said Tom Blanton, executive director of the National Security Archives. The non-profit organization collects documents on foreign policy and national security issues.

According to the indictment: —National security adviser Robert McFarlane told Reagan, Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz in August 1985 about an Israeli proposal to sell arms to Iran to gain the release of American hostages.

—Weinberger told McFarlane on Nov. 20, 1985, he objected to the shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran in exchange for hostages, but McFarlane replied Reagan had decided to do so through Israel.

—Weinberger warned Reagan a few days after the Nov. 24, 1985, shipment of 18 Hawk missiles to Iran that such shipments were illegal.

—McFarlane outlined a plan for additional arms sales to Iran at a Dec. 7, 1985, White House meeting, but Weinberger again argued the sales were illegal. "President Reagan responded that he could answer charges of illegality but that he could not answer the charge that he had passed up a chance to free the hostages," the indictment said.

—Three days later, McFarlane told Reagan and others he opposed additional arms sales but that the United States needed to replace TOW missiles that Israel had shipped to Iran in August 1985.

—At a Jan. 7, 1986, White House meeting, "the president favored the plan to sell missiles to Iran, through Israel, in exchange for the release of American hostages," the indictment said.

Sorority honors 50-year members at dinner

The Pampa Alumnae Chapter of Delta Delta Delta (DDD) recently honored 50-year members with the Golden Circle Degree. DDD is a national sorority that was founded over 100 years ago.

Included in the ceremony were Betty Yoe Henderson from Baker University, Frances Theoford Cree from the University of Texas, and from Texas Tech Dorothy Burton Chase, Martha Price Smith and Betty Shryock Gordon.

"These are five very special ladies," stated Glennette Goode, president of the local alumnae chapter. "They not only founded the Pampa Alumnae Chapter of DDD, but they were instrumental in forming the Pampa City Panhellenic as well. They have all been very active in the community and we are very proud of them."

The ceremony climaxed the dinner meeting presented by Goode and assisted by Joy Rice, vice president. New members were also recognized. They were Vicki Fatheree from Wichita Falls and Melanie Kirksey from Lubbock. Keitha Clark, a Texas Tech graduate, was recognized as a new alumnae and Susanna Holt as the recent collegiate initiate from Calif. at San Diego.

Astronauts oppose spaceflight's automated system

By POPULAR MECHANICS
A Hearst Magazine

The maiden flight of the Space Shuttle Endeavour, NASA's replacement for the ill-fated Challenger, will launch a new decade of manned spaceflight — with one modification that astronauts oppose.

An automated touchdown system is in the works, and astronauts bristle at the idea of relinquishing control.

The reasons for the modification, called Autoland, is tied up with NASA's vision for the next decade and beyond, which rely on the space shuttle.

"We want to do whatever we can to fly the current vehicles until 2020, if necessary," said shuttle program director Leonard Nicholson.

Dan Germany, manager of the Johnson Space Center's Orbiter Projects Office, referred to the center's slogan, "Our Vision '92 is 2020," saying:

"It means NASA has one manned vehicle now, and no budget to build a new one."

In the new decade, Americans and their machines must spend not days but weeks in orbit. Space Station Freedom holds center stage in NASA's scenario for the '90s, and the shuttles will play key supporting roles. They will haul up the hardware and be used as motels for the station's first guests.

Endeavour has been wired and plumbed for gear that will turn it into an orbiting Winnebago. NASA calls it Extended Duration Orbiter (EDO) capability.

Should the space agency decide to park Endeavour in orbit for longer than two weeks, the EDO modifications will snap into place. In an ongoing study at Johnson Space Center, a team of engineers is examining modifications or "mods" to extend a shuttle's sojourn at Freedom to 30, 60 and even 90 days.

"The plan is to bite this thing off in small chunks," Germany said. "What we're looking at right now are mods we have to make to stay for 30 days. We'd like to achieve that capability in January 1997."

The critical components are not hardware but consumables — food, crew, atmosphere, clothing and power.

"As we push this thing to stay up longer," Germany said, "we'll get into the possibility of breakage. It's those fluids and gases that you have to worry about — hydraulics, helium to purge systems, nitrogen to operate valves and so on."

There also is the human factor. Endeavour's first skipper, Navy pilot Cmdr. Daniel C. Brandenstein, 49, chief of NASA's Astronaut Office, spent 11 days in orbit when he commanded Columbia in January 1990, then the longest shuttle flight ever.

"We know you can adapt to zero gravity very quickly and operate up there," he said. "But we have an uneasy feeling that there's a dropoff in your proficiency beyond 16 days."

Not willing to gamble about whether performance decay could erode the flight crew's ability to land safely, NASA assistant administrator for spaceflight William Lenoir ordered Autoland to bring in a shuttle unassisted next year.

The software has been part of every shuttle flight since Columbia's maiden voyage but has never been tested.

Waitress finds Canadians are bad tippers for good reason

DEAR ABBY: I am still steamed about the letter signed "Slinging Hash in Florida." I just retired after 31 years of waitressing, and I loved my job more than you can imagine.

Let me tell you why that waitress said, "A canoe tips easier than a Canadian." Canadians do not realize that in the United States, servers are paid $2.01 an hour — plus the computer takes 8 percent out of each total for our taxes.

One night, I had a party of eight. Each had a cocktail, appetizer, soup, salad, main course, dessert, plus three or four refills of coffee or tea. They were a great group and everyone raved over my service. The total bill was $131.

The man who paid the bill left $1.30 on the table. (Can you imagine?) I was so mad, I ran after him, chased him to his car and tried to give him the $1.30, telling him that he needed it more than I did.

He looked shocked and asked, "Doesn't the management pay you a decent salary?" When I told him how much servers are paid, he was flabbergasted. He tried to give me some money, but I wouldn't take it.

Later, he mailed me a $20 bill with a note saying that I was the best waitress he had ever had, and it was signed by everyone who was in that party.

FORMER FLORIDA WAITRESS

DEAR WAITRESS: Your letter explains why some (not all) Canadians are conservative tippers. I personally prefer the European method: The restaurant adds 15 percent to the bill, thereby eliminating discretionary tipping altogether.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I haven't slung any hash in Canada, but I have slung my share in the Sunshine State.

Canadians are not cheap when it comes to tipping. In Canada, servers are paid a decent hourly wage, which is more than you can say for waiters and waitresses in the United States. At least that's what I was told when I criticized my dinner partner for leaving a $10 tip on a $150 check last month at a restaurant in Toronto.

In this country, if the service is acceptable, a 15 percent to 20 percent gratuity is customary.

MRS. M.M.
IN CAPE CANAVERAL, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: After hearing about one more case of a married woman in my town having an affair, I have two questions:

No. 1: How can any woman handle two men? No. 2: Why in the world would she even want to try? Sign me...

Travel tips from wardrobe to insurance

Travel Wardrobe
By MARY MARTIN NIEPOLD
For AP Special Features

One of the biggest boosts to a successful business trip or a dazzling vacation is knowing which clothes to pack. While knits are a boon, planning is the key. You want the fewest pieces to go the furthest distance.

Patty Fox, a Los Angeles fashion consultant, suggests rolling a portable clothes rack into your bedroom and hanging out all of the possibilities to ponder over for a few days before leaving. New York fashion stylist Avis Cardella suggests putting all of the possibilities on the bed and moving the pieces around until you get some idea of which will mix and match for the most mileage.

If a portable rack is out of the question, at least do some precise thinking about where you're going and what you'll be doing. Make a list, make a chart, — anything that will help you visualize a core wardrobe that is versatile, easy to care for and lightweight.

"When in doubt, leave it out," says Fox, who also is a spokesman for the Luggage & Leather Goods Manufacturers of America.

"You want to feel good in what you're wearing," says Marie St. John Gray, head designer and partner with her husband, Robert, in St. John Knits, the $70 million company that has specialized in knitted fashions for 30 years. "For the business woman, you want to look as good as the guy in a tailored suit, and you don't want to be fussing with your clothes."

Many business women wear knit separates on the plane so they can proceed directly to meetings.

The biggest mistake women make, experts say, is thinking they won't have enough clothes for all of the eventualities on a trip. Thinking you need an outfit for each event is deadly. Instead, think separates.

"Remember," Fox says, "you want to control your wardrobe. Don't allow your clothes to control you. You know your image, where you're going and what your needs are."

To that end, think of these six C's when packing:

Capsule Wardrobe. These are the separate pieces that mix into all kinds of possibilities. Casual Corner stores help customers with a 5-4 program — five tops, four bottoms that combine into multiple outfits. This concept can be reduced and adapted to travel. You could get by with two tops: a blazer and a sweater. A navy blazer, for instance, works with a matching knit top and skirt for a dress look, tops a pair of jeans and shirt for play or matches a navy skirt for a suit look.

For travel, St. John Gray relies on seven or eight pieces, total: A jacket, short skirt, tunic top, trousers (all black or navy), a couple of blouses, a coat sweater and a long coat.

Color Coordinate. Choose one basic color scheme — black, navy or a medium-toned neutral — and add accent colors in blouses, accessories, the long sweater. Choosing one basic color group automatically cuts down the number of clothes you take.

Convertibles. These are vital. A raincoat in nylon (nothing too shiny) can work rain or shine; a lightweight style can be rolled up in your luggage or carried on your arm. A tunic top works with pleated or straight skirts. A trapeze-style coat or sweater coat can be worn buttoned as a dress or open as a coat. A strapless knit mini dress can be rolled down over the waist and worn as a skirt. A long narrow knit skirt that buttons on the side can be buttoned and conservative by day, unbuttoned and sexy by night. Big scarves and shawls can double as wraps.

Classics. Kate Hepburn-styled trousers, a blazer, a cardigan, a short straight skirt are styles that go the furthest. Their simplicity makes them easy to accessorize (dramatic print scarves for day, oversized jewelry for night.) They are appropriate in every culture. They work with one another.

Comfort. A prize at home, comfort is a necessity when traveling. Joan Vass knits, for instance, are designed to move with the body and hold their shape. When knits are combined with Lycra, they should return to their original shape. To pack them, roll them.

Care in Packing. All of the experts suggest rolling clothing to pack it. Other suggestions: Fox says to fold along the major seam whether at the waist or down the middle.

A last caveat: Do not shop for a new wardrobe right before your trip. Stick with what has always worked for you at home. That way, you'll be the most secure in environments that feel much less so.

Travel Insurance
By JENNIFER MERIN
For AP Special Features

A friend about to embark on a trip to India expressed concern about inoculations and insurance. Nothing medically is required, but her doctor recommended vaccines against tetanus and hepatitis.

Advice from this inveterate traveler: Take the shots, make a couple of phone calls and have a good trip.

A call to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta will provide the latest information on health abroad, and the State Department's Citizens Emergency Center in Washington will offer further advice regarding health issues or other warnings ranging from crime statistics to political unrest that might affect your travels.

When no inoculations are required, vaccines can do as much to allay underlying anxieties as to assure good health. Peace of mind counts a lot when journeying far from health and home. But what about extra insurance?

That's a healthy question, and the answer is a matter of common sense. Your decision should be influenced by your itinerary. If you're traveling alone or as part of a small group of travelers to a remote and primitive part of the world where there are no hospitals, no medical supplies, few physicians and where you're not likely to find anyone who speaks English, think of extra medical coverage as a lifeline.

On the other hand, if you're visiting Stockholm, where medical facilities are sophisticated and physicians abundant, and where English is a second language, added insurance is probably more reassuring than necessary.

A broad spectrum of travel insurance plans is available. Plans fall into two basic categories: Medical coverage and traveler assistance plans.

Medical coverage pays for medical treatment such as emergency surgery, hospitalization and prescription drugs.

Traveler assistance covers health-related emergencies such as patient evacuation to a nearby hospital, travel costs for family or friend to a patient's bedside, repatriation of children stranded abroad by illness of a parent or guardian, referral to English-speaking physicians. They also might cover translators' fees, lost luggage and legal referrals.

Several major companies offer plans ranging from $35 to about $60 for a 14-day policy for one adult. Benefits vary substantially. Before subscribing, compare several plans.

Inquire specifically about benefit limits on air or ground ambulance services. This is important since costs can be exorbitant. For example, medical evacuation might cost up to $100,000, while benefits may be limited to $20,000. Exclusion clauses also are important because plans may not cover high-risk activities such as mountain climbing or bungee jumping, or they may not apply in danger zones such as Iran or Iraq.

Also, compare policy limits on non-emergency situations, pre-existing conditions, accidental death, dismemberment, flight delay and trip cancellations and subscriber access to 24-hour telephone hot lines.

Also know whether policies are valid for travel within the United States and, if so, how far you must be from home for them to become effective.

Among reputable travel insurance plans are Access America's International Health Plan, Travel Assistance International's Individual Membership Plan, Tele-Trip Company's Travel Assure Standard Plan for Individuals, Travel Guard International's Gold Comprehensive Plan, Wallach & Co.'s Health-Care Abroad and International SOS Assistance's Individual Membership Plan. All have toll-free telephone numbers.

Before signing any travel insurance contract, carefully read your regular personal health and homeowner's insurance policies to avoid duplicating any medical and property loss benefits.

DEAR ABBY: "Slinging Hash in Florida" was much too kind when she wrote, "A canoe tips easier than a Canadian."

Given all the best attention such as one might get on a fancy cruise ship, the sad truth of the matter is that the Queen Mary tips easier than a Canadian.

SYMPATHETIC IN FLORIDA
DEAR SYMPATHETIC: My mail from traveling salespeople suggests that Canadians are not necessarily "cheap" — they are conservative. Perhaps this letter will explain it:

CONFIDENTIAL TO G.K. IN HOLDENVILLE, OKLA.: Wisdom does not automatically come with old age. Nothing does — except wrinkles. It's true, some wines improve with age — but only if the grapes were good in the first place.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) For the sake of expediency, you might make a hasty deal impulsively today. When conducting business, don't make any moves without first checking all the possible ramifications.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There is a possibility you might make a decision out of spite instead of out of wisdom today. If you do, its boomerang effect could hurt you more than the other guy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you have a poor attitude where your work is concerned today, mistakes and complications are likely. It might be wise to temporarily shelve tasks you find distasteful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you get involved in competitive activities today, don't bring gambling into the picture. Poor losers are likely, and you might be numbered among them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a possibility you might be subjected to more domestic frustration than usual today. Count to 100 before blowing your boiler.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful that you don't speak out of turn or hastily jump to conclusions today. There's a chance you might blurt out something you'll be unable to take back.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The demands on your purse for your own needs, as well as those of others, might be rather heavy today. Look for sensible, prudent ways to trim borderline expenses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Strive to be methodical in matters you initiate or personally direct today. If you do not have a sound plan, the results could be far less than what you had hoped.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you fail to live up to commitments today, your image could be tarnished. Do exactly what you said you'd do, even if it's inconvenient.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An old friend might do things today that could severely test your patience. Try to be tolerant and forgiving, because this individual may be having an unusually bad day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be certain that what you hope to achieve today is really worth what you may have to expend mentally, emotionally and morally. Aiming for a dubious target will produce a hollow victory.

Anglers hook identical fish at June Big Bass

Congratulations to the most recent winners at the June Big Bass Tournament held on Lake Baylor near Childress. And I do mean winners.

Good tournament scales are accurate to one hundredth of a pound. The chances of two anglers catching identical fish are remote, and the odds of having the identical weight for first place are astronomical.

BART HALEY of Pampa weighed a nice 3.31-pound black bass during the first hour of the tournament. With the lake record bass at Lake Baylor exceeding 14 pounds, a three-pounder rarely finishes in the money during major tournaments. During hour three, DANNY MURDOCK of Memphis brought his bass to scales and it also weighed 3.31 pounds. Danny speculated that by the end of the tournament, he would be lucky to finish tied for tenth.

WRONG! After listening to five sad stories of bass that "got away", this tournament ended in a tie. Bart and Danny refused an offer to arm wrestle or a coin toss and decided to split the winners' purse of $1,024. Third place and $125 went to FRED STRICKLAND of Amarillo.

Other hourly winners include DON SEHORN of Childress and CHUCK GOLDBERRY, BOBBY POST (twice) and JACKY IVY all of Amarillo. The smallest bass tipped the scales at 1.39 pounds. The fishing was great but catching a keeper was tough.

The recent thunderstorms caused a four foot rise at Lake Baylor and created hundreds of acres of newly flooded grass, bushes, and mesquite trees. That is great news for the long term, but it sure made for difficult fishing this weekend.

LAST MINUTE FATHER'S DAY SUGGESTION—MAGNA THIN fishing line by DuPont should already be in your Dad's tackle box. The perfect fishing line should be invisible and unbreakable; Magna Thin, while not perfect, comes close. Buy some six-pound for his spinning reel and some 10-pound for the bait cast reels.

My Dad...he rarely offers verbal advice, but he is my inspiration for honesty and integrity. Thanks Dad, I love you.

Owners attack players in pocketbook at trial

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The first witness has yet to finish his testimony and the NFL's strategy already has become clear in the free agency antitrust suit filed against it by eight players.

Hammer home to the nine-woman jury of librarians, grocery clerks and housewives the six- and seven-figure salaries of NFL players.

Randy Vataha, the agent for two of the plaintiffs, was the first witness Wednesday in what is expected to be a two-month marathon. He called his job under the present system "skilled begging," claiming that's what it took to get the owners to pay the players what they're worth.

But NFL attorney Frank Rothman, in a two-hour cross-examination, consistently hammered home the salaries of Vataha's two clients — Green Bay quarterback Don Majkowski and San Diego guard Dave Richards.

"By my calculations, Mr. Richards has made $1.218 million in his four years in pro football is that correct?" Rothman asked Vataha after calculating the salaries and bonuses that Richards had earned since entering the NFL in 1988.

"That's about right," Vataha replied.

Earlier, Rothman had noted that Majkowski's salary had risen from $432,000 in salaries and bonuses after an outstanding 1989 season to $1.5 million and was increased to $1.7 million after an injury-plagued 1990.

"Does that seem like a case of skilled begging to you?" he asked Vataha.

Vataha, a former wide receiver for New England and a half-owner of the Boston and New Orleans Breakers in the now-defunct USFL, emphasized during his testimony that NFL careers average less than four years and noted that the average football salary is far lower than those in baseball and basketball.

"You have to have a free and open market for players to earn what they're really worth," he said under direct examination by the lawyer for the players, Jim Quinn.

The suit is an outgrowth of the 1987 players' strike, which left the league without a collective bargaining agreement and eventually forced the NFL Players Association to abandon its collective bargaining in favor of a court-oriented strategy.

Fred Couples points to a fan during Wednesday's U.S. Open practice round at Pebble Beach, Calif.

Couples plans for recovery

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Two months after being touted as a lock to win the Masters, Fred Couples is almost an afterthought at the U.S. Open.

The winner of more money and more tournaments over the last calendar year is nowhere to be found on the lists of most-likely winners of this year's Open at Pebble Beach. Instead, guys like Nick Faldo, Raymond Floyd, Payne Stewart, Tom Watson, even Seve Ballesteros are put up over and over again.

Couples makes it sound as if USGA officials need not bother with printing up his nameplate.

"At the Masters I was better than I ever have been, so it really didn't matter what everybody else thought," Couples said Wednesday. "Here, I think you'd be making a mistake if you put any money on me. ... As far as being someone to beat, I'm just like a qualifier, really."

A field of 156 players tees off today, and Pebble Beach will do the rest. It comes down to a dozen or so players who can win the tournament.

Couples has dominated more than his share of leaderboards so far in this, his 12th season on the tour. He finished first or second in five of six tournaments this spring, capping the stretch with a two-stroke victory over Floyd in the Masters.

"From LA to the Masters, I was in the last group on Saturday and Sunday in almost every tournament," Couples said. "The wear and tear, it sounds pretty stupid, but it was pretty tough on me."

And so Couples has been on a downer ever since. In four tournaments since his Masters victory in April, Couples finished 22nd and 59th, missed two cuts and lost his patience.

With Pebble Beach offering rock-hard greens, fairways narrower than driveways, rough up to your ankles, winds in your face and scenic views that gobble up golf balls, the 1992 U.S. Open adds up to a test of golf too difficult for someone at a low-point — even one as good as Couples.

"It could come down to who doesn't snap," said Davis Love III, who along with Couples, is a three-time PGA Tour winner this year. "You can go crazy out there. If you hit two or three balls in the rough and start thinking you have to make some birdies, you can lose it."

"Guys like Raymond (Floyd) who are good at hanging in there will do well." The aim of the USGA has been to identify the best golfer as its U.S. Open champion, and the tournament it has been expert in doing so. In its first two U.S. Opens in 1972 and 1982, Pebble Beach has done that two better — crowning the best golfer of a generation as champion, and bringing out of him a shot as memorable as any other struck in U.S. Open history.

Jack Nicklaus won the 1972 U.S. Open, and cemented into history a final round played in a freezing windstorm with a one iron on the par-3 17th hole that hit the flagstick and wound up inches away from the cup.

In 1982, Watson came to the 17th tied with Nicklaus, who was seeking an unprecedented fifth Open title, and hit his tee shot into ankle-deep rough behind the green. With Nicklaus in the scorer's tent thinking he had it won, Watson holed his chip shot and took the title.

"I think the golf course this week will produce a winner who is someone with a lot of experience," Nicklaus said.

Holyfield prepares for no-win fight

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The situation is a familiar one for Evander Holyfield.

The undisputed heavyweight champion, who has never lost, is in a no-win predicament.

"If he beats me they'll say he beat an old man," said 42-year-old Larry Holmes, who will challenge the 29-year-old Holyfield Friday night at Caesars Palace.

The bouquets tossed at Holyfield often have been full of thorns.

"Who did Evander Holyfield beat," said Holmes, echoing a question asked by many boxing fans.

"A fat guy in Buster Douglas, an old man in George Foreman, (Bert) Cooper, and now he's fighting an old man again," said Holmes, answering himself.

Holyfield wouldn't beat Tyson, shout his critics.

"I didn't pull out of the fight; my rib wasn't hurt," Holyfield said Wednesday, referring to the injury that forced Tyson to pull out of a bout scheduled for last Nov. 8.

Tyson now is serving a three to six-year prison sentence on a conviction for rape.

"I'll be around in 1996," Holyfield said.

As for Friday night's fight against a man who was the world's premier heavyweight from 1978 to 1985, Holyfield said:

"I didn't want to go into another fight against an old boxer where I come out of it with only a win. I have already fought George Foreman, and just because he lasted 12 rounds people thought he was the greatest thing at 42."

"If I put him (Holmes) out in the first round, he's an old man," they'll say. If it goes 12, 'Holyfield doesn't have enough to take him out.'"

He agreed to fight the winner of the Holmes-Ray Mercer fight because, "I took it for granted Mercer would win. I gave my word I'd fight the winner."

So Holmes won a 12-round decision, and Holyfield found himself in another no-win scenario.

"I don't dwell on the situation and let it frustrate me," Holyfield said. "It's not a situation I like. All I can do is just keep on winning. You've just got to be yourself."

"I'm the type of person who can be a writer's nightmare because there's not much to write about."

He does think that much of what has been written about him has had a lot to do with his image of a fighter toiling in the shadow of others.

"People read that Holyfield doesn't get respect," he said. "They don't hear me say, 'I don't get respect.' It's implied that I don't get respect."

Heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield, right, weighs in at 210 pounds to the delight of his co-trainer Lou Duva Wednesday in Las Vegas.

"I'm happy with who I am, and when it's over I'll go on with my life without missing a beat."

He'll also come out of the fight Friday night with $16 million, which make his total purses for his heavyweight title win over Douglas and three defenses over $50 million.

Sir Charles' Big Day

76ers' Barkley acquitted in Milwaukee, traded to Phoenix

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley and the Philadelphia 76ers brought a year of fusing and feuding to a close with kind words and an understanding that business is business, even in basketball.

Hours after he was acquitted of battery and disorderly conduct charges in Milwaukee on Wednesday, Barkley was traded from his only NBA home to the Phoenix Suns for Jeff Hornacek, Tim Perry and Andrew Lang.

"There are no hard feelings. Business is business. Nothing personal. Just business," Barkley said Wednesday night after arriving at Philadelphia International Airport.

"I have had a great eight years in Philadelphia. They all have been fun. This year was disappointing, but they all have been fun. I'm looking forward to going to Phoenix. It's a great opportunity for me."

Barkley's penchant for criticizing his teammates and his front office have made the majority of his time in Philadelphia controversial. But his performance — including six straight All-Star appearances — has outweighed his shoot-from-the-hip lip with fans until last season.

"I just wanted to win," Barkley said Wednesday of his criticism.

He started the season by accusing the 76ers of racism in roster decisions. In December, he was charged with punching a heckler in the nose in Milwaukee. He severely criticized teammates in a book, and in April he called then-general manager Gene Shue a "clown" and a "caddy" for owner Harold Katz.

In the spring, he said the best way to help the team win an NBA championship was to play elsewhere. He listed Phoenix among his top five choices for a trade.

His former coach — now general manager — Jim Lynam listened to his superstar's advice and went for youth and athleticism in the trade. Barkley, 29, said Lynam called him at the Milwaukee airport to tell him the news.

"I wish them nothing but the best. But I think in all fairness, this is best for everybody. Because I don't think that I can honestly say ... if I had had to come back here next year and they had shopped me around all summer, I don't think I could have been into it," Barkley said.

At a news conference earlier Wednesday, Lynam said the trade was not an easy personal decision.

"You don't spend a number of years together without growing attached," he said. "I'm a Charles Barkley fan, but you have to make some difficult decisions."

Lynam said he thought Barkley's frustrations in the past season would dissolve in Phoenix. "Change will be a very positive thing for Charles at this time."

Even Katz, who rarely publicly responded to Barkley's complaints, said at the news conference announcing the trade, "I like Charles."

Barkley, for once, held his oft-loose tongue.

"Mr. Katz, I'm not going to say anything bad about him. We had our differences and rightfully so. I've done some things he didn't like and he's done some things I didn't like."

Former teammate Armon Gilliam said in today's Philadelphia Inquirer that the trade adds more to the Sixers' balance and chemistry and should work well with coach Doug Moe's team-oriented, motion attack.

"This was a bold, gutsy move for Jimmy Lynam. Hopefully, this will pay off for the team," Gilliam said, adding that he would miss Barkley.

"One thing about Charles: He was colorful. The locker room won't ever be as lively."

The 76ers fans got a tribute from Barkley on Wednesday.

"I always have enjoyed playing in Philadelphia. The fans have always been great to me. You know you're going to get your knuckleheads, but that's part of business," he said.

Charles Barkley, shown in a game during the last NBA season, ended a stormy relationship with the 76ers Wednesday with a trade to Phoenix.

Angels keep Ryan winless

By the Associated Press

A day after the California Angels inducted Nolan Ryan into their hall of fame, he showed why he will eventually be in baseball's Hall of Fame.

Trouble was, Mark Langston pitched even better and left Ryan winless in 11 starts this season.

Langston became the first California pitcher in 11 seasons to throw consecutive shutouts, outdueling Ryan with a two-hitter Wednesday night as the Angels beat the Texas Rangers 2-0.

Ryan (0-3) gave up two runs in the first inning, then retired 15 straight batters and went on to finish for his first complete game since last June 11. He allowed seven hits, struck out eight and walked one.

Still, the loss left Ryan winless in 13 starts since last year, matching the longest drought of his career. Ryan is 314-281 lifetime and has lost 60 times by shutout; Walter Johnson has the most shutout defeats in history, 65.

"Mark Langston pitched a real good game and basically I beat myself in the first inning," Ryan said. "It was one of those games where you didn't have any room for error. We gave them two runs in the first and that was enough."

In other games, Minnesota defeated Kansas City 4-2, Toronto topped Detroit 6-2, Milwaukee trounced Oakland 10-2, Cleveland beat Baltimore 3-2, Boston defeated New York 4-3 and Seattle defeated Chicago 2-1.

Twins 4, Royals 2

Kirby Puckett singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and then made a running catch with the bases loaded to end the game at the Metrodome.

Puckett, the league's leading hitter at .347, singled off Mike Boddicker for a 3-2 lead and Kent Hrbek followed with a sacrifice fly. Kansas City loaded the bases with two outs in the ninth and Jim Eisenreich hit a liner to right-center that Puckett caught in the gap.

American League

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 2

Jack Morris won his fourth straight decision with strong relief help from Duane Ward as Toronto beat Detroit at SkyDome.

The Blue Jays took a 1 1/2-game lead over the Baltimore in the AL East. Toronto and the Orioles had been within a game of each other every day since May 1.

Mariners 2, White Sox 1

Edgar Martinez hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, breaking up a duel between Erik Hanson and Charlie Hough at the Kingdome.

Hough (2-4) lost despite a four-hitter. Omar Vizquel led off the eighth with a single and Martinez, 2 for 19 lifetime against Hough at that point, hit his ninth home run.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Tom Brunansky hit three doubles and Ellis Burks had a two-run homer as Boston won at Fenway Park. The Red Sox have won the first three of a four-game series against the Yankees, all by one run.

Indians 3, Orioles 2

Charles Nagy won his third straight decision and Cleveland made the most of its hits to beat visiting Baltimore.

Nagy (9-3) gave up 13 hits, but walked none and struck out seven. He has pitched all six of the Indians' complete games.

Brewers 10, Athletics 0

Greg Vaughn and Dave Nilsson homered in a six-run first inning and Milwaukee again won big in Oakland. Paul Molitor hit an RBI double in the opening inning, later doubled and drove in three runs.

The Brewers, who beat the Athletics 10-0 a day earlier, tagged

Mike Moore (7-5) for eight runs on nine hits in 2 1-3 innings. Moore is 0-2 in his last three starts with a 15.67 ERA.

Reds, Atlanta win, head into big series

By the Associated Press

No one could say the Atlanta Braves or the Cincinnati Reds were caught looking ahead to their four-game showdown series that begins tonight in the Heart of Dixie.

Both went about their business Wednesday, receiving the latest gifts from bumbling Los Angeles and stumbling San Francisco. The Braves beat the Dodgers 4-3 on Wednesday night to remain 3 1/2 games behind the Reds in the National League West. Earlier, Cincinnati took San Francisco 6-4.

"You find that you're looking for trouble if you look ahead," Braves manager Bobby Cox had advised when asked about the Cincinnati series.

"If we don't win the division, they'll be the team to beat," Cincinnati second baseman Bip Roberts said of the Braves.

Elsewhere, it was Pittsburgh 8, Philadelphia 2; Montreal 5, New York 2, and San Diego 5, Houston 0. St. Louis at Chicago was rained out.

Pirates 8, Phillies 2

Rampaging Pittsburgh hit three homers off former Pirate Don Robinson, and Randy Tomlin beat visiting Philadelphia for his career-high fifth straight decision.

Tomlin (9-3) has followed a miserable May with a miserly June, allowing only four runs in 32 1-3 innings while going 4-0 with a 1.11 ERA. Tomlin was 1-3 last month, but hasn't lost since May 17.

Tomlin allowed 11 hits in 7 1-3 innings, but worked out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the second and had a shutout until leaving in the midst of Philadelphia's two-run eighth.

Expos 5, Mets 2

Dennis Martinez pitched a strong game, and Moises Alou hit a two-run homer as Montreal defeated slumping New York for its fifth victory in six games at Shea Stadium this year.

Martinez (7-5), winning for the second time in three decisions against the Mets, allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked two in 7 1-3 innings. Mel Rojas came on to get the final four outs — three on strikeouts — for his second save, sending the Mets to their 10th loss in 13 games.

Padres 5, Astros 0

Andy Benes pitched a four-hitter and extended his scoreless streak against Houston to 18 innings as San Diego beat the error-plagued Astros.

The Padres scored five unearned runs on three Astros errors. Benes (6-5) struck out eight and walked two to beat Willie Blair (0-1).

The visiting Padres took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a throwing error by shortstop Rafael Ramirez and a sacrifice fly by Benes.

Kevin Ward singled with one out and Kurt Stillwell followed with a single to left. The runners advanced on a fielding error by left fielder Luis Gonzalez and Ward scored on Ramirez's error. Benes then drove in Stillwell with a sacrifice fly to center. In the sixth, Fred McGriff reached on third baseman Ken Caminiti's fielding error, stole second and scored on Oscar Azocar's single.

'Potato kid' shows he's not half-baked in spelling arena

By DANA KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — William Figueroa, the sixth-grader who outspelled Dan Quayle, helped David Letterman make the vice president look like a potato head.

The 12-year-old got $200 to appear on Wednesday night's show and tell a gleeful Letterman about the day Quayle visited a Trenton, N.J., school and had the boy to add an "e" to "potato" after Figueroa spelled it correctly.

"I knew he was wrong," the boy said. "Since he's the vice president, I went and put the 'e' on and he said, 'That's right, now go sit down.'"

"Afterwards I went to the dictionary and there was potato like I spelled it. I showed the reporters the book and they were all laughing about what a fool he was."

Letterman asked Figueroa if he thought Quayle could spell "re-elected." The boy looked uncomfortable and didn't answer. He had a "no comment" when asked by Letterman who he would vote for — if he were old enough to vote.

Quayle, in an interview Wednesday with KRON-TV of San Francisco, said: "I should have caught the mistake on that spelling bee card. But as Mark Twain once said, 'You should never trust a man who has only one way to spell a word.'"

Officials at The Mark Twain Museum in Hannibal, Mo., couldn't find the quote, nor could experts at The Mark Twain Project at the University of California at Berkeley. But a reference to a similar quote attributed to Twain appeared in a 1990 book by humor consultant Malcolm Kushner.

Quayle had visited the Luis Munoz Rivera School in Trenton, N.J., on Monday to promote the Weed and Seed program, which uses federal and state money to take back neighborhoods from drug dealers.

Trenton Mayor Douglas Palmer said that the flashcard had been written by an adult involved in the after-school program, not a teacher. He also said he thought the vice president's advance team had approved the cards.

"It was an honest mistake. There was no intent to trip up anybody," said the mayor, a Democrat.

Quayle spokesman David Beckwith said the vice president's advance people had planned to screen the cards, but Quayle grabbed them before they got the chance.

"We're not blaming it on anybody. He realized he should have picked up the mistake," Beckwith said. "He is a very forward-looking person. He sorts out what he can't do anything about and moves on. This falls in that category."

On Wednesday, as Figueroa waited in Trenton for a limousine to take him to the taping of "Late Night with David Letterman" at NBC studios, he said he sympathized with Quayle.

"He probably feels embarrassed about that, probably mad a little bit," he said. "But I hope he can take it. He's always been taking it. Everybody's always been making fun of him since he became vice president."

Heir slain in tragic tale

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Bruce Bryan was an alcoholic living at a garbage dump when he inherited nearly $1 million in January.

The 49-year-old got his teeth fixed, made some investments and moved with a friend to a secluded home in the Ozarks, flashing $100 bills and telling others about his fortune.

On June 2, Bryan was found shot to death in his locked home.

Authorities have ruled out only suicide in trying to unravel the tragic end to his rags-to-riches tale.

"The money became a monster. All he did was worry about it," said Craig Henry Rogers, Bryan's former housemate and an early suspect in his death. "The more he tried to deal with it, the more he drank."

Bryan was killed with his own shotgun three or four days before his body was found, investigators said. Nothing was missing from the house, and $400 was in his wallet, police said.

People who knew him in California said Bryan had spent the last few years drinking heavily around Mammoth Lakes, a Sierra Nevada ski town 250 miles north of Los Angeles. He slept under culverts until a friend gave him a trailer to park at the Mono County dump, where he collected scrap metal for money.

In January, Bryan was awarded about $900,000 from a lawsuit his parents had filed against a company that mined their property near Bishop, Calif. His parents died in 1986 and 1987, before the award was collected.

Bryan and Rogers, friends for about five years, traveled across the country and in March settled in Missouri. Bryan reportedly paid $90,000 in cash for a remote Ozark County farmhouse near Isabella, 57 miles southeast of Springfield.

Word of his fortune spread quickly. "He would tell you he had all this money. When he went to his pockets to pay for anything he'd roll out $100 bills," Ozark County Sheriff Max Vaughan said.

Bryan and Rogers fought often and Bryan asked the sheriff's department for protection and inquired about hiring his own bodyguard, Vaughan said.

But Rogers said it was Bryan who became violent — when he drank.

"The more I tried to reach him, the more he backed away and resented it," Rogers said, adding, "He was one of the kindest-hearted people I knew until he drank."

In April, Bryan destroyed a will naming Rogers the main beneficiary and executor of his estate and asked him to move out, but he also gave Rogers $100,000, Rogers and Vaughan said.

Rogers, who left on May 2, was an initial suspect, but Missouri State Highway Patrol investigators determined that he was on the West Coast when Bryan was killed, Vaughan said. "We don't have a good suspect," Sgt. Carl Watson said.

Rogers is in jail in California, awaiting transfer to Missouri on a charge of being a felon in possession of a firearm; he was convicted of drug possession last year. He said that he learned of Bryan's death from police and that he is not sure why Bryan cut him out of the will.
