Perot rejoins race

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot transformed the presidential campaign from a two-sided shooting match into a three-way battle and immediately set about mounting an unconventional White House bid greeted warily by Bill Clinton and George Bush.

Rejoining a field he once led before fading in the polls of summer, the Texas businessman seemed uncertain just how to proceed with what he promised would be "a serious campaign focusing on the issues."

"That'll unfold day after day," the Texas billionaire told reporters Thursday, announcing his candidacy just 33 days before Election Day.

"Nothing's organized. It's all happening so fast," confessed his son, Ross Jr.

But the elder Perot said he was ready to mount an advertising blitz, telling reporters as he left his news conference: "Got to go to work, got to earn a living, got to pay for ads."

Perot wasted no time, reserving two half-hour blocks of prime network television time next week, according to a report in today's editions of The Dallas Morning News.

Perot's wife, Margot, and running mate James Stockdale, a retired Navy vice admiral and Vietnam War hero, said they anticipated going on the campaign trail.

Perot's rivals continued to set their sights on one another as the impact of the Texan's candidacy — and the shape it would take — remained uncertain.

"I think my fight is with George Bush," Clinton told reporters.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Perot "deserves to have an opportunity to run," but added that the campaign would continue to focus on Clinton "as the front-runner."

Both the Bush and Clinton camps have said Perot would be welcome to participate in presidential debates.

Orson Swindle, chairman of Perot's United We Stand, America organization, hailed news that Bush and Clinton negotiators had reached an agreement in principle late Thursday for three debates.

"I think Mr. Bush and Mr. Perot will square off pretty decently. I think Clinton will be the loser," Swindle said on ABC's "Nightline."

Perot's independent candidacy added an element of intrigue to a race that had been stagnant in recent months, with Bush consistently trailing Clinton in the polls.

"Anything that tosses this race up in the air and is an unknown is a good thing for Bush," said Republican pollster Bill McInturff.

At the same time, Perot's candidacy could work to Clinton's advantage in certain states where the Texan appears to draw most of his support from the president.

"It certainly boosts the chances of Clinton carrying Texas," said University of Texas Professor Walter Dean Burnham, who studies voting behavior.

Perot, who once ran evenly with Bush and Clinton in national polls, is a distant third.

A poll released Thursday by CNN and USA Today gave Perot just 7 percent support, compared with 52 percent for Clinton and 35 percent for Bush. The survey of 1,052 registered voters had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Two recent polls taken in Michigan and Ohio showed that Perot was far behind in those two states, battlegrounds of the industrial Midwest. Both polls showed Perot with support from just 9 percent of those surveyed.

Perot, however, insists he's in the race to win.

"My objective is not to commit political suicide," he said, adding that he would discuss solutions to the nation's problems that the major parties deem politically risky.

His plan for economic recovery includes higher income taxes for the wealthy, fewer tax breaks for home mortgages, higher Medicare premiums and increases in federal excise taxes on gasoline and cigarettes. Perot also prescribes sharp cuts in government spending.

The target of some blistering news accounts about his business dealings earlier this year, Perot chastised reporters at one point for practicing "gotcha" journalism.

County backs drug program

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners Court on Thursday unanimously endorsed a program aimed at keeping youth off drugs.

Two Pampa High School students, Kurt West and Kara Kay Skaggs, told the Commissioners Court about the program.

Skaggs said, "It's about teen-age drug abuse and trying to minimize the drug problem."

Skaggs explained that the program — Drug-Free Youth in Texas (D-FY-IT) — involves voluntary drug testing of students in an effort to identify the drug problem and get help for those using drugs. Those who test clean would be able to join D-FY-IT.

"It involves drug education and prevention," Skaggs said.

West said, "We do have a problem in our town. We're just hoping bringing this program into our town will help the drug problem as well as other problems."

He said students who test clean for drugs will be given a laminated card showing they are a member of D-FY-IT (pronounced defy it). He said the program, which is in the early planning stages, hopes to get businesses and other organizations involved in giving discounts to students who are members of the organization.

After the initial testing, 20 percent of those in the group will be tested monthly when their names are randomly chosen from a computer program. All testing will be confidential and will not be available to the public or the police.

Students who fail drug tests twice will lose membership privileges in the group, although they will be encouraged to join again. Counseling will also be provided for those who fail drug tests.

An assembly for the students during the day and parents in the evening is in the planning stages and an advisory group has been established, said Barbara Evans, a high school counselor. Evans said the group also is talking to business leaders to see if they might contribute to the program.

"This is not a punishment, so they are not going to be turned over to the police," Evans said. "This is for prevention and help."

Gary Gattis, a downtown businessman who is on the advisory board, said, "We could be the founding fathers of this program in the Texas Panhandle."

The anti-drug program was established in 1988 in Tyler. In the first 18 months it attracted more than 8,300 teen-agers in Tyler and the surrounding areas.

Gattis said, "We can make the cool group straight and we can make the others want to join ... We need your support and we need your outspokenness."

It is estimated that if 25 percent of the Pampa High School student body volunteered initially for the drug tests, it would cost about $3,600 and if cards were laminated, the costs would be about $500.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said her office has the capabilities of laminating the cards and she would be willing to help with that project.

The Commissioners Court unanimously voted to support the program and to study other ways the county might be able to help.

In other action, the Commissioners Court:

- heard from Rita Lawlis, marketing representative with Ted L. Parker & Associates, about a partially self-funded insurance plan for the county. The county currently pays $30,000 a month to Blue Cross/Blue Shield for medical insurance for county employees.

- County employees who want their dependents on the policy have to pay extra and the Commissioners Court said the costs are getting too high for many employees to afford.

- Lawlis said, "Under a full-coverage plan, you'll never get a refund. Under this plan, there is a potential for you to have some money left over."

- Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright said, "We've seen costs continually go up (under the present insurance). It finally gets to the point the employee can't afford it anymore. That's why we're looking at this."

- unanimously authorized Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy to execute a certificate of substantial completion on the new Gray County Jail. The authorization will enable the general contractor to request the remainder of his money from the county.

United Way check-in shows 43 percent of goal attained

The Pampa United Way has reached 43 percent of its $326,000 goal for this year's campaign, bringing in $142,798 to date, said campaign chairman Curt Beck.

Beck announced the figure during the second check-in at the Pampa Community Building on Thursday.

Money raised during the campaign will benefit 16 service organizations in Gray County. Those organizations are Meals on Wheels, Pampa Sheltered Workshop, Southside Senior Citizens, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Genesis House, Gray County Child Protective Services, Community Day Care, Tralee Crisis Center, Gray County Latch Key, Pampa Family Services, American Red Cross, Girl Scouts, The Salvation Army, High Plains Epilepsy Association, Pastoral Counseling Center, and Boy Scouts.

Hochst Celanese was recognized for bringing in the largest amount of money at the Thursday check-in with $15,500. Citizens Bank & Trust Co. was also recognized for bringing in $5,349. Major firms division brought in the largest total amount at the check-in with $28,897.34.

Beck said, "We're halfway through the drive and about halfway through the goal."

Katrina Bigham, executive administrator of the Pampa United Way, said, "We've done exceptionally well. I would rather start early and end on time. I want us to reach our goal on time. We appreciate the hard work and tell your workers we appreciate them."

Entertainment for Thursday's check-in was provided by the Pampa High School cheerleaders who performed two cheers and a dance they will perform at halftime of tonight's homecoming football game.

Also, McGruff, the crime-fighting dog, appeared to serve a warrant on Beck for not having the $326,000 raised for the United Way campaign.

McGruff began handcuffing Beck, but allowed him to be released on his promise to do his best to see that the money is raised. — Beth Miller

Woody - This land IS your land

An all-day celebration honoring the late folk singer Woody Guthrie is planned for Saturday, beginning at 9:30 a.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Events continue throughout the day at Central Park and culminate at 7:30 p.m. with an evening of entertainment at M.K. Brown Auditorium portraying Guthrie's life.

Mary Jo Edgmon, Guthrie's sister of Seminole, Okla., will speak about her brother at 9:30 a.m. At 11:30 a.m., behind the auditorium, will be the presentation of the Woody Guthrie Music Sculpture. The array of musical notes, which form the tune of "This Land is Your Land, This Land is My Land," was created by Pampa sculptor Rusty Neef.

At 2 p.m., a highway marker designating Highway 60 as Woody Guthrie Memorial Highway will be unveiled in Central Park. Musicians will perform Guthrie's music in the afternoon and evening.

The citizens committee which organized the event reports that various members of Guthrie's family are expected to attend. Besides Edgmon, expected are Mary Jennings Boyle, to whom he was married while living in Pampa; Matt Jennings, Boyle's brother and Guthrie's friend; and Harold Leventhal of New York City, agent for Guthrie Publications and Woody's son Arlo Guthrie.

Guthrie, who lived in Pampa from 1929 to 1937, is best known as composer of "This Land is Your Land, This Land is My Land."

2 die in early-morning wreck

SHAMROCK — A fiery two-vehicle accident this morning claimed the lives of a Pampa man and his passenger from Shamrock, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

A 1971 Chevrolet El Camino, driven by Donald David Tomaszewska, 25, 411 Buckler, Pampa, made a U-turn in front of a 1992 Freightliner truck-tractor pulling two trailers and the vehicles collided on U.S. 83, about two-tenths of a mile south of Shamrock, said DPS Trooper L.B. Snider.

Snider said Tomaszewska and a passenger, Jerry Brant Cabler, 19, Shamrock, were killed in the accident and were pronounced dead at the scene by Wheeler County Judge Wendell Morgan.

The accident occurred around 2 a.m. today and blocked traffic for about four hours, the trooper said.

The driver of the 1992 Freightliner, Billy Eugene Hufstader, 45, Cleburne, was transported to Shamrock General Hospital and treated for minor cuts and abrasions and later released.

Snider said the vehicle driven by Tomaszewska was traveling south on U.S. 83 and the tractor-trailer was traveling north when the Tomaszewska vehicle made a U-turn in front of the tractor-trailer.

He said the vehicle Tomaszewska was driving was "completely demolished."

The collision caused a fire which burned the El Camino and the truck-tractor and one trailer.

The accident is still under investigation, Snider said. — Beth Miller

U.S. missile hits Turkish destroyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An accidental missile blast from a U.S. aircraft carrier set a Turkish destroyer ablaze during a NATO exercise, killing at least five Turkish sailors and injuring 14 others, the Pentagon said today.

Among those killed was the commanding officer of the Muavenet, Capt. Kudret Gungor, the Turkish general staff said.

The aircraft carrier USS Saratoga launched two Sea Sparrow missiles late Thursday. At least one of the missiles struck the destroyer, Adm. Mike Boorda, commander of U.S. Naval Forces in Europe, said in a statement issued in London.

There was no information about how the firing occurred and no report of U.S. casualties, said the Pentagon and the U.S. naval command in Europe.

At the Pentagon, Adm. Frank

Kelso, the chief of naval operations, said there was "no scheduled firing of missiles" planned during the exercise.

The four-star admiral said he'd never encountered such an accident during his 37 years of naval service and that the loss of life "deeply saddened" him. "I'd have to classify it as an accident. We have to determine what caused it," Kelso said in an interview with CNN.

Complaints leveled at Free

By BETH MILLER
 Senior Staff Writer

A Pampa resident voiced complaints of Gray County Sheriff Jim Free during a Thursday meeting of the Gray County Commissioners Court.

Connie Neighbors told the Commissioners Court that her fiancé — Henry "Hank" Skinner — has been in the Gray County Jail since late August and that the sheriff is not responsive to the needs of prisoners. She said her fiancé repeatedly has requested to speak with the sheriff, but he has ignored him.

Skinner, 30, also spoke to The Pampa News in an interview at the jail on Thursday afternoon.
 Neighbors today said, "I told them there was some things going on up there that nobody in their right mind would approve of and that I had a complaint and I wanted to know who to go to and who his (the sheriff's) boss is."

County Judge Carl Kennedy said today that he told Neighbors the Commissioners Court is not the sheriff's boss, but that the sheriff is responsible to the residents of the county who elected him.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons gave Neighbors the telephone number of the Texas

Commission on Jail Standards and said if there is a problem in the jail she could call that number in Austin.

Today, Neighbors said, "I told them I did not appreciate an attitude problem in someone (Free) who is supposed to be a public servant. I did not appreciate the fact that he repeatedly chose to ignore somebody who was right down from his office and that I didn't see any reason for this attitude."

Neighbors said that Free is not responsive to the prisoners and "is on what is commonly called a power trip." Today, Free said he is not obligated to have conferences with the prisoners and that he has been busy.

"I talk to them when I can. If I talked to everyone every time they wanted to, they'd be lined up all day long and I wouldn't have time for the people. They'll say they need to talk to you just to get out of the cell."

Skinner, who is in the county jail on a charge of violation of parole, said Thursday that he sent the sheriff a letter 3 1/2 weeks ago saying he needed to speak to him, but the sheriff refuses to respond.

"We could drop dead and he wouldn't care," Skinner said. "I don't think he's taken an active interest in the condition of his inmates."

Hospital, doctor to provide free prostate screening

Coronado Hospital and Dr. Rene Grabato are offering a free prostate cancer screening for men aged 50 and older on Saturday at the hospital.

The date for the screening was incorrectly reported in Thursday's newspaper.

Men who wish to participate must have an appointment, Terry Barnes, director of marketing at the hospital and coordinator of the program, said.

"Because of the time schedule, only a limited number of free exams are available," Barnes said.

For the free screening, men should call Barnes at 669-0924. The screening will begin at 9 a.m.

"I have told him I want to talk to him prior to filing a civil suit against this county. Somebody needs to put pressure on him to do his job."

Free said today that the water temperature is set at 112 degrees, which is hot enough for showers. Skinner also complained that there is no hot water for the prisoners to take showers in the new jail.

"There are several inmates who are sick because of it," Skinner said. Free said today that the water temperature is set at 112 degrees, which is hot enough for showers.

Skinner said that the new meals being served don't provide enough nourishment for most of the inmates and are served cold. He also said most of the inmates would also like to be able to watch television or listen to the radio.

"We know this ain't no Hilton Hotel. We'd just like to have the basic necessities," Skinner said. Free, in response to Skinner's complaints as related through The Pampa News, said, "They're not going to have TVs. They're not in jail for a reason. They're not in the Hilton."

The sheriff said inmates are getting enough to eat and the amount and caloric content has been approved by the state. "They have excellent meals. I go up and check the meals when they don't know I'm coming and they are hot," Free said.

Agreement nets 3 debates

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Breaking a month-long stalemate, representatives of President Bush and Bill Clinton are putting the final touches on an agreement to hold three presidential debates in the final weeks of the campaign.

The debates, which are expected to include newly announced candidate Ross Perot, would give Bush a badly needed opportunity to change the tone and direction of the campaign, which so far has left him trailing badly in the polls.

His unexpected proposal this week to hold four debates led to negotiations between the two campaigns.

Bush today went on a network morning show for the third time this week. Asked if Perot's return would change his strategy, Bush said he would "stay on the positive aspects, but here we'll keep honing in charge and countercharge with Gov. Clinton, too."

"Ross Perot, obviously, is going to have to do what Gov. Clinton and I do — he's going to have to be specific in a lot of areas where the American people are entitled to know what he thinks ... crime and education and health care," Bush said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Debate negotiators reported progress as a marathon session broke up late Thursday. Sources familiar with the talks said an agreement in principle was reached to hold three debates.

"We have made substantial progress on the basic terms of an agreement, including the number of debates, dates and the format," Robert Teeter, chairman of the Bush campaign, said after negotiators worked late into the night Thursday.

"No agreement is final until the details are worked out," Teeter said, adding that he expected the talks would be concluded today, with a Saturday announcement of the sites, dates and other details.

"I'm encouraged," said Mickey Kantor, Clinton's campaign chairman.

Neither campaign official would disclose details of the agreement.

Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the agreement called for three presidential and one vice-presidential debate. One of the debates will be chaired by a single moderator, a format favored by Clinton, said one source. Another debate will follow the format Bush had sought, a panel of reporters questioning the candidates.

ABC's "Nightline" reported that a third debate would somehow combine the two formats. The network said the debates would be held between Oct. 11 and the end of the month.

The New York Times quoted sources in today's editions as saying the two sides had agreed to hold the first debate Oct. 11 and the third one a week later. The newspaper said moderators would lead two of the debates and a panel of reporters would question the candidates at the third.

On the defensive for weeks for his refusal to accept the single-moderator format proposed by a bipartisan debate commission, Bush made a dramatic offer this week to debate Clinton on four successive Sundays, beginning Oct. 11.

The Clinton camp opposed holding a debate Nov. 1, just two days before the election. Clinton running mate Al Gore, campaigning in Wisconsin, said an 11th-hour debate would leave little time for each candidate to rebut fresh charges.

Teeter declined to say whether Perot would be included in debates, though both candidates have said the Texas businessman would be welcome.

The tentative agreement was disclosed just hours after Perot formally re-entered the presidential sweepstakes, telling reporters in Dallas he would be "glad to participate" in debates.

Orson Swindle, chairman of Perot's United We Stand, America organization, predicted Bush and Perot would dominate the debates. "Mr. Bush and Mr. Perot will square off pretty decently. I think Clinton will be the loser," Swindle said on "Nightline."

Students to sing Guthrie songs

More than 100 elementary students from Pampa Independent School District will join together to sing Woody Guthrie tunes during events Saturday, a day set aside to recognize the folk singer.

The group, under the direction of Wanetta Hill, will perform a medley of children's songs that have just been discovered and released.

She said the medley will include the songs, "Jig Along Home," "Little Seed," "Bling Blang," and "Howdido."

The finale to the program will be Guthrie's "This Land is Your Land." Hill, who is elementary music coordinator and a music teacher for Pampa ISD, said 128 students from the six elementary schools will perform the Guthrie tunes.

The students will perform at the M.K. Brown Auditorium beginning at 7:30 p.m. Others will also provide entertainment portraying Guthrie's life and the performance will conclude with the elementary students performing "This Land is Your Land." The grand finale will include a tribute to family and friends of Woody Guthrie.

Program aims to keep pesticide containers out of landfills

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

Texas Water Commission and Texas Department of Agriculture members collected used pesticide containers Wednesday for recycling at the Pampa landfill.

"The main reason we are doing this is to keep pesticide containers out of the landfills," said James Knoll, TWC employee of Austin.

"Pampa will be a permanent collection site in the statewide program across approximately 70 locations in Texas," said Rick Scrimshire, also of the TWC in Austin. "There will be a permanent list of locations distributed."

This was the first experimental pesticide container collection in Pampa. "I think Pampa is privileged that they selected us as a site," said Rick Stone, city of Pampa sanitation superintendent.

John Vise, a Wheeler resident, brought a truckload of 2 1/2-gallon containers and a drum to the recycling center.

"I saw it advertised and heard about it through my extension agent," he said. "With the environmental regulations the way they are this is how we have to do it. I've been collecting these for a year."

Containers accepted for recycling included regular pesticide chemical jugs of all sizes as well as metal drums. The containers had to be punctured and triple- or high-pressure rinsed.

"We use a crusher, grinder and chopper on the containers after we check to see that they are clean,"

Knoll said. "The plastic pieces will be recycled to make new pesticide containers and fence posts, all non-food products."

The metal drums will be made into scrap iron, he said. Nine employees from TWC, TDA and the county extension office assisted at the site.

"We have to have people to help unload, inspect and put the containers in the machines and assist with a survey form," Knoll said. "Yesterday we were swamped."

Containers delivered to the site had to be sorted by size.

"The two-and-a-half-gallon containers are made of a lighter weight," Knoll said. "The five-gallon and up (containers) are made of a heavier material and they have to be kept separate for processing."

Chipped pieces of containers will be transported to one of two centers piloting pesticide container recycling, he said.

"There are only two recycling centers for pesticide containers in the country," said Sam Gibson, vice president of SCT Environmental Operations.

They are located in Missouri and Alabama, he said. They are both under the National Agriculture Chemical Association.

"The process is closed-loop recycling," said Scrimshire.

Gibson explained the process. "It is a pilot program," he said. "The material goes through a wash cycle where they make sure we are doing a good job, next the material is turned into non-food, non-toy items."

The group has traveled for two weeks to various sites collecting pesticide containers, Knoll said.

In the future, notice will be sent to the county extension agent and to Stone, on-site landfill supervisor, Knoll said.

The area at the landfill used for the recycling site, which is behind the main office, was recently paved along with the road to the landfill with recycled material by Excel of Amarillo, Stone said. The all-weather road was completed Wednesday.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Non on Maastricht

There's a simple test of whether a governmental reform should be adopted: Does it increase or decrease the number and power of politicians, bureaucrats, and lobbyists?

By this standard, the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement should be adopted because it would reduce trade barriers and give more freedom to businesses and citizens on both sides of the US-Mexico border.

By contrast, the proposed Maastricht Treaty for a United Europe would vastly increase the control of bureaucratic government over the people of Europe. Already, several thousand lobbyists are encamped in Brussels, sprouting schemes to waste billions of taxpayers' marks, francs, and pounds. That's just one reason why the French electorate, which votes today, would be wise to reject the Maastricht Treaty.

Voter surveys once indicated that Frenchmen favored the treaty. But several things apparently have turned most voters against it. This summer, the Brussels Eurobureaucracy — already powerful, wasteful, and disdainful of liberty — tried to ban French nonpasteurized cheese. Now, you just don't tell a Frenchman how to make his fromage. And as Charles de Gaulle observed, "Nobody can simply bring together a country that has 265 kinds of cheese."

It's an even greater folly to smash together Europe's many different cultures, languages, nations, sub-nations, sections, and religions. If Yugoslavia can't be held together, how can the other areas of Europe? The United States is a unified country. But we see many problems around as that nearly rip us apart. Multiply those problems a thousandfold and you have Europe.

That is not to say that all European moves toward unity are unwise. Europe has worked admirably toward the removal of trade barriers and has coordinated military policies. But such things work because they reduce government and advance peace.

As G.K. Chesterton said in the 1920s, Europe's major problem is that people don't understand one another. Rather than more international commissions and agreements, he urged the study of other cultures. Alas, he was ignored, and the continent erupted in flames of war and genocide in 1939.

In 1992, Europeans know more about one another than they did when Chesterton wrote. Such an increase in knowledge should proceed, along with further efforts to reduce trade barriers and armaments.

Not just Europeans, but all of us need to think of ourselves less as members of those artificial entities called "governments," and more as persons sharing a common humanity and a right to liberty. The Maastricht treaty would attempt to replace one artificial government entity, the several nation states of Europe, with an even more artificial government entity, a defective and oppressive regime headquartered in Brussels.

An endangered act

George Bush was in the Pacific Northwest last week, chasing votes and damning the spotted owl. No one can reasonably object to a candidate's chasing votes, but I wish he would lay off the owl.

The president said he would ask for a major amendment to the Endangered Species Act of 1973. This would direct the Interior Department to make balancing decisions on the survival of threatened animals and plants. The department would have to weigh the environmental benefits of protection against the economic benefits of employment.

"It's time," said the president, "to put people ahead of owls."

At first glance, that proposition has the ring of common sense. Given an absolutely unavoidable choice between saving 10,000 jobs and ploughing under the last known species of a figwort, most of us would go with saving the jobs.

But first glances often are deceptive. They miss a great deal. In practice over the past 19 years, administrators of the Endangered Species Act have quietly exercised the kind of commonsensical judgment that most observers would like to see. The extremists are not in the government. The extremists are out there in politics and in the courts.

In the matter at hand, the contending sides are hollering so loudly that the voice of reason cannot be heard. Spokesmen for the loggers and the timber industry are yelling their heads off. On the other side, the Sierra Club and Defenders of Wildlife are howling with equal passion. The issue is wildly buffeted between Congress and the federal courts.

In the process, the poor little unoffending owl is becoming a goat — a scapegoat — and the Endangered Species Act is caught in the middle.

James J. Kilpatrick

It is not the owl that has depressed the logging industry in Oregon, Washington and northern California. It is the shortsightedness and greed of many timber operators. Left alone, they would cut every cuttable tree in sight. After a while there would be no cuttable trees in sight at all. By selling whole logs to Japan, these operators have taken work away from the mills. Some 26,000 jobs were lost before the owl got into the act.

In the field of conservation, the act of 1973 ranks among the towering legislative achievements of this century. It ranks with the development of national parks and the preservation of wilderness areas. In some quarters, it is supposed that the act is the work of wild-eyed liberals — the Gucci-Pucci petal pickers that former Secretary Jim Watt so roundly scorned. In fact, a prime supporter was James Buckley of New York, one of the most steadfast conservatives ever to sit in the Senate.

Under the act, 377 animals and 351 plants are now on the list of domestic species that are endangered or threatened. The law obligates all agencies of government to take steps to protect the remaining populations. Over the years, the Fish and Wildlife Service has made thousands of decisions to implement the act. Not more than a dozen decisions have led to major controversy — the snail darter, the dune mouse, the Mount Graham red squirrel in Arizona. The record is a record of responsibility wisely put to work.

Because of the law, future generations are now assured of a rich variety within our ecology. The grizzly bear, the red wolf, the giant condor, the bald eagle — all these, along with such lesser creatures as rare snakes and wildflowers — are surviving. In the course of time, millions of species will die out of their own accord. That natural process cannot be halted or significantly delayed, but we can protect and preserve. The alligator and the wild turkey once were doomed. Thanks to federal and state efforts, they thrive.

Technically the act expires on Sept. 30, but the deadline is more apparent than real. Funds to administer the act must be reauthorized, and they will be authorized. The law has strong support in both House and Senate. This became apparent in the Senate on Aug. 6, when Republican Slade Gorton of Washington sought to increase the salvage of dead and fallen trees.

This was another of those first-glance proposals that seem so reasonable. Gorton made an impassioned speech in which he charged the spotted owl with increasing alcoholism and child abuse in Washington state. Calmer voices replied that his amendment would derail encouraging progress toward sound forestry management. Gorton lost, 60-35. On this issue, Bush deserves to lose as well. He can get his votes somewhere else.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Oct. 2, the 276th day of 1992. There are 90 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
Twenty-five years ago, on Oct. 2, 1967, Thurgood Marshall was sworn in as an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court — he was the first black to be appointed to the nation's highest court.

- On this date:
- In 1835, the first battle of the Texas Revolution took place as American settlers defeated Mexican cavalry near the Guadalupe River.
 - In 1869, political and spiritual leader Mohandas K. Gandhi was born in Porbandar, India.
 - In 1889, the first International Conference of American States was convened in Washington, D.C., with representatives from most Latin American countries present.
 - In 1890, comedian Groucho Marx was born in New York.
 - In 1919, President Wilson suffered a stroke that left him partially paralyzed.

The car fuel of tomorrow is ready

Pity any President. In any philosophical or economic tug of war, he's durned if he does and durned if he doesn't.

President Truman kept a small plaque on his Oval Office desk reading "the buck stops here!"

The same sign helped Reagan make tough decisions.

President Bush put the plaque in a drawer somewhere.

Maybe he should retrieve it.

The President, as just one for-instance, is pulled between corn growers who are ready now to provide the car fuel of tomorrow and oil producers determined to keep us using their car fuel of yesterday.

Ford has been making automobiles for Brazil that run entirely on ethanol made from sugar cane. Despite increasing prices for sugar, it still makes sense.

It is even more economical to make ethanol out of world-market U.S. corn than to make it out of world-market sugar.

During the recent environmental conference in Rio, 400 vehicles were provided for visiting heads of state and their delegations.

A sign on the door of each car said "RUNNING ON NEAT ETHANOL."

The U.S. delegation did not use those cars;

Paul Harvey

instead brought its own gas-guzzlers from the United States.

Now wouldn't that rot your socks!

We can neither run from nor hide from tomorrow.

Ethyl alcohol is a fuel from an inexhaustible supply. It's made from farm products, mostly from corn.

You can add just 10 percent ethanol to gasoline and raise the fuel's octane level by three points.

It takes two barrels of oil to make one barrel of gasoline, so for each barrel of ethanol used at the refinery you are saving two barrels of crude oil.

The answer to your next question is "no!"

The use of ethanol-blended gasoline does not require any engine modification. All vehicles, foreign and domestic, approve the use of ethanol-blend fuel.

Also, engines run smoother and cleaner. In 1985 motorists using fuel blended with ethanol drove 140 billion miles with entirely satisfactory performance. Feasibility has been tested!

Now what's necessary is for government, in the interest of balanced trade and clean air, to mandate its use.

President Bush can't blame the Republican platform.

It says, "We support the widest possible use of ethanol in the United States motor fuel market. Such use will greatly help American farmers, improve the rural economy and reduce our dependence on imported oil."

Ethanol is entirely environmentally benign. What comes out of the tailpipe is cleaner.

The oil industry sought to prove that producing ethanol from grain produces pollution — but failed.

Critics have contended that using our corn for fuel would cost more than it's worth. On the contrary, production of ethanol has already helped reduce federal farm support programs in one year by $623 million.

The excuses have been exhausted. It's time now to start catching up with Brazil.

Will the liberal media elect Clinton?

I am told that on "Nightline" recently, Jeff Greenfield pooh-poohed the contention that the media tilt their reportage to favor the more liberal candidate — in this case, Gov. Clinton. If so, Greenfield demanded, how do "people like Bill Rusher, who is forever shouting 'Liberal, liberal, liberal' at the media," explain the fact that the conservative candidate won by a landslide in each of the three most recent presidential elections?

Very simply, Jeff (and my apologies if my informant mistook somebody else for you). The question, as posed, assumes that the media are so powerful that, if they were in fact as liberal as I say they are, neither Reagan nor Bush could have been elected. It overlooks, however, the possibility that the media are every bit as liberal as I say they are, but not quite so powerful as you think they are.

A presidential election is one of those rare important things on which American voters like to make up their own minds with a minimum of kibitzing from the media. Frequently millions of them wait till the World Series is over before thinking very much about the election, and then watch the debates attentively, if there are any. Having sized up the contenders in his direct and highly personal way, they then decide whom to vote for — and it really doesn't matter much what Dan RATHER or Judy Woodruff or The New York Times tells them to do.

Most people are well aware of the media's liberal slant, and many wouldn't be caught dead believing anything they are told on television. That is why so many of the media's greatest successes in the slanting business are achieved, not by saying something tendentious, but simply by suppressing information unfavorable to their pet candidates and causes.

Not even a rigorous skeptic, after all, can depend on arriving at an independent conclusion if the information needed to reach it is simply suppressed by the media and never reaches his eyes or ears. A good example this year is the real estate agent who roomed with Gennifer Flowers in Texas in the mid-1980s and asserts firmly that she had to move out on three occasions when Clinton came to visit. The major media have simply banned evidence that Flowers is telling the truth.

That sort of manipulation-by-suppression is the liberal media's favorite trick, and accounts for 90 percent of the power they wield. It's a lot of power, because nobody can possibly be fully informed on all of the topics debated in the public arena. Willy-nilly, many people wind up believing what the media tell them on scores of important subjects. Take acid rain, for example: Have you ever heard of the NAPAP report?

But presidential elections are simply too important, and too closely watched, for the liberal media to pull off their usual massive quota of suppressions, distortions and outright lies. Not, Lord knows, that they aren't doing their damndest. Even The New Republic, which is supporting Clinton, has been so embarrassed by the media's performance that it is running a regular feature called "The Clinton Suck-up Watch," which quotes a different journalist every week in the public act of slobbering over Clinton beyond all endurance.

If, however, the American people choose Clinton over Bush this year, as they well may, I will condemn the liberal media's contribution to that disaster but stop well short of crediting them with the victory. Plenty of liberal journalists will secretly congratulate themselves — rather like the Philadelphia evangelist Father Divine, who, when the judge who had jailed him for contempt dropped dead of a heart attack, said solemnly, "I hated to do it." But they will be as wrong about that as they are about most other things.

Tourists ride the rails on narrow-gauge lines

By MERCER CROSS
National Geographic

CHAMA, N.M. — Trailing sooty black smoke, two steam engines struggle to pull 12 passenger-laden cars of the Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad up the steep mountain grade through stands of scrub oak, aspen and evergreens.

Atop 10,015-foot Cumbres Pass, the crew uncouples one of the coal-driven locomotives for the gradual descent. Snaking 64 miles through the San Juan Mountains between Chama and Antonito, Colo., the narrow-gauge train crosses high trestles and passes through tunnels blasted out of solid rock.

Narrow-gauges are a nostalgic link with an important chapter in America's past. During the mining boom of the late 1800s, such narrow-gauge railroads wound through the Rocky Mountains. Then, they hauled gold and silver.

More than 20 operate today — always over short distances — from Hawaii to Maine. These remaining few carry only tourists.

"Railroads are hot across the country," says Steve Shoe of Denver, executive director of the Model Railroad Industry Association and public relations director for a Colorado narrow-gauge, the Georgetown Loop.

Narrow-gauges — those less than the two-track standard of 4 feet 8.5 inches apart — are more adaptable than the heavier, more cumbersome standard-gauge trains in the rugged terrain of the West. They can climb steeper grades and execute horseshoe turns.

Their lower operating costs, lighter weight and greater flexibility have kept them in general use in much of the world today.

In the United States, Pennsylvania has more narrow-gauge lines than any other state, followed by California and Colorado, according to Shoe.

Rolling stock, track and buildings at all the lines have been restored, rebuilt or built from scratch. Some trains are part of museums or shopping centers.

Only a handful are descendants of actual working railroads. Colorado has more of these than any other state. The Cumbres & Toltec, which boasts that it is the nation's longest and highest narrow-gauge, is the only one that is jointly owned by two states, Colorado and New Mexico.

Like most other narrow-gauges in the snowy Rockies, the Cumbres & Toltec has a short season, Memorial Day through mid-October. Like many others, its profit margin is slim; keeping these relics running is an expensive business.

"We make a little money," general manager Joe C. Vigil tells National Geographic. "I expect we'll be here for a long time." The Cumbres and Toltec has operated as a tourist line since 1970, and the number of passengers increases 10 percent to 12 percent a year. More than 56,000 people rode the line last year, Vigil says.

He would gladly trade ridership with the Durango & Silverton Railroad in Durango, Colo., only 109 miles by road from Chama. Probably the best-known narrow-gauge in the country, the Durango & Silverton carried a record 210,000 passengers last year and has had more than 2 million since 1981, says vice president Amos Cordova.

As it has since the 1880s, the Durango & Silverton carries passengers through 45 miles of stunning wilderness along the Animas River to Silverton. The railroad makes a profit.

Things haven't gone so well for another historic Colorado narrow-gauge, the Colorado Central at Central City. It went bankrupt a few years ago and discontinued its 20-minute rides.

Central City and neighboring Blackhawk are now gambling towns. The Gilpin County Historical Society is looking for a buyer who might operate a restored railroad between casinos in the two communities. "Hopefully," says Imogene Rich, director of the county historical museum, "we'll be running in a couple of years."

In Rockhill Furnace, Pa., the 118-year-old East Broad Top, the oldest narrow-gauge east of the Rockies, battles for survival. Its decaying facilities, says general manager Stanley G. Hall, are still the most complete in the United States.

"We're making ends meet," Hall says of the national historic landmark. "But over the long haul, if we don't get some assistance I don't know how much longer we can exist."

The northernmost narrow-gauge is the White Pass & Yukon Route, which once transported Klondike miners from Skagway, Alaska, to Whitehorse in Canada's Yukon Territory.

Easternmost is the Sandy River & Rangely Lakes Railroad in Phillips, Maine, manned mostly by volunteers. "It's a lot of hard work," says director Kenneth R. Teale, "but a lot of fun."

On Hawaii's Maui Island, the Lahaina, Kaanapali & Pacific steams through sugar-cane fields. At Felton, Calif., the Roaring Camp & Big Trees wends through virgin redwoods.

Narrow-gauge whistles echo all across the country. Stanley Hall says, "It's like a time warp."

(National Geographic Society photo) A steam locomotive of the Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad passes through a bright grove of aspens. The rail line, longest and highest narrow-gauge in the United States, is one of the few working 19th-century narrow-gauges.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

How informed are you about homosexuality?

DEAR ABBY: A cousin and I have a difference of opinion. It has to do with common misconceptions about homosexuality.

I recall that you ran a true-false quiz dealing with this subject several years ago, and I would like to enlighten him.

Would you please run it again?
HIS COUSIN IN GALVESTON, TEXAS

DEAR COUSIN: I'm happy to run it again — and I hope it helps to shed a little enlightenment where needed:

How much do you know about homosexuality? Mark the following statements true or false:

1. Homosexuals commit more crimes than straight people. (True or False)
2. Everyone is born straight, but some become gay because they have been seduced by a gay person early in life. (True or False)
3. You can always tell homosexuals and lesbians by the way they act, dress and talk. (True or False)
4. With the proper therapy and motivation, a gay person can become straight. (True or False)
5. Boys raised by domineering mothers and weak (or absent) fathers usually turn into homosexuals. (True or False)
6. Gay people can never become mothers or fathers. (True or False)
7. Homosexuals are more inclined to molest children sexually than heterosexuals. (True or False)
8. If a person has one or two sexual experiences with someone of the same sex, he is gay. (True or False)
9. The American Psychiatric Association stated that homosexuals are "sick." (True or False)
10. Homosexuals can be legally married to each other under the law in the United States. (True or False)
11. Most homosexuals try to convert young people into becoming gay also. (True or False)
12. Children raised by gay parents (or gay people) usually become homosexuals themselves. (True or False)

How did you score?
If you marked all 12 statements "False," you are very well-informed.

If you marked nine statements "False," you are fairly well-informed.

If you marked four or more statements "True," you have a great deal to learn about homosexuality, because ALL of the above statements are false!

Women being shortchanged by medical research

By HARPER'S BAZAAR
For AP Special Features

Half the 500,000 people who die each year of heart disease are women, but research has focused almost entirely on men — and the same is true of research on everything from cancer to AIDS to alcoholism.

Only 13 percent of the $9 billion National Institutes of Health (NIH) budget goes to research female maladies such as breast cancer and osteoporosis, according to an article by Meryl Gordon in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar. Both the NIH and the medical establishment have traditionally relied on men in almost every study.

That may be changing, thanks to the Congressional Caucus of Women's Issues, the new Office of Research on Women's Health and the appointment of a woman to head the NIH.

One problem that has arisen because of the neglect of women's health involves drug side effects.

"Women have twice the number of fatal drug reactions as men," said Dr. Susan Blumenthal, chief of the behavioral medicine program at the NIH. "Women and men have different brain structures, different body weight and cerebral blood flow, which can influence drug metabolism."

The list of only-men-need-apply studies includes one that concluded caffeine does not cause heart attacks — which studied 45,000 coffee-drinking men. The MR.FIT — Multiple Risk Factors Intervention Trial — was an in-depth look at the causes of heart disease for 15,000 men. The report that aspirin can help prevent heart attacks came from a study of 22,000 people — all men.

"We cannot automatically assume that what's good for men is good for women," said Irma Mebane Sims, an epidemiologist at the NIH's National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

Part of the problem is that women typically become prone to heart disease 10 years later than men, at an age when they are prone to a variety of diseases from hypertension to diabetes.

"By our lack of understanding," Sims said, "we may be causing women with heart disease to stay in hospitals longer due to delayed diagnosis. They're often sicker when they come in, and there may be more severe side effects from treatment."

Experts blame a lethal mixture of sexism, cost-cutting, lethargy and ignorance.

"You fund what you fear," theorized Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., who co-chairs the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues, "and men weren't afraid of any of those diseases."

AIDS, which is now spreading most quickly among heterosexual females, presents a deadly information gap.

"If we don't know how HIV progresses in women, we don't get early diagnosis," said Kathleen Stoll, director of the National Resource Center on Women and AIDS.

As early as 1986 the NIH recognized the unfairness of its male-only studies and mandated that women and minorities be included in research tests. But when the issue was brought to Schroeder's attention in 1990, she requested a report from the General Accounting Office, which found the NIH had never bothered to change grant-application booklets to tell scientists to include women.

"The spotlight is on," said Judith LaRosa, deputy director of the NIH's new Office of Research on Women's Health. "You cannot apply for funding for research on diseases that affect women and not use women in the study."

Dr. Bernadine Healy, 48, the new head of the NIH, has launched what she describes as "a moon walk for women" — a 14-year, $600 million study of women ages 50 to 79 to research the effects of diet, estrogen-replacement therapy and dietary supplements on heart disease, breast and colon cancer and osteoporosis.

"Up until now," Healy said, "your doctor's advice on estrogen and what it will do to your health has been as good as the woman's next door."

New vaccine may protect against hepatitis A virus

By DR. DOUGLAS DIETERICH
New York University School of Medicine

A new vaccine, being tested for use in the United States, may soon afford permanent protection against the hepatitis A virus.

Hepatitis A is one of the most common strains of hepatitis, a disease of the liver which causes liver inflammation, fever and its most noted symptom, jaundice or yellowing of the skin.

Although the disease is seldom deadly, a bout of hepatitis A can incapacitate a patient for several weeks. In extreme cases, it can cause death from liver failure.

Because the virus is carried in feces, it is most common in Third World countries, where sanitation and hygiene are often poor. But it can also affect citizens of developed countries, particularly overseas travelers and those living in poorer areas.

The hepatitis A vaccine has recently been licensed for use in several countries in Europe, and trials so far indicate that it is quite effective. It is now being tested to determine whether it meets strict U.S. safety standards.

Americans at risk for hepatitis A, such as travelers to certain Third World countries, are inoculated with human normal immunoglobulin (HNIG), which elevates the level of anti-hepatitis antibodies in the blood.

Unlike a vaccine, HNIG injections only bolster the body's defenses for a limited time; the protection wears off in about six weeks.

What if all the rain fell at once?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The earth's average yearly rainfall is 32 inches. If it all fell at once, the world would be covered with almost three feet of water.

Mount Waialeale, Hawaii, has the highest local rainfall in the U.S. with 460 inches annually. This country's lowest rainfall is in Death Valley, Calif., with 1.78 inches per year.

Our wettest state is Hawaii, with 70 inches, and the driest is Nevada with 8.8 inches of rainfall annually.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

"LET'S GO TO MARKET!"

SUPER ACE MARKET DRUGS

IN THESE MODERN TIMES, GOING TO MARKET IS A MATTER OF GETTING INTO A CAR AND DRIVING TO THE SHOPPING CENTER. WE NEVER SEE THE MAN WHO GREW OUR FOOD, THE PEOPLE WHO MADE OUR CLOTHES, OR THE OTHER ARTICLES WE BUY AND USE. EVERYTHING IS PACKAGED NEATLY AND SHIPPED TO THE STORES WHERE WE DO OUR SHOPPING. BUT...

THE BIBLICAL MARKETPLACE WAS ANOTHER MATTER. A CITY'S GATEWAY OPENED INTO A KIND OF PLAZA—HERE WAS THE MARKET, WHERE EVERY KIND OF TRADING AND SELLING TOOK PLACE. AN ANCIENT SAYING DECLARED, "ONE CAN BUY ANYTHING IN THE MARKETS OF JERUSALEM, FROM A FINE CAMEL TO A FALSE TOOTH!" AND YOU WOULD MEET THE MAN WHO RAISED THE WHEAT YOU BOUGHT, OR THE GRAIN YOU WANTED FOR A FINE FLOUR—THE SHEEP-RAISER, THE OLIVE OIL-MAKER, THE FARMER, THE POTTER, THE CLOTH-SPINNER, WERE HERE TO PERSONALLY SELL YOU THEIR OWN GOODS. PEOPLE OF MANY NATIONS THROGGED JERUSALEM'S MARKETS—A DOZEN LANGUAGES MIGHT BE HEARD WITHOUT TAKING MORE THAN A FEW STEPS—A CONSTANT DIN OF VOICES, CRYING THE VIRTUES OF THIS MELON, THAT PERFUME, AGAINST A BACKGROUND OF THE CLINK AND JINGLE OF THE MONEY CHANGERS, WITHOUT WHOM THE BUYING AND SELLING OF ALL THESE GOODS COULD HARDLY BE MANAGED. A POLYGLOT OF ACTIVITY, WAS THE ANCIENT MARKETPLACE WHEN "GOING TO MARKET" WAS AN EXCITING EVENT, INDEED!

NEXT WEEK: THE MOST IMPORTANT ANIMAL OF BIBLICAL TIMES!

Religion

Study: Where charity and love prevail, God is found

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The search for the next Mother Teresa or St. Francis of Assisi will more likely begin on the bare floor of a chapel than in the teeming streets of Calcutta, a new study has found.

In an effort to determine why some people are exceptionally caring, psychologists studying members of religious orders found the quality separating members who find joy in caring for the poorest of the poor from those who respond out of duty is the depth of their personal relationship with God.

The findings by David McClelland and Carol Franz of Boston University go beyond traditional psychological theories that individuals essentially help others out of self-interest — either to fulfill a personal desire to aid others or to reduce the guilt felt for walking by someone in need.

"For helpful people there is a third force in the transaction, namely what might be most generally called a 'benevolent authority.' For these religious (people), the third force is more simply God," the researchers said.

The caring people study was part of a larger study on "The Future of Religious Orders in the United States" funded by the Lilly Endowment.

McClelland, professor emeritus of psychology at Harvard University who is renowned for his work in motivational psychology, and Franz studied 54 members of religious orders. One group contained 30 people regarded in their communities as exceptionally caring. The second group included 24 members identified as "typical" by their communities, but who still would generally be considered as helpful and caring.

In general, those in the "caring religious" group were more likely to establish personal relationships with the people they helped and were more likely to describe activities such as visiting the sick and helping the poor as being very valuable.

"Why do helpful people help? The researchers found that in the words of the old hymn, where charity and love prevail there God is ever found.

Asked to describe a healing experience, four times as many caring religious mentioned God's role in the experience. Members of the caring group also frequently described contemplative prayer as being very valuable.

Mother Teresa, who is considered exceptionally caring, embraces a child in this file photo.

Relying on God produced some practical benefits, the researchers found.

For starters, caring religious do not as easily burn out since they do not consider themselves responsible for doing the healing. They are also less likely to be manipulative as caregivers because they believe it is God, not them, that is the source of the healing.

"They don't see it as coming from themselves. They see themselves as coming from and identified with something larger than themselves," McClelland said.

Sharing their relationship with God is more important than fixing the immediate need of the individual.

"They don't stress the suffering and need — isn't that queer — nearly as much as those who have socialized power motives," McClelland said.

Take Mother Teresa as an example, McClelland said. The reason she can describe the joy in picking worms off a homeless man who will die a few hours later is "because this is the way she identifies with Jesus and the way he would want it."

In the act of seeing God in the people they serve, all of the filters of class, race and status that many people bring to relationships tend to disappear, said the Rev. David Nygren, who coordinated the larger study on religious orders with Sister Miriam Ukeritis.

"They pass through a barrier most of us have based on our own human needs ... or our fears," Nygren said.

The introduction of God may shatter traditional assumptions about why people help, but one scholar said the findings are reasonable.

"I think by all means it makes very good sense," said Wayne Rollins of Assumption College, chairman of the consultation on psychology and biblical studies for the Society of Biblical Literature. "I think that altruism which is rooted in a broader sense of self is a native potential for all human beings."

McClelland said the findings likely do not apply only to Christians. The identification with a larger power also can be found in Hinduism, Buddhism and Judaism, he said.

Outside religion, the implications of the research may even extend to superb physicians and judges for whom the higher power outside oneself can be simply medicine or the law, McClelland said.

"No matter what you do, if you're a charwoman or an investment banker, your relationships are less self-centered ... and your relationships are naturally better," McClelland said.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The City of Faith complex, which evangelist Oral Roberts says was inspired by a vision from God in the desert 15 years ago, is up for sale.

Richard Roberts, the evangelist's son and vice president of Oral Roberts University, said recently the deadline for submitting bids is Dec. 9.

The City of Faith, once a hospital, research center and medical school, was opened in 1981 and was designed to attract Roberts' followers from around the world. The City of Faith closed in November 1989 when the evangelist shut down the medical school because of financial problems.

"The sad day for the university was when we had to close down the City of Faith," said Mark Swadener, chief financial officer of the school. "We would like to see this become a vital asset to this area and to the university."

The centerpiece of the gold-painted, 2.3 million-square-foot complex is a 60-story tower, the tallest building in Oklahoma, flanked by a 20-story tower and a 30-story tower.

Oral Roberts, rocked by the deaths of his daughter and her husband in a 1977 plane crash, said he was seeking solace in a California desert when God told him to build a medical facility to be called the City of Faith.

The complex had a clinic and diagnostic center as its centerpiece, accompanied by a 20-story research center and a 30-story, 777-bed hospital.

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) — Forty-one denominations plan to establish more than 46,000 churches by the year 2000, according to a survey conducted by the National Forum on Evangelization and Church Planting.

St. Mark's sets breakfast, tea

The St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church plans two events this weekend — a breakfast on Saturday and an autumn tea on Sunday.

The breakfast at the church, 406 Elm St., is scheduled for 8 to 11 a.m. on Saturday. Sausage, bacon, eggs, pancakes, orange juice and coffee are on the menu.

The Sunday tea is scheduled for 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday at 600 Plains.

The public is invited to both events and donations will be accepted, said Pastor Merle L. Houska.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — A suburban Minneapolis religious coalition plans to bring spiritual values to the nation's largest indoor shopping mall.

The Mall Area Religious Council, made up of 20 area churches and religious agencies, recently held a Sunday ecumenical service at the 4.2 million-square-foot Mall of America.

Mark, my Words

By Mark Spencer

Burn blaming words, not the Harvesters

The Harvesters went down in flames last weekend. It happened figuratively when Vernon scorched Pampa's defense for 35 points and 315 yards in the first half on Friday. It also happened literally when somebody, or some bodies, torched the steel-pipe-and-hay Harvesters mascot outside the stadium on Saturday.

A lot has happened since then. The smoke has cleared from both sites. The Harvesters mascot has been rebuilt and should be standing proudly again at Harvester Stadium tonight.

The Harvesters have also been rebuilt to some degree. It remains to be seen if they, too, will stand proudly tonight. "We want very badly to turn the tide of this thing, and we're working hard to do that," Pampa Coach Dennis Cavalier said of the Harvesters' 0-4 record. "I think the spirit of our players continues to be good. I don't detect a sense of not wanting to get better. There's not, at least in my estimation, a feeling of 'let's get this over with.' Of course, we've got the district race coming up, and that's what we're busily preparing for."

That means if the Harvesters don't rise from the ashes this week, it doesn't matter. In fact, next week in the District 1-4A opener at Dumas might be a better place for the Harvesters to do a Phoenix imitation. "If you want to compare and contrast, let's talk about the New York Jets for example," Cavalier said. "They were undefeated in the preseason and are now 0-4. I'm sure there's the opposite of that, too — some team that lost in the preseason and is now winning. The point is it doesn't matter. Everybody in our district is 0-0 after this week."

But there's a case to be made about predistrict schedule strengths. Pampa's predistrict opponents including tonight's opponent, the Tascosa Rebels, have a collective record of 17-3 to this point. The only other district teams that are close to the Harvesters in that regard is Borger whose predistrict opponents are currently a collective 15-6 and Dumas who has played teams that are 15-5.

The other District 1-4A teams have considerably weaker preseason opponents based on those opponents' collective records. Consider Hereford's opponents are 11-9, and Randall's are 9-12. Caprock has played a predistrict schedule that currently has a 7-12 collective record.

Also, three of Pampa's predistrict opponents are in higher classifications, and another, Vernon, is the No. 2 ranked team in Class 3A. No one in the district can match that. "I guess there is a certain logic that would indicate our record is deceiving in comparison to some of our district opponents," Cavalier said. "We've been playing awfully good teams, but we haven't beaten them. That's what everyone sees."

And so human nature forces some people to try and find someone to blame. Cavalier told me in an interview last week that he accepted the blame for the Harvesters' slow start.

Apparently for some, that wasn't good enough. They took it out on the mascot or they hung blame on certain players. One caller even suggested that I was the problem, too. (Gee thanks, I didn't know I had such far-reaching powers.)

If someone has to blame someone or something, I suppose they'll do it. That's his or her prerogative and opinion. I have my mine, too. I think to point blame anywhere now is, well, pointless.

Let me pose this scenario. What if Pampa would have played Caprock's schedule and was sitting at 4-0 right now?

Would a bronze bust of Cavalier be on display at City Hall? Would the Harvesters players be likened to Olympic heroes? (Less importantly, would I be credited for their success? Where's that caller now?)

Anyway, back to the scenario, the Harvesters storm into next week's district schedule and get blown away five times.

What would happen then? Possibly, cries would ring out about how the easy predistrict schedule didn't prepare Pampa for the district wars. Or, Cavalier's statue would be melted down. (Maybe that caller would accuse me of making the schedule.)

These things sound ridiculous, but aren't they as speculative as the things Pampa's critics are saying now?

I can't tell the future any better than the next person. The Harvesters could rebound and have a great district season or they could not. While no one knows what is going to happen, I do know what I've seen.

The Harvesters have run into four powerful teams so far and have shown improvement, statistically and mechanically, each time out. The Harvesters have also shown no signs of quitting during their practices. The five district teams looming in the future, although not easy, will not stack up to the competition the Harvesters have faced so far.

And finally, the Pampa coaches have stuck to their season gameplan. They have been aiming to get the Harvesters ready for the district season ahead of whatever might happen during the predistrict.

Quite simply, it appears the Harvesters are the most battle-tested team in District 1-4A now on the twilight of the district season. It is much too early to count them out because of a lousy preseason record, a figure that is useless after tonight.

"If in fact we have not succumbed to the inclination that we are not capable of winning, going into the district race should be like a renewal," Cavalier said. "If we've done a good job coaching, we should do a good job in district."

Until then, burn the blaming words. Give the Harvesters — and their mascot for that matter — a chance to stand up out of the rubble.

Harvesters plan for happy homecoming

By MARK SPENCER
Sports Editor

Homecoming games traditionally bring out the best atmosphere a high school football game can offer.

Tonight's hope for Pampa Coach Dennis Cavalier is that homecoming also brings out the best performance his team can offer as the Harvesters, 0-4, play host to the Tascosa Rebels, 3-1, at 7:30 at Harvester Stadium.

"I've always taken the approach that homecoming is for students and football players are students, too," Cavalier said. "Of course, I'm the football coach, and I'd prefer they think football, but I also realize there's a student life here. They need to be a part of that."

As part of the homecoming celebration, the Pampa High School student body has participated in a different spirit activity each day. And of course, the traditional crowning of the homecoming queen will be held at halftime.

But despite these extra activities, Cavalier doesn't believe the Harvesters have been distracted during their preparations this week.

"I don't have a sense of that at all," Cavalier said. "I have not been overly concerned or concerned at all what their part in that is."

Considering the team that they are playing, the Harvesters need little reason for devoting their full attention to preparing for Tascosa.

The Rebels, despite lacking a dominant offensive player, have rolled up an average of 362 yards a game this season. And on defense, Tascosa has allowed an average of 215 yards an outing behind the defensive line play of Brandon Slay and Derek Leinen.

"They were expecting a good team this year after returning a lot of players from last year's playoff team," Cavalier said. "So far, that's the case. They have a very quality program."

Likewise, the Rebels have turned in some quality performances this season. The exception was last week when the Plainview Bulldogs, 28-17 winners over Pampa two Fridays ago, gave Tascosa its only loss primarily because of crucial Rebels turnovers.

7:30 p.m., Harvester Stadium

According to Tascosa Coach Duane Huey, making the same mistakes tonight against Pampa could lead to the Rebels' second loss on the season.

"We must score when we get the opportunity," Huey said. "We want to keep the ball away from them and score when we can. The other thing is we must play good defense. I'm not talking about for one or two quarters. We're going to need it for four quarters against Pampa."

The Harvesters are coming off a disappointing loss — although not a disappointing performance — to the Vernon Lions.

Pampa trailed 35-12 at halftime during that game but limited the Lions, who played their first string all but the last series of the game, to only seven second-half points.

"I feel good for what they were willing to do," Cavalier said. "And at the same time, it gives me hope for the future. If we played the first half like we did the second half, then maybe we would be talking about our victory now."

In addition to searching for their first victory tonight, the Harvesters are also putting the final touches on their offensive and defensive gameplan in anticipation of next week's District 1-4A opener at Dumas.

Part of that gameplan, at least offensively, might feature the use of more players to help keep fresher players in the game.

"We emphasized that a little bit last Friday," Cavalier said. "We're discovering more and more about our team." And maybe tonight, the Harvesters will discover their first victory as well.

All This For Nothing

Mississippi State wide receiver Fred Ward (1) makes a catch, but is later ruled out of bounds, ahead of Florida's Will White Thursday in Starkville, Miss. The Bulldogs beat Florida, 30-6.

Aikman remembers big hit

IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman returns Monday to the Veterans Stadium scene of Clyde Simmons 1990 hit that separated his shoulder. Not only would the Dallas Cowboys quarterback like to pay Simmons back for the big hit he would like to beat the Philadelphia Eagles for the first time.

"I believe he came from the right side," Aikman said. "The next thing I knew I was driven into the ground like a nail, my shoulder was separated and my season was over."

Aikman is 0-5 as a starter against Philadelphia with only two touchdown passes and seven interceptions.

He's also been sacked a lot by Philadelphia. Aikman was bagged 11 times by the Eagles in a 24-0 loss at Texas Stadium last season. Aikman was injured against Washington and didn't get a second shot at the NFC East rivals.

So it's payback time. But how's he going to do it? "I've thought about my lack of success against them," he said. "It's something I just have to overcome. There are a lot of quarterbacks who haven't done well against them. John Elway (Denver) had a pretty hard time a week ago. The Eagles just may have one of the best defenses of all-time."

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Aikman's day is coming. "We had a bad football team behind Troy a couple of years ago," Johnson said. "It's not unique for a quarterback to have trouble with Philadelphia, particularly a young one. It's not an individual thing. Troy is better equipped to play Philadelphia now. He also has more help. Our offensive line is much, much better."

Lakers give Magic $19.6 million deal

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — No matter how long he plays, Magic Johnson will be paid $19.6 million by the Los Angeles Lakers over the next three years.

Johnson signed a $14.6 million one-year contract extension with the Lakers on Thursday — the largest single-season salary in team sports — two days after announcing he would return to the team following a one-year layoff.

A source, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the deal guaranteed Johnson $19.6 million through the end of the 1994-95 season. Johnson already was under contract for this season and 1993-94 at $2.5 million per year.

The Lakers released a statement Thursday announcing the extension, but gave no details on dollar terms. A source close to the negotiations revealed the terms to The Associated Press.

Johnson, 33, expects to play 50-60 games this season, but his future beyond that is uncertain. When announcing his return, he indicated he probably wouldn't play past this season.

Johnson retired on Nov. 7, 1991, after he was diagnosed as HIV positive, but came back to play for the gold medal-winning U.S. basketball team at the Barcelona Olympics.

"Earvin is ecstatic about the contract," said Johnson's agent, Lon Rosen, who also gave no details of the contract. "He's grateful that (Lakers owner) Jerry Buss has agreed to do this and he hopes to bring a championship back to Los Angeles."

His one-year salary in 1994-95 surpasses the $9.4 million average that Patrick Ewing of the New York Knicks will earn under an extension he signed last November for the 1995-96 and 1996-97 seasons.

Ewing's extension, when added to his current contract, guaranteed him $33 million over six years, or an average of $5.5 million per year. Shaquille O'Neal, this year's No. 1 pick in the NBA draft, signed with the Orlando Magic for $40 million over seven years, or an average of $5.7 million per year.

Johnson will average slightly more than $6.5 million a year. Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs has the largest contract in baseball at $28.4 million for four years, an average of $7.1 million per year.

NBA rules don't allow a contract extension if the existing contract goes through a person's 35th year unless there are two years left on the current deal. A third year can always be added. "This extension is something that Dr. Buss said he would do long ago, but Earvin didn't want to announce it until after he made his decision whether or not to play," Lakers general manager Jerry West said in the statement. "The extension has nothing to do with Tuesday's announcement and is something that we were going to do even if he didn't come back to play."

Orangemen express relief after NCAA probation

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — More than disappointment, Syracuse basketball players said they feel relief that the NCAA probe is over and the school has learned its punishment.

"The two years we were under investigation were pretty tough on everyone," said senior guard Mike Hopkins. "Now it's over. Everyone's just coming together. Syracuse basketball is back."

Similar sentiments were expressed by coach Jim Boheim and elsewhere from Big East conference members after the NCAA revealed the sanctions it would impose on Syracuse.

The NCAA placed Syracuse's athletics program on two years' probation and banned the men's basketball team from postseason play for the 1992-93 season because of recruiting and booster violations.

"Obviously, we're happy to see it over. Now we can go on and know what's ahead. It's always the most difficult thing not knowing what will happen," said Boheim.

Since they can't play for the national championship, disappointed Syracuse University basketball players said they would set their sights on the Big East tournament instead.

The Big East athletic directors will discuss whether Syracuse can play in the 1993 tournament at a meeting next week in Providence, R.I. Conference commissioner Michael Tranghese said he thinks the Orangemen should be allowed to play.

Postseason play is an important motivating force for college players, and particularly the Orangemen, who have appeared in nine straight NCAA tournaments, said Boheim. But Boheim said other teams, such as Kentucky, have managed to build nationally-ranked teams while on probation.

"There's tremendous disappointment. It's a tremendous punishment," he said. But "knowing our players, they'll respond and play every bit as hard as if they were in the NCAA tournament."

The seniors on the team want to graduate with a good record, sanctions or no sanctions, Hopkins said. "We want to go out like winners."

Being excluded from postseason play "makes every game that much more important," said McRae. "Because we know at a certain point it's going to be over."

The penalties imposed against Syracuse by the NCAA were the first against a Big East Conference team since the league formed in 1979.

"These are never good things," Miami athletic director Dave Maggard said. "Syracuse is one of our brethren. As a conference, we will all stand together. Everyone will stand behind Syracuse and they will come back and be one of our key players."

"The conference has good people. We'll pull through it and so will Syracuse."

The fact that Syracuse cooperated prevented the Orangemen from receiving harsher penalties.

"That Syracuse cooperated is significant," Seton Hall athletic director Larry Keating said. "They recognized the problem and corrected it."

"I've been in the league eight years and we've been trying to do things the right way. I think the atmosphere in the Northeast is under control."

Pigskin Predictions

After spending the first four weeks in or near the pigskin pickers' cellar, Sportswriter L.D. Strate made a change into second place last week by going 10-2. "I was tired of messing around," Strate explained. "I decided to get serious." Meanwhile, the other three pickers did not fare as well. "A well-trained champion could have done better," Sports Editor Mark Spencer, currently in third place, said. Heading into Week 5, Managing Editor J. Alan Bryzes is in first. Staff Photographer Dan Wiegers is in last place.

Pampa takes two victories

The Pampa High School junior varsity and freshman football teams collected victories Thursday.

Pampa's junior varsity tripped the Tasocsa junior varsity 28-6 at Harvester Stadium.

The freshman team defeated Randall 30-0. An extra half was played after the freshman game so more players could get some experience.

Randall defeated Pampa in the extra two quarters, 20-0.

Spurs to play in Alamodome

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A contract has been settled that will allow the San Antonio Spurs to play their home games in the Alamodome starting in 1994, San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff says.

Wolff made the announcement Thursday after the City Council staff a closed-door briefing from city staff members concerning the negotiations.

Area teams face tough challenges

Wyatt keys Pirates' victory

Lefors was able to enjoy its homecoming last week thanks to a 58-6 defeat of Samnorwood.

And the Pirates were able to collect that victory thanks to a big night by senior Gary Wyatt.

Wyatt rushed for 239 yards and scored four touchdowns to lead the area's Player of the Week nominees.

The Pirates nominated Dusty Helder as their defensive stand-out for last week.

Going into tonight's football activity, Canadian, White Deer, McLean and Miami have a combined record of 4-12.

All four teams were beaten last week and that won-loss mark may not improve much after this weekend's slate of games. Opponents Perryton, Gruver, Chillicothe and Valley have a combined 12-3 record.

Perhaps Stan Caffey, whose White Deer team lost to Clarendon, 54-2, last week, has the right perspective on the situation.

"You've got to put those losses behind you and go on. There's always next Friday night to look forward to. That's the great thing about high school football," Caffey said.

Canadian visits 3A club

Canadian moves up the ladder, visiting Class 3A Perryton for an 8 p.m. game.

"Perryton has a very solid 3A team. They're big, fast and have a lot of depth. Most of their players just go one way," Canadian coach Paul Wilson said.

Canadian opened the season with wins over West Texas High (33-6) and Quannah (35-6). Since then the Wildcats have fallen on hard times, losing to Stratford (19-0) and Childress (7-6) the last two weeks.

Perryton (3-1) outlasted Panhandle, 16-12, last week, and the Rangers' only loss has been to Class 4A Dumas. However, Perryton has wins over Borger and Guyton, Okla., both 4A teams.

"Perryton is going to be awfully tough to beat. We would just like to play a good game against them," Wilson said.

Perryton had a 40-man roster and coach Dan Hurley doesn't waste many players.

"When most of your players go one-way, it sure beats the fire out of a boy that plays both offense and defense," Wilson said.

Winless Miami improves

Miami (4-0) is showing improvement despite a 49-0 loss to fifth-ranked Rochester last week.

Unbeaten Rochester was able to rush for only two first downs against Miami's defense.

Although that statistic may not mean much to the average fan, it means a lot to Miami coach Terry Bean. It shows the Warriors, a young team which returned only three starters from a year ago, are putting the pieces together bit by bit.

"That's something that doesn't show up on the scoreboard, but we knew going into the game we had to stop their sweep, and we were able to do that. They scored once on an interception, and they got their other first downs on passing," Bean said.

Things don't get any easier for Miami, which hosts highly-regarded Chillicothe at 7:30 p.m.

"We've got those tough teams stacked up. Chillicothe has one of the best backs in the state in Anthony Jackson (6-2, 225-pounds). He killed us last year," Bean said.

Chillicothe (2-1) outlasted McLean, 63-56, last week.

"We've got a young team and I think it's good we're playing this tough competition," Bean said.

"It gives our young players a chance to see what they could be like next year or the following year. They need to see what it's like to play a ranked team."

Sophomore Gene Hurst is one of the players who could help turn Miami's fortunes around.

Here are the other player of the week nominees:

Pampa: Offense, Brad Smilie. Defense, Marc Hampton.

Canadian: Offense, No selection. Defense, Jody Stewart.

Wheeler: Offense, Joe Dan Ledbetter. Defense, Genaro Meraz.

White Deer: Offense, No selection. Defense, Lee Silva.

McLean: Offense, Christian Looney. Defense, No selection.

Miami: Both, Gene Hurst.

Against Rochester, he had five solo tackles and six assists from his cornerback position. In the offensive backfield, Hurst had 75 yards in passing and 45 yards in rushing.

"Those may not be real big numbers, but it's not bad considering the caliber of team we were playing. Hurst only weighs about 150 pounds, but he's quite a competitor," Bean said.

McLean battles second-ranked Valley

McLean's schedule continues to get tougher as the Tigers go on the road to meet second-ranked Valley at 7:30 p.m.

Three of McLean's five non-district opponents are currently ranked among the state's top six-man teams while one remains unbeaten.

Last week, the Tigers fell to Chillicothe, ranked among the top 15, in a wild-scoring affair, 63-56.

"We've got a lot of offense, but not much defense," said McLean coach Jerry Miller. "We're playing a super-tough schedule, but one of the best ways to learn to play is to play the best."

McLean has lost to fifth-ranked Lubbudize and unranked, but unbeaten, Silvertown.

The Tigers' only victory came against a team that could go far in the playoffs. McLean beat Follet, 61-36, the second game of the season. That's been the Panthers' only loss.

Valley (4-0) has a potent combination of quickness and strength in its backfield. Jason Smith (5-7, 155) provides the quickness while Josh Scroggins (6-6, 210) provides the strength.

"Smith is a real quick back and Scroggins runs well for a big player. They've got a good, all-around team," Miller said.

Behind all-state back Christian Looney, the Tigers' offense is scoring points at a clip of 43.7 points a game.

Last week against Chillicothe, Looney scored five touchdowns and ran for two more.

The Tigers are giving up 50.2 points a game, but Miller has confidence the defense will get tougher.

"Our defense just hasn't gelled yet, but I feel like they're going to start coming around," he said. "It's just a matter of time."

White Deer looks to snap losing streak

Since starting the season with a 20-7 victory over Beaver, Okla., the Bucks have suffered three consecutive losses.

That losing streak could end tonight when White Deer (1-3) visits winless Kress (0-4) for an 8 p.m. encounter.

"Both of these teams are struggling right now, but somebody is going to get some relief tonight," said Bucks' coach Stan Caffey.

The Bucks, who have scored only 18 points in the last three games, have been working this week on eliminating offensive mistakes.

"We need to reduce our turnovers," Caffey said. "Our mistakes have been putting our defense in a bind. Our turnovers really snowballed on us against Clarendon."

Tonight's game ends White Deer's non-district schedule. The Bucks open District 1-1A play next weekend at home against Shamrock.

"This is our last tuneup before district and we'd like to win it," Caffey said. "We've been on the road the last two games, so we're looking forward to being back home to start district."

Majority in military support policy barring women from direct combat

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Most members of the armed forces say they support the military policy that bars women from direct combat roles, a presidential commission was told Thursday.

A poll conducted by the Roper Organization for the commission also showed that four of every 10 service people think assigning women to combat would harm national security.

This included 63 percent of Marines and 53 percent of those in the Army, but only 43 percent of Navy and Air Force personnel.

However, in response to more specific questions, only 49 percent said women should not be assigned to ground combat, 30 percent said they should be barred from combat aircraft and 29 percent said they should not be on fighting ships.

The results were presented to the Presidential Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces, which is examining laws and policies that ban women from direct combat.

"The findings suggest majority support for assignment of women to combat aircraft and combat ships but not to ground combat," said Carolyn Setlow of the polling organization.

The strongest resistance to the assignment of women was found among those with combat specialties, 72 percent of whom favored the current policy.

Congress created the commission at the same time that it repealed a prohibition on women in combat aircraft.

Women now make up about 11 percent of the armed forces.

Paul Jones, director of defense force management for the congressional General Accounting Office, which is studying the performance of women in the Gulf War, said their performance appraisals were "highly positive although expectations had been generally low."

Jones said restrictions on putting women in forward positions were unevenly applied and when they were applied "may have impeded the most effective use of human resources."

The Roper poll said 98 percent of the military who served in the Gulf War rated the performance of men in their unit as excellent or good, but only 61 percent gave similar ratings to the women.

More than eight out of 10 Air Force personnel and two-thirds of those in the Navy gave excellent or good ratings to the women, but only 48 percent of soldiers and 44 percent of Marines did so. Nevertheless, 96 percent of those in all services said the performance of their unit as a whole was excellent or good.

The poll showed that 19 percent believed women in the military should be required to take non-combat assignments while a third of them believed women should be given the assignments only if they volunteered for them. Fifty-two percent of the military personnel believed that young women should be drafted in a national emergency.

The survey was done by mailing 8,000 questionnaires between July 20 and July 23. The Roper organization said 4,442 completed questionnaires were received and tabulated.

The margin of error for the poll was plus or minus 4 percentage points.

The GAO, an investigating arm of Congress, also reported on sexual harassment at the service academies. Jones said the most commonly reported harassment consists of gibes from other cadets that standards have been lowered in order to admit women.

One member of the commission, retired Army Maj. Gen. Mary Elizabeth Clarke, suggested that the service academies test the idea of sending women into combat by putting them on their football teams.

"Maybe we should test this in a non-lethal environment first and see what happens," said Clarke. "If they really were the best players, surely they would be on the team, wouldn't they?"

Male and female astronauts told the commission they encountered no difficulties working together in space.

"The fact that I was depending on a woman to do things that would keep me out of harm's way was never an issue," said retired Navy Capt. Rick Hauck.

Wallace remains hospitalized in critical condition

By MATT KELLEY
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Gov. George C. Wallace, hospitalized for nearly a week with a blood infection, remained in critical condition after surgery to insert a breathing tube in his throat.

Doctors inserted the tube during an hour-long procedure Thursday, said Jackson Hospital spokeswoman Vicky Jones.

"He's certainly still in critical condition," Mrs. Jones said. "His physicians continue to hold his prognosis at about a 20 percent chance of survival."

The surgery was the first step toward weaning Wallace from a respirator, Mrs. Jones said.

The surgery was the second in less than a week for Wallace, 73. He has had health problems since he was paralyzed from the waist down by a would-be assassin 20 years ago.

Doctors also put Wallace on a special air mattress which constantly moves, helping ease fluid buildup in his lungs and prevent bedsores, Mrs. Jones said.

Wallace underwent emergency surgery for an abdominal hernia the day he was admitted to the hospital, but doctors said that condition was not linked to the blood infection, which doctors were treating with antibiotics.

Wallace was elected governor in 1962, 1970, 1974 and 1982, and he ran for president four times. Although he pledged "segregation forever" during his first inaugural address, Wallace won his last term as governor with the help of black voters after renouncing his former racial stands.
