Pampa families host Bambinos

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

Approximately 50 Pampa families are serving as host to more than 100 Southwest Regional Bambino All-Stars who arrived in Pampa Friday afternoon.

"The boys are well mannered, Cecelia Henley said. "I could not have asked for better kids."

The Henleys are host to Little Rock, Ark., players Chris Grubbs and Jonathan Wyatt.

"They are best friends," she said.

Cecelia said when they arrived in town one of the boys asked, "Do you want me to call you by your first name or your last name with Mrs. in front of it?"

The mother of three young children said, "I'm not old enough to be called Mrs. ... and he said, 'and I'm not old enough to be called Mr., so you can call me Chris.'"

Some families are hosting three to four players in their home.

Host mother Susan Finney said, "At Babe Ruth regional tournaments the players are required to stay with families."

Having a place to stay that is not a hotel is beneficial for the players, she said.

"Most of these families have kids and that helps the players keep from feeling homesick because some of them have never been away from home," Finney said. "It also gives them someone to come and cheer for them, especially if they don't have families here."

"A couple of kids on the same team are just a house down the block, so they have been busy playing with them," Cecelia said.

Ruling on school tax relieves state officials

DALLAS (AP) - Texas officials said they were relieved that the state won federal court approval to continue collecting a state property tax already ruled unconstitutional.

"We are pleased that our public schools will stay open and that the Legislature will have the opportunity to address deficiencies in our school financing plan," Attorney General Dan Morales said.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal's judgment on Monday came as a result of a class action suit filed by attorney Jim Keahey on behalf of Texas taxpayers opposed to the levy. The appeals court sent the case back to U.S. District Judge James Nowlin, with an order that he dismiss it.

The ruling did not discuss the merits of the tax - only whether the case should have been in federal court.

Chuck McDonald, spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards, said, "Obviously, we're relieved that the court is going to leave this matter in the hands of the Legislature and that all our Texas school districts can proceed with their budget plans for the 92-93 school year."

Nancy Cotton of the Texas Association of School Boards said the ruling was welcome news.

"However, it's important to note that although the Fifth Circuit Court's ruling is good news, the school finance crisis isn't over yet. The real test for Texas lawmakers lies ahead, and that of course is to come up with a new, constitutional school finance plan by June 1, 1993," Ms. Cotton said.

"My advice to all Texas tax payers is do not pay this tax. Litigation is not over," said Keahey.

Judge Carolyn King, writing for the three-judge panel, said the Tax Injunction Act bars federal courts from challenging state tax systems. So Nowlin was ordered to dismiss the suit on the basis that he did not have jurisdiction.

"Hopefully what this does is let the Legislature come in and remedy the problem," said Bill Bingham, who argued the case for the state.

The Supreme Court has given the Legislature 17 months to come up with a financing plan.

Keahey said he has two options: to appeal this case to the U.S. Supreme Court or to bring another suit in the Texas court system.

During Monday's hour-long hearing, lawyers for the state argued that schools could close if the tax is not collected. But opponents say no one wants to pay an unconstitutional tax.

Toni Hunter, an assistant attorney general, told the judges that the Legislature had done its best.

"Every attempt the Legislature has made has been in good faith and timely," she said.

"It's a complex problem," she said. "We're trying to restructure society."

Judge Emilio M. Garza noted the situation does leave the taxpayers between a rock and a hard place.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled in January that the tax violates the state constitution, but delayed the effect of its ruling until June 1, 1993, to give lawmakers time to fix the system.

A federal lawsuit challenged the delay, but Nowlin refused to halt collection, saying that could have a disastrous effect on school children and was not proper "at this time."

The state would face a school deficit of up to $5.1 billion without the tax, according to a brief the state filed with the 5th Circuit.

The current school funding system, in effect since last fall, was meant to equalize school funding.

It was designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within new taxing regions.

Someone's in the kitchen at new Gray County Jail

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

Twenty-one Gray County Jail inmates ate biscuits and gravy, oranges and milk for breakfast this morning instead of their routine microwaved meal.

Today was the first day the kitchen in the new Gray County Jail was utilized to cook meals for the inmates.

Because the Texas Commission on Jail Standards has not approved the jail for occupancy, the meals were carted across the street to the old jail on the fourth floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

Margaret Hall, unit manager with Sun West Services, received approval Monday from Gray County Commissioners Court to begin cooking the meals. Sun West has a one-year contract to provide three meals a day to the inmates.

"We have $3,000 worth of food, part of which is perishable. It would be better to use it up instead of sending it back," Hall told commissioners.

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free said he had been ordering the microwaved meals on a three-day supply basis, because he was not sure when the new jail would get approval for occupancy. He told commissioners Monday he had enough microwaved meals to last through Monday evening.

The commissioners also approved allowing the sheriff to move his administrative offices to the new sheriff's office on the first floor of the new facility. Free said he expected to have the moving completed by Wednesday.

Commissioners allowed cooking in the kitchen and moving of the sheriff's offices contingent upon the approval of the general contractor, A&S Steel Buildings, because the county has not formally accepted the building.

Jim Sartain with A&S Steel Buildings said the company had agreed to allow cooking in the kitchen and the sheriff to move his offices.

County commissioners also authorized County Judge Carl Kennedy to contact the county's insurance agent and ask the company to add the new jail and sheriff's office to the county's insurance policy.

The jail failed its inspection last week because smoke in three areas was not evacuated fast enough under the state standards. The jail inspectors were using old standards of smoke evacuation that were in place when the jail was being built. New standards allow more time for the smoke to evacuate with doors open, but do not allow for smoke migration.

Sartain reported to commissioners late Monday that he had been testing the facility under new standards and it might be possible to pass the inspection without the addition of bigger motors and other work, but a good definition of smoke migration was needed before a decision was made.

The Commissioners Court pre-authorized the county judge to write the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and request the jail be inspected under new standards. However, that letter would be written only if requested by the architect and general contractor.

A new date for the jail inspection has not been set.

In related business, the Commissioners Court voted 3-1, with Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright voting against, to award a bid of $2,169.65 for an ice machine in the new jail to Sullins Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning. Sullins bid was the second lowest bid.

Wright earlier made a motion to award the bid of $1,950 to low bidder Browning's Heating and Air Conditioning but other commissioners said the Browning's bid did not meet the requirements of having a 200-pound bin.

In unrelated business, the Commissioners Court unanimously gave final approval on the improvement project at Perry Lefors Field. The total construction cost of the project was $754,056.21, of which the county will be obligated to pay 5 percent. That figure does not include engineering, inspection and testing costs.

Gene Barber, engineer of the project, reported the project was bid at $794,020.33 and that $34,000 was added for a winter seal coating project. He said the project was completed under the bid.

In other business, the Commissioners Court:

- authorized the advertising of bids to sell five vehicles no longer needed in the sheriff's office. Bids will be received Sept. 1;
- unanimously approved the payment of $166,525.27 in salaries and bills;
- unanimously approved the following transfers: $57,651 from general to salary fund; $7,038 from FM&LR to R&B 1; $14,032 from FM&LR to R&B 2; $8,960 from FM&LR to R&B 3; $12,780 from FM&LR to R&B 4; and $799 from Highland General Hospital fund to courthouse and jail;
- unanimously approved transfers within the budgets of the Precinct 2 constable, Precinct 1 justice of the peace, Precinct 2 justice of the peace, sheriff, and district attorney;
- unanimously approved advertising for bids for a new central vote counting machine. Bids will be received Sept. 1;
- unanimously approved the sale of delinquent tax property at 524 N. Davis.

PISD wants election help

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa Independent School District formally asked Gray County on Monday to take over the operation of the school district's annual May elections.

Jack Bailey with Pampa ISD said the county clerk's office has more expertise in elections than the school district. He also said many people believed the courthouse was more convenient for early voting. Currently, voters have to go to Carver Center to vote early in school board elections.

"We are not in the election business," Bailey said, of the main reason the request to the county was made.

Bailey said he had received pre-clearance from the Attorney General's Office a year ago to ask the county to handle the school district's elections.

Bailey said the school district is willing to pay costs associated with turning the elections over to Gray County. Bailey said it costs the school district $720 for materials and workers on the day of the election. He said that figure did not include costs associated with early voting.

County Clerk Wanda Carter agreed that it would probably be more convenient for school board voters to have early voting in the courthouse. She also said that on odd years, it probably would not be much of a problem for her office to take on the work, but on even number years the county clerk's office would be busy with two primary elections and an additional worker might be needed to assist with the school board elections.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Joe Wheeley said figures need to be studied and a figure that would be fair to both the county and school district needs to be determined.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said, "Personally, I don't know why we'd want to do this other than as a courtesy. We're not sitting around looking for things to do."

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons suggested that some figures be gathered on the actual costs to the county to take over the elections.

Bailey said, "I'd like for you to at least consider it for a one-year period."

Commissioners also said that if the county starts handling Pampa ISD's elections, other school districts in the county might request the service and that could create a problem.

Commissioners voted to place the item on the next Commissioners Court meeting agenda on Aug. 14 for more discussion.

The Commissioners Court also discussed problems at Horace Mann and Lamar schools, which are used for voting during the primaries and general elections. Carter said some of the election officials have been moved to hallways, which are not approved as voting places by the U.S. Justice Department. She also said parking problems have occurred in the past.

Bailey said the school district wants to work with the county and that he would work to see that the problem areas were resolved.

In unrelated business, Pampa businessman Dick Stowers urged the Commissioners Court to write their state senators and representatives and U.S. congressmen regarding federal highway funds.

Stowers said he has a list of 46 businesses in Pampa which are going to be required to move their signs off state highway rights of ways at a cost to the business owner. Stowers said many of the signs have been in place for years and have created no problems.

He asked the Commissioners Court to consider taking a stand on the issue and to ask that Gray County receive a deduction in federal highway money instead of forcing the businesses to move their signs.

"I think you need to consider the local businessman," Stowers said.

Kennedy said he was unsure of whether the county had any say in the operations of the Texas Department of Transportation, which receives some funding from the federal government.

The Commissioners Court voted to look into the matter and place it on the agenda for Aug. 14.

During preliminary 1993 budget discussions Monday afternoon, the Commissioners Court noted various budget requests of officeholders which were not in the current budget and asked that they attend the Aug. 14 meeting.

Kennedy said he would contact the respective officeholders and ask them to be at the meeting.

Wheeley said he would like to see some meetings instituted between the county and the city regarding the county taking the city's inmates when the new jail is opened and possibly offsetting the $105,000 a year the county pays to the city for fire protection.

"I think it's a very valid thing we need to work on right now while we're talking about the budget," Wheeley said.

Cook James Hunnicutt dishes up breakfast this morning in the kitchen of the new Gray County Jail to be served to the jail inmates in the old jail in the courthouse.

"We went to the show (movies) last night."
 The boys spend their time practicing once a day before they play their scheduled games.
 "We come to watch them play," Cecelia said. "We try to watch their games and Pampa's. It is kind of hard to decide who to root for."
 Eight teams, including the Pampa All-Stars, have been playing at Optimist Park.
 The NORD Lakeshore, La., team practiced every day from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. before they came to Pampa, the players said. When asked if it was worth it, Patrick D'Hemecourt said, "Now it is."
 Dick Henley said, "I coached Little League baseball and I did this (hosted two players) to help the Optimist Club. Like John Jenkins said, we are trying to give a little back to the game. I was raised here and grew up playing baseball. I want to support them." Jenkins, a Pampa native and head football coach at the University of Houston, spoke to the group at a Friday night banquet.
 The 11- and 12-year-old players have had a couple of days in town to adjust from the traveling they did from their various home states.
 "It took us 9 hours and 45 minutes to drive in the worst storm," said Nancy Mitcham, mother of Taylor, of Little Rock, Ark. "But it was worth it. My husband flew in from Baton Rouge, La., to watch Taylor pitch."
 Mitcham said her son was enjoying the time he was spending with his host family.

"He didn't even want to come home with me when I offered, she said."
 Mitcham compared the hot weather of Pampa to that of California.
 Another Lakeshore player, Chad Evans, said, "It's cooler here."
 The weather did not seem to bother the fans. Umbrellas blocked the sun for some relatives while others found shade to watch the competitors run the bases.
 Fans of the Little Rock, Ark., team filled the stands and used noise makers to cheer for their team.
 "We went to the store and bought all the noise makers they had," Mitcham said.
 There seemed to be more similarities than differences between the Pampa families and out-of-town players.
 "They are just like one of our own," said Paulette Brown, host mother. "They eat what we eat when we do and go to bed at the same time."
 She was surprised that some of the boys' homes do not have garages and basements in Louisiana.
 "They didn't know what a garage door opener was," she said.
 One of the responsibilities of the host family was to shuttle the boys to and from their games.
 Gayle Steward, host of two players from Lakeshore, said, "It's a challenge."
 "They have been so good," she said. "Most of the time we've been at the park. When we win we'll have a day off and we'll go swimming tomorrow and then to the 6666 Ranch, with the coach's permission."

Steward was accustomed to being at Optimist Park during the summer. "We had three boys, she said. "This is our twentieth year to have someone involved with the Optimist Club."
 Host mothers, fathers and their children along with the parents of some of the players watched the games and supported the players.
 Doretta Gerber, host mother, said, "It's gotten us to the ballpark."
 Gerber has two children and is hosting Lakeshore players Brian Volanta and Aulstom Taylor.
 "Summertime is busy," she said. "Being a school teacher I have the summer off and I'm home anyway. It's not much different. I have to cook three meals a day for my family. It's just like having two more kids."
 "My son think it's neat to have all-stars stay with us," she said.
 The team players seemed very appreciative of their host families.
 "They take us everywhere we asked them to," Taylor said.
 "That's better than our parents," one of the boys said.
 During the Pampa-Little Rock game, one host family was cheering for both teams.
 Terry and Lisa Bixler had a son playing on the Pampa team and had a host son on the Little Rock team.
 "It's been busy between practices and games," Lisa said. "There hasn't been time for anything else."
 The view of a Lakeshore player summed up the team's opinion of Pampa.
 "If anyone wants a fun, small town to go to that is pretty with no trees, they should come to Pampa," said Timmy Olster.

Lows from near 80 coast to the 70s inland.
 North Texas - Warm with little or no chance of rain. Lows in the 70s, highs in the 90s.
 South Texas - Partly cloudy through Wednesday with widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers or thunderstorms mostly southeast and coastal plains. Highs Wednesday in the 90s except 80s along the coast and near 100 Rio Grande plains. Lows tonight in the 70s except near 80 coast.
BORDER STATES
 Oklahoma - Tonight periods of thunderstorms with heavy rainfall likely north and central. Low low 60s northwest to low 70s south. Wednesday scattered thunderstorms. High mid-80s north to mid-90s southwest.
 New Mexico - Tonight and Wednesday widely scattered afternoon and evening showers mainly over the mountains. Fair late nights and mornings. Highs Wednesday 70s and 80s mountains, 90s lower elevations. Lows tonight upper 30s to near 50 in the mountains, mid 50s to mid 60s lower elevations.

Group says child support system needs changes

WASHINGTON (AP) - America's state-based system of collecting child support is a "cumbersome, slow-moving dinosaur fed by paper," a federal panel said today in a report urging congressional intervention.
 "Today, millions of children in the United States fail to receive the financial support they are owed," the U.S. Commission on Interstate Child Support said in a report culminating nearly two years of work.
 Congress, meanwhile, seems more and more interested in enacting child support legislation. Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala., is pushing one measure that would make it a federal crime for a parent or a legal guardian to cross a state line to avoid child-support payments.
 The commission said too many parents are escaping child support responsibilities by relocating to other states.
 "The burden of children not getting support from their parents often shifts to taxpayers in the form of welfare," the study said.
 Mary Campbell Haynes, who headed the panel, said the commission recommends that Congress reform the system by helping to simplify state laws, streamlining the process of support establishment and enforcement, and "adding muscle where needed."
Lefors sets meeting
LEFORS - Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet in special session at 7 p.m. today to consider a resignation from professional personnel.
 Also listed on the agenda is an executive session to consider hiring professional personnel.
 The meeting will be in the elementary school library.

Super collider supporters heartened by Senate vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's strong endorsement of the superconducting super collider is giving new momentum to the controversial project that just six weeks ago was imperiled following a surprising House vote to kill it.

On a 62-32 vote Monday night, the Senate declined to emulate the House and halt the $8.25 billion giant atom smasher. Had the Senate followed course, it almost certainly would have sounded the death knell for the super collider, which would be the world's largest scientific instrument.

Backers say the Senate vote gives them the upper hand going into conference, when House and Senate negotiators meet to reconcile differences in their respective bills. The conference committee could come as early as this week.

The Senate, as part of a $22 billion energy and water projects appropriations bill approved Monday, has earmarked $550 million for the super collider. The House has included no money.

Monday's vote "positions us to keep $550 million and maybe even go up a little bit, although that would be unlikely," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, whose district includes the collider.

Energy Secretary James Watkins said that he and President Bush, "will fight for the Senate position on funding for the super collider."

But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, reined in his optimism.

"It's been a hard-fought battle over the past several weeks and we can't yet declare a final victory, not with a House-Senate conference standing in our way," he said.

But, he added, "I'm more confident than ever before that we will prevail this time around."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, pronounced himself "delighted" with the outcome. "It was a very strong win," he said. "Our first objective was to win. Our second objective was to try to pile up a strong margin to help us when we go to conference."

The fight is far from over for Sen. Dale Bumpers. The Arkansas Democrat, who introduced the amendment to kill the collider, expressed disappointment with the vote but said if he's re-elected in November he will try again.

"If not this year, next year. If not next year, the following year," he said, predicting that Congress eventually will kill the collider.

Following defeat of his amendment, Bumpers also was shut out in his bid to cap overall federal collider spending and mandate timeliness on foreign contributions.

In the last several days, Bumpers had told reporters he would gain more support to kill the particle accelerator than he had a year ago on a similar amendment. That measure failed 62-37. Supporters also had predicted some erosion in support, but credited their showing Monday to intensive lobbying by key senators, the White House, and the scientific and industrial communities.

Bentsen worked the phones lobbying his colleagues until moments before the evening vote, and Gramm noted that he and Bentsen together spoke with each senator at least once.

Gov. Ann Richards said the vote was gratifying.

"The superconducting super collider project ensures that the United States will be preeminent in science into the next century," said Richards, who also lobbied many senators.

Bumpers said his amendment would have garnered more support had it been considered three weeks ago, when the Senate debated a balanced-budget constitutional amendment.

House debate of a balanced-budget amendment was widely viewed as playing a key role in the vote to kill the super collider. The collider vote came just days after consideration of a balanced-budget amendment.

As House opponents did, Bumpers argued Monday that killing the super collider would be a first step toward reducing the federal budget deficit.

"This nation is on the cutting edge of bankruptcy and nobody can ever seem to find a place to bring this thing under control," he said during the lengthy floor debate.

The collider's scientific merits are marginal at best when the project's effect on federal spending and other scientific programs is considered, Bumpers and other critics contended.

"The way I see it, spending $8 to $10 billion on the SSC is like fixing up the basement when your house is on fire," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

The money should instead be used for "basic research that will make our lives better," Harkin said, citing genetic, heart and cancer research.

Bumpers also argued that Congress has been misled about the cost of the super collider, its possible spinoffs and the level of foreign participation.

"This project is a cacophony of broken promises," Bumpers said.

But supporters said the super collider is meeting its budget and that its benefits far outweigh its cost.

"If you cancel this project and 22 others like it, you would save one percent of the budget," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., a key supporter.

Scientists hope to learn more about the fundamentals of matter by crashing proton beams into each other at near-light speeds in the collider's 54-mile underground tunnel.

To date, almost $1 billion in federal money and $227 million in Texas funds have been spent on the super collider, which is due to be completed in 1999.

1992 Property Tax Rates in CED#14

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for CED #14. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

The Property Tax Code is unclear as to whether County Education Districts are classified as a school district or other taxing entity. Therefore, both rates are presented.

	TAXING ENTITY	SCHOOL
Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 28,715.907	$ 28,715.907
Last year's debt taxes	$ 0	$ 0
Last year's total taxes	$ 28,715.907	$ 28,715.907
Last year's tax base	$ 3,803,431.431	$ 3,803,431.431
Last year's total tax rate	$ .755/$100	$ .755/$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 28,615.041	$ 28,298.450
+ This year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 3,523,939.937	$ 3,480,565.401
= This year's effective tax rate for each fund	$ .81201/$100	$ .81304/$100
Total effective tax rate	$ .81201/$100	$ .81304/$100

In the first year a county collects the additional sales tax, it must insert the following lines unless its first adjustment was made last year:

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0/$100	$ 0/$100
= Effective tax rate	$ .81201/$100	$ .81304/$100

x 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$ .83637/$100	$ .83743/$100
This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property and including taxes for state criminal justice mandate)	$ 28,615.041	$ 28,298.450
+ This year's adjusted tax base	$ 3,523,939.937	$ 3,480,565.401
= This year's effective operating rate	$ .81201/$100	$ .81304/$100
x 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$ .87697/$100	$ .89304/$100 (school add 8%)
+ This year's debt rate	$ 0/$100	$ 0/$100
= This year's rollback rate for each fund	$ .87697/$100	$ .89304/$100
This year's total rollback rate	$ .87697/$100	$ .89304/$100

A county that collects the additional sales tax, including one that collects the tax for the first time this year, must insert the following lines:

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0/$100	$ 0/$100
= Rollback tax rate	$ .87697/$100	$ .89304/$100

Schedule A
Unencumbered Fund Balances
The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Type of Property Tax Fund	Balance
General Fund	$400,000.00

Schedule B
1992 Debt Service
The unit plans to pay the following amounts for long-term debts that are secured by property taxes. These amounts will be paid from property tax revenues (or additional sales tax revenues, if applicable).

Description of Debt	Principal or Contract Payment to be Paid	Interest to be Paid	Other Amounts to be Paid	Total Payment
NONE	-$0-	0-%	-$0-	-$0-
Total required for 1992 debt service			$
- Amount (if any) paid from funds listed in schedule A			$
- Excess collections last year			$
= Total to be paid from taxes in 1992			$
+ Amount added in anticipation that the unit will collect only _____% of its taxes in 1992			$
= Total Debt Levy			$

Schedule C
Expected Revenue from Additional Sales Tax
(For hospital districts, cities and counties with additional 1/2-cent sales tax)
In calculating its effective and rollback tax rates, the unit estimated that it will receive $0- in additional sales and use tax revenues.

Schedule D
State Criminal Justice Mandate (For Counties)
The _____ County Auditor certifies that _____ County has spent $ _____ in the previous 12 months beginning _____, 19____, for the maintenance and operations cost of keeping inmates sentenced to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. _____ County Sheriff has provided information on these costs, minus the state revenues received for reimbursement of such costs.

"Pre-arrangement? At my age?"

Yes! Today, more people are recognizing that pre-arrangement is a thoughtful and prudent decision...one that should not be postponed. They have learned that pre-arranging the funeral service is a demonstration of love and consideration that can ease the anxieties of their families.

Funding the pre-arranged service heightens the wisdom of the decision. Funding protects your resources from the impact of inflation...permitting you to pre-arrange, at present-day prices, exactly the kind of service you prefer...and be assured an adequate fund for the future payment. We shall be pleased to provide informed counsel and attentive answers to your questions...and, literature that will be helpful to you and those close to you.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Class warfare

President Bush this week called Bill Clinton's economic plan "smoke and mirrors," to which the Arkansas governor rejoined, "Well, (Bush) is an expert on smoke and mirrors."

Clinton's point is well taken, but so is Bush's. The Arkansas governor's 22-page economic program could become a liability once people read it.

He keeps talking about "change," but his action plan for the economy sounds like more of what Democrats have traditionally preached: More government spending, higher taxes on "the rich," more government control of economic decision-making.

Clinton bemoans the deficit, claiming his plan "will cut the deficit in half in four years." But budget experts in Washington have been predicting the deficit will shrink to half its current size by 1996. Those predictions are based on a recovering expensive savings and loan bailout. Clinton's plan will do nothing to accelerate that trend.

Clinton would boost government spending in a big way. One proposal is for the government to invest $150 billion in the next three years of education and infrastructure. Implied in Clinton's plan is that the politicians and bureaucrats in Washington know better how to invest the nation's capital than do the private citizens who actually produce those resources.

Overall, Clinton's plan would increase discretionary spending by 20 percent. It would not eliminate a single federal program, and it proposes spending billions more on a new federal health-insurance program. As far as the budget goes, this is no change; it is more of the same policies Washington has been following for years.

Where Clinton does break with the recent past is in his pandering to the class-warfare crowd. He has targeted the rich for higher taxes. This vaguely defined group of citizens must be forced to pay its fair share, whatever that means.

Few people who talk about the rich paying their fair share bother to define what this ideal tax burden would be. Once we leave the firm ground of a single, proportional rate of taxation on all marginal income, we enter the subjective world of progressive taxation, where politicians can define fair to suit their own political purposes.

The rich in our country already pay a higher percentage of their income in taxes because of a skewed federal tax code that applies a 33 percent top rate to upper income families, and a 15 percent rate to most in the middle-income range.

Under this system, the richest 1 percent of Americans pay an average of 28.6 percent of their income to the federal government, while the poorest 20 percent give up 6.7 percent. Clinton is partly right: The rich are not paying their fair share - they are already paying an unfairly high share of the burden.

Another flaw of the Clinton plan is defining who is rich. There simply are not enough truly rich people in America to pay enough taxes to make a big dent in the deficit or pay for Clinton's new spending agenda. Any major tax increase will by necessity touch the great American middle class, because that's where the income is.

Increasing taxes on the rich hurts the overall economy by decreasing incentives for investment. Those same rich people the Democrats love to denounce use most of their wealth to create businesses, jobs and new investment in plant and equipment.

Along with change, one of Clinton's major themes has been unity. Yet his economic program pits one group of Americans, what he defines as "the rich," against other Americans.

Clinton speaks and acts as though we can serve the general good by tearing down the productivity and achievements of a targeted group of Americans. His rhetoric encourages envy and greed among voters.

Clinton deserves points for his willingness to provide details for his economic program. But the details he has provided display too much faith in the power of government to redistribute income and a disturbing willingness to engage in the politics of envy and class warfare.

Abortion and Quayle's daughter

Al Gore strongly supports unrestricted access to abortion. So if one of his three daughters were to grow up, join Operation Rescue and start demonstrating at abortion clinics - even get arrested for chaining herself to the door of an abortion clinic - what would he do?

Try to talk her out of it? Congratulate her on being courageous enough to act on her beliefs? Chain her in the basement until she repents? Scream and swear and threaten? Continue to love her and accept her as a member of his family? Write her out of his will? Behave like Tevye in "Fiddler on the Roof" when his daughter decides to marry a gentile and announce that henceforth, he will consider her dead?

I don't know how Gore would handle that situation, and maybe he doesn't either. But I do know there would be nothing inconsistent about supporting abortion rights while accepting a grown daughter whose mission in life is putting an end to abortion - and who is, in any case, beyond effective parental control.

We are told, however, that there is something outrageously hypocritical when Dan Quayle, who favors laws protecting the unborn, says he would "support" his daughter if, as an adult, she were to get pregnant, reject his advice and proceed with an abortion.

"Sounds like choice to me," smirked House Speaker Tom Foley. Mario Cuomo, crowing that Quayle had adopted a "classic pro-choice position," said, "You can't make a distinction between your own blood and everybody else's daughter." Kate Michelman of the National Abortion Rights Action League waxed sarcastic: "While we welcome Vice President Quayle's newfound respect for his own daughter's freedom to choose, we regret that he and President Bush want to take that same freedom away from everyone else."

What the controversy shows is not Quayle's hypocrisy but the pro-choice movement's reflexive habit of distorting the truth for political ends. Of course, Quayle didn't say he thinks his daughter should have the legally sanctioned "freedom to choose." He merely acknowledged that the law gives his daughter that prerogative, and that when she become an adult, he won't be able to stop her from doing whatever she pleases.

He didn't say he would support - meaning endorse - her decision. He said, "I'd support my daughter." But he emphasized, "I'd hope she wouldn't make that choice." Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, also said later that if their daughter became pregnant now (she's 13), they would insist that she bear the child.

Mario Cuomo is against legalizing drugs, but that doesn't mean he would have his daughter arrested if he caught her smoking a joint. Pat Schroeder believes in sexual equality, but that doesn't mean she would sever ties with a son who joined a religion that ordains a subordinate role for women.

Quayle only conceded the painful dilemma faced by anyone whose children make choices that are deeply painful to their parents. It certainly would be hypocritical for a father who thinks abortions should be banned to encourage his daughter to get one - like a pacifist pressing her son to join the Army for the educational benefits. But for the vice president to say he would "support" his daughter even if she had an abortion is to say that she's his daughter, right or wrong.

Is that the soundest position? Tough question. The unpleasant fact is that many children grow up to do things that, in their parents' eyes, are disappointing, infuriating, criminal or self-destructive. They marry rotten people, neglect their own offspring, become addicted to drugs or alcohol or tobacco, get fired from their jobs, spend themselves into bankruptcy, provoke messy divorces, end up in prison.

Most parents, while declining to condone such behavior, do their best to forgive their kids and to help them, except maybe in the most extreme circumstances. Some, like Tevye, don't. But no one would argue that a mother who visits her son the bank robber in jail has endorsed his right to rob banks.

Maybe it would be better for him if she refused all contact until he goes straight. But parents can't really be expected to abide by such an austere moral calculus. Few of them aspire to the role of a wrathful Jehovah, implacable damning those they brought into being.

The first duty of a parent is to love - a duty that begins not when the child emerges into the world but when she is still in the womb, and ends only at the grave. Dan Quayle is not unfaithful to his daughter or the pro-life cause when he says his love for her transcends even abortion.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 4, the 217th day of 1992. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One hundred years ago, on Aug. 4, 1892, Sunday school teacher Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., charged with the hatchet murders of her father and stepmother. (Borden was later acquitted - the case has never been officially solved.)

On this date:
In 1735, a jury acquitted John Peter Zenger of the New York Weekly Journal of a charge of seditious libel brought by the royal governor of New York.

In 1790, the Coast Guard had its beginnings as a U.S. naval task force known as the Revenue Cutter Service was formed.

In 1792, 200 years ago, English romantic poet Percy Bysshe Shelley was born in Field Place, England.

Go for the gold

Recently, after I read an article about Miami, I thought, "Here is a perfect example of the media distorting a news story."

The news was that wealthy entertainers are flooding to Miami and buying real estate worth millions upon millions.

Madonna, said the article, just plunked down $4.9 million for a bayfront mansion on Millionaire's Row.

Others who have moved to Miami, according to the article, include Sophia Loren, Whitney Houston, Don Johnson and his wife, Melanie Griffith, rapper Vanilla Ice, designer Paloma Picasso, daughter of you-know-who, not to mention guitarist Jimmy Page of Led Zeppelin, which I thought exploded in New York back in the '30s.

No, that was the Hindenburg.
What made this a news story is why would anybody, much less such illustrious individuals mentioned earlier, move to Miami? Everybody knows Miami is a crime-infested boiling pot.

So why do many stars want to roost in Miami? According to the article, it's got to do with the existence of a rapidly shrinking bounty of architectural treasures combined with the tropical climate, the trendy cafes and the chichi night life on South Beach. I like a little chichi occasionally myself as long as there aren't too many jalapenos in it.

Fine. But then the writer of the article decided to preach with the following two paragraphs:

"The glitterati doesn't see the stark inner-city poverty that one county official compares to that of the third world.

"They don't drive through the neighborhoods where concrete blocks are hurled through windshields and purses and jewelry are snatched from startled motorists."

Well, can you blame them?

Heck no, Madonna doesn't call up Sophia Loren and say, "Hey, Sophie, let's get in the Rolls and cruise through the neighborhoods where concrete blocks are hurled through windshields and purses and jewelry are snatched from startled motorists."

If I lived in Miami, no matter how much money I had, I wouldn't go driving through a neighborhood where I might be killed, maimed, beaten, and robbed, either, if there were any way to avoid it.

In my opinion, what this writer was really trying to say was, "Look, here are all these filthy rich people and they don't care a hoot about the poor people on the other side of town."

That's a big deal in the media now. Show how the rich live one way and the poor live another, as if it has ever been any different.

The rich, it is inferred, are all cold-blooded sleezeballs.

I beg to differ. There is nothing wrong with making a lot of money in this country, whether by singing, playing guitar, hitting a ball, or starting and running a successful business.

Who gives to charities? Has anybody poor ever given anybody a job? This is America. Go for the Gold.

It's capitalism. It's what we're all about.

If Madonna's got $4.9 million to plunk down on a house, she earned it, singing and grabbing her crotch.

What do the whiners want to do, redistribute the wealth? A fellow named Lenin (not the Beatle) had the same idea.

Democrats think about 'tomorrow'

I don't mind telling you that, as a kid from the Arkansas-Missouri Ozarks might tell you, I'm plum tuckered out. Anyone hailing from Ozarks Democratic stock has had more fun watching the recent Democratic Convention than a Shriner at a week-long convention of little-car drill teams.

Truth to tell, like a lot of us, I don't consider myself strictly from either political party now, any more than I'm a strict believer in the church I was reared in. Too many years in a job that requires studying a lot of different viewpoints and approaches to issues will whup the ideologue right out of you.

But the Democratic Convention committee treated us all to an emotional whoop-de-deo equal to a foot-washing, soul-saving Arkansas tent revival that sends four-part harmonies of pain, suffering and hope out over the Ozark hills. Even though you might not believe in the preaching like you once did, hearing it is like coming home.

What a difference from the Democrats' 1988 Snoozarama, where Ted Kennedy kept asking, "Where was George?" and the rest of us were saying, "We think we know where George was, but who the heck is this Mike guy?" (Even Teddy resisted the urge to sloganize this year, perhaps remembering the table-turning he got last time when some of us answered his question with, "Dry, sober and home with his wife.")

The convention organizers this year might not have known where George Bush was, or Mike

Sarah Overstreet

Dukakis, even though what looked like cardboard cutouts of he and Kitty were seated near the stage, but they sure knew how to run a convention and put on one whale of a show. The tribute to Bobby Kennedy and the archival footage of a young Bill Clinton shaking hands with President John F. Kennedy at a national youth meeting 30 years ago fostered an analogy between Bill Clinton and John Kennedy (stopping just short, of course, of the Kennedy/Monroe-and-a-cast-of-other-babes era).

But more than that, the RFK tribute gave us old Democrats another chance at purging the grief we still feel about the horrible string of assassinations that killed the people who expressed what we believed in. Could a candidate hope for better Demovivets than to lose from the black-and-white stiffs of Bobby after he learned Martin Luther King Jr. had been killed, that other-worldly-knowing in his gaze?

Then there was Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg's tear-rimmed eyes as the lights went up, next a shot of John F. Kennedy Jr. standing near the CNN cameras, breathing deeply and shaking his head to dispel his own tears, and then as he noticed the cameras on him, enthusiastically holding high a Clinton sign. You couldn't buy better feelings.

As if that wasn't an emotional Screaming Eagle enough, then Al Gore got up and talked about the night his son was hit by a car, wasn't breathing when his parents reached him, and hovered between life and death for days. "That experience changed me forever," he told the audience. "We were not put on this earth to look out for our needs alone. All of us are part of something greater than we are capable of imagining." Our country, he told us, like his son, "is waiting for us to give it a second breath of life." I thought I'd never stop sniffing.

Then there were Al and Tipper doing what looked like a Tennessee lambada on the stage, Bill Clinton delivering one of the best political speeches I've heard in 15 years, and the strains of a rock anthem, "Don't stop thinkin' about tomorrow," booming over the boomboxes for all us baby boomers, and the Clintons and Gores singing and swaying along. But most remarkable all week long were the faces of the Democrats in that hall. They were a people reborn with hope and joy.

Will I vote for Bill Clinton? Ask me tomorrow. It's never a good idea to ask a person if he'll ever sin again so soon after he's answered the altar call.

Life on the edge: Arctic reef teems with life

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (AP) — About 20 miles out on the frozen Arctic Ocean, Ken Dunton's research trailer sits half-buried in a wasteland of ice and blowing snow.

But when Dunton dives through a hole cut in the trailer's linoleum floor and in the 7 feet of ice beneath it, he finds a jungle of life: a reef that supports several hundred species of plants and animals. The reef is known as the Boulder Patch.

"No one knows why it's here," the University of Texas marine biologist said. "In most of the Arctic Ocean, the ice just gouges the bottom away like a plow, all the time, and very little can grow. But this place has rocks, and they support all this life."

To find another such diverse concentration of creatures, you would have to go halfway around the Arctic Coast, well into Russia in one direction and Canada in the other, Dunton said.

The 12-square-mile reef was found northeast of Prudhoe Bay during federal seismic surveys in 1972. Since then, it has shown scientists that life goes on in conditions once thought too harsh.

"The plants are far more efficient at converting sunlight than we'd ever suspect," Dunton said.

For nine months of the year, the Boulder Patch has almost no light and the water is below 32 degrees.

One kind of kelp there does 90 percent of its growing in the dark. During the brief summers it simply stores sunlight and then converts it in winter and spring, sending out new blades and reaching lengths of 7 feet.

"There's not any kelp that can beat this one for minimum amount of light. We're No. 1," said Dunton.

The oasis also is home to bright coral, sponges, starfish, jellyfish, sea anemones, snails and a variety of tiny creatures like sea spiders and sand fleas. Many are food for arctic cod and other fish, which also may exist in greater diversity here than in surrounding areas, Dunton said.

"When I came up here with Ken I couldn't believe what I saw," said diver Mike Dibble as he pulled on three layers of cold-weather gear before taking the plunge into the black, 29-degree water.

"You'd expect with this extreme environment you'd find a small group of highly specialized animals. I was amazed at the diversity, amazed at these very spectacular corals that you'd associate with tropical environments," Dibble said. "A lot of people into recreational diving would be astounded."

Some scientists are. Bob Wilce, an arctic algae specialist at the University of Massachusetts, visited the Boulder Patch this spring. He said he has found a new genus there: a millimeter-high, bright green alga that hides in rock crevices. So far, he calls it just "Fuzzy."

"Fuzzy's a pretty important little plant," said Wilce, who has found two other new genres in his 38-year career in the north.

On this visit to the Boulder Patch, he also found a brown crust that he identified under a microscope as a previously unseen stage of the reproductive life of another rare alga.

Russian scientists have done most of the work naming and describing arctic marine life, Dunton said, so he is working with them on categorizing the new finds.

The reef's granite boulders probably were dragged in by glacier from Canada and are partly protected from ice gouging by an island to the north. It isn't clear why they weren't covered long ago in sediment, however, since the Boulder Patch is near the mouth of a large arctic river, the Sagavanirktok.

Dunton's studies now are backed by a three-year, $200,000 National Science Foundation grant. He also gets funding and logistical help from BP Exploration, which operates the nearby Endicott oil field.

He and five assistants spent four weeks on the ice this spring collecting plant and animal samples in plastic bags. They drive out to their camp from Endicott in a Rolligon — a cab on monstrous rolling-pin wheels that mow over ice ridges and snowdrifts.

Divers can stand only about 40 minutes in the frigid water. Then they are pulled back up, steaming, into the trailer, where the hum of a generator and a couple of computer printers drown out the howl of the wind.

Each morning, the 4-foot-by-6-foot hole has to be cleared of slush and ice that start to seal it off.

Dunton has been coming here for 15 years.

"Some of those guys down there are old friends," he said. "I found five yesterday that I tagged in 1978."

Still, the sea life has such a tenuous hold that if a rock is scraped, it takes a dozen years for it to be visibly recolonized, he said.

"It's a very stressed environment."

New, returning students registration continues; other dates announced

Students new to Pampa Independent School District who will be attending Pampa High School can register through Thursday, according to PHS counselor Barbara Evans.

The counselors' office will be open 9 - 11 a.m. and 1 - 3 p.m. on those days for those students. Last year's school records should be brought by the student also, Evans said. Students who have withdrawn but want to re-enroll can register through Thursday, also.

Pampa High School students may pick up schedules for the 1992 - 1993 school year, Aug. 10 - 12, between the hours of 8:30 - noon, and 1 - 3:30 p.m., in the counselors' office.

New student orientation at Pampa High School is set for 9 a.m. - noon, Aug. 18, in the high school auditorium.

Students new to Pampa Independent School District who will be attending Pampa Middle School, sixth, seventh or eighth grade, should register today through Thursday. The office will be open 9 - 11 a.m. and 1 - 3 p.m. on those days for students needing to register.

At 6:30 p.m., Aug. 18, orientation will be held for those entering sixth grade. Principal Jerome Stewart said all entering sixth graders and their parents are invited to the session.

Judges named for livestock competition at Tri State Fair

Livestock judges have been selected to judge the livestock competition at the Amarillo Tri State Fair, scheduled for Sept. 21 - 16.

Dr. David Lust of West Texas State University will judge the Angus, Shorthorn and Simmental open cattle. Texas Longhorn cattle will be placed by Dr. Kenneth Woodward, head of animal science department at Panhandle State University. Billy Reager, county extension agent at Crockett, will judge the open and junior breeding sheep.

Junior dairy goats will be placed by Beverly Wallace of Amarillo. Dr. Jary Douglas, Northeastern Oklahoma A&M will judge junior steers. Barrows will be placed by Jamie Osborne, Horseshoe Bay. Jay Winters of Idalou, will judge junior lambs.

Junior capons will be placed by Dr. Robert Berry, Lubbock. Jerry McCarty, Houghton, La., will judge the Bantam show.

Rabbits will be placed by C.M. Carroll, Iowa Park and pigeons will be judged by Coy McKenzie, Norman, Okla.

Some 1,500 head of animals are expected to compete for $55,000 in prize money and awards in this year's Tri State Fair.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Guest with sticky fingers hopes to wash away guilt

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a woman wrote to say that one of her guests at a dinner party had stolen a fork, and she didn't know how to go about recovering it.

I wasn't that guest, but over the last 10 years, I have taken three items from homes where I have been a guest. Abby, I cannot for the life of me understand why I took these things! I have pondered and pondered as to how I can get these items back to the homes from which I took them.

I can't come out openly and admit that I took them. This is a small town, and I am well known here. If just one of these people talked about it, I would be finished!

Abby, what's wrong with me? They are really insignificant items. I thought about seeing some kind of counselor, but in a town like this, should I be seen going into the office of a therapist or any professional counselor, it would be all over town in no time. Secretaries talk, nurses talk, and psychotherapists talk, too. You would be amazed at how unprofessional their conduct is in a small town.

I'll bet there are thousands of people like me who wish they had the nerve to return something. Should I just wait until it's dark, then put the items in the mailboxes of their rightful owners?

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY CONSCIENCE: Yes. It will relieve your conscience, but it will not solve your problem. You need to seek professional help to find out why you took those items, so you won't continue that behavior. See a therapist in another town or city nearby to protect your privacy.

You are probably a kleptomaniac — a person who has a neurotic compulsion to steal without economic motive.

Please take my advice, and let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a luncheon buffet with co-workers when the issue of tipping arose.

One co-worker did not leave a tip, while another co-worker left a generous tip.

The server took drink orders, made sure the water glasses were always filled and removed the dishes; payment was made at the table.

An ongoing argument ensued. In such a situation, what is the appropriate tipping etiquette? We have agreed to abide by your advice.

JILL ANN MAYNOR, WEST CHESTER, OHIO
DEAR JILL: There should be no question about the tipping at a buffet. The server should be tipped 10 percent by each diner. The guest who left nothing should be ashamed.

DEAR ABBY: When my granddaughter kept ordering her dogs to "lie down," I told her she should say "lie down."

"No wonder they don't mind me!" she said.

GERTRUDE MILER, OLYMPIA, WASH.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HELEN THOMAS: Happy birthday, friend!

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064. ## Training for tutors scheduled Pampa Area Literacy Council is offering a tutor training workshop 6 - 10 p.m., Aug. 21, and 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Aug. 22, at Lovett Library. A light lunch will be served on Saturday.

This workshop will be a combined Laubach Way to Reading and Laubach Way to English. Upon completion, the new tutors will be certified in both areas, according to information from the council.

No skills are required to teach someone to read. Donations will be accepted to offset the cost of the workshop.

For more information or to enroll, call 665-2331 or 665-6000.

Rogers stays perfect in Bambino Tournament

By L.D. STRATE
Sportswriter

Jason Rustin's RBI double in the sixth inning lifted Rogers, Ark., past Nord Lake Shore, La., 7-6, Monday and into the championship round of the Southwest Regional Bambino Tournament.

Rogers advances to meet the Lake Shore-Denham Springs, La., winner at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the finals at Optimist Park. A second game, if needed, in the double-elimination tournament will be played 30 minutes following the first game.

Rogers has a 3-0 record and is the only unbeaten team remaining in the 11- to 12-year-old tournament, which started Saturday.

Rogers jumped out to an early 5-0 lead, but Denham Springs battled back to take a 6-5 lead after three innings.

In the fifth, Rogers knotted things up when Patrick Woodruff's single drove in Matt Boyd, who had reached on an infield hit, with the tying run.

Chad Russell drew a walk after Scott Woods flew out to open Rogers' sixth. Allen Bates struck out, but Rustin hit Daniel Gavion's 1-1 pitch off the right field wall to drive in what would be the winning run.

Russell, the Rogers' relief pitcher, struck out two of the three batters he faced in the bottom of the sixth to end the game. Russell had relieved Rustin with two outs in the bottom of the third and held Lake Shore hitless and scoreless the rest of the way.

Lake Shore had scored 25 runs in their first two games of the tournament.

Rogers manager Tom Woodruff heaped praise on both teams following the game.

"Lake Shore has an outstanding team with a lot of talent and they didn't give up when we got ahead. But I also have to give a lot of credit to my players," Woodruff said. "Many teams would have snapped after getting a lead and then giving it up. It takes a great team to be able to come back after that happens."

In a loser's bracket game Monday night, Pampa was eliminated by Little Rock, Ark., 12-2.

Pampa scored two runs in the first inning on an RBI sacrifice fly by Lucas Jaramillo and a run-scoring single by Erich Greer. But Little Rock pitcher Taylor Mitcham, who also hit a home run, held Pampa to three hits the rest of the way while striking out nine and walking five.

Todd Turchi had two of Little Rock's six hits and knocked in two runs.

Greer, Aaron Whitney, Keith Jacoby, Blane Northcutt and Jason Cirone had one hit each for Pampa.

In last night's late game, Little Rock was eliminated by Denham Springs, 7-4, to whittle the remaining teams to three.

"This wasn't one of our better days," said Little Rock coach Ernie Lewis. "We normally play better.

Maybe being away from home had something to do with it."

With the score tied, 3-3, pitcher Spencer Varnado started a four-run fifth for Denham Springs when he led off with a home run. Matthew Eddards, Jimmy Richard and Luke Hand each knocked in a run with base hits.

Denham Springs, which had opened the tournament with a 13-10 loss to Little Rock, knocked off Idabel, Okla., 4-1, in the first game played Monday.

Brian Mooney had three hits to pace the winners while Larry Garrett had two of Idabel's three hits off pitcher Luke Hand.

Tonight's only game, pitting Lake Shore against Denham Springs, starts at 7 p.m.

The tournament champion qualifies for the Bambino World Series, beginning Aug. 15 in Alachua, Fla.

49ers edge Denver, lose Joe Montana for 2 weeks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Steve Bono played backup for Steve Young and answered for Joe Montana. That's pretty typical stuff for Bono as he plays through the always-changing quarterback picture with the San Francisco 49ers.

Bono, who started six games last season after two years of carrying a clipboard, completed a fourth-quarter touchdown pass to Ron Lewis and the 49ers defeated the Denver Broncos 13-7 Monday night in an exhibition of reserve quarterbacks after Montana's comeback was put on hold for two weeks.

"He's relieved," Bono said of Montana. "The good thing is that he knows what he needs to do now. He'll be back."

Montana, who has been plagued by soreness in his throwing elbow for the past two weeks, will rest his ailing arm for at least two more weeks before trying to resume his career. Montana had been scheduled to make his first appearance in a year in the exhibition opener for both teams.

"For a two-week period, he's not going to throw the ball," 49ers coach George Seifert said after the game. "It's felt with the rest, this thing should improve."

Seifert said an MRI showed Montana's elbow tendon, surgically attached to the bone last year, was attached, but the area around it was inflamed.

After replacing Young in the second quarter, Bono completed 12 of 22 passes for 131 yards and one touchdown.

Denver's Karl Mecklenburg sacks San Francisco quarterback Steve Young Monday in San Francisco.

"It's the first game," Bono said. "Everybody was trying to get the rust off."

Everybody except for Montana and Denver quarterback John Elway, who had arthroscopic shoulder surgery in February. Elway had been scheduled to start and play a few series, but Denver coaches preferred to hold Elway out of the game and give their other quarterbacks more playing time.

"Yesterday they told me I wouldn't play," Elway said. "I'm fine. No physical ailments. They wanted to look at Shawn and Steve."

Young started for the 49ers and played the first three series, completing 6 of 8 passes for 55 yards.

Steve Pelluer started for Denver, completing 8 of 16 passes for 49 yards. Shawn Moore played the second and third quarters, completing 9 of 13 passes for 86 yards and one touchdown.

Pelluer and Moore are trying to win the Broncos' third quarterback job behind Elway and rookie Tommy Maddox, Denver's first-round draft choice last April. Maddox, who signed last week, did not play.

"It's been a long time since I've gotten a lot of plays," Moore said. "I'm just like every other young guy trying to play hard in practice and look good in the games. I wasn't intimidated. It felt good just to play."

The 49ers capitalized on a fumbled punt for their only touchdown. The Broncos were stopped in the final minutes by their third fumble of the game.

"It was a typical first preseason game," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "We made too many mistakes. You can't put the ball on the ground three times and expect to win."

North falls short at All-Star game

DALLAS (AP) - Princeton coach Pete Carrill may not like Ben Hart. He's a good player - but he scores too quickly.

The Princeton-bound Hart scored eight points in the final two minutes of Monday's McDonald's All-Star game, helping the South preserve a 109-101 victory over the North squad.

"They were pressing us and that enabled me to get free for the layups. Then I was lucky to get the rebounds and get fouled," said Hart, a San Antonio Alamo Heights grad. He may not score in such flourishes this fall for Carrill, whose squads are known for their 50-point games.

The game was close for the first time in the final minutes, when the North's Koy Smith sank consecutive free throws with 1:33 remaining. That cut the South lead to 101-99 and capped a 15-4 run.

Then Hart took over, sinking four free throws, a jumper and a layup over the final 2:11 to thwart the comeback.

"It's a good feeling to be up by two late and win by eight," he said.

Chris Doyal of San Antonio McArthur, who will be joining Hart at Princeton, hauled in a game-high 15 rebounds.

The South's most valuable player was Joseph Blair of C.E. King, an Arizona recruit, who scored 17 points. Dayo Holloway scored a game-high 26 points for the North. The Fort Worth Dunbar grad, a Western Wyoming signee, was his squad's most valuable player.

The North squad was coached by Pampa High School Coach Robert Hale.

Former Harvesters guard Cedrick Wilbon also played on the North team. He scored nine points and had three rebounds and two assists while playing 24 minutes.

The game featured graduated Texas high school seniors in their final prep matchup at Moody Coliseum as part of the Texas High School Coaches Association's annual coaching school.

A North vs. South football game pitting graduated senior stars will be played Tuesday at Texas Stadium.

Holloway kept the game close in the third quarter, scoring the North's first seven points. But the South came out of the period with a 75-68 lead behind a spread out offense in which only one scored more than five points.

The South had an explosive first quarter, helping the squad build a 19-point lead. But the North countered in the second period, to pull within 50-42 at halftime.

Midway through the first quarter, the South took off. It broke a tie at 14 with a 16-0 run. The first half ended with the North facing a 32-16 deficit.

Hart opened the second quarter with three free throws, giving the South its biggest lead of the game, 35-16.

Then Holloway and the North began to catch fire, outscoring the South 26-15 the rest of the quarter.

Eckersley extinguishes Texas' fire

ARLINGTON (AP) - Dennis Eckersley didn't waste any time or pitches when Oakland A's manager Tony La Russa called him to the mound an inning earlier than usual.

Eckersley needed only 21 pitches, including 18 strikes, to retire six Texas Rangers in a row and preserve a 4-1 victory on Monday night.

"This is August now," said LaRussa. "You take care of your pitching staff early in the year so as the games dwindle down you have the guy you need when you need him."

LaRussa used Eckersley as the third pitcher of the game after reliever Rick Honeycutt hit Rafael Palmeiro to open the bottom of the eighth inning. The A's were leading 4-1.

"There's not as much pressure when you come into a game like this with a big lead," the reliever said. "The pressure comes when a guy can win it or tie with one swing of the bat. A three-run lead erases all the negative stuff that goes through my mind. I'll do anything Tony asks me to do with a three-run lead."

The combination of Eckersley's pitching and Mark McGwire's hitting was too much for the Rangers.

The A's moved to within a game of the Minnesota Twins in the American League West standings. The Rangers fell to 9 1/2 games behind Minnesota.

Oakland opened the scoring when McGwire slapped a 404-foot shot to left to lead off the fourth inning. It was McGwire's 33rd homer of the season.

McGwire, who spent his post-game time wrapped in bags of ice to ease his aches and pains, has gone 11-for-23 with four homers, three doubles, eight RBIs, six walks and 10 runs scored through his last seven games.

"I have to play through the pain," McGwire said before retreating to the training room. "I still have to play."

"It's tough to give McGwire some time off the way he's hitting the ball," said La Russa. "His knees, his leg and his back are barking. He needs some time off."

"But he'll probably play tomorrow; I can't say anything about Wednesday at this point."

Eckersley earned his 34th save of the season and has a 38-save streak that stretches back to last season.

"That was the old Eck," said Rangers manager Toby Harrah. "You can bring a guy like that in in the eighth inning when he only throws 10 pitches an inning."

Rickey Henderson hit his ninth homer in the top of the fifth to make it 2-0. Oakland added its third run in the sixth as Mike Bordick drove home McGwire, who had walked, with a sacrifice fly.

The fourth run came in the eighth as a Bordick single to left off Kenny Rogers scored McGwire from second. Danny Leon, who relieved Texas starter Jose Guzman to start the inning, had walked McGwire.

Oakland starter Mike Moore (11-9) allowed five hits, struck out four and walked two.

Guzman (8-9) pitched seven innings, giving up the two homers, striking out seven and walking one.

Odessa Permian, A&M Consolidated head football preseason poll

The first Texas high school coaches football poll was released yesterday indicating the start of the season is quickly approaching.

Odessa Permian was picked as the Class 5A preseason No. 1 while A&M Consolidated edged out Bay City for the top spot in Class 4A.

Despite not placing in the poll, the Pampa High School Harvesters are eagerly awaiting the start of the season with hopes of improving on last year's best season in school history.

PHS seniors begin checking out equipment Thursday at 6 p.m. followed by juniors at 7:30. Sophomores will receive equipment at 6 p.m. Friday.

SUMMER OLYMPICS

US volleyball team spikes tough Italians

The U.S. men handed the world champion Italians their first loss of the tournament 9-15, 16-14, 15-11, 15-13.

The Americans have won four in a row since they opened with a disputed loss to Japan.

The match meant nothing in the standings. Italy already had clinched the No. 1 seed in the pool and the United States the No. 2. The Americans play the Unified Team in the quarterfinals on Wednesday.

TRACK & FIELD

Triple-Jump

Gold - Mike Conley, Fayetteville, Ark., 59-7 1/2 (wind-aided); Silver - Charlie Simpkins, Aiken, S.C.; Bronze - Frank Rutherford, Bahamas, 56-11 1/2.

Conley's jump was longer than the world record but was wind-aided. It was the second-longest jump in history under any conditions.

Men's 110-Meter Hurdles

Gold - Mark McKoy, Canada, 13.12; Silver - Tony Dees, Tampa, Fla., 13.24; Bronze - Jack Pierce, Marlton, N.J., 13.26.

McKoy was banned from international track for two years after walking out of the Seoul Olympics in sympathy with his teammate Ben Johnson. Pierce took the bronze in a photo finish.

Men's 10,000

Gold - Richard Chelimo, Kenya, 27:46.70; Silver - Addis Abebe, Ethiopia, 28:00.07; Bronze - Salvatore Antibo, Italy, 28:11.39.

Americans - Todd Williams, Monroe, Mich., ninth, 28:29.38.

Khalid Skah of Morocco finished first but was disqualified for getting assistance from teammate Hammou Boutayeb. After he crossed the finish line, the crowd booted and pelted him with objects.

Women's 800

Gold - Ellen Van Langen, Netherlands, 1:55.54; Silver - Lilia Nurutdinova, Unified Team, 1:55.99; Bronze - Ana Quirot, Cuba, 1:56.00.

Americans - Joetta Clark, East Orange, N.J., 1:58.06.

Van Langen was fifth with 200 meters left but blasted past three runners and caught Nurutdinova in the final stretch.

Women's 10-Kilometer Walk

Gold - Chen Yueling, China, 44:32; Silver - Elena Nikolaeva, Unified Team, 44:33; Bronze - Li Chunxui, China, 44:41.

Americans - Michelle Rohl, Racine, Wis., 20th, 46:45; Debbi Lawrence, Kenosha, Wis., 26th, 48:23.

Alina Ivanova of the Unified Team finished first but was disqualified for incorrect walking.

Women's Discus

Gold - Maritza Marten Garcia, Cuba, 229-10 1/4; Silver - Tzvetanka Mintcheva Khristova, Bulgaria, 222-4 1/2; Bronze - Daniela Costian, Australia, 217-3 3/4.

WATER POLO

The United States is off to its best start ever in Olympic water polo after beating France 11-7. Chris Humbert of Lodi, Calif., scored three goals and goalie Craig Wilson of Davis, Calif., had 10 saves as the Americans improved to 3-0. The United States ran off a string of five unanswered goals during a stretch late in the game.

WEIGHTLIFTING

243 Pounds

Gold - Ronny Weller, Germany, 953; Silver - Artour Akoev, Unified Team, 948; Bronze - Stefan Botev, Bulgaria, 921.

Americans - Richard Schutz, Mount Prospect, Ill., 18th, 766.

Weller, who was in a serious automobile accident two years ago, put together the best performance of his life to upset Akoev, the world champion. His clean-and-jerk total of 529 pounds was 22 pounds more than he'd lifted before.

WRESTLING

Zeke Jones of Bloomsburg, Pa., defeated Alfredo Leyva 16-1 on a technical fall with 1:05 left in their 114.5-pound preliminary match. Jones had lost three previous matches to the Cuban. Earlier in the first round, he defeated Chokri Boudchiche of Tunisia in a 15-0 technical fall in 3:10.

At 149.5 pounds, Townsend Saunders of Phoenix, Ariz., defeated Calum McNeil of Britain 5-0 but lost to defending Olympic champion Arsen Fadzaev of the Unified Team 4-1.

Mark Coleman of Columbus, Ohio, defeated Gavin Carrow of Canada 12-2 at 220 pounds.

YACHTING

Finn

Gold - Jose Maria van der Ploeg, Spain, 33.40; Silver - Brian Ledbetter, San Diego, Calif., 54.70; Bronze - Craig Monk, New Zealand, 64.70.

Van der Ploeg clinched the gold medal Sunday and did not compete Monday. Ledbetter was sixth Monday but held onto second while Monk won the final race and moved up to third.

Men's 470

Gold - Spain, 50.00; Silver - Morgan Reeser, Miami, and Kevin Burnham, Coral Gables, Fla., 66.70; Bronze - Estonia, 68.70.

The Spanish duo had its worst finish of the seven races with a 32nd Monday but still was ahead of the Americans, who finished 14th on the day. Estonian brothers Tonu and Toomas Toniste won a silver medal for the Soviet Union in 1988.

Tornado

Gold - France, 40.40; Silver - Randy Smyth, Mary Esther, Fla., and Keith Notary, Merritt Island, Fla., 42.00; Bronze - Australia, 44.40.

Smyth and Notary were leading in Sunday's races but did not finish within the time limit to the race was re-scheduled for Monday. They finished only 11th in the final race, while the French team came in second to win the gold.

United States fails to win second protest at Games

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) - Where U.S. boxer Eric Griffin couldn't prevail, Moroccan distance runner Khalid Skah did.

Skah, the winner in the men's 10,000 meters, was stripped of his medal Monday night when a teammate allegedly bumped his main competitor, Richard Chelimo of Kenya. Chelimo was instead given the gold.

A protest was filed, and Skah won for a second time. The International Amateur Athletic Federation returned the gold to Skah today after repeatedly viewing videotape and concluding they couldn't prove the accusation. Chelimo will get the silver.

The United States is 0-for-2 in its protests. After Griffin lost a controversial decision, an appeal failed to reverse it; after the volleyball team was stripped of a win against Japan, an unsuccessful appeal was filed.

The Barcelona Games also had their first drug casualty today - one day after it was announced everyone had tested clean though one week of competition.

Wu Dan of China, a striker on the women's volleyball team, tested positive for the stimulant strychnine, said Michele Verdier, International Olympic Committee spokeswoman.

The other big news was off-field as well - world record holder Mike Powell of the United States woke up with a sore right hamstring and is undergoing therapy to compete in Wednesday's long jump.

"He's here to compete. He's thinking about winning a gold medal. He has competed three times this year with an aggravated hamstring," said his agent, Brad Hunt.

Back at the Games, the Cubans returned to the Olympics after 12 years as a political casualty - and the Americans are wishing their Caribbean neighbors had waited four years for the Atlanta Games.

The imposing Cubans are threatening U.S. supremacy in the boxing ring and on the baseball diamond, with heavyweight Felix Savon whipping Chicago's Danell Nicholson in a spectacular fight and the Cuban baseball team eagerly awaiting the United States today.

How tough are Cuban fighters? Eleven of 12 boxers are still in the run for medals. Only six Americans are left.

Jennifer Capriati makes a return during her match in the Olympics Monday in Barcelona.

How rough is the Cuban baseball team? Let U.S. coach Ron Fraser handle that one. A victory over the 7-0 Cubans, he said, "would be the biggest upset of the 1992 Olympics." This Cuban team has outscored its opponents 78-14, hit 12 home runs, and has two players batting over .500 (yes, that was .500).

But stranger things have already happened.

Mike Conley, who didn't even qualify for the Seoul Olympics, unleashed a triple jump that ... took ... this ... long ... to ... end, the second-longest leap of all time.

"I won a gold medal and jumped over 18 meters (59 feet, 3 1/4 inches). Asking for anything more than that is just being greedy," Conley of Fayetteville, Ark., said after his wind-aided leap of 59-7 1/2. Earlier, he set an Olympic record of 57-10 1/4.

The record jump had the 29-year-old partying in the sand pit, thrusting his arms skyward and shouting, "Boom! Boom! Boom!" That's something he wasn't able to do four years ago when, after a silver in 1984, he failed to make the team.

Conley's spectacular skyride capped an impressive day for the United States. Two boxers and two tennis stars are assured of medals. Two hurdlers collected silver and gold. The women's basketball team rolled to a record-setting win over Spain. And the men's volleyball team, its confidence growing back like its hair, knocked off world champion Italy.

PHS volleyball to begin

Practice is scheduled to start Monday for the Pampa high school volleyball team, said coach Denise Reed.

Workouts for freshmen through senior players will be held from 8 to 10 in the mornings and 4 to 6 in the afternoons all of next week.

Pampa opens the season Aug. 18 at home against Palo Duro.

Soccer signups scheduled

The Pampa Soccer Association will hold signups for its fall leagues on Aug. 14 and 15 and again on Aug. 21 and 22.

Times are 5:30 to 9 p.m. on Fridays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays in front of the T-Shirts & More shop in the Pampa Mall.

For more information, call 665-6302.

Jim Weatherall dies

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Funeral services were scheduled for Wednesday for former Oklahoma standout Jim Weatherall, who died Sunday of a heart attack at his home at age 62.

Weatherall was a tackle for the Philadelphia Eagles, Washington Redskins and the Detroit Lions. He also played for the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

Weatherall won the Outland Trophy as the nation's top college lineman in 1951. He came to Oklahoma from White Deer in 1950-51 and was a two-time All-American.

Orphans arrive in Germany after harrowing trip

ZERBST, Germany (AP) — Clutching toys and sucking pacifiers, 38 young children from a Sarajevo orphanage landed in Germany today after a heartbreaking, harrowing dash from the bloodshed in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Some were crying, some were smiling and several looked disoriented and dazed. They were carried into ambulances from the Aeroflot AN-26 plane that brought them to a Russian army air strip about 55 miles southwest of Berlin.

One wide-eyed, black-haired girl gawked at the commotion of news media, while she clutched a doll nearly as big as herself.

"When we gave them the first toys, it was a terrific feeling," said relief worker Herbert Puchwein, who accompanied the children from Sarajevo, Bosnia's besieged capital.

The rescue mission, organized by two eastern German state lawmakers, had encountered heavy criticism after two of the children on board a rescue bus were killed by gunfire from a Serb-held area of Sarajevo.

One of the first children brought off the plane was 14-month-old Nina, who wore a purple and pink jumpsuit.

The tiny child looked slightly disoriented but reached out to a reporter's tape recorder out of curiosity. The children on board the plane ranged in age from eight weeks to six years. They initially said the oldest was four, but later revised that number.

Two of the children were ill and were taken immediately to a Zerbst hospital. Dr. Ludwig Rohden, a Magdeburg physician and one of the relief workers, said the two were dehydrated and exhausted.

The rest were taken to three orphanages in eastern Germany's Saxony-Anhalt state, where the air strip is located. Rohden said they were doing well physically.

"They're in good health, but in a bad mental state," Rohden said. "We have begun therapy."

Rohden said there were 38 children on board. Initial reports had said there were 39 and there was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy.

Relief workers said that three other children, whose houses had been bombed, had also flown to safety aboard the plane and it appeared that several of their parents were also on board. Further details were not available in the confusion of the arrival.

Relief workers described a harrowing trip over mountains and barely passable roads.

Stephen Stehli, director of the Johannestal emergency relief organization in Magdeburg, said the children would be put in the quietest, calmest surroundings possible.

"That's why we're taking them to small towns. To fresh air, to play in the peace and quiet," Stehli said.

Stehli said the orphanage workers from Sarajevo who traveled with the children would stay with them indefinitely in Germany so they would not feel isolated.

"When I saw the pictures, I never gave up hope that the children would make it, even though we have a full-fledged war down there," Stehli said.

The turboprop aircraft had left a few hours earlier from Split, Croatia, where a bus carried the children on a two-day journey of terror from the Bosnian capital, Sarajevo.

Fifty children departed from Sarajevo for Split on Saturday night, but machine-gun fire from a Serb-held area killed a Serb girl and a Muslim boy.

On Sunday, as they tried to complete the second leg, Serb fighters took nine children they said were Serbian off the bus.

Adrian Maerevoet, an official with the Saxony-Anhalt state social ministry, defended the efforts of the Saxony-Anhalt lawmakers who worked to get the children out.

"According to my information, 15 children in Sarajevo were shot the same day that the two children on the bus were shot," Maerevoet said. "As long as this condition exists in Sarajevo, nobody has a chance to live."

The children spent the night in an orphanage in Split before boarding the AN-26 for the flight to Germany.

1,900 U.S. Marines hold Kuwait amphibious exercise

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer

KUWAIT (AP) — The U.S. military landed 1,900 Marines in an amphibious exercise today billed as a training mission but signaling to Iraq that U.N. cease-fire conditions are backed by force.

The soldiers of the 11th Marine Expeditionary Unit came ashore in armored vehicles or from hovercraft and flat-bottomed landing craft that lumbered through the gulf's calm, blue-green waters.

More than half were veterans of the Persian Gulf War.

Officers said they did not expect any trouble from Saddam Hussein during the joint exercises, which continue to Aug. 17.

"We are demonstrating our ability to conduct seaborne amphibious warfare and also the U.S. commitment to security and stability in the gulf region," said Capt. Brade Phillips, commander of the amphibious battle group.

In all, more than 5,000 U.S. troops from all branches of the military are to take part in the desert exercises with about 1,900 Kuwaitis, officials say.

The United States decided to double the number of soldiers participating in the exercise after the Iraqi president resisted U.N. weapons inspections.

Inspections were part of the truce agreement Baghdad signed at the end of the U.S.-led operation last year that drove Iraq from Kuwait, but Saddam held inspectors at bay about three weeks before relenting earlier this month.

The maneuvers had been planned well before the inspections stand-off and before Iraq used the second anniversary of its August 2, 1990, invasion to renew its claim to Kuwait.

"There is nothing that would lead me to believe there is a threat at this point," Phillips said. "But it's difficult to put myself in the head of the guys that might be a threat."

"We are all wondering what the idiot's (Saddam's) going to do. But we have some feeling that we are pretty safe over here," said George Davis, 36, a chief petty officer from Annapolis, Md.

Officers called the landing a message for Saddam.

"We are exercising all year round whether he watches or not. But the message is we are always ready," said Col. Mohammed al-Sirri, spokesman for Kuwait's Ministry of Defense.

An official Iraqi newspaper today called Kuwait's leaders "stooges" for permitting the joint maneuvers, the Iraqi News Agency said.

"Washington aims at keeping the rulers of Kuwait captives to their illusions of what the White House calls the security umbrella," the newspaper Al-Thawra was quoted as saying. It said the maneuvers were designed to shut other Western powers out of the gulf and "assert American hegemony over oil."

The men and equipment that landed today were launched from four ships riding at anchor a few miles off the Kuwaiti port of Shuwaik. The first Marine hit the cement staging area at 9 a.m.

The hovercraft, carrying about 30 men each, roared up onto a 100-yard-wide cement ramp in a cloud of water, while a landing craft with 70 men parked just offshore and humvees, trucks and Marines waded through the water.

"I knew when I left that I was coming back. It's been building up and building up," said Lance Cpl. Garland Cole, 22, of Beaufort, S.C., who served in Saudi Arabia during the war.

The landing carried the feel of a real war, with choppers floating overhead and Kuwait testing its new air raid sirens.

Signs that it was an exercise included wooden fishing vessels bobbing among the landing craft, Marines taking their own videos and television network correspondents doing stand-ups.

Officers said it would take all day to move the 11th Marines, who are based at Camp Pendleton, Calif., off the USS Tarawa, the USS Fort Fisher, the USS Ogden and the USS Schenectady. The ships had sailed from Long Beach, Calif. on May 28 and are due back in late November.

Most of the Marines coming off the ships will move to a desert camp about 40 miles northeast of Kuwait City, where summer temperatures hit 122 degrees.

Training in this part of the exercises includes a simulated air strike Thursday, combined exercises with the Kuwaitis on Aug. 11 and reloading of vessels starting Aug. 13.

Foreign diplomats and Kuwaiti military officers say Saddam has two armored divisions in Basra, 30 miles from the Kuwaiti border, that without the presence of U.S. troops could probably roll into the emirate in a day — just as Iraqi forces did two years ago.

Senate votes to curb and eventually eliminate nuclear testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a direct challenge to President Bush, the Senate voted for the first time to curb U.S. nuclear testing and to end it entirely four years from now.

By a surprisingly wide margin of 68-26 on Monday, senators approved a nine-month moratorium on weapons testing, limits on subsequent tests and an absolute test ban beginning Oct. 1, 1996. The restrictions were added to a $22 billion spending bill for energy and water programs that was later approved on a voice vote.

Americans "don't want excuses or rationalizations. They want this program suspended," said Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who has fought for years to end underground nuclear tests.

Hatfield and other proponents said phasing out tests of nuclear weapons is a common sense response to the end of the Cold War and to upcoming deep cuts in the arsenals of the United States and Russia.

A House-passed version of the bill includes a simple one-year moratorium on testing, meaning that some restrictions on weapons tests are certain to be in the final product that emerges from a House-Senate negotiating panel.

Bush, who has argued that tests are essential to maintain the safety and reliability of America's nuclear stockpile, is likely to veto the bill.

While Monday's Senate margin would be enough to override a veto, the most recent vote in the House was 237-167 — short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

The vote had strong political overtones. Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton favors a two-stage policy under which nuclear tests are first sharply limited, then ended entirely.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said during floor debate that "it is regrettable that the Bush administration has such a poor record on this issue."

Both France and Russia now have their own testing moratoriums in place, but they plan to lift them in the coming months unless the United States joins in suspending tests. Chinese officials also have indicated they might consider a moratorium if other nations with nuclear arms put them into effect.

Arms control advocates welcomed the vote, calling it a milestone in nuclear nonproliferation efforts.

"This is a big message to the White House," said Jack Mendelsohn of the private Arms Control Association. "In this modern world, where your major adversary has disappeared ... there isn't much reason why we shouldn't stop and think about where we're going on this issue."

Fifty-one Senate Democrats were joined by 17 Republicans in voting for the testing phase out.

The provision, co-sponsored by Hatfield, Mitchell and Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., would suspend nuclear testing until next July, then allow as many as 15 safety tests over the next three years. A test ban would go into effect on Oct. 1, 1996.

Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who supported the restrictions, signaled that he also planned to address the testing issue when the House and Senate meet to iron out differences in their Pentagon budget bills for the coming year.

Nunn, D-Ga., said he might seek to move back the date for an absolute ban by a year or two, and increase the number of safety tests that would be allowed.

A 1963 treaty banned nuclear test explosions above ground, but underground tests at the Nevada test site have continued. They are used to develop new weapons designs, to test safety systems, to ensure that weapons work and produce desired yields, and to test other weapons and systems in the environment of a nuclear explosion.

The House over the years has regularly approved language restricting the testing of nuclear weapons, but until Monday supporters had never been able to muster a majority in the Senate.

The idea behind the moratorium, its supporters say, is to set a good example for the rest of the world. The Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, which the United States has signed, requires states to negotiate an eventual comprehensive ban on nuclear weapons tests.

Bush administration rejects Oregon health plan; politics blamed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration says Oregon's plan to ration health care for the poor was too legally flawed to be approved. But the state's politicians say the proposal was an election-year victim.

The administration on Monday rejected Oregon's plan to expand Medicaid coverage to 120,000 of the state's working poor by covering a smaller variety of medical services.

If it had been approved, Oregon's plan could have served as a model for other states looking for ways to stretch their Medicaid dollars, as medical costs soar and the ranks of the poor rise.

"It's a slap in the face to a state that's been innovative," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

The state needed federal permission before going forward with its plan because Medicaid is administered by the states under federal regulation. The state and federal governments share the costs.

The administration had considered the Oregon plan for months with a variety of concerns. In the end, the snag was that the plan ran afoul of the new Americans with Disabilities Act.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan indicated that the administration wanted to approve something similar to what Oregon had proposed, and he invited the state to ask again once it worked out the legal wrinkles.

"I urge Oregon to submit a revised application which addresses these concerns, and I look forward to approving such a demonstration," Sullivan said in a letter Monday to Oregon Gov. Barbara Roberts.
