City to sparkle at holiday fare

Pampa is gearing up for the annual Fourth of July celebration, with a city fireworks display set to blast off at dusk.

The Veteran's of Foreign Wars will host a presentation at 8:30 p.m. July 4 at the rodeo arena in Recreation Park with greetings from 1992-93 VFW Post #1657 Commander Clint Lewis.

The fireworks display will begin about 9:30 p.m. with viewing available in Recreation Park.

Officials caution that it is unlawful to set off fireworks on city property or in the city limits. No swimming is allowed in Recreation Park Lake.

A concession stand will be available at Recreation Park.

This year, residents can donate to the city Fireworks Fund by mailing checks to the City of Pampa, P.O. Box 2499, Pampa, Texas 79066, ATTN: July 4th Fund. Containers are also at retail stores and restaurants in Pampa.

Battalion Chief Dan Rose investigates a grass fire Thursday, which was caused by fireworks. The fire department warns that it is against city ordinance to discharge fireworks in the city limits.

Trains back on track

Congress knew they could

By ANN LEVIN
Associated Press Writer

Circus lions and commuters traveled by train again today after Congress ended a two-day rail shutdown, and freight service surged back toward normal levels.

"I'm just glad we're back in service," said Amtrak employee Regina Knowles, who waited at Los Angeles' Union Station for the 6:10 a.m. train home to Anaheim.

About 75 percent of Union Pacific's trains were already running again by midmorning today, said spokesman John Bromley. All trains should be under way by this evening with service completely restored Saturday, about a day sooner than earlier expected, he said.

The shutdown had affected everyone from giant manufacturers such as General Motors, which stopped production at four plants, to one unit of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which got stranded in Lafayette, La., and had to cancel today's show in Jackson, Miss.

The circus' 18 elephants, 15 lions and tigers and other animals were loaded on their train early today, and moved out by late morning en route to Jackson by way of New Orleans, said Southern Pacific freight agent Charles Chachere.

"We take this 'greatest show on earth' seriously and take pride in getting through. We're disappointed in not keeping our record intact," circus spokesman Rodney Huey said. It was the first time train problems had forced a cancellation, he said.

Brushing off labor opposition, the House and Senate overwhelmingly approved a bill imposing a 35-day cooling-off period and submitting the stubborn dispute to arbitration. President Bush signed the bill early today.

"I'm sure that members are glad to see that we're getting back to work," said David Turner, chairman of Local 612 of the Machinists union in Lincoln, Neb. "But the only drawback is that it's not resolved."

Under the legislation, an arbitrator must recommend a settlement — choosing between labor's last offer at the bargaining table and the railroad industry's. The recommended settlement would then go to Bush for approval.

The rail shutdown began at midnight Tuesday when the Machinists union struck CSX Transportation, one of the nation's largest freight railroads. Other unions had agreed to continue talking for 48 hours, but most other freight haulers shut down, saying their many interconnections made it impossible for them to work without CSX. The unions called it a lockout.

Pickets came down at 3 a.m. and the railroad resumed operations shortly after that time, said CSX spokesman Jay Westbrook in Jacksonville, Fla.

"We expect to be back to normal by midday," Westbrook said. "We are calling in everything we can without clogging the system."

Both the Bush administration and business had warned of severe economic consequences if the strike continued into the weekend.

And even with the back-to-work order, 2,500 hourly production workers at the General Motors assembly plant in Moraine, Ohio, were to stay home Monday because of lack of supplies, said spokeswoman Antonette Simonetti in Detroit.

"The prompt action by Congress certainly is what was in the best interest of the nation's economic recovery," she said. Production at the plants was expected to resume when parts arrive.

Central California potato grower Glenn Handel said late Thursday he was prepared to give a half-day's work today to most of the 50 employees he laid off when the shutdown began, idling three rail cars filled with 126,000 pounds of potatoes.

Farm groups had warned that winter wheat and potato crops might have to be dumped along with rotting fresh fruits and vegetables if the trains did not get back on track.

Amtrak had idled most of its trains because they roll on tracks owned by the private carriers, but the busy Boston-to-Washington line stayed open because the passenger line owns its own track there.

However, Amtrak had faced its own midnight strike deadline Thursday that would have left hundreds of thousands of commuters in the Northeast scrambling.

Many commuter lines had planned for the worst because they use Amtrak lines.

Instead, "it's a normal morning, and it should be a normal rush hour. We're ready to go," Kathleen Donohue of New Jersey Transit said early today. The agency serves some 40,000 riders.

Amtrak said short-distance commuter routes would be up and running today. Longer routes could resume service by Saturday, said spokeswoman Marci Larson.

"In terms of longer distance and overnight trains, that's a more involved process with preparation of the appropriate crews, getting the train stocked and serviced, it could be 18 to 24 hours once everybody gets back to work," she said.

Though some workers said they were glad to be back on the job, others criticized the bill as interference.

"The only time that the president and the Congress step in is when the unions have a chance of winning a strike," said Charles Moneyppenny, president of Local 2054 of the Transport Workers Union of America in Boston.

The dispute, over such issues as wages and work rules, involved unions representing about 20,000 workers including carmen, engineers, dispatchers and machinists. But 200,000 other rail workers were thrown out of work by the shutdown.

Supreme Court says Mississippi colleges unlawfully segregated

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that Mississippi's state-run colleges and universities are unlawfully segregated by race even though whites and blacks can attend the school of their choice.

The court said Mississippi has not done enough to overcome its history of legally enforced segregation because most black students still attend educationally inferior, predominantly black schools.

The 8-1 ruling is the court's first ever broad ruling on racial segregation in higher education. The court in 1950 ordered the University of Texas law school to admit a black student in all phases of campus life.

"We think it is a great day in America because the whole nation was looking at this case," said Alvin Chambliss, a lawyer who argued before the high court on behalf of blacks in Mississippi. "We believe there is discrimination in Mississippi and the state just wanted to walk away from it."

The decision's full impact is unclear. But it could force Mississippi, and some other states, to spend more tax money to upgrade predominantly black state-run schools.

The court said lower courts, in restudying the case, must decide whether additional funds are required to end the effects of past segregation. But the justices said they would not take it upon themselves to order Mississippi to spend more on the black colleges.

Other options also may be available, such as eliminating duplication of programs at predominantly white and predominantly black schools.

Such possible remedies have some civil rights leaders worried about the survival of institutions that historically have offered the best chance for blacks to get a higher education.

Justice Byron R. White, writing for the court, said, "If the state perpetuates policies and practices traceable to its prior system that continue to have segregative effects ... and such policies are without sound educational justification and can be practically eliminated, the state has not satisfied its burden of proving that it has dismantled its prior system."

Such policies are unconstitutional, he said, "even though the state has abolished the legal requirement that whites and blacks be educated separately and has established racially neutral policies."

Justice Antonin Scalia, in his dissent, said, "I reject ... the effectively unsustainable burden the court imposes on Mississippi, and all states that formerly operated segregated universities."

"I predict ... a number of years of litigation-driven confusion and destabilization in the university systems of all the formerly (segregated) states that will benefit neither blacks nor whites. Nothing good will come of this judicially ordained turmoil, except the public recognition that any court that would knowingly impose it must hate segregation."

The Bush administration and blacks had joined forces in urging the justices to overturn a 1990 ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that Mississippi had met its obligation to dismantle the system of official segregation.

Freedom for students to enroll in the college of their choice left segregation intact, said administration officials and black parents who sued the state in 1975.

But the case caused mixed feelings among civil rights leaders. Historically, predominantly black schools have played a key role in preparing blacks for professional careers.

Some supporters of such schools say opportunities for many blacks could be reduced or eliminated if the historically black schools lose their racial identity.

Mississippi, obeying a federal court order, began desegregating its state-run colleges in 1962, when James Meredith was admitted to the University of Mississippi.

The court in 1954 declared that official segregation in public elementary and secondary schools violated the Constitution.

But the closest it ever came before to addressing segregation at the college level was a 1986 ruling that said North Carolina State University fulfilled its duty to desegregate 4-H clubs by offering open enrollment. Those clubs remained segregated despite the freedom of choice.

The case decided today is U.S. vs. Fordice, 90-1205.

Peace pilgrims plan Pampa pause

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

European Peace Pilgrimage 1992 is scheduled to be in the Pampa area Saturday. Twenty-two European and (Native) Americans plan to enter Pampa on Tying Avenue Sunday and continue to Hobart Street Park to spend the night.

"The purpose of our organization is to mark the 500th anniversary of Columbus' voyage," full-time peace activist from the Netherlands, Frits ter Kuile, traveling ahead of the group to get permits and finalize the details, said. "The 2,600-mile pilgrimage is urging restoration of Native American rights for worldwide acceptance of a Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty."

He said the 2,600 miles is a "once in a lifetime" event.

"We didn't want to go Interstate 40, and we wanted to go to Pantex Nuclear Weapon plant near Amarillo on July 4," he said. "The last big city we went through was Oklahoma City, then there was a whole lot of nothing, then you hit Pampa."

Members are from a dozen countries ranging from 18 to 57 years old with jobs as diverse as brick-laying and software engineering.

"We walk together to call attention to dangers so serious and so urgent that we have given up our jobs and homes, our incomes and comforts for nine months to cross the USA," members says.

Nearly midway through their expedition, the group plans to stay with Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Ingram, eight miles east of Pampa on Saturday night.

"They came through here a year and a half ago to set things up," Yvonne Ingram said. "It was cold and snowing, I thought my husband was kidding when he told me they were coming here. Then we got a card from the Netherlands at Christmas. "He plays jokes on me all the time," she said. "I just couldn't believe he did it. Normally he doesn't do things like this."

The Ingrams are scheduled to host dinner for the group Saturday. "My husband told me we are going to have to confront these people sooner or later," she said. "I think it would be very interesting to see what they have to say. We don't have to agree with them, we are not out to say you are wrong."

Travel across America began for the members Feb. 1 in Georgia and the group plans to finish Oct. 12, Columbus Day, at the nuclear test site in Nevada.

"On the 29th we will walk to White Deer, first along Highway 60, and after six miles we will take a dirt road to the right," ter Kuile, said. "Anyone is invited to join us for a day or two or just come and talk with us."

"Comments were heard following the presentation by the TWC from approximately 20 people," Pampa City Commissioner Gary Sutherland, said. "Written comments could also be made."

The TWC officials were in Amarillo to receive input from area cities which will be affected by the Subtitle D regulations.

"The people (TWC) that were there were real concerned about what the regulations are going to do, as far as running landfills go," Sutherland said. "As for the cost to cities, the things that we see are exorbitant. It is going to run a lot of small cities out of landfills. It already has."

TWC officials seemed to be understanding, but there are so many unknowns, he said. These regulations have been put off for two to three years now, he said.

"We are moving toward trying to become a regional landfill," Sutherland said about Pampa. "We have the size as far as population, but then we would be the one in the Panhandle."

Pampa is also trying to get permits for additional landfill space, which is estimated to cost from $300,000 to $500,000, he said.

"There will be another hearing in the next five or six months. It will be what they are going to purpose," Morris said.

TWC airs regulations on waste

The Texas Water Commission made a presentation Thursday to area officials and residents on what the Subtitle D regulations entail during a meeting at the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission in Amarillo.

Subtitle D regulations were recently released by the Environmental Protection Agency. The regulations deal with the handling of solid waste and stringent new requirements for landfills, which have put many small landfills in the Panhandle out of business.

"Most of the communities from the Panhandle were at the meeting," Richard Morris, city of Pampa engineer, said.

PD gets new briefing area

By ANGELA LEGGETT
 Staff Writer

An upgraded briefing area is one of the newest changes under way for the patrol division of the Pampa Police Department.

"Through the help of various departments in the city, a building has been acquired and moved to the area of the City Service Center in Hobart Street Park," Lt. Steve Chance of the Pampa Police Department said in a news release.

"The briefing area is a place that police department patrol personnel meet before going on duty to be briefed on that day's activities and receive training," Chance said.

Recently, the department has been deciding what the new area is going to be called.

"To facilitate and reduce radio traffic, the police department has a designated radio name for various places in our jurisdiction," Chance said. "For instance, the Pampa Police Department is referred to as 'Station 8.' The City Jail is referred to as 'Station 11.' Even though the new briefing area has been designated as the patrol headquarters, it has taken on some other names. It has been called 'Station 6,' which will probably be the radio designation.

"Because of the wire, fencing and electric gate, it has also been referred to as Stalag 6," Chance said. "We probably won't keep that one."

The building has one large briefing room with a sink and coffee pot, Chance said. There is also an office for the on-duty supervisor and restroom facilities.

The building has been remodeled and made serviceable. It has been enclosed by chain link fencing and an electric gate has been installed to permit limited access to the area.

"Our future plans for the facility include getting the parking area blacktopped," he said. "A sign will be posted outside the building identifying it as Police Patrol Headquarters. Citizens are welcome to drive by and see where we are located."

Rodeo banners to adorn businesses

Colorful Top O' Texas Rodeo banners will be displayed at local businesses beginning today and Saturday, according to rodeo officials.

In the past, several of the banners have been stolen or vandalized, officials said in a news release. The banners are private property, and any theft or vandalism is a crime.

The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association wants it to be known that violators will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. The rodeo banners that are paid for and displayed by area merchants add a great deal to the rodeo celebration. Crimes such as theft or vandalism ruin the activities for everyone, according to rodeo officials.

France's farmers blockade fun park

MARNE-LA-VALLEE, France (AP) — Militant French farmers blockaded Euro Disneyland today, trapping thousands of tourists in their cars in the latest protest against proposed cuts in European Community farm subsidies.

"We have thousands of people waiting in cars," said a Disney spokesman speaking on company rules of anonymity. "They've come from many European countries and have driven overnight to get here. They have kids."

Some families abandoned their cars a mile from the amusement park and walked to the ticket gate. The farmers allowed them and tourists arriving by train to enter.

The cars and buses started backing up shortly before dawn, when about 500 farmers drove 300 tractors across the main car entrance and roads leading to the park 20 miles east of Paris.

Several squads of riot police took up position nearby but did not intervene. The park remained open and no violence was reported.

The farmers cried defiance at the United States, which they blame for pressuring the 12-nation European Community to adopt cuts in subsidies. The farmers, mostly small-scale, claim 1 million of them will be driven off the land if subsidies are cut.

The farmers' protest was aimed specifically at drawing attention of the farmers' anger to the EC heads of state opening a two-day summit today in Lisbon, Portugal, said Henri Pepitas, local president of the National Federation of Agricultural Unions, told Europe-1 radio.

Angry farmers sit in front of the main entrance of Euro Disney amusement park today.

The protest was the second dramatic display of the farmers' grievances this week. On Tuesday, the radical grass-roots farm movement Rural Coordination tried, and largely failed, to block all road access to Paris with tractor barricades.

Since Euro Disneyland opened in April, trade unions protesting its work code have struck a train line leading to the park, and intellectuals have deplored a perceived attack on French culture. The park's high profile assures protests of media attention.

Researchers make AIDS find

WASHINGTON (AP) — A picture of a key enzyme in AIDS virus infections has been created by a team of Yale University scientists in a discovery that may accelerate development of new AIDS-fighting drugs, according to a report published today.

Thomas A. Steitz, head of the Yale University research team, said that by knowing the shape of the AIDS enzyme, reverse transcriptase, researchers will be able to more quickly find drugs that effectively disable the AIDS virus with a minimum of side effects on patients.

"Instead of trying everything, you can try a smaller number of things," said Steitz. "It narrows the search and enables you to direct your efforts more profitably."

The journal Science published a report on the research today.

Yale scientists determined the reverse transcriptase shape by first crystallizing the complex protein and then taking a long series of X-ray pictures. These were then processed through a computer to give a three-dimensional image of the molecule.

With a picture of the structure, Steitz said, researchers are able to determine which parts of the molecule perform actual functions within a cell. When these sites are known, he said, then scientists can design drugs that block the action of the enzyme but which do not affect other proteins within the body.

Reverse transcriptase, or RT, is used by the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS, to take over the genetic pattern of a target cell. Once inside the cell, the RT molecule causes the genes in the cell to make the proteins that the virus needs to reproduce. Hence, RT is essential to spreading the HIV infection within the body.

If the function of RT can be blocked, then the HIV infection can be halted.

The three antiviral drugs approved for HIV work by blocking the function of RT, but these drugs, in a class called nucleotide inhibitors, can be toxic to some patients.

Now that the structure of RT is known, Steitz said, it may be possible to chemically redesign drugs to remove their toxicity but retain their effectiveness against HIV.

Steitz said his research team found that another drug, nevirapine, also blocks the action of RT, but in a way different from the nucleotide inhibitors.

Nevirapine, he said, appears to paralyze a key juncture in RT, keeping the molecule from promoting HIV reproduction. Unlike other HIV drugs, however, said Steitz, nevirapine appears to avoid connecting with other proteins in the cell, thus, perhaps, lowering toxicity.

Steitz said nevirapine works "like pouring sand into the gears of a machine. Nevirapine gums up the works."

In a Science critique of the Yale research, Dr. Alexander Wlodawer of the National Cancer Institute said finding the structure of RT is an "important first step" toward drugs that function in a planned way on specific parts of the reverse transcriptase molecule.

"The structure of a complex of RT ... brings us closer to having sufficient information for the next cycle of drug design," wrote Wlodawer.

Steitz said that the candidate AIDS drug nevirapine is in the second phase of a worldwide clinical study. The drug, made by Boehringer Ingelheim Pharmaceuticals of Ridgefield, Conn., was found to have few side effects in the first-phase research. The second phase is intended to find how effective it is against HIV itself.

Steitz, who is also a Howard Hughes Medical Institute researcher, was co-author of the research with L.A. Kohlstaedt, J. Wang, J.M. Friedman and P.A. Rice, all of Yale.

Science, which published the Yale study and the analysis by Wlodawer, is the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Pentagon MIA chief doubts GIs still alive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon official in charge of accounting for the Vietnam War's missing in action says he doubts any American servicemen who fought in the conflict are still alive in Indochina.

"I'm the first one to want to see an American walk out of the jungle ... but what I've seen to this point I don't think there are," Marine Maj. Gen. George Christmas told the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs.

The panel wrapped up two days of hearings Thursday on one of the nation's most painful issues — the fate of 2,266 U.S. servicemen who never returned after the divisive, nine-year conflict.

The committee chairman, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., accused the Pentagon of deliberately misleading the public in 1973 when it asserted there was no reason to believe Americans remained behind after the release of U.S. prisoners of war.

Kerry had said Wednesday that recently declassified government documents showed that as many as 133 American troops may have been left alive in Vietnam and Laos.

Kerry contended Thursday that a top Pentagon official responsible for the accounting of missing servicemen had been "disingenuous" in 1973 when he made his claims about military personnel.

But the official, Roger Shields, told the committee Thursday "We had no current, hard evidence that Americans were still held prisoner in Southeast Asia. ..."

"None of those who returned had any indication that anyone had been left behind," said Shields, who was deputy assistant secretary of defense for POW-MIA affairs from 1971 to 1977.

San Antonio man claims lottery million

LUBBOCK (AP) — Some call on a rabbit's foot. Others grab a horseshoe or a four-leaf clover.

For Jerry Hockman, luck was a rock. Not a blarney stone or anything polished: Just a round, mud-colored pebble he stumbled across.

The 44-year-old quality assurance agent at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio clutched the rock tightly before opening a mock safe Thursday in Lubbock and learning he had won a million-dollar cash prize in the Texas Lottery.

"I don't know, it just looked like something I needed to pick up and carry around with me," Hockman said of the luck charm he found two days before buying his winning ticket.

Hockman threw his cowboy hat high into the West Texas wind and hugged his weeping wife, Vicki, after his good fortune.

A self-proclaimed realist, Hockman says he will mull over retirement on a vacation with friends and family to Florida.

"I always said if I won big money, I would take six months off," Hockman said. "Other than that, my wife and I don't have any other real big plans other than getting used to being millionaires."

Hockman, a retired Army master sergeant, said since learning he was a finalist for the million-dollar prize, he and his wife never discussed winning.

"We didn't discuss anything over $10,000," said Hockman, of the smallest sum guaranteed to the finalists. "We wanted to be realistic and stay with the picture of $10,000."

The state plans to hold the weekly $1 million drawings through Sept. 3. The next drawing is scheduled for July 2 in Corpus Christi.

Hockman, who will actually receive a check for $800,000 after taxes are subtracted, said he had spent $5 a week on lottery tickets since the game's inception last month.

Edin Roberto Medrano, 48, a computer technician from Houston received $50,000.

The first scratch-off lottery ticket Medrano purchased was an "ENTRY" winner.

Jawad Baba, 29, an Humble grocery store manager, won $25,000. Randall Lutz, 34, a sales representative from Hockley, and Barbara Micu, a bookkeeper from Houston, each won $15,000.

Jaynie Maxon, 31, an unemployed mother of three from Austin, and Nelda Coleman, 37, a flower shop owner from Henrietta, each won $10,000.

U.S. government made this mistake

It is a bit ironic, and probably more than a bit hypocritical, for Mexico to be lecturing the United States about sticking to strict legal procedures that protect the rights of people accused of a crime. But a U.S. Supreme Court ruling recently that seems to condone law-breaking by U.S. government agents opened the door for the criticism.

The court ruled that since the U.S.-Mexico extradition treaty doesn't specifically prohibit a person kidnapped by agents of either country from being tried in that country, the trial of Dr. Humberto Alvarez Machain, accused of complicity in the murder of a U.S. drug agent, be allowed to proceed.

The decision - although not as unprecedented as might be imagined - was an unfortunate one. The action taken against Machain is an example of how the War on Drugs tempts frustrated authorities to go well beyond the bounds of normal law-enforcement activities and to stretch accepted definitions of constitutional safeguards in their desire to get what seems to be a victory.

Machain is accused of giving medical care to prolong the life of DEA Agent Enrique Camarena-Salazar during a brutal torture session that led to Camarena's death. (Nineteen people, including several top drug traffickers, have been charged in that February 1985 killing.) If true, a contemptible crime. And the Mexican government was not especially cooperative when the United States sought to have Machain extradited. So DEA officials - understandably frustrated - contracted to have him abducted - kidnapped - and flown to El Paso, where he was arrested.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist found a 106-year-old precedent in which somebody kidnapped in Peru was allowed to stand trial in the United States for larceny. But kidnapping is as unconscionable when performed by a government (or its agents) as when performed by a private-sector criminal. As three dissenting justices noted, it is not reasonable to suppose that a treaty that doesn't explicitly bar every imaginable criminal activity by the governments involved thereby authorizes whatever crimes a government may deem necessary.

Governments are supposed to control crimes, not commit them. If it's fine for a government to commit crimes in pursuit of alleged criminals, much of the rationale for government's existence is in jeopardy.

The role of the drug war in skewing the perception of the proper role of government cannot be stressed too heavily. Any attempt to protect people from themselves, by trying to prohibit private, consensual behavior (however harmful) by adults is bound to fail. That failure will lead to frustration, which will lead to excess. In this case, it led to an opening for the Mexican government to criticize the U.S. government for being insufficiently sensitive to human rights. The criticism may be hypocritical, but our government asked for it.

Getting back to a crime bill

WASHINGTON - Nobody around here was the least bit surprised. A few days ago the National Center for Health Statistics published a report on homicide by firearms, and whaddya know? Washington, D.C., won the first-place prize.

That's right. Here in the nation's capital, we murder more people, per capita, than any of the 80 largest urban areas. Among black males aged 15 to 19 we edged out Los Angeles. We beat Phoenix by almost 2-to-1. We outkilled Detroit, Jacksonville and New Orleans: Bloodshed? You want bloodshed? Come to Washington. We got bloodshed.

Isn't it time Congress got serious about concealable handguns? Haven't we had enough killing?

Time is running short for the 102nd Congress. Because of the national political conventions and the August recess, only a few weeks remain before expected adjournment in early October. Even so, leaders could find time enough for a truly bipartisan effort to find agreement on a gun law. All the pieces are in place. They need only to be put together.

This Congress has copied the useless maneuvers of all the king's horses and all the king's men. On one issue after another the House and Senate have marched up the Hill and marched down again. The crime bill provides a disgraceful example.

After prolonged debate, the Senate passed a crime bill last July. The House passed its version in October. The two bills went to conference. On Nov. 27 the House accepted the conference version 205-203. In March the Senate balked. By a vote of 54-43 the Senate refused to stop a Republican filibuster. The moribund bill was removed to a ward for the terminally ill. Since then a good many things have happened.

James J. Kilpatrick

A fed-up public has grown even more fed up with the disgraceful levels of partisanship in Congress. Rioters have devastated parts of Los Angeles. The statistics on death by gunfire have compelled new attention to this wretched problem.

Sen. John Chafee, D-R.I., has seriously proposed a federal law banning the manufacture, sale or possession of handguns. C. Everett Koop, the former surgeon general, has advanced a sensible proposal for licensing gun owners.

Given this revived attention to an urgent public problem, why can't Congress get on the ball? The Chafee bill has no realistic chance. The senator scorns constitutional objections as "utter nonsense," but the Second Amendment cannot be so easily brushed aside. It says "the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed." True, that right is uncertainly tied to the need for a well-regulated militia, but the language retains some force against an outright ban.

If the ownership of handguns cannot be prohibited outright, what could be done? Koop would require gun owners to be licensed, even as automobile owners are licensed. Owners would have to demonstrate their skill in handling firearms. Periodically they would qualify to have their licenses renewed. Licenses would be revoked for cause.

I like Koop's idea. It stops short of registration of firearms, a step that would create a monstrous bureaucracy. It would reduce the number of accidental shootings. It would improve the chances that a homeowner or shopkeeper, shooting at a burglar, would hit his target.

Agreement could be reached, if men of good will would only try, on the Brady Bill. This would establish a rule, nationwide, requiring licensed gun dealers to impose a week's delay between purchase and delivery of a concealable handgun. The time period would be used to check the credentials of the purchaser against police records.

No one represents the Brady Bill as a cure-all. It isn't. Criminals would get guns on the black market. Sen. Chafee estimates that Americans own 66 million handguns. Two million more are manufactured or imported every year. The best that can be said for Brady is that it would be a step in the right direction.

The moribund crime bill contains sound provisions that would increase prison terms for crimes involving the use of a firearm. This approach always has seemed to me the best approach. If Sec. 2004 of the House bill had been in effect at the time of the L.A. riots, looters who stole guns would have subject to 10 years in prison.

The elements of a workable gun law are on the table. Congress needs no further hearings. Something constructive can be done. All that is required is the will to do it.

The forbidden island

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part column by Paul Harvey. The second part will run Monday.

Since the earliest of my several visits to the islands of Hawaii I have heard about the one "forbidden" one where time has stood still for a thousand years, where native Polynesians were said to live as they have always lived.

Though intrigued, I made no effort to intrude on that privacy.

Recent years there were grumblings that the Robinson family, owners of that island of Niihau for more than a hundred years, were using the islanders as "slave laborers" to support "a feudal empire" beyond the reach of our laws. That they were raising and marketing cattle and crops and otherwise profiting from the "forced labor of unwilling serfs."

The Robinson family of the nearby island of Kauai, anguished by those whispers, at long last elected to invite scrutiny.

April of this year I went there. Aboard Bruce Robinson's helicopter I flew from Hanapepe, Kauai, across Kaulahahi Channel, along the windward north shore of Niihau, to settle on a rocky clearing.

That helicopter is a recent acquisition. While it is appropriate for medical emergencies, the Robinsons had been anxious about local reaction to the noisy intruder.

That it was accepted immediately by the islanders relates at least in part to the machine's first landing last year. Precisely at touchdown a rainbow appeared.

Paul Harvey

Snapshots of the occasion confirm that the "rainbow's end" appears to be exactly where the chopper's skids say on the landing site.

That "omen of good fortune" was enough to convert onlookers from skepticism to applause.

Nonetheless, for my arrival, we sat down a respectful distance from the island's only village.

Niihau, by contemporary standards, is not a pretty place.

Most of the volcano that first formed the tiny island has long since sunk back into the sea. What remains is a low and mostly flat island 19 miles long by 17 miles wide. Because it is downwind from the sheltering island of Kauai, Niihau is dry, mostly desert. The tallest of its thorny kiawe trees are little more than head-high.

Except for the magnificent seascapes, islanders have had to create their own beauty.

They do with gardens of flowers in their half-mile-long village. They make makaloa mats from swamp grass, leis from makihana berries; they decorate gourds and they make shell necklaces unlike any other. More later about those necklaces.

In the village there is school through eighth grade. Students may learn English but most choose instead the musical Hawaiian language.

Their church, Hawaiian Baptist, is a stabilizing influence.

Each day begins with family prayer. Church elders are also community leaders otherwise. Their careful "selection procedure" averts the otherwise debilitating effect of intermarriage.

Near offshore in Keanahaki Bay is a steep, small coral atoll populated only by birds so tame that the one time the helicopter flew too close it flushed a cloud of feathered fliers that might have been impenetrable.

The helicopter will not fly that way again.

So I found the "forbidden island" to be less a feudal empire than a Noah's Ark. Wild pigs and turkeys abound. Also wild sheep and donkeys. Most of the few horses are unbroken.

The British shorthorn cattle are barely a commercial herd.

Hawaiian monk seals romp on offshore rocks and, in the lapis blue surf, scores of black tip reef sharks reign.

Vegetation is limited mostly to that scrub kiawe, somewhat larger near water holes, but the only commercial value is as charcoal for barbecue ovens of the other islands.

Then what is the big idea that perpetuates this primitive Eden?

A battle-ready United States is vital

When the Soviet Union collapsed, a lot of people began making optimistic calculations about the big cuts that could be made in the defense budget. But there will be no peace dividend worth mentioning if Uncle Sam is going to barge around the world stopping civil wars, quelling revolutions, and just generally making things safe for democracy. There is real trouble enough, just around the corner.

For starters, we are obviously being prepared for U.S. military intervention in what used to be Yugoslavia. That nation has broken up into its ethnic components, with the Serbs beating up on most of the others, and it isn't a pretty sight. Even many ordinarily peace-minded liberals are demanding that the Serbs be stopped. Since the major European powers, though distressed by it all, show no convincing signs of being willing to intervene militarily themselves, relief must be sought elsewhere.

One theoretical possibility is a contingent of those famous blue-helmeted United Nations troops. But which countries, precisely, would furnish these? Irish or Finnish forces, which have been used in various global hot spots in the past, may be adequate to cow some small Third World nation, but the Serbian army would simply chew them up and spit them out. So that leaves it up to the good old U.S.A.

Various armchair strategists have already called for aerial intervention, to deny the Serbs control of the skies over the battlefields. Other voices, however, are growling that only ground forces will make Serbia listen to reason. How soon will body bags start arriving in Delaware from Bosnia and Croatia?

But that's only the beginning. In nearby Haiti, a tin-pot pro-communist named Aristide was elected president, but the island's military staged a coup, and threw him out of the country. Washington promptly set about organizing economic sanctions to force them to let him return and govern, but the only result so far has been to impoverish Haiti still further and trigger a flood of Haitians to Florida.

So the matter is already abroad that we must send troops to Haiti. Haiti's forces probably couldn't put up much of a fight, but figure that at least a few American soldiers would be bound to die.

North Korea is a much more serious problem, and a much tougher nut to crack. This desperate and dangerous nation, perhaps the most absolute communist tyranny left on earth, is working hard to build atomic weapons, and is believed close to succeeding. If it does, its longtime dictator Kim Il-Sung, a bloody-minded megalomaniac, is perfectly capable of dropping atomic bombs on South Korea (which he covets and hates), or for that matter on Japan, or even the United States if he can think of a means of delivering them.

North Korea is so close to economic collapse that even Kim has been compelled to behave nicely in recent months, opening talks with South Korea and hinting that he will soon sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and allow international inspection teams to poke around his country, looking for bomb factories.

But he hasn't allowed it yet, and what if he's lying? North Korea, unlike Yugoslavia or Haiti, is genuinely capable of upsetting the balance of world order, and thus demands serious American attention. But what should we do? Air strikes might knock out North Korea's bomb factories, if we can find out where they are, but there's no assurance that Kim would retaliate with a ground invasion of South Korea, a la 1950. It took Douglas MacArthur and 5 million lives to stop him then.

So, Gen. Powell, get your contingency plans ready. There's plenty of work - some unfortunately necessary and some thoroughly unnecessary - that the Pentagon may soon be called upon to do.

Commission investigates possible police link to massacre

By GREG MYRE
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A security guard told a government commission today that police took part in the June 17 massacre of more than 40 blacks.

The testimony could bolster the African National Congress' long-standing claim that police have instigated township violence. Police deny the charge and say the fighting is largely a power struggle between the ANC and the Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party.

The ANC, the leading black group, suspended negotiations with President F.W. de Klerk's government on Tuesday to protest the massacre at Boipatong township, one of the country's worst mass killings.

The ANC and Boipatong residents have accused police of helping Zulus from a workers' hostel in carrying out the attack, in which men, women and children were shot and hacked to death. Police denied the charge. They have questioned more than 100 men from the hostel, but no arrests have been made.

The security guard, Mandla Mngomezulu, told the government's Goldstone Commission on violence that policemen based at the Greenside coal mine were transported to the Boipatong township south of Johannesburg and participated in the slaughter.

Mngomezulu said he spoke with one of the policemen, Jeremiah Sikando, who said he went to Boipatong the night of the attack. Sikando said he did not participate in the attack, but that his police colleagues did, Mngomezulu testified.

Mngomezulu said Sikando was in tears when he described the events in Boipatong two days after the massacre.

Police have acknowledged that 40 officers from the former Koevoet paramilitary unit in Namibia, the territory South Africa administered until 1990, are now based at the Greenside mine in Ogies, 80 miles from Boipatong.

But police said they were there to prevent theft in the area and were not linked to township fighting.

Koevoet members were frequently accused of abuses in Namibia, where they battled the South-West Africa People's Organization, the group that led Namibia to independence two years ago.

Goldstone Commission members visited the mine Wednesday and found trunks of rifles and ammunition.

The commission, headed by Judge Richard Goldstone, was set up last year to investigate political violence that has claimed some 8,000 lives in the past three years.

Mngomezulu testified that armed policemen based at the coal mine left the property in minivans at night on many occasions and did not return until early morning.

"We accepted they were allowed to have guns," Mngomezulu said at the hearings, held in Pretoria.

Also today, the African National Congress said it would present the white government with 14 demands that must be addressed before talks can resume on abolishing apartheid.

The ANC said today's meeting was only to hand over its demands at the "messenger level." The ANC's demands for resuming talks, announced Tuesday, include: an international commission to investigate township violence, establishment of a multiracial interim government, prosecution of police allegedly involved in violence and a ban on carrying weapons in public.

Roelof Meyer, the government's constitutional development minister, said he was trying to arrange a meeting between President F.W. de Klerk and ANC leader Nelson Mandela. But Mandela planned to leave for talks with the Organization of African Unity in Senegal and was unavailable.

Meyer said the government would issue its own memorandum to the ANC next week.

involvement in the violence.

The women chained themselves to a lamppost and held placards that read, "De Klerk, blood is on your hands."

In addition to suspending talks, the ANC has launched a protest campaign to put pressure on de Klerk's government. The ANC told its officials worldwide to hold vigils and boycott South African products on Monday to mourn the Boipatong victims.

Old cotton gin is art haven

By CHARLIE CHITWOOD
The Paris News

LADONIA (AP) — Of all the things that could happen to an 88-year-old cotton gin, turning it into a combination of art-studio, gallery and artists' residence would have to be low on the list of guesses. But that is exactly what happened to the old Bishop Cotton Gin after years of vision and hard, sweaty work by a Dallas couple.

It all paid off this year when the Ladonia Foundation opened its doors for the first time, hosting several artists from various fields.

Canadian-born artist Juliana Bernier and her husband, Bob Slaughter, purchased the old cotton gin and surrounding five acres in 1984, thinking the location would be ideal for spreading out their respective projects.

"We thought we could fix it up in a year, then get back to our art," said Mrs. Bernier. "It ended up taking four years and we still have work to do."

First, the collected waste of 25 years had to be hauled out.

"There was a mountain green trash bags," she said. "We had the volunteer fire department come out and burn them for us."

The first priority for the Dallas couple was to convert the old seed shed into living quarters. The building that had no doors or windows, just an opening at one end, is now used by the couple and visiting artists for accommodations.

"The kitchen area was wide open — you could have driven a truck in here," Mrs. Bernier explained. "We built on the kitchen and put in the bathroom, then started work on the studios in the gin."

Over in the brick, tin and wood gin building, the couple designed and built a gallery area at one end, creating adjacent apartments and studios throughout the length of the vine-covered building.

Writers, painters, sculptors and professionals in other media have ample space to ply their craft. The facility includes a foundry for bronze works, a mold room, a darkroom for photographers and a shop. Besides having plenty of room and a peaceful atmosphere to work in, the artists enjoy the community with one another.

"I always wanted to share the space with other artists," said Mrs. Bernier. "The interaction between artists at work is very stimulating."

Indeed the brainstorming comes naturally to the artist and her husband, who incorporates his background in paleontology with folklore to create a sort of paleo-art. Slaughter, who retired early from Southern Methodist University to devote time to the project, frequently used the technique with his graduate students at the university.

Since February, "Le Cotton Gin" has been temporary home to several artists, including author Frank Schaefer of Dallas, painter Marie-Claude Pratte of Montreal, ceramic artist James Watral of Dallas and Detroit, and Michigan-born sculptor Herb Goldman. Ms. Pratte and Goldman, particularly, have had their works exhibited around the world.

Artists apply for the residency program, and have their portfolio judged by a panel of professionals from various fields in Dallas. Up to six artists can be accommodated and workspace for a few more. Each receives a small stipend to cover food and material expenses.

"We're in a hiatus right now, but we expect to start another residency next month," said Mrs. Bernier. "We have an artist coming from Mexico — we'd like to have a foreign artist with each group."

Right now, about 75 percent of the artists come from the Dallas area. Mrs. Bernier has been in contact with other multidisciplinary facilities to spread the word of the Ladonia gin's availability and promise. A similar foundation in Guadalajara, Mexico, is providing information about the Ladonia foundation to Mexican artists.

"Although we've really just started, we have been receiving money through various foundations and private donations. We also have an application pending with the National Trust for Historic Preservation. If we get that, it will really help with our funding efforts."

In downtown Ladonia, the couple have plans for refurbishing five storefronts on the east side of the square, including the old Ritz Theater. One of the buildings was donated by the Ladonia Historical Preservation Society.

On June 26, the foundation opens the premiere exhibit of work from the artists who have already worked at the gin. That show will run through July 9 at the D-Arts Visual Art Center.

Retailer known as 'Crazy Eddie' arrested

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Eddie Antar, the fugitive head of the defunct "Crazy Eddie" electronics store chain, has been arrested in Israel after more than two years on the run, officials said Thursday.

An 18-count federal indictment unsealed charged Antar, his brothers Mitchell and Allen, and their cousin Eddie Gindi with securities fraud, mail fraud and conspiracy to commit securities fraud. They are accused of inflating the value of the 43-store New York-based chain.

In Jerusalem, national police spokeswoman Tami Paul-Cohen said detectives tracked down Antar, 45, in the central Israeli town of Yavne. Procedures will be begun to extradite him to the United States, she said.

Crazy Eddie, whose commercials were once a staple of late-night television in the Northeast, was liquidated in 1990, the same year Antar disappeared. The ads, widely parodied on shows such as "Saturday Night Live," featured an actor portraying Eddie yelling that his prices were "insa-a-a-ane!"

A civil action by the Securities and Exchange Commission against Antar and others said disclosure statements filed with the commission misrepresented the 43-store chain's financial condition before it fell on hard times.

The lawsuit also charged insider trading by Crazy Eddie insiders. Antar hadn't been seen since February 1990 when he skipped a federal court hearing with more than $60 million from the stores, according to prosecutors.

Investigators charged that Antar skimmed money and inflated company earnings before the stock went public in 1984.

Several months after the disappearance, U.S. District Judge Nicholas Politan ordered Antar to pay the SEC $73 million for insider trading and stock manipulation.

The indictment named another cousin, Sam E. Antar, as an unindicted co-conspirator who is cooperating with authorities. Initial appearances for some of the defendants were scheduled this afternoon before U.S. Magistrate Donald Hanke, the office of U.S. Attorney Michael Chertoff said.

Alleged mass killer may lose citizenship

NEW YORK (AP) — The government moved Wednesday to strip U.S. citizenship from an elderly man who allegedly admitted participating in the mass killings of Jews as an SS guard during World War II.

Prosecutors said Jack Reimer, 73, told them in a sworn statement last month he fired his rifle into a group of Jews who had been forced into a mass grave.

But in a telephone interview, Reimer denied taking part in the killing near Trawniki, Poland, in the winter of 1941-42.

"I slept through it," Reimer said. "I saw the massacre when it was over."

A lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court charges that Reimer, of Carmel in suburban Putnam County, concealed his Nazi activities when he obtained U.S. citizenship in 1959.

According to prosecutors, Reimer was born in Ukraine and was drafted into the Soviet army in 1939. He was captured by the Germans in 1941 and — because he spoke German — was transferred to the SS training camp at Trawniki, authorities said. He became a German citizen in 1944, prosecutors said.

The camp's main function was to supply officers for the Nazis' campaign against the Jews, said Neal Sher, director of the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations. "It's truly a diabolical facility."

Several other people in the United States who served in that camp are under investigation, Sher said.

The government said Reimer confessed to participating in the forced deportation of more than 30,000

Jews from Czesochowa, Poland, to the Treblinka death camp in 1942. He also admitted helping in the Nazis' suppression of the Warsaw ghetto uprising in 1943, the government said.

But Reimer said he asked for and was assigned to a desk job after witnessing the aftermath of the Trawniki massacre.

He conceded that he failed to mention his service as a noncommissioned SS officer when he applied for U.S. citizenship.

"I left it out, that's true," he said. "I was ashamed of it."

Reimer came to the United States in 1952. He worked as a restaurant manager and then a snack food distributor in New York City until his retirement in 1980.

Sher said the government would seek to deport Reimer — probably to Germany or Ukraine — if it succeeds in revoking his citizenship, a process that could take years.

The case against Reimer arises at a time when the Nazi-hunting office is being criticized for its work in two other cases.

A Justice Department internal watchdog unit is reviewing the agency's handling of the extraditions of John Demjanjuk to Israel and Andrija Artukovic to Yugoslavia.

Artukovic has since died of natural causes. Demjanjuk is appealing a death sentence in the Israeli Supreme Court.

More than 500 suspected Nazis are under investigation nationwide, Sher said. To date, 42 have been stripped of their citizenship, and 30 have been deported.

New college graduate hopes to start new life

By BOB TUTT
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — If the homeless could earn medals, Purple Hearts would cover Lawrence Ackles' chest.

As he lived on the streets for the past five years, assailants have fractured his skull, dislodged an eye from its socket, damaged a kidney and shot him in the leg. And his head injuries apparently have triggered two strokes. All these made a finger broken in another assault seem like no big deal.

In a life filled with anxiety, Ackles never knew when another attack might come. Many days he didn't know where he was going to spend the night or whether he was going to get anything to eat.

But the most remarkable thing was that as he struggled to survive, he resumed his studies at Texas Southern University and completed requirements for a degree in psychology. He was awarded his diploma at TSU's spring graduation ceremonies.

"I didn't think I was going to make it to the graduation," he said. "I thought I was going to be killed first."

He got money for his courses through funds available to military veterans. His instructors loaned him books.

TSU determined that if he completed 12 hours of computer science courses, he would be eligible to receive his degree. So last year, Ackles signed up for four summer school courses.

His teachers marveled that he was able to do so well considering the accelerated pace of summer courses and the complexity of the subjects. He made Cs in three of the courses but dropped the fourth.

This spring, he passed the last course.

He said he strived to reduce his homework by taking great care in his note-taking, but some nights he had to study by firelight. He used the university's health-center facilities to clean up before classes.

Now 40, Ackles hopes his aca-demical accomplishments will help him find the stability that has eluded him for much of his life. He said he feels confident that he has vanquished drug problems that have bedeviled him.

He grew up in a family of modest means in Pennsylvania. An exceptional student, he entered the University of Pennsylvania when he was 16, but dropped out because he felt isolated.

After serving in the Army, he attended several other colleges before finding his way to TSU about a decade ago. For a while, he worked as a biological lab technician at the Veterans Administration Hospital here.

The breakup of a relationship with a woman five years ago sent him into a tailspin. He served time in the County Jail after pleading guilty to harassing her. In the process, he said, he lost all his belongings.

Ackles could have gone to stay with his parents, Robert and Rose Marie Ackles, who now live at Beasley in Fort Bend County, but he said the friction was too great. His relationship with his father, a former college instructor who's now a non-denominational minister, has been especially strained.

"I don't know how to be a son to him," he said. "No matter what I did I couldn't please him. I tried living with my parents, but that didn't work out. All I could do was to sit with my arms folded."

His mother said, "My husband and I have standards in our house that Lawrence could not adhere to. That is why he was on the streets. But he did succeed in getting his education and we commend him for that."

After each of his scrapes, she said, they asked him: "Are you ready to straighten up this time? We have faith he's going to make it."

Ackles said he feels as if the horrors of his experience as a homeless person have helped him atone for all the earlier misdirections in his life. He decided a college degree could serve as a passport back to a normal life.

Street people find themselves "trapped in a revolving door" of destitution and degradation, he said.

Several benefactors, including veterans groups, have assisted him and, for a couple of months, provided him an efficiency apartment.

Ackles is grateful for the help he has received, but the first week he was unable to sleep. "The apartment was like being in a little box," he said. It has only one way out whereas the abandoned buildings and houses where he has been staying offer multiple escape routes.

He hopes to find a job as a substitute teacher or maybe as a lab technician or housekeeper with the Department of Veterans Affairs. Someday he wants to get advanced degrees in psychology.

However, he is finding that it's not easy to make the transition back to normal society. He said that all the attention he has received from television reporters and others, though well-intentioned, has made this move more difficult.

Psychologist Lendell Braud is a longtime friend and mentor of Ackles. She said he is learning that when he is ready to straighten out his life, "you have to do it on your own, no matter how many people care about you."

And for doing that he gets no Purple Hearts.

Cincinnati art director calls it quits

CINCINNATI (AP) — The director of an art gallery who was acquitted of obscenity charges for displaying the late Robert Mapplethorpe's explicit photographs has resigned in a budget dispute with the trustees.

Dennis Barrie, the director of the Contemporary Arts Center for 8 1/2 years, said Tuesday that trustees had wanted to hold down spending for expanding programs and exhibits.

"I think the arts have to be expressive and aggressive in these difficult times," he said. "The board believes it's better to be more conservative, not in terms of the contents of exhibitions, but in terms of operations and finances. I love this institution too much to give it second-rate stuff."

Board's Chairman Rober Ach II, however, said the dispute was over whether the center should run up a deficit. The trustees insisted it should not, he said.

"We felt strongly that we had an obligation to the institution and to the board to stay within a balanced budget, and that we had to really try to identify our future funding sources on a better basis than we had been able to for the last year or so," Ach said.

Barrie is to remain as a consultant through Dec. 31 while the center begins a search for his successor.

Barrie and the center were indicted in April 1990 on misdemeanor obscenity charges for a Mapplethorpe exhibition that included photographs showing

Do your laundry, save the planet at Ecowash

By TOM HAYS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Diane Weiser and Laine Wilser are trying to save the planet, one spin cycle at a time.

They own Ecowash, possibly the nation's most environmentally friendly laundry.

Signs and literature in the laundry on Manhattan's Upper West Side serve notice that the operative word is "no" — no phosphates, no polycarboxylates, no chlorine bleach, no enzymes, no synthetic perfumes or dyes. The owners say those are the ingredients of a toxic brew that can percolate into the food chain.

Wilser and Weiser insist Ecowash was conceived as a business first, a clean-clothes, clean-Earth statement second.

Weiser, a 39-year-old property manager, said the neighborhood needed a drop-off and self-service laundry. The venture turned green when she began calling vendors.

"They started talking about all the great deals on soaps, bleaches — all these toxins," she said, sitting in the laundry's sunlit patio. "It was horrifying."

Weiser turned to the Connecticut distributor of a line of cleaning products from Belgium called Ecover. Normally found in health-food stores, Ecover substitutes vegetable oils for petroleum, and hydrogen peroxide for chlorine.

Ecowash and Ecover eventually struck a deal. Ecover sells its products to Ecowash at a discount. Ecowash uses them exclusively for drop-off laundry and sells them to self-service customers. (A 32-ounce bottle goes for $4.99.)

The arrangement is a first for Ecover, said spokeswoman Ellen Weiser, no relation to Diane.

The decision to go with safer products drove others: the purchase of water-saving, European washing machines ($1.50 per load, competitive by New York standards); the use of recycled paper, including invoices; and the search for someone who recycles lint.

On a wall opposite some washers are pictures taken by Wilser, a 38-year-old photographer, of a whale birth at the New York Aquarium. She calls them a subtle reminder to customers that water is shared with other creatures.

Ecowash, which opened in March, reigns as the greenest of the nation's 40,000 self-service laundries, said Richard Torp, spokesman for the Coin Laundry Association.

Torp has seen it all: the ones with tanning booths, with bars, with barbells. But he doesn't expect ecowash to sweep the country.

"While the idea is commendable — I'm not knocking it in any way — it's not something that's spreading," he said.

He said that coin laundries pose a minimal risk to the environment and that their waste water is cleaner than that of an average household.

Ecowash gets a steady flow of customers, some of whom pack in their laundry from other parts of town.

"It's just one small step in changing one's philosophy about how we treat the Earth," said Laura Murphy, a 20-year-old student.

But even the owners know there are limits.

"I'm not going to trip anyone who walks in with All Temp-A-Cheer," Wilser said.

Pocket guide to identifying trees available

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb. — A pocket guide for identifying trees is available free of charge from The National Arbor Day Foundation.

The 72-page guide, "What Tree is That?" will help identify 135 different trees found in the eastern and central United States.

Well-known trees included are oaks, maples, spruces and pines. Also species such as horsechestnut and mockernut hickory, sassafras, shadbush, persimmon, pawpaw, pagodatree and pecan.

Dozens of drawings illustrate the trees' leaves or needles and their acorns, berries, seed pods, cones, etc. "What Tree is That?" is organized to make it easy to identify trees in a simple step-by-step fashion.

"Helping people enjoy and appreciate trees is central to the educational mission of the Arbor Day Foundation," said John Rosenow, the foundation's executive director. "Being able to identify trees is important to knowing how to care for them and how to plant the right tree in the right place."

To receive a free tree identification guide, send your name and address to "What Tree is That?" The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, Neb. 68410.

Smith begins medical residency

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Dr. William Kennedy Smith, acquitted of rape in December, formally began his medical residency Wednesday, joining 69 other new physicians for orientation sessions and a visit to a veterans hospital.

Although Smith officially became a resident at the University of New Mexico's medical school this week, he has been preparing by working at the city's Veterans Administration Hospital for more than a month.

"I've been working here for a while, and I've been doing some work on fetal alcohol syndrome and working in the clinics," he told reporters during a break Wednesday. "People have, you know, been terrific and it's just a wonderful feeling."

Smith, 31-year-old nephew of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was acquitted in West Palm Beach, Fla., of raping a woman at his family's estate during Easter weekend 1991.

He had been scheduled to begin his residency at UNM a year ago but put it off.

"He has been working with some people over the last few weeks to make sure his skills are up to speed," said Dr. Kenneth Gardner, assistant dean of residency programs.

Gardner said three residents had discussed Smith's arrival at the medical school with him. One was delighted, one was concerned about publicity and the third was concerned because of a personal reason Gardner wouldn't elaborate on.

But in time, Gardner predicted, any concern over Smith's presence should die down, and "he'll go to work and disappear among his peers."

Smith, a Georgetown University Medical School graduate, will earn $24,900 this year, the first of a possible three-year residency in internal medicine. His contract may be renewed at the end of each year.

Smith chose UNM, Gardner said, partly because he had worked on the Jicarilla Apache reservation in north-central New Mexico while in medical school and because his cousin Kathleen Kennedy Townsend had attended the university law school.

Townsend, daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy, the former attorney general and U.S. Senator, has lived in Santa Fe. She received her law degree from UNM in 1979.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

BY HOLDING UP HIS ARMS, THE BATTLE WAS WON!

THE FIRST BATTLE THE ISRAELITES ENGAGED IN, AFTER THEIR ESCAPE FROM EGYPT, IS RECORDED IN EXODUS: CHAP. 17. THE AMALEKITES THREATENED THEIR SAFETY WHILE ENCAMPED AT REPHIDIM. MOSES TOLD JOSHUA TO PICK HIS BEST MEN AND DRIVE THEM OFF WHILE HE, MOSES, WOULD HOLD ALOFT HIS ROD ON A HILLTOP TO ENCOURAGE THEM. WHILE HE HELD IT HIGH, THE BATTLE WENT WELL BUT, AFTER A NUMBER OF HOURS, HIS ARMS TIRED AND DROPPED—THEN THE AMALEKITES BEGAN TO WIN. AARON AND HUR SAW THIS AND, SEATING MOSES ON A ROCK, THEY HELD HIS ARMS ON HIGH AND....

...ONCE AGAIN THE BATTLE WENT WELL AND THEY CONTINUED TO HOLD MOSES' ARMS ALOFT THROUGHOUT THE LONG DAY UNTIL THE AMALEKITES WERE DECISIVELY BEATEN!

Patriotic service planned

The First United Methodist Church plans to observe its annual patriotic service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

During the processional, Boy Scouts in uniform will carry eight large American flags, and place them in standards around the pulpit area.

The anthem by the chancel choir is titled "If My People Will Pray." The pastor, the Rev. Kenneth T. Metzger, will preach on "Impaired by Opinion."

The service will close with the choir singing Willhousky's arrangement of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" accompanied by Judy Strecker, organist and Jim Duggan and Art Owen on the trumpets. Steve Ross is minister of music.

The public is invited to attend.

Welch to serve as youth leader during summer

Terrell Welch is serving as youth pastor and worship leader during the summer months at New Life Worship Center.

Welch is a 1989 graduate of Pampa High School and attends Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie. He is majoring in pastoral ministries and is scheduled to graduate in December.

During the school year, Welch served under youth pastor Mack Warde at Gospel Lighthouse Church in Dallas. He has had experience in missions work as an assistant team leader in Monterrey, Mexico.

The local youth ministries group at New Life has selected the name "The Edge" with Proverbs 27:17: "As iron sharpens iron so one man sharpens another" as a theme.

Welch said the purpose of the youth group is to "challenge young people to escape from the status quo and move onto the cutting edge of Christianity."

The youth ministries meet at 7 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Terrell Welch

New Life Worship Center is located at 318 N. Cuyler, but plans to be in a new church facility at 1435 N. Sumner (Randy Matson and Sumner) by July 5.

For more information on the youth department or other services at New Life, call 665-7062.

Women clergy climb higher in episcopate

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It took just under two millennia for women to reach the top rung of the denominational ladder, but the recent election of two more women bishops signifies there is no turning back, church leaders said.

More than two decades after her church began ordaining women, the Rev. April Ulring Larson, 42, on June 12 became the first woman to be named a Lutheran bishop in the United States.

Two weeks earlier, the Rev. Jane Holmes Dixon, 54, became the second woman to be elected a bishop in the Episcopal Church. She still must be confirmed by votes of standing committees and bishops throughout the church, but her way was already paved by the election of Barbara Harris as suffragan bishop of Boston in 1988.

"For the sake of the Gospel, we have to keep moving forward in this direction," Larson said in an interview. "It's just shocking that it's taken us so long."

However, the Roman Catholic Church and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod do not allow the ordination of women. In a proposed pastoral letter on women, a committee of Catholic bishops said the unbroken tradition of a male priesthood "witnesses to the mind of Christ and is therefore normative."

Mainline Protestant churches have held the office of bishop theoretically open to women since they began permitting women clergy, but the ball didn't start rolling until 1980 with the election of Marjorie Matthews as the first United Methodist woman bishop. The church has elected four women bishops since then.

Larson said many in the 5.2 million-member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America had begun to despair of the church ever electing a woman bishop.

When she was elected bishop of the LaCrosse (Wis.) Area Synod of the ELCA, a number of women pastors rushed to greet her in a display of thanksgiving Larson said would be difficult for some of her male colleagues to understand.

"It has nothing to do with April. It is that whole deep, deep, deep affirmation that they're made in the image of God ... and can serve the church in any dimension of leadership," Larson said.

The new bishop, who had never heard a woman preach until she heard her own voice in the pulpit, could identify with their feelings.

Ordained in 1978, her first assignment was with her husband, the Rev. Judd Larson, as co-pastor of Calvary and Grand Lutheran churches in Crystal Lake, Iowa.

"It was very difficult in the sense that people would readily and quickly call my husband pastor and would just about choke at calling me pastor," she said.

By the time of her last pastoral assignment, she would have a response ready when people would come up to her and say, "Hello, Pastor April, where's pastor today?"

"I could look at them and say, 'I am here with you,'" Larson said.

In 1989, she became assistant to the bishop of the church's South-eastern Minnesota Synod, where she could see the struggles faced by other women as local congregations considered hiring a clergywoman "a great risk."

But Larson said she saw barriers break down even as congregations came to experience her ministry as an assistant to the bishop.

"It's absolutely critical that we have women in all dimensions of the church," she said.

Crystal River sets concert in Pampa for this Sunday

Crystal River, based in Chickasha, Okla., plans a concert at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at Faith Christian Center, 118 N. Cuyler, according to Pastor Ed Barker.

Crystal River has been ministering through southern gospel music for the past eight years. They are currently traveling throughout the southern United States, singing more than 125 dates a year.

The group consists of James Sparks, vocal, emcee and songwriter; David Johnson, vocal; and Deborah Johnson, vocal and songwriter.

The band consists of Lori Clepper on keyboards, Clint Street on bass and Terry Bussey on drums. The group is also joined by Renee Sparks, sound engineer, and Rajejan Street, sales.

James Sparks has gained national recognition in his songwriting ability with two singles hitting the gospel charts.

The group has seven recordings. In May 1989, they released their first national single, "I Hear An Echo," which went Top 50 in the national charts, followed by "Problem Solver," climbing to the Top 100s and "I Must Go" topping out at No. 70 in the October 1991 issue of The Gospel Voice.

In September 1991, Crystal River signed a recording contract with Mark Five Records. In December, they recorded their latest project titled "Brand New Ground."

The group has appeared on several television programs. Although their main ministry is the church, they sing at parades, conventions, amusement parks and other outside singings.

The group has been invited by The National Quartet

Convention in Nashville, Tenn., to perform this year as one of the main groups.

The public is invited to the Sunday performance.

A nursery will be provided for children through three years old.

Teens participate in church's district fine arts program

Two teens from First Assembly of God in Pampa recently participated in their denominational district competition and ministry fine arts program in Lubbock.

Tammy Leshner and Krissy Wilson, both members of the Power House youth ministry at First Assembly, entered the mime group category of the drama division at the festival. They pantomimed the lyrics and message of the Steve Green song, "The Mission," which conveys an evangelistic message of outreach by the church.

The girls used rehearsal time learning sign language, as well as incorporating dramatic interpretation of words and phrases used in the song to convey the message.

They were judged in regard to overall presentation, costuming/makeup, dramatic interpretation and conveyance of message, audience eye contact and synchronization of movements. They earned an "excellent" rating and were given critique by the judges following all competition.

Through the Assemblies of God Fine Arts Festival, more than 10,000 youth each year have the opportunity to pursue excellence in music, drama and the arts. The fine arts festival is a medium of education and ministry.

As a participant, teens are evaluated by experts. Competition is not emphasized as much as the opportunity for teens to use their talents to express their love for God and their willingness to serve Him.

Festival coordinators strive to help youth discover and develop their talents. The fine arts festival allows them an opportunity to present a soliloquy, perform an instrumental duet, write a fictional piece or sketch an interpretation of the festival theme.

Sex case disclosed behind resignation

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A clergyman who inexplicably resigned a day after being elected top administrator of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) said Wednesday he had acted because of sexual misconduct accusations against him.

"I could not have functioned as head of the church under a cloud of suspicion by millions of people," the Rev. W. Clark Chamberlain of Houston said.

In a telephone interview, he said he also had wanted to prevent harm to the church: "Certainly it could not help the church to have a high official under suspicion."

Chamberlain's surprise election and then sudden resignation as stated clerk at the denomination's governing general assembly in mid-June in Milwaukee, had shocked delegates.

He said he had felt at the time that his citing "private reasons" for his action should have been sufficient and that elaborating further would not be necessary.

"We live in a society in which people's lives become soap operas," he said.

He said he had been informed the day after his election that unspecified accusations of sexual misconduct at a previous assembly were being brought against him, and so he promptly stepped down.

"I'm somewhat annoyed that this thing is being trashed over and over again," he said. "It does not help me. It doesn't bring credit to the church. For heaven's sake, when I said I was doing it for the honor of the church, that should have been enough."

Chamberlain, 45, a philosophy professor and administrator of a denominational synod covering Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana, said he doesn't know the nature of the accusations.

"I may never know," he said, noting that a local disciplinary church committee privately investigates accusations, with details given only if grounds are found for trial before a judiciary commission.

The Rev. Jack Boelyn, head of the Houston presbytery, confirmed only that disciplinary committees had been appointed to investigate two cases of alleged misconduct, but he declined to elaborate.

Chamberlain had been elected as stated clerk of the 3-million-member denomination over the Rev. James Andrews, the incumbent who was seeking a third four-year term.

After Chamberlain's resignation, the assembly quickly re-elected Andrews.

"Lots of things are mysterious," Chamberlain said of his then bewildering announcement of resignation. "There are lots of causes of wonder. ... I cannot conceive why this story needs to be written."

Think Camp aims to enhance critical skills

For two weeks in June academically talented fifth graders attended Think Camp '92 at Pampa High School.

The day camp program, sponsored by Pampa Independent School District and Roger David of Edward D. Jones and Co., was designed to enhance critical thinking skills of the rising sixth graders, and teach problem solving using science and math processes.

Some topics included "Help! The animal crackers are misbehaving!", "Polar brrrs - How long can you keep an ice cube from melting?", and "Metric scavenger hunt." Beth Shannon, PHS science instructor led the camp.

Attending were Barry Brauchi, Kimberly Clark, Laura Reynolds, Rose Fruge, Andy Fernuik, Miah Ebel, Stacey Brown, Sarah Bruce, Aubrea Ward, Kaci Cooper, Christopher Newkirk, Amanda Wiseman, David Radcliff, Tory Partain, Nicole Terry, Allison Watkins, Rebecca Gaddis, Daniel Campos, Cynthia Davis, Candice Jameson, Angelica DeJesus, Narciso Soliz, Joel Barker, Randall Ellis.

Limerick gets no laughs from indignant spinster

DEAR ABBY: I read the following limerick in your column. It was signed by "Westport Pete" — whoever he is. To refresh your memory:

"There was an old maid from Duluth
Who wept when she thought of her youth
"Remembering the chances
"She had at school dances
"And once in a telephone booth."
Being an old maid myself (not by choice), I found this limerick offensive, uncouth and perverted. Abby, I gave you credit for having better taste and higher morals than that.

I am in my 60s, and I am unmarried because I thought enough of my siblings to stay at home and help raise them when our father deserted our mother 50 years ago. Our mother has since gone to her heavenly reward and one other sister (also unmarried) and I are holding down the fort.

I just wanted to tell you that I have enjoyed your column in The Lincoln Star for many years, but that poem really got my dander up! I hope you print this. And if you do, please don't print my name. Sign me ...

OFFENDED OLD MAID
IN LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR OFFENDED: I thought that limerick was entertaining enough to justify the possibility of offending a few readers. Sorry.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing on behalf of my friends and myself. We are a small group of very close friends who love to be together and go clubbing. We are all happily married with children.

Dear Abby

The problem is whenever we get together, one girlfriend (I'll call her Ellen) wants to include her husband. Now, don't get me wrong, we all have our times together with our husbands, but when we get together to go out, we prefer it to be "just the girls." Besides, Ellen's husband is a total bore. Also, when Ellen invites us to her home, her husband joins the group and dominates the conversation.

Is there a tactful way to tell Ellen that we girls really don't want to be bothered with her husband — without losing her friendship or hurting her feelings?

THE GIRLS IN PHILLY

DEAR GIRLS: I know of no "tactful" way to tell a friend that her husband is a total bore and you don't want to be bothered with his company. However, unless you are willing to tolerate the presence of this insensitive intruder, you girls will have to lay it on the line with Ellen. Simply tell her that you girls intended to have an all-girls night out and, inasmuch as "no one else" includes her husband, you would appreciate it if she didn't include hers. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I appreciated all of your letters on forgiveness. My dictionary defines forgiveness: "to no longer feel resentment toward an offender."

I do not believe that means to be all huggy-kissy again, bend over and take another kick in the shorts.

To no longer feel resentment, I offer this verse about forgiveness:

"The friend who ran off with your wife,
"Forgive him for his lust;
"The chum who sold you phony stocks,
"Forgive his breach of trust;
"The pal who schemed behind your back,
"Forgive his evil work;
"And when you're done — forgive yourself
"For being such a jerk."
A FORGIVING SOUL
IN FLORIDA

DEAR FORGIVING: This isn't new to me; I published it in 1988. But for those who may have missed it, I honor your offer.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Farmers markets are alive and thriving

By COUNTRY AMERICA
For AP Special Features

In the shadow of the Appalachian Mountains, four generations have harvested the fruits of A.L. Kauffman's labor. At the turn of the century, Kauffman planted the beginnings of his apple orchard in the fertile soil of Lancaster County, Pa. Today, his great-grandson, Sam Kauffman, carries on the family tradition.

Now, farmers like Kauffman take their fresh-picked produce to the market so they may sell directly to the consumers. This direct marketing eliminates the middlemen, allowing the farmers to keep a larger share of the consumer's dollar and offer better prices.

All across America, farmers markets are alive and thriving and continue to serve as a link between farmers and consumers. Where else can a person find fresh-picked sweet corn or squashes without blemishes at an affordable price? Modern grocery stores may preach same-day freshness, but only farmers markets can live up to it. Local growers are eager to talk about crop production and share tips on cooking different fruits and vegetables.

For those intrepid enough to experiment, ethnic and exotic delicacies indigenous to certain regions of the country are available. The Central Market in Lancaster offers Dutch pastries, homemade root beer and shoofly pie, a soft cake made with a moist molasses base. Try Aunt Ann's large, soft pretzels made of white or whole-wheat bread and dipped in a honey-mustard sauce, or choose sweet dessert pretzels topped with a cinnamon-sugar mixture. The more adventurous can try hog maw, pig stomach stuffed with potatoes and German sausage. The locals say it is a meal in itself. Faschnat doughnuts were originally made to use up leftover flour and sugar before the Lent fast.

The Downtown Farmers Market in San Luis Obispo, Calif., offers shiitake mushrooms, goat cheese, edible flowers, kiwi jams and fresh citrus products. At the French Market in New Orleans, sample seafood and such French and Cajun foods as dark catfish and even alligator steaks. The hot item at the Dallas Farmers Market is Tex-Mex food grilled over mesquite wood. Of course, these markets also contain an array of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Farmers markets not only offer an immense variety of food but also a variety of country culture. Larry Yager, a Pennsylvania marketing consultant, says more and more farmers markets are welcoming artists, crafters and musicians. "Whatever we can do to help broaden interests in our markets will help ensure their success," says Yager.

Dried flowers, wood carvings and quilts are just a sample of the crafts that can be found at a farmers market today. Some large markets even feature tours, hayrides, cider pressing, corn-shelling competitions and storytelling to excite and amuse consumers.

Today's farmers markets offer entertainment and experiences that can't be found elsewhere. Crunch on a fresh apple while being chauffeured around the grounds in an open horse-drawn buggy. Soak in the aromas of diverse ethnic foods while eavesdropping on customers and vendors exchanging tasty recipes. Come for a taste of the country, and stay for a slice of Sam Kauffman's snitz pie.

Farmers markets can be found in nearly any urban area. They range in size from huge permanent structures to pick-up tailgates in shopping-mall parking lots. Most markets will advertise in local shoppers and newspapers. Or contact a local chamber of commerce, city hall, state department of agriculture or county extension office.

Causes of crib death elude researchers

By DR. AARON G. MEISLIN
New York University School of Medicine

The causes of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS), formerly known as "crib death," remain elusive to medical researchers.

SIDS is the sudden unpredictable death of an infant without evidence of organic disease. It occurs most frequently at 2 to 4 months of age and usually occurs at night or during naptime.

Although SIDS incidents occur in all levels of our society, there are current suspicions and circumstantial evidence indicating that it occurs more often among lower socioeconomic class populations, among illicit drug abusers, and among low birth weight infants.

SIDS is believed to kill about 7,000 American infants each year, but until proper studies are undertaken, the true incidence of SIDS cannot be known.

It would be nice to believe that medical researchers are closing in on the exact cause or causes of SIDS. But it will be some time before any real progress will be made to explain — and then to prevent — the illness.

The first step in uncovering the mystery surrounding sudden infant death syndrome would be to rigidly define the criteria for including a sudden and unexpected death in infancy in the SIDS category.

Detailed autopsy and toxicologic studies as well as a thorough forensic investigation of circumstances surrounding death must be a minimum requirement before that death is relegated to the SIDS classification.

Some researchers have proposed that SIDS victims had immature breathing mechanisms that respond poorly to increased carbon dioxide concentrations in the bloodstream, resulting in periods of apnea, or cessation of breathing for a short time.

Also, studies have shown no connection between incidence of SIDS and the time infants get their first DPT (diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus) immunization shots.

For a few years, parents were encouraged to purchase breathing monitors that would sound an alarm if an infant stopped breathing. However, the use of these monitors did not reduce the occurrence of SIDS, and the popularity of these electronic devices waned.

European reports of a high incidence of SIDS among infants who sleep on their stomachs require further study and confirmation.

Until a diagnostic test can be devised for breathing control immaturity or the genetic disorder that may cause it, there is little parents can do to prevent SIDS, beyond getting appropriate prenatal care.

But there is no doubt that SIDS is a devastating condition that leaves parents grief stricken and requires great delicacy and caring by the investigating physician and authorities.

SIDS, however, is a legitimate subject for study and research — and the only way in which it will be clearly defined, its mysteries unravelled and its tragic consequences prevented.

Mark, my Words

By Mark Spencer

Let the games begin at NBA's 'other season'

Now that the circus is over, let the real games begin. The NBA Draft, dressed in a gaudy three-ring production Wednesday night, ushered in 54 new players to professional basketball like a pet owner brings in his cat.

Here you go, Shaquille. C'mon Alonzo. Here Christian, Christian, Christian.

That's a good player (kitty). Shake the Commissioner's hand (here's some catnip). Smile for the camera (purrrrrrrr).

But the purring is about to stop.

These prime-time, big-time cats brought something into Mr. Robinson's neighborhood with them, and it's not nine lives. Rather, this tag-a-long comes in groups of sevens and eights.

It's the figures on their price tags.

Shaquille O'Neal, the first pick of the draft, already has a $3 million shoe contract. His contract demands for the Orlando Magic are rumored to be in the six-year, $25 million range. By the way, he has yet to play a second of professional basketball.

Alonzo Mourning, Christian Laettner and Jimmy Jackson followed O'Neal in order through Wednesday's draft. They are rumored to be waiting on the deal O'Neal pens before they will sign with their new teams to a somewhat comparable contract.

No doubt about it. It's time for that "other" NBA season. The one called "contract negotiations."

Agents will meet with owners. Owners will make final offers. Agents will reject them. Talks will "break off" or "come to an impasse."

Players will shout disrespect. Teams will exploit their own "generosity."

Indeed, let the games begin.

Or more appropriately, let them continue. Contract negotiations are news items nowadays.

But debating the size of player contracts in the NBA or any pro sport is usually a cut-and-dried case with most people.

Either they agree with megamillion-dollar contracts and believe a player has the right to grab all the money and endorsements his talents will allow him.

Or they disagree with those contracts and believe no one should be paid that much to play a game.

Although the opinions one can have on the issue are limited, it's still quite bewildering to explore it.

There are salary caps, contract extensions, free agencies, Plan Bs, arbitrations, unprotected players, protected players, trades, holdouts, lockouts, disabled lists, concessions, demands, performance incentives, agents, player representatives, waivers and clauses.

Everything seems to be covered for the players. But how about the fans? We need an escape clause.

If it existed, no fan or media member would be bothered by any of the above contract connections.

There no longer would be any office discussions about how much so-and-so is getting paid. There no longer would be any reason to criticize an error on TV by shouting, "For another million, would you try?"

Also eliminated would be the highest-paid player to ever (fill-in-blank) statistic and most sports celebrity commercials.

So what would be left?

Not too much, frankly. And it would be awfully boring.

The business end of sports is now as much a part of the NBA, NFL and every other professional league in the nation as the action on the field.

You might cringe at the sight of some of the players' salaries. They might astound you and bring you to your knees. But, to me, it's like driving by an accident scene — you just have to look.

So tune in to see how much O'Neal brings in. Find out if Jackson will try to sell you a car on TV. See how many endorsements glamour-boy Laettner racks up.

These are, after all, people we admire during the basketball season. And I'm going to cheer for them now, during the "other" NBA season. Go ahead, Shaquille. Wow me with your money.

Let the games begin.

McEnroe better than Cash

Two men's seeds defeated today at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — One wears a knee brace and is losing his hair. The other spends almost as much time playing guitar as tennis. Both have wedding rings and small children.

But former champions John McEnroe and Pat Cash frolicked like a couple of teen-agers Thursday on Centre Court, producing great tennis and high drama before McEnroe won in five sets.

They dived after balls and rolled into the net. They cursed at themselves and fussed at line judges. They hit blistering aces and soft drop shots, overhead slams and delicate lobs.

And, for four hours, the unseeded veterans created the tension-filled tennis that has been in short supply at a Wimbledon tournament featuring few upsets and many lopsided matches.

McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon champion, lost a pair of tiebreakers but rallied to defeat 1987 champion Cash 6-7 (3-7), 6-4, 6-7 (1-7), 6-3, 6-2.

"I climbed off the ropes and was able to get a second wind. He had me on the ropes," McEnroe said. "We both played really hard. It was a great match."

Only five of the 32 seeded players — three women and two men — were eliminated in the first two rounds, an unusually low number for the quirky grass courts of Wimbledon.

Two more men's seeds, Richard Krajicek and Alexander Volkov, lost today in third-round matches.

Krajicek, the 11th seed, lost 4-6, 7-6 (8-6), 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 to Arnaud Boetsch and Volkov, seeded Boris Becker lunges for a shot from Martin Damm at Wimbledon Thursday.

15th, was defeated 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (10-8) by Henrik Holm.

Defending champion Michael Stich, the third seed, strolled to a 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 Centre Court victory over Magnus Larsson to reach the fourth round. Goran Ivanisevic, the eighth seed, advanced with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-4 victory over Marc Rosset in a battle of overpowering servers.

Ivanisevic also won the war of aces, serving 22 to 15 for Rosset. Two women's seeds also advanced to the fourth round. Martina Navratilova, seeded fourth, was a 7-5, 6-1 winner over Barbara Rittner and 14th seed Nathalie Tauziat won 4-6, 7-5, 6-3 over Nicole Provis.

Navratilova, a nine-time Wimbledon champion, had her hands full in the first set with Rittner, the 1991 Wimbledon junior champion, who had a break point to go up 6-5. But Navratilova saved the point with a behind-the-back reflex volley that left Rittner applauding her opponent.

Rittner lost that game and was broken in the next one, and then never regained her rhythm in the second set.

On Thursday, top men's seed Jim Courier defeated Byron Black 6-4, 6-1, 6-4, but fourth-seeded Boris Becker needed five sets to beat Martin Damm.

Becker, who has won three Wimbledon titles and reached three other finals in the last seven years, defeated the Czechoslovak 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Dream Team's Ewing dislocates thumb

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — There's no argument about who will start at center when the U.S. Dream Team makes its debut Sunday.

David Robinson wins the job by default.

Robinson became the only not-so-banged-up center on the roster when Patrick Ewing dislocated his right thumb in the team's practice Thursday in San Diego.

Robinson has his own thumb problems. He's coming off surgery on his left thumb, which he injured March 16 in a game against Charlotte.

Robinson has been rusty as the team made up of mostly NBA stars practiced this week.

"I could tell that he hasn't played a great deal," U.S. coach Chuck Daly said. "But his conditioning is fine and he's worked on his game and it's coming along nicely."

Ewing injured his thumb when he took a pass from Magic Johnson and went up for a shot against Karl Malone.

"I was on a fast break and Magic threw me a pass and I went up for a layup," Ewing said. "I think it was Karl who came from behind and went for the block and got a piece of my hand and I hit it on the rim."

"If I had dunked it, it wouldn't have happened," Ewing said.

The thumb will be in a splint for five days, then the injury will be re-evaluated to see if Ewing can begin playing.

"The five days takes us to the middle of next week, almost all the way through the Tournament of the Americas," Daly said.

Actually, if he's cleared to play Wednesday, Ewing will miss only three of the anticipated six games the U.S. team will play over an eight-day period.

"All we will have to do is rebound and block shots," Ewing said. "We'll leave the scoring to the rest of those guys. We'll be fine."

The coaches met to discuss the possibility of adding another center to the team, but decided against it.

The roster for the Tournament of the Americas must be announced by 4 p.m. today and it was difficult to find someone who would be available, Daly said. Instead, Daly will have Malone and Christian Laettner play some at backup center. Laettner, the only collegiate on the Dream Team, is 6-foot-11 and played center for Duke, despite being projected as a power forward in the pros.

Daly said he will decide Saturday who will start when the team opens the Tournament of the Americas against Cuba on Sunday. The top four finishers among the 10 western hemisphere teams qualify for the Barcelona Olympics.

The U.S. team is undergoing a transition from a collection of All-Stars to a true team with players filling certain roles.

"I think we started out somewhere in the mentality of an all-star game and we're drifting back to reality and playing as a team, and I really like what I'm seeing," Daly said.

A coach can be overwhelmed when he's working with a team that includes Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson, Larry Bird, Charles Barkley, Chris Mullin, Clyde Drexler, John Stockton and Scottie Pippen.

"It's kind of shocking to take a look at us," Daly said. "But then the reality comes back that you've still got to play the team game that kids play all over the world."

Teammates remember Eagles' Brown as 'great friend'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The death of Philadelphia Eagles star defensive lineman Jerome Brown devastated fellow players and coaches, who remembered his warm and friendly leadership away from football.

"Forget all the football," fellow lineman Mike Golic said. "He was a great friend."

Brown, 27, and his 12-year-old nephew were killed Thursday when the sports car he was driving skidded out of control after leaving a car dealership in his hometown of Brookville, Fla., police said.

The powerful 6-foot-2, 295-pound tackle anchored the Eagles' defensive line. He went to the Pro Bowl the past two seasons.

"This is a devastating loss to his family, his friends, his community and obviously to this football team," Eagles general manager Harry Gamble said. "He was warm and caring. He was a special person."

Gamble and others gathered at Veterans Stadium shortly after the news reached Philadelphia and made a few, halting comments to reporters. They waved off any questions about Brown's on-field exploits, preferring to speak of his personal warmth and leadership.

Defensive end Reggie White shared his feelings about Brown with thousands of people attending a Billy Graham crusade at the stadium.

"Today, I lost a great friend; Philadelphia lost a great player,"

Philadelphia defensive lineman Jerome Brown (99), shown in action earlier this year, was killed Thursday in an automobile accident.

said Brown, a Baptist minister. "All the stuff you heard about Jerome Brown, what they had said about him, even the negative stuff, this man was one of the greatest people I've ever met and knew in my life."

"He had the utmost respect for people and cared about people."

Afterward, he said, "I was proud to see him come into his own" in recent seasons.

"I just hope this will prove to us players that we need to put our egos aside and our personalities aside," he said. "We've got to win the championship for Jerome."

Quarterback Randall Cunningham, reached at his New Jersey home, told WCAU-TV that Brown was unfairly criticized for his flamboyance.

"Jerome Brown has always been a great person," Cunningham said. "We should all learn from this that we got to appreciate them while they're here on earth."

Brown was known for his humor and pranks in the locker room and for his kindness off the field, volunteering to work with children in Philadelphia and starting a football camp this year in his hometown.

Golic fought back tears Thursday night.

"At this point you don't give a damn about football. We lost a great friend," Golic said. "His attitude was the attitude of the Eagles — trash-talking and hard-hitting. It went back all the way to Buddy Ryan."

Of the field, Golic said, Brown "had a huge heart."

"If you leave the game with a handful of games you're lucky," he said. "Our defensive line had a great relationship. It's something that would have carried on past football."

Ryan, reached in Los Angeles, said the Eagles will miss Brown's leadership.

"I went down and drafted him because he was our kind of player," Ryan said. "The first night he came to Philly he went to an event with us against the cruelty of animals. That's the kind of person he is."

Brown had 150 tackles and nine sacks last year. He had 547 tackles and 29 sacks in his six-year career.

Tyson's attorney predicts overturn of rape conviction

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson's attorney claims "a smoking gun of perjury" will help the boxer overturn his rape conviction.

Lawyer Alan M. Dershowitz contended that a Rhode Island court ruling Thursday casts doubt on the testimony and motives of Desiree Washington, the woman Tyson was convicted of raping.

The court, ruling in a disciplinary inquiry, said that Washington should have told an Indiana jury that she had hired an attorney to handle a civil case against Tyson.

"This proves beyond any doubt that this was a woman who was not only a money-grubbing gold digger, but a liar to boot. We now have the smoking gun," said Dershowitz, the Harvard University law professor who is handling Tyson's appeal.

With in hours of the Rhode Island ruling, Dershowitz filed a copy with the Indiana Court of Appeals, which has before it Tyson's appeal of his conviction and his standing request to be released on bail pending appeal.

Tyson, who turns 26 on Tuesday, is serving a six-year prison term at the Indiana Youth Center.

Washington's attorney in a civil suit filed against Tyson on Monday said the Rhode Island ruling won't affect that case or the criminal appeal.

"I am convinced, as evidently the (trial) court was, that no pertinent information was withheld from the Indiana criminal jury," Boston attorney Deval Patrick said. "This decision has absolutely no impact on the civil case, and as far as we can tell, no impact on the criminal appeal."

The civil suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Indianapolis, seeks unspecified damages for alleged assault, battery, false imprisonment and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress on Washington, a 19-year-old college student from Coventry, R.I.

The Rhode Island Supreme Court made its ruling on a disciplinary question raised by Washington's former attorney, who inquired whether a contingency fee arrangement with Washington's family should have been disclosed.

"It is not the function of this court to determine whether the victim in the rape trial testified falsely or whether defense counsel failed fully to explore the issue in examination of the victim," the court ruled in a six-page opinion.

"However, we are of the opinion that the existence of the contingency fee agreement should have been made known to the trial court and that its existence might well have had a bearing upon the jury's determination."

Pampa Independent Baseball Club

Members of the Pampa Independent Baseball Club from left Gregg Moore, Brad Smillie, Matt Finney, Kurt West and Wil Winborne loosen up at Harvester Field before leaving for the last game of their regular season in Amarillo Thursday. The team, made up of 16- and 17-year-old Pampa High School players, successfully completed their trial season this summer for entry into the West Texas Baseball League. Pampa will join the eight-team league next summer and will play host to several teams from the Texas panhandle and Western Oklahoma. "We're excited," Coach T.B. Moore said. "This should bring some exciting teams to Pampa. It's been a long time in coming."

Pampa Track Club heads to Stanton

Pampa Track Club members will participate in a TAC state qualifiers meet Saturday in Stanton.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the state meet July 11 in Houston.

"500 kids are expected to be entered," said Pampa coach Chris Hansen. "It's going to be a lot tougher than the one at Hereford and the kids are really psyched up for it. We started out with 75 kids in our club and we've got 37 now. The ones that have stuck it out are the cream of the crop."

Last weekend, the Pampa Club competed in a rain-shortened TAC meet in Hereford.

"It was rained out after the lunch break, but our kids pretty much dominated the meet. Most of our placings are preliminary results. I'm sure the kids would have done much better in the finals because they were just trying to qualify in the prelims."

"We had 10 kids that didn't get to run because they didn't have a final due to the rain," Hansen added. There were 30 teams entered.

Top hitters for Max's were Lisa Kirkpatrick, one double; Rebecca McConnell and Kendra Rozier, one single each.

Top hitters for Culligan were Erin Cobb, three singles; Vera King, double and single; Stephanie Ensey, a triple. Losing pitcher was Ali Brantley, who gave up 11 hits while striking out six and walking 16.

Also, Max's defeated Energy Service, 16-3, in girls' softball action Thursday.

Lisa Kirkpatrick and Tera Dougherty pitched for Max's with Kirkpatrick picking up the win. She gave up four hits while striking out three and walking four. Dougherty pitched the first two innings and gave up seven hits while striking out two and walking three.

Top hitters for Max's were Michelle Doucette, home run and two singles; Amanda Wiseman, home run and single; Tera Dougherty, three singles and Rebecca McConnell, a double.

Top hitters for Energy Service were Jill Foreman, Holly Brooks, Stormie Watkins, Mandy Wells and Nichole Bruton, one single each.

Max's plays for the championship at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Dixie claims victory

Dixie edged Dunlap, 5-3, in Optimist 11-12 year-old baseball action Tuesday night.

It was Dixie's first win after 10 losses.

"I couldn't be prouder of this group of boys," said Dunlap coach Shawn Blackmon. "They played their hearts out."

Dixie's top hitter was Josh Blackmon with two hits, including an inside the park home run, and three RBI. Jonathan Ladd added a single.

Blackmon was also the winning pitcher. He gave up six hits while striking out five and walking two. Matt Harp picked up a save. He gave up four hits while striking out three and walking two.

Dunlap's top hitters were Lucas Jaramillo and Justin Roark with a double and single apiece. Jody Richardson had a triple, Josh Rodriguez, a double; Nathan Knight and Kory Nickell, a single each.

Dean's tops Glo-Valve

Clutch pitching by Jeff Griffith and Kyle Gambin plus timely hitting by Brent Johnson and Griffith propelled Dean's Pharmacy to an extra-inning 3-2 victory over Glo-Valve Thursday in Optimist Major Bambino action.

Griffith allowed only one hit and two runs in six innings pitched to receive credit for the win. He struck out seven and walked nine. Gambin relieved in the bottom of the seventh and didn't allow a run while giving up one hit and walking one to pick up the save.

Gambin's and Griffith's heroics overshadowed a 17-strikeout performance by Glo-Valve's Matt Evans with 11 and Ryan Schumacher with six. Evans allowed only two hits and no runs while walking four and hitting one batter. Schumacher was nicked for only three hits and two earned runs, but was charged with his first loss of the season. He's won two games and saved four.

Johnson sent a Texas League double to left field in the first inning and he went to third on a wild pitch. An out later, Shawn Harris walked and took second on a passed ball. Both Johnson and Harris scored on a wild pitch.

Glo-Valve tied the score in the third inning. Kris Davis and Evans walked and both scored on a two-out double by Schumacher.

Dean's Pharmacy threatened to score several times after hits by Harris and Griffith in addition to walks, but each time Evans struck out hitters to get out of the inning unscored upon.

With two outs in the seventh inning, Johnson lined a triple down the third base line. Good hustle and a good throw by Glo-Valve left fielder Kevin Henderson kept it from being an inside the park home run. Griffith then slammed his second hit of the game into center field for the game-winning RBI.

Glo-Valve ends the regular season in first place in the National Major Bambino League with a 9-3 record. Dean's Pharmacy is third in the American League.

All Major Bambino teams participate in a double-elimination City Tournament, beginning Thursday.

Columbia begins experiments

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The seven astronauts on Columbia's marathon mission will be too busy to get sick of each other, a NASA official said as the 13-day flight entered its second day.

While in space, the crew of five men and two women will grow crystals, study drops of fluids, set small fires in sealed chambers, and undergo medical tests needed to gain understanding of the effects of extended space travel.

The mission, NASA's longest shuttle flight, is intended to prepare for longer shuttle trips and life on a space station.

"We're going to find out whether those kids are really friends or not," said Brewster Shaw, deputy director of the shuttle program.

Columbia blasted off from Florida's Kennedy Space Center just after noon Thursday. It is due back July 8.

The crew quickly powered up Spacelab, a 23-foot laboratory in the cargo bay. Almost all the round-the-clock research will be performed there.

Shaw, an ex-astronaut, said Columbia's crew would be less cramped because of the extra room Spacelab provides.

"This is obviously the longest mission we've flown so they'll be cooped up together," Shaw said. "But we've flown seven people before without a Spacelab module, which is a heck of a lot more cramped than they're going to be."

"They're going to be so busy over these 13 days that I'm pretty sure they won't have time to get mad at each other," he said.

Crystal experiments were among the first to be activated. The mission is expected to yield thousands of specimens bigger and purer than those cultivated on Earth, where gravity hampers growth.

Scientists hope the crystals will speed the search for drugs against AIDS and other diseases, and lead to better semiconductors and infrared detectors.

Astronauts also tested the glovebox, a sealed compartment where they will study the behavior of small fires in low gravity and conduct other experiments.

"It looks like we're off and running, and we're looking forward to the rest of the flight," payload commander Bonnie Dunbar said.

NASA plans two more 13-day flights before lengthening to 16 days and more. The agency hopes to have astronauts living on a space station for months at a time by the decade's end.

The third and final mission of Skylab, an orbiting station, lasted 84 days in 1973-74. The record for a shuttle flight was 10 days and 21 hours, set by Columbia in 1990.

Shortly after Columbia reached orbit, Commander Richard N. Richards reported what he thought was a problem with one of the most crucial pieces of equipment — the toilet. Mission Control said the problem — a squealing toilet fan — was minor and later said it was fixed.
