Fish tales

Pampans Lonnie Johnson, left, and Charley Fletcher clean one of six yellow flathead catfish while perched Thursday in chairs at Canadian and Tyng. They caught the behemoth fish Thursday morning at Lake Meredith. Fishing enthusiasts may note the weather forecast calls for a partly cloudy and cooler Saturday with a high in the mid 80s and a slight chance of thunderstorms.

AIDS vaccine works in test with chimps

Study reports success

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chimpanzees inoculated with an experimental vaccine were protected against the AIDS virus even when they were injected with virus-contaminated blood cells, researchers say in a study published today.

Patricia Fultz of the University of Alabama in Birmingham, lead author in a report in the journal Science, said the chimps that received the AIDS vaccine remained free of viral infection for up to a year after injections with contaminated blood.

"This proves we're on the right track," she said.

The study tested how effective an AIDS vaccine would be against a virus that is contained within blood cells. The vaccine in an earlier study was tested against free-floating virus, which are virus particles in the plasma of the blood, but not within the blood cells. The human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, that causes AIDS is known to be infective in both forms.

"Many people felt this was a stronger challenge for the vaccine because infected cells have the potential of producing much more virus," Fultz said in an interview.

The research involved three chimpanzees inoculated with a vaccine and then injected with HIV-infected blood cells.

Fultz said the vaccine used mimics the molecules found on the outside of the HIV virus and on the outside of cells that are infected with the virus.

After inoculation, all three chimps were injected with doses of blood cells from a chimp that has an HIV infection.

Researchers then tested the three animals periodically to see if they developed HIV.

One chimp died of heart failure, not associated with AIDS, after seven months, said Fultz. Tissue samples taken from this chimp were cultured for six weeks and there was no evidence of viral infection, she said.

The other two chimps were found to be immune to the HIV virus for a full 12 months.

"This tells us that the vaccine candidates with which we are working have the potential to protect against both forms of virus and that we don't need to revise our vaccine at this point or try additional types," said Fultz.

She said that using infected blood cells is a good test for what happens when drug users share dirty needles. Patients with HIV typically leave a residue of infected blood in a needle. A person sharing such an unsterilized needle then could put these infected blood cells into his own bloodstream, possibly leading to an HIV infection.

A primary target of the AIDS virus is the white blood cell, or lymphocyte, that normally circulates in the blood stream. The virus links with a molecule on the lymphocyte surface and then moves inside the cell. The virus can also do this with macrophages, another type of blood cell.

"This tells us that the vaccine candidates with which we are working have the potential to protect against both forms of virus and that we don't need to revise our vaccine at this point or try additional types."

- Patricia Fultz
AIDS researcher

Although the new test has the promise of an AIDS vaccine, Fultz said much more work needs to be done before it can be tested in humans.

She noted, for instance, that one of the chimps that was free of HIV for a year was later injected with cell-free virus and developed an HIV infection.

"This suggests the immunity isn't long lasting and indicates that frequent booster immunizations may have to be given," said Fultz. "This would not be good, particularly in Third World countries where it can be difficult to give vaccinations."

The researcher said the vaccine also needs to be tested to see if it prevents sexual transmission of HIV.

"We need to determine if this type of vaccine will generate an immune response sufficient to protect against vaginal challenge," said Fultz. "This is probably the major mode of transmission throughout the world - heterosexual intercourse."

Other co-authors of the study were from the National Cancer Institute, the Institut Pasteur in Paris, Duke University in North Carolina, New York University Medical Center and the Transgene Co. in France.

Commission finds no evidence of POWs

PECHORA, Russia (AP) - Russian and U.S. investigators said today they found no evidence that an American prisoner of war was held in a Stalin-era labor camp in northern Russia, but they will continue the search for American POWs.

The Russian side of a joint commission on POWs and MIAs said it did turn up documents showing ethnic Germans had been held at Camp No. 5, one of 10 prisons in the remote Pechora region where Soviet leaders sent dissidents as well as criminals.

"We found no evidence of the presence of an American," William Davnie, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, said at a news conference.

"But work will continue and our report will be made public only after everything has been analyzed."

A nine-man delegation from the U.S.-Russian commission traveled to Pechora on Thursday after President Boris Yeltsin disclosed that American POWs imprisoned in the Soviet Union might still be held.

The delegation said it was investigating reports that an American pilot, going by the name David Marken, was being held at Camp No. 5, in the once-closed area known as PL-350.

A private American group searching for POWs, the Ark Project, said it believed the man being sought was 1st Lt. Robert Martin, who was taken prisoner by North Korea during the Korean War.

The U.S.-Russian delegation met local officials Thursday and today, and toured the camp outside Pechora, a town of 70,000 people 900 miles northeast of Moscow.

After examining prison documents and interviewing prison officials and inmates, the delegation said 23 people named Marken or something similar had been held at the camp, but none fit the missing man's description.

Asked whether the commission had a photograph of Marken, Davnie paused for several seconds before saying, "No ... not yet."

The POW commission, headed by Russian Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov and former U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon, said in March it had found no evidence of American servicemen from the Vietnam or Korean wars in the former Soviet Union.

It did produce death certificates of eight Americans held in Soviet prison camps after World War II. It was not known whether they were U.S. servicemen or Nazi sympathizers.

Russian spokesman Col. Anatoly Volkov said there was new evidence that ethnic Germans had been imprisoned at the camp.

"The information ... will require additional research," Volkov said. He gave no other details.

Josef Stalin imprisoned thousands of Soviet citizens and others he believed were opposed to his war effort against Nazi Germany.

Journalists were not allowed to accompany the delegation when it toured the prison on Thursday. Soldiers, inmates and prison officials all said there were no Americans present.

"We don't have any Americans here," said Maj. Gen. Leonid Khamluk, the military chief in the region, a network of labor camps built before and during World War II.

"We heard some rumors that somebody was around here, but nobody has ever seen him. And I don't believe them," said 18-year-old soldier Alexander Babenko, posted at a guardhouse overlooking the campyard.

The camp, which has more than 200 prisoners, is surrounded by a high fence topped by barbed wire. It contains several buildings, including a hospital, barracks and small factories where prisoners make furniture.

The crumbling concrete road around the camp had been swept clean, and the few prisoners allowed outside wore clean, black uniforms.

Vladimir Alexandrov, a 38-year-old convicted burglar serving a four-year term, said camp officials ordered inmates to clean the grounds in the previous two days, evidently to put a good face forward to the Americans.

Alexandrov said he has never seen an American at the camp.

In Israel Thursday, former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev denied he knew American POWs from the Vietnam War were transferred to the Soviet Union, as Yeltsin claimed. "I know nothing of the existence of such facts that Yeltsin was talking about," Gorbachev said at a news conference.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in Washington that the investigators had received information that an American POW might have been at the camp "as recently as 18 months ago."

But Secretary of State James A. Baker said Thursday night, "We have not found any solid evidence there are live Americans there, or for instance, Americans from the Vietnam War."

Court limits power to require parade permits

WASHINGTON (AP) - A divided Supreme Court today limited the power of local communities to require permits for parades and rallies.

The court, by a 5-4 vote, ruled that a permit law in Forsyth County, Ga., unlawfully hampers free-speech rights.

The court said the Forsyth County law, prompted by tense racial confrontations between civil rights marchers and counter-demonstrators, gives too much discretion to a county administrator to decide what a permit fee will cost.

It was not immediately clear how broad a practical impact the permit case will have in other communities. But permit fees commonly are charged for parades and rallies.

Writing for the court in the permit case, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said, "The Forsyth County ordinance contains more than the possibility of censorship through uncontrolled discretion. The ordinance often requires that the fee be based on the content of the speech."

The law gives the administrator the authority to set a permit fee based on the anticipated cost of police protection and administrative time.

"The fee assessed will depend on the administrator's measure of the amount of hostility likely to be created by the speech based on its content," Blackmun said. "Those wishing to express views unpopular with bottle-throwers, for example, may have to pay more for their permit."

Blackmun was joined by Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony M. Kennedy and David H. Souter.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas dissent-

ed. They said the court's majority should have limited its inquiry to whether fees of up to $1,000 for parade and rally fees are valid.

"The court's analysis ... rests on the assumption that the county will (impose fees) based on opposition crowds," Rehnquist wrote for the four. "There is nothing in the record to support this assumption."

Blackmun wrote, "Speech cannot be financially burdened, any more than it can be punished or banned, simply because it might offend a hostile mob."

While paying for police protection is an important government responsibility, he said, "it does not justify a content-based permit fee."

The Forsyth County ordinance was enacted in response to a series of civil rights marches in 1987. After some 75 marchers were pelted with rocks and bottles, a second march a week later was held by some 25,000 supporters. Officers from 10 law enforcement agencies provided protection.

The Nationalist Movement, a white supremacist group, challenged the ordinance.

Arguing the case before the justices last March, Nationalist Movement President Richard Barrett said the ordinance amounts to a "heckler's veto" of free speech.

Today, the court agreed.

Ranger reviews plans for lake

Improvement plans and alternatives for Lake McClellan were reviewed Thursday evening by U.S. Forest Service District Ranger Reggie Blackwell with the Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. board of directors at the Gray County Courthouse.
 Blackwell said there is $100,000 budgeted for work this year and another $100,000 tentatively budgeted for the 1993 fiscal year, with that funding to be matched equally by other sources in grant funding or labor and/or equipment donations.
 He said funding would collectively total $400,000 through the 1993 budget year.

Soil Conservation Service is finalizing plans for two silt detention dams to be erected at the lake for the dredging project, which will include the main lake pool area behind the dam and channels on each side of the lake, Blackwell said.
 The dams will be located on draws east and northwest of the concession building. Following dredging, the silt deposit areas will be seeded with grass.

 Blackwell reported that $22,000 in replacement facilities including tables, fire rings, and grills have been ordered and when installed will refurbish 40 for the lake area campsites. He also said a shelter is being designed to accommodate public functions and will be located west of the concession building and near a fenced storage area, which he said will be dismantled and removed.
 Another plan is to close the west entry to the lake and convert the existing concession building into an "interpretive center" and construct a

Public hearing on Chapter II set Tuesday
 Pampa Independent School District is holding its yearly public hearing for Chapter II funding at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the Carver Center board room, 321 W. Albert.
 "Chapter II is a federally funded program for staff development," Arlene Gibson, elementary curriculum coordinator, said. "The meeting is for those who want input into how the Chapter II funds are spent to help student and staff development.

 Funding for Chapter II will be the topic of the public hearing. Input from parents, teachers and administrators on the funding is welcome. Funding is used for support services, supplies, materials, teacher training and equipment.
 After reviewing alternative funding possibilities, Blackwell commended the board and Gray County for work that has been completed at the lake which he says "looks better now than it has in years."
 Lewis and Elizabeth Meers, co-chairs of the May 30 Gray County 90th anniversary celebration, reported the event a success, noting an estimated 2,000 people visited the lake that day for festivities.
 The next meeting of the board of directors is set for 7 p.m. July 30 at the Gray County Courthouse. The public is invited to attend.

WEBBERVILLE (AP) — Lee Otis Carter said the Lord gave him the idea of re-creating the journey his ancestors made as freed slaves in 1872 from Webberville to St. John Colony near Lockhart.

The community of 100 was founded by 14 families who formed a wagon train bound for land and freedom.

The first time he made the trip from Webberville to St. John Colony by horseback in 1987, Carter said he cried to think of the hardships his ancestors had endured so their descendants could live on their own land as free men and women.

"It was hard for me, but it was more difficult for them. They didn't have the conveniences I had," he said.

"They were in wagons and used oxen. They had to cross the Colorado River. The first time we made the trip, it brought tears to my eyes, because it meant something to me to find out what they had to go through," Carter said Tuesday.

In his ancestors' memory, the 44-year-old preacher organizes an annual Juneteenth trail ride — even if he must ride alone. Last year, Carter said, two riders joined him.

The trail ride winds up Saturday at St. John Colony's 118th annual Juneteenth picnic.

"This is very sacred. It's not a party," he said of the holiday celebration. "It's a day of knowing what the Lord has blessed us with. It is always something to remind us of why we stick together and why we need to keep our little community."

For Carter and other blacks, Juneteenth is a celebration steeped in jubilation and a sobering appreciation of the sacrifices of previous generations. They remember what their ancestors endured in slavery and the belated arrival of the news of liberation to this state.

Slaves in Texas learned of their freedom when Union Army Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger landed at Galveston on June 19, 1865 — two years after President Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation.

Granger's announcement, a message of joy for 250,000 slaves then in Texas, was laced with caveats for those who had known nothing but labor without compensation from childhood.

After emancipation, many former slaves felt the urge to move — to find land of their own and to establish lives independent of former masters, according to historical accounts.

It was this movement that led to the creation of St. John Colony in 1872. Among those founding families was a group led by the Rev. J.H. Winn Sr., a Missionary Baptist minister in Webberville, in eastern Travis County.

By the time he chose the land for St. John Colony, Winn had traveled about 60 miles through Central Texas searching for the right place, according to the pink granite marker in front of St. John Colony Missionary Baptist Church.

Thelma Franks, 71, a St. John Colony resident who takes part in the community's Juneteenth celebration every year, had ancestors in that group. Her grandfather N.W. Hill and grandmother Nellie Hill told the younger generations stories of slavery and emancipation.

"His parents had been sold to Old Man Hill (in Central Texas). That's how they got their name from the old master," said Franks. She also recalls her grandparents telling of being served milk from a trough.

But the Hills were better off than most slaves in that they were literate, Franks said.

"When they heard about (emancipation), they were glad. They could read, and they read about it. After freedom, they left," Franks said.

Ola Lee Haynes Sneed, 76, said her grandparents also were among the community's first settlers. They brought painful memories of slavery to St. John with them.

"When my grandmother was 7 years old, they used to make her take care of the babies. She would get tired and take poison ivy or poison oak and put it on the baby. Then they would wonder what was wrong with the baby and take it away from her," Sneed said. "Quite naturally, she did get tired. I'm a great-grandmother and I get tired."

Soon after the business of establishing a settlement was under way, the former slaves began the tradition of celebrating their day of freedom.

Preparations then and now begin the night before the picnic, when men gather to barbecue meat. The barbecue menu has become central to the celebration, because it is the same food the slaves ate in their day, according to a history of Juneteenth published by the Anacostia Museum of African American History and Culture at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

Skellytown, Allison to receive advanced phone service

Southwestern Bell Telephone customers in Allison and Skellytown will gain access to an advanced telecommunications network when Southwestern Bell converts its central office in these two towns to a new digital switching system June 27, said Gary Stevens, area manager.

The new switching system will serve 273 Allison telephone customers in the 375 exchange and 383 Skellytown telephone customers in the 848 exchange.

Allison and Skellytown will receive the telephone digital switching as part of an agreement announced in November by the Texas Public Utility Commission and Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Southwestern Bell is installing the switches as part of an accelerated program designed to help boost the Texas economy and provide customer benefits worth more than $1.2 billion through 1994.

"The negotiated settlement was a product of months of intense discussion among the PUC staff, Southwestern Bell and 23 separate intervening groups," said Stevens. "The agreement provided an incentive to build a telecommunications network that should attract new businesses and jobs to Texas without increasing telecommunications costs to the Texas ratepayers."

Stevens explained that digital technology enhances a community's ability to retain and attract new business as well as improved telecommunications services.

New services made possible by digital switching include One-Plus Easy Access to long-distance carriers and Custom Calling features such as call forwarding, call waiting, speed calling and three-way calling.

Stevens said another benefit of digital technology is cost-effectiveness in terms of space requirements and maintenance. Computers in the system allow it to perform millions of switching functions each second, he said, adding that the system can diagnose itself, and, in many cases, correct a problem before customers are affected.

Once the cutovers are completed, Allison and Skellytown customers will have access to their primary long-distance telephone company of choice.

(AP Photo) Paramedics rush Lubbock police veteran Sgt. Kenneth Fowler to the hospital Thursday after Fowler was shot and killed while investigating a shooting at a north Lubbock apartment.

Co-workers remember Fowler as willing to go 'beyond the call'

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Lubbock police veteran Kenneth Fowler could have retired from the force 10 years ago.

But the 59-year-old sergeant decided to put in one more year.

On Thursday, the 36-year police veteran was making a call on a shooting as he had done hundreds of times before when he was shot and killed at a Lubbock apartment.

Mental patient James Kevin Voyles, 35, has been charged with capital murder in the death of James Edwin Haliburton, 48, a part-time community aide for the Lubbock Regional Mental Health Mental Retardation Center.

Fowler's death marked the first time a Lubbock police officer has been killed on duty since Jack Stevens was shot by a robbery suspect Feb. 9, 1973.

The shootings apparently erupted after Voyles walked out of a doctor's appointment and Haliburton went to check on him, police said.

Police were called to the Moonflower Apartments early Thursday by neighbors who reported hearing gunfire. Upon arrival at 9:26 a.m., officers found Haliburton laying between two apartments that faced each other.

Fowler and officer George Arce were covering Haliburton's body with plastic when Voyles apparently opened his apartment door behind the officers and fired several shots at Fowler, said Lubbock police chief Don Bridgers.

"There was nothing they could do," Bridgers said. "Our men were ambushed."

Arce escaped injury. Justice of the Peace Jim Hansen set bond for Voyles at $500,000 for the murder charge and denied bond on the capital murder count.

During his arraignment, Voyles seemed disoriented, repeatedly saying he did not understand the charges against him. When it was further explained that he was charged with killing a police officer, he responded, "Oh, OK."

Voyles finally surrendered to police after a two-hour standoff during which he fired several random shots through the south wall of his apartment.

No other injuries were reported. Fowler was known affectionately among colleagues as "Growler Fowler" because he was gruff on the outside but a teddy bear on the inside, said police officer Michelle Fletcher.

"He loved his job and would help any new officer," Miss Fletcher said.

A letter from Lubbock resident John Hewlett to the editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal that was published June 7 thanked Fowler.

In the letter, Hewlett says Fowler responded to a call involving the death of his son.

"When officer Fowler found out the deceased was my son, he held on to me. He talked to me and encouraged me to yell, scream or whatever it took if it would ease my pain. He even offered to let me hit him if that would help!" Hewlett's letter said. "... I thank God officer Fowler was the one who responded to my call."

Fowler, who joined the Lubbock police force in 1956, had been eligible to retire since 1982.

"He was talking about retiring this year, but then he decided to hang on for another year," said police Sgt. Don Davidson, who had known Fowler for nearly 30 years. "He was doing his job and that was it. That's the way he would have looked at it."

Officials at the Lubbock Regional MHMR Center say Haliburton had served as a community service aide since January 1992.

"Mr. Haliburton was a valued member of our center family and we all mourn his death," MHMR officials said in a statement.

Haliburton's "responsibilities included providing individual attention, support and socialization to persons receiving services from the center," the statement said.

Officials refused to comment about any treatment Voyles may have received at the MHMR center.

The Lubbock County district attorney's office said Voyles had been arrested in 1974 on a burglary charge. "The case was filed as a misdemeanor theft and Voyles received four months' probation and a fine of $200," said Steve Holmes, chief administrator for the district attorney's office.

Neighbors of Voyles, who lived alone, say the man's behavior often was strange.

"He would pace outside his house and wear a heavy jacket in the heat of the day," said Joe Hereford, who lived directly behind Voyles.

"I never let my kids go near him," Hereford said. "I was afraid of him."

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Bureaucracy alive and kicking in Rio

The "Earth" Summit in Rio de Janeiro has spewed forth one of the worst forms of pollution known to man: bureaucracy. Under the auspices of the United Nations - that gaggle of governments always eager to stick its hands into the pockets of U.S. taxpayers - the world will have to suffer from the new United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development.

Note that word "sustainable." It automatically limits economic growth. If the summeiteers in Rio were serious about a clean environment rather than about increasing the power of UN globocrats, they would have chosen a name such as the Commission on Clean Capitalism. For that is the true challenge: How to stoke the fire of capitalist production to promote growth as well as a clean environment simultaneously. The two go together. Capitalism produces the technologies to make our lives more abundant and more clean.

By contrast, socialism - i.e., letting bureaucrats run the economy - is the dirtiest economic system ever devised. The ex-Soviet Union and Eastern Europe continue to suffer from the pollution left behind by decades of socialism. Communist China remains a major polluter, now moving haltingly away from socialism. Mexico and Brazil also have suffered decades of pollution and socialism, only now trying to bring forth capitalism and a clean environment.

Until it joined in supporting the Commission on Sustainable Development, the Bush administration wisely shunned most of the hare-brained schemes to come out at Rio, but it couldn't resist supporting the new commission. Therein lies a contradiction. The Bush administration has courageously continued the U.S. policy of withholding US taxpayers' money from the UN Fund for Population Activities because the fund assists Communist China's infanticide and "one-child-per-family" edicts. But the new Commission on Sustainable Growth will work bloodied-hand-in-bloodied hand with UNFPA. Can President Bush not see the contradiction?

Also this week in Rio, the United States bore the brunt of ridicule from Europeans, Japanese, and others for not signing the unneeded, Luddite treaty on emissions of carbon dioxide. Part of the impetus for this treaty is ignorance, part envy. The Europeans and Japanese know that the United States remains the world's leader in technological innovation, surpassing even Japan. When we cut taxes again the U.S. economy will boom as never before, becoming an even more formidable competitor.

So the current U.S. fiscal crisis does have one good aspect: There's no money, other than the $150 million President Bush has pledged to waste on forestation, for expensive, bizarre global schemes. U.S. citizens can't pay billions more and shouldn't be dictated to by a group of enviro-socialists gathered in Rio or at that tower of babble, the UN building in New York City.

OFF TO THE RACES

How Dr. Kessler protects us

On the morning of May 6, agents of the Food and Drug Administration burst into the Tahoma Clinic in Kent, Wash. King County police officers, guns drawn, led the way. They carried a search warrant authorizing them to seize everything in sight, especially victims.

A reporter for the Seattle Post-Intelligencer covered the story. Julie Gallegos, a medical assistant at the clinic, said the officers "came in with their guns pointed at us and told us to freeze." Receptionist Marge Murphy said the FDA agents were wearing flak vests. "They broke through the main door yelling, and one of them pointed a gun in my face."

Dr. Jonathan Wright, owner of the clinic, arrived a few minutes after 9 o'clock. FDA agents permitted him to make one telephone call to his attorney. Then, pursuant to a search warrant obtained by FDA agent Spencer Morrison, they began their search and seizure.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer editorially termed the raid a "Gestapo-like tactic" and questioned the FDA's motivation. It was a good question. In August 1991, Dr. Wright brought suit against the FDA for seizure of his supply of an injectable B-vitamin complex. On Sept. 23, 1991, FDA agents began searching the clinic's trash for evidence of vitamin products imported from Germany. They found packaging from the hateful vials.

The search warrant authorized the agents to seize all drugs labeled in a foreign language and to confiscate all literature describing or promoting the subject compounds.

The FDA went further to seize all documents, "including patient records," that related to dispensing the vitamin products. The agents were to haul away "address books, correspondence, diaries, rolodexes, telephone toll records, telephone messages and message books, and such other records as reflect communications" between the clinic and its suppliers.

A final catchall provision of the warrant covered confiscation of "all additional records, whether they be in the form of documentary records, magnetic disks, hard disks, or maintained in any other form." Just as the raid began, a computer specialist arrived to train employees. Agents ordered her to dismantle the computer so the hard drive could be removed and taken away.

A particular object of the FDA's raid was a diagnostic device called Interro. Dr. Wright uses the device to identify allergens that affect his patients by measuring the skin's response to various substances. He finds the method easier on patients than the traditional method of pricking the skin. The FDA has not approved the device.

The FDA's position is that it is protecting the public from itself by seizing vitamins and other food supplements that are provided by doctors practicing holistic medicine. Dr. Wright received his M.D. from the University of Michigan after undergraduate studies at Harvard. He is 47 years old. He practices holistic medicine, a field in which reliance is placed upon compounds drawn from natural materials.

In the agency's view, such substances are probably ineffective and may be unsafe. It is the FDA's duty to see that no unauthorized drugs or medicines are made available to anyone except through controlled studies.

In this fashion the FDA protects 4 million victims of Alzheimer's disease by preventing them from obtaining a palliative drug called THA/Cognex. Overwhelming evidence demonstrates that the drug works for many patients. In a tiny minority of test subjects, it has caused an adverse reaction in the liver, but the reactions were never fatal and were easily reversed.

Dr. Wright's 1,200 patients obviously believed his holistic methods help THEM. Hundreds of Alzheimer victims say the same thing of THA/Cognex: The drug may not help every victim, but it clearly helps THEM. Such evidence is not "merely anecdotal." It is solid evidence, but the FDA looks upon the victims with a cruel and indifferent eye.

I hold that in a free country, the government has no business drawing guns upon people who want to take or prescribe "unauthorized" vitamins. Our bodies are our own. They do not belong to Dr. David Kessler, commissioner of the FDA. His powers ought to be strictly limited to protecting us from fraud, contaminated foods and truly dangerous drugs.

Dr. Kessler's view is that he needs still more sweeping powers of enforcement. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has sponsored legislation to that effect. The senator would protect us from "worthless" products. Some of us might prefer to be protected from worthless commissioners.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 19, the 171st day of 1992. There are 195 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 19, 1953, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg - convicted of passing U.S. atomic secrets to the Soviet Union - were executed at Sing Sing Prison in Ossining, N.Y.

On this date:

In 1586, English colonists sailed from Roanoke Island, N.C., after failing to establish England's first permanent settlement in America.

In 1862, slavery was outlawed in U.S. territories.

In 1910, Father's Day was celebrated for the first time, in Spokane, Wash.

In 1917, during World War I, King George V ordered the British royal family to dispense with German titles and surnames. The family took the name "Windsor."

In 1934, the Federal Communications Commission was created.

Perot is something else!

The primaries and the polls all said the same thing:

Voters have given more than enough votes to President George Bush and Gov. Bill Clinton, but they have given their hearts to Ross Perot.

Those still "undecided" explain that they don't yet know what Perot stands for.

I'm not sure what difference pre-election utterances make. Any politician is generous with promises before election; what he says and what he does are only somewhat related.

But Perot's public responses do not appear calculated; certainly they do not sound dictated by slick political strategists.

So let's see how much we can tell of the man by his recent hip-shooting responses to some of the tough questions.

"Are you willing to repeat: 'Read my lips, no new taxes?'"

Perot: "I would never say anything as stupid as that. I will raise taxes only if all else fails and only after exhaustive consultation with the American people."

Paul Harvey

Then he added, "Our whole tax code needs to be overhauled. It's like an old inner tube with a thousand patches."

Asked if he has a platform, he said, "I have three priorities: to help our country get the budget under control, to reform the tax system and to make education work."

Confronted with a caustic comment by Marilyn Quayle, Perot said that his potential rivals "are hiding behind their women."

Asked if he would impose a moral code for his business associates: "If your wife can't trust you, how can I?"

Asked about capital punishment, he called it "a necessary evil."

Then you are in favor of capital punishment?

"No. I did not say that. I am opposed to capital punishment. But when I see senseless drive-by shootings of innocent people I realize that getting rid of such people is necessary."

Abortion?

"That choice should be left to a woman, her God and her doctor, and Ross Perot and the federal government should stay altogether out of it."

While Ross Perot may be no politician, he is nonetheless outmaneuvering those who are. To co-chair his campaign he has selected Ed Rollins, who managed Reagan, and Ham Jordan, who managed Carter.

"But they will not be my handlers," he says.

Nor, apparently, will anybody.

Accused of trying to buy the White House, Perot said, "That's right. I am trying to buy the White House and give it back to the people because they can't afford it."

I guess the bottom line is that Americans in general are disgusted with politicians in general, and Ross Perot is indeed something else.

Bush and his most-favored China

You might not have noticed that the octogenarian thugs who run China demonstrated affirmative change in the past year. It escaped my comprehension as well, but our leader - thank heaven for his phenomenal powers of perception - apparently detected it.

President Bush recently announced that he planned to renew China's trade privileges. This is in keeping with his policy of using friendly persuasion and quiet diplomacy to induce China's leaders to honor the fundamental rules that civilized nations live by. He adopted this policy after the tyrants crushed a pro-democracy demonstration in Beijing in June 1989, murdering hundreds of protesters in the process.

Bush said he knew that friendly persuasion and quiet diplomacy would work because he was the U.S. liaison in Beijing for a year and had played tennis with the Chinese and bicycled among them. Having studied the culture, he said, "I'm familiar with China." He told us this dozens of times.

Millions of interested persons, myself included, have not seen any signs that the Bush policy is working. Indeed, to the unpracticed eye, it appears the opposite is the case. To demonstrate this, I will cite just a few examples of things the Chinese have done that confound the unskilled observer:

- They sold chemicals used in the manufacture of nuclear weapons and missile fuel to Iraq, sold a nuclear-capable ballistic missile to Pakistan, sold a nuclear reactor capable of producing weapons-grade material to Algeria.
- They provided missile technology to Syria and

Joseph Spear

Iran.

- They sold goods produced by slave labor to the United States.

- They beat and detained scores of dissidents and prevented them from leaving the country. They harassed foreign journalists and destroyed their notes and film.

All that was prior to November of last year, when Bush saw fit to honor the Chinese with a visit by Secretary of State James Baker - more friendly persuasion and quiet diplomacy, probably. Baker squeezed from his hosts verbal agreements to abate their missile sales, sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and quit stealing U.S. copyrights and patents. Bush hailed these things as "worthwhile" and added, "I think when all of it's out, people will think some progress is made."

Whereupon the Chinese did the following:

- Refused to abide by their promise to protect American patents and copyrights until the United States threatened to double tariffs of Chinese textiles, clothing, shoes, beer and electronics.

- Attempted to reinterpret their promise to limit exports of missile technology to the Third World.

- Raided the Beijing office of Washington Post reporter Lena Sun, confiscated her notebooks and personal papers and temporarily detained her husband and 2-year-old son.

- Exploded a megaton nuclear bomb that was five times larger than any previously tested.

- Arrested citizens who tried to demonstrate in Tiananmen Square, site of the 1989 massacre, and beat and detained Japanese, U.S., Canadian and German journalists who were present.

It was after all this that Bush announced he intended to extend China's Most Favored Nation trade status. Clearly, he has discerned some change that is beyond our ken.

That ought to be a lesson to the amateurs, myself included, who leaped to the conclusion that China will not change as long as the gerontocrats are in charge and that the best thing the U.S. could do is stand up for principle and tell them that formal relations will cease until they honor their people's basic right to participate in their own governing.

That's what the uninitiated would do, myself included, and the Chinese would never come around and we'd have to make do without their beer, clothing, shoes and toys. That's why we must put our faith in leaders who know more than we.

We should say a little prayer of thanks every day that we elected a man with such incredible perception and knowledge.

Consumer group warns of credit card secrets

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Credit card shoppers need to check more than the interest rate and annual fee before signing up, according to a consumer group that says a "complex maze of secret billing tactics and fees" cost credit users $8.5 billion a year.

The tactics and fees also drive up effective interest rates on some credit card loans to 30 percent or more, the Bankcard Holders of America, a non-profit group based in Reston, Va., said Thursday.

Its study, prepared with help from Abraham Ravid, a professor of finance at Columbia and Rutgers universities, attacked a variety of common industry practices.

But the American Bankers Association, the nation's biggest banking trade group, rejected the criticism, saying all the practices labeled deceptive and secret are fully and clearly disclosed in literature soliciting credit card applications and on the applications themselves.

"The whole tone of the study ... is very disturbing and very unfair," said Virginia Stafford of the association. "If people don't read the information on the application, they may not be aware of it. But to imply it's secretive is very unfair."

Bankcard Holders, which examined the terms offered by 35 card issuers serving more than 60 percent of the credit card market, was particularly critical of what it called "phantom grace periods."

Most card issuers offer users 25 days to pay a bill before interest charges are incurred. If the customer makes only a partial payment, however, the grace period usually is eliminated for new purchases until the account is paid in full.

Thus a customer who pays half of a $1,000 balance and then makes $1,000 in purchases could wind up with an interest charge on the next bill applied to both the $500 old balance and the $1,000 in new purchases.

The group also: —Condemned fees, averaging $2.50, on top of the interest charged for cash advances.

—Criticized what it called nuisance fees, which average $11 for exceeding a card's credit limit and $8 for making a payment late.

—Warned that some banks were beginning to charge interest starting on the date of purchase rather than on the date the purchase is posted to the customer's account.

"The complex maze of secret billing tactics and fees ... means that millions of consumers are ... paying effective rates of 30 percent or more," said Gerri Detweiler, director of the consumer group. "This is out-and-out loansharking of the worst kind."

For instance, a customer taking the average cash advance of $300 and paying a $2.50 fee plus interest of 18.5 percent will end up paying an effective interest rate of 33 percent if the advance is repaid with the next bill, the study said.

Also some banks have reduced their minimum payments to 2 percent of the amount owed, in effect stretching repayment out to longer than 30 years and greatly increasing total interest costs.

The group calculated that the practices it criticized cost card users $8.5 billion last year — $3.5 billion from misleading ways of calculating interest, $284 million for cash advance fees, $1.11 billion for late fees and over-the-limit fees, $1.7 billion for interest charged from the purchase date rather than the posting date and $2 billion through the reduction of minimum payments.

Stafford said the consumer group's $8.5 billion figure was "pulled from the air" and accused it of trying to confuse consumers as a way to drum up business for its list of low-interest and no-fee cards, for which it charges $4.

She said the association supports disclosure of credit card terms and encourages customers to shop around.

(AP Photo) A woman is restrained by a friend as police officers converge during a period of unrest following a cancelled music and comedy concert late Thursday in Boston, Ma. Eleven people were taken to nearby Massachusetts General Hospital after stabbings and gun shots were reported.

Cancellation sparks violence

Fights, vandalism break out when concert closed

By ELINOR MILLS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Concertgoers rampaged downtown after police stopped a free outdoor show that officers feared was getting out of hand. At least two dozen people were injured and about 20 were arrested, police said.

"Everyone just went crazy," said Mike Martin, 19. "The emcee on stage said, 'This isn't L.A., don't be like L.A.' ... People were running everywhere. It was like a swarm of people."

Police decided to stop the comedy and music concert Thursday night at City Hall Plaza after the "unruly crowd" of about 20,000 ignored orders to quit surging toward the stage, said police Superintendent William Bratton.

Several minor fights had broken out by that time, he said.

Martin, who was visiting from Houston, said people, many of whom had been drinking alcohol, threw milk crates and bottles upon hearing that the show was done. Three acts had already performed.

Several hundred people spilled out into a nearby neighborhood, smashing the windows of cars and stores and setting fires in trash cans and mailboxes, police said.

An athletic store was looted and a convenience store was ransacked by a mob of about 30 people. The store manager was hit in the face, said store clerk Nahusenay Kassa, 18.

Police had the area under control within a few hours. At least two dozen people were injured, some who were assaulted and others who were pushed around in the crowd at the concert.

Most seriously injured was a 16-year-old boy who was stabbed in the stomach, Bratton said. James J. Harvey III underwent emergency surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital; nurses refused early today to provide his condition.

A child was "trampled a little" by the crowd and was admitted for observation at New England Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Dinah Vaprin. She declined to release more information.

Bratton said one police officer was cut by a bottle thrown at him.

At least 18 people were arrested. Police were unable to provide a precise number early today. Most of those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct.

The crowd was racially mixed and young, mainly ranging from 15 years old to 19, Bratton said.

Radio station WZOU and the Boston Herald sponsored the show, the Free Summer Jam '92, which included pop, reggae and rap acts. Scheduled to appear were Mr. Big, Meli'sa Morgan, Stacy Earl, M.C. Brains, Arrested Development, the College Boys and other acts.

Gate's retirement application certified

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city Pension Commission has certified Police Chief Daryl Gates' retirement, three weeks ahead of schedule.

The commission voted 5-2 Thursday to certify the retirement, which is effective June 28.

The panel originally planned to consider it at its July 9 meeting, the first time it was scheduled to meet after his retirement. It acted more quickly after city officials expressed concern that Gates could reverse his decision any time before the application is certified.

Gates had hinted he might withdraw his retirement papers before the Pension Commission acted.

On Thursday, he said commission members were "petty" for voting ahead of schedule, but said he had given his word to his successor, Willie Williams, that he would step down by the end of the month.

The paper said it received details of the will from legislator Frank Field of the Labor Party. The will was drawn up July 12, 1987 and amended Dec. 30, 1990, and has not been officially released.

Field was chairman of a House of Commons committee which held hearings after Maxwell died into allegations the publisher plundered his companies' pension funds.

The paper quoted Field as saying he was given the document by somebody with intimate knowledge of Maxwell's personal affairs. It said Field refused to disclose the person's identity.

Report: Maxwell left $3.7 million to family, friends

LONDON (AP) — Robert Maxwell left $3.7 million in his will to his family and friends, a published report said today. But creditors may get the money first.

The Financial Times, Britain's leading business daily, said in today's editions that the late publishing tycoon willed the unspecified remainder of his personal estate to various causes.

They include furtherance of world peace and research into Alzheimer's disease, heart disease and cancer. The Times also said Maxwell willed "financial assistance to the people of Israel in the defense to the state of Israel."

However, the Times said "the named beneficiaries of the will may not receive anything. If creditors sea off the Canary Islands on Nov. 5. Shortly afterwards, his business empire collapsed under massive debts. Officials have found he plundered pension funds of companies he controlled to pay off debts and cover operating costs of his private companies.

Earlier Thursday, his sons Kevin and Ian and a Maxwell financial adviser, Larry Trachtenberg, were arrested and charged with fraud.

Judge's ruling stalls child's 'divorce' from parents

TAVARES, Fla. (AP) — A judge dismissed a lawsuit brought by an 11-year-old boy who is seeking adoption by a foster couple, but didn't decide whether the child could sue for "divorce" from his parents.

After a hearing Thursday, Circuit Judge G. Richard Singeltary said the case belonged in neighboring Orange County, where the boy, identified as Gregory K., once lived with his biological parents.

"This court does not have jurisdiction over this child," the judge said.

Gregory's father, identified only as Ralph K., signed a consent decree last week to surrender his parental rights and said he favored the adoption, but his mother has said she will fight it.

The father and mother are separated, but both now live in St. Louis. The lawsuit charges both are alcoholics and unfit parents.

Lawyers and child advocates believe the lawsuit is the first of its kind in the country and could have implications for children living under similar circumstances.

"This is literally the Rosa Parks of the youth rights movement," said Jeanne Lenzer of the National Child Rights Alliance, a Massachusetts-based organization of abuse victims and adult survivors.

The alliance and 17 other groups or individuals have joined the lawsuit.

Jerri Blair, the boy's lawyer, said she would decide by next week whether to appeal the decision or refile the case in Orange County.

The foster father, a lawyer with eight children, of his own, said he was disappointed with the ruling but not discouraged because "it's only a procedural thing."

Gregory has been bounced back and forth for eight years among his natural parents, foster families and state homes. The foster father, a children's rights advocate, met the boy on a tour of a boys' ranch.

Gregory has lived with the family for eight months, and they filed an adoption petition Thursday, Ms. Blair said.

The foster father and the biological father sat quietly, shoulder to shoulder. The boy, his mother and foster mother were not present.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WISE KING SOLOMON: A GREAT LOVER OR — A GREAT DIPLOMAT?

I KINGS, CHAPTER 11, TELLS US... "SOLOMON LOVED MANY STRANGE WOMEN... THE DAUGHTER OF PHARAOH... AND WOMEN OF THE MOABITES, AMMONITES..." ETC., ETC... AND SOLOMON HAD 700 WIVES, 300 CONCUBINES!

SOLOMON FIRST MARRIED AN EGYPTIAN PRINCESS, THE DAUGHTER OF PHARAOH XXXIST DYNASTY (976-958 B.C.) WITH A FATHER-IN-LAW LIKE THIS, HE DIDN'T HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT TROUBLE ON HIS SOUTHERN BORDERS — IN FACT, EGYPT CONQUERED THE PHILISTINE STRONGHOLD OF GAZA, GIVING IT TO SOLOMON AS A WEDDING PRESENT!

ALL OF SOLOMON'S WIVES WERE PRINCESSES OF OTHER COUNTRIES AND FROM THESE MARRIAGES CAME GREAT TREATIES AND COMMERCE—SUCH AS CEDAR FROM LEBANON TO BUILD HIS TEMPLE, FROM FATHER-IN-LAW, KING HIRAM OF TYRE!

HAVING THE RULER OF ALL HIS NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES AS A FATHER-IN-LAW, SOLOMON WAS SAFE FROM ATTACK AND SPENT ALL HIS TIME AND ENERGY IN MAKING HIS KINGDOM THE RICHEST IN THE NEAR EAST — IN THE ENTIRE 40 YEARS OF HIS REIGN, ISRAEL NEVER HAD TO GO TO WAR!

IT WORKED SO WELL, HE EVEN MARRIED OFF ALL HIS CHILDREN IN THE SAME MANNER!

NEXT WEEK: A MAN CAN WIN A BIG FIGHT JUST BY HOLDING HIS HANDS UP?!

Rev. Loren and Karen Gardner

Gardner new pastor at two area churches

The Rev. Loren Gardner is the new pastor of St. Paul United Methodist Church in Pampa and First United Methodist Church of Lefors.

He and his wife, Karen, moved to Pampa on June 11.

Gardner had been the pastor of the First United Methodist Churches of Munday and Goree since June 1989. He has also been pastor of churches in Eula, Hermleigh, Colorado City, Roby and Coahoma.

He was born on Oct. 26, 1940, in Bens Run, W. Va., and was raised in Weirton, W. Va. He came to Texas in November 1961 with the U.S. Air Force and was stationed at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene until November 1965.

Gardner is a 1959 graduate of Weir High School in Weirton, W. Va., and a graduate of McMurry College with a bachelor's degree in religion and English. He also graduated from Perldin's School of Theology at Southern Methodist University.

He married Karen Dawn Clements of Rotan on March 2, 1963. The Gardners have three children, Chad of Dickinson, Dawn Euwer of Denham Springs, La., and Trey, a student at McMurry University in Abilene.

Gardner invites the people of Pampa and Lefors to worship with the church.

The Continentals plan Pampa stop

The 25th anniversary world tour of The Continentals will present a concert of contemporary Christian music at 7 p.m. Sunday at Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis.

Featuring 25 vocalists with live instrumentation, The Continentals program will include a variety of popular inspirational and gospel favorites. The energetic young people plan to uplift, challenge and encourage their audiences in their 1992 program, "Yes! Let's Go." The Continentals has 37 groups covering all corners of the globe during the 1992 tour.

In addition to majestic anthems, spirituals and children's songs, the program will recognize the contributions of some of the top gospel songwriters of the last 25 years.

"I am very excited about this year's anniversary program," said Jim Chaffee, executive vice president of The Continentals. "The audience will not only experience songs that have had a lasting positive influence over the last quarter century, but also music that is continuing to shape gospel music today."

The young people who are part of The Continentals are selected from among thousands who audition annually from around the world. The program is fine-tuned during an intensive nine-day rehearsal camp in Denver, Colo., before each group heads out for an approximate three-month tour throughout the United States and some foreign countries.

In the last 25 years, more than 10,000 young people have been a part of The Continentals, traveling more than two million miles to every continent in the world except Antarctica and more than 70 countries.

Highlights of the organization include a Dove Award for "Best Musical" from the Gospel Music Association in 1982 for "Dreamer," a musical based on the life of Joseph. In 1985, the organization led a successful campaign in conjunction with World Vision to raise nearly $2 million to fight world hunger. The Continentals have released more than 35 gospel albums.

Touring groups of The Continentals have been the training ground for many people who are now involved in many different arenas of the gospel music industry and church leadership.

In addition, numerous well-known Christian artists, representing a wide variety of styles, have honed their skills on a tour with The Continentals, including Wayne Watson, Paul Smith, Karla Worley and Steve Taylor.

Rev. Damon and Brenda Deaton

First Assembly names full-time youth pastor

First Assembly of God Church announces the addition of a full-time youth pastor, the Rev. Damon Deaton.

Deaton and his wife, Brenda, and daughter, Tara, recently moved to Pampa from Canyon where they were youth pastors since 1983.

"First Assembly is excited about Rev. Deaton's vision to develop a community of teen-agers who focus on worship of the Lord Jesus Christ, and fellowship with one another," said the Rev. Charles Shugart, pastor.

Deaton will also work with the youth in the areas of discipleship, an in-depth study of the Bible, and witnessing. He will also be working to teach teen-agers responsibility, decision making and leadership in both church and community.

Deaton was ordained with the Assemblies of God in April 1989. He has traveled on mission trips in Tokyo, New Mexico, Canada and Wisconsin.

Arkansas evangelist to preach at Briarwood Church services

The Rev. Harold Thompson of Hot Springs, Ark., will be the guest evangelist at Briarwood Church, 1800 W. Harvester, for services Sunday through Wednesday.

Services on Sunday will be at 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Services will be at 7:30 p.m. on Monday through Wednesday.

After 36 years as pastor-evangelist, Thompson resigned as pastor of a church in Hot Springs, Ark., to enter full-time evangelistic ministry.

He has geared his ministry to healing and restoration and preparing the church for the coming of Jesus Christ to receive His church.

The Rev. Gene Allen and the congregation invite the public to attend the revival services. A nursery will be provided.

Rev. Harold Thompson

Bible Baptist plans film showing

The Bible Baptist Church and Pastor William McCraw's family invite the public to a special screening of the film "The Silent Scream," at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

The film deals with the reality of abortion, McCraw said.

A special session will be held for children 12 years old and younger.

The church is at 500 E. Kingsmill.

Macedonia Baptist to host breakfast

The monthly breakfast of the Macedonia Baptist Church, 441 Elm St., is planned for 8 a.m. Saturday.

toast, eggs, bacon or sausage, juice and coffee.

Pastor I.L. Patrick invites the public to attend. Donations will be accepted.

Former Pampans graduate from Evangel

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Rebecca Michelle Pletcher Barton and Garland Owen Allen were among 303 students who graduated from Evangel College during the 34th annual commencement on May 1.

Barton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Pletcher of Pampa, Texas. Allen is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Gene Allen of Pampa, Texas. Allen graduated in 1984 from Pampa High School. He received a bachelor's degree in physical education from Evangel College.

A 1988 graduate of Pampa High School, Barton received gold cords for graduating with honors while at Evangel. She earned a bachelor's degree in English, graduating summa cum laude. A grade point average of 3.6 to 3.75 is required to graduate cum laude, a 3.75 to 3.9 to graduate magna cum laude, and a 3.9 or above to graduate summa cum laude.

Evangel is the national Assemblies of God college of arts and sciences. It is accredited by the North Central Association, the National Association of Schools of Music, and the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education. Enrollment this year was 1,440, with students from 48 states and 10 foreign countries.

Religious positions affirm 'cultural divide'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The "cultural divide" which Vice President Dan Quayle says has developed between the influential "elite" and the "average American" is extensively corroborated by declarations of the nation's churches.

They've voiced strong and repeated dissent to many mass-media inducements and portrayals of life, calling them warped and out of touch with everyday reality and common standards. Also, religious leaders concurred in interviews that the rupture exists.

"There's a culture war going on in this country," said the Rev. Billy Melvin, executive director of the National Association of Evangelicals. "The vast majority of Americans still embrace traditional values. But there is an elite in this country that has its own agenda."

That agenda's "bottom line is that everybody should be free to do whatever they want to do," he added in an interview from his office in Carol Stream, Ill. "That's scary."

The rift was dramatically demonstrated at last week's meeting in Indianapolis of the Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest Protestant body, at which Quayle unleashed his manifesto of a fractured culture.

Thousands there fervently avowed their accord, and proceeded to detail their distress at many modern pressures, including television's "themes, plots, images and advertisement which promote and glorify sexual promiscuity, violence and other forms of immorality."

However, that conservative denomination is not alone in its estrangement from many contemporary influences and trends. These have been strongly criticized by Roman Catholicism, Eastern Orthodoxy and most of Judaism and Protestantism, liberal and conservative, mainline and evangelical.

They total 146 million members — about 60 percent of the American population. Most others claim some religious commitments, but aren't on the active rolls.

"There has been a religious hue and cry about devaluation of human life and the implied unimportance of enduring family relationships," said the Rev. Joan Brown Campbell, general secretary of the New York-based National Council of Churches.

Referring to the emphasis on violence and casual sex in the media — in motion pictures, TV and "pop" lifestyle magazines, and the disparaging of moral disciplines and often of religion itself, she said:

"There is a real chasm in the portrayal of American life as over against what most people want and understand as morally decent. This holds for almost all faith groups, liberal and conservative, across all lines."

John Carr, secretary for social development of the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington, said the "cultural divide" was not just with the entertainment media, but with "other institutions in American life."

He said he would put the rift in "broader terms" than Quayle's linking it to TV and the media, citing "failures" in political, financial and other institutions, as well as the media.

"There's a loss of confidence, a loss of trust, not only in Hollywood and the networks, but also in Washington, leaders of business and sometimes religious institutions," he said.

Of TV, he added, "You don't have to be a Republican or conservative to be distressed at the image of the country presented by network television with its obsession with sexuality and emphasis on violence."

In the TV image, "the only people who don't sleep together are people who are happily married," he observed wryly. Also, "Faith is an invisible part of American life on TV."

As Quayle described the breach, the powerful and sophisticated

"elite" dismiss and ridicule traditional virtues, but they are held firmly by ordinary people in their homes, churches, communities and workplaces.

"Moral values are what the American people care most about," he said.

Religious leaders said that under the circumstances, the idea may have been seized as an effective campaign theme, but that nevertheless, it struck a nub of the faith.

"Traditional values get voted up" whenever they're challenged at denominational conventions, Ms. Campbell noted.

The various denominations, both on their own and in ecumenical coalitions, have deplored the gratuitous sex, violence and profanity mushrooming in films and TV, tried to get corporate advertisers to quit sponsoring such material, fought spreading pornography.

Religious groups, whatever their stands on abortion, have voiced distress at the high toll of abortions — 1.6 million annually — and deplored increasing out-of-wedlock births, about a million a year, nearly a fourth of the total.

Quayle says his criticism of the TV show "Murphy Brown" as glamorizing such a birth brought a flood of mockery from the "elite." It also fired his diagnosis of a split culture.

St. Vincent's women's group to sponsor meditation day

The Women's Council of St. Vincent de Paul Church plans to sponsor a day of reflection and meditation on Wednesday.

The theme will be "Nature's Path to God," and the event will be at Dr. and Mrs. Malouf Abraham's Sleepy Hollow, located between Miami and Canadian on U.S. 60.

The day will begin with a welcome at 9:30 a.m. Sister Renee Turcotte will be the devotional moderator and will take participants on a solo walk through surrounding nature with time for meditation.

A liturgical dance team will perform before the group breaks for lunch. Participants are asked to bring a sack lunch. Drinks will be provided, along with vegetables and fruit.

After lunch, the group will discuss "Stations of the Cross" and the speaker will conclude the day. All women are invited to attend the retreat.

For more information, call St. Vincent's at 665-8933.

Ruling allows networks to buy cable TV systems, but will they?

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The commercial television broadcast networks will be able to expand their holdings into cable systems under a new ruling by the Federal Communications Commission.

But they're not exactly jumping for joy.

And local affiliates and independent broadcast stations are outright chagrined, worrying that their survival could be at stake.

"It is progress, but CBS is committed to making our core business — free, universal, over-the-air television — viable," said Martin

Franks, CBS' Washington vice president.

For that, he said the networks need government support in their battles with Hollywood over financial rights to syndicated programming and a requirement that cable companies negotiate for broadcast programming instead of taking it for free as they do now.

Franks said the networks don't need "to be told that our only hope is buying into another business entirely."

The FCC voted Thursday to relax its 22-year prohibition against network ownership of cable systems as a way to help the networks compete better in today's diverse video market.

It means that ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox Broadcasting can buy the companies that provide cable service directly to consumers.

The news preceded a sharp rise in stock prices for two of the networks. At the close of trading Thursday, CBS was up 1.25 to $198 a share and Capital Cities-ABC Inc. rose 1.625 to $467.37 a share. General Electric, owner of NBC, was unchanged at $76.

The ruling restricts the networks, however, to 10 percent of homes nationwide with access to cable and 50 percent of homes in a local broadcast market.

The commission was divided over the restrictions. Commissioner James Quello wanted a 25 percent cap, while Commissioner Sherrie Marshall sided with the network executives who wanted no caps.

The compromise didn't please the networks.

"When you look at the numbers, even a 50 percent cap would be very burdensome for us to do a major deal with any cable operator — at 25 percent it is impossible," David Westin, vice president and general counsel of Capital Cities-ABC told Broadcasting magazine.

Originally, the networks were prohibited from cable ownership because the government didn't want them to dominate the fledgling industry.

But the growth of cable has reduced network prime time viewership to about 60 percent, instead of the more than 90 percent they enjoyed during the 1970s.

"They've lost tremendous amount of money," said Saul Cohen, senior vice president of Slater, Hanft, Martin advertising agency in New York.

Cohen, who buys television time, says that advertisers typically spend about 20 percent to 25 percent of the television ad budget on cable.

He envisioned many new advertising options that networks could offer if they controlled cable outlets, including selling more ads for prime time programming by rerunning it on a cable channel the day after it aired on an affiliated station.

Despite their complaints, the networks pursued the change in the rules, which also are supported by the National Cable Television Association.

Affiliated stations and independent broadcasters opposed it because they fear the competition from a network-owned cable company and worry that the cable company would discriminate against other broadcast stations when it comes to channel placement.

As a safeguard against that, the FCC established a complaint system for such stations that could lead to FCC action against the offending network.

Quello and Commissioner Ervin Duggan said they would have preferred a rule that required the cable companies to carry all local stations with their over-the-air channel numbers.

The ruling includes a plan for reassessment of the situation in three years with the possibility then of changing the rules.

A funnel cloud swirls through the sky Thursday near Pleasant Hill, Ohio. Several residents near Pleasant Hill reported seeing a tornado, said Linda Smith, an emergency dispatcher for Miami County. Tornado touchdowns were reported in three counties with sightings reported in western, northwest and central Ohio. No injuries or major damage were reported.

Thunderstorms sweep toward the East Coast

By The Associated Press

Showers and thunderstorms swept toward the East Coast today, spawned by the same system that produced tornadoes and hail in the Midwest.

On Thursday, winds tore the roof off a high school gymnasium in Cashion, Okla., and part of the roof at a supermarket in Lexington, Ky., collapsed. Strong thunderstorm winds or a tornado damaged 16 homes and several barns around Bagdad, Ky.

Golf-ball-size hail fell Thursday on eastern Indiana and inch-thick hail on north-central Kentucky. Wind gusts to 58 mph were recorded at Ann Arbor, Mich. Lexington, Ky., received 4 1/2 inches of rain between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Thursday.

Thunderstorms in Oklahoma spawned two tornadoes near Lahoma and produced baseball-size hail at Yale and Kingfisher and golf ball-size hail at Pawnee and Oklahoma City.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered from northern California to the Dakotas, over the Florida peninsula and along the central Gulf Coast. Dry weather prevailed over the rest of the nation.

Temperatures today were forecast in the 60s in the upper Great Lakes and along the Pacific coast; in the 70s from New England through the lower Great Lakes to the northern Plains; in the 80s in the East, central Plains and Rocky Mountains; in the 90s across the South and topping 100 in Arizona.

The high for the nation Thursday was 108 degrees at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

McDonald honored at state 4-H Round-up

Dr. Zerle Carpenter, left, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Don Neuman, right, Texas Farm Bureau, present a plaque to Katie McDonald during the 1992 State 4-H Round-up at Texas A&M University. McDonald received the Texas 4-H Salute to Excellence Award provided by the Texas 4-H Foundation, the service organization of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service 4-H Development program. McDonald, a home economics teacher at Pampa High School, has helped guide more than 370 4-H members while volunteering as project leader and club manager for 14 years. As an Extension Homemakers Council member, she was instrumental in starting the Gray County 4-H Scholarship program. She helped organized the 4-H county exchange program and co-chaired the first state 4-H clothing project development committee. In 1982, McDonald was honored as Gray County Outstanding Adult Leader.

Patient pleads for compassion when doctor balances books

DEAR ABBY: About the letter from the physician who complained because he had $154,000 on the books:

While I'm sure that letter reflects the situation many physicians are in, there are plenty of doctors who drive brand-new Cadillacs, Lincoln Continentals, Mercedes, Lexus, BMWs, etc. Their wives do not work, they send their children to private schools, and they vacation in Europe and the Far East every year.

My husband was laid off two years ago and I am the only person working in my family. We are heavily in debt and I am an insulin-dependent diabetic. Because I am insured by an out-of-state insurance company, my physician asks to be paid in full for every visit. He charges $100 a visit, so I do not see him unless I'm in serious trouble.

I'm sorry that physicians have a small fortune on the books, but they should be a little more understanding with patients who have fallen on hard times. A sick person often needs medical attention whether he's in a position to pay immediately or not. And a dead patient can't pay a doctor at all.

The Hippocratic Oath states: "First, do no harm." It doesn't specify whether the harm is mental or physical. And the way the economy is today, we all have to tighten our belts, and help each other.

DEAR BARBARA: Well said. Let us hope that the well-heeled doctors who read this heed this. And as for those who are lacking in compassion, "Physician, heal thyself!"

DEAR ABBY: I am deeply disturbed over a new product being distributed for children. They are called "killer cards" — similar to baseball cards. However, instead of trading heroes, the kids trade cards with pictures of Jeffrey Dahmer, Charles Manson, Ted Bundy and "Son of Sam." These cards have comic book likenesses of infamous murderers!

Dear Abby

Abby, what are these people thinking? How can people manufacture such terrible cards to sell to young children? And how about the people who sell them? Don't they have children of their own? What message are they sending to our children? "Kill someone, and get your face on a trading card!" We have enough to contend with, such as drugs, suicide, and keeping our children and ourselves safe from these psychopaths they are trying to immortalize.

Who can I contact to get this garbage banned?

LOVES CHILDREN,
CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR LOVES CHILDREN: The best way to "ban" such garbage is simply to refuse to patronize the store that sells it.

DEAR ABBY: I have just returned from a trip to Panama and was shocked to see a wedding invitation that included a small card with the following message:

"Suggestion: Your cash gift (or check) will be appreciated. Our checking account at Citibank is No. () . . . Abby, where we live (New York), we sometimes give checks as wedding gifts, but never have we seen an invitation to a wedding with a request for money.

I have promised my friends in Panama that I would write to you and find out how you felt about it. Personally, I think it is in the worst possible taste. What do you think?"

MIRIAM FROM NEW YORK

DEAR MIRIAM: You may tell your friends that Abby's opinion is the same as yours.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because of your reference to "a highfalutin' rootin' toatin' sonuvagun from Arizona, named Ragtime Cowboy Joe" — a song that was popular in the '50s.

It reminded me of a story I heard a long time ago about some trouble that occurred in Israel.

It seems that in the city of Haifa, a man went on a rampage and shot and wounded the mayor whose name was Newton. He then proceeded to ransack all the shops in the downtown area. Little was known about this man except that his name was Joseph, and he was a part-time farmer whose mother had joined a religious order in Spain. Because of the aforementioned facts, an all-point bulletin was issued for a Haifa-lootin' Newton shootin' son of a nun from Barcelona, part-time plowboy Joe.

Children need protection from sun

By MIA B. MOODY
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas (AP) — For decades, a healthy tan signified a healthy child.

Today, however, most doctors warn against children soaking up excessive sun without protection because the same rays that tan can possibly kill years down the road.

The sun is the culprit in at least 90 percent of all skin cancers. Children aren't necessarily at a greater risk of getting sunburned than adults, the danger is that 80 percent of all sun exposure occurs before the age of 21.

Stephanie Allen, a lecturer at the Baylor University School of Nursing, said sunscreen should be used each time an infant or child is exposed to the sun.

"Sometimes it can take one or two hours for their skin to become very burned," she said. "And some children end up in an emergency room or pediatrician's office because of sunburns."

Allen said children also are at a greater risk of dehydration. Their bodies are composed of a higher percentage of water than adults so they are more sensitive to water loss, she said.

It wasn't until the last decade that doctors began to vigorously advise against excessive sun exposure, linking it to cancer. The most common types of skin cancer, basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma, have been linked to daily exposure to sunlight.

Malignant melanoma, the most life-threatening form, may be the result of painful blistering sunburns as a child or teen-ager. Skin cancer is curable when it is treated in its earliest stages.

Anyone can get skin cancer, but most people with naturally dark skin are at less risk because they have more of the pigment melanin to absorb light. Black Americans have only one-twentieth as many skin cancers as whites, and Hispanic Americans have one-sixth as many.

Dr. Richard Fadal, a dermatologist, said the more a person is burned from the sun, the higher the risk of skin cancer later in life. "The sun is not the healthy orb that people used to think it was," he said. "People who lay out and get dark tans are not doing themselves a favor."

Fadal said protection is especially important when the sun can be reflected off sand, snow and water and during the afternoon hours between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. when the sun is directly overhead.

When searching for sunscreen, Allen said, parents should buy those that are water-proof, safe and non-irritating to the eyes.

"Parents should buy the strongest SPF (sun protection factor) they can," Allen said. "SPF 15 and 20 are fine for adults, but not for infants and young children. Most companies have sunscreen for children." Many of these sunscreens have an SPF 30 or higher.

Allen said parents should also cover the heads of infants because baby hair does not protect from the sun.

"Parents, because of a lack of information, allow children's heads to get burned," she said. "If their head is not protected, it can get burned."

Dr. James Mason, a dermatologist, said the need for protection also depends on the child's complexion. Fair complexioned children are going to pay the price at an early age, he said. The Skin Cancer Foundation suggests that parents be especially careful if their child has a family history of skin cancer, a high number of moles, long periods of daily exposure or short periods of intense exposure, freckles, blonde, red or light-brown hair, blue, green or gray eyes or fair skin.

Mason said the same sun-protection rules that apply to adults, apply to children. The only difference, he said, is parents have to help protect their children.

"Parents have to do it for them because children don't have the knowledge," Mason said. "The situation is different from the 18-year-old who knows that it can cause a potential problem."

Heat exhaustion can be life threatening

By DR. MARTIN KOHN
NYU School of Medicine
For AP Special Features

With hot weather on the way, it's important to play it cool — literally — because heat exhaustion is a summertime health risk, especially for weekend athletes, infants and the elderly.

Heat exhaustion and the more extreme heat illness, heatstroke, are caused by the loss of too much fluid and body salts through sweating, and an overheated body.

Heat exhaustion can bring on fatigue, fainting, dizziness, nausea, headache, and when salt loss is heavy, heat cramps in the legs, arms, back or abdomen.

And if left untreated, heat exhaustion may develop into life-threatening heat stroke, where the body gets overheated to a dangerous degree and the victim lapses into coma.

Heat exhaustion occurs on hot days when you are very active, and exercising on a hot day is like being in an oven. You cannot cool down because the surrounding temperature is too high. As a result, you may overheat.

If the day is hot and humid, heat exhaustion is even more likely. Humidity reduces the body's ability to eliminate heat through the evaporation of sweat.

The best way to avoid heat exhaustion is the most obvious — stay cool. However, summertime is playtime, which means games in the park, work in the yard and other activities.

Exercise is healthy, but overexertion can lead to heat exhaustion. Be moderate, especially if you are a weekend athlete and not in good shape.

When days are very hot and humid, the most prudent course is to avoid any strenuous exercise entirely.

If you are planning a day of activity under the sun, bring along some fruit juice or water. Sweating causes body fluid loss, which contributes to heat exhaustion. Fluid loss can cause a drop in blood pressure and dizziness.

The first sign of heat exhaustion is fatigue — a weak, tired feeling — and you will also be very hot and thirsty. Dizziness and confusion are other signs. Rapid or irregular heartbeats and headache may also occur.

The key to recovering from heat exhaustion is to stop generating body heat and replenish lost fluids.

Get out of the sun and lie down. Drink water or, preferably, fruit juices, which replace minerals that have been lost. With rest and replacement of lost water and salt, a full recovery usually takes place.

If the victim does not recover rapidly, becomes confused or appears to become more ill, emergency care is needed and an ambulance should be called.

Infants and the elderly cannot eliminate heat easily so caretakers should be watchful for signs of heat stroke.

With the elderly, a hot, stuffy apartment can cause heat illness. Also, there are some medications that affect the cardiovascular system and restrict heat elimination capabilities.

The signs of heatstroke are similar to heat exhaustion, but the body will be very hot and may have ceased sweating. To lower body temperature, spray the person with cold water and keep the body cooled until medical treatment is available.

Game Boy puzzles help pass traveling hours

By WILLIAM SCHIFFMANN
Associated Press Writer

Trapped in an airplane or riding in a car while leaving the driving to someone else is often a mind-numbing experience.

That's why Nintendo invented Game Boy. The easy-to-carry, battery-powered machine is perfect for whiling away those boring hours.

But next time, don't take a shoot-'em-up. There are dozens of brain-teasing puzzles that will sharpen your mind along with your reflexes.

One of the oldest, and still one of the best, is Tetris. Created in the Soviet Union, the game consists of a rectangular field set on end. Differently shaped blocks fall from the top. The object is to manipulate them so they fit together to form horizontal lines.

When the line fills, it blips off the screen and earns points. The better you do, the faster the blocks drop. Good hand-eye coordination is rewarded. It's from Nintendo.

One of the newest — it won't even be available until later this year — is called Lazlo's Leap. DTMC's latest offering is a form of Chinese checkers.

You are offered 100 X-shaped game fields, each of which displays a different number and formation of dots and a blinking hand. The object is to jump the dots in just the right order so you end up with one in the center.

Each field comes with a par — the number of moves it should take to solve the puzzle. It's a LOT harder than it sounds.

Ultra Games offers Quarh, a cross between a puzzle and a space blaster game.

In Quarh, 10 differently shaped block patterns descend from the top of the screen. The object is to keep them from reaching the bottom. You do this by filling in open spaces to form squares or rectangles.

You select one of six different ships. Maneuver them across the bottom of the screen and fire blocks that fill in the patterns. You can select one of three levels of difficulty and one of nine stages; the higher each goes, the harder the game.

Pipe Dream, from Bullet-Proof Software, is a unique and challenging puzzle that requires some advance planning.

The game starts with a 70-square playing field. Individual pieces of pipe in different shapes appear on the screen. The object is to use them to build a pipeline.

That would be easy, except that you have to race the "flood" flowing through the line by laying pipe while it flows. If caught by the flood, you lose. The more pipe you lay, the higher your score. If you're quick, you can wade through 36 stages.

Qix, from Taito, is another unique and creative idea. It's been around, at least in arcade form, since 1981.

In Qix, you are presented with a square playing field and a diamond-shaped marker. The object is to move the marker into the playing field, drawing a line to enclose portions of the field while avoiding the Qix and Spax. They are your enemies.

The Qix is a drifting pattern of lines that moves randomly around the open area of the field. It can dart at you at any time and if it catches you in the process of enclosing an area and touches your marker, you lose one of your three markers.

Spax are tiny blinking dots that move around the edge of the playing field. If the marker touches a Spax, it is lost.

You must enclose a specific percentage of the field to score points; the more you enclose, the higher the score. As usual, beat a stage and you advance to a harder stage.

Last but not least comes Serpent, from Taito USA.

The square playing field displays two snakes. You control one, the game or another player controls the second. There are two ways to win — surround the enemy's head or block it into a corner. A match consists of 13 games, with the first player taking seven the victor.

There are four levels. In the highest, the enemy snake is extremely fast and will reverse if cornered. You can play from San Francisco to New York and not get all the way through this one.

Vests are "in" for men

NEW YORK (AP) — Vests were big news at the recent Men's Fashion Association fall preview, but not the garden variety that is the third piece of a three-piece suit. In fact, three-piece suits were in short supply.

Rather, these vests are florals and stripes and plaids and paisleys in knits and suedes and cottons and silks. They can be worn under a sweater or a jacket, or they can stand in for same.

Island Trading Co. has a white cotton corduroy vest that reverses to a multi-color batik print with matching print shirt. Lorenzo Vega matched a silk multi-color patchwork vest with tie.

There were the more traditional styles, too — a snap-front tan leather from JC Penney Co.; blue denim that zips up the front with built-in zippered backpack from B. Free; Pendleton's regimental stripe wool vest in burgundy, green and gold, and a red suede vest under a light herringbone wool suit from the Greif Co.

Although there will be a lot of vest-dressed men this fall, Chip Tolbert and Tom Julian, the MFA's fashion directors, say to look for these trends, also: The "un-suit," or jacket and pants in coordinating fabrics; double-breasted jackets; flat-front pants; a lot of black and white, especially houndstooth checks, for business as well as sport; the blouson, or baseball, jacket; and there'll be a run on the Navajo blanket pattern.

Three-piece suits for men in short supply at fall fashion preview.

Long coats are passe. Outerwear will be short and rugged, an influence Tolbert says, of TV's "Northern Exposure."

The environment is an influence, too. Already in the stores are these two t-shirt legends from Island Trading Co. — "My Race is Human" and "It's Time to Mother Nature."

WALNUT COVE

Andrew is going to meet Mary in the park?
Yeah. He still hasn't figured out we wrote that love letter.

Lori, can I borrow your ukelele?
I thought I might play a ballad or two for Mary tonight.

When he catches on, he's going to be awfully mad...
That should leave us just enough time to finish college and move out of the state.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Treat today's happenings philosophically and you could be a success with minimum effort. You might even sow seeds for a new friendship that is worthy of cultivation. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Good things could be coming your way today, provided you let friends do for you what you would do for them if the roles were reversed. Be a gracious recipient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Generally speaking, conditions are favorable for you today, but your greatest benefits are likely to come from a partnership with someone with whom you've been previously involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A well-defined, ambitious objective has an excellent chance of being fulfilled to your expectations today. However, you will have to earn what you hope to attain.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to devote as much time as possible today to activities you truly enjoy. You need a break from mundane and traditional routines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Changes which could prove beneficial to you may be in the offing today. You're not apt to have direct control over developments, but you'll like what transpires.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your greatest asset today is your ability to project a moderating influence over your involvements. It's the type of force that can bring harmony to dissension.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your financial trends look extremely encouraging today and, if you apply yourself, profitable results are likely — whether you're buying or selling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An important objective can be achieved today through some shrewd political maneuvering on your part. Let your intuition govern your mode of action.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Desirable results are likely today — if you flow with events rather than attempt to dominate them. Let nature run its course.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to involve yourself today with friends who stimulate your thought processes. A very beneficial exchange of ideas could be in the offing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Put forth your best effort today; individuals who are in the position to make things materially easier will be looking for ways to reward you. The compensation could be generous.

Mark, my Words

Visit to Little League adds meaning to Father's Day

Father's Day is Sunday. Buy your Dad a tie, some socks, a new lawn mower or whatever is the annual gift you present the father in your family.

But may I suggest you also do yourself a favor and steal some time to reflect on where you and your "old man" have been over the years.

I did on Tuesday night. If you remember, the wind was strong that evening, and the sky had turned dust-orange from the combines kicking up dirt in the fields on the outskirts of Pampa.

The wind was irritating. The dust clouded my contact lenses. But I didn't feel a thing in the shelter of the memories I was reliving at my evening at the Pampa Optimist's Little League Park.

Boy, it was fun!

Just as I remembered from my pee-wee days, there were oversized uniforms pulled, tucked and hemmed to fit onto little players who still struggled to fill them out. There were the kids on the field who concentrated as much as a 10-year old can, and there were the little brothers and sisters on the sidewalks who were content to do anything but watch.

There were blue jean-wearing umpires, makeshift bleachers and worn-out bases.

And of course, fathers.

"Rear back and throw that ball!" one bellowed out.

"Thatta boy," said another. "Right down the pipe!"

"Way to knock the ball down," boomed one from the top row of bleachers. "That's a good job!"

These fathers were similar to mine. Maybe you had the same kind.

My Dad would take off work early to make games or practices on time. He would throw batting practice, warm up the pitchers, haul the equipment, find weekend tournaments in remote areas, drive the team there, spring for pizza after the games and always do it wearing whatever my team's colors were that year and a smile.

Not being a father yet, I wondered what motivates these men to take such interest in a kid's game. I even asked some at the Optimist's Park.

"I guess I never really thought about it," said Alvin Stokes, who was supporting his son Tre near his team's dugout. "I guess I like watching him improve. Tre and the whole team have come a long way since the first of the year."

"That's fun to watch."

"I just enjoy watching him learn and mature," said Gary Harper of his eight-year old son Dusty's involvement in Little League. "It's a good way to spend some time with him."

Thinking about what these Little League fathers said, I glanced onto one of the fields just in time to see four throwing errors turn a single into a home run for one lucky batter. Watching the rather comical action, I thought how oblivious all the kids probably are to their fathers' feelings about Little League.

I was.

Those thoughts faded when I turned around and saw another son and his father on the sidelines playing catch. My mind went adrift again and landed in one of my own Little-League experiences.

My 15-year-old season was my father's last as a coach after leading my older brother and me through our 19-or-so combined seasons of Little League. After the last game, which we won, the team signed a baseball and gave it to him as a "retirement" gift.

Later that night, he came into my room and did a strange thing, I thought. He gave me the autographed ball and left.

I never knew why. Until Tuesday night.

"You know," Harper said nudging me out of my daydream.

"My boy is turning out to be a good little ball player, but I think it's more than that. He's getting a chance to meet friends and stay physically active instead of playing Nintendo all the time."

"Another thing is that I've always loved baseball. It teaches good things. I've always taught him to take care of himself and not blame others. You can see a lot of that out here."

"But to be honest, I've never put a lot of deep thought into why I come out here. I guess I just like watching him grow up. I like being a part of it."

Suddenly, my father's gift to his 15-year-old son made sense.

So several years later, thanks for the ball, Dad. I'm glad we got to share some memories, too.

And Happy Father's Day to Little League Dads everywhere.

Golfers tame Pebble Beach

Morgan, Strange first and second after one round

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Except for Gil Morgan, nobody thinks this kind of scoring can continue.

So who are you going to listen to — the guy leading the tournament or all those other guys blinking in disbelief, trying to remember that this is Pebble Beach and this is the U.S. Open?

With its greens soft and its ocean winds still on Thursday, Pebble Beach played more like it was hosting the Phoenix Open than its third U.S. Open, doling out birdies and low scores with unprecedented generosity.

"The course was absolutely there for the taking this morning," Mark McCumber said. "Pebble Beach will get its due before it's over."

Round One went to the players, 45 of whom shot par or better in the opening round.

Morgan made eight birdies and shot a 6-under 66, the lowest first round in any of the three U.S. Opens played over the scenic oceanfront course. Curtis Strange made seven birdies and was one back at 67.

Andy Dillard, a qualifier playing in his first Open, birdied the first six holes of the championship and was one of three golfers at 4-under 68. Phil Mickelson, playing in his first tournament as a pro, and Steve Pate also shot 68s.

There were 29 sub-par scores in the opening round. In addition to 419 birdies, 11 eagles were made, including Ted Schulz's 183-yard 7-iron for a 2 on the 464-yard, par-4 ninth hole, considered Pebble's toughest.

Morgan, who one-putted 10 greens in the first round, thought differently.

The record for four rounds in the Open is 8-under by Jack Nicklaus in 1980 at Baltusrol, site of the 1993 Open.

No one has ever even reached 10 under at any time in the Open.

Morgan, though, could be forgiven for getting a little carried away.

He did most of his scoring on the easiest part of the course with birdies on five of the first six holes.

Strange, who won consecutive Opens in '88 and '89 but has not won a PGA Tour event since, did his best scoring on the toughest part of the course.

After failing to make a birdie on the first six holes, Strange began his charge with a birdie on the 107-yard, par 3 No. 7, hitting a pitching wedge within a foot.

Relaxed Holmes awaits champion Holyfield

LAS VEGAS (AP) — In his seven-year reign as heavyweight champion, Larry Holmes fought with an attitude.

A brooding, combative champion who had the misfortune of fighting in the shadow of Muhammad Ali, Holmes never felt he got his proper due.

"You probably didn't like me then," Holmes admits. "If I talked to you it was with an attitude. Things were a lot harder for me then than they are now."

When he caps his improbable comeback tonight by fighting Evander Holyfield for the undisputed heavyweight title, the 42-year-old Holmes is not only older but finally seems at peace with himself.

"I'm having fun," Holmes said. "I had fun fighting Ray Mercer and I'm going to have a good time fighting Evander Holyfield."

Holmes, a 4-1 underdog to capture the title he held from 1978-85, has been relaxed to the point of being almost gregarious in preparing for what will be his 25th heavyweight title fight.

During a sparring session a week ago, Holmes joked with writers between rounds and later crooned "Old Man River" while skipping rope.

"Bet you guys never thought you'd see me here at 55," he shouted.

Whether Holmes can still fight at the level needed to beat Holyfield, however, is another question.

His vaunted left jab still looks razor-sharp, but the reflexes have slowed with age. His ring savvy was enough to beat the inexperienced and one dimensional Mercer, but Holyfield presents far more problems.

"I can still do the same things I did before, just not as quick," Holmes said. "I know I'm a better fighter than George Foreman, Alex Stewart and Bert Cooper. If these guys can put him in the danger zone, why can't I?"

Holmes, who successfully defended his heavyweight title 20 times before Michael Spinks beat him by decision on Sept. 21, 1985, is 6-0 in a comeback that began April 7, 1991, with a first round knockout of Tim Anderson.

He fought four other non-descript fighters before taking on the then-unbeaten Mercer Feb.

7. In that fight, Holmes was rocked in the first round but dominated from the second round on to win a unanimous 12-round decision.

It was a performance that surprised Holyfield, who had agreed to meet the winner of the Mercer-Holmes fight, assuming all along it would be Mercer.

"He impressed me with some things he did at the age of 42, things you wouldn't think he would be able to do," Holyfield said.

Holyfield, of course, knows something about 42-year-old boxers.

His first defense of the title he won with a third-round knockout of a flabby James "Buster" Douglas, was against the 42-year-old Foreman. Holyfield took a unanimous 12-round decision, but drew criticism for his inability to knock Foreman down or out.

"People will say this is not a fight, or Foreman wasn't a fight," said the 29-year-old champion. "But I'll fight them all."

Holyfield's only other title defense was Nov. 23 in his hometown of Atlanta, where he stopped the journeyman Cooper in the seventh round.

Valvano diagnosed with cancer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jim Valvano, the colorful former North Carolina State basketball coach and television analyst, has cancer, Valvano's agent and a television network say.

ESPN, the sports network Valvano went to work for after leaving the Wolfpack in 1990, said Thursday night that Valvano had been diagnosed with the disease. In a brief report, sportscaster Bob Ley said Valvano, 46, is at his Cary, N.C., home "in excellent spirits" but did not elaborate on the type of cancer nor the extent of Valvano's illness.

Valvano's phone number is unlisted and he could not be reached.

But his agent, Art Kaminsky of New York, told the News & Observer of Raleigh, N.C.: "There are malignancies."

Kaminsky said it is not known what type of cancer Valvano has, or what the prognosis is.

"We're going for more tests in the next couple of days," Kaminsky said.

Valvano will undergo tests at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Hospital in New York City, he said. Sloan-Kettering specializes in caring for cancer victims.

"He still looks great," Kaminsky said. "Now his focus is just to get better."

Jim Valvano

Don Shea of Raleigh, who leads the company that produces two Wolfpack coaches' shows, said he'd spoken with his friend and former business associate Thursday morning.

"I feel the way someone might feel after his son gets hit by an automobile," Shea said.

"To say it's a shock, well ... you never know. It just serves to emphasize that nobody has an 'S' on his chest."

Shea declined to discuss details of Valvano's illness.

A report in Friday's New York Daily News, citing unidentified sources, said that the cancer was detected in Valvano's back. He had not been feeling well for a couple of days and had to undergo several tests, including an MRI. The report said Valvano was told of the prognosis following Monday's tests.

Dr. Jeffrey M. Crane of Raleigh Hematology Oncology Clinic said one of his six partners is Valvano's oncologist but would not disclose which one.

Jim Rehbock, N.C. State's basketball trainer, said he had talked to Valvano Thursday but "what ESPN reported is all I can say."

Efforts to reach other close Valvano associates were unsuccessful.

Valvano coached 10 seasons at N.C. State, leading the Wolfpack to a national championship in 1983.

In 1989, his basketball program was embroiled in controversy based on the publication of a book, "Personal Fouls." A subsequent investigation led to an NCAA probation.

At the height of the controversy, Valvano resigned.

Angels' Rodgers happily recovering almost a month after bus crash

YORBA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Nearly a month has passed since the bus accident, and Buck Rodgers could even find a little humor as he looked back at the frightening experience.

The California Angels manager recalled that, as he lay crumpled in the wrecked bus, already aware that he had some broken bones, he was discovered by an excited paramedic.

"There was this young guy and he was tromping all over my foot and he's yelling out to his superior, 'I found one, I found one, but I think he's dead,'" Rodgers recounted, grinning. "I said, 'I'm not dead, buddy, just get off my damn foot.'"

He sustained a broken elbow and knee, cracked ribs and a wrist injury in the May 21 accident when the bus the team was riding veered off the road and crashed down a hill in New Jersey.

Meeting with reporters Thursday for the first time since the accident, Rodgers was in a wheelchair and had his arm heavily wrapped and in a sling. At the press conference in the backyard of his home, he recalled the scary ride down the slope.

"I remember going down a mountain, a forest of trees coming through the front windshield and the driver, or somebody, saying, 'I lost it,'" the Angels manager said. "I thought I'd bought it a couple of times, then I thought I had it made toward the end, was going to walk away with nothing, until we hit that last tree."

"I was in that front little pew down there like a sardine and when we hit the last tree, that crunched the elbow and everything. ... It seemed like we were going down the hill for a long time, the glass was starting to come back through the window so I got down below."

While his physical injuries continue to heal, Rodgers, 53, said time also has mostly healed the emotional trauma.

"Basically, any of the psychological-type problems are grinding down. I had some flashbacks, would wake up in the middle of the night looking down the hill or have spotlights in my eyes. But that's all subsided," he said.

"Those are traumatic things, the original trauma of the body and the mind, but those things are pretty well gone now. ... I still get the cold sweats every once in a while."

Rodgers, who mentioned pitcher Chuck Finley as among those helping others in the bus just after the accident, said he was proud of the way the players reacted.

"I think the biggest thing the accident did was show a lot of the character of the guys," he said. "You see the baseball player in them all the time, but you don't get to see the man in them. A lot of that came out in the accident."

Rodgers also said the accident gave him "a jolt in priorities."

"Every time you get injured or someone close to you dies, or someone in baseball dies, your perspective changes to the point that baseball is a game and that we play it as a game and life goes on," he said. "This is more important for me right now than the California Angels, for me to get well and healthy and live my life."

Reds benefit from Braves' errors

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds can do no wrong. They even can make the best opposition mess up.

The Reds won their seventh straight and 19th in 23 games, extending their NL West lead to 4 1/2 games over the Atlanta Braves with a 7-5 victory Thursday night. Atlanta had won seven in a row and are on a 16-3 streak.

"The way we've been playing, when we get an opening, we take advantage," Reds manager Lou Piniella said.

First, the Reds took advantage of three errors for three runs off John Smoltz. After Atlanta rallied to tie it 5-5, pinch hitter Glenn Braggs hit a two-run homer in the 10th for the victory.

"The fans came out expecting two good teams to battle it out and that's exactly what they got," Piniella added.

The game drew a crowd of 47,896, the largest regular-season turnout since 1983, and there are no tickets available for the three weekend games.

"The way everybody in the media and the fans were building the series up, I came in thinking it was the World Series," Braggs said. "But it's fun. Absolutely. The fans are getting to see two teams that are playing great baseball."

Elsewhere, it was San Diego 9, San Francisco 4 in a brawl-marred game; St. Louis 8, New York 3; Montreal 4, Pittsburgh 0; and Philadelphia 4, Chicago 3.

Braggs hit his first home run of the season off Mike Stanton (1-4) following a one-out walk to Hal Morris.

"It looked like a pretty good pitch, a sinker down," Stanton said. "I'm making a mistake here and a mistake there, and it's costing me. They've been jumping all over it."

Earlier, Paul O'Neill had a two-run homer that put the Reds ahead 5-3. It snapped a 1-for-32 slump and was his first-ever homer in Atlanta and his first this season with a runner on base.

Deion Sanders 3 for 3 with a homer for the Braves and raised his average to .355.

Padres 9, Giants 4

At San Diego, Gary Sheffield hit two homers, one a grand slam, and Frank Seminara got his first major-league win.

But the spotlight was stolen by a fourth-inning brawl as both benches emptied.

Fred McGriff, the next batter after Sheffield

San Francisco catcher Kirt Manwaring, left, tries to pull San Diego's Fred McGriff off Giants' pitcher Trevor Wilson Thursday.

National League

hit his grand slam, was hit in the leg by Trevor Wilson. McGriff dropped his bat and charged the mound. Wilson threw his glove at McGriff and the two tumbled to the ground.

Within seconds, players and coaches from the two sides mixed it up in an all-out fight. Wilson and McGriff went at it again after peace apparently had been restored. Both were ejected, as were San Francisco batting coach Dusty Baker, Padres third base coach Bruce Kimm, bullpen catcher Ron Ogelsby, and pitcher Jose Melendez.

"I was getting knocked around a little bit," said Wilson, whose face was puffy and red from the scuffle. "Fred's a great hitter and I was trying to come in and hit him in the leg. That was the best strike I threw all night. I wasn't going to take what he was going to dish out."

Cardinals 8, Mets 3

At New York, the Cardinals climbed back to .500 and the Mets continued to sink. Omar Olivares pitched seven shutout innings and sparked a three-run rally with a double.

Both teams entered the game having lost 14 of their previous 19 games. New York has lost six of the first seven games of a season-high 14-game homestand and its players called a meeting after the game.

"It was a little get-together," said Bobby Bonilla, who did not start because of a shin bruise. "We're frustrated. We had a discussion and a lot of good came out of it."

Expos 4, Pirates 0

At Pittsburgh, the Expos got going early and the Pirates never got going.

Moises Alou, Larry Walker and Tim Lincecum had run-scoring doubles in the first inning. Chris Nabholz and Jeff Fassero threethit the Pirates.

Nabholz (5-5) had a two-hitter when he walked the bases full with one out in the sixth. Fassero relieved and got Don Slaught, who was 3 for 4 and has 10 hits in his last 15 at-bats, to ground into an inning-ending double play. Fassero pitched 3 2-3 innings of one-hit relief for his first save.

Phillies 4, Cubs 3

At Philadelphia, Lenny Dykstra again displayed his ability in the clutch, a spot he says he enjoys.

Dykstra's two-run double with two outs in the eighth inning snapped the Cubs' six-game winning streak. Cubs reliever Bob Scanlon retired the first two batters in the eighth before Mickey Morandini and pinch hitter Wally Backman singled.

Brewers ride Wegman's arm to victory were looking for it," Wegman said. "I was getting it in on their hands. They were aggressive. They were swinging at the first pitch and I had some quick innings."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Detroit 14, Toronto 10; Minnesota 3, Kansas City 1; Seattle 5, Chicago 4 in 11 innings; and New York 5, Boston 4.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 4

New York, which had 3-2 leads in the previous two games only to lose 4-3 both times, held on to salvage the finale of the four-game series at Boston.

Mike Gallego's homer sparked a three-run seventh inning before Melido Perez (7-4) and Steve Farr struck out seven of the last eight Red Sox batters.

Tigers 14, Blue Jays 10

Detroit outlasted Toronto in a 31-hit slugfest at SkyDome.

Travis Fryman drove in a career-high five runs with a double and a triple for the Tigers, and Cecil Fielder's sacrifice fly snapped a 10-10 tie in the eighth inning.

Dan Gladden and Lou Whitaker opened the eighth with singles off Mike Timlin (0-1), and Fryman advanced both runners with a sacrifice bunt, setting the stage for Fielder's go-ahead hit in the game that lasted for more than 4 hours.

Twins 3, Royals 1

Scott Erickson showed signs of recovering from a year-long slump, allowing one run on seven hits in seven innings as Minnesota won at home against Kansas City.

Erickson (4-5) was 12-2 with a 1.39 ERA on June 24, 1991. From then until Thursday, he was 11-11 with a 5.37 ERA.

The Twins had only six hits, but Erickson got home-run support from Kent Hrbek, Shane Mack and Pedro Munoz, all off Rick Reed (1-2).

Mariners 5, White Sox 4

At Seattle, Harold Reynolds singled with the bases-loaded in the 11th inning, giving the Mariners their first-ever four-game sweep over Chicago.

Reynolds, who also had a home run and triple, singled to right field, bringing home pinch-runner Jeff Schaefer from third with the winning run.

Whitney throws no-hitter; Rotary defeats Glo-Valve

By The Associated Press

Milwaukee manager Phil Garner worried before the game that Bill Wegman would leave his best pitches in the bullpen.

It turned out that Garner had nothing to be afraid of.

Because of a 34-minute rain delay, Wegman started warming up three times and threw at least 130 pitches in the bullpen before tossing the first three-hitter of his career, defeating the Cleveland Indians 4-1 Thursday night.

Wegman lowered his earned run average to 3.01 while improving his record to 7-5 and helping the Brewers win for the fifth time in six games.

"When he gets the ignition turned on, he's ready to go," Garner said. "When I saw the tarp come out, I called the bullpen and said, 'Let's slow down a little.' Wegman started three times in the pen."

"I threw 60 to 70 pitches, then 40 to 50, then 30," Wegman said of his pregame warmup.

Once the game started, Wegman was a model of efficiency, throwing just 97 pitches.

"I had a real good sinker even when they

Aaron Whitney threw a no-hitter as Rotary Club knocked Glo-Valve Service from the unbeaten with a 6-2 win Thursday in an Optimist Major Bambino League contest.

Whitney struck out 13 and walked only three. He allowed no earned runs and no hits.

Matt Evans was tagged with his first loss of the season. He pitched 4 1/3 innings, allowing three runs, two were earned, and four hits.

Evans walked five while striking out four. Kris Davis pitched one inning, giving up three runs, only one of which was earned, on two hits. He walked one and struck out one.

Ryan Schumacher relieved in the fifth inning, allowing no runs or hits while striking out three and walking one in 1 2/3 innings.

A walk to Blaine Northcutt and a double by Brandon Hill got Rotary on the scoreboard in the first inning.

A single by Joel Barker and a double by Chad Epperson in the second inning, combined with two Glo-Valve errors, pushed Rotary to a 4-0 lead.

Glo-Valve scored in the second inning when Preston Reed was safe on an error and scored when Amos Valmore was safe on another error. Two more Rotary errors and a stolen base allowed Davis to score Glo-Valve's final run in the third inning.

Rotary added two insurance runs in the fifth inning when Eric Greer was safe on an error and scored on a triple by Chris Manning. Manning scored on a passed ball.

Manning led Rotary in hitting with two hits and an RBI. Whitney stroked a double to conclude the hitting for Rotary. Northcutt scored twice.

Pancel Open begins tomorrow

About 65 people are scheduled to tee off in the first round of the Pancel Open tomorrow at the Pancel Golf Course.

The players will be competing in five flights. Shotgun starts are scheduled for 8 a.m. and 2 p.m., Saturday and Sunday in the 36-hole, stroke-play tournament.

Winners will receive Pampa Chamber of Commerce gift certificates.

Bishops' proposal on women appears mired in discord

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops are at odds over a proposed document on women's rights that denounces sexism, but reiterates Vatican opposition to allowing women to become priests.

As bishops argued the issue Thursday — the first time in public — a Gallup Poll released here showed two-thirds of American Catholics surveyed favor ordaining women.

The three-hour debate ended with several bishops saying the letter's prospects as an authoritative pastoral teaching letter were dim.

That would "be a miracle," said Bishop Joseph L. Imsch of Joliet, Ill., chairman of a committee that has worked nine years trying to produce a suitable version.

The debate was to continue today.

The 81-page document, now in its third revised form and toned down after a meeting ordered by the Vatican, has aroused widespread objections among Catholics. Reform groups call it inconsistent in upholding full equality of women in society, yet denying them ordination to the priesthood.

"Realistically, I don't see how we can satisfy" various views, Imsch said. Shelving it, or "our silence would mean we consider women second-class citizens."

Several bishops noted that no matter what the letter says, it is up to the Vatican to lift the ban against women priests.

"We've gone about as far as we can go," said Bishop Pierre DuMaine of San Jose, Calif.

The bishops voted to continue to revise the letter and further amendments were expected after the four-day debate among about 250 bishops meeting at the University of Notre Dame.

A vote on the document is not expected until this fall.

"To retain any credibility, they should drop the pastoral and do some listening to the voices of the people," said Ruth Fitzpatrick of Fairfax, Va., coordinator of the Women's Ordination Conference.

A Gallup Poll found 67 percent Catholics think ordaining women as priests would be a "good thing."

The percentage has risen steeply in recent years, the poll said, rising from 29 percent in 1974 and 47 percent in 1985.

Among the poll's other findings:

— 75 percent of Catholics support allowing priests to marry.

— 83 percent believe bishops should approve the use of condoms.

— 52 percent believe abortion should be legal in "many or all circumstances."

— 87 percent say married couples should make their own decisions about birth control.

"It documents the fact that the Catholic laity and bishops are at odds with each other on virtually every major issue facing the church today," said Sister Mary Fiedler, co-director of the Quixote Center, a Catholic organization near Washington.

The poll, commissioned by several reform-minded church groups, was released hours before the meeting of the bishops.

The telephone poll was conducted from May 5-17 among 802 self-described Catholics. The margin of error was plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Town awaits summer drought

By MARK EVANS
Associated Press Writer

FIREBAUGH, Calif. (AP) — Puttering around his family's abandoned plumbing shop, 73-year-old Arthur Borboa can't remember when this farming town has been so dry, or so desperate.

As California suffers through a sixth year of drought, half the land around Firebaugh remains fallow and its once-bustling streets are quiet.

"You see a lot of bare land. This town is drying up, too," Borboa says. "Without farming, there's no Firebaugh."

In good years, the fields that surround this town in the San Joaquin Valley are ripe with fruit and cotton and bustle with workers, many in the area just for the season.

For every farm job lost, another four are cut in related industries, according to a recent study by the California Farm-Water Coalition.

For Borboa, plumbing work dried up along with the fortunes of his clients in this town of 4,800 people 150 miles southeast of San Francisco. Now he's having trouble finding a buyer for his corner lot.

Charlie Sailor, who owns Firebaugh Equipment Co., has not sold a tractor all year. Revenues are down $1 million and repossessions are up, he said. Sailor laid off five workers this spring, including one who'd been with the company for 20 years.

"Last year, we thought if we got by, we'd get rain and be rolling again," he said. "But it's even drier. It's worse. In the community it's going to be devastating."

The huge Westlands Water District that supplies Firebaugh is under federal orders to cut back water supplies by 75 percent. It estimates that will cost 3,800 farming jobs.

Farmers expect revenue to decrease $153 million below normal. Last year, they reported a $94 million decline in revenues that normally run about $700 million.

"Growers have used up all of their slack," says Westlands spokesman Don Upton. "Now it's just a matter of trying to survive. Some of them probably won't."

Many field workers did not bother to make the yearly trip from Texas and Mexico this spring, says Pedro Ramon, 54, an unemployed forklift operator.

"Who knows what the summer might bring, but when there's no farm workers, we have no business," says Kristi Fennell, who owns a clothing store and a bar.

One restaurant has closed in the mornings. It has lost the usual breakfast crowd heading to the fields.

Ramon fears he won't find seasonal work in the cantaloupe fields for the first time since 1973.

"We used to work 10 hours a day. Last year it was three or four," he says. "This year, the farmers didn't plant and things are real slow."

Sailor believes state and local officials are not prepared for the effects the drought and the tax revenue that will be lost.

Mayor Ron Leyva admits times are tough, but says the city has cut spending and is trying to diversify the economy.

"There's no ghost town here. If that was going to happen, it already would have," Leyva says. "We're going to show the bigger cities how to survive."

Keating working as busboy in California prison

By E. SCOTT RECKARD
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles Keating Jr. is a busboy in the prison where he is serving a 10-year sentence for bilking investors of his failed savings and loan, his son-in-law says.

Bradley Boland discussed his father-in-law Thursday during a break in a U.S. District Court hearing, where a judge postponed until Oct. 20 Keating's trial on federal fraud charges.

Boland said Keating, 68, is working three meals a day at the California Men's Colony in San Luis Obispo, setting tables and clearing them after meals.

"He's holding up fine," Boland said. But asked if Keating was fitting into the prison routine, he replied: "No way. He'll never fit in there. He'll never belong."

The trial of Keating, the former owner of Lincoln Savings & Loan Association, and his son, Charles Keating III, had been scheduled for Aug. 4.

The younger Keating's lawyer, Dennis Landin of the public defender's office, said he needed more time to prepare.

Judge Mariana Pfaelzer also agreed to unfreeze a bank account into which Keating's friends and family want to donate money for a defense fund. The money will provide a salary of $3,000 a month to Keating's longtime secretary, Carol D. Kassick, and $6,566.66 a month for travel, accounting and office expenses.

Keating's lawyer, Stephen C. Neal, agreed to provide the names of the donors confidentially to the judge. The prosecutors had said they were worried that money from Keating's victims might be channeled to his defense.

Keating was convicted in state court last December of bilking investors, including many elderly Lincoln depositors. The investors lost more than $250 million when Lincoln was seized by federal regulators and American Continental Corp., its parent company, filed for bankruptcy protection in April 1989.

Keating will be eligible for parole after five years.

In federal court, Keating is charged with 73 counts that carry a maximum prison term of 525 years, said Assistant U.S. Attorney David Sklansky. His son, who is free on bail, is accused of 64 counts with a maximum penalty of 480 years.

Eight Keating associates and family members have pleaded guilty so far in deals with the prosecutors, who accuse Keating of wide-ranging schemes to improperly siphon federally insured funds away from Lincoln and dupe investors who bought bonds issued by American Continental.

Regulators say the failure of Irvine-based Lincoln cost taxpayers $2.6 billion, the most expensive bailout ever.

Mayor to appoint investigator to check allegations vs. NYPD

NEW YORK (AP) — An independent investigator will begin probing the Police Department for corruption, Mayor David Dinkins announced.

Dinkins said Thursday he would name an independent counsel in the next few days.

New York Newsday reported that day that federal investigators were examining allegations of wrongdoing in 10 police precincts.

The newspaper, quoting anonymous law enforcement sources, said some officers were allegedly involved in extorting merchants, taking payoffs to protect apartment houses, dealing drugs, robbing shop owners and acting as spotters for burglary rings.

The New York Times reported today that one area being targeted by federal prosecutors is the 34th Precinct in the upper Manhattan neighborhood of Washington Heights.

Police there are suspected of overlooking drug dealing in exchange for money and drugs and acting as guardians for the dealers by protecting the buildings and stores where they live and work, the Times said.

Dinkins, Police Commissioner Lee Brown, and Chief Robert

Beatty, commander of the Police Department's Internal Affairs Division, said they know of no federal investigation into the department.

Dinkins said he would appoint an independent counsel, instead of relying on an internal police investigation, because "many in the public will conclude that" an internal investigation "is a whitewash."

He said Brown has agreed to cooperate fully in the independent investigation. Brown refused to answer questions Thursday.
