AUSTIN (AP) — Most years, the race for the Texas Railroad Commission is relatively low-key affair over seats on a panel that deals with

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

J. Alan Brzys Managing Editor

We could borrow from Russia's idea

It has been a year since the collapse of communism, but Russia finally is getting around to privatizing its state industries. Recently, the Russian government issued every person in the country, including children, a 10,000-ruble certificate — worth about $40 U.S. The certificates will be used to purchase stock in up to 7,000 factories that the government of President Boris Yeltsin hopes to privatize before the end of the year. In addition to the vouchers, some stock will be held by a particular factory's management and workers.

Anatoly B. Chubais, deputy prime minister in charge of privatization, told The New York Times, "This is the starting point of the capitalist education of the Russian people. The first thing we have to do is start the process.'

Unfortunately, only about 70 percent of government-run companies will be privatized. Why not privatize them all? Trading in shares is prohibited until Dec. 1. guaranteeing a black market. Why not allow trading from day one?

And about 20 percent of the vouchers will be given out next year, after the trading and bidding has begun. Why not issue all the vouchers now?

The delays are part of a mentality, known in America and other capitalist countries as well, of shielding the people from the supposedly harsh actions of the free market. Yes, people sometimes get hurt making mistakes in the market. But they are hurt even more when the market is limited, because a "safe" market is not a market at all, but a political construction of the kind the Russians are trying Russians would be well advised to use the "cold bath" approach of Eastern Europe, where capitalism, while not fully instituted, was restored much more rapidly in Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia. (The former East Germany is a special case because the former West Germany is subsidizing the capitalist conversion). A sharp scalpel cuts with the least pain. By contrast, Bulgaria and Romania have privatized more slowly and therefore continue to suffer more from the remnants of socialism.

Despite the problems and mistakes, the Russians privatization plan should fertilize the buds of capitalism already growing in the country. In particular, the voucher plan will give the first assessment of the relative value of the thousands of government-run factories in Russia. Some companies will prove surprisingly valuable; others so worthless they will shut down, their buildings and equipment sold off.

In fact, the Russian idea is so good we should use it in America. We could give each citizen a voucher, to be used as stock in government enterprises to be privatized: interstate highways, public schools, public hospitals, prisons, public sports stadia, national parks, airports, etc. Privatization would bring an added benefit: We could refund the tax money now spent to keep up such facilities. Let's have a new, peaceful competition with the Russians: a race to see which country can most quickly privatize the most assets.

Ah, what a lovely debate

WASHINGTON — Constitutional buffs are about to have a wonderful winter of disputation. It's always pleasant to argue over the establishment clause or the search-and-seizure clause, but these get to be old hat. Now we have something brandnew — the impeachment clause.

That is not all. The Senate's exercise of its power to try impeachments is deliciously coupled to double jeopardy. O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay! We chortle in our joy.

On Oct. 14 the high court will hear the appeal of Walter L. Nixon, a former U.S. district judge in to accept a bribe. In 1983 a trial jury acquitted him. Alabama. He was impeached by the House in 1989 for lying to a grand jury about allegations that he sought to influence a state criminal prosecution.

Following a procedure adopted in 1935, the Senate turned the articles of impeachment over to a special committee. The committee heard four days of testimony from 10 witnesses and filed a transcript with the full Senate. On Nov. 1, 1989, the Senate tried the case. The judge himself addressed the chamber for 30 minutes. The Senate deliberated in closed session for six hours, then found him guilty on two of the three articles.

Hastings' fellow judges in the 11th Circuit were not impressed by the acquittal. They believed the judge was lying, and they mounted their own investigation and recommended that he be thrown off the bench. The House voted 413-3 to impeach him. The Senate again delegated the matter to a committee.

Between July 10 and Aug. 3, 1989, the committee spent 18 days in hearing from 54 witnesses. It ings' plea of double jeopardy. The evidence accepted 365 exhibits and compiled 6,000 pages of a printed record. In October the Senate found Hastings guilty and ordered him removed from office.

of us who revel in constitutional cases. He has forced his superior judges to face a question as old as the republic: To what extent may the federal courts challenge the procedures of Congress?

It has been accepted since the day of John Marshall that the Supreme Court may hold acts of Congress unconstitutional. This is different. The Constitution says that "the Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments." The Constitution also says that each chamber may determine the rules of its own proceedings. Members may not be questioned "in any other place" for their official decisions.

Against that background, where do Nixon and Hastings stand? One other federal judge, Harry Claiborne of Nevada, was convicted on impeachment articles in 1986 after he was found guilty of tax evasion. He too was tried by the Senate after a committee took evidence. Is the procedure unconstitutional?

The more absorbing question goes to Alcee Hastagainst him at his bribery trial was wholly circumstantial. His alleged confederate was caught redhanded, but Hastings got off. Clearly, he was impeached for the identical charges for which a trial jury already had acquitted him.

But if acquittal is a bar to impeachment, a prior conviction must also be a bar. By this reasoning, the Senate could never try the impeachment of a federal

That strikes me as unpersuasive reasoning. As I see it, impeachment is strictly the business of the House and Senate. Prima donnas in the courts would judge in Florida. He was charged with conspiring but he surely has brightened the autumn for those Congress has enough prima donnas of its own.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Oct. 12, the 286th day of 1992. There are 80 days left in the year. This is Columbus Day in the United States, as well as Thanksgiving Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History: Five hundred years ago, on Oct. 12, 1492 (Old Style calendar; Oct. 21 New Style), Christopher Columbus arrived with his expedition in the present-day Bahamas.

On this date:

In 1861, the Confederate ironclad Manassas attacked the northern ship Richmond on the Mississippi River. In 1870, Gen. Robert E. Lee, the Confederate military commander, died in Lexington, Va., at age 63. In 1892, 100 years ago, the original version of the Pledge of Allegiance was first recited in public Tomorrow, I love ya!

Medical professionals and politicians chewing their fingernails up past the second knuckle, pondering what to do about the escalating costs of health care, are looking at the hole instead of the doughnut!

We should be celebrating.

Medical, nutritional and sanitational science are adding 18 weeks to the average human life span every 24 months!

And tomorrow and tomorrow promise excitement beyond belief! Dr. Jeffery Fisher, anatomical and clinical pathologist, has written a new book called "Rx It's subtitled "Breakthroughs in Health, Medicing and Longevity by the Year 2000." The book is barely in print and it's already outdated by the continuing chain-reaction explosion of medical research. Every new issue of the AMA Journal and the New England Journal of Medicine include brighter hope for tomorrow. Not all that we call progress is progress, but in medicine we have made measurable, provable

Paul Harvey

And, within a future that we can already foresee, Dr. Fisher expects a morning-after contraceptive pill'... A vaccine for Lyme disease ...

Implanted teeth replacing dentures ...

Cataracts prevented by antioxidants ... Seventy-five percent fewer people becoming blind through the use of nutritional supplements and eye exercises .. Birth control pills for men ...

No more face wrinkles as artificial skin replaces tired skin utterly inconspicuously.

Dr. Fisher expects that within 10 years AIDS will be 80 percent curable and, with genetically produced vaccines, preventable.

Baldness treated with genetic therapy, manipulating the gene that regulates the baldness enzyme. Polyvalent vaccines will prevent 80 percent of the common colds. Artificial limbs will look and function like normal limbs.

Genetic therapy will allow prospective parents to enhance the intelligence of pre-embryos.

Safe substances will enhance creativity, instill confidence, selectively control emotions.

Injecting calls into the veins of diabetics — even where the pancreas has been destroyed — the need for insulin will be eliminated.

Alzheimer's will be preventable by altering the predisposing genes.

With the introduction of artificial placenta, combined with in vitro fertilization, human reproduction will be possible entirely outside a human body. Most conditions will be diagnosed and treated at home with non-invasive equipment.

Within 40 years heart disease will be no more. The death rate will be down 99 percent. The average human life span will be 150 years. Tomorrow, I love ya! And, as Annie sang, "You're only a day away!"

Pointed questions for debaters

FOR CLINTON: Are you a liberal? (The old Michael Dukakis query, which, alas, has fallen off the screen at an important moment.)

Follow-ups: If "no," why was it wrong for Bush to use the issue? Why do Democrats keep referring to "Willie Horton" and "Willie Horton issues" as if Democrats were right and Republicans were wrong?

Do you believe that the current economic showdown (or "recession,) if you prefer) will end on its own within the next year or so, if not sooner, just appointees at the Department of State vigorously as the eight previous recent recessions have ended, on their own? Follow-up: If not, why not?

Parents in the workforce often end up trying gently to assess how mild, momentary or perhaps psychosomatic their child's ailment might be. Then the guilt sets in: her home in Raleigh, N.C., Beverly How do you rate this tiny person's degree of misery?

'You don't want to tell your kids they have to go to school even if they have a sore throat or stomachache," said Ms. Wahl, an assistant editor at Executive Female Magazine in New York. "But you sometimes do it anyway and hope for the best because you don't want to look undependable."

Despite a growing sensitivity to parents who work outside the home, a certain bias still exists in many offices. The parent who stays home with a sick child may be cast as unreliable or uncommitted to the team.

Ideally, one or the other parent can take a day or two off. But many bosses frown on this, forcing workers into uncomfortable lies. For single parents especially, it may mean risking a job they need to survive.

friend or relative is available to help out. Some communities, though they are the minority, offer emergency day care alternatives through a hospital, community or private

But such resources are scarce. Most parents are more or less on their own when the day care center turns away a feverish child or the baby sitter refuses to come.

"The negotiations are very delicate. Egos are on the line," said Barbara Reisman, executive director of the Child Care Action Campaign in New York. "Couples can make all kinds of arrangements, but survey after survey shows that emergencies are still real killers."

Increasingly, teachers and school nurses say, parents are gambling that their child will feel better by

"Throwing up is the ticket home. 'What? A fever? Well, how bad is They don't fool around on that of two. "The janitors come along with the sweeping compound and you come and get your child."

Though her husband is willing to share in the responsibility and works in New Jersey, which is closer to their kids' school than her office in New York City, Ms. Reisman said, "it's still me who gets the Studies indicate men and women load than in decades past, but it is still women - even those with fulltime jobs — who handle about 80 percent of the laundry, shopping, child care and cooking.

Of 14 million employed married women with children under 15 years old, 3.7 percent reported they alone missed work the previous month because child care arrangements broke down, according to a new census report. Among husbands, it was 0.7 percent.

At a baby shower recently near Mills listened with interest as the guests - other mothers - complained that their husbands weren't involved enough in child-rearing.

"When children get sick, the first words out of their mouths are still very often, 'I want my mommy. And that induces a lot of guilt," said Ms. Mills, author of the syndicated question-and-answer column

The bonds formed during maternity leave are strong, and the weight of tradition not easily bucked. Earl Grollman, co-author of "The Working Parent Dilemma," said many men still tend to view themselves as the traditional bread-winner — even when their wives make more

"The real problem for men is that they still feel nurturing isn't within their province," said Grollman, who The lucky families know a nearby lectures widely on parenting. "But those who have assumed more of a role tell me how much more meaningful their life is. They're not only bringing children into the world, but also sharing in the joys and pain."

For their part, child care advocates say, employers and government policy-makers must do a better job of recognizing the growing role of women - parents - in the

President Bush last month vetoed the Family and Medical Leave Act for the second time in as many years. The failed bill would have guaranteed many American workers ur to 12 weeks of unpaid leave a year to care for a new child or ill relative. Daughter wants to say nay to dad's gift horse years, my husband, our 16-year-old daughter and I have received expensive Christmas gifts from one of my father's lady friends. (I'll call her Libby.) Dad lives in Connecticut and Libby lives in Florida. Mother died four years ago.

At first, I was only uncomfortable with Libby's gifts. Now I am irritated by them. I have never met this woman — she is 30 years younger than Dad and is only one of the many women he's dated. Dad is quite well-to-do, and Libby apparently considers him marriage material. (He has told us that he will never marry again.)

I don't want Libby's gifts, and I dislike writing thank-you notes to someone I've never met. My husband and daughter share my feelings. Two years ago in my thankyou note to Libby, I told her as graciously as I could that it wasn't necessary to send us gifts, as I know how busy she must be. (She's a part-time model.) She didn't get the hint because she sent gifts again last year. I have sent her only cards. Now what?

ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: Well before Christmas, write to Libby and ask her to please send no more gifts to you, your husband and daughter. You might suggest that with so many homeless and starving people in the world, she should consider helping them instead of sending gifts to those who have far more than they need.

IRVING (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys got downright defensive about the way they were treated in Philadelphia.

The Cowboys gave the most dominating defensive performance in club history to blank the Seattle Seahawks 27-0 Sunday.

The victory earned a share of the NFC East lead when the Eagles fell 24-17 to Kansas City. Dallas lost 31-7 Monday night to the Eagles. The two teams, both 4-1, meet again Nov. 1 in Dallas.

His fist-pumping display as he struck out pinch-hitter Ed Sprague to end the eighth stirred the Blue Jays. And the next inning, Roberto Alomar's homer capped the rally that erased the A's five-run lead.

Toronto's players spilled out of the dugout to congratulate Alomar, even know better, though.

"It means a lot to the team," left fielder Candy Maldonado said of the victory. "But you have to control your emotions. We still have a tough battle in front of us."

Manager Cito Gaston knows, having witnessed the team's 1985 collapse. The Blue Jays had a 3-1 series edge against Kansas City, only to lose in seven games.

"We've been 3-1 before, so it's not over with," Gaston said. "The job is not finished yet. We win one more ball game and it's done. Perhaps it will bury all those things which have been said, which I've disagreed with all these years anyway. But we have to win another game first."

"This is a completely different team, completely different circumstances," said reliever Tom Henke, a member of the 1985 club who got his third save Sunday. "We're staying focused. We want to win and get this thing over with."

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN

Associated Press Writer CHICAGO (AP) - The link between second-hand smoke and lung cancer in people who do not smoke is supported by a new study of autopsies, doctors said recently. "This study ... provides a window on what is happening in the cells," said chief author Dr. Dimitrios Trichopoulos, chief of epidemiology at Harvard University School of Public causes.

two has come from population studies, rather than biological analyses, he said. "It shows that what happens like what happens with active smoking," he said

The study is the first to explore through autopsies the link between passive smoking and lung cancer, which has been the subject of 20 studies of other types in the past decade, Trichopoulos said.

His team analyzed lung tissue from a total of 206 men and women over age 35 who died in Athens, Greece, between 1986 and 1990.

Dr. Norman H. Edelman, a consultant to the American Lung Association, said the study provides cell evidence of "pretty well-accepted epidemiological data" and bolsters the argument that exposure should be regulated.

However, Thomas Lauria, a spokesman for the tobacco industryfunded Tobacco Institute, said no proof exists that the lung lesions were caused by second-hand smoke rather than air pollution or other

"We view this study as even All previous evidence linking the less useful than other eipidemiological studies on environmental tobacco smoke," he said from Washington. He added that all with passive smoking is very much data on smoking habits was obtained from relatives.

Lauria said the conclusions were based on two small subgroups of the 206 subjects: 17 wives of smokers and 13 wives of non-
