Hospital annex closer to reality

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

Crews move in this week to begin the construction of a 30,000-square-foot medical office building north of Coronado Hospital, following ground breaking ceremonies Thursday.

The two story structure is scheduled for completion March, 1993, according to Bruce W. Reinhardt, hospital administrator.

State Rep. Warren Chisum, Coronado Hospital Board of Trustees Chairman Vic Raymond, Economic Development Board Chairman Bill Waters, and Rene Grabato, M.D., chief of the medical staff, participated in the ceremonies with Reinhardt.

"We certainly view the medical complex as a positive development and are very pleased that the addition to the hospital is in the works," Waters said.

The concrete plaster building will be finished to match the exterior of the hospital, and will have enough office space for 10 physicians. Cost for the building, which is being developed by Healthcare Properties Investors, Inc., is estimated at $3 million. Coronado Hospital is the "master lease holder" for the facility, and has an option to buy after four years.

Several of the offices will be leased by physicians that Coronado Hospital is currently recruiting.

"We're offering to let the physician help choose the decor for his or her new office. We've worked with the architects to plan an area that will be most efficient for the physician and the patient," Reinhardt said.

Assistant Administrator Al Chapa said, "Each physician's staff will hire their own office staff, but as we get new physicians the number of needed personal will increase. Each physician's office will bring in an average of $500,000 dollars a year. Basically it is a nice little business to have."

The $500,000 is a general figure, Chapa said. "Some will be a lot higher, others less," he explained. "It just depends on the physician."

Pampa-bound truck overturns; food lost

WHITE DEER - A semi-tractor truck carrying 10,000 pounds of food from the High Plains Food Bank bound for Pampa overturned Thursday morning, a mile and a half west of White Deer.

Driver of the truck, Linda Brown, was treated and released from Northwest Texas Hospital emergency room, said Janie Singleton, director of the 10-year-old food bank.

"How our driver walked away from it, I'll never know," said Singleton.

The truck was completely demolished along with the food. Singleton attributed the accident to load shift.

Singleton said the truck was the only one owned by the food bank which serves 31 Panhandle counties and 194 agencies. The food bank picks up 15,000 to 20,000 lbs. of food each day in the Amarillo area.

While the truck was insured, Singleton said, a used one is needed to replace the loss. The bank is using a truck loaned by Rider Truck Rentals until a replacement is obtained, she said.

Ann Loter, director of Meals on Wheels, said that chicken scheduled for next Wednesday's meals was lost in the accident. The loss of chicken was the only menu item requiring alternate arrangements, she said.

Meals on Wheels will replace the chicken from the food bank, which cost them 14 cents per pound, with a retail purchase, Loter said.

"The food bank is a vital part of our money saving devices," Loter explained.

Mae Williams of Southside Senior Citizens' Center reports that the center will not be affected by the loss during the next week.

Other area agencies which utilize the food bank include Good Samaritan House, Genesis House, Tralee Crisis Center, Salvation Army, Community Day Care Center, Miami Ministerial Alliance, Rachel's Day Care and the Edward Abraham Memorial Home.

Singleton said that in 1991, 80,000 lbs. of food were delivered to Pampa with 1992 figures ahead of that total.

Donations will be accepted for a new truck, Singleton said. Contributions can be sent to the High Plains Food Bank, P.O. Box 31803, Amarillo, 79120.

Wreck injures 4 men

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

A 29-year-old Pampa man was transported to an Amarillo hospital in critical condition today following a two-vehicle accident, from which firefighters had to use the Jaws of Life to cut the vehicle away from him.

Arthur Lee Williams was driving a 1982 Oldsmobile station wagon south on FM 282 (Price Road) when he collided with a 1979 GMC two-ton truck, pulling a flatbed trailer with a backhoe. The truck was traveling west on the county dirt road when the two vehicles met at an open intersection.

The accident scene is about three miles south of Pampa on Texas 70 and one mile west. The accident occurred about 7:50 a.m. today.

Three passengers in the station wagon were also transported by AMT Paramedic Service to Coronado Hospital where one was listed in critical, but stable condition in the Intensive Care Unit and the other two were listed in stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Driver of the two-ton truck, Johnny Dominguez, 33, of Pampa, was reportedly uninjured in the accident. The truck he was driving belongs to Flint Engineering and Construction Co., South Barnes Street, in Pampa.

Flint Safety Coordinator David Stone said in a prepared statement that the collision of the company vehicle occurred at an uncontrolled intersection and that Dominguez has no apparent injuries.

Cpl. Johnny Carter with the Texas Department of Public Safety, who investigated the accident, said Dominguez will be issued a citation for failure to yield right of way at an open intersection. Carter said the vehicle on the right has the right of way at such an intersection.

The truck and trailer hit a ditch following the collision and the trailer carrying the backhoe came unhooked and flipped on its side in a harvested wheat field.

The four occupants of the station wagon are employed by Leonard Hudson Drilling Co. Inc. They had reportedly worked during the night and had gotten off work about 7 a.m.

Jesus Santacruz, 29, Pampa, a passenger in the right front seat of the station wagon, was listed in critical but stable condition in the Intensive Care Unit at Coronado Hospital.

Coy Dean Maddox, 22, and John Wadsworth, 20, both of Pampa, were passengers in the back seat of the station wagon. Both were listed in stable condition and were expected to be released from the hospital after treatment, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Williams was reportedly unconscious and unresponsive as AMT Paramedic Service transported him to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo about 10:45 a.m. today. He also reportedly had a skull fracture, along with other injuries.

Three units and five firefighters from the Pampa Fire Department were dispatched to the scene. Also assisting were members of the Gray County Sheriff's Office and Precinct 2 Constable Chris Lockridge.

Democrats nominate Mann to run for district attorney

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

District Attorney John Mann, appointed by Gov. Ann Richards to fill the unexpired district attorney's position in April, has been nominated by the Democratic Party Executive Committee to be the party's nominee on the November general election ballot.

The Executive Committee is comprised of the county chairs of the five counties - Gray, Roberts, Hemphill, Wheeler and Lipscomb - in which Mann has jurisdiction.

Mann, 44, serves as district attorney in the 31st and 223rd judicial districts.

Mack Sansing, a state Democratic executive committee man from the 31st senatorial district, was named temporary chair to call the meeting to order.

"After discussion, John Mann was unanimously nominated and elected to be on the ballot," Sansing said.

"John Mann is an experienced defense lawyer and then went to work and assisted the district attorney. He has been acting as district attorney under the appointment of the governor."

Today, Mann said, "I want to finish this job and I would like to have the opportunity to do the job for a full term because we have begun to accomplish, I think, a lot in terms of a close relationship with the law enforcement agencies and the judiciary at all levels."

"I am overwhelmed at the reception that each of those agencies have given us."

Sansing said that the Executive Committee found from various county officials and sheriff's in the five-county district that Mann was well-qualified for the position.

"They felt he was super qualified and the man for the job and based on their personal knowledge was the best qualified person for the office."

All members of the Executive Committee, with the exception of Don Beard, were present for the meeting. Beard, who serves as Lipscomb County Democratic chair, was out of town, but Sansing said he supported Mann's appointment by the governor.

Voting unanimously to place Mann on the ballot were county chairs John Warner of Gray County, Ralph Edwards of Hemphill County, Tom Brogdon of Roberts County and Lewis Grayson of Wheeler County.

Clinton-Gore ticket heads for heartland

NEW YORK (AP) - Bill Clinton and Al Gore today headed for the nation's heartland, striving to topple President Bush with help from the abandoned army of Ross Perot. "This is our chance to change America. Let's take it," Clinton declared.

Before leaving New York, the newly nominated Democratic presidential candidate told party leaders, "Al Gore and I are going to do our best to do you proud."

In a pep talk to the Democratic National Committee, Clinton openly courted supporters of Perot, who said a day earlier he would not pursue his independent candidacy.

"Ross Perot paid this party the ultimate compliment," Clinton said, noting Perot had bowed out claiming his own chances of winning had been erased by "a revitalized Democratic Party."

A smiling Clinton told the party officials he was eager "to get out there where we can see people, where people can see us."

Clinton and Gore were embarking on a six-day, 16-stop tour that will take them to St. Louis in a bus and recreational vehicle caravan.

"This is going to be a real grassroots campaign," said Clinton.

For his part, Gore made a direct bid for Perot's legions, saying they had already been a positive force in American politics.

"It is vitally important for you to reach out to Republicans, to independents, to people. ... Tell them it is a new day. We have the plans, the ideas, the presidential candidate, to change America for the better," Gore said.

Party chairman Ronald H. Brown introduced Clinton and Gore as "the dream ticket," producing chants of "we want Bill" from the assembled party officials.

The night before, in an impassioned, personal speech accepting the Democratic presidential nomination, Clinton said: "People want change, but government is in the way." For Bush, Clinton had this simple message: "If you won't use your power to help people, step aside - I will."

The speech - all 52 minutes of it - brought to a festive, footstomping close a four-day Democratic convention that adopted a moderate platform reflecting the message of its baby-boomer ticket.

"Jobs. Health care. Education. These commitments aren't just promises from my lips," Clinton said. "They are the work of my life."

His convention over, Clinton today begins what is suddenly a two-man general election race, pitting a 45-year-old governor born to a small-town widow against a 68-year-old incumbent president born to privilege.

Gore is Perot, whose decision not to run shifted the turbulent 1992 political terrain yet again, and left the millions in his volunteer band without a candidate.

"I am well aware that those who rallied to his cause wanted to enlist in an army of patriots for change," Clinton said. "We say to them: Join us - together we will revitalize America."

Let he leave Clinton with a convention spotlight for his pitch to Perot supporters, Bush interrupted a fishing vacation to make his own entreaty.

"A lot of people that supported Ross want to see the kinds of changes that I want to see," said Bush, whose surrogates attacked the Texas billionaire repeatedly in recent weeks. "No, I don't think so," Bush said when asked if those attacks would undermine his overture.

Hospital

"We are trying to recruit eight to 10 physicians within the next 10 to 12 months," he said. "We are offering some of those offices to our existing physicians who have offices outside of the hospital."
 Coronado Medical Building

North will be attached to Coronado Hospital by an atrium to provide both patients and physicians easy access to the hospital's ancillary departments. Reinhardt said the second floor of the building is designed to be used for hospital space if the need arises in the future.
 "This is a development which will aid the community for additional aid in other business expansion or new businesses," Waters said. "Part of the success of the prison effort was the hospital and medical facilities which interested the state in the development."

 The first phase of the new building will be construction of an employee parking area northwest of the hospital.

Dignitaries digging shovels into the dirt in a groundbreaking ceremony for the new Coronado medical office building are, from left, Vic Raymond, hospital board of trustees chairman; Bruce Reinhardt, hospital administrator; Warren Chisum, state representative; Rene Grabato, chief of the hospital's medical staff, and Bill Waters chairman of the Pampa economic development corporation.

City approves final plat for new complex

By ANGELA LEGGETT
 Staff Writer

At a special City Commission meeting Thursday, final plat for the Coronado Medical Complex Subdivision, Annex No. 1 was approved with the addition to the north area showing 40 feet intended as a future road.

"The parking lot will be adjacent and just north of the new medical complex which was dedicated Thursday," said Glen Hackler, Pampa city manager. "Where the existing parking lot is, is where the new complex is going to be."

City of Pampa subdivision regulations require that the City Commission authorize the filing of any approved plat for public record after it's approval by the Planning & Zoning Commission.

The Planning & Zoning Commission approved the preliminary and final subdivision plat for the Coronado Medical Complex Subdivision at 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

"It was subject to some wording which noted a road to the area north of Coronado Hospital," said Steve Lemons, engineering technician for the City of Pampa.

"The proposed plat is fairly straight forward in its approach and is recommended by the city engineer," Hackler said. "It is important to note that the preliminary and final reviews were made simultaneously in the interest of time, with the approval of the city attorney."

Members viewed sketches of the area and discussed the necessity of marking the intended roadway.

"Forty foot is very acceptable," Hackler said. "Anyone that looks to develop that area on the adjacent piece of land would know it is the city's intent for there to be a road where it is noted."

Jail cookies

Margaret Hall, unit manager of Sunwest, prepares to bake cookies in the kitchen of the new Gray County Jail for the Gray County Jail and Sheriff's Office dedication, set for 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Sunwest has the contract for food service at the new facility. The public is invited to the dedication, followed by a tour of the facility and refreshments. The facility will also be open from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday for public inspection.

Coffee Memorial Blood Center plans blood drive in Lefors

LEFORS - Coffee Memorial Blood Center is sponsoring a blood donor drive from 5 to 7 p.m. Monday at the Lefors Civic Center.
 Blood donor qualifications include being 17 years old or older, a minimum weight of 110 pounds, and be at least eight weeks between donation.

People who cannot donate blood include those who have had or do have hepatitis, cancer (other than skin), diabetes requiring insulin, intravenous drug use not prescribed by a physician and other conditions. The blood center recommends those who want to give blood to eat a meal before donating. The attendants will ask for your Social Security number for identification purposes.

Mann

"The Democratic Party will be supporting John very strongly. We think he is highly qualified," Sansing said.
 Mann has been a trial law practitioner for 19 years. He is a former director of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, and a former member of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association. He serves as a member of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association.

 Mann assumed the duties of assistant district attorney for 31st and 223rd judicial districts on Jan. 1, 1989. He was appointed as district attorney in April after former District Attorney Harold Comer resigned.

 Mann graduated in 1969 from West Texas State University in Canyon with a bachelor's degree and from Texas Tech University School of Law in Lubbock in 1972 with a doctor of jurisprudence degree.

Actor raps rapper's controversial lyrics

By E. SCOTT RECKARD
AP Business Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Charlton Heston urged Time Warner executives to stop distributing an album by rapper Ice-T with songs about killing police and sodomizing girls.

The actor, a crusader for conservative causes, described himself as a Time Warner shareholder but said he was speaking as a private citizen who felt obliged to join a furor over Ice-T's "Body Count" album.

Heston read excerpted lyrics of "KKK Bitch," in which the singer describes some friends having sex with Southern Nazi and skinhead girls while he falls in love with two 12-year-old nieces of Tipper Gore.

Gore, fought for warning labels on records with explicit language. She declined comment.

Speaking at the company's annual shareholders' meeting Thursday, Heston told Time Warner President Gerald Levin and the company's board of directors that he wasn't criticizing Ice-T. "I condemn instead the responsible officials in this company," he said.

"It's often been said that if Adolf Hitler came back with a hot movie synopsis, every studio in town would be after it," Heston said in prepared remarks. "Would Warner's be among them?"

Protests over the album began with police groups that said the song "Cop Killer" encourages the assassination of police. Police demonstrated outside the meeting in Beverly Hills while officers inside addressed company officials.

Levin assured police representatives that Time Warner respects law enforcement but said the company has an obligation to "ensure that the voices of the powerless, the disenfranchised, those at the margins are heard."

Levin said the record would not be recalled, but Time Warner will produce commercial-free TV shows debating the issues it raises and hold similar forums at major urban universities.

He acknowledged that the album is raw and phrased in the language of the streets. But he said it is a bitter protest meant to express rage and frustration at police brutality and systematic racism.

"It is not a call for anti-police violence," Levin said.

Ice-T sales are far less than one tenth of 1 percent of Warner Music Group's $3 billion in annual sales, he said.

Parties court Perot supporters

By SCOTT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Both parties today courted those set adrift by Ross Perot's withdrawal from the presidential race while a strategist said the stunned volunteers must "find some way to be a constructive force in American politics."

Vice President Dan Quayle appealed to Perot's supporters to back Bush and help "change the Democratic Congress," saying, "That has been the power center of the status quo — that is where the special interests hang out."

Perot strategist Hamilton Jordan, appearing on CBS' "This Morning," said he believed the race would have been winnable for the independent contender but added that his "whole life suggests he's not a quitter."

"For those people who are hurt, some that I know are angry, once you put that behind you, the problems that face this nation are still there," Jordan said. He said he was unsure "that either party is going to address them. We've got to find some way to be a constructive force in American politics."

Democratic national Chairman Ronald H. Brown said on NBC's "Today" show he was confident that Perot supporters would back the Clinton-Gore ticket.

"Perot voters don't like the status quo," he said. "They desperately want change... They don't want George Bush to be reelected. They want a new direction."

Bruised, battered and perhaps worst of all embarrassed, Perot bowed out Thursday, concluding he couldn't win a tumultuous three-man White House race.

He made the decision around 10 p.m. Wednesday at a meeting in his mansion, having listened to — and ultimately rejected — the advice of his most trusted aides, who still believe he could have won. "I believe we should break this thing off," adviser Mort Meyerson quoted him as saying.

The end had been secretly brewing for several days as Perot feuded with top staff and his phenomenal groundswell movement appeared to have crested.

His co-chairman resigned, his poll standing dropped and Perot was upset at the negative reaction some blacks had to an NAACP speech in which he referred to "your people."

While the Democrats exulted in their New York convention this week, Perot decided it was simply time to cut his losses.

"My sense is that over the past couple of days this thing has been developing in his head, based on a few things I heard him say," said Jordan.

One sign that Perot had begun to seriously consider quitting was a discussion Wednesday about what would happen if no candidate won a majority of electoral votes and the decision was thrown to the House.

Perot said it was the realization that he may not win an electoral majority that drove him from the race.

"I have concluded that we cannot win in November, and that the election will be decided in the House of Representatives," Perot said. "Throughout this effort, we have said repeatedly that our objective is to improve our country, not disrupt the political process."

"I'm an engineer," he said later. "I just rationally looked at the facts. You don't make good decisions with emotions, you make good decisions just looking at the facts."

Perot said that the troubles of the last week "had nothing to do with it." But close associates said Perot realized that he had shortcomings as a candidate.

"I might have been temperamentally qualified to be president of the United States," said Jim Squires, Perot's top media advisor. "I don't think he's temperamentally qualified to come out as a first-timer and take on this brutal system that someone must take on in order to run."

The defining moment may have been last Saturday, when Perot addressed the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People — his first in-person address to a crowd that was not entirely composed of campaign volunteers. He addressed the audience as "you people," said "your people" were hurt the most by economic decline and told stories that some found patronizing from the Texas billionaire.

Jordan said Perot called him from his airplane returning from the Nashville, Tenn., convention.

"He was angry at the thought he had said something that would hurt or offend any other person," Jordan said. "He was anguished about that — not at his performance, but that he had said something that would offend another human being. It upset him. It bothered him."

By Wednesday, the day was filled with "serious" discussion over whether Perot should remain in the race. The agreement that campaign co-manager Ed Rollins would resign complicated this week's picture, aides said, but they insisted it was unrelated.

Afraid that word of Rollins' move was leaking out, campaign chairman Tom Luce addressed a hastily called news conference and pledged that the campaign was on track, that Perot's plans had not changed and that to Perot, events of July had little bearing on a November election.

"I had no inkling yesterday that Ross was going to decide not to run," Luce said.

Lottery winner plans cruise

EL PASO (AP) — Pamela Salter isn't being greedy when she says she'll keep buying lottery tickets even though she just won $1 million.

She said anticipation is half the fun. "There's a chance that you're going to win. And I did!" she said Thursday.

Mrs. Salter, 34, of Garland opened a safe that declared her the $1 million winner in the state's fifth Texas Millionaire Drawing. In fact, she opened it three times for a commercial for the Texas Lottery.

Early in the drawing Mrs. Salter said she didn't know what she'd do with the money except buy more lottery tickets. But later in a news conference, Mrs. Salter said she would take a cruise.

"Maybe everywhere," she said her eyes widening.

Mrs. Salter, a transplanted Savannah, Ga., native, is a general manager for a consumer finance office. She has a 13-year-old son and 8-year-old daughter. Her husband, Arthur, is a dental lab technician and watched her win the prize. She bought 50 tickets before landing a million-dollar drawing entry three weeks ago.

"This is the biggest rush I've ever had," she said with a Southern drawl after tossing her cowboy hat to the second floor balcony of the El Paso Civic Center and shaking in excitement.

She said she bought a new dress and permed her hair for the drawing. "I wanted to look like a million bucks," she said.

Counterfeiter of license plate stickers busted

HOUSTON (AP) — A graphic artist has been arrested for printing fake auto license plate stickers described by authorities as the best counterfeit stickers they had ever seen.

Daniel Lasco was arrested Thursday by Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Billy Don Ivey on charges of felony tampering with government records.

Lasco, 29, told police he's been printing a "few" fake license plate stickers a month for the last three years to supplement his income.

Lasco was being held in the Harris County Jail late Thursday in lieu of $10,000 bond.

J.C. Mosier, spokesman for Precinct 1 Constable Jack Abercia's office, said an informant tipped off authorities Tuesday.

Deputies from Abercia's office and investigators from the Texas Department of Public Safety executed an arrest warrant for Lasco and a search warrant Thursday for his workplace, a lighting company.

Silk screening units for fake license plate stickers for the years

1991, 1992 and 1993 were found in Lasco's work area, along with scraps of discarded stickers, Mosier said.

Mosier and DPS investigators agreed the phony stickers were the best they'd ever seen. One DPS officer said the fakes were almost undetectable.

Lasco told police he had sold the fake stickers for $20 each, well below the usual rate for renewals. The fakes also let buyers circumvent the new law requiring proof of insurance by car owners at tag renewal time.

Secret Service agents were notified after authorities found a silk screen unit for a $20 bill in Lasco's work area. No decision was made about federal charges because it appeared the suspect had not put any fake bills into circulation, authorities said.

The quality of the $20 bill silk screen was not good, and Mosier said Lasco told officers he had been experimenting when he built it.

Officers don't think anyone at the lighting company knew about the illegal printing, which it appeared Lasco performed after work hours, Mosier said.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveeting commandment.

Opinion

Breaking pledge a strike for Bush

George Bush was right when he admitted to Barbara Walters on a recent "20/20" that breaking his pledge not to raise taxes was the biggest mistake of his presidency. Unfortunately, he still doesn't seem to understand how important the mistake really was.

Going back on his pledge left many of Bush's supporters feeling betrayed. As Bush himself explained, "...it undermined to some degree my credibility, with the American people." And for good reason.

When George Bush declared before the nation in August 1988 that he would tell Congress, "Read my lips: No new taxes," it was not just a throw-away line. It became a centerpiece of his campaign. In speech after speech, candidate Bush repeated his firm opposition to a tax increase. But then, in October 1990, he agreed to a "budget deal" that raised taxes by more than $100 billion.

The budget deal did nothing to reduce the deficit — in fact, the deficit has only grown larger since — but it did greatly reduce his credibility with voters. Since the glow has faded from our victory in the Persian Gulf War, Bush's popularity has sunk to near Carteresque levels.

Voters have to be cynical. When a presidential candidate makes a clear pledge, over and over again, we have a right to feel betrayed if the candidate, once in office, breaks that promise.

And the president's excuses don't wash. When Bush pledged not to raise taxes, he did not make it conditional by saying, "unless conditions change," or "unless I can work out a deal for spending cuts." He said he would support no new taxes — "Period!"

President Bush was right four years ago when he pledged not to raise taxes, he did not make it conditional by saying, "unless conditions change," or "unless I can work out a deal for spending cuts." He said he would support no new taxes — "Period!"

President Bush was right four years ago when he pledged not to raise taxes. His pledge was both good politics and good policy. It's a myth that tax increases bring down deficits. On the contrary, they usually slow economic growth, which depresses government tax collections and leads to higher deficits. Which is exactly what happened after the 1900 tax hike.

Pledging not to raise taxes was one of the smartest things George Bush ever did. Breaking that pledge was one of the dumbest.

Killing the thing they love

Irony of ironies! The Supreme Court set out 38 years ago to improve the educational opportunities of blacks. With last month's decision in the Mississippi case, the court may have dealt these opportunities a brutal blow.

The high court's opinion directly affects only the 17 states that once maintained racially separate schools, but the case has a larger interest. Once more it illustrates the folly of permitting judges, especially federal judges, to engage in business that is no business of judges.

This time the issue has to do with the survival of historically black colleges. The question put to lower court judges is not whether these colleges are legally justifiable, but whether they are "educationally justifiable." This is not a question of jurisprudence. It is a question of legislative policy. How did federal judges get to be doctors of education?

The Mississippi story goes back a long way. Having founded the all-white University of Mississippi in 1848, the state made a postwar gesture toward accommodation in 1871. It created Alcorn State University as "an agricultural college for the education of Mississippi's black youth." At the time it never occurred to anyone that such a step violated the equal protection clause of the newly adopted 14th Amendment.

Between 1880 and 1925, Mississippi created four more institutions of higher learning for whites. In 1940 and again in 1950, it created Jackson State and Valley State universities for blacks. By the time the Supreme Court handed down its landmark opinion of 1954, putting an end to all state-sanctioned segregation, Mississippi was operating eight colleges and universities that were completely segregated by race. They are still going strong.

Despite the 1954 opinion, Mississippi refused to abandon the segregated system. Token blacks entered the white schools; a handful of whites enrolled at the black schools. In 1969 the Justice Department brought the desegregation suit that reached another milestone last month, 23 years after it began.

The Supreme Court agreed that Mississippi has made bona fide efforts to eliminate the last vestiges of segregation, but the state has not done enough. Two matters especially troubled the court: admission policies and duplicated offerings.

For almost 30 years, the five white universities have required all entrants, black or white, to achieve a minimum score of 15 on the American College Testing Program (ACT). Those scoring less than 15 but more than 13 qualify for admission to the historically black institutions. At the time the case went to trial, the average ACT score for whites was 18, the average score for blacks was 7. The high court sent this issue back to trial court for reconsideration. The lingering effect of the policy obviously is to contribute to de facto segregation. It will be up to the courts to decide whether the institutions must be dumbed down or raised up.

If the court were to require a minimum ACT score of, say, 14, coupled with a 3.0 grade average, hundreds of black students never would make it to higher education in Mississippi. If a minimum score were set at 9 or 10, hundreds of blacks could be admitted to all eight institutions, but predictably they would flunk out in droves. Would this be "sound educational policy"?

Does Mississippi need eight colleges? The high court asks that this question be re-examined also. Delta State and Mississippi Valley are only 35 miles apart. Only 20 miles separate Mississippi State and Mississippi University for Women. Almost all the graduate programs at the black universities are duplicated at predominantly white universities.

In a scathing dissenting opinion, Justice Antonin Scalia said that the majority's decision would achieve "the elimination of predominantly black institutions." Some might regard that consequence as good social policy, he said, "but it is assuredly not good constitutional law."

Justice Clarence Thomas agreed. He found nothing in the Constitution to prohibit the maintenance of the historically black colleges. These beloved institutions had sustained blacks during decades of segregation. It would be ironic if they were now destroyed "in an effort to combat its vestiges."

"Each man kills the thing he loves," said Oscar Wilde. The federal judiciary is about to illustrate that in this case, Oscar Wilde had it just about right.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, July 17, the 199th day of 1992. There are 167 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On July 17, 1898, during the Spanish-American War, Spain surrendered to the United States at Santiago, Cuba.

On this date: In 1917, 75 years ago, the British royal family adopted the name Windsor.

In 1938, aviator Douglas Corrigan took off from New York, saying he was headed for California; he ended up the next day in Ireland, earning himself the nickname "Wrong Way Corrigan."

In 1945, President Truman, Soviet Premier Josef Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill began meeting at Potsdam in the final Allied summit of World War II.

In 1955, Disneyland had its opening day in Anaheim, Calif.

In 1968, a coup in Iraq returned the Baath Party to power, five years after it was ousted.

Ethanol's time is now

While we are waiting for better, cheaper, cleaner-burning fuel for our cars, you can open the manual that came with your present General Motors car and read (on page 249 of mine) these words: "Properly blended 10 percent ethanol is fine for your vehicle."

It makes a point of saying "ethanol," not "methanol."

Ethanol is made from grown-in-America corn. The manual says 10 percent.

General Motors has put 50 Chevrolet Lumina through the production line just enough modified to run on 85 percent ethanol!

Those cars are now being road-tested. All car makers have been testing alcohol fuel cars for 10 years. Now we are down to fine-tuning these vehicles to anticipate and eliminate any possible problems.

These cars will be road-tested for performance, pollution and economy.

The recent chemical spill in Duluth, Minn., polluting public waters with toxic benzene, re-reminded us that the components of gasoline (benzene is one) are now utterly out of date.

Paul Harvey

While the Environmental Protection Agency since the 1980s has been requiring reductions in the amount of lead in gasoline, the petroleum industry has sought other ways of increasing octane.

Pure ethanol is the best bet, rated at 112.5 octane. But the industry has instead chosen to use such chemicals as benzene from its own refineries.

So what they have done is to replace one deadly chemical with another.

Sen. Dave Durenberger (D-Minn.) says ethanol is "the safest, cleanest-burning component the oil companies could add to gasoline. It is energy we have in abundance without poking more holes in the ground and without paying tribute to Middle East tyrants. We can buy ethanol from home folks instead of strangers on the other side of the world."

Sen. Durenberger was one of the members of Congress who negotiated the Clean Air Act amendments. It was and is the intent of those amendments to focus on ethanol for a major contribution in cleaning up America's air.

But, he says, up to now the Environmental Protection Agency has instead supported drilling for more oil — or importing more oil — rather than following the law.

Ethanol may not be the best and cheapest of all possible car fuels, but this is one that has already proved itself, and it is certainly a viable option until something better comes along.

Jack Dinan of GM says that from the ethanol cars now being tested in Illinois and Wisconsin we will learn the effects of heat and cold and humidity. We will learn the extent of service and repairs. We will learn about mileage and emissions.

And we will learn whether, at long last, our nation can do without Mideast oil.

A rare political vintage comes of age

As campaign vintages go, '92 is shaping up as a helluva year. Robust and full-bodied, with a nose that will knock you over if you linger too long over it.

I mean, consider that it's only mid-summer and the stuff is not even supposed to be potable until after Labor Day and we've already been juiced on it several times. We got loaded when Bill was almost taken down by Gennifer's charges, Hillary's conflicts, the draft dilemma and the drag that didn't go down. We got looped when Pat jumped on George for his budget deficits, globalism and broken vow not to raise taxes. And now we're drinking deeply of the Prez pounding Perot and Ross whacking back and Bill watching warily with cannon primed.

I advise copious sips. It is a blessed generation that gets to savor nectar of this character.

It wasn't supposed to be this way. After the down-and-dirty, flags-and-pledges campaign of 1990, the pundits said the public was wising up to cheap tricks and would no longer abide them. Just to be sure we didn't get conned, many of our favorite commentators dedicated themselves to exposing campaign sleaze.

But the press has failed us once again. The current race is shaping up as the meanest in two decades, and it has been left to our leaders to illuminate the matter. Back in early spring, President Bush declared 1992 to be "the ugliest political year I've ever seen." Just a few days ago, he dropped in on a Republican do in Detroit and lamented "all the noise and the fury out there of Politics '92: endless polls, weird talk shows, crazy groups every Sunday telling you what to think."

On a personal level, Bush said, he is "getting a little sick and tired of being on the receiving end of criticism, day-in and day-out, from all those sorry Democrats running for president, and now some Independent" — an apparent reference to Ross Perot. And then the president warned: "When I am unleashed and when we get out of this ... non-political mode we're in, I'll tell you, I'll be ready for the fray."

I realize Mr. Bush is very busy with matters of state and all, but he really should pay more attention to the news. During the past few weeks, people claiming to represent his interests have been trashing the "Independent" he spoke of as a liberal who favors abortion, taxes and gun control; as a closet dictator who would suspend the Constitution; as a ruthless businessman who is trying to buy the presidency; as an Inspector Perot who indiscriminately spies on foes, friends and family.

Republican Party Chairman Richard Bond called Perot "a vague, mysterious and authoritarian figure" who would "probably incarcerate a whole lot of innocent people." Vice President Quayle blasted the billionaire as a "temperamental tycoon who has contempt for the Constitution." The First Mother described the Independent as "bizarre" and "strange." The First Flack said, "Mr. Perot's paranoia knows no bounds."

All of that, mind you, while we're still in a non-political mode. What's going to happen when things get hot?

What's going to happen, I'm telling you, is a humdinger of a campaign. We have three major candidates, none of whom is anything like the milque-toast Michael Dukakis was. Ross Perot has already demonstrated he does not plan to be roasted in the standing position. The recent spate of negative stories, he charged, were Republican "dirty tricks" which he could dispatch with ease. They were "Mickey Mouse tossed salad" he said, and "Silly Putty." Bill Clinton is said to have a SWAT team ready to retaliate against any projectiles launched in his direction.

The political vino that is fermenting even as you read this promises to be superb stuff, reminiscent of 1884 and 1972. It will likely be stored in cool cellars and brought out in decades ahead not for consumption but for comparison.

Roll it around your tongue and enjoy. It's a rare year.

She'd give all the world for a Ceylon frogmouth

By LORI DODGE ROSE
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hours spent slogging through knee-deep mud, sitting on damp forest floors and hiking jungle trails have paid off for Phoebe Snetsinger, the world's second-ranked birdwatcher.

Snetsinger reached a birding milestone earlier this year when she sighted her 7,000th species, the Ceylon frogmouth, a rarely seen night bird with a wide mouth designed for capturing flying insects.

Given that it was in the middle of the night in the middle of a forest, there wasn't much of a celebration.

"Some people shook my hand, I remember that, there in the dark," said Snetsinger, a 60-year-old self-described tomboy who wears her gray hair short and her lightweight hiking boots around the house.

Then it was on to the next new bird, and before Snetsinger arrived home in suburban St. Louis, her birder's "life list" had grown to 7,076. That's out of an estimated 9,672 species, according to the American Birding Association.

Snetsinger was the first woman and the first American to reach 7,000, said Cindy Lippincott, editor of the monthly ABA newsletter "Winging It." She's fast closing in on the world's top birder, Harvey Gilston of Switzerland.

"At this moment she may be within 100 of him," Lippincott said. "All he needs is a bad cold to keep him home."

Snetsinger's search for the world's birds, from drab little sparrows to gloriously plumed tropical parrots, has taken her from Antarctica to Zambia and some 100 countries in between.

She's away from home more than half the year. Room and board on the road run the gamut from luxury hotels to flimsy tents, from gourmet to raw eggs and pickled who-knows-whats.

She travels almost exclusively with organized birding expeditions, but that doesn't mean she always stays clear of trouble. She's survived bouts of malaria, a 7.6 earthquake in Costa Rica, and once in Papua New Guinea, her group escaped from the border of a tribal battle, with aborigines throwing spears at their vehicles.

"It takes a birder to understand at all what I'm doing," Snetsinger said. "It's basically the most stimulating and the most aesthetic thing I've ever done in my whole life."

Her introduction to birdwatching came in 1965, when she was a young mother with four small children. A neighbor took her out one day, handed her some binoculars and pointed out the spring warblers.

"Marvelous little jewels of birds moving through the trees," Snetsinger recalled. "I just suddenly realized that all these things had been happening around me, and I just never noticed."

She probably would have been content to study the birds of the United States with an occasional trip to a foreign country, had it not been for "the big trigger." In 1981, Snetsinger suffered a recurrence of malignant melanoma, a form of skin cancer.

"All the oncologists were telling me you're going to be dead within a year," she said. "So things didn't look very rosy."

But she didn't feel sick and already was signed up for a trip to Alaska, so she went. Then she went to Australia. And she developed a now-or-never approach to birding, determined to spend her last months exactly the way she wanted to.

"I kept taking trips waiting for something to happen," she said. "Nobody really understands it. The usual pattern is it spreads like wildfire, but mine hasn't."

There have been several more recurrences of the melanoma, but the cancer always has been isolated and removable.

"Birdwatching obviously isn't doing me any harm," she said. "I also think maybe there's something about my lifestyle that keeps this at bay."

Her family has supported her travels, which have been paid for mostly with an inheritance from her father, Leo Burnett, who founded the Chicago advertising agency that bears his name.

Along the way, her husband and four children, now grown, have become better-than-average birders themselves, although they've "clearly seen it overdone," she jokes.

Her office at home is devoted to her hobby. The shelves are lined with bird books, field guides and 19 file boxes of index cards, each covered with handwritten notes and color-coded marks. This is where she spends much of her time between trips, updating her record-keeping and studying for the next expedition.

Her reputation as a birder is sterling.

"She does her homework, and she's very careful," Lippincott said. "The word gets around if you fudge your birds — we know who they are."

Snetsinger has found herself wading halfway across a lake to make sure of an identification. After all, there's little to gain from cheating. "It's like cheating at solitaire," she said.

Snetsinger was home from Sri Lanka and Cameroon only a few weeks before she was off again for Japan. There she planned to go by boat with a birding expedition to Torishima, an uninhabited, volcanic island in the Pacific that is the only known nesting ground for the short-tailed albatross, a large sea bird with a huge pink bill.

The bird is on the brink of extinction partly because of hunters who coveted their feathers and skins. This last population could be wiped out at any time should a volcano erupt, Snetsinger said.

The next stop will be Morocco, a country she once visited for 24 hours just to see a highly endangered shore bird called the slender-billed curlew.

Luckily, those 24 hours proved to be enough.

"Everything went wrong except that we found the bird at the last minute," Snetsinger said.

But that's not always the way it goes. Occasionally trips end in disappointment.

"It takes a lot of patience and a lot of stamina and a lot of endurance and a lot of interest," she said. "I mean, obviously you're not going to do this unless you're fascinated by all this."

Researchers see treatment for age-related blindness

By LORI DODGE ROSE
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Researchers say they've stumbled upon a possible treatment to reverse one form of age-related macular degeneration, the leading cause of blindness in older Americans.

The procedure involves surgically removing abnormal scar tissue beneath the retina, along with a single layer of cells. The researchers have found that the cells eventually regenerate, gradually restoring eyesight, said Dr. Henry J. Kaplan, one of the leaders of the study.

Age-related macular degeneration is a condition in which the center of the eye's retina, called the macula, is no longer able to properly process light into vision. Studies estimate that by 1995, almost three-fourths of a million people will be blind in one or both eyes as a result of age-related macular degeneration.

"They don't go completely blind, but it just gets continually worse until you can't even see the big E on the eye chart," Kaplan said.

Kaplan is head of the department of ophthalmology and visual sciences at Washington University. He presented his findings recently at the meeting of the Association for Research in Vision and Ophthalmology in Sarasota, Fla.

His team had set out to find out whether the cells, known as retinal pigment epithelium, could be transplanted, he said in a telephone interview.

But during their study on monkeys, they found that the cells grew back and replaced those that had been surgically removed.

About the same time, an 80-year-old woman Kaplan had performed the surgery on in hopes of stabilizing her failing eyesight began to notice her vision returning.

Kaplan said that the woman's vision still was improving and that he didn't know how much of it would return.

Dr. Robert Machemer, professor of ophthalmology at Duke University, said Kaplan's work was promising for the many people affected but more study was needed on the underlying cause of macular degeneration.

"It is a very good working hypothesis and it certainly gives us hope," he said. "You see there is a road to be explored, but I can't say that this is the road."

The procedure works only for the so-called wet form of age-related macular degeneration, which is much less common than the dry form, Kaplan said.

The wet form involves the growth of abnormal blood vessels and scar tissue beneath the macula, creating blurred vision.

In the dry form, for which there is no treatment, the retinal pigment epithelium is abnormal and the retina's photoreceptor cells — the rods and cones that are responsible for sight — are not properly nourished and gradually wither away.

Kaplan said a similar surgical procedure already was being used to treat histoplasmosis, a fungus infection.

But scientists thought the procedure would only stabilize, not restore, vision in people with age-related macular degeneration.

Kaplan said it takes as long as 12 months for vision to begin to return. In addition, the Bruch's membrane on which the cells grow was frequently disturbed during the surgery.

"The cells need a scaffold on which to grow and if that scaffold is disrupted they just stop and fibrous (scar) tissue grows," he said.

It's still too early to know how many patients might be candidates for such a procedure or how quickly their vision might return, Kaplan said.

Preschool recycling begins with adult education

DEAR ABBY: A couple of mothers in my neighborhood and I teach home preschool for our 2- and 3-year-olds. This month we are talking about conservation. Though these children don't understand all about conservation and ecology, they at least understand the concept that each person can and should do his part to keep our world beautiful and safe.

We would like to do our part by separating our trash into containers labeled "paper," "glass," "aluminum" and "everything else." However, I am confused as to what constitutes recyclable paper products.

Would used paper towels be acceptable or not? What about cardboard boxes — such as cereal boxes, doughnut boxes, etc.?

Please advise me on any steps I need to take before taking things to the recycling plant. Thank you.
MAREN IN MESA

DEAR MAREN: Check the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory under "Recycling," "Scrap" or "Solid Waste." You might also contact your local solid waste management office, which is usually a part of the Department of Public Works. Someone there can help you identify local recycling groups, other area schools and groups with recycling programs, local environmental groups, and companies that accept recyclables and process or sell them to reclaimers.

This research will help you find out which materials are being recycled presently in your area, as well as those recycling handlers and processors who could accept the materials you collect.

Dear Abby

For further information on recycling, contact the Council for Solid Waste Solutions, 1275 K St. N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Teachers or school administrators who wish to order a free copy of the Council for Solid Waste Solutions manual, "How to Set Up a School Recycling Program," or the "Resource Revolution" video, should call 1-(800)-243-5790.

DEAR ABBY: I used to think mother-in-law jokes were funny. Not any more. I realize that there must be some good mothers-in-law, but I wasn't lucky enough to get one.

My husband's mother refuses to accept that she cannot run my life, and my husband refuses to tell her to quit trying. He says if I have any complaints about his mother, I should tell her — not him.

He spends a lot of time with his parents, and he does whatever his mother tells him to do. How can I handle this without causing a lot of problems?

MAD IN MADISON

DEAR MAD: Take your husband's advice. If your mother-in-law tries to tell you what to do, tell her, woman-to-woman, that you are quite capable of making your own decisions. When you involve your husband, you are asking him to fight your battles in opposition to his mother. Not a very good idea. You need a course in assertiveness. (Yes, such courses are available. Check with your local college.)

Another suggestion to improve your marriage: See your clergyman or a marriage counselor. If your husband refuses to join you for counseling, go alone.

***

DEAR ABBY: On St. Valentine's Day of this year, I came home early from work to discover my husband of eight years in the arms of another woman. (The woman was my "friend.") It was the most devastating experience of my life.

As I sat and wept, many questions arose: "Was it my fault? Is this the end of my marriage? What about the children? Can I ever forgive him?"

I still don't have all the answers, but your recent column on forgiveness is pasted on my fridge. I found comfort in those words and will read them every day. Thank you for being there.

LEARNING TO FORGIVE

Yew yields taxol and that's tree-mendous news

By 3-2-1 CONTACT Magazine
For AP Special Features

Question: What is 100 years old, is found in a forest and treats cancer? The answer: a Pacific yew tree.

Taxol, a cancer-fighting drug, is made from the bark of the Pacific yew. It takes three 100-year-old trees to make enough of the drug to treat one patient for one year. Problem is, there are very few of the slow-growing trees left. So there's not enough taxol to treat all the patients that need it.

But now two researchers at the University of Mississippi have found a way to get taxol without killing the rare trees: go for the trimmings!

They discovered taxol in the needles of yew shrubs, which are very common.

"There are 20 million of these bushes in garden shops around the U.S.," says researcher Edward Croom. "When the plants are trimmed, the trimmings are tossed."

But why throw away a good thing?

It turns out the researchers were able to get three times more taxol from the shrub's needles than from the same amount of tree bark. In a year, they hope to have enough taxol to start treating patients. Now that's tree-mendous news!

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

...HOWEVER, ON THE NIGHT OF HIS BIRTHDAY FEAST, HERODIAS' DAUGHTER DID SUCH A SPECTACULAR DANCE IN HIS HONOR THAT KING HEROD VOWED WITH AN OATH TO GIVE HER WHATEVER SHE ASKED AS A REWARD. AT THE INSTIGATION OF HERODIAS, THE DAUGHTER ASKED FOR JOHN THE BAPTIST'S HEAD! HEROD COULD NOT GO BACK ON HIS KINGLY VOW, SO....

JOHN THE BAPTIST WAS IMPRISONED BY KING HEROD FOR PREACHING THAT THE MARRIAGE OF HEROD TO HERODIAS— HIS BROTHER'S WIFE—WAS UNLAWFUL. HE WAS AFRAID TO KILL JOHN, A HOLY MAN AND PROPHET, BECAUSE THE PEOPLE MIGHT RISE AGAINST HIM...

... HE SENT A DECREE TO THE PRISON AND ORDERED JOHN'S BEHEADING. THE DECREE WAS CARRIED OUT AND THIS GOOD MAN'S HEAD WAS THEN PRESENTED TO HERODIAS' DAUGHTER!

NEXT WEEK: A PROPHET WHO WOULDN'T FORGIVE THE PEOPLE, THOUGH GOD DID!

The Carpenter's House Church, 639 S. Barnes, plans to celebrate its third birthday on Sunday. (File photo)

Church plans for third anniversary

The Carpenter's House Church, 639 S. Barnes, plans its third birthday this Sunday. Special music for the event will be provided by the Overcomers, a southern gospel singing group. The Overcomers is made up of Alberta Helton, Lori Helton, Bob Smith and Justin Helton. Pastor Fred Palmer said the public is invited to join in the celebration.

First Assembly sets 'Kids for VBS'

First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, plans its "Kids for Vacation Bible School for Monday through Friday. The VBS will be from 9 a.m. to noon each day next week, said Pastor Charles Shugart. Children ages preschool through fifth grade are invited to attend. They will be taught about "The Lost Coin," "The Prodigal Son," "The Lost Sheep," "The Sower," and "The Good Samaritan."

Special activities for the preschoolers will include animals from a local pet store, a local police officer and his police dog, a visit by the fire department and other servants of the community sharing what they do to help people. There will be games, crafts and special prizes for different areas of participation. Included with the storytelling time will be puppets, with a new puppet couple, the Doinks, as well as clowns "Corky" and "Corker," chalk talks, songs and memorization activities. On Friday, at the conclusion of VBS, there will be a special balloon launching in the parking lot of the church. An eight-foot weather balloon, signed with all of the children who attend, will be released along with several hundred smaller balloons. On July 26, there will be a special service in the sanctuary of First Assembly of God in Pampa, where awards and other recognition will be given to those who participated in "Kids for VBS 1992." For more information, contact Shugart at 665-5941 or Youth Pastor Damon Deaton at the same number of 665-5410.

Religion roundup

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — A Pennsylvania State University sociologist says that contrary to popular assumptions, the proportion of regular church attendees has remained at about the same level for the past five decades.

Despite a variety of other societal changes, Glenn Firebaugh says "church attendance, particularly among Protestants, has been remarkably consistent over the past 50 years." In 1939, 40 percent of them were in church weekly, he says in a research paper for the National Science Foundation. Currently, the proportion attending weekly is 42 percent.

Firebaugh disputes claims that successive generations of Americans have become less religious.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Church of the Brethren has adopted strict ethical guidelines aimed at preventing cases of sexual abuse by clergy and providing procedures for dealing with allegations of such misconduct.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United Methodist official says a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution would make it impossible for the nation to "play a significant role in addressing world poverty and environmental concerns."

The Rev. Thom White Wolf, head of the denomination's Board of Church and Society, said in a letter to Congress members that "the poor, especially children, and working people" would suffer the most from such an amendment.

The Reform wing of Judaism, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, also voiced opposition to the proposed amendment, saying it likely would "create an extremely serious recession" and "unduly burden the poor."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops has welcomed papal approval of a new universal catechism for the church as a "vital moment" for the church to renew dedication to its beliefs.

Archbishop Daniel E. Pilarczyk of Cincinnati said approval of the new catechism, whose English translation is not expected to be available for six months, is an "opportunity for the whole church ... to recommit itself to a deeper understanding of the content of the faith."

Democrats choose an all-Baptist ticket

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Baptists, once a persecuted minority in colonial America, only twice in history have achieved the U.S. presidency — both in modern times. But Democrats last week tapped two of them for the top offices.

It's apparently the first all-Baptist presidential slate ever put forward, says Greg Warner, executive editor of Associated Baptist Press. Historically, shapers of such tickets have looked for balancing diversity.

Both Bill Clinton, democratic presidential nominee, and his vice presidential running mate, Sen. Al Gore, are Southern Baptists, the country's largest Protestant denomination, numbering 15.2 million.

Altogether, there are about 28 million Baptists in the United States in about a dozen different branches, but like most Americans their votes don't regularly go along denominational lines.

Church historian Walter Shurden of Mercer University in Macon, Ga., says being Baptist doesn't itself guarantee any Baptist votes for Clinton and Gore, but their mutual affiliation is something of a landmark.

"It does at least represent that some Baptists have entered into the mainstream of the cultural and political life of this country," Shurden said.

That hasn't always been the case. Not until Harry Truman in 1945 became president had a Baptist ever filled that office, and he was propelled into it from the vice presidency on the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Baptist Jimmy Carter won the office from scratch in 1976, the first Baptist to do so.

He "sort of broke the ice" for Baptists in national politics, says sociologist Nancy Ammerman of Atlanta's Emory University. Much ado about his faith, and occasional media puzzlement, put his Baptist traits in the limelight.

Baptists started out in this country as dissenters from established church authorities in the colonies — the Church of England in Virginia and several other Southern colonies and Puritan Congregationalism in New England.

Arrests, floggings and imprisonment were meted out to Baptists and other nonconformists. Persecutions lessened by 1700, but continued sporadically for another century.

Baptists, notably the sometimes imprisoned Virginia preacher John Leland, were key influences in gaining addition to the U.S. Constitution of the First Amendment, rejecting established religion and assuring its free exercise.

That separation of government and church, only gradually applied afterward in some states, elevated religious liberty as America's distinguishing hallmark.

Previously it had been virtually untried in 1,500 years of Western civilization, but it spread. Baptists had a key role in it. They've characteristically remained staunch opponents of state tampering with religion.

Long a largely rural and small-town people, they hadn't figured prominently in national politics until recently.

Clinton is a longtime member of Immanuel Baptist Church in Little Rock, Ark., where he sings in the choir when in town.

Gore belongs to Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Crystal City, Va., just across the Potomac River from Washington. He was born in Washington, the son of a Tennessee senator, but the family home is in Carthage, Tenn.

To what degree their standing among Southern Baptists may be affected by shared affiliation was clouded, particularly since denominational leadership has come under control of a biblical fundamentalist wing.

It insists on a literalist view of Scripture as historically and scientifically without factual error. Moderates, open to varying understandings of Scripture, have gradually been eliminated from denominational posts.

Clinton, in an interview last week with Bill Moyers on Public Broadcasting System stations, linked himself with the moderate camp and said he's been saddened by the decade-long feud between the two groups.

"I really hate to see it going on and it's affected the lives of pastors I know and families I know and churches that I know," he said. "It's really been tough on us."

He added, "As you might imagine, I'm pretty much on the side of the moderates in the fight and the thing that has always been special about our church at its best was its reasoned tolerance and its understanding of the real wall between church and state."

The ruling fundamentalist group has moved rightward in both its religious and social policies, opposing abortion and women's ordination and supporting prayers in public school ceremonies.

Both Clinton and Gore support abortion rights.

However, Gore and his wife, Tipper, gained some conservative support in leading a fight in Congress against pornography and violence in rock music lyrics.

Southern Baptist ethicist Robert Parham, a moderate, terms Clinton and Gore "politicians of authentic Christian faith" who represent the Baptist tradition of commitment to "the common good expressed through responsibility for others."

Hiland Pentecostal to host special services

Hiland Pentecostal Holiness Church, 18th and Banks, plans to begin a series of evangelistic meetings on Sunday.

The evangelist for the meetings will be the Rev. David Walters. Walters has pastored churches in this area (McLean and Boise City, Okl.). For the past several years, he has been involved in evangelistic ministry in the nation's prisons.

He resides in Los Lunas, N.M., where he is pioneering a new church as well as continuing his prison ministry.

Service times are set for 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

The congregation and staff of the church invite the public to attend the special services. A nursery will be provided.

Pancakes on menu for Macedonia Baptist breakfast

The monthly breakfast of the Macedonia Baptist Church, 441 Elm St., is set for 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday.

On the menu are pancakes, toast, eggs, bacon or sausage, coffee and juice.

The Rev. I.L. Patrick, pastor, invites the public to attend. Donations will be accepted.

Hi-Land Christian sponsors VBS pre-registration day

Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, plans a Vacation Bible School pre-registration fun day, called "Winner Fest 1992."

Winner Fest is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at the church. There will be booths such as a fishing pond, ring toss, dunking booth, cookie eating, bingo, and more. Special events scheduled are egg toss, balloon toss, tog of war, hula hoop, jump rope and sack race. Ribbons will be awarded to the top winners. A raffle will be held for a big foot bunny and sports gift certificate.

There is no charge for the activity booths or the food booths (hot dogs, snow cones, nachos, popcorn, lemonade and desserts). Children ages three years old through the eighth grade are invited to come, along with their parents, to pre-register for VBS.

"Team Up With Jesus" is the theme for VBS.

For more information, call the church office at 669-6700.

Church schedules Kids Crusade

Church of the Brethren, 600 N. Frost, plans to sponsor a Kids Crusade on Monday through Thursday from 7 to 9 nightly.

Sponsors plan fun, songs, prizes, games and refreshments (range cookies and cactus juice).

Puppets Sheriff Booker T. Pedro and Sally Sue invite the entire family to attend the four action-packed nights. "The Gunslinger" starring Kenneth Copeland as Wichita Slim with Gospel Bill and the Dry Gulch Gang will be viewed in part each night.

The public is invited to attend.

Fund-raising fish dinner planned

Open Door Church of God in Christ, 402 Oklahoma, plans a fundraising fish dinner at 11 a.m. Saturday, in the church cafeteria.

Clown leaves challenge for Pampa residents

Sometimes an outsider's view of a situation is the most honest and eye-opening of any.

On the heels of last week's Top O' Texas Rodeo, perhaps you would be interested in the opinion that Butch Lehmkuhler, the world's best rodeo clown, had of the whole event.

"This is a great rodeo," Lehmkuhler said to me during an interview last week. "But some people in this town have no clue how good it could be."

I don't know if you are one of those people, but Lehmkuhler is correct in his assessment.

He explained, "One of the best stock contractors in the world is here. There is a rodeo committee who is committed to doing anything to make a good rodeo. But it could be a lot better. A good thing could be made great if more people got involved instead of waiting for the rodeo to come to them."

"If you want to make a profit, you have to invest something."

An outsider to Pampa has spoken. Did you listen?

When a big event such as the Top O' Texas Rodeo comes to town, how it is perceived by those who come to visit reflects more than the committee who organizes it. In fact, it's a reflection of the whole town.

Personally, I thought last week's rodeo was nothing short of a smashing success. The rodeo grounds were cleaned up nicely, the events were organized and the extracurricular activities associated with them were conducted smoothly.

But could it have been better?

"I felt the support was quite frankly better than I've seen in the last 20 or 25 years," said rodeo president Floyd Sackett. "But we could always use more people."

That seems like a pat answer from most any organizer of an event. "More people," they say. "We could use more people."

This time, however, Sackett's answer comes as more of a challenge than a request, I believe.

After all, the rodeo is definitely on the rise in popularity among the cowboys, contractors and fans that attend it. It doesn't need help to make it exist. It needs help to push it to another level.

"We've pulled ourselves up from the bottom," said Sackett, who has been involved with the rodeo since 1977. "We were crawling, and now we're walking. Eventually, I hope we'll be running."

"Running to what?" you ask. If nothing else, a better image abroad for Pampa is bound to develop, and that could help us all.

"If people want to continue to support the rodeo, we could become known as the town people want to come visit," Sackett said. "That means a lot to every merchant in town, I'm sure."

So are you motivated to do something for next year's rodeo? Well, there are some good practice opportunities on the calendar in the next couple of weeks that could use the same support as the rodeo.

These events, no doubt, are going to give off the same magnitude of an impression to several out-of-town guests as the rodeo did.

For starters, the Top O' Texas Senior Golf Association will be holding its annual golf tournament starting the week of July 27. Sackett said preparations were on schedule for this event which should bring in plenty of business for local merchants.

Also that week, the Pampa Optimist Club is playing host to the Southwest Regional Bambino Baseball Tournament. Tournament organizers have expressed a need for host families for the 11- and 12-year-old players who will be in town.

I'd bet any other help would be appreciated as well.

And into the fall, there will be other events like Pampa High School football and many others I could list.

I don't think it's necessary for everyone to become immersed in every event, and no organizer would ask you to do that. But little things like cleaning up litter or being a helpful guide to these guests in our city can make the whole of the event they're attending more complete. They might even want to come back.

The challenge for an even better city is here, Pampa.

As Lehmkuhler said, "If people in this town are satisfied with what they have, so be it if that's what they want. But I see a lot of potential here. When you're satisfied and there's potential, you're finished as far as I'm concerned."

Here's hope we've just begun.

BRITISH OPEN

Pate holds lead through nine

GULLANE, Scotland (AP) — Steve Pate kept up his mauling of Muirfield today while its capricious winds blew big names out of the British Open.

Pate, co-leader with Ray Floyd at 7-under-par 64 after the first round, held the lead at 10-under through the front nine of the second round.

Fellow American John Cook and Scotsman Gordon Brand Jr., who shot 67 and 68, respectively, already were in the clubhouse at 9-under 133 when Pate set out to protect his lead.

Muirfield can be a monster when its notorious winds howl from the Firth of Forth across the purple heather-lined fairways. The air was still most of Thursday when the links were beaten badly, but the wind gusts unpredictably today — helping some, hurting others.

Nick Faldo, 5-under in the first round, didn't seem bothered by the breezes. He eagled the ninth hole today to go 8-under at the turn, then birdied the 10th to move into a tie for second.

Wind and generally poor play conspired against Fred Couples, the Masters champion and PGA Tour money leader, who blew up to a 78 after an opening-round 70 and missed the cut.

"I have a car waiting for me," Couples said as he fled in disgust after a triple-bogey 7 on the 18th. He ended his round with three putts from inside 20 feet, jabbing the last putt in one-handed.

Couples, tied for third last year, fourth in 1988 and sixth in 1989, had never missed a cut in seven previous British Opens.

Davis Love, a three-time winner this year and second on the PGA money list, also went out with a 77-150.

Cook, a two-time winner this year, strung together five consecutive 3s, including an eagle and two birdies from the fourth hole to the eighth, and nine under here at the Open, I would have said you were crazy. I never hit a shot on the club face the whole week."

The winds at Muirfield, he said, cut across the course "at an odd angle."

"When I hit it into the rough, it was just two or three yards in, not in the parking lot," he said. "I could find it and play it."

Brand, born just across the Firth of Forth from Muirfield, played steadily like a lad perfectly at home, even though he now lives in England. After posting a 65 on Thursday, only one bogey marred his second round as he made four birdies to join Cook two strokes ahead of Floyd.

"I've never been this high up in the Open Championship," Brand said. "Having lots of people around me out there, and most of them being Scots, it gives me a lift."

Floyd couldn't match his marvelous, opening-round 64 in nearly ideal playing conditions. He settled for pars through the front nine today, then bogeyed the 10th when he drove into a fairway bunker and had to blast out just over the rim. He got back to 7-under by matching his first-round birdie on No. 17, and finished the day the way he started it.

By the time he reached the clubhouse, the wind had started to fight back.

"Conditions are much more difficult," Floyd said. "The wind is up a bit. The combination of the wind blowing and not making putts really was the difference in my round today."

Cook and Floyd both had an advantage over the players teeing off after them. And Cook, one of the hardest working pros on the tour, could use a break after what he's been through.

Cook, 34, was troubled for years by an aching right wrist before having it rebuilt in May of 1989. A few pieces of bone were removed, a tendon was fixed, and he sat out the rest of the year waiting for it to heal. After a slow start in 1990, the former three-time All-America selection from Ohio State was back to playing without pain and came within a stroke of winning twice.

He kicked his game to a higher level early this year when he won the Bob Hope Classic and Hawaiian Open less than a month apart, and finished second in the Greater Greensboro Open.

Floyd didn't hurt his chances, even if he didn't improve them. He's still good enough to spank the young kids on the tour, and he's old enough to join his pals soon on the senior circuit.

Floyd doesn't know which way he'll turn when he hits The Big Five-Oh in September. For the moment, though, he's delighted to be making a charge toward a career Grand Slam at the British Open, the only major he hasn't won.

His classy, record-tying first round deepened his conviction that he's never been more in command of his game.

Irvin tops list of holdouts for Cowboys

AUSTIN (AP) — The rookies are on board but nine veterans were expected to be missing when the Dallas Cowboys open their two-a-day training camp practice grind at St. Edward's University today.

Veteran players without contracts Thursday included wide receiver Michael Irvin, center Mark Stepnoski, tight end Jay Novacek, defensive ends Tony Tolbert and Jim Jeffcoat, linebackers Ken Norton and Vinson Smith, cornerback Garry Lewis of Alcorn State, and safety James Washington.

Safety Ray Horton came to terms shortly before camp opened as did Bill Bates, who plays strong safety, special teams, and linebacker.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson wasn't uptight about his missing veterans.

Johnson said "you can't control players not under contract. It would be easier if they were here. We will just coach the players who are here."

"We want to be as good as we can be and the only way you can do that is with everybody's help. It's the only way to be the best."

Johnson also announced that running back Ricky Blake will miss at least the first five games of the season because his broken hip has yet to heal properly.

"I've seen the X-rays with three screws in his hip and we don't want to take any chances by bringing him back too early," Johnson said.

Also on the physically unable to perform list were safety Greg Briggs of Texas Southern, offensive lineman Todd Jones of Henderson State, linebacker Mel Foster of Iowa, and wide receiver Tim Daniels of Florida A&M.

Johnson said Blake's absence will put added incentive on developing Curvin Richards as a backup to Emmitt Smith.

"Richards is talented and hasn't been given enough credit," Johnson said.

The Cowboys did have all their rookies signed before camp started and owner Jerry Jones boasted "we may be the only team in the NFL that accomplished that."

The Cowboys didn't sign 12th round draft pick Donald Harris, the centerfielder for the Texas Rangers, but said he was a special case. Harris has decided to play baseball for the time being.

Johnson, who predicted the Cowboys would be in the playoffs last year, said he would settle for nothing less than a strong playoff performance this season.

"I think we're good enough to go into the playoffs and have success," he said. "Our schedule is more difficult but I think we'll have a better team."

Dallas reached the second round of the NFL playoffs with a 17-13 victory over the Chicago Bears. Dallas was routed 38-6 by Detroit to end its season.

Dallas will practice at St. Edwards until July 28th before departing for Tokyo and an exhibition game against the Houston Oilers.

"The Tokyo trip will be a disruption but we'll just have to catchup with our work when we get back," Johnson said.

Jones said the NFL "drafted" the Cowboys to go on the trip but added "we'll have some enthusiasm for it."

Dallas will hold its annual Blue-White scrimmage at 1 p.m. on Sunday and has scheduled practices on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at St. Edwards against the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Cowboys and Oilers will scrimmage in San Antonio on Saturday and in Austin on Sunday before leaving for Japan.

First-round draft choice cornerback Kevin Smith of Texas A&M University was expected to miss the first several days of workouts because of a pulled hamstring.

Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman reports to the Cowboys' training camp at St. Edward's University in Austin Thursday.

Trainer violates quarantine, barred from horse racing

NISKAYUNA, N.Y. (AP) — A Niskayuna horse trainer has been suspended from racing in New Hampshire and fined $2,600 for breaking a quarantine imposed on horses following the outbreak of a potentially lethal equine disease.

New Hampshire racing officials said Jack Wolferseder brought two thoroughbreds back to his New York farm after they imposed the quarantine. Horses at New Hampshire's Rockingham Park were ordered isolated this weekend after a horse was diagnosed with equine viral arthritis.

The quarantine was extended Tuesday to Suffolk Downs, where at least 30 horses were diagnosed with the virus. Saratoga Race Course and Belmont Park also quarantined a number of race horses as a precautionary measure.

New Hampshire officials fined Wolferseder $2,000 for breaking the quarantine, and New York racing officials fined him $600 for bringing the horses back into the state. His racing suspension is indefinite.

Wolferseder also faces disciplinary action from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, for bringing horses exposed to the disease across state lines.

Wolferseder told The Times Union of Albany that he would appeal the suspension and fines, arguing that he was not aware there still was a quarantine when he shipped the horses to New York on Sunday. Wolferseder, who brought his horses to the New Hampshire racetrack on Saturday, said he was told the quarantine probably would be lifted within 24 hours.

"I didn't have any reason to think it hadn't been canceled, either," he said, noting that guards did not try to stop him as he left with the horses.

Texas' Harrah moves in

ARLINGTON (AP) — Toby Harrah and the Texas Rangers have always been a good fit.

Twenty of his 26 seasons in professional baseball have been spent with the Washington-Texas organization.

He was the first star the Rangers had when the franchise moved to Arlington from Washington, D.C., in 1972. A gritty, aggressive infielder, he represented the struggling club at the All-Star Game in '72, '75 and '76.

He is the club's all-time leader in runs (582) and walks (668) and ranks second in games, at-bats, hits, RBIs, extra base hits, total bases and stolen bases.

He hit a career-high 27 homers in 1977, the year he started the only triple play in team history.

Texas sent him to Cleveland for Buddy Bell in December 1978, but after five seasons with the Indians and one with the New York Yankees, Harrah returned in 1985 to close out his career with the Rangers.

He retired after the '86 season and was named manager of the Triple A Oklahoma City 89ers, whom he coached to consecutive fourth-place finishes in '87 and '88, his only managerial experience before taking over for Valentine on July 9.

Harrah's good friend Valentine promoted him to the major league coaching staff in 1989, and for three seasons he was first base and infield coach.

Then, this year, Valentine was replaced by him.

"I like Toby Harrah," Valentine said after his firing. "Sure, I was grooming him. I didn't want to groom him for MY job, but I was grooming him and I like him a lot."

Texas' managing general partner George W. Bush, left, listens to new Rangers manager Toby Harrah at a news conference Thursday in Arlington.

Drabek three-hits Chicago

By The Associated Press

If every season started after the All-Star break, Doug Drabek would be a lock for the Hall of Fame. Drabek, who usually sizzles in the second half, pitched three-hit ball over eight innings as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 2-1 Thursday night. The only run off Drabek (8-7) came on a pinch homer by Derrick May in the sixth inning. Drabek struck out seven and walked two while continuing his career pitching pattern of great performances after the All-Star game. He is 28-30 before the break and 54-26 after it.

"Maybe we should put a fake calendar in his locker at the beginning of the season and make him think it's June," said Andy Van Slyke, who homered for the Pirates. "Or maybe he should start pitching in June and not finish until November or December. He pitches awfully well in the second half."

Elsewhere, it was Los Angeles 7, Philadelphia 5; St. Louis 5, Cincinnati 1; Montreal 7, San Diego 4; San Francisco 6, New York 4; and Atlanta 4, Houston 2.

Giants 6, Mets 4
At New York, Rob Thompson hit a two-run homer and Bud Black remained undefeated against New York. Thompson homered with two outs in the fourth of Tom Filer, who had just replaced ailing Mets starter Dwight Gooden.

Dodgers 7, Phillies 5
At Philadelphia, Mike Sharperson hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning and Brett Butler's two-run single sparked a four-run ninth for LA.

Cardinals 5, Reds 1
At Cincinnati, Omar Olivares pitched seven strong innings and hit a two-run homer as St. Louis beat slumping Cincinnati.

Expos 7, Padres 4
At Montreal, Ken Hill became a 10-game winner and Marquis Grissom drove in three runs as Montreal ended San Diego's four-game winning streak.

Braves 4, Astros 2
At Houston, Steve Avery pitched eight solid innings and Terry Pendleton had three hits and two RBIs for Atlanta.

Avery (8-7) is 6-2 with a 1.75 ERA in his last 10 starts. He allowed eight hits, struck out one and walked three before being replaced by Alejandro Pena with one out in the ninth. Pena finished for his eighth save.

It was the sixth straight win for the Braves, who are 30-10 since May 27. Loser Brian Williams (3-1) went six innings, giving up four runs on eight hits.

Texas beats Orioles to give streaky Ryan fourth straight victory

By The Associated Press

When he wasn't winning earlier this season, Nolan Ryan was still pitching well enough to put numbers in the victory column. Now the numbers are finally falling into place. "Once he settles in, he's tough to beat," Baltimore pitcher Rick Sutcliffe said of the streaking Ryan, who beat the Orioles 5-2 Thursday night. Ryan (4-3) overcame a shaky start and allowed but two hits over seven innings for his fourth straight victory since enduring a career-worst 13-start winless streak. In the process, Ryan tied Phil Neikro for 12th on the all-time victory list with his 318th.

"I was so inconsistent the first three innings that after that, I just really tried to throw strikes and get ahead of the hitters," said Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout king who walked six batters and only struck out four. "I think the fastball got better and I threw a higher percentage of strikes with my curveball in the later innings."

In other AL games, it was Minnesota 7, Boston 6; Kansas City 3, Cleveland 2; Chicago 5, Milwaukee 4 in 12 innings; Oakland 4, Detroit 0; California 3, New York 2; and Toronto 7, Seattle 2.

Ryan gave up a double to David Segui in the second and a single to Mike Deveraux in the third. Floyd Bannister relieved to start the eighth, got one out and was replaced by Terry Mathews.

Twins 7, Red Sox 6
Minnesota's Greg Gagne had three hits, including the tiebreaker in the sixth.

Royals 3, Indians 2
George Brett's two hits included his 622nd double and the Royals took advantage of a poor Cleveland defense for a 3-2 victory that ruined Jose Mesa's debut with the Indians.

White Sox 5, Brewers 4
George Bell singled home Tim Raines with the winning run in the 12th inning to give the White Sox a victory.

Athletics 4, Tigers 0
Kelly Downs and two relievers combined on a two-hitter and just-reactivated Rickey Henderson hit a home run leading off the first as the Athletics defeated the Tigers.

Angels 3, Yankees 2
Melido Perez tied a season high with 11 strikeouts, but walked Gary DiSarcina with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth, giving the Angels a victory over the Yankees.

Blue Jays 7, Mariners 2
Jeff Kent hit a three-run homer during a five-run rally in the eighth inning as Toronto beat Seattle.

Robert Knowles topped off an unbeaten season with a 11-1 victory Thursday over Chase Oilfield Service in the finals of the Bambino Minor League Tournament at Optimist Park. Knowles (13-0) scored nine runs in the first two innings and ended the game in the fifth inning because of the 10-run rule. Jeremy Hall, Gil Solano, Shawn Strate and Kyle Keith knocked in two runs each for Knowles. Timothy Ferris drove in one run. David Jenkins batted in Chase's lone run in the third inning. Casey Owens and Jeremy Hall pitched for Knowles. Matthew Heasley and Josh Larkin saw action on the mound for Chase. Knowles went 10-0 during the regular season to win the 9-10 year-old division title.

Seneca Nation warriors rush past New York State Police on the entrance ramp to Route 17 in Salamanca, N.Y., Thursday during a protest over sales taxes on Indian reservations.

Indians blockade highway, clash with police over taxes

CATTARAUGUS INDIAN RESERVATION, N.Y. (AP) — Seneca Indians blocked an expressway and fought with state police on two reservations where Indians are rebelling against new taxes on gasoline and cigarettes.

"Get off our land! Get out of here!" a crowd of about 400 Senecas shouted at police Thursday as the Indians took over the Southern Tier Expressway. The four-lane highway passes through the Allegany Indian Reservation, 70 miles southeast of Buffalo.

Indians blockaded the road with cars, tires and picnic benches. A 15-mile stretch of the highway was closed, and cars backed up for miles Thursday night on side roads where police diverted traffic.

On the Cattaraugus Indian Reservation 40 miles northwest, about 100 state police cars lined the New York State Thruway and highway overpasses where Indians clashed with troopers early Thursday morning.

About 200 Indians started bonfires and threw burning tires off an overpass onto the Thruway, which borders the reservation.

State police in riot gear cleared protesters from the overpass and put out the fire, said Maj. George Meyer. Thirteen protesters were arrested. Three protesters and four troopers were injured.

About 250 extra troopers were sent to the Cattaraugus reservation from around the state.

"We want peace," said state police Capt. Robert Browning. "We're here for the safety of the people around the reservation and the safety of the people of the Seneca Nation."

The protests were prompted by a state appeals court ruling last week that upheld New York's right to tax gasoline and cigarettes sold by Indian retailers to non-Indians.

Treaties from the 18th century forbid taxing Indians. New York claims the treaties do not prohibit taxing sales to non-Indians on reservations. Tax officials said the state loses $50 million a year because of tax-free sales on Indian lands.

On Thursday night, Seneca President Calvin John met in the town of Salamanca on the Allegany reservation with Leigh Hunt, director of the state's Indian relations office. J.C. Seneca, a tribal councilman, said the Indians wanted Gov. Mario Cuomo to come to the reservation to negotiate.

"If they're going to break their treaties, that means there are no treaties, and that means New York state belongs to the Iroquois Indians," said Seneca historian Eleanor Doctor. "We'll claim the whole of New York state. That land is ours."

The blockade began Thursday afternoon after about 400 Indians met in private at the Allegany reservation. The Indians marched onto the Southern Tier Expressway, pushing aside a half-dozen troopers blocking the entrance ramp.

The Indians chanted, beat drums and carried signs such as "New York State, Read Our Treaties: No Taxes." Some Indians wore feathers, carried tribal flags and inhaled smoke from burning hemp ropes.

Indians lobbed firecrackers at troopers who followed the march onto the expressway.

"We're not paying taxes and we're certainly not going to collect taxes for New York," said Larry Ballagh, a Seneca who said he planned to fast and sit on a tree stump on the Cattaraugus reservation until the crisis ends. "Taxes are not part of the agreement we signed with their grandfathers."

Snacking arrests rise in New Orleans

By MARY FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Serious crime is down on the city's buses and streetcars — and arrests for snacking are up. Many offenders are children, and their parents are upset.

Among 39 people charged in May with eating on buses or streetcars were Corinna Sandifer, 15, and her 14-year-old sister, Natalie Johnson. Both were taken to jail and fingerprinted.

"It was real scary," Natalie said. "We were both crying in the police car. They put Corinna in this little room with no windows except for a little one in the door."

Police said many of the snacking arrests have involved juveniles, but they could not say how many.

The crackdown has upset some parents, who feel that arresting children can be traumatic.

"She's having a very hard time. She doesn't want us to talk about it, she cries and leaves the room if we do," Barbara Sandifer said of Corinna.

"There should be a better way of handling this. They don't know what it goes to a child who is not used to getting into trouble to find themselves being arrested."

A special nine-officer police unit has patrolled the city's buses and streetcars since 1980, on the lookout for serious crimes such as theft as well as illegal eating and drinking.

Sgt. Jeffrey Vappie, the unit's second in command, speculated that arrests for snacking have gone up in recent years as serious crime has dropped. The number of serious crimes dropped from 150 in 1980 to 17 this year, he said.

"I think people are making too much of this. We enforce all the laws covering the transportation system," Vappie said.

"We have complaints all the time about people eating on the buses and leaving trash and soft drink cans on them. If it got out of hand, it could be a serious problem."

Officers usually issue a summons to adults, but state law requires them to arrest anyone under 17 who commits a crime.

The maximum sentence is 90 days in jail, but judges have been ordering small fines instead. Police Sgt. Marlon DeFilio said scolding youngsters won't work, because there is no way to know if they are repeat offenders.

Vappie defended the arrests of Natalie and Corinna, who were taken into custody by two plainclothes officers for eating frozen desserts when they boarded a bus. Although Corinna and Natalie were not handcuffed, Vappie said they should have been.

"Police policy is that anyone taken into custody is to be handcuffed," he said.

Once at the station, the girls said, they were fingerprinted and held in a cell.

"She still cries about it," Natalie said of her sister. "I don't now. I have more strength. It's embarrassing, though. I've never been in trouble with the police before."

In another case, 12-year-old Mary Moore was arrested for eating cheese curls on a bus.

"Here's this little girl that's never been in trouble and they tell her to quit crying while they're fingerprinting her," said her grandmother, also named Mary Moore.

Barbara Sandifer said police should come up with alternatives to arresting children, such as citing the parents or making the youngsters clean buses on Saturday.

"With all this crime going on, they go after my daughters like this," she said. "Why arrest good kids and give them a record?"

Vappie's response: It's the law.

"Why is everyone picking on me and my men for it?" he said. "What's the big deal? ... Don't violate the law and you won't have a problem."
