87-year-old Doug Newton lets it fly at the Pampa Country Club.

Newton's law: Golf

By MARK SPENCER
Sports Editor

To stop swinging would be to stop living to 87-year-old Doug Newton.

"I've enjoyed living life on the course," Newton said after his first round victory in the eighth flight of the Tri-State Golf Association Tournament Wednesday. "The only problem is that it's been too short."

Newton himself has been coming up a bit shorter on his drives lately. His irons aren't as long either. But there's no shortage of energy in the Del Rio native.

He is celebrating his 70th year of playing golf this summer by traveling to 15 different tournaments in five different states. This week at the Pampa Country Club, Newton is playing in his 22nd straight Tri-State Tournament and is the oldest golfer registered.

"This is the highlight of them all for me," he said. "It's a kind of reunion for me. I used to play all over West Texas."

He's played just about everywhere he's gone in his 87 years. He said golf was a way to keep in shape and meet new people. And he's met plenty since he first stumbled onto the game.

The year was 1922. Newton was 17-years-old when he and his friends made an interesting discovery one day growing up in Del Rio.

"We were walking along, and we saw these men building a golf course," Newton said. "All the kids came down to see what was going on. They were using donkeys to haul the sand up and make a green. It looked pretty interesting to me."

Soon after the course was completed, Newton became hooked on the game.

"I didn't have any clubs at first," he said. "I would take a one-inch wide pipe, bend it over on one end and flatten it. I hit it just as well then as these $700 clubs everyone has now."

"It's interesting. Over a period of time, I've picked up a lot of clubs. But none of them work unless I keep my head down."

From those days of swinging with a crooked pipe, Newton went to the University of Texas at Austin where the groundwork for his strong interest in golf was laid.

Beginning as a freshman in 1941, Newton competed in all campus intramural sports that included football, golf and boxing among others. In 1938, he claimed the individual overall tournament Championship.

"Never could quite make those varsity teams, though," he said.

Even so, Newton said he kept himself in good shape by walking a few rounds of golf a week in addition to his usual workouts in the gymnasium.

It's a habit he hasn't outgrown. Only now it's reversed.

"I play more golf these days," he said. "I work out on days I don't play."

After college, Newton entered the work force. He was most recently a district attorney in Del Rio for 25 years before he retired in 1977.

"I quit when the pension got bigger than the salary," he said.

Whatever the case, Newton's retirement meant more time for his golf game which he has now kept alive for 70 straight years.

"Golf is a game that if you play for fun you'll never get tired of," he said. "So many people get mad at themselves and end up disgusted with the game. I think that's too bad because they're missing something."

Official: 39 American POWs forced to renounce citizenship

By LARRY RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Thirty-nine U.S. prisoners of war were pressured into renouncing their citizenship and sent to prison camps, and some might still be alive, a presidential aide said in an article published today.

The disclosure by Gen. Dmitry Volkogonov, co-chairman of a U.S.-Russian commission investigating the whereabouts of U.S. servicemen taken to the Soviet Union, could help explain how Americans might have dropped from sight.

President Boris Yeltsin caused a sensation in June when he disclosed that Soviet authorities had imprisoned some U.S. soldiers and said that some might remain on Russian soil.

Volkogonov later said he doubted that any American POWs were still alive on the territory of the former Soviet Union.

But in an article published today in the daily newspaper Izvestia, Volkogonov cited newly discovered documents that were "unearthed from the depths of the archives which were top-secret until just recently."

The most important papers were found in the Russian Security Ministry, a successor of the KGB, by members of its own staff, Volkogonov wrote. The discoveries followed complaints by Volkogonov that Russian secret services had failed to provide all available documents.

The documents refer to Americans with Russian, Ukrainian, Belarussian and Lithuanian origins and names who "happened to find themselves" on Soviet territory after World War II, Volkogonov wrote.

"Appropriate organs worked with them — pressing them into giving up American citizenship," he wrote. "Those who refused were sentenced to 10-15 years in prison camps on espionage charges."

Most agreed to give up their citizenship, he said, but they were sent to prison camps anyway as Soviet citizens.

"There is reason to believe that some of them are still alive and that they live on the territory of the former U.S.S.R.," Volkogonov wrote.

Volkogonov said, however, that the search for missing Americans is difficult because of the time that has elapsed and because some of the people being sought might live in another former Soviet republic besides Russia.

Panel airs 10-year highway plan

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Transportation received public input, mainly from local governmental officials, during a Wednesday night hearing in Pampa on a 10-year highway plan for the top 17 counties of Texas.

The top 17 counties make up District 4. Wednesday's meeting was the second of three planned across the Panhandle under required state law, which was effective Sept. 1, 1991.

John R. Willis, district design engineer with the Texas DOT in Amarillo, said the meetings were to get the public's input on what they would like to see done to the highways in the district during the next 10 years.

The deadline for the various districts to get their proposed 10-year Project Development Plan and three-year Transportation Improvement Plan to Austin is Sept. 1.

In the past, the 25 districts throughout the state did not necessarily have to have a plan in order to get funding. Under new laws, however, that planning is required.

During the next 10 years, District 4 is proposed to receive $313,400,000 mainly for maintenance of highways, bridges and Interstate 40 with some new construction.

"District 4 is seen primarily as a maintenance district," Willis said.

Mark D. Wooldridge, design engineer with the Texas DOT said the Project Development Plan is a rotating-type program which will be updated every year.

During the next three years, Wooldridge said, District 4 will have a yearly funding limit of $27.6 million to take care of its projects in the 17 counties.

"What we're trying to do is balance the needs of the system with how much money we have to spend," Wooldridge said.

Martin L. Rodin, assistant district design engineer with the Texas DOT, said the Transportation Improvement Plan (TIP) focuses on a three-year window.

Rodin said the $3.3 billion Hobart Street widening project is part of the proposed TIP for fiscal year 1993. An illumination project in McLean is also proposed for 1993.

Willis said the Texas DOT is charged with maintaining highways, improving highways to keep them safe for the public, and increasing mobility.

Richard Morris, Pampa city engineer, said in the future the city of Pampa would like to see the following projects receive some attention from the Texas DOT:

- consider replacing the Cuyler Street bridge;
- consider widening or putting in turning lanes on U.S. 60, about five miles east of Pampa near the road to the prison;
- consider widening a section of Texas 70, north of Pampa, near the turn to the Hidden Hills golf course;
- consider paving an extension of Tying Street from Loop 171 to the prison site;
- and consider in a long-range plan, the extension of Loop 171 to the west.

Willis said turning lanes are a possibility to be considered under "discretionary funding" which each district will receive.

Rodin added that the Cuyler Street Bridge replacement is being considered.

Carson County Judge Jay Roselius said he would like to see some of the FM roads in his county, which have gaps where they are not paved, to be connected with paving.

Roselius said that although the intersection of FM 1912 and U.S. 60 near Amarillo is not in Carson County, he believed some attention should be focused on the intersection.

The county judge said he was also in favor of more strip mowing to save money that could be used for road maintenance and construction.

Willis said "completing the gap" on FM roads has always been a goal of the highway department, but that a lack of funding has kept many projects from being completed.

Willis also said the highway department had "agonized" over what to do with the FM 1912 and U.S. 60 intersection, but a good solution has not been worked out.

City of Lefors Mayor Gene Gee said he would like to see some of the discretionary funds used to help correct a drainage problem in Lefors.

Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober said he was in agreement with Roselius and would like to see more strip mowing to save money to be used for highway maintenance.

State Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, made several recommendations of roads throughout his representation area that he believes need some attention. Included in those recommendations was to improve traffic flow by making a loop on Pampa's west side and to look at what he called a "dangerous intersection" near the IRI International turn in.

Pampa businessman, Dick Stowers of Culberson-Stowers, said he would like to see a SIP or sign improvement program developed with the highway department. He said 52 to 53 businesses had to move their signs on Hobart Street for the widening project and that he estimates it probably cost those businesses about $500,000.

Stowers said he has a list of 46 other businesses in Pampa, who are going to have to move their signs, as well, which will be more costs to the business owners.

Stowers fought his case in court recently on whether he had to move his sign which had been in place for more than 20 years. Stowers said that although he lost in state District Court, he has not decided whether he will appeal.

"Most of the people who are in business today can't afford to pay the extra premium to move the signs," Stowers said.

"We're trying to promote Texas ... The way I see it now, you're trying to drive us out."

Highway officials said the state receives millions of dollars from the federal government and that money would have been lost if the state did not comply with right of way requirements.

Stowers said he was in favor of letting the federal government keep its money and letting the business owners leave their signs where they are placed, unless changes are made to them.

A Borger Chamber of Commerce official said an accident with a railroad car on tracks running parallel to Spur 246 caused problems in the city last fall because the road was not able to accommodate traffic to evacuate three schools, apartment complexes and a nursing home in the area.

He said he would like to see the road turned into four lanes with a turning lane. Highway officials said the project is being considered.

An estimated three dozen people attended the meeting in the Heritage Room at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Economy's growth slowed in past quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic growth slowed to a crawl again during the April-June quarter after exhibiting some strength early in the year, the government said today.

The nation's gross domestic product advanced at a seasonally adjusted 1.4 percent annual rate during the second quarter, the Commerce Department said. That's less than half the 2.9 percent growth rate of the first three months of the year.

The deterioration in the GDP, which attempts to measure the total output of goods and services produced within U.S. borders, came primarily from a big swing in consumer spending, which represents about two-thirds of all economic activity.

Spending decreased at 0.3 percent rate, compared with a healthy 5.1 percent gain during the first three months of the year.

The latest GDP slowdown is not as severe as the stall during the fourth quarter of last year, when growth slowed to 0.6 percent. Still, it represents a disappointment for President Bush, who is trailing Democratic challenger Bill Clinton in public opinion polls with only a little more than three months left before the election.

Two of Bush's Cabinet secretaries — Nicholas F. Brady of the Treasury Department and Barbara Hackman Franklin of the Commerce Department — issued statements characterizing the sawtooth growth pattern as typical of recoveries and predicting better times ahead.

"This is not dazzling growth, but it is growth," Franklin said. "And I would rather have slow, steady growth than a rapid expansion that fades away quickly."

"We believe 1993 and 1994 will be years of solid growth for the American economy," Brady said.

However, Allen Sinai of the Boston Co. Economic Advisers Inc., said, "This is unlike any other pattern for the economy in the post-World War II era. ... There's no doubt in my mind ... that this is one of the longest and most painful business cycle downturns in our history."

On a brighter note, the Housing and Commerce departments reported separately that new home sales soared a better-than-expected 7.9 percent in June, breaking a string of four consecutive declines.

Economists are hoping for another good sales report for July because mortgage rates have been declining since the Federal Reserve on July 2 reduced its benchmark discount rate to a 29-year low of 3 percent.

Also, the Labor Department said first-time claims for unemployment insurance dropped to a 21-month low of 400,000 during the week ended July 18, down by 21,000 from a week before.

Analysts cautioned against reading too much into a one-week drop in the claims number, which can swing wildly. They are looking for a sustained decline below 400,000 before they are convinced the job market is improving.

Commission names board members

By ANGELA LEGGETT
 Staff Writer

Pampa City Commission made four appointments Tuesday to various boards.

Bill Hallerberg was appointed to the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority board. Don Turner and Marion Teel were reappointed to the Traffic Commission and Gary Gattis was appointed as a new member. Cleo Meeker was appointed to the Board of Adjustments.

Also during the Tuesday meeting, City Manager Glen Hackler reported the dedication for Recreation Park has been set for Sept. 5.

"We will unveil the finished project or close to finished project on Labor Day," Hackler said.

During the work session the following items were discussed:

- Gray County Appraisal District budget;
- Preferred Provider Organization health plan for employees;
- codification updates for the city's building and fire prevention codes;
- insurance requirements for M.K. Brown Auditorium and Civic Center.

The next meeting of the City Commission was scheduled to include the first reading of the budget, which would include discussing the cost to develop a video about Pampa.

"The Chamber would foot half of the bill," Hackler said. "For $2,000 to $3,000 we could develop a brochure the tells about the services of the community."

Additional approvals by the commission at the regular meeting included the commissioners' absences, list of June disbursements, and minutes of previous meetings.

Alternative fuels topic set for workshop

AMARILLO - Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC) will host a regional energy workshop concerning alternative fuels and vehicle conversions from 9 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. Tuesday in the PRPC Board Room, 2736 West 10th Ave.

Speakers scheduled for the program include: David Wainscott, Energas; Bill Pinkerton, formerly with Alternative Fuels Division at Amarillo College; Carlton Bell, Alternative Fuels Outreach Division at Texas General Land Office; and Tim Pillsbury, Southwestern Public Service Co.

Scheduled at the seminar are two demonstrations of compressed natural gas-powered vehicles by Energas and an electric-powered van by Southwestern Public Service Co.

A presentation by Pinkerton is scheduled to include the pros and cons of the liquid propane gas and cryogenic natural gas conversions of gasoline-powered vehicles. Bell will speak on the past, present, and future considerations regarding local governments' compliance with alternative fuels' legislation.

PRPC's Regional Energy Management Program is one of only three such projects in the state. Funding was provided for the city of Austin, the Brownsville Navigation District and PRPC for projects to help reduce the amount of energy consumption by local governments. The Governor's Energy Office received subsequent funding from the Federal Oil Overcharge Fund during the 1980s.

To register for the workshop or for more information, call Jim Madewell, regional energy director at 372-3381.

Huge explosion rocks Israeli military factory

By GWEN ACKERMAN
Associated Press Writer

RISHPON, Israel (AP) — A blast at an underground explosives depot shook central Israel today, shattering windows in buildings miles away. Two people were killed and at least 40 injured, radio reports said.

The blast occurred at about 8 a.m. at the Nof Yam military factory next to the communal farm settlement of Rishpon, about nine miles north of Tel Aviv.

A cloud of black smoke hundreds of feet high was seen over Israel's densely populated central coastal region.

A witness identified only as Avraham who said he was very close to the explosion told Israel army radio: "I suddenly saw a column of fire shooting 25 meters into the air. Several seconds later I heard the explosion, and immediately the skies went black. I threw myself on the floor and covered my head with my hands and I felt that large amounts of stones, sand and tree branches were falling on me."

Police barred reporters from the factory, which is just across the street from a residential area. Dozens of angry residents gathered at the gate three hours after the explosion, demanding the factory be moved.

Last month, an explosion at another ammunition factory in central Israel killed two workers and injured five. The cause was described as accidental. Under censorship rules, the exact location was not revealed, but army radio said today that it occurred in Ramle.

Fire Commissioner Shlomo Cohen told army radio that today's explosion occurred in bunkers that apparently stored ammunition. Israel radio said the blast apparently came during an experiment.

Associated Press photographer Nati Harnik said the concrete bunkers were built into a hillside.

Cohen said authorities were checking whether the blast was the result of sabotage or negligence.

The nearby Meir and Ichilov hospitals reported receiving one dead person each, medical officials told army radio.

Reports from four area hospitals said 40 people were injured, most of them moderately or lightly.

Harnik said the area around the plant was crowded with fire trucks and ambulances. Firefighters were putting out small blazes in debris thrown out by the blast.

Several people who live near the depot called radio stations to describe the blast.

"Around 8 a.m., I was standing on the balcony. Suddenly, there was a smoke cloud of hundreds of meters, and after three or four seconds an enormous explosion," Ephraim Cohen of the town of Raanana told army radio. "It was something from another world."

Police closed off parts of Israel's coastal road at the height of the morning rush hour, causing huge traffic jams.

AIDS commission: Don't test health care workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Commission on AIDS today recommended against AIDS testing of health care workers and said doctors and nurses infected with the HIV virus should not be forced to disclose that to patients.

Such measures would be counterproductive and could cost lives, the government-appointed commission said.

The commission said public fear of getting AIDS from an infected doctor, dentist or nurse is misplaced, because with the exception of the case of one dentist in Florida, nothing like that has happened.

"Policies must be directed at eliminating risks that are significant rather than remote or theoretical," the commission's report said. "The 'cure' for the risk of HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) transmission in the health care setting must not be more damaging than the risk to the public health."

Five patients were infected by the now-dead dentist, Dr. David Acer, and one of them, Kimberly Bergalis, died last year. The federal Centers for Disease Control and health officials in Florida have said it may never be known precisely how the virus was transmitted from Acer to his patients.

But the fact that that is the only instance is evidence that the problem is not significant, the report said.

Because transmission of HIV is through direct contact with bodily fluids of an infected person, chances of getting it from a someone practicing medicine are virtually nil if standard precautions, such as use of rubber gloves, are employed, the commission said.

Far more likely, it said, is the possibility that the health care workers could catch the disease from their patients.

But even there, the panel did not recommend AIDS testing for all patients, in part because it would be too expensive, costing an estimated $1.5 billion a year.

Forcing those workers infected with the virus to leave medicine would be a substantial loss to society, the commission said. It cited CDC statistics saying 360 surgeons, 5,000 other physicians, 1,200 dentists and 35,000 other health care workers are infected in this country.

"Many HIV-infected providers are gay men whose practices include large numbers of individuals with HIV disease; diverting them from practice would further undermine efforts to respond to the epidemic," the commission said.

It said proposals for mandatory testing and restrictions on practice "may be counterproductive, in that they may ultimately cause greater morbidity and mortality than they prevent."

One way that may happen, the report said, is by focusing public attention on something of slight risk, thus diverting people from avoiding riskier practices.

The commission also said that forcing health care workers to reveal their HIV infection to patients "would not only fail to make the health care workplace any safer, it would also have a deleterious impact on access to health care."

Part of the reason for that is polls show that people overwhelmingly would avoid being treated by someone who was infected with the virus, the commission said.

Security fears linger as many Kuwaitis back to old ways

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Near the second anniversary of the Iraqi invasion, life in Kuwait is a tale of two cities.

One boasts quietly humming oil wells, fresh paint, fast cars and Kuwaitis flanked by servants jetting off for London, the French Riviera or Disney World. The second still feels Saddam Hussein's shadow and reels from drug abuse and crimes nearly unknown before the Aug. 2, 1990, invasion. It is deeply frustrated that postwar enthusiasm for transforming Kuwait was instead channeled into a shopping orgy.

"It's easy to fix the material damage, but attitudes take much longer," said businessman Faisal al-Muttawa.

Many Kuwaitis believe a return to normal will only begin in October with the election of parliament, which was suspended by emir Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah in 1986 for its increasingly harsh criticism of government competence.

The main fear is that Kuwait will never be safe as long as Saddam lives.

Baghdad has refused to recognize a new border drawn by the United Nations, and Iraqi television has been running a documentary to underscore its claim to Kuwait.

About 800 prewar residents, half of them Kuwaiti citizens, remain imprisoned in Iraq.

Iraq "is an outlaw state, and I don't rule out the worst from them if they are able to do it," Crown Prince Saad Abdullah Al-Sabah, who is also prime minister, said in a recent interview.

The feelings of insecurity that are the invasion's legacy are kept alive by bombings and shootings blamed on Iraqi infiltrators, Islamic zealots or thugs.

Violent crimes like murder went from almost none before the invasion to 460 in the first six months after Iraqi forces were driven out February 1991. The murder rate remains high.

Interior Ministry officials blame most of the violence on the new availability of weapons — thousands were left behind by retreating Iraqi troops.

Abuse of domestic servants from Asia, although not a new phenomenon, reached such a level after the war that the government started free flights to repatriate hundreds of people who escaped from their employers and fled to embassies.

Doctors at the Psychiatric Hospital have noticed a jump of almost 20 percent in the number of Kuwaitis seeking help for addiction to heroin, alcohol or tranquilizers. How closely that is tied to the invasion is still being studied.

Kuwait keeps its distance from Arab issues and relies on defense pacts with the United States, Britain and soon France for protection. Attempts to build an Arab or a gulf defense force were abandoned.

Western diplomats produce wry jokes about the leisurely military rebuilding, like this one during the latest showdown with Iraq: "Hey, did you hear the Kuwaiti army went on alert?"

"Really?"

"Yeah, they reparked all the limousines facing south."

The government, including the military chiefs of staff, fled south to Saudi Arabia on the first morning of the invasion.

Since the government returned, it has showered the population with largesse: forgiving consumer loans, paying back salaries and giving a 25 percent pay raise to state employees, who comprise 80 percent of Kuwait's work force.

The spirit of sacrifice has all but vanished.

"Many Kuwaitis said during the invasion that, 'If I ever get back to Kuwait I'll live in a tent.' Then the first thing they did when they got back was look for three maids," said opposition candidate Ahmed Al-Rubai.

Some feel critics expect too much, too soon.

"People were expecting a government of saints and what they got are the same ordinary people who were there before the war," said Abdul-Rahman al-Najjar, a columnist for the government-backed Sawt al-Kuwait newspaper.

Political issues include government overspending, corruption, women's rights and — above all — streamlining the country's complicated three-tiered nationality system. It had allowed hundreds of thousands of stateless Arabs to settle in the country, many of them supporters of Iraq.

Palestinians are still picked up off the streets and slapped around in the state security prison but torture has stopped, according to human rights

Huge lawsuit filed in Brenham blast

BRYAN (AP) — A lawsuit seeking "hundreds of millions" of dollars in damages has been filed in connection with the deadly gas explosion April 7 near Brenham.

Houston attorney Joe Jamail filed the lawsuit Wednesday on behalf of 15 people against six pipeline companies and one company's president in connection with the blast, which killed three people, injured 23 and caused more than $6.5 million in damage.

Eight of the 15 plaintiffs are related to the three people killed in the explosion. The other seven plaintiffs said they suffered property damage and emotional distress.

The lawsuit, filed in Harris County, doesn't mention the amount of money being sought by the plaintiffs, but David Bebout of the law firm Jamail & Kolius told the Bryan-College Station Eagle the figure would be in the "hundreds of millions."

Bebout was in Austin Wednesday for a National Transportation Safety Board hearing into the explosion.

Only about 4,000 Palestinians, 1 percent of the pre-invasion community, are expected to get residence permits. The rest were forced out because of collaboration with Iraqis and the Palestine Liberation Organization's support for Iraq. Scores of convicted collaborators are in prison.

Kuwaiti women active in the resistance are annoyed that they did not get the right to vote and that nightly discussion sessions, known as diwaniyyas, remain segregated.

"Women are depressed. They see all the men going to diwaniyyas for talks and they are not invited," said oil engineer Sara Akbar.

"Will a new parliament do something about all this or will it drag on for another 25 years? I don't think we will last another 25 years," said Dr. Mohammed Al-Abdul al-Jalil, a Kuwait University professor and member of the National Assembly, a consultative council.

Bush should look toward term limits

Should it be so astonishing that Democrat Bill Clinton has taken a substantial lead over President Bush in polls nationwide? If there were any remaining doubts that Bush is in deep trouble with his reliable constituencies, these recent trends should have removed them.

Whatever Clinton's incoherence and inconsistencies, and there are enough of those to dispel any attraction that discerning voters feel for him, Bush has worked mightily to repel the same set of voters, almost as if he had singlehandedly pushed a giant magnet around so that two positives - himself and the voters, no value judgement attached to the work "positives" - now face each other. Kindly understand that the Great Renegade, in which the president broke his promise not to raise taxes, constituted as profound a breach of faith with the electorate as has been recorded in our political history.

Citizens with enough faith in the political system to keep voting will be disinclined to forgive the president for the GR, even though the Democrats' congressional leadership presented it to him as something like a fait accompli. All Bill Clinton need do is replay the video of the "no new taxes" pledge, along with footage of Bush's arrogant "Read my lips" response, and voters will forgive seven times seven Gennifer Floweresses.

For that matter, Clinton's acceptance speech scored a bull's-eye with its pointed reference to Bush's lack of vision. "Where there is no vision," thundered the Arkansas governor, quoting scripture, "the people will perish." Of course, a nation can perish if the collective vision - say, the environmental pretext for more socialism, as Clinton's running mate advocates - happens to be wrong. Even so, the Democrats' ticket exudes optimism and confidence contrasted with the Bush administration's seeming aimlessness.

That very dynamic, as it happens, levered the last two incumbent presidents who sought re-election out of power. In 1976 Jimmy Carter, running as a Southern conservative who beamed confidence in America, knocked out Gerald Ford, perceived as the complete bumbler. In 1980 Carter lost his confidence, largely because he abandoned whatever conservative principles he held and came to rely on Big Government programs, and went up against the man whose middle name was optimism, Ronald Reagan.

Bill Clinton, happily for him, turns out to enjoy the perceived qualities of both Carter 1976 and Reagan 1980. The Bush campaign will have to work as hard at demolishing that image - which can be done, given Clinton's record and platform - as the president has done at transmogrifying himself into Carter 1980.

How? By carefully, graphically explaining to the American people that the GR, Bush's foremost liability, was the only choice that Democrats George Mitchell and Tom Foley allowed at the time. By pointing out convincingly that if voters are sore about higher taxes, wait 'til they see what Clinton-Gore have in store for them. And by waging a holy war against a half-century of Democratic control of Congress.

The best available device for that, a wildly popular one at that, is congressional term limits. Bush is on the record in favor of the idea. He should make it his campaign's highest theme and run relentlessly with it. In 1988 Bush managed to become the first vice president since Martin van Buren to be elected president. With term limits he can take back the Reaganesque mantle from Bill Clinton.

Bush and AIDS

Of all the dramatic moments at the Democratic convention, none surpassed the speeches by two AIDS victims who used the opportunity not only to remind the audience of their suffering but to blame it on the Republicans.

"Exactly four years ago, my daughter died of AIDS," said Elizabeth Glaser. "She did not survive the Reagan administration. I am here because my son and I may not survive four more years of leaders who say they care - but do nothing." Bob Hattoy told the delegates that "eight years from now there will be 2 million cases (of AIDS) in America. If George Bush wins again, we're all at risk."

The bleak truth is that Glaser and her son are unlikely to survive no matter what the next president does to save them and that a lot of Americans will be at risk of AIDS even if Bill Clinton resides in the White House. The temptation here is to indulge the accusations as the forgivable anger of people without hope. But when Democrats treat the president as the enemy of AIDS victims, the charge deserves close examination.

The main complaint against Bush - and against Ronald Reagan - is that insufficient sums of the money have been spent combating the epidemic. This claim implies that those dying of AIDS would be content with any particular sum. But any amount will look insufficient to someone whose life depends on a cure that has yet to be found.

Though federal AIDS spending has risen under Bush, Carisa Cunningham of the AIDS Action Council says he deserves no praise: "Every increase in the last four years has come from Congress." In fact, every budget Bush has sent to Capitol Hill has recommended more money for AIDS programs. He proposed an increase of 24 percent in budget authority for 1990, 18 percent in 1991, 15 percent in 1992 and 13 percent for 1993.

In Ronald Reagan's last fiscal year, $892 million was allotted for AIDS research. In Bush's most recent budget, he requested $1.24 billion - representing a 39 percent increase in four years. This may be less than AIDS victims want, but it isn't "doing nothing."

No impartial observer can conclude that this disease has been shortchanged. AIDS ranks only 11th among causes of death in America, but it gets more research funds than any other illness except cancer. Heart disease kills 30 times more people than AIDS each year, but this year it's getting a third, less research money than AIDS gets from the Department of Health and Human Services.

On a per-death basis, the government spends five times as much on AIDS as it does on cancer. When you compare the basis of lost years of life (which takes into account that AIDS tends to strike the young rather than the old), it gets less money than cancer or diabetes, but more than heart disease or stroke. The record is hardly one of brutal indifference.

Another complaint is that the administration maintains a policy of excluding immigrants and foreign visitors who test positive for the HIV virus - a policy that the AIDS Action Council says is unique among industrialized nations.

But AIDS hasn't been singled out. Foreigners are also barred if they have other serious, contagious illnesses - tuberculosis, leprosy and venereal diseases. The policy serves the legitimate goal of protecting our own people from infection. The case for keeping out AIDS victims is the strongest of all - because the disease they may transmit is always lethal and because they are likely to become a heavy burden to American taxpayers.

Barring mere visitors may sound too harsh, but a lot of visitors don't leave when they're supposed to. Every year, some 80,000 foreigners overstay their visas. Some stay for good.

Nor is it true that the United States is alone in closing the doors to people with AIDS. Last year, the New York state medical society compiled a list of 22 countries that require AIDS testing for immigrants and excluded anyone who tests positive - including Belgium, Germany, Greece and Finland.

The Democratic convention speakers didn't mention one unusual concession to their needs: the Food and Drug Administration's decision to junk its usual procedures to speed the approval of the anti-AIDS drug AZT. Bush gets no credit for that because it occurred under Ronald Reagan - though he does get blamed for all of Reagan's failings.

AIDS victims can't really be blamed for looking for someone to blame for their tragedy. The danger is in assuming that because Glaser and Hattoy were eloquent and moving, they were also right. Bush hasn't done enough to satisfy everyone, but he has nothing to apologize for.

What's wrong with Gore

I met Albert Gore of Tennessee once. It was seven or eight years ago, I can't recall exactly.

That's starting to happen to us baby-boomers, folks like Albert Gore and myself. Once we were the baby darlings of this country, born to parents fresh out of a world war.

But look at us now. We're staring dead at the half-century mark. We're no longer promising young men. We've lost the zip on our fast balls and we're doing things like running for president and vice president of the United States.

Time has begun to run together for us. Yesterday, we were 16. Now, we can't remember, was it 1964 or 1966 when we graduated from high school.

But enough of that. You get old. Stuff happens, as they say.

I met Albert Gore in Memphis. My friend Pepper Rodgers, who was coaching professional football in Memphis at the time, invited me to attend Memphis' famed International Barbecue Cook-off.

This is serious stuff in Memphis. Barbecueurs come from around the world to compete. They set up tents and cookers on a little island down the Mississippi, and the air for miles around is filled with the aroma of food, the smell of sizzling pork.

Lord, does it get hot in Memphis! Pepper lived in a condo on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi and the island where they were holding the cook-off.

It was evening and Pepper and his wife, Livingston, and I were sitting on his patio. We heard gun fire.

We looked down and there was a man chasing another man firing a gun. The chase was trying to climb up the bluff to get away from his pursuer. I'd never seen a live murder attempt before.

The bluff had become muddy because of all the foot traffic down to the cook-off, and the poor man being fired upon was having a helluva time trying to get up the bluff.

Luckily, the man after him was a lousy shot and finally ran out of bullets. The gentleman being fired upon did manage to get up the bluff, muddy and bloody, and escaped.

"They were probably arguing who had the hotter sauce," Pepper said.

Albert Gore, senator from Tennessee, was an entry in the cook-off, and Pepper took me into his tent and introduced me.

He was covered in perspiration. It was dripping from his nose. He had on an apron and he had meat on the fire.

"Try some of this," he said to me, and handed me a plate. I know a lot more about barbecue than I do about politics.

"Very good," I said to the senator, and I meant it. All the tents had cute little names like Swine Time and Hoggy Woggy, a take off on Piggy-Wiggly. Al Gore's tent didn't have a name.

"I thought about calling us Gorky Pork," he said. "But I thought better of it." Any politician knows, a lot of Americans still don't have a sense of humor when it comes to anything to do with the "L" word.

In my humble opinion, I don't think any Democratic ticket can win the presidency because of the liberal, social and economic policies of previous Democratic tickets that have been disastrous. But I will say I do like a man who'll cook barbecue in 100-plus degrees and has a sense of humor.

The only thing wrong with Albert Gore, Democratic candidate for Vice President, is he's on the wrong end of the ticket.

Budget solution: Just say no

Despite the crocodile tears shed over this year's near-$400 billion federal deficit, only a boob would have been surprised that Congress nixed the proposed balanced-budget amendment.

The sorry fact is that Washington has no interest in reining in federal spending. The main industry of the federal city is just that: spending other peoples' money. And not on the cheap, either.

Washington is the ultimate designer city. For every problem imaginable our bureaucratic boutiques have designed a costly program to "address" the problem. If no problem exists, Washington finds one anyway.

The results: more than 1,000 "assistance" programs administered by more than 50 federal agencies; a $4 trillion federal debt that will increase nearly 10 percent in the current fiscal year alone; and lots and lots of political posturing about "the deficit" by politicians who, every voter knows, don't have the guts to "just say no."

Supporters of the balanced-budget amendment say they'll be back next year. In the meantime, we can expect more rhetorical hand-wringing about the deficit - without any real solutions.

While the economy probably won't collapse if we wait another year to get America's fiscal house in order, it's important to remember that we've been waiting for more than a decade. In that time, there have been just two serious attempts to solve the deficit problem: the early Reagan budgets, and the Gramm-Rudman Act, which mandated automatic budget cuts if Congress couldn't muster the courage to trim the fat.

Well, Congress hasn't been able to muster the courage. The Gramm-Rudman sanctions, initiated in 1985, actually were working - so well, in fact, that Congress and the Bush White House did away with them and went back to Washington's favorite "solution" to budget deficits: They raised our taxes. Since then, the annual deficit has more than doubled.

This sordid history of fiscal mismanagement might make you think that balancing the federal government's books is a near-impossible task.

That's what the political establishment would like us to think. In truth the budget could be balanced - even without a balanced-budget amendment - simply by trimming the rate at which federal spending is permitted to grow.

But Congress rails against the very obvious need to put limits on the growth rate of domestic spending. If that rate was held to 4 or 5 percent per year - a reasonable amount in anybody's book - Congress would have to make some tough choices among programs. And Congress apparently doesn't have the stomach for such choices.

Adam Meyerson, editor of Policy Review magazine, recently asked 20 U.S. senators - 10 from each party, none of them up for re-election this year - how they would reduce domestic spending by $25 billion. Just five senators responded. Just one, Colorado Republican Hank Brown, responded with specifics.

Interestingly, the Policy Review mini-symposium appeared just days after a bipartisan group of senators berated former independent presidential candidate Ross Perot for not replying to their request for specifics on how he intended to solve the budget mess. And so it goes...

Bush visits Texas, California; hopes to offset dismal campaign

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, with a visit to two crucial electoral states, is hoping to divert attention from a turmoil-ridden campaign beset by sagging poll numbers and escalating criticism from frustrated Republicans.

Bush was stopping today in Waxahachie, Texas, to underscore his support for the superconducting super collider atom smasher under construction in the state he calls home. Congress is trying to kill the $8.25 billion project.

Most of Bush's appearances during the two-day trip were in California, where a statewide poll released Wednesday showed him 34 points behind Democrat Bill Clinton.

"A single poll in a single state has very little relevance," Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke said Wednesday.

But also that day, Clinton posted a seven-point lead in a poll in Virginia, conservative columnist George Will suggested Bush drop his re-election drive and Republican members of Congress emerged from a campaign briefing saying they were depressed about Bush's chances and his conduct of the campaign.

As the bad news piled up, Bush canceled a week's vacation next month and a Labor Day weekend he was planning at his oceanside home in Kennebunkport, Maine. Instead he'll campaign extensively before the Republican National Convention in Houston, which begins Aug. 17.

The president's California itinerary included stops at an Orange County robotics firm that once was a defense contractor, and a state welfare facility in Riverside.

California and Texas hold nearly a third of the 270 electoral votes needed to win the White House. Another recent poll showed Clinton ahead in Orange County, generally a conservative stronghold. Riverside is in a critical swing area full of Democrats who lately have been voting Republican.

The two candidates for now are targeting the two states and focusing on the same themes: welfare reform, high technology and the conversion from a military to civilian economy since the end of the Cold War.

The super collider, which both Bush and Clinton support, suffered an unexpected blow last month when the House voted to cut off its federal funds. The Senate Appropriations Committee a week ago gave it $550 million for next year, raising backers' hopes it ultimately will be saved.

The federal government already has spent nearly $1 billion and Texas, $227 million, on the 54-mile, oval atom smasher designed to help physicists better understand matter.

From the super collider site south of Dallas, Bush was traveling to Odetics Inc. in Anaheim, Calif., to discuss his administration's efforts to help companies and workers adjust to a shrinking defense industry. California alone ultimately could lose 420,000 defense-related jobs, a recent study estimated. Congress was working this week on a $229 million package Senate Democrats introduced to ease such transition problems, but it looks unlikely that Bush will find it acceptable.

The Office of Management and Budget balked this week because the program, part of a large appropriations bill, would be financed with defense rather than domestic dollars. Furthermore, $80 million would come from the Economic Development Administration — an agency Bush wants to kill.

Under increasing pressure from Democrats, Bush proposed his own sword-into-plowshares plan in May and was promoting it today at the Odetics plant.

Elements of the five-year, $1.1 billion plan include $250 million to transfer defense technologies to civilian companies; expanded training and career options for former military, civilian and defense contractor employees; expanded GI benefits for displaced service personnel, and broadened retirement options for civilian defense employees.

Clinton promised May 9 in San Diego to pump "every red cent" cut from military research into civilian research and development. His economic plan calls for loans and grants to small defense contractors, a defense jobs inventory to assist displaced workers, and reassignment of defense-related workers to a "rebuild America" program.

Clinton continues attack, says Bush dodges blame on economy

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bill Clinton is pressing a relentless attack on President Bush's handling of the economy and chiding him for not taking any responsibility for the slowdown.

"Can you imagine Harry Truman with that sign on his desk saying, 'The buck stops someplace else?'" Clinton told a supportive crowd

Wednesday at the University of New Orleans.

Bush has blamed the Democratic-led Congress for the continued economic standstill because it won't pass his growth package to cut the capital gains tax and provide other measures to spark economic activity.

White House budget director Richard Darman told the House Budget Committee this week that four factors caused the economic slide: the Federal Reserve, the credit shortage, the Gulf War and congressional inaction.

Clinton used Darman's comments to portray Bush as someone who just wants to duck the blame.

Presidents aren't supposed to do that, Clinton said in his history-lesson speech.

"Can you imagine Franklin Roosevelt sitting in his wheel chair, trying to lift people up out of the Great Depression ... instead saying, 'I can't get anything done because other people won't let me?'" Clinton said.

But when there's good economic news, Clinton said, "Man, they were Johnnie on the spot to stand up and take credit for what they thought was happening," he said.

Bush's growth plan was "cooked up" for an election year "after three years of no action at all," Clinton said.

"Don't read my lips, read my plan," Clinton said. "All Mr. Bush has to offer is the politics of blame and more of the same. Mr. Bush has moved from voodoo economics to can't do economics."

Clinton also fired back at Republican surrogates who have come out lately to criticize his record in Arkansas.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell did it Wednesday in Washington; Massachusetts Gov. William Weld was in Little Rock a few weeks ago to do the same.

"They're in the business of trying to distort my record to cozy up to that crowd in Washington that thinks they own the White House," Clinton said. They can't imagine not being able not to go to dinner at the White House. That's their deal."

His Louisiana swing capped a week of campaigning on the West Coast and in Chicago. Clinton was headed home to Little Rock for a daylong break from the campaign.

Barbara Bush to give prime-time convention speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush, surrounded by her five children and 12 grandchildren, will help her husband's party trumpet its family values theme in a prime-time speech to the Republican National Convention, sources say.

The popular first lady, who still boasts sky-high approval ratings despite her husband's political troubles, is expected to address the convention at Houston's Astrodome on Wednesday night, Aug. 19.

"It's going to be a big night for her," said an administration official.

Mrs. Bush had a cameo speaking role at the 1988 Republican convention in New Orleans, but this will be her first major televised address since her headline-grabbing speech to Wellesley College graduates in June 1990.

Before that speech, some graduates had objected to the college's honoring a politician's wife who never held a paid job.

But Mrs. Bush drew cheers with a warm, witty speech advising the graduates that "your success as a family — our success as a society — depends not on what happens in the White House, but on what happens inside your house."

She also urged them "to get involved in some of the big ideas of our time."

Republican strategists view the first lady as one of Bush's biggest assets as he tries to overtake Democratic nominee Bill Clinton's huge lead in the polls.

Hillary Clinton, like her husband a Yale-trained lawyer, offended homemakers, political wives and other women last March when she defended her career in a Little Rock law firm by saying, "I suppose I could have stayed home, baked cookies and had tea, but what I decided to do was fulfill my profession."

Mrs. Bush has been a crusader for literacy and charitable causes, and has written a best-seller, "Millie's Book," about life in the White House, as seen by her dog.

She also has been the star attraction at scores of Republican fundraising events and is gearing up for a hectic campaign schedule this fall.

She spent Wednesday traveling to Baltimore and Columbus, Ohio, raising thousands of dollars for the GOP, and was in Tallahassee, Fla., today for another party fund-raiser.

Nancy Reagan delivered a tribute to Ronald Reagan at the 1984 GOP convention in Dallas.

Ad urges Quayle to 'please step aside'

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The former Florida Republican chairman has taken out a full-page newspaper ad pleading with Vice President Dan Quayle to step aside as President Bush's running mate.

"Please, Vice President Quayle, Step Aside For America," said the ad appearing in today's editions of The Washington Post.

"Dan Quayle is an albatross around the president's neck," Tommy Thomas said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"I'm convinced that Quayle on the ticket could cause President Bush to lose the election. And that's bad for the country and the whole free world because we'd be stuck with Bill Clinton for the next four years," he said.

The ad comes a day after syndicated conservative columnist George Will wrote that Bush himself should give up his re-election campaign.

"We commend you for your years of loyalty to President Bush, the conservative cause, and the Republican Party," the ad says in a letter to Quayle. "Because of that loyalty, you — more than anyone else — know that Americans are demanding greater strength in their political leadership. And you know that you lack that strength."

"... Please step aside ... with grace," the ad said.

Both Bush and Quayle have said the vice president's spot on the Republican ticket is "certain."

Thomas, now a car dealer, spent $45,000 of his own money for the ad.

Officials worry safe havens could encourage 'ethnic cleansing'

By CLARE NULLIS
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — U.N. establishment of safe havens for refugees in Bosnia-Herzegovina could play into the hands of fighters seeking to carve out ethnically pure areas, relief officials say. The issue was among several left unresolved as ministers from more than 60 nations on Wednesday pledged $115 million more in aid to help provide for refugees from the bitter fighting in former Yugoslavia. Croatian delegates said still more would be needed.

Officials were to today discuss how to step up the international humanitarian presence within Bosnia and how to cope with the 2.5 million people who have been displaced throughout Europe.

Plans to prepare winter accommodations for about half a million refugees currently in tents and makeshift shelters were expected to feature high on the agenda.

At the emergency conference organized by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees on Wednesday, there was broad consensus that civilians should be encouraged to stay put rather than seeking safety abroad.

But one of the questions left unanswered was whether the establishment of safety zones within Bosnia would end up helping Serbian, Croatian or Muslim fighters seeking to drive other ethnic groups off 'their' territory.

The action is referred to as "ethnic cleansing."

Croatia and Slovenia, also ex-Yugoslav republics, proposed setting up the safe havens within Bosnia, similar to the Kurdish areas shielded by allied forces in northern Iraq after the Persian Gulf War.

"We need to protect people but does this mean separating them in ethnic groups in view of the existing situation in Bosnia?" said Sadako Ogata, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

John Bolton, a U.S. Assistant Secretary for State, echoed this.

"We do not want to do anything that enhances the prospects of the success of ethnic cleansing and ... frequently people are better remaining in their homes, even in difficult situations, than fleeing with the prospect of never being able to return home again."

Most of the delegates stopped short of saying that Serbs were more to blame than Croats or Muslims for attacking and driving out other ethnic groups. But the anger was clear.

"This policy is the work of Serbian extremists who have been encouraged, armed and equipped by Belgrade," said Germany's interior minister, Rudolf Seiters.

Mrs. Ogata dropped diplomatic niceties and slammed Serbian authorities in the Bosnian town of Bosanski Novi for forcing the U.N. High Commission for Refugees to help in the evacuation of 7,000 Muslims last week.

"For the first time in its history, UNHCR was caught in a scandalous blackmail which left us with no choice but to accept expulsion in order to prevent more killing and terrorizing of the population," she said.

Participants said the use of U.N. force to open up aid corridors and protect humanitarian efforts within the embattled republic would have to be discussed at a later date in a political forum like the U.N. Security Council.

They also stressed that a long-term air drop to besieged Bosnian towns like Gorazde was impractical, as was the mass evacuation of wounded civilians.

Honecker returns to homeland

BERLIN (AP) — Germans screaming "Murderer!" and a sign reading "Erich Honecker, the dead accuse you," greeted the ex-East German leader and Berlin Wall builder when he was returned to his homeland and placed under arrest.

But other Germans chanted "Freedom for Honecker" on Wednesday as the leader of a country that disappeared after he was toppled in October 1989 arrived from refuge in Russia and was driven to Moabit Prison.

Many Germans are divided on the legality of prosecuting Honecker.

Others are divided on the wisdom. During a trial, Honecker could disclose secrets embarrassing to Chancellor Helmut Kohl and previous governments that cultivated ties with East Germany from the 1970s.

The aging Communist, who defiantly raised a clenched fist as he left Moscow, is accused of embezzlement and issuing shoot-to-kill orders to prevent East Germans from fleeing to the West.

He was to appear today before a judge to determine if he should remain jailed, and it will be up to the courts to decide when his trial will start, said Jutta Limbach, Berlin's top justice official.

"I expect it will still be sometime this year," she said.

Honecker, 79, has categorically denied the charges and his lawyer says the ex-leader is too ill to stand trial. Medical tests conducted in Moscow showed no serious problems, however.

German doctors have ruled Honecker fit enough to be jailed.

Davy or David, it's all relative

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — No coonskin caps, please, at the Davy Crockett family reunion this weekend.

Some members of the family are getting a bit tired of it. The same goes for the name Davy. It was Davy, mister.

"He never called himself Davy. That's just another one of the things that cropped up in the movies," said Joy Bland, a great-great-great-granddaughter.

The relatives and Crockett friends, some 200 in all, will gather at Paris and Rutherford, small towns about 120 miles north of Memphis.

For their banquet speaker, the descendants have chosen Robert Youngdeer, former chief of the Eastern Band of the Cherokee Indians, headquartered in Cherokee, N.C.

"It is a great privilege to meet the descendants of a man who had the nerve to stand up to the president of the United States," said Youngdeer, who lives in McAlester, Okla. "Although he killed quite a few Indians, he still stood up for us. That's life even today. We switch back and forth and take sides."

Crockett, one of America's most celebrated frontiersmen, was born in 1786 in eastern Tennessee.

New Mexican art moves onto contemporary scene

By SUSAN G. FOSTER
Smithsonian News Service

Like many contemporary artists, Lois Gutierrez de la Cruz and her sister, Gloria Garcia, members of the Santa Clara Pueblo of New Mexico, want their pottery to reach out beyond their own cultural boundaries. To do this, the women have changed the forms of their art without changing the traditions that connect them with their ancestors.

Both women learned pottery making from their mother and older sister, Minnie, yet their styles are distinct. De la Cruz often decorates her pots with humorous figures, such as the striped clowns who appear in ceremonial occasions throughout the Pueblo world. De la Cruz's work is credited with reviving polychrome of multicolored decoration, a style which had almost disappeared at Santa Clara.

Garcia, on the other hand, reinterprets old designs like the aven 'yu (water serpent) or uses new designs such as human figures or buffalo.

The sisters and their artwork are good examples of how Native

Americans - along with Hispanics - in New Mexico have made use of the market for ethnic art to express their cultural values. The two cultures have been interacting since 1539, when the first Spaniards arrived in the region.

"The interactions were sometimes violent and sometimes benign," says Lonny Taylor, co-curator and project director of a new, permanent exhibition, "American Encounters," at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. "But the remarkable thing about it has been that each culture has maintained its distinct character, even in the face of almost overpowering Anglo-American mass culture."

The unique character of the American Indians and Hispanics living side by side in New Mexico's Rio Grande Valley, the region between Santa Fe and Taos, has remained intact and is reflected in such crafts as pottery, weavings, jewelry and carvings. Today, these crafts not only link the past with the present, but they provide a much needed source of income.

The traditions of the Indians of the Santa Clara Pueblo and the Hispanics from the nearby community of Chimayo are part of the story told in "American Encounters." The Santa Clara Pueblos, descendants of the Khap'on, ancestors who first came to live along the Rio Grande about 1350, traded clay pottery with the peoples from the high plains of Texas, the coast of California and Mexico well before the arrival of permanent European settlements in 1598.

The Hispanics of the mountain-side village of Chimayo, settled by the Spanish who displaced Indians after 1695, are known for their weavings. They thought of themselves as farmers until the early 1900's, and bartered with villagers like themselves as well as the Pueblo Indians and traded with Apaches, Comanches and Utes. They were also skilled woodworkers and blacksmiths.

Among the Santa Clara Indians, the family has traditionally been the center of pottery making. The tasks surrounding pottery making were shared, from digging the clay and preparing it for use, to building, decorating and firing the pots. Mothers and aunts taught children distinctive family styles of pottery.

For most craftspeople, says Rayna Green, director of American Indian programs at the national Museum of American History, continuity and tradition are synonymous.

"It's that base of knowledge, of being rooted in a basic physical universe associated with a people and a language in so far as it translates into a material - weaving, pottery," Green, one of four "American Encounters" co-curators, says that many of the designs and images used today by American Indians are the same as those that people have painted for centuries.

Although artists often use modern tools, Green adds that what an artist sees and how the tools are used can reflect cultural values. Traditions, she says, can be the way you do things, the actual process of making the materials used. It can be the form those things take or it can be the function they have.

look like a tradition thing unless you use that empty bottle as a scoop, as people in the South often do, or if you use it to make a bird house of a fishing float," Green explains. "The plastic bottle isn't rooted in tradition, but the way a person uses it is."

In this century, Anglo-American investors and promoters "discovered" and exploited the cultural practices and products of New Mexico's Pueblo Indians and Hispanics. In turn, both groups have sought ways to convert the tourism trade to their own uses.

While relying on the tourism market for income, many contemporary New Mexican artists use their work as a way of reaffirming cultural values. Pottery making by the Santa Clarans in particular is still done by families, but pottery is also just as likely to be made by individuals as a means of self expression.

As far back as 1900, New Mexico's tourism market provided some American Indian and Hispanic arts with a small, but uncertain, income. "The overall demand for goods produced by Native Americans and Hispanics increased somewhat between 1920 and 1960, as investors and promoters from Eastern states became more successful in attracting visitors to New Mexico," Taylor says. In the past 30 years, the popularity of Native American and Hispanic art has created a major market in Santa Fe.

"The tourist trade has altered many traditional craft practices," Taylor explains. "The first popular tourist items were Navajo weavings and silverwork. Rugs were woven in sizes and colors that appealed to Anglo visitors, and dealers provided Navajo silversmiths with patterns that made their work look 'Indian' to tourist eyes."

By the 1920's, Pueblo potters were experimenting with new forms and glazes, including the famous black-on-black finish developed by Maria Martinez of San Ildefonso, who became the best known of all Pueblo potters among collectors.

Initially, demand for Native American crafts proved to be much greater than for Hispanic crafts, due to the Anglo-American idealization of all things Indian. To encourage and stimulate production of Hispanic weavings and furniture, state officials introduced training programs.

More than 40 state-supported craft schools were established in the 1930's in hopes that they would develop into profitable village-owned craft cooperatives. Even today, according to Green, market pressures continue to influence what is created by Native American and Hispanic artists.

"Basically, items come in and the 'system' says 'We love this and don't like that; oh, by the way, we'd love this if it had an arrowhead on it; water jars are great, but we'd prefer dinnerware.'"

But some dealers and collectors, she adds, are becoming more knowledgeable about the crafts, the traditions they represent and the cultural values they express.

For many craftspeople, their work is both a way to reconnect with their roots and to express their feelings about the contemporary world. Marie Romero Cash, who now lives in Santa Fe and carves religious figures with her husband, Don, finds that carving brings her closer to her 19th-century Hispanic ancestors.

"My father was from Santa Fe," she says. "During the way, he worked in airplane factories in San Diego. I worked in Phoenix and Miami. Many of us don't know where our roots are; we live in a cultural gap. I started carving when I moved back here. It made me feel connected to New Mexico, and with the 19th-century Hispanic artists here."

The pottery of Russell Sanchez of the San Ildefonso Pueblo is deeply rooted in Native American traditions; at the same time it is contemporary. One example of his work, a jar representing Mother Earth, the themes of Christianity, commercialism and destruction and bearing the inscription "Land of Entrapment" - questions the wisdom of accepting New Mexico's state slogan "Land of Enchantment."

"Current events are important issues of our time," Sanchez says. "As a young person and an American Indian, I feel a sense of personal involvement and cannot hide these feelings when I'm doing my work."

Charles Carrillo has revived the art of hide painting, which has not been practiced in New Mexico for two centuries.

"We as artists tend to embody the collective consciousness of our people," he says. "We tell the story of that consciousness so we are on the firing line. We the first contacts that people have with our culture. I tell Hispanic artists that now, for the first time, you have the pen in your own hand and can write your own history."

Since the late 1920's, the Lopez family of Cordova, N.M., has sold small carvings to tourists. Here, George Lopez continues the family tradition. One of Lopez's woodcarvings is featured in the Smithsonian exhibition "American Encounters," which includes more than 400 objects and graphics illustrating the ethnic diversity of New Mexico's Rio Grande Valley.

Teens make the grade and defend their numbers

DEAR ABBY: Coincidentally, the letter from "Amazed in Escondido, Calif.," regarding a store clerk who was unable to calculate sales tax, appeared on the same day I was reviewing for a seventh-grade final math exam with my classes.

One of the problems the students had been assigned was a sales tax problem exactly like the one described in the letter from "Amazed." My students were able to solve the problem correctly with no trouble at all.

I read your letter to my classes, and my students were quite upset. They want you and your readers to know that the seventh-graders in Mineola Middle School in Hollis Hills, N.Y., have been taught to calculate sales tax.

It is unfortunate that we seldom hear about the accomplishments of our young people. It's a shame that "Amazed" makes her generalization on the basis of one incident. I know that she would be pleasantly surprised to see how hard young people work in order to achieve and do well in school. Hats off to them!

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Spotted in Long Island" - the young woman with freckles - not to worry.

I am a 68-year-old woman with freckles and red hair, and I have felt her pain. I used buttermilk, stump-water, lemon juice, all kinds of bleaching creams and anything else that was suggested to make my freckles disappear. I still have freckles!

When anyone dared to tell me I was pretty, I refused to believe him. I overheard someone say (about me), "She's beautiful, and the most beautiful part of it is that she doesn't believe it."

Not until I was 60 years old did I realize that I had been pretty all my life. I meet people I haven't seen in 35 or 40 years, and they recognize me immediately and even remember my name. Becoming gray hasn't changed me from "that redhead from Arkansas."

DEAR GIRL: I admire your philosophy. I wish I had thought of it first. I was overwhelmed with critical mail from readers chewing me out for daring to suggest that the young woman who complained that her freckles caused her "plenty of stress" should cover them.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend I like very much. She's a lovely woman, and I wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world.

The problem: She has a habit that sets my teeth on edge. When she eats, she goes right on talking with food in her mouth. Needless to say, it is very unappetizing.

I have been on the verge of saying something to her about it, but I don't want to hurt her feelings. She reads your column every day, so please do me a favor and print this.

Anglers brave winds at Greenbelt tourney

CONGRATULATIONS to BENNY SWIRES of Randall County for winning the July 16th Fun Tournament on Lake Greenbelt. At the weigh-in ceremonies, Benny sounded just like a professional fisherman when he gave credit for the victory to Berkley's new PowerWorm and to his brand new Astro boat. He won a trophy and $385 for his efforts.

Second place and $165 went to LOWELL RUSHER of Hereford, who caught a nice 2.25-pound bass. The $110 third place prize money went to Pampa angler DAVID TURNER.

Despite the north winds of an unusual July cold front, fifty-five anglers from 16 Panhandle towns competed in this three-hour Thursday evening event. The highlight of this tournament was the participation of 17 kids who fished free. The adults might forget this tournament, but these kids will remember that night for the rest of their lives.

Don't forget that all kids under 17 can fish free with an adult entry at any Fun Tournament during the rest of 1992. In August that includes: Sunday at LAKE MACKENZIE; Aug. 6, at LAKE MEREDITH; and Aug. 20, at LAKE GREENBELT.

The BASS Masters Classic is underway at Lake Logan in Alabama. I am pulling for TOMMY BIFFLE of Oklahoma and LENDELL MARTIN, Jr., of Nacogdoches because they both have attended our February OUTDOOR WORLD sportsman shows.

Another personal favorite is JOE YATES from Arkansas. In 1986, on Lake Broken Bow, he was the first professional angler who shared his boat with me during the pressure of a bass tournament. Joe, who loves the fishing but dislikes the media hype of professional fishing, just might be the nicest guy on the BASS tour.

Other Texans at the Classic include GARY KLEIN, ZELL ROWLAND, LONNIE STANLEY, JAY YELAS, and RICK CLUNN.

QUOTE of the Week from JIMMY HOUSTON: "There is no such thing as too many bass in a lake. Look at a feedlot, those cows are shoulder to shoulder and getting fatter every day. Instead of worrying about too many bass, the 'experts' should start providing more food for the bass."

Circle Aug. 22 on your fishing calendar. Plans are underway for a special fishing tournament to benefit the victims of the Fritch tornado. SANDY CARROLL and the PAMPA BASSMASTERS CLUB report that cash and prizes total $2,000. Anyone wanting to help or donate should contact Sandy at 665-7016. My special thanks to the members of UFCW Local #1000 and HOMELAND for donating a $200 shopping trip. Like I said, mark your calendar, Aug. 22.

Clemens struggles, but Red Sox still edge Rangers, 6-5

By ED GOLDEN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) - A long rain delay, and not plate umpire Terry Cooney, was the major reason that Roger Clemens had big trouble in the first inning Wednesday night.

Clemens (11-7) struggled through 6 1-3 innings, including 30 pitches while giving up one run in the first, and the Boston Red Sox held on to beat the Texas Rangers 6-5.

Todd Burns (2-4) took the loss, allowing the lead run to score on a wild pitch in the sixth inning, breaking a 3-3 tie.

Cooney was calling the game with Clemens on the mound for the first time since Cooney tossed the Red Sox ace in the second inning of Game 4 of the 1990 American League playoffs at Oakland.

"He had no bearing," Clemens said of Cooney. On the other hand, Clemens said, "I don't think that it helped me a whole lot" to endure a 59-minute rain delay at the start of the game.

Clemens had to warm up twice before the game began, then loaded the bases in the first on singles by Brian Downing and Rafael Palmeiro and a walk to Geno Petralli. Juan Gonzalez drove in a run with a one-out sacrifice fly, and Clemens then walked Kevin Reimer to re-load the bases.

"I was jumping at the hitters. When I do that my location is terrible," Clemens said.

He got out of trouble by striking out Dean Palmer, one of seven strikeouts Clemens managed, along with three walks while allowing four runs and seven hits.

Clemens struck out Palmer twice, increasing the Texas slugger's major league-leading total to 103.

The Red Sox rallied for two unearned runs in the bottom of the first. But the Rangers regained the lead at 3-2 in the third on Palmeiro's 12th home run with Petralli aboard.

Tony Pena had a pair of RBI doubles, the first driving in Herm Winningham with the tying run and the second scoring Jody Reed with what proved to be the winning run in Boston's three-run sixth.

Phil Plantier had doubled leading off, moved to third on Mo Vaughn's infield single and scored when Burns uncorked a wild pitch.

"The thing that killed me is that I ran out of gas," said Burns, who also felt the rain delay may have played a role.

"But it has happened to me in my last couple of starts," added Burns, who surrendered six runs on eight hits with two strikeouts. Burns is 0-4 in his last seven starts.

Clemens left with one out in the seventh after a leadoff single by Al Newman and a one-out walk to Petralli. Ruben Sierra beat out a run-scoring infield hit off Tony Fossas to make it 6-4 before Greg Harris retired Juan Gonzalez for the third out.

Texas made it 6-5 in the eighth on Monty Farris' two-out RBI triple off Harris. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 26 opportunities, retiring Palmeiro and Sierra before striking out Juan Gonzalez, who hit two home runs Tuesday night in the Rangers' 2-1 win.

"He did a super job," Pena said of Reardon, who extended his career record for saves to 348. "He throws to three of the toughest hitters in the league and we got them 1-2-3. You don't see that too often."

Reardon said he didn't want to play around facing Gonzalez. "I saw him hit about 900 feet of home runs last night."

Roark grabs lead

By MARK SPENCER
Sports Editor

While most waited for the favorites to tee off at the Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament, the first-round leader was quietly taking control of the Pampa Country Club Golf Course.

E.C. Roark of Amarillo, playing in the second group of the championship flight, took a four-stroke, first-round lead in the tournament Wednesday with a 1-under-par 70.

"I sure am surprised," Roark said after the first round ended. "I figured someone would fire something better after me."

But no one could. In fact, Roark fired the only subpar round of the day.

"I started off on No. 1 and hit my ball into the water," he said. "I had to bow it up and make some birdies on the front. I was fortunate to get a lot of three- and four-foot saves."

Trailing Roark is the tournament's winner the past three years, Jake Broyles of Lamesa, and the 1988 and 1990 runner-up, Dick Alexander of Lubbock.

Both shot 3-over-par rounds of 74.

"I couldn't make my putts or the shots I wanted when I really needed them," Alexander said. "I felt like I was scrambling most of the day."

At one point, Alexander was near disaster.

He entered the par-4 sixth hole two strokes over par when his first tee shot sailed right and landed beyond the out-of-bounds marker. His second tee shot was heading for the same place but was knocked down in bounds by a tree.

The setback forced Alexander to double bogey the hole and moved him to 4-over with 12 holes to play.

"The thing is when those things happen is to try and take it one hole at a time," Alexander said. "You try to get no bogeys and if you can get some birdies that's fine."

His strategy worked as Alexander finished the rest of the course with three birdies and two bogeys and entered the clubhouse in second place.

"Now I just have to hope the rest of the field can come back to me a little bit," Alexander said.

Broyles mirrored Alexander with a 38 on the front nine and a 36 on the back. He played a fairly conservative round on the way in because of sudden gusty conditions that plagued the last few groups on the final three or four holes.

Otto Knight of Rockport and Sonny Adams of Del Rio are currently in third place after shooting rounds of 75, four strokes over par.

Earlier in the day, Roark used a good short game on his way to a 1-under 34 on the front nine holes and an even-par 36 coming in.

"I was hitting my irons well, but my driver wasn't doing so well," he said. "I was just lucky not to find too many trees."

In all 17 players scored a 78 or better and made the cut into the final Championship flight. The other 15 original players in the Championship flight will play in the President's flight today and Friday. Please see results, page 10

Dick Alexander of Lubbock tees off on No. 7 Wednesday in the Tri-State's opening round.

Expos stay tied with Pirates for NL East lead

By R.B. FALLSTROM
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The Montreal Expos missed a chance to be alone in first place for the first time in almost three seasons, and Bernard Gilkey was to blame.

Gilkey robbed Larry Walker of a home run in the eighth inning with a leaping catch at the left-field wall and hit a three-run home run in the bottom of the ninth to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-1 victory and end the Expos' four-game winning streak.

It also ended the Cardinals' four-game losing streak. Referring to the catch, Cardinals starter Bob Tewksbury said, "It's a good thing Bernard played high school basketball."

The Expos remained tied for first with Pittsburgh in the NL East, missing a chance to move a game up after the Pirates lost to the Cubs earlier in the day. The last time the Expos had undisputed possession of first place was Aug. 4, 1989.

But Montreal managed only four hits in eight innings off Tewksbury, who lowered his major-league leading ERA to 1.97. Lee Smith (3-3) got the win after striking out the side in the ninth.

"I spent a lot of time this afternoon trying to come up with a lineup that could score two or three runs off (Tewksbury)," Expos manager Felipe Alou said. "It didn't work, though."

Most of the Expos didn't seem that disappointed.

"We're still tied for first and we have a good chance to win it," said Larry Walker, who drove in the Expos' only run. "If we lose a game, it's nothing to get excited about. We're not going to win every game the rest of the year."

Ray Lankford singled to start the ninth and Andres Galarraga was hit by a pitch from Dennis Martinez (10-10). After Todd Zeile popped up a bunt to Martinez, Gilkey, in a 6-for-36 slump, homered to left off Martinez on a 1-0 pitch. It was his first home run of the season.

Cardinals manager Joe Torre moved Gilkey from first to sixth in the order, and Gilkey, who grew up in the St. Louis suburb of University City, said he felt relaxed.

"The home run, that's a big thrill for me," Gilkey said. "I've never hit a game-winning home run in the bottom of the ninth, and then to do it in my hometown...."

Martinez went 8 1-3 innings with 10 strikeouts and allowed six hits and three walks. Alou said he didn't replace Martinez with a reliever because his bullpen was overworked.

Martinez also appeared to be sensitive, refusing to talk to reporters after the game. The start came a day after the one-year anniversary of his perfect game against the Dodgers. He's 13-15 since then.

Galarraga tied it 1-1 in the seventh for St. Louis with a 428-foot home run to straightaway center against his former teammates. It was the third home run in six games for Galarraga, who has hit all five of his home runs this month.

Walker had a run-scoring single in the sixth for the Expos in his first game back after missing five starts with a strained rib-cage muscle.

Both Martinez and Tewksbury entered the sixth working on two-hitters. Marquis Grissom doubled with one out and scored on Walker's one-hop liner that glanced off shortstop Tim Jones' glove.

Tom Pagnozzi doubled to lead off the third, but Martinez got two strikeouts to escape damage. Luis Alicea doubled leading off the fourth and went to third when left fielder Moises Alou misplayed the ball in the corner, but Martinez got Ray Lankford and Galarraga on called third strikes to get out of the inning.

Tewksbury worked eight innings and gave up four hits and a run with seven strikeouts. He walked three, matching his season-high, and has walked only 14 batters in 155 2-3 innings.

Notes: Tewksbury was the first Cardinals starter to work past the fifth in five games. The last time was last Friday, when Tewksbury went seven innings. Torre had a closed-door meeting with his five starters before the game.

Montreal manager Felipe Alou plays catch prior to last night's game with St. Louis.

U.S. leads medal count in swimming

By BETH HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) - Mike Barrowman hopes his U.S. swimming teammates become copycats.

Barrowman grabbed gold with a world record Wednesday. And that's what Melvin Stewart, Tom Jager, Janet Evans and Jeff Rouse — all world record-holders in their events — will try to do today.

Barrowman joined Pablo Morales, who won the 100 butterfly, as the only world record-holders on the U.S. team to fulfill their golden expectations.

The others — Matt Biondi (100 freestyle), Jenny Thompson (100 freestyle), Evans (400 freestyle), Anita Nall (200 breaststroke) and the men on the 800 freestyle relay team — all failed to win gold, or even approach their record times.

Barrowman won in 2 minutes, 10.16 seconds, lowering the world record he set last year by .44 seconds. It was the sixth time in his last 18 major races he had done that. His only loss in that stretch came last March at the Olympic trials.

"My coach came up to me before the race," Barrowman said. "He said, 'The U.S. team is not performing 100 percent, not performing as well as it should be. You've got to get the U.S. team going and a world record would certainly help do that.'"

"I'm hoping that will spark everyone else."

Everyone else includes Stewart, who swims the 200 butterfly. And Evans, defending her 1988 gold medal in the 800 freestyle. And Rouse in the 100 backstroke.

Summer Sanders of the United States strokes her way to a win in her heat in the women's 200-medley relay Thursday.

Jager and Biondi renew their rivalry in the 50 freestyle, a race the two Americans have taken turns dominating for years.

With two days remaining in the six-day competition, the United States leads the medal count with 15 — six gold, five silver and four bronze.

That's more than twice the medals won by the Unified Team (seven, including five golds) and Hungary and Germany (six).

"It's the USA's best performance since I've been on the team, and that's 10 years," Jager said. "I'm proud to be a part of it."

Yet it's not as many golds as the United States was expected to win.

Evans said the unfair expectations of so much gold were created at the U.S. trials in March.

"The U.S. trials is the fastest meet in the world, next to the Olympics," she said. "It's really easy to build up the U.S. team, because we had a lot of great performances at the trials. But other countries' trials aren't as competitive, so they can come into the Olympics and get big drops in time."

Of the 32 Americans who have competed in individual events at the Olympics, so far only five have bettered their times from the trials — Barrowman, Nall, Summer Sanders, Nicole Haislett and Joe Hudepohl.

Barrowman was the star Wednesday on a day when the United States medaled in four of five events. Crissy Ahmann-Leighton won silver in the 100 butterfly, Nall did the same in the 100 breaststroke, and the men's 400 freestyle relay team came from fourth to first for gold.

The only shutout was in the men's 400 freestyle, where no American reached the final. Evgenii Sadovyi of the Unified Team became the meet's only triple gold medal winner and set the world record in the 400 freestyle.

Sadovyi became the first Olympic swimmer to win the 200 and 400 freestyles in the same year. His time of 3:45.00 shattered the world record of 3:46.47 set last April by Australia's Kieren Perkins, who finished second. Anders Holmertz of Sweden, second in the 200, was third.

Barrowman's performance energized the 400 freestyle relay team of Hudepohl, Biondi, Jager and Jon Olsen, who won in 3:16.74.

"It helps a team anytime when you swim great ... We were in the ready room when we saw it, and we knew we had our work cut out for us to keep it going," Jager said.

The United States has won the relay all six times it has been raced in the Olympics.

Qian Hong of China set an Olympic record in the 100 butterfly in which Ahmann-Leighton's silver was America's only medal.

In the 100 breaststroke, Nall's time of 1:08.17 was an American record and just 17-hundredths of a second behind the Unified Team's Elena Roudkovskaya.

Dream Team, Cuban baseballers remain unbeaten

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) - BBRI-INNNNGGG!!!

The official Olympic Dream Team, the U.S. hoopsters, and their baseball equivalent, the Cubans, made two more brutal wake-up calls to their opponents from around the world.

Neither has lost yet at the Summer Games.

Magic Johnson out with a bum knee? The Dream Team plugs in Michael Jordan at point guard and blows away Germany, 111-68. The out-of-position superstar shifted gears to post 15 points, 12 assists and zero turnovers.

The U.S. baseball team goes ahead 5-0 against its nemesis in the first inning? Denada — it's nothing. Los Cubanos bounce back with nine runs and roll to their fourth straight victory, 9-6, making them the Olympics' only unbeaten baseball team.

"We had nine more opportunities to play offense and go for it," Cuban coach Jorge Fuentetaja said. "I would have been worried only if it was 5-0 at the end of the game."

A three-run homer by Antonio Pacheco, combined with four U.S. errors, quickly erased the five-run American lead Wednesday night. A wild pickoff throw and a wild pitch by the shaky U.S. bullpen led to two more runs and put the game away for the Cubans.

"Maybe the five-run first inning we had was the worst thing that happened to us. I think it gave us a false sense of security," U.S. coach Ron Fraser said. "I told our guys, Cuba doesn't roll over." The Cubans now have a 32-13 record against the United States over the past six years, and hold a significant psychological edge if the two teams meet again in the medal round. The United States is now 3-1.

The Americans knew before the game it might not be their night. The team was fined $600 for having too many people in its dugout, where Larry Bird was trying to hide out from autograph seekers for a few innings on Tuesday.

Bird had 19 points to lead the Dream Team to its third straight victory, but everyone was most impressed by the Air Assist show. Typically, Jordan just shrugged it off.

"I do it when I need to," Jordan said matter-of-factly about his pointed switch. "My true position is shooting guard. If my team needs me, I'll do it. I feel I can do it because I'm versatile."

Magic hopes to be back for Friday's game against Brazil. "I'd have to say he's day-to-day, and we'll see where we are," coach Chuck Daly said. Back-up point guard John Stockton, recovering from a broken leg, may also return Friday.

Some may doubt the U.S. hoopsters are destined for gold, but none change their clothes in the U.S. locker room. The main topic after Wednesday's blowout was clothing for the medal ceremony, with Nike clients saying they won't just do it — put on Reebok warmups.

"Nike pays us a ton of money. I have two million reasons not to wear Reebok," explained Charles Barkley, who managed to avoid any international incidents during the game.

Jenkins to speak at bambino banquet

John Jenkins, University of Houston head football coach and a Pampa native, is the scheduled speaker at a banquet for the teams competing in the Southwest Regional Bambino Tournament.

The banquet is set for 7 p.m. Friday night at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The tournament, which involves 11 and 12 year-olds, starts Saturday at Optimist Park, beginning at 1 p.m.

Eight teams, including Pampa, are entered in the double-elimination tournament, which closes out Wednesday.

Texas Tech loses one of top recruits

ODESSA, Texas (AP) - Texas Tech lost one of its top defensive football recruits for the 1992 season after Tony Daniels of Odessa Permian said his college entrance exam scores did not qualify for enrollment.

Daniels, a 6-foot-5, 220-pound all-state defensive end for the Class 5A, Division II-champion Panthers, told The Odessa American he did not meet the minimum qualifying score of 17 on three attempts at the American College Testing (ACT) exam.

Daniels also said he did not meet the minimum 700 score on his only attempt at the Scholastic Aptitude Test or SAT.

"I'm thinking about just going to Odessa College up until December; (Tech assistant coach and former Permian head coach Gary) Gaines told me I ought to take it again in October, then enroll at Tech in December," Daniels told the newspaper in Wednesday's editions. "It's kind of disappointing, but I think I can get it this time."

Daniels is scheduled to play in next week's McDonald's Texas High School All-Star game at Texas Stadium in Irving.

Tech football coach Spike Dykes confirmed Wednesday that Daniels and Lewisville High School running back Andre Brown have both failed to qualify for enrollment.
