Kingsmill residents to get bottled water

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

The Texas Water Commission today will begin utilizing emergency state funds to provide bottled water and dispensers to the Kingsmill community residents, said Mark Stine, a chemist with the Texas Water Commission in Austin.

Testing has revealed detectable levels of benzene in the Kingsmill Community Water Supply Corp. well, although positive confirmation of the source of the contamination is still under investigation.

The detection of benzene in the well was found late last year.

"The Texas Water Commission believes that it is prudent for the residents of the Kingsmill community to be provided with an alternate drinking water source," a letter delivered Tuesday to Kingsmill residents states. "Until the source of contamination can be positively identified, and a responsible party confirmed, the Texas Water Commission will use state funds to provide an alternate source of drinking water for residents."

During the first phase of the program, beginning today and expected to last 45 days, Kingsmill residents will receive bottled water and a dispenser. Also, the water commission will install a filtration system in the water well during that 45-day period. The operation of the filtration system, when in place, is expected to remove the benzene contamination from the water and make it OK for drinking and cooking.

During the first phase, drinking water in five-gallon bottles and dispensers will be provided by Sierra Spring Water of Amarillo and can be picked up after 6 p.m. today at the residence of Carolyn Hood. Following the initial handing out of the dispensers and water, residents who need refills can call Sierra Spring Water at (806) 352-7986. Four days notice is requested for delivery of water.

Hood, who served as manager-operator of the Kingsmill water corporation for 14 years, said, "I am thrilled (about the bottled water) because people out here have been having to pay two water bills - one to flush your toilets and another to haul water to drink. I'm thankful. We're the innocent party that has been suffering. I am glad the state has reconciled that we are in trouble and has offered to help."

Stine said the cost of bottled water and dispensers is expected to be about $2,000. He said the cost of the filtration system is still being analyzed. A justification assessment for state-funded cleanup states that the expected cost of a treatment system could be $100,000.

Stine said that if a responsible party is found to have caused the contamination in the water well, state law permits the state to seek reimbursement of the costs associated with providing alternative drinking water and/or treatment. He said sometimes the state can ask and receive up to double of the state's costs.

"We're hoping within six months we'll resolve the issue (of the responsible party)," Stine said.

Don Manning, district manager in Amarillo for the Texas Water Commission, said today that the delay in getting bottled water to the Kingsmill residents was due to the various processes which are necessary to access the money.

"We've been trying to help all along. It's just the wheels of bureaucracy turn slowly ... I think this will solve the water part of it for those people until we can get the water investigation completed," Manning said.

Oklahoma Supreme Court strikes down abortion ban

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Abortion-rights activists threw streamers and cheered to celebrate the state Supreme Court's refusal to let a proposal to ban most abortions go to a statewide vote.

But abortion opponent Mari Migliore said Tuesday's decision that the proposed state question was unconstitutional went against at least 106,000 Oklahomans who said "they very much would like to vote on this."

The decision to invalidate Initiative Petition No. 349 was 5-4. Seven justices agreed the state question proposed by the petition is unconstitutional, but four said a statewide vote should proceed anyway.

State Question 642 would have prohibited abortions except in cases of rape, incest, grave birth defects or serious threats to the mother's physical and mental health.

The majority opinion by Justice Yvonne Kauger held that the state question ran afoul of a U.S. Supreme Court decision in a Pennsylvania case.

Ms. Kauger wrote that if the proposal were allowed to be submitted to the people, "a costly, fruitless and useless election would take place."

Justices Robert Lavender, Hardy Summers, Robert Simms and Joe Watt concurred in the decision. Justices Ralph Hodges and Rudolph Hargrave concurred the question is unconstitutional, but argued it should go to a vote.

Justices Marian Opala and Alma Wilson issued dissenting opinions and did not address the constitutional issue.

Opala wrote that "judicial pre-emption scrutiny of proposed legislation for constitutional flaws raises an impermissible restraint on the free exercise of free speech."

Justice Wilson said blocking the statewide vote is a "flagrant encroachment upon the people's legislative powers."

The majority opinion said the U.S. high court decision in the Planned Parenthood vs. Casey case in Pennsylvania made it "incontrovertibly clear that the petition could not withstand a constitutional challenge."

"Although state law may afford greater rights than those guaranteed by federal law, it may not curtail rights guaranteed by federal law or the United States Constitution."

Ms. Migliore, spokeswoman for the Oklahoma Coalition to Restrict Abortion, said her group was "totally unprepared" for the adverse decision.

"It is not what we expected and we are disappointed," she said. She said the group is considering its legal options, including a petition for a rehearing before the state court and an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Gaylene Murphy, spokeswoman for the "No on State Question 642" organization, said an appeal does not worry her because the state ruling was based on a previous decision by the U.S. court.

"Obviously the measure was far too restrictive and in violation of the Constitution," she said.

The No on SQ 642 group threw streamers at its news conference after the court decision.

The Oklahoma court held that the initiative petition "criminalizes and absolutely prohibits abortions except in four narrow circumstances" in violation of the U.S. court ruling that said a woman's right to an abortion is a liberty interest protected by the due process clause of the Constitution.

It said the petition does not allow a woman to make a private decision to obtain an abortion at any time during the pregnancy - either before or after viability.

It said the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a provision of the 1974 Roe vs. Wade ruling allowing a woman to choose to have an abortion before fetal viability.

U.S. Sen. David Boren and U.S. Reps. Dave McCurdy and Mike Synar, all Democrats, joined in the lawsuit that sought to block the election.

"Oklahoma taxpayers have been well served by the state Supreme Court and its decision to disallow state Question 642," McCurdy said.

"Today's state Supreme Court decision is a wise one since the state question would have been immediately struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court under current court decisions," Boren said in a statement from Washington. "It will spare the state a costly and bitterly divisive election."

Justice Ralph Hodges, in a separate opinion, agreed that the question is unconstitutional, but said the Pennsylvania case shows a Supreme Court that is "bitterly fragmented over the continuing viability of Roe vs. Wade."

Fort Hood soldiers leave for Kuwait

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

FORT HOOD (AP) - Soldiers leaving for Kuwait say they hope the reason for their departure doesn't change: to show the flag and participate in training exercises.

But many of the 300 who left Fort

Hood on Tuesday said they are ready if hostilities escalate between President Bush and Iraq President Saddam Hussein.

Most of the soldiers who left are mechanics and maintenance personnel. Another 1,600 will leave from the sprawling Army post in Central Texas within the week, officials said.

"I'd really like to be here, but I was called and it is time to go," said Spc. Dale Mathis, who was in the Persian Gulf last year when U.S.-led forces drove Iraq from oil-rich Kuwait.

Mathis' wife, Michelle, is pregnant, and they have a 1-year-old son.

"It's just a training mission," said 25-year-old Sgt. William Riggs, who left his wife and three children. But if a conflict erupts, "I feel we are ready," he said.

"I made it through one time, I can make it again," said Spc. Curtis Jones, who said goodbye to his wife Terri, and 22-month-old daughter Amanda.

Capt. Luis Vega gave his 10-year-old son, Luis, a pair of his combat shoes, telling the youngster that he was "the man of the house" while he was gone.

The young boy cried, saying he feared his father "may get hurt." Capt. Vega of Puerto Rico said he told his son, "It's a job. We have to do our job."

Most of the soldiers did not want to comment on the political implications of Bush's decision to re-send the troops. Some critics of Bush have said the move was an attempt to bolster his sagging re-election campaign.

Spc. Julian Gonzalez, 22, of San Antonio, said, "He's the commander-in-chief. Whatever he says, those are the rules."

Sgt. Victor Baker held his daughter, Emalee, who was not yet a month old. His wife, Stacie, said she was shocked at first that he was going back, but she said she grew up in a military family and is accustomed to the separations on a moment's notice.

The troops' commanders, in a brief talk, advised the soldiers to be careful.

Two women were making their first overseas trip in the Army, and having to leave their children behind.

"I want to be here with him," said Sgt. Angela Thomas of San Antonio, as she held her 1-year-old son Michael. But she added that, "I want the experience and training. He knows Mommy will come back."

She was going to leave Michael with her mother.

Spc. Stephanie Bruce said she also looked forward to the experience, but would miss her two-year-old daughter, Keoma, who was going to stay with her mother.

"I don't like leaving my daughter, but it's something that's expected of you if you're a single parent in the military," she said.

The soldiers leaving Fort Hood were from the 13th Corps Support Command and the 1st Cavalry Division.

Three-year-old Fernando Vega clings to an M-16 Tuesday as his father, Capt. Luis Vega, says goodbye to family.

Israel to propose general elections

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel will offer general elections in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to select a Palestinian administration to run the territories under Palestinian self-rule, according to newspaper reports today.

The plan would replace one that calls only for municipal elections, made by the previous government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, that Palestinians said was too limited.

The proposal for general elections will be offered in the next round of U.S.-backed peace talks, set for Aug. 24 in Washington, the newspaper reports said. The daily Yedioth Ahronoth said the idea was discussed at a meeting Tuesday by heads of the Israeli negotiating teams.

The office of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who has promised to speed up the peace process, refused to comment on the reports today.

Meanwhile, eight members of the Palestinian negotiating team were leaving for Jordan for discussions on the coming talks.

The autonomy plan is designed to lead to negotiations on the final status of the West Bank and Gaza, which Israel seized from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

The U.S.-sponsored 1978 Camp David Accords, the basis of the peace talks, call for electing Palestinians to negotiate with Israel and also govern during a five-year period of autonomy.

Palestinians had proposed elections for a legislature to operate during autonomy - which would be a strong step toward their ultimate goal, an independent Palestinian state. But they later said they would accept a vote for an administrative body.

The new Israeli proposal would allow Palestinians to elect a council of 13 to 15 members to oversee self-rule, Yedioth said.

The Shamir government proposal called only for elected municipal governments in Palestinian towns and cities.

The daily Hadashot reported that Israel, to prove its sincerity about the negotiations, would present a calendar of dates during autonomy leading to the talks on a permanent status for the occupied lands.

Rabin has said he intends to reach an autonomy agreement with the Palestinians within a year.

The issue of participation by Arabs from east Jerusalem in the talks would be discussed on Rabin's return from a U.S. trip to meet President Bush, Hadashot said. Rabin leaves Thursday for the United States.

Shamir's government opposed the participation of Palestinians from east Jerusalem, saying their presence at the peace talks would raise questions about Israel's sovereignty over the city's Arab sector, annexed by Israel after the 1967 war.

Man in observation after assault

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

A 25-year-old man was listed in good condition at Coronado Hospital after he was allegedly assaulted late Tuesday night.

The man, Rodney J. Rush, 25, address listed as Groom on a Gray County Sheriff's Office report, and as Dumas on hospital records, was reportedly assaulted in a park on Pampa's south side, said Lt. Bill Brainard with the sheriff's office.

Rush was kept in observation overnight at the hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said, and was expected to be released today. His injuries were to the face, head and legs, Brainard said.

Brainard said the Gray County Sheriff's Office is investigating the case as a felony aggravated assault and as a felony criminal mischief to a vehicle.

About 11 p.m. Wednesday, a deputy with the sheriff's office noticed a vehicle driving in the 400 block of South Price Road with a headlight out and with a windshield broken.

The deputy stopped the vehicle and discovered the victim of the assault in a passenger seat. American Medical Transport was dispatched to the scene and Rush was transported to Coronado Hospital.

The driver of the vehicle, Charles Henry Nelson Jr., 28, 1148 Varnon Drive, was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and breath test refusal.

Brainard said the assault victim had been on Pampa's south side and at some point was approached by several men and assaulted. No weapons were believed to have been used in the assault, Brainard said.

The vehicle in which the victim was a passenger also received damage during the alleged assault, Brainard said.

"We don't know how it all happened," Brainard said. "It's been referred to our investigator and she's going to try to sort it all out."

Sheriff's investigator Connie O. Brainard is investigating the incident. Anyone with information on the incident can contact the sheriff's office at 669-8022.

9-1-1 has interpretation capabilities

Local authorities no longer have difficulty assisting residents with emergencies as a result of a language barrier.

Pampa Police Department, Pampa Central Dispatch and the Gray County Sheriff's Office introduced 9-1-1 Telephone Interpreter Services this month.

Beginning Aug. 1, the Pampa Police Department, Pampa Central Dispatch and the Gray County Sheriff's Office 9-1-1 personnel will be able to communicate with callers in more than 140 different languages, Lt. Steve Chance with Pampa police announced in a news release.

"People who do not speak English will understandably have experienced frustrations calling for emergency services," Chance said. "Correspondingly, our people are hindered in their efforts to help when they cannot communicate effectively with callers."

The departments multilingual capability is provided by AT&T Language Line Services.

"I'm pleased to say that we are erasing the language barrier in Pampa and Gray County and improving the quality of emergency services we provide," Chance said.

When dispatchers receive an emergency call from someone who does not speak English, they call Language Line Services special toll free 800 number, he said.

An interpreter is added to the conversation within moments. These services are available through AT&T interpreters who are on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"The first step toward helping people is being able to communicate with them," Chance said.

Situations that require an interpreter are on the increase; not just in metropolitan areas, but throughout the country, he said. More than 40 million visitors from overseas travel the United States each year and as many as 20 million people living in this country speak a language other than English.

Lottery to use recyclable tickets

AUSTIN (AP) — The nation's first fully recyclable lottery tickets will debut later this year following complaints about Texas losers who litter, officials say.

The tickets will be printed on recycled paper and also can be recycled again, said lottery spokesman Steve Levine.

"We're committed to taking innovative steps to help keep Texas free of lottery litter," said State Comptroller John Sharp, who oversees the lottery.

Texas will be the first state to use this type of recyclable instant ticket, according to a letter to Sharp from the ticket manufacturer, Dittler Brothers Inc.

The Texas Lottery will use the recyclable tickets as a pilot project in a holiday season game in December, according to Sharp's office. They will be used in future lottery games if successful, Sharp said.

Success basically will be judged on "consumer acceptance," Levine said. The recyclable tickets, with a duller finish, are "not quite as flashy and fancy," he said.

Jerry Hendrix, executive director of the Austin group Ecology Action, called the idea "outstanding."

"I can't speak for the rest of Texas, but I know Austin has always been really environmentally oriented and they'd be thrilled to death" about such tickets, he said.

A new anti-litter public service campaign also is being developed, Sharp said. People have sent letters complaining about litter generated in conjunction with the lottery, Levine said.

"We've instructed the Lottery's advertising agency to develop a campaign that urges Texans to throw their losing tickets into the trash - or better yet, into the recycling bin," Sharp said.

The Lottery will encourage licensed retailers to provide such bins.

Retailers would have the responsibility of calling someone to recycle the tickets, Levine said. He said printing lottery tickets on recycled paper could stimulate that market.

"You can toss your losing ticket into the recycling bin, and it very well may reappear as a new Texas Lottery ticket somewhere down the line," Sharp said.

Cost of the recyclable tickets to the state is no higher than other tickets, Levine said.

In other lottery news, seven finalists have been picked for the $1 million lottery drawing scheduled for Aug. 13 at the Austin Convention Center.

The people chosen Tuesday are Barbara Rhoades of Big Sandy, Glenn Whiteside of Fairfield, Marie Kelly of Houston, Charles Glidewell of Carrollton, Loy Terry of Waxahachie, Susan Hundt of Corpus Christi and Nettie Newman of Huntsville.

The alternates are Victor Rodriguez of San Antonio, Toni Williams of Roysce City and Bennie Alldredge of Houston.

Lefors school board hires assistant principal

LEFORS — Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees on Tuesday hired a new junior high math teacher who will also serve as assistant principal of the school, said Superintendent Joe Roper.

The board first accepted the resignation of junior high math teacher Kathy Haxton and then went into executive session at 7:10 p.m. to interview Art Brokenbeck, 45.

Brokenbeck was hired for a one-year contract to fill the math teacher position and the assistant principal's position. His annual salary will be $25,500.

"Primarily he will be over in the high school and will assist me with implementing the site based management plan we have to have, and will be involved in discipline," Roper said.

Brokenbeck has worked as a teacher in New Mexico for the past two years and prior to that was in private business. He is a veteran of the U.S. Navy, and served in the Vietnam War. He graduated from West Texas State University with a bachelor's degree in high school English and physical education. He is working on his master's degree and mid-management certificate at West Texas State University.

Brokenbeck is married and has two children.

Lefors school personnel will have an in-service day on Aug. 14, with classes scheduled to start Aug. 17.

U.N. demands prison camp inspections, halts relief flights

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Reports of Serb atrocities have prompted the Security Council to demand international inspection of prison camps in Bosnia, where heavy shelling has forced the United Nations to halt relief flights.

Tuesday's U.N. statement was a response to reports that Serbs are torturing and killing ethnic Croats and Muslims in the war-wracked former Yugoslav republic in what amount to concentration camps.

"The council condemns any such violations and abuses," the Security Council said in a non-binding statement passed at U.S. urging.

Warring factions in former Yugoslavia previously have ignored U.N. cease-fire resolutions, which are supposed to be legally binding, so it remains to be seen whether the International Committee of the Red Cross and other humanitarian agencies will be allowed into detention camps.

A group of Muslim nations led by Turkey called the U.N. statement inadequate and urged the Security Council to take military action if necessary to get relief supplies to Bosnians.

Britain and the United States, fearing a quagmire, have opposed sending troops into the complex ethnic war that broke out after Bosnia-Herzegovina's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29.

Over the weekend, the New York-based newspaper Newsday cited reports of mass execution and starvation of prisoners in camps in Omarska in the republic's northwest and Brcko in its northeast.

A United Nations report published last week said an estimated 11,000 prisoners were at Omarska.

A separate document published by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees cited accounts of guards at Omarska boasting they would "not waste bullets on their detainees, who have no food, water or shelter and who are beaten twice a day." It quoted one guard as saying prisoners would "starve like animals."

Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, a Canadian who recently led U.N. peacekeepers at Sarajevo airport, said Tuesday that he had received complaints from all factions of concentration camp atrocities.

He said the parties began reporting the complaints about five months ago and the pace of the allegations increased about two months ago as the Serbs accelerated "ethnic cleansing" — the expulsion of other ethnic groups from areas they conquer.

"The situation is getting worse, not better," MacKenzie told reporters at the United Nations. But he said it would be "monumentally difficult" for outside powers to impose a military solution.

Nevertheless, Muslim states called for action.

"We would like to see Article 42 (of the U.N. Charter) invoked to provide relief to the people of Bosnia-Herzegovina," said Turkish Ambassador Mustafa Aksin, speaking for his country and Iran, Pakistan, Senegal and Egypt.

Article 42, used to provide the legal basis for the U.S.-led operation that drove Iraq from Kuwait last year, allows "action by air, land or sea forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security."

The United Nations decided to suspend the humanitarian airlift to Sarajevo, the besieged Bosnian capital, after shelling shut down the city's airport three times on Tuesday.

"These attacks on the airport, which appear to have been deliberate, have jeopardized the safety of both United Nations personnel and aircraft as well as the security of humanitarian supplies," Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said in a statement.

On the recommendation of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and the commander of U.N. forces in Yugoslavia, Boutros-Ghali ordered a 72-hour suspension of the airlifts effective Tuesday evening.

Bosnian Muslims and Croats claim Serbs run 45 concentration camps holding at least 70,000 people. Serbs claim about 40,000 of their people are currently jailed in Muslim and Croat camps.

Ruza Glavas, grandmother of one of the two children killed by snipers as they were being evacuated on Saturday, received medical attention as she lies wounded in the Lions Cemetery in Sarajevo, Tuesday. Five mortars fell during the funeral of the two children and the grandmother was rushed to the local hospital by foreign press covering the event.

The United States has backed unsuccessful attempts by the Red Cross to gain access to the Serb-run camps. On Monday, the Bush administration condemned the torture and killing it said was going on in the Serb-run camps.

But Bush administration officials appeared Tuesday to play down the degree of knowledge U.S. officials have about the camps.

Thomas Niles, assistant secretary of state for Europe, said the State Department "cannot confirm ... that these detention facilities ... are being used for systematic torture and murder of the people detained."

Niles also told a House committee hearing that the United States is prepared to use naval and air power to help deliver humanitarian supplies, but is not prepared to endorse broader intervention.

"Historical experience with other armies in Bosnia-Herzegovina does not suggest this is a place one would want to get involved in," Niles said.

Primaries: Women win nominations, more incumbents lose

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
AP National Writer

The women's march on the Senate continues: Gloria O'Dell of Kansas and Geri Rothman-Serot of Missouri won Democratic primaries in their neighboring states, becoming the eighth and ninth women to gain Senate nominations so far this year.

Both face Republican incumbents who won easy victories in their own primaries Tuesday — Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and freshman Sen. Christopher Bond of Missouri.

"I think it's much more than the year of the woman," Ms. Rothman-Serot said in her victory speech. "It's the year of change, of very angry people who have the backbone to fight and stand up for the middle class."

It was a night of unwelcome change for two House incumbents, Dick Nichols of Kansas and Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, who were ousted by challengers. They became the 14th and 15th congressmen to lose primary races this year.

And in another historic change, black candidates made inroads in court-ordered legislative races in Mississippi.

The state with the biggest slate of races was Missouri, where state Attorney General William Webster won a bitterly contested Republican gubernatorial primary over Secretary of State Roy Blunt and state Treasurer Wendell Bailey.

His fall opponent will be Lt. Gov. Mel Carnahan, the winner of a Democratic race over St. Louis Mayor Vince Schoemehl, who offered one of the most unvarnished concession speeches in memory.

"We did not do well anywhere," Schoemehl told supporters at a St.

Louis union hall. "We did not do well in the St. Louis area, we did not do well in Kansas City, we did not do well anywhere across the state. We kind of took a risk that people would want a change. Apparently they didn't."

President Bush's cousin George Herbert Walker III missed the opportunity to extend the family's political fortunes when he lost a GOP congressional primary to state House Minority Leader James Talent. Talent will challenge freshman Democratic Rep. Joan Kelly Horn in suburban St. Louis.

The victories of women candidates in Kansas and Missouri made this year's class of women senatorial candidates nearly the largest ever. The most women to win Senate nominations in one year was 10 in 1984, according to the Center for the American Woman and Politics at Rutgers University.

Several more women are running in primaries still to be held. Of the nine to win nominations so far this year, eight are Democrats.

O'Dell, a longtime political aide in Kansas, defeated Baptist minister Fred W. Phelps by better than 2-to-1 — 69 percent to 31 percent — to win the Democratic nomination.

She made it clear from the start that her race against Dole — one of the most powerful members of the Senate — would be a classic outsider-insider battle. But even in a year of insurgents, hers will be a steep uphill fight.

"He's one of the reasons we're in the mess we're in," she said. "Bob Dole has gotten so caught up in affairs of galactic importance that he has lost his concern for the individual people of Kansas."

Dole had little trouble defeating his primary challenger, Richard Rodewald, a retired General Motors automobile plant employee. Dole captured 80 percent of the GOP vote.

"The people of Kansas will have a clear choice in November," he said in a statement.

Missouri's Bond swamped his GOP opponent, protest candidate Wes Hummel, 84 percent to 16 percent. But he faces a more difficult fall campaign against Rothman-Serot, who burst from a dense primary field to claim 35 percent of the vote — more than triple that of her closest competitor.

Bond promised Republicans that he would bring unity to their party, beset by a bruising governor's primary. Rothman-Serot promised more bruises.

"I think this is a year of people, men and women, being very angry and very upset," she said.

That was apparently the case for Vander Jagt, a 26-year House veteran who is chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, and Nichols, a freshman GOP congressman running in a newly drawn district in Wichita.

Businessman Peter Hoekstra, a political newcomer who campaigned on his bicycle, captured 46 percent of the vote in a three-way race. Vander Jagt, who was accused of losing touch with his constituency, came in second with 40 percent.

"There is a ferocious tide against incumbents running across the country and I could not swim strongly enough to offset it," he said in a statement.

In Kansas, state Sen. Eric Yost defeated Nichols 45 percent to 34 percent. Nichols moved from his McPherson home to a Wichita apartment in June and was labeled a carpetbagger by Yost.

Thousands of ANC supporters march on government headquarters

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela led 100,000 chanting and singing supporters in the largest ever march on the capital building today to demand that a multiracial interim government replace the white administration.

The march was the latest in a series of African National Congress protests calling for the removal of President F.W. de Klerk's white government. De Klerk emerged on a balcony of the government headquarters to briefly survey a crowd draped in ANC colors and waving signs calling for him to step down.

"The campaign for peace and democracy must become a tidal wave," Mandela told the roaring throng. "An interim government of national unity is an urgent and critical step."

The march followed a two-day strike deemed a "resounding victory" by the ANC, the country's largest black political group. Millions of blacks returned to work today.

The ANC launched its protest campaign in June when it broke off black-white negotiations to protest growing political violence.

As conditions for resuming talks, the ANC wants a greater government effort to end political violence and moves toward establishing a multiracial interim government by year's end.

De Klerk has said that only negotiations, not mass protests, will resolve the country's political crisis. After this week's demonstrations, the ANC campaign is expected to be scaled down. Negotiations are likely to resume in coming weeks.

The marchers today danced in the street and sang protest songs as they made their way to the Union Buildings, the government headquarters.

Many were dressed in the ANC's green, gold and black colors, and some carried signs that read, "De Klerk Must Go," and "People Power Now."

The ANC's ally, the South African Communist Party, also participated, with members waving large red flags emblazoned with a hammer and sickle.

Standing on a garden terrace in front of the Union Buildings, ANC leaders raised a green, gold and black banner on a makeshift flagpole, and demonstrators sang "God Bless Africa," the anthem of the black opposition movement.

De Klerk watched briefly from his balcony at the Union Buildings, then went back inside.

"The ANC and its allies remain committed to the search for a negotiated resolution," said Mandela, who was wearing a track suit and a baseball cap.

But he said the ANC would not return to black-white constitutional talks until "practical steps are taken by the government to curb the violence which is ravaging the lives of our people."

A large police contingent looked on, but officials said they had no plans to intervene as long as the march remained peaceful.

In addition to the Pretoria march, the ANC organized demonstrations in Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban and other cities today.

In Cape Town, some 20,000 ANC backers marched seven miles from the back township of Langa to city hall. Regional ANC leader Allan Boesak said the rally was the largest in Cape Town since Mandela's release from prison in February 1990.

While protests this week have attracted strong support, earlier demonstrations were sparsely attended, prompting ANC hard-liners to tone down their rhetoric.

Business Day, the country's leading financial daily, said discussions on a multiracial interim government and a new constitution could be restarted within two weeks.

The newspaper, citing an unidentified government source, said arrangements for a transitional government probably would not be ready until early next year.

De Klerk's government remains in control despite the demonstrations and political violence that has claimed some 8,000 black lives in the past three years.

Stealth fighter crashes

ALÁMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — An F-117A stealth fighter crashed and burned in the desert, destroying an unoccupied trailer home, authorities said. The pilot ejected without serious injury.

The $46 million radar-evading plane from nearby Holloman Air Force Base was on a training mission when it went down in the foothills about eight miles from the base shortly before 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, the Air Force and State Police said.

The cause of the crash was under investigation, base spokesman Bob Pepper said. The Air Force sealed off the crash site and declared it a "national security area."

Flaming debris damaged two other mobile homes, including one from which a tenant fled unscathed, said Don Scott, who owns the three trailers. He said he had been using the mobile home that was destroyed as a storage building.

The pilot, Capt. John B. Mills, was taken to the base hospital with apparently minor injuries, Pepper said. No other injuries were reported.

The black, arrowhead-shaped F-117A is manufactured by Lockheed Corp. and was used in the Persian Gulf War and the invasion of Panama.

There have been at least three known crashes of the single-pilot fighter — one crash when Lockheed was testing the jet, and two fatal accidents in California and Nevada in 1986 and 1987.

Censored Air Force reports said that pilot fatigue and disorientation may have been a factor in those two crashes.

Opinion

Vote should not hinge on economic program

The election now seems to be hinged on the economy. Other issues remain important, but when people are out of work, they put aside most other concerns and ask, "Whom do I trust to get me a job?"

It shouldn't be that way. The Constitution includes no provision for government influence on the economy, leaving matters to the people. Unfortunately, in modern times government controls the economy to such a great extent the president has become the economic point man.

How would Bill Clinton act as president? In his acceptance speech, he called for "An America in which middle class families' incomes - not their taxes - are going up....An America in which the rich are not soaked - but the middle class is not drowning, either." Translation, in Clinton's words: "And, yes, an America in which the wealthiest - those making over $200,000 a year - are asked to pay their fair share..." through tax increases.

On socialized medicine, he wants an America in which "we tell all our people: Your government will have the courage - finally - to take on the health-care profiteers and make health care affordable for every family." Translation: price controls such as those that have ruined Canada's health care system and, ultimately, socialized medicine.

The Wall Street Journal has pointed out that, as bad as such prescriptions are for wasting more of taxpayers' money, there is a little more sense of reality than in past Democratic offerings. Clinton is at least aware of what his economic guru, Robert Reich, called the "global economy." And Clinton favors the U.S.-Mexico Free Trade Agreement.

There is another factor: reality. The fact is, government "investment" doesn't work. Americans already send a whopping $5,000 per child on public schooling. The number soars to $7,000 per child in Washington, D.C., a bog of illiteracy and juvenile crime. "Public investment" - spending more taxpayers' money - won't work.

The U.S. government simply cannot tax and spend any more. The 1990 tax increase, agreed to by both Clinton's fellow Democrats, who control Congress, and President Bush, a Republican, sank the economy. With a $4 trillion debt - that's $4,000,000,000,000 - that government really can't borrow any more without risking bankruptcy.

Therefore, whether Clinton or Bush sits in the Oval Office next January, some tough decisions will have to be made, including almost certainly tax cuts and spending cuts. Democrats have the John Kennedy legacy of tax cuts leading to economic growth, Republicans the Ronald Reagan legacy of tax cuts leading to economy growth. Neither party, alas, recently has much of a legacy of spending cuts.

Whatever the rhetoric, and whichever candidate wins in November, reality will assert itself: Government must shrink.

"My position on family values? Hey, great question! Let me talk to my staff here and I'll get back to you on that."

Another Chernobyl?

WASHINGTON - Bob Graham and Joe Lieberman were on one side of a long table. The expert witnesses were on the other side. Between them lay an ominous question: Is the former Soviet Union likely to experience another Chernobyl disaster?

The witnesses were of one mind. The answer is yes. It could happen at any time.

The two senators, Graham of Florida and Lieberman of Connecticut, served as a subcommittee on July 22. For nearly three hours they heard some grimly sobering commentary from experts on nuclear power.

This is the situation. On April 26, 1986, an explosion ripped apart the No. 4 reactor at the Ukrainian generating plant in Chernobyl. For the next four years the Soviet Union covered up the consequences. Moscow insisted that only 24 - sometimes 34 - persons had died. Only 209 cases of illness had occurred.

Since the collapse of the communist empire, the world has learned a good deal more. At least 7,000 persons, most of them cleanup workers, are believed to have died of nuclear radiation. Ukrainian doctors have reported three times the usual number of thyroid cancer cases among children.

Other disturbing reports involve miscarriages and genetic malformations. Because the medical data were collected inconsistently, under different protocols, exact figures cannot be confidently cited, but the radiation damage, especially to children, is severe. The Dnieper River, water supply for 35 million persons, is contaminated. Some cropland is still too hot to be cultivated. The consequences no longer can be concealed. This was indeed a disaster.

James J. Kilpatrick

The doomed Chernobyl reactor was of a design known to engineers as RBMK. The design, said one witness, is "inherently very poor." Another witness called it "hopeless." It should be emphasized, thankfully, that RBMK reactors operate only in the former Soviet Union and its satellites in Eastern Europe. There are none at all in the United States or in other Western nations.

But 57 remain in operation in the Commonwealth of Independent States and Eastern Europe. They cannot be shut down. Their electric power is vitally important to the struggling nations. In Lithuania and Hungary, half the electric power comes from nuclear plants. Ukraine, Byelorussia and others lack the capital or borrow power to build new plants or to substitute gas turbines for the unsafe nuclear fuel.

Murray Feshbach of Georgetown University told the subcommittee that the hazard affects not only the CIS and Eastern Europe, but also the Far East, Canada and the United States. The remaining reactors "are potential accidents waiting to happen."

The situation is extremely dangerous. Immediately after the explosion, cleanup crews dumped 5,000 tons of sand, clay and lead on the site. In the months that followed, another 14,000 tons were piled upon the plant. The material formed a lava-like sarcophagus over 400,000 pounds of nuclear fuel.

The sarcophagus is deteriorating rapidly. Birds, insects and animals live and feed within the sarcophagus and carry radioactive material beyond the building. Radioactive releases vary with the weather. Edward Purvis III of Los Alamos, a nuclear engineer, found it encouraging that natural processes of decay have reduced levels of released radiation to 15 to 20 percent of the original levels, but he added:

"Twenty percent of an awful lot is still an awful lot." Some things can be done. On July 2, the Senate voted for an amendment to the energy appropriation bill. Sponsored by Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, the amendment commits the United States to providing immediate technical assistance in the field of nuclear safety.

Much of the Chernobyl disaster resulted from operational errors by employees who had not been trained to the rigorous standards of safety required in the United States. It will not cost a great deal to improve their training. Security could be significantly enhanced, said Wallop, simply by getting plant supervisors to lock some key doors.

At this remote distance, it is hard to imagine another Chernobyl. Nuclear plants within the United States have achieved a virtually perfect safety record. Nuclear-powered ships have performed superbly. There is no reason to worry about a Chernobyl Disaster here. The whole world has reason to worry about another Chernobyl there.

Timothy Jay of North Adams State College has written a book called "Cursing in America."

A serious look at profanity from both the psychological and linguistic points of view.

The author notes that censors are being phased out on all TV networks. The Standards and Practices Departments are being dismantled.

With increasing cable competition, anything goes.

Jay's book includes interesting statistical tables.

On campus, for example, you will hear the most cuss words from the athletic coach.

Next in line for the most cuss words is the school janitor. He notes that college students in a dorm room gathering will talk dirty where most would not when alone or with a girlfriend.

"Cursing in America" includes a chronology of the evolution of cursing in movies.

In the 1940s there was none.

In the 1950s there was one instance, in the movie "Rebel Without a Cause."

During the 1960s in two movies, "Easy Rider" and "The Graduate," 25 bad words were included.

In the 1970s researchers counted 197.

In the 1980s 579.

Part of the problem is with the movie rating system.

A "G" rating is said to diminish attendance by young people so movie makers may go out of their way to insert just enough nudity or profanity to get a "PG" rating.

It's encouraging to find an author seeking to deal with this subject dispassionately.

Very many Americans are offended by what they hear and see on TV but are disinclined to be categorized with humorless, overly sensitive activists who jump on any issue, denouncing those opposed with emotional and often intemperate nouns and adjectives.

I have tried with these words to mention Mr. Jay's observations dispassionately.

But our beautiful language has been such a good friend to the Harveys, and it does hurt to hear a friend profaned.

Mr. Jay makes no effort to relate cause and effect but notes that dirty words account for 8 percent of college student conversations, 3 percent of adult conversations on the job and 13 percent of adult leisure conversation.

Doesn't our nation's much-vaunted protection of the rights of minorities in this instance leave the 87 percent majority victims of discrimination?

What a new GOP veep could bring

Muhammad Ali, at the height of his pugilistic audacity, shrugged off all opponents with this impish disdain: "They've got two chances, slim and none, and slim just left town."

Slim hasn't left town yet, but his bags are busily being packed by George Bush and Dan Quayle. Before Bush and Quayle are counted out, however, any one of four events could occur:

•Bush may discover a moral justification to bomb Iraq.

•The unemployment rate could dip to 6.5 percent instead of soaring by November to 8.5 percent.

•An even worse "oh-my-god" Bill Clinton scandal could be unearthed.

•Bush could finally be persuaded - as he was when he agonizingly let John Sununu go - that "Dan Quayle is a re-election albatross who can strangle Republicans into a humiliating anonymity."

Of those contingencies, Bush, alone, controls only the fourth.

But to replace Quayle just before the Republican National Convention leaves Bush's trustworthiness open to question and makes him susceptible to four defeat-threatening negatives.

•It would be an explicit admission that Bush's close friend and born-again campaign manager, Jim Baker, was right all along in judging Quayle to be a talking Barbie doll.

•It would be an implicit confession that Bush made a mistake.

•It would grievously antagonize GOP right-wingers - to the point that they might boycott the election.

Chuck Stone

"It would fly in the face of the way previous 20th century Republican presidents achieved success: All who were re-elected did it with the same ticket (Eisenhower-Nixon, Nixon-Agnew and Reagan-Bush).

Because Bush was the lower half of one of those successes, he understandably would wince at the prospect of replacing Quayle, whom he genuinely likes, despite Quayle's persona as an airhead.

But that's precisely why Bush likes him. The last thing any president needs is a vice president who thinks too much. A cognitively overactive Lyndon B. Johnson gave John F. Kennedy a fit.

That so many Republican legislative and executive branch pooh-bahs are openly discussing - and leaking to the press - their desire to replace Dan Quayle may attest more to a rearrangement of the deck chairs on the Titanic than to jumping to a safer ship.

Having made the case against Bush replacing Dan Quayle, I still contend that history and current events require exactly that Draconian decision. Would any Quayle replacement help the ticket?

Well, a few would - in much the same way that Al Gore ennobled the Democratic ticket.

In this "curiouser and curiouser" year of the on-again, off-again Ross Perot; the involvement of the "new media," which now dominates the political process; and the solidly uncommitted 20 percent of the electorate hungering for leaders of audacious courage, Bush can still emerge as a national hero.

Three possible veeps come immediately to mind: Gen. Colin Powell; Kansas Sen. Nancy Kassebaum; and Georgia Rep. Newton Leroy Gingrich.

The first would bring excitement to the ticket. But Powell's anointment also would smack of crass opportunism. It could backfire.

Kassebaum, a solid Midwestern moderate, a daughter of GOP icon Alf Landon, and a universally respected legislator, would bring all kinds of demographic balance to the GOP ticket.

Gingrich, who barely escaped a bruising primary, is considered one of Congress' most divisive forces. But he is far more intelligent than Quayle. Like Gore, he is a fortysomething Southerner who could compete for the old Confederacy's 147 electoral votes; like Clinton, he is a charismatic scholar. (He has a Ph.D. in European history.)

All three would add to Bush's re-election effort the one quality that Quayle is fiendishly subtracting from it: credibility.

But in this age of the new media, there's one candidate, ignored by pundits so far, who could electrify the campaign: Iowa Rep. Fred Gandy. I'll take the "Love Boat" "Gopher" over the "Can't spell 'potatoe'" albatross anytime.

Official says Escobar hideout may be spotted

By STEVEN GUTKIN
Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — U.S. reconnaissance planes have ended their participation in the search for Pablo Escobar with no indication that authorities are ready to capture the fugitive drug lord.

In a possible sign of a resurgence of drug-related violence, a car bomb exploded in the parking lot of Medellin shopping center, wounding six people, police said, and another bomb was deactivated in the southwestern city of Cali.

Escobar sent a faxed statement to radio stations denying responsibility for the bombing, which he blamed on Gilberto Rodriguez Orejuela, leader of the rival Cali drug cartel.

The U.S. Air Force and Drug Enforcement Administration sent planes last week to help search for Escobar.

Foreign Minister Nohemi Sanin said Tuesday the operation had ended, apparently without success. He did not say specifically the U.S. aircraft had left Colombia.

The flights provoked anti-U.S. protests and complaints from Colombian congressmen, who said the use of the planes violated Colombia's sovereignty.

The planes, equipped with aerial photography equipment, night vision scopes and radio interception gear, could be heard buzzing above Medellin, Colombia's second-largest city, for several days.

News reports said authorities had intercepted a radio communication from Escobar, but Fernando Brito, Colombia's chief of intelligence services, refused to confirm the report in an interview with The Associated Press.

Asked about reports Escobar was believed hiding in Puerto Triunfo, a jungle area 90 miles north of Bogota, he responded, "That is one of the areas where he can move about."

Brito said the government will "only accept an unconditional surrender" from Escobar, who escaped from a resort-style jail near Medellin on July 22 after troops tried to move him to a military prison. Nine cartel associates also fled.

Escobar — who reportedly managed to control his multibillion-dollar drug empire from behind bars — has offered to surrender if he returns to the same jail and receives further guarantees he will not be extradited to the United States.

Escobar and 14 close associates surrendered last year in exchange for promises of no extradition and lenient court treatment.

The government arrested 26 jail guards and fired several senior officials after the embarrassing escape, which was a severe blow to Colombia's anti-drug fight.

Authorities who visited the jail in Envidado, Escobar's hometown, reported finding a display of luxuries, including a widescreen television, a waterbed, a bar and Jacuzzi. Escobar also allegedly held trials in jail in which he sentenced rival traffickers to death.

Escobar smuggled in cordless telephones, fax machines, computers and weapons, officials said. Attorney General Gustavo de Greiff said he found pornographic movies and photographs of jail parties where inmates smuggled in women and guards in tuxedos served drinks.

Reporters have been barred from visiting the jail.

Brito said authorities were not aware of the degree to which Escobar had taken over his own jail.

"We thought it was under total control," he said.

Wildfires drive hundreds from their homes in Oregon

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

ROGUE RIVER, Ore. (AP) — Reinforcements were called in today to help battle a wildfire after wind gusts pushed the flames to within four miles of this southwestern Oregon town and forced the evacuation of about 200 homes.

The 4,055-acre blaze was one of dozens of wildfires that have burned more than 260,000 acres across the West so far this week.

About 9,000 firefighters were at work Tuesday in California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Nevada.

A few suffered injuries, mostly minor.

In Oregon, wind fanned the flames through 4,055 acres of brush and timber outside Rogue River, destroying two homes and threatening 200 others.

The hundreds of evacuees won't be able to return home for at least two days, Jeff Schwanke of the state Forestry Department told about 100 people gathered in the Rogue River High School library Tuesday night.

"When that thing takes off like that, it is not the place to be," he said.

Schwanke called in 20 new fire crews, bringing the number of firefighters battling the blaze to 1,200. The Federal Emergency Management Agency said it authorized up to $2 million from a disaster relief fund to fight the fire.

Eighty miles to the east, firefighters fought a 12,000-acre fire in the Winema National Forest. It grew from 8,700 acres earlier Tuesday when afternoon wind pushed flames to within a mile of a housing subdivision. Deputies went door to door to evacuate 50 homes.

"It's moving so fast at this point, they're not able to keep a handle on the maps," said Forest Service spokeswoman Laura Allen.

Gov. Barbara Roberts invoked the state's Conflagration Act, authorizing the mobilization of firefighters statewide.

In southern Idaho, about 2,500 firefighters battled dozens of blazes, including a 17,000-acre brush fire that burned eight homes and forced the evacuation of 100 others in a subdivision near Hailey.

Gov. Cecil Andrus flew to the scene Tuesday evening. Smoke was so thick that the local airport was closed and Andrus had to land south of the city.

"After six years of drought, we have an extremely hazardous fire situation, and I'm afraid this series of fires is just the beginning," said disaster commander Lorin Nielsen of the Bannock County Sheriff's Department.

Air tankers continued pounding a 5-day-old fire burning in more than 6,000 acres of wilderness about 75 miles northeast of Boise. Almost 1,200 firefighters slowly gained ground on the flames.

Fires burned more than 105,000 acres near Craters of the Moon National Monument in eastern Idaho. Officials hoped to have the blaze reined in by Friday.

"We're probably looking at a 110-square-mile area to put a line around," park spokesman Andy Payne said. "That's a lot of country to cover."

In northern Nevada, a 20,000-acre wildfire forced the evacuation of 100 people in the old gold-mining town of Jarbidge.

Firefighters in eastern Washington packed up Tuesday after extinguishing fires that burned more than 30,000 acres since Saturday.

And the last of 300 people evacuated from three hamlets in California's Sierra Nevada were allowed to return home Tuesday after an 8,000-acre fire was contained.

Release of tethered satellite hits snag; astronauts try again

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts today reeled in some of the cord towing a half-ton satellite above the shuttle to try to clear a jam in the 12 1/2-mile line.

Payload commander Jeffrey Hoffman this morning slowly spooled in about 80 feet of the 850 feet of tether connecting the Italian Space Agency's satellite to the shuttle.

NASA managers hoped by backing up, then rolling out the tether faster than before, they could free the line from where they believed it was caught, as if on a balky fishing reel.

The snag forced NASA to put on hold a risky experiment in which the astronauts are supposed to generate electricity by dragging the full length of the slender fiber-and-wire cord through Earth's magnetic field at 17,500 mph.

NASA added an eighth day to Atlantis' mission because of the problem and a delay in releasing another satellite over the weekend. The flight will end Saturday.

The astronauts were supposed to unreel the half-ton Italian satellite Tuesday on 12 1/2 miles of the cord, which is as thick as a shoelace.

But the cord unwound in fits and starts, and after three attempts, the astronauts had managed to reel out the satellite only 843 feet.

Mission Control said tension may have caused a snag on the reel. NASA mission operations director Randy Stone likened the problem to a fishing line caught among other coils on a reel.

Such a problem was not seen in training, said Sid Saucier, space systems project manager at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Twice during the attempt to unreel the spacecraft, the satellite swung over the shuttle on its cord.

But commander Loren Shriver fired the shuttle's jets to steady the tether and avert the possibility of an out-of-control satellite wrapping its cord around the spaceship. And Stone said the astronauts were never in danger.

If they do get into trouble, they can activate small explosives to cut the satellite loose.

Scientists expect the tether will generate up to 5,000 volts of electricity during a planned 30-hour test. Such cords could someday be used to power space stations, propel spacecraft and lower packages to Earth from orbit, scientists say.

Maurizio Candi, mission scientist for the satellite, said that the satellite was using its battery and fuel in the meantime and might not gather all the scientific data planned even if it were deployed to the full length.

NASA has tested tethered spacecraft just twice before, during the Gemini program in 1966. But those experiments involved mere 100-foot nylon lines.

The braided cord used for this mission is made of heavy-duty fiber, Teflon and copper.

NASA and the Italian Space Agency have $379 million invested in the project. Italian scientists have been working on the concept for 20 years, and the astronauts have trained for this mission for several years.

Over the weekend, a communications problem with a European Space Agency research satellite prevented the craft from being freed on time.

And after its release Sunday, the $213 million Eureka satellite got stuck in a dangerously low orbit, where it remained today.

Report: Several officers indicted in King beating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least three police officers have been indicted on federal charges of violating Rodney King's civil rights in the videotaped beating of the motorist last year, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The newspaper, citing unidentified sources, said that a grand jury returned the indictments Tuesday but that they were ordered sealed until today.

The sources would not say which three officers were indicted, but at least three members of the Los Angeles police force — Sgt. Stacey Koon and Officers Laurence Powell and Timothy Wind — had received letters from the U.S. attorney's office identifying them as targets of the investigation, the paper said.

Koon, Powell, Wind and Officer Theodore J. Briseno were acquitted in state court last spring on assault and brutality charges in the beating.

Briseno broke ranks with his colleagues during the trial, saying he tried to stop the beating because the others were getting "out of control."

The April 29 acquittals touched off the Los Angeles riots and prompted the federal investigation of the King beating.

Legal experts told the Times that the indictments would probably charge officers with violating at least one of two federal laws.

One makes it a crime to conspire to "injure, oppress, threaten or intimidate" a citizen in the free exercise of that person's rights, which include the right to be safe from unreasonable search and seizure and the right to be protected from harm while under arrest.

The offense carries up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The other law makes it illegal for a government official to deprive a person of rights on account of race. King is black; the officers are white.

Alternative drinks spice entertaining

By Marialisa Calta

I have two friends, Cornelia Denker and Nona Estrin, who are annoyingly good at entertaining. They throw large parties on low budgets, for crowds of friends who come expecting good food and fun and leave with every expectation fulfilled.

In observing their parties, I've noticed that what Cornelia and Nona share is not only the ability to make people feel at home and the talent to assemble a great menu, but a creative spirit when it comes to drink. These days, with more and more people going the non-alcoholic route, it behooves a host or hostess to offer an interesting alternative.

My repertoire runs out after iced tea and sparkling water. But my friends concoct complex punches that taste of mint and lemons, black tea and spices. These are beverages that have guests chatting as convivially around the punch bowl as if it held a magnum of champagne. Of course, my friends swear their concoctions are not premeditated — but "just thrown together" depending on what they have on hand. Hooey! I need RECIPES. And I've set out to find them.

New England, it seems, is a hotbed of beverages. At haying time in Vermont, where I live, farmers in the old days were prone to drink a rather vile-sounding concoction called "switchel," which I like to think of as an early version of Gatorade. It was made with water, molasses, vinegar, ginger and brown sugar (although recipes varied) — and sometimes rum, which probably improved the taste to no end. Along with switchel, there are a variety of shrubs (a drink of fruit, vinegar and sugars) and punches that have been passed down through the ages.

My first stop on the beverage trail was "The Horn of the Moon Cookbook," written by Ginny Callan, the first proprietor of The Horn of the Moon, a vegetarian restaurant in Montpelier, Vt., which, under Callan's management, served a delightful concoction called "We Drink It." Callan shared her recipe with me, which turns out to be nothing more than equal parts of grape juice, fresh squeezed orange juice and sparkling water, served with a wedge of lime. The sum, however, is more than the parts, and it's a wonderful alternative to iced tea.

I also obtained her recipe for wedding punch, which is a delicious and simple drink that can be served to the masses.

"The Fearrington House Cookbook," a virtual manual for elegant living, was another source for interesting drinks. From this cookbook, written by Jenny Fitch, proprietor of the Fearrington House Inn and Restaurant in Pittsboro, N.C., I garnered two recipes, including one for coffee punch, which can be served in the morning for a rather spectacular brunch beverage. And, of course, my friends at the New England Culinary Institute in Vermont helped me out with delectable Pineapple-Coconut Frappe.

WEDDING PUNCH

- 2 gallons apple cider or apple juice
- 3 quarts grape juice
- 3 quarts pineapple-coconut juice
- 3 quarts sparkling water
- 2 sliced strawberries
- 2 sliced oranges
- 3 sliced limes

Fearrington House fruit punch is the perfect base for champagne punch or vodka punch.

In a very large mixing bowl, combine all juices with sparkling water. Stir well. Transfer to a punch bowl, garnish with fruit and add ice. Yield: 100 servings.

• Recipe from "The Horn of the Moon Cookbook," by Ginny Callan (Harper & Row, 1987).

FEARRINGTON HOUSE FRUIT PUNCH

- 8 cups freshly squeezed orange juice
- 1 cup fresh raspberries
- 2 cups sugar
- 4 cups water
- 2 quarts soda water
- 2 quarts ginger ale
- 2 46-ounce cans pineapple juice
- 1 46-ounce can grapefruit juice
- 1 ice mold (optional)

Put orange juice through a strainer to remove pulp. Press raspberries through sieve to remove seeds.

Make a simple syrup by combining the sugar and water over heat, boiling until sugar is dissolved.

Combine syrup with all ingredients and chill. Add ice mold (if using) right before serving. Yield: 100 servings.

• Recipe from "The Fearrington House Cookbook," by Jenny Fitch (Ventana Press, 1987).

This can be used as a base for champagne punch or vodka punch. The author suggests an ice mold in which ferns and miniature roses are frozen. Apple slices for garnish are also a nice touch.

COFFEE PUNCH

- 2 cups sugar
- 2 quarts strong, brewed coffee
- 1/2 pint heavy cream
- 1 cup chocolate syrup
- 1 quart vanilla ice cream

Dissolve sugar in hot coffee. Cool. Freeze some of this mixture in a ring mold to use in the punch bowl and chill the rest.

Just before serving, whip the cream. Mix the chilled coffee with the whipped cream, chocolate syrup and ice cream; cut into chunks. Stir well and pour into large punch bowl. Add the frozen coffee ring. Yield: 30 1-cup servings.

• Recipe from "The Fearrington House Cookbook," by Jenny Fitch (Ventana Press, 1987).

PINEAPPLE-COCONUT FRAPPE

- 2 cups ice cubes
- 3/4 cup pineapple juice and the juice of 1 coconut or 1 cup pineapple-coconut juice
- 1/2 ripe banana
- 1/2 cup frozen blackberries
- 1/2 fresh strawberries, blackberries and coconut shreds, for garnish (optional)
- 3 ounces rum (optional)

In a blender, puree ice cubes with rest of ingredients until smooth. Add rum (if using) and stir. Garnish with coconut shreds, fresh blackberries and strawberries (if using) and serve. Yield: Serves 2 generously.

Shuttle chow becomes five star for foreigners

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — When Atlantis' astronauts head for space on Friday, the shuttle pantry will be stuffed with Parmesan and Swiss cheese, Swiss crackers, Swiss muesli and Swiss chocolate.

Oh yes, and truffles anyone? Shuttle chow becomes haute cuisine, it seems, when foreigners fly. And more and more of them are flying.

Atlantis astronauts Claude Nicollier of Switzerland and Franco Malerba of Italy will be the 11th and 12th non-Americans to fly on a shuttle, and the fourth and fifth this year. They will share the cabin with five Americans who will be snacking on graham crackers and peanut butter.

Nicollier insisted on a box of truffles and other foreign fare for the seven-day mission, during which the crew will release a European scientific satellite and then unreel an Italian satellite connected to the shuttle by 12 miles of electricity-generating cord.

Malerba requested the Parmesan to supplement NASA's freeze-dried fare.

"I'm sure there will be more than one customer for it," said Malerba, who will be the first Italian in space.

The cuisine for the following shuttle flight, in September, is even more exotic, courtesy of Japanese astronaut Mamoru Mohri.

There will be Japanese apples, Japanese mushroom soup, Japanese red rice, Japanese white rice, Japanese rice crackers, tofu, pickled plums, soy sauce, seaweed soup, dried seaweed wrappers and sweet sakura tea.

There also will be seven sets of chopsticks — one per astronaut.

"It could be messy," said shuttle food manager Vickie Kloeris.

In weightlessness, where liquids become floating drops and crumbs flit about like flies, food is a serious affair.

Kloeris and her team of food scientists at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston test virtually every morsel before it goes up.

Mohri, for example, had to switch tofu brands for his week-long trip on Endeavour because his first choice had too much liquid in it. The fluid splashed everywhere when the package was opened aboard a NASA plane that provides brief bursts of weightlessness.

Nicollier had to settle for the most heat-resistant chocolate. There is no refrigerator or freezer aboard the shuttle, and the fresh food is kept in lockers. Behind the lockers are electronics that throw off so much heat that the temperature in the pantry is 75 to 79 degrees.

Kloeris has warned Nicollier to eat his chocolate and cheese fast.

Because of the lack of refrigeration, Mohri will have to fly without one of his favorite foods — sushi.

"It was brought up and I just kind of laughed and went, 'No way,'" Kloeris said.

Anything requiring refrigeration is forbidden. So is alcohol, although French astronaut Patrick Baudry smuggled a bottle of French wine aboard Discovery in 1985. The wine was not opened until after the flight.

Baudry didn't go hungry, at least. He dined on pate, crab mousse, lobster in sauce a l'Amercaine and jugged hare a l'Alsacienne, all prepared per his instructions and canned for flight.

Indeed, most shuttle meals — whether NASA's or French and Japanese chefs' — are canned or freeze-dried: just add water, pop into the shuttle convection oven and voila!

Reviews are mixed, although everyone agrees it's heaven compared to the early days of space travel. Astronauts in the 1960s squeezed gruel into their mouths from toothpaste-like tubes and gobbled bite-sized meat, bread and fruit cubes coated with gelatin to reduce crumbling.

Nowadays, there's a vacuum aboard for messy eaters.

Consumer group says kids' food is mostly junk

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're a nutrition-minded parent, don't base your children's diet on the processed kids' foods that line supermarket shelves, a public interest group says in a report released today.

Only a handful of those brightly packaged foods provides the nutrition kids need for the best possible health, experts gathered by the Center for Science in the Public Interest said in the report.

Among the best are Kellogg's Nutri-Grain Wheat cereal, Tyson Looney Tunes Pasta frozen entrees, Weight Watchers Microwave Popcorn and several varieties of frozen fruit bars, said the committee of experts.

But not a single cookie, frozen dessert, granola bar, hot dog, or luncheon meat met the group's standards.

Most processed foods marketed for children are closer to the junk-food end of the spectrum, said committee members. They urge parents to steer away from processed foods and feed children mostly fresh fruits, vegetables, whole grains and other unprocessed products.

"All too many kids' foods are loaded with fat, salt and sugar, which set the stage for heart disease, cancer and high blood pressure later in life," said Marion Nestle, chair of the Department of Nutrition, Food and Hotel Management at New York University and head of the committee.

"Regrettably, all too many companies pander to children's 'sweet tooth' and 'fat tooth,'" said Michael Jacobson, executive director of CSPI. His group has lobbied the government and food companies for the past 20 years to pay more attention to the effects of food on health.

Nutritionist Jane Hurley, one of his staffers, said that since companies are beginning to market more healthful processed foods for adults, "it's about time they took our children's health as seriously and cut the grease and salt."

The National Food Processors Association, a trade group representing the food makers, said foods should not be rated as "good" or "bad."

"There are only good or bad diets," said Lester Crawford, NFPA's executive vice president for scientific affairs. "All foods can be part of a healthful, balanced diet."

And even though the CSPI committee advises that children avoid processed foods, Crawford says the higher cost of fresh produce and seasonal problems with availability mean many children would have an unbalanced diet if they didn't eat frozen, canned or other processed foods.

CSPI's committee put foods into 19 categories and judged them according to how much fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, added sugar and additives they contained.

Foods that met all the committee's guidelines were labeled

"best." Those that modestly failed one guideline were called "second best."

When a category had no food that qualified for one of the two ratings, the committee identified items as "best of a bad lot" to show the healthiest of the particular group.

The committee included experts on diet and heart disease, cancer, hypertension, dentistry, toxicology, pediatrics and nutrition education.

They were Peter Kwitrovich, Johns Hopkins University; Ellen Lieberman, University of Southern California; Richard Ringel, University of Maryland Medical Center; Bernard Weiss, University of Rochester Medical Center; Gerald Berenson and Theresa Nicklas, Tulane School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine; Gladys Block, University of California-Berkeley; Joan Gussow, Columbia Teachers College; and Herschel Horowitz, National Institute of Dental Research.

Pampa's commercial district develops in early 1900's

The Johnson Mercantile Building was constructed in 1902 by J. F. Johnson of Canadian. He bought the first commercial lots sold in Pampa (Lots 13-24 of Block 15). The property was purchased by J.N. Duncan in 1906, and the name of the store was changed to J.N. Duncan, Hardware and Furniture. The M.E. Moses Variety Store now occupies this location.

The home of Dr. V.E. von Brunow, who came to Pampa in 1903, served as the doctor's office and clinic. It also housed the telephone office with 24 plugs connecting Miami and Panhandle, and it was the third location of the Pampa Post Office.

After the trains left, Fay Martin, telegraph operator for the railroad, brought the mail to the Brunow house in a two-wheeled cart pushed by hand. People gathered to wait for their mail and one man was always asking, "Has the mail been distributed yet?"

Often Mrs. Brunow would cross the vacant lot between the Brunow and Wynne houses for an afternoon visit with Mrs. Wynne. If a rancher came for his mail, Mrs. Brunow would go to her home for his mail and then return to the Wynne house to resume her visit.

At some later time the first building of the Gray County State Bank was constructed on the lot between the Brunow and Wynne houses. The Fairview Cemetery Association met there on May 22, 1909.

The J.S. Wynne house was first occupied by the family of Eli and Georgia (Crawford) Vincent who kept boarders. (Perhaps Beryl and Alice Wynne boarded there when they attended the first Pampa school in 1903-04. The Wynnes moved from their ranch southeast of White Deer in 1907, instead of 1903 as previously stated.)

The Wynnes removed a fence south of their house so that J.C. Studer of Canadian could build Pampa's first meat market between the Wynne house and Ace Harmon's store.

The general merchandise store owned first by Ace Harmon was next owned by Sam Rider and then by C.B. Barnard, who came to the Panhandle around 1890 and grew wheat on a small farm near White Deer. Later Barnard had a combination dry goods and grocery store at 102 South Cuyler. In 1925 he was elected the first president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

The J.C. Rider livery stable at the corner of Foster and Gillespie (Lots 13-16 of Block 6) was a block east of the Cuyler Street "business district." Rider rented teams and vehicles; many of these transported lawyers and other with business at the courthouse to and from Lefors. Ranchers brought their bedrolls if they had to stay overnight. Their food consisted of crackers, cheese and potted ham, or a lunch they brought with them.

Lester Sills, whose daughter Lottie married Alex Schneider, Jr., came to Pampa in 1904.

In about 1904, Sam and Charlie Thomas were responsible for getting the first tractor in the area. It was an International Harvester Mogul and worked on one cylinder. Both the first combines and tractors were introduced by the Thomas brothers who pioneered machinery of all types.

Only six pupils attended the Pampa school in 1904-05. Beryl and Alice Wynne stayed on their ranch near White Deer and there is no information on the other two of the original ten. Miss Lillian Carrington was the teacher, and the trustees were John Chapman, S.C. Case and M.K. Brown.

Mrs. C.A. Tignor kept a copy of a program presented on December 10, 1904, to buy an organ for the schoolhouse. Twelve "thespians" of the town took part, including M.K. Brown, Ashpy Bell, T.V. Lane, Larry Rider, and Katie Vincent. The admission for this entertainment was 25¢ and 15¢. At the close there was a "box supper" for which the women of the community furnished the boxes.

The first section of land in the vicinity of Pampa was sold to settler O.A. Barrett in December of 1904. Barrett's name is on Plat 55 of the Southside Addition to Pampa; he sold this plat to Joe Bowers in 1907. At that time there were only three houses on the south side of town.

Barrett also constructed a building at the corner of West Foster and South Cuyler on the west side of Cuyler Street. C.B. Barnard had his combination grocery and dry good store at 102 South Cuyler. It is speculated that this building housed the Barrett Land Office where the Fairview Cemetery Association met on October 14, 1908.

The corner at 100 South Cuyler has been occupied by the Gray County State Bank (Pampa National Bank in 1930-31), Pampa Drug #2, Perkins Pharmacy, Berry's Pharmacy, Clyde's Pharmacy, Fabric Center, DeJon's Jewelry and State Farm Insurance.

On September 22, 1982 the building was destroyed by a fire which began in the Salvation Army Thrift Store at 102 South Cuyler. At that time, the property belonged to the "Panhandle Towers Company" owned by Joe, "Red" and Bill Hawkins.

Cuyler; and Ace Harmon's general merchandise store, maybe 119 S. Cuyler. Names of the men in the picture were lost in the shuffle of the years, but note the horses and buggies, the men's big hats and the congregation around the general store.

Employers, family urged to 'toughlove' alcoholics

By LISA CORNWELL
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Don was only in his 30s but he believed his fate was to die an alcoholic until his boss used "tough love" by threatening to fire him unless he got help.

Once a tactic encouraged for families of drug users, tough love is finding favor with employers to help workers who have drinking problems. Now a Cleveland agency is taking that a step further, with "Tough Love" advertising.

"Previously, we focused mainly on the chemically dependent person, but this campaign aims at friends, family, co-workers and employers of the alcoholic," said Myrtle Muntz, executive director of Alcoholism Services of Cleveland.

The nonprofit agency is advertising "Tough Love" in television commercials and with posters distributed to the community, including the clergy, lawyers and doctors.

"The ads target this group in an effort to get them to confront alcoholics about their behavior and what it is doing to those around them," Ms. Muntz said.

Don, 36, began drinking at age 14. "My family had begged me to go for help through the years, but it took the real threat of losing my income before I finally decided to take action," said Don, who spoke on condition that his real name not be used.

Sober since 1989, he now regularly attends meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous. He's also been promoted.

Tough love is based on the principle that the way to help an alcoholic quit is to cut off financial and emotional support that indirectly support the addiction.

While such intervention therapy has been around for years, the public service campaign in Cleveland is probably a first, according to the New York-based National Council of Alcohol and Drug Dependency.

"While there have been other campaigns aimed at users and some at family members, this seems to be the broadest based one we've seen," said Paula Roth, the council's director for prevention and education.

The program is unique, said Ms. Roth of the National Council, in its target audience and its use of strongly worded messages.

One TV ad shows a female motorist being pulled over by an officer for driving under the influence. The final close-up shows her behind bars. The message: "Your wife's drinking finally lands her in jail on a DUI. You'd do anything to help her. Leave her there."

Another ad urges employers to tell alcoholics they'll lose their jobs unless they seek treatment. The message: "His wife walked out over his drinking. His friends dropped him. Now, tell him he'll lose the only thing he has left — his job."

These and similar public service announcements were first distributed in May.

"The first day the posters went out, we got 25 calls," Ms. Muntz said.

She said her agency, which helps provide rehabilitation for addicts and their families, annually receives about 10,000 calls seeking help. Half come from family and friends worried about someone with a drinking problem.

"People do not go for help until there is pain, whether it is internal or external," Ms. Muntz said. "We hope that this ad campaign can create external pain by forcing those around the alcoholic to stop their support of the person's addiction."

Don's boss, who asked to be called Dave to protect his employee's identity, didn't have the inducement of such a campaign back in 1989.

"But I think a campaign like this should persuade a lot of employers to take action," Dave said. "If I had seen something like that, I might not have waited as long as I did to force Don to get help."

'COPS' isn't robbing people of their constitutional rights

DEAR ABBY: As a recent European immigrant to the United States, I am shocked and disturbed by the television series "COPS."

Is there not a law within your Constitution that is supposed to protect a citizen's right to privacy? And isn't a person presumed "innocent until proven guilty"?

When police officers burst into a person's home with a television crew to arrest suspects, clearly the rights of the suspects are being violated. And not only the rights of the suspects, but the rights of their families and visitors, too. Where do we draw the line? What right do we have to intrude and expose their misfortune? And what about the children being subjected to public humiliation?

It seems to me that in a nation that claims to be in the forefront of Western democracies, it's paradoxical that a television show like "COPS" is allowed to air. Before the eyes of millions of viewers, some people who are merely suspects are shown being arrested, and denied their constitutional rights.

I would appreciate your opinion, and the opinions of your readers concerning such television programs.

CONCERNED IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR CONCERNED: I checked with the publicist for "COPS," which is produced by Fox Broadcasting, and was assured that the people who are on the show have signed releases. If they do not sign releases, and that segment is to be aired, then the faces are "digitalized" so that the people cannot be identified. In the case of minors, Schedule pick up, orientation dates announced

Pampa High School students may pick up schedules for the 1992 - 1993 school year, Aug. 10 - 12, between the hours of 8:30 - noon, and 1 - 3:30 p.m., in the counselors' office.

New student orientation at Pampa High School is set for 9 a.m. - noon, Aug. 18, in the high school auditorium.

Students new to Pampa Independent School District who will parents or legal guardians sign their releases.

I then checked with Ramona Ripston, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California, who assured me that because the production company has signed releases, it appears that the show is doing nothing illegal or unconstitutional, and no one's rights are being violated.

DEAR ABBY: Your correspondent signed "Offended Old Maid in Lincoln, Neb.," has a bigger problem than an "offensive" limerick, which I thought was cute. To refresh your memory:

"There was an old maid in Duluth
Who wept when she thought of her youth
Remembering the chances
She missed at school dances
And once in a telephone booth."

If "Old Maid's" father left home 50 years ago, her siblings were old enough to have been on their own for the last 35 years! She says she and her sister are "holding down the fort."

What fort? Their mother is dead, and "Old Maid" is in her 60s, so how can she blame her unmarried state on the fact that she raised her siblings 50 years ago? Give me a break!

Instead of apologizing for that limerick, you should have told her to get on with her life. She sounds like she's living in the past and enjoying her martyrdom.

One doesn't have to be married to be fulfilled.

C.J. IN RAINIER, ORE.

be attending Pampa Middle School, sixth, seventh or eighth grade, should register Aug. 4 - 7. The office will be open 9 - 11 a.m. and 1 - 3 p.m. on those days for students needing to register.

At 6:30 p.m., Aug. 18, orientation will be held for those entering sixth grade. Principal Jerome Stewart said all entering sixth graders and their parents are invited to the session.

SUMMER OLYMPICS

Dream Team to meet dress code, clobbers helpless Puerto Rico

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Six games down and two to go, you can fit the Dream Team for its medal now.

Hours before undressing Puerto Rico 115-77 in the Olympic quarterfinals, the players agreed Tuesday to dress in Reebok — not Nike or anything else — on the medals stand Saturday.

The players will be allowed to zip the warmup jackets far enough down to use the collar to cover up the Reebok logo.

Of course, said USA Basketball president Dave Gavitt, that's "in the event (they) win a medal."

As if there is any doubt, "We know we must lose," said Rimas Kurtinaitis of Lithuania, the opponent in Thursday night's semifinal.

A victory then would clinch at least a silver medal, with the gold-medal game to follow Saturday against the winner of the Unified Team-Croatia semifinal.

The Lithuanians feature Sarunas Marciulionis of the Golden State Warriors and 7-foot-3 center Arvidas Sabonis, who had 32 points and 13 rebounds in a 114-96 quarterfinal victory over Brazil.

Kurtinaitis, one of four former Soviet players now playing for Lithuania, said if the 1988 Soviet Olympic champions played the 1988 team of collegians 10 times, "we could beat them once, which we did. If we play this team 10 times, they win 10 times."

The American team of NBA stars now has played Puerto Rico twice and won by 38 points twice, the first time in the Olympic qualifying tournament in Portland, Ore.

"You get up by 25 or 30 points, we've played them before, and the game is essentially over," said David Robinson, who had his best Olympic game with 14 points and 5-for-7 shooting from the field. "You have to be careful. We were just workmanlike throughout the game."

Puerto Rico managed 13-0, 8-0 and 7-0 runs during the game against the Americans, but offered little resistance following a 17-0 U.S. start.

Dave does not deliver in early decathlon events

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Is Dave pulling a Dan?

The decathlon favorite, America's Dave Johnson, got off to a slow start this morning as a busy day of track kicked off at the Olympic stadium. After the first two events, the Pomona, Calif., star was mired in 13th place.

Johnson had only the 21st fastest time in the 100 meters, and tied for 10th in the long jump. Fear not, America — Johnson's best events, including the javelin, are still to come.

Johnson's main competitor, Dan O'Brien of the United States, failed to qualify for the Olympics after blowing the pole vault.

The other track news occurred on the sidelines, where a Unified Team marathoner was nailed for using drugs. Madina Biktagirova, who finished fourth in Saturday's marathon, tested positive for the stimulant norephedrine.

The world's fastest female, American Gail Devers, made it clear today that her gold-medal performance was done clean — regardless of what teammate Gwen Torrence says.

"I resent any accusations that would remotely associate me with the use of performance enhancing drugs," Devers said. "I won the Olympic gold medal fair and square, by beating the best in the world."

Torrence, after finishing fourth, said two of the three runners ahead of her used performance-enhancing drugs. She declined to name names. Devers is also running the 100-meter hurdles.

Tuesday was a day for the Olympic almanac. Some research is needed after Day 11 of the Games.

• It was 1956 when the Americans last won just three medals in boxing. It's happened again.

• It was 1976 when the U.S. men last lost the gold in an Olympic diving event. It's happened here. American women were never shut out of a springboard medal. They were here.

• It was 1980 when the Cubans last joined in Olympic fun. They're back with a vengeance.

Cubans dominated baseball and boxing on Tuesday, ending U.S. gold medal hopes on the diamond while guaranteeing themselves nine medals in the ring. The Chinese ended the American hammerlock in diving, collecting three of the four Barcelona golds with a young, improving team.

"I was real aware of how dominant the U.S. has been," said Scott Donie, the silver medalist behind 16-year-old Sun Shuwei of China. He's now aware that dominance — most of it by Greg Louganis — is over.

Things were very one-sided in baseball, where the Cubans ran their record against the United States to 33-12 over the past six years with a 6-1 victory Tuesday. The Cubans face Taiwan today for the first-ever gold medal in baseball.

"I thought I'd never say it, but those guys are better than we are," losing pitcher Rick Helling said. "They're unbelievable. I was close to perfect all night."

Lakeshore powers into Bambino title game

By MARK SPENCER
Sports Editor

Lakeshore followed a winning gameplan to the letter last night in advancing to tonight's Southwest Regional Bambino Tournament at Optimist Park.

"We wanted to get the big boy in there, have him throw strikes and get him out," Lakeshore pitching coach Donnie Russell said. "We're going to need him later."

The "big boy" for Lakeshore was right hander Bradford Jones who limited Denham Springs, La., to one run on four hits in Lakeshore's 14-1 victory that was called after four innings because of the 10-run rule.

Lakeshore, a team sponsored out of the New Orleans Recreation Department, will play Rogers, Ark., in the tournament championship game at 5:30 tonight. Lakeshore, coming through the loser's bracket of the 11- to 12-year olds' double elimination tournament, will have to beat Rogers twice. A second game is scheduled for 30 minutes after the first if necessary.

"We'll be at about half strength," Russell said of his team's remaining pitchers. "But Bradford's been the man for us this tournament, and he'll probably be the man (Wednesday)."

Jones, a stocky right hander with a fluid delivery, clamped down the Denham Springs hitters from the start giving up only a single run in the first off an RBI single by Denham Springs' third baseman Spencer Varnado.

After that, Jones retired seven of the next 11 batters he faced. In six innings pitched during the tournament, Jones has struck out 16 batters and surrendered only two runs.

"I'm the pitching coach, and I think all of our guys can be like him," Russell said. "I work them hard. If the team practices two hours a day, the pitchers know we're going to be out there four or five hours. They know to bring their lunch when they come to practice."

On the other side, the Denham Springs' pitching staff had barely enough left to buy a meal ticket. The team had used most of their pitchers' allotted innings battling back in the loser's bracket, and most of the pitchers that were still eligible were ailing.

"We gave it our best, but we just had too many sore arms," Denham Springs Coach C.A. Britt said. "Once we went into the loser's bracket our whole pitching plans were thrown out of kilter."

Three of the team's top four pitchers couldn't take the mound because of sore arms leaving No. 2 starter Luke Hand as the only pitcher with steady experience available, Britt said.

Hand was roughed for four runs in the first inning and six runs in the second.

The big blows for Lakeshore came in the second inning off a 2-run home run from right fielder Fredrick Snowton and a 3-run shot by shortstop Larry Wilson.

In all, Lakeshore pounded out 11 hits including six for extra bases.

South trounces North in all-star game

IRVING (AP) — Earlier this week, schoolboy superstar Shea Morenz said he considered the McDonald's All-Star game his first collegiate contest. If so, he may need to be redshirted.

The San Angelo Central graduate threw four interceptions Tuesday, including one returned for a touchdown, as his North squad was defeated 23-12 by the South in a battle of high school seniors at Texas Stadium.

"I don't know when was the last time I threw four interceptions," said Morenz, who completed four of 14 attempts for 34 yards. "I'm looking forward to getting to Austin and improving on what happened here."

Maurice Henriques, a Colorado signee from Alief Hastings, had the first interception — on the game's first pass — and returned it 37 yards for a touchdown. The South also scored on its first offensive series to lead 14-0 midway through the first quarter.

But the North fought to within 14-12 in the third quarter when Longview's Bobby Taylor, a Notre Dame recruit, blocked a field goal attempt and returned it 69 yards for a touchdown.

The North could have tied the game with a two-point conversion, but Morenz's pass fell incomplete.

The South padded its lead when the North gave them a safety on a poorly snapped punt and Colorado recruit Nathan Campbell of Alief

Elsik rumbled into the end zone from the 2-yard line.

This was the South's first victory since 1986 in the final high school game for Texas schoolboy players. It is part of the Texas High School Coaches Association's annual coaching school and included former Pampa High School standout Zack Thomas on the North team.

Taylor and the South's Brandell Jackson, a Baylor signee from Brenham, were voted the defensive and offensive players of the game. Jackson rushed for 61 yards and caught three passes for 61 more.

Max Knake, a Texas Christian signee from McKinney, outperformed his North teammate Morenz. The two traded series leading the offense, with Knake completing 10 of 23 for 167 yards. He was intercepted once.

Knake led both North offensive scoring drives, each capped by a field goal from Ross Evans of Hurst L.D. Bell. He threw for 167 yards on 10 of 23.

Morenz, the Super Prep magazine national player of the year, has until Aug. 26 to decide whether to play for the Longhorns or accept an offer to play professional baseball for the Toronto Blue Jays, who selected him in the 12th round of last month's amateur draft.

He said Monday he will join Texas in preseason drills this weekend. The Blue Jays cannot sign him once school begins.

"I felt a little pressure," he said, adding that he had not spoken with Toronto for about three weeks. "I don't know about my frame of mind. I came out to have a good time, but the other guys were more serious."

The North stopped the South offense through the second and third quarters behind 6-foot-2, 300-pound defensive lineman Stonie Clark. The Texas signee from Gladewater tied Lenoy Jones with a game-high 10 tackles.

Jones, a TCU signee from Class 3A champion Groesbeck, had two interceptions for the South.

Cougars welcome new personalities into fierce battle for quarterback

HOUSTON (AP) — Some coaches would term replacing record-setting quarterback David Klingler scary. But for Houston coach John Jenkins, it's pure excitement.

Klingler continued to etch his name in the NCAA record book although it was a painful 1991 season filled with sacks, injuries and disappointments, as the Cougars tripped from a 10-1 finish in 1990 to a 4-7 record.

The quarterback roll call still includes a Klingler, but it's younger brother Jimmy, along with 1990 backup Donald Douglas and junior college transfer Kyle Allen trying to become the latest triggerman.

"There's some new personalities and it's exciting," Jenkins said. "The insinuation is you're going to tail off. I've always looked at it that there'll be a performer to take that position."

Klingler was there to pick up the smoking run-and-shoot from 1989 Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware.

"They know the tradition and they want to uphold that," Jenkins said. "Jimmy is a big-time college passer, Kyle has two years of training in junior college and then Donald Douglas has performed extremely well."

SOUTHWEST

CONFERENCE

1992 previews

Jenkins rotated David Dacus and Ware during the 1988 season. Ware didn't take over until the eighth game.

"Dacus would always start and then Andre came in for a couple of series and whoever had the hot hand, I'd go with," Jenkins said. "It's a deal where the players will show me and I'll act on their progression."

Houston's offensive line was hardest hit by injuries last season.

"We still led the nation in passing and total offense in the conference and continued to do the things like we've always done," Jenkins said.

The Cougars also allowed 43 sacks and Klingler was the primary benefactor.

"Once we got that rolling at mid-season, we got good steady play from our offensive line and four of those five returns," Jenkins said. "That's been exciting to have that experience in there. The offensive line should be a strength this year."

Marcus Grant (78 catches), Verlon Brown (33) and John Brown III (24) have graduated from the receiving corps but Freddie Gilbert, who led the nation with 106 catches, Tracy Good and Sherman Smith and newcomer Keith Jack will give the unnamed quarterback plenty of targets.

Preseason workouts will resemble a quarterback school since Jenkins won't name a starter until prior to the Sept. 5 season opener at Tulsa. But the eventual starter's work load won't be watered down.

"When you attend a practice here, there are more missiles flying around than the Middle-East," Jenkins said. "There are enough receivers and drills going on at the same time with defensive backs and receiver groups."

"I can certainly stage a situation where they're all getting high level of repetitions. I'll do that through two-a-days and make sure they all get a good shot."

It's an old Jenkins tactic. He may start the season with two quarterbacks trying to be No. 1.

Oakland pounds slumping Texas

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Oakland offense gave Athletics pitcher Dave Stewart more trouble than he got from the Texas Rangers.
Stewart allowed only two hits in six innings as Oakland blanked Texas 9-0 Tuesday night to move into a first-place tie in the American League West.

Stewart and relief pitcher Kevin Campbell limited the slumping Rangers to only four hits while the A's were pounding out 12 hits.
"Stew had to sit through some long innings and he stiffened up a bit," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "But all pitchers would rather have runs on the board than quick innings. He handled those long innings very well."

Carney Lansford and Terry Steinbach led the Oakland attack with three RBIs each as the A's scored three runs in the third and fifth innings. Oakland added a single run in the fourth and two more in the eighth.

Stewart, now 8-5, spent 24 days on the disabled list with elbow problems before being activated on July 24. He won for the first time in 41 days. He had two no-decisions prior to Tuesday.

"Because I'm not totally healthy I kept getting stiff between the long innings," explained Stewart, who walked four and struck out three before being relieved by Campbell. "I had to go back out to get loose."

The only time Stewart was challenged came in the fourth, when he issued a pair of two-out walks prior to Ivan Rodriguez' strikeout.

Texas, without Ruben Sierra, Dean Palmer and Julio Franco in the starting lineup, fell for the fifth straight game, dropping behind Chicago to fourth in the AL West. The Rangers were last in fourth on May 25.

"This is a different ballclub without Franco, Sierra and Palmer," said Stewart. "Normally you face this lineup with six real good major-league hitters. Tonight, they only had three."

With the A's already ahead 4-0, Lansford delivered a two-out double down the third-base line to score three more Oakland runs off reliever Floyd Bannister. Bannister, one of six Texas pitchers in the game who combined for 11 walks, retired the first two batters he faced, then Fox's single to left was followed by consecutive walks to Rickey Henderson and Randy Ready to set the stage.

Steinbach, who was walked in a bases-loaded situation in the third inning for his first RBI, hit a two-run homer in the eighth with Jose Canseco on first with a walk.

The A's scored three runs in the third inning off starter Brian Bohanon, recalled from Triple A Oklahoma City for Tuesday's outing.

Reagan advisor details 1981 POW rescue mission, photo

By JOHN SOLOMON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration sent a search mission into Southeast Asia in 1981 after a satellite photo indicated live American POWs at a prison compound, a former White House national security adviser says.

But the mission was inconclusive and bungled, partly because it took so long to organize, Reagan adviser Richard Allen revealed in documents obtained by The Associated Press.

Resistance by some government officials thwarted further attempts to search for POWs, he said.

"I would have liked to try again. ... I don't think the bureaucracy was willing to risk it again," Allen said in a June 23 deposition to the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs.

Committee investigators are continuing to unravel classified information about what the government has known and done to resolve the fate of more than 2,000 servicemen unaccounted for after the Vietnam War.

The committee already has said as many as 133 Americans may have been left behind alive after the government declared all POWs home in 1973 and that the Pentagon has deliberately lied about the fate of some.

On Tuesday, committee member Sen. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., said several separate sources alleged as recently as 1988 that American prisoners of war were being held in an underground prison next to the Hanoi tomb of Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh.

But Defense Intelligence Agency officials say there is no credible evidence such a prison ever existed. They said the water table in the Vietnamese capital is too high to permit such a facility to be built.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the committee chairman, said the reports must be treated with caution and restraint.

"The sheer number of live-sighting reports, more than 1,500 since the end of the war, indicates to some that Americans — perhaps hundreds — must have been left behind," Kerry said, referring to all of Southeast Asia.

"However, our failure over 20 years to locate any of those Americans has caused others to conclude that the reports must be false," he said.

"We are not going to draw conclusions until this process is complete."

In his deposition, Allen said his recollection was that the 1981 mission proved inconclusive, mostly because the prison compound was empty by the time the search party arrived.

"They eventually got to the site, but they didn't get literally inside. But by the time they got to the site the site had been abandoned," he said.

Senate investigators questioning Allen indicated their evidence suggested the team may have found the prison camp was still occupied, may have spotted one Caucasian person and believed an inner compound within the camp was being supplied with food and water for up to 40 people it could not see.

Allen said some of their information "rings a distant bell," but he couldn't remember how he could have gotten such a report "because they'd have to go all the way in to get close and have a look to be able to see such a Caucasian."

Allen said that as national security adviser he believed "dozens, perhaps 100 or more" live POWs were left behind after the war and President Reagan shared his view.

He said their belief was furthered by a satellite photo of a prison compound in Southeast Asia that was brought to him shortly after the administration took office in 1981.

The photo, apparently taken in December 1980, showed grass in the prison exercise yard stamped down in the form of a special "rap code" that POWs used to communicate with each other by tapping on prison walls.

The code meant something like "Help from above" or "Here we are," Allen said.

The CIA was chosen to organize a group of Laotians and American mercenaries for the mission to find the POWs rather than use the military's elite Delta Force commandos so there would be "deniability" should the mission go wrong, he said.

But Allen, who left government in 1982 in an ethics controversy involving gifts from Japanese sources, said he became frustrated by the pace at which the CIA organized the mission.

"It took as I say bloody forever for them to get mobilized and another bloody forever for them to get in there," he said.

Allen also told the Senate investigators he had a vague recollection of an offer purportedly from the Vietnamese government for 57 POWs in exchange for $4 billion that top-level Reagan officials discussed in February 1981.

But in a subsequent letter to the committee, Allen said his notes indicated he learned about the purported offer in 1986 from some POW-MIA activists and had no recollection of it surfacing during his time as national security adviser.

"It would be my conclusion based on these resurrected notes and my telephone lists that there was no such offer from the Vietnamese in early 1981," Allen wrote in his follow-up letter to the committee dated July 21.

Attorney Jim Keahey, representing Texas taxpayers, stands in front of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Taxpayer lawyer continues fight vs. CED property tax

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawyer for Texas taxpayers says his next stop is the U.S. Supreme Court in a fight against the county education district property tax for public schools.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans Monday said it did not have jurisdiction to stop collection of the tax, which has been found to violate the state constitution.

Lawyer Jim Keahey said he hopes to file a petition Wednesday with the U.S. Supreme Court.

If he does not succeed in having that petition heard at the U.S. Supreme Court, or if a ruling is unfavorable, Keahey said he will go back to state court and pursue appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court again.

"Until these issues are settled in federal or state court, I suggest everyone wait to pay their 1992 CED (county education district) tax. Bills go out Oct. 1 and the last day to pay without penalty is Jan. 31, 1993," Keahey said. "Once the CEDs have your money, there's little or no chance of getting it back if we win."

But Ron Dusek, spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, said the issue is settled, at least for now, "and the law is people have to pay their taxes."

"Responsible citizens wouldn't even consider not paying their taxes," he said.

Lawmakers created the current school finance system in an effort to meet a Texas Supreme Court mandate to equalize school funding. It was designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within new taxing regions made up of one or several counties.

But the Texas Supreme Court in January ruled that the plan violates the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax, and by levying a property tax without voter approval.

However, the state Supreme Court gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to fix the system. And it delayed the ruling's effect so that it would not interfere with the collection of 1991 and 1992 property taxes in the 188 new county education districts.

Keahey then filed the class-action lawsuit in federal court, saying continued collection of the levy denies taxpayers due process, violating the U.S. Constitution.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin in Austin sided with taxpayers on that point, but refused to issue an injunction stopping collection of the tax.

Keahey then appealed to the 5th Circuit, which said the federal court did not have jurisdiction. It vacated Nowlin's judgment and sent the case back to him, with an order that he dismiss it.

Low interest rates help reduce clean-up costs for failed S&Ls

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low interest rates and other factors are reducing the projected cost of cleaning up failed savings institutions and banks but the need for more S&L bailout money remains urgent, according to senior congressional officials.

Congressional Budget Office Director Robert D. Reischauer, in a written statement to the House Banking Committee, said handling losses in failed S&Ls will cost $135 billion from 1989 through 1998, in addition to the $60 billion spent before 1989.

That's about $20 billion less than the budget office's previous estimate. Reischauer attributed the decline to the government's earlier success in shutting down failed S&Ls and to the wide gap between deposit and loan rates, which has bolstered profits at both banks and S&Ls.

Meanwhile, Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady was scheduled today to appear before the Senate Banking Committee to plead for more money for the S&L cleanup agency, the Resolution Trust Corp. He made a similar pitch last week to the House Banking Committee.

An election-year impasse between Congress and the administration has prevented the RTC from spending money since April 1.

Brady's top deputy defended the administration's record on S&Ls in a letter Tuesday to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who criticized Bush at last month's Democratic Convention.

The cost of the delay, wrote Deputy Secretary John Robson, is the same as if "every day members of the House of Representatives appeared on the steps of the Capitol and lit a bonfire with $4 million of the taxpayers' money."

Reischauer offered his comments in written testimony originally scheduled to be presented to the House committee today. The hearing was cancelled and the panel released the budget office statement on Tuesday.

"We agree with the administration that delay in closing failed thrifts is only adding costs to the final tab for this crisis," he said.

"A substantial portion of the cleanup of the thrift crisis remains to be completed. The small improvement of the thrift industry ... is hardly cause for complacency or for further delay in funding," he said.

The budget office estimated the cost of handling failed banks from 1992 through 1996 at $39 billion, down from the $43 billion projected previously.

The $30 billion line of credit authorized for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. by Congress in November should be enough to handle bank failures, but Reischauer warned the borrowing may have to be used for S&Ls as well if funding for the RTC is not approved soon.

Under current law, responsibility for handling S&L failures will shift from the RTC to the FDIC on Oct. 1, 1993.
