Wright gives update on Lake McClellan

By JOHN McMILLAN Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners near Lake McClellan sells visitors' Court next month is expected to consider signing a multi-year contract with the U.S. Forest Service that would give the county control over management of the concession building on the northwest edge of Lake McClellan, said Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright.

Wright, who was appointed by the Commissioners Court to supervise development of the Lake McClellan area, gave an informational presentation on that project at a commissioners meeting Monday. Wright told the Commissioners Court that tourism at Lake McClelpermits, groceries, fishing supplies, lan has not begun to reach its potential. "We haven't done a good job This year's management of the with the promotion," he said.

Wright noted that Lake McClellan concession building by Gray County marked the first time since the competes with other lakes in the area, including the Greenbelt Reserbuilding's completion about 1940 that the county has held that responvoir near Clarendon and Lake sibility. Jerry and Kerri Trolin are Meredith near Borger, that receive serving as live-in managers on more publicity and have been developed more fully to attract prospecbehalf of Gray County under a oneyear contract with the U.S. Forest tive tourists.

Lake McClellan covers 316 surface acres and is located approximately three miles north of Interstate 40.

Among the goals for the lake area that Wright said he hopes to achieve in the near future are:

· Raising funds for the dredging of Lake McClellan in 1993. Wright said a total of $50,000 to $100,000 will be needed for the Forest Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to remove five feet of the silt that has accumulated in the lake.

The U.S. Forest Service is expected to contribute about half of the funds toward the dredging project, Wright said.

Lake development promoters are waiting for the U.S. Forest Service to present plans on design of siltation ponds that would be used to store the stilt removed from the lake. Please see LAKE, page 2

"This GAO report dramatizes one of the toughest challenges confronting our nation," said Bentsen, D-Texas. "We must restore our competitiveness in this area if our economy is to provide good-paying jobs for future generations of Americans."

The sectors examined were semiconductors and semiconductor equipment, supercomputers, pharmaceuticals, telecommunications, fiber optics, robotics, consumer electronics, civilian facturing systems.

'While these selected industries ... do not necessarily constitute a bellwether for the U.S. economy, they do represent important sectors with likely impacts on overall economic performance," the GAO said.

The agency cautioned that its analysis didn't provide a complete picture because available data was limited and different indicators could be used to provide a variety of conclusions.

Opinion Clinton must keep tax cut promises

Usually politicians wait a few months before breaking their election promises. George Bush waited a full year and a half before reneging on his infamous "no new taxes" pledge. But barely a week after his election victory, Bill Clinton is sidling away from his promises.

Recently, The New York Times headlined this story on its front page: "Clinton, After Raising Hopes, Tries to Lower Expectations." On the campaign hustings, Clinton presented the electorate with detailed plans for everything: economic recovery, deficit reduction, an end to illiteracy, reforming welfare, guaranteeing college education, revamping the public schools, healing racial and religious divisions, purifying the environment, etc. He won

Now, with the embers of election rhetoric cooling, Clinton issues adviser Bruce Reed told The New York Times, "The governor never promised that government could solve every problem; he just promised it was time that leaders start trying." Oh.

Well, to the extent the president-elect is scaling back the spending portions of his ambitious agenda, perhaps we should applaud. His small margin of victory in the popular vote, combined with the Ross Perot protest vote, hardly added up to a mandate for a raft of large-scale new government programs. Perhaps Clinton has read the numbers more closely and taken a more realistic tack.

On another campaign promise, however, he seems to be backing away and misreading the public mood. As far back as his early primary successes, a middle-class tax cut was a key element in Clinton's economic package (even if coupled with a regrettable "tax the rich" plan). But on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley", top Clinton economics adviser Robert Reich said: "As I traveled around the country and as I talked to people,

Fighting for the soul of foreign policy

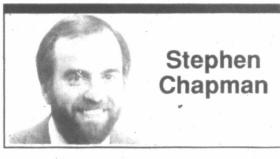

Republicans were once the party of international isolationism, opposing the efforts of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman to place the United States at the center of world affairs. Since the Vietnam War, however, the Democrats have tirelessly warned of the dangers of crusading abroad. But with a new Democrat in the White House, we face the alarming possibility that the roles will be reversed again. The same liberal internationalist vision of America's global role that led us into Vietnam could lead us into new disasters.

Bill Clinton, the first president to begin his term in the same side as some liberals who distrusted the office liberated from the constraints of the Cold War, confronts a choice that goes to the soul of American foreign policy: Should we act on the basis of selfinterest or moral idealism? During the Cold War, the argue that today, we have a new duty to combat two purposes blended together, since acting to advance democracy and human rights was often the have new allies in some neoconservatives, who same thing as resisting communism. Americans were thus spared choosing which was truly important.

With the mortal peril of the Soviet Union gone, the decision can no longer be avoided. One school of though sees foreign and military policy chiefly as means of assuring the safety, independence and regards it as an expression moral values, an instrument for elevating the condition of mankind.

It is an old debate. When Woodrow Wilson said world safe for democracy," Theodore Roosevelt made a retort as wise as it was pithy: "First and foremost we are to make the world safe for ourselves."

But the end of the Cold War has caused a realignment of partisans. Some conservatives who once favored an all-out effort to contain communism think the United States should reduce its role in messianic tone of our Cold War policies.

But many liberals who opposed Reagan's aid to the Nicaraguan rebels and Bush's war against Iraq suffering and oppression wherever it occurs. They abandoned the Democratic Party in the 1970s because it was insufficiently interested in defeating communism but who supported Clinton partly out of doubts that the GOP will fight aggression in places like Eastern Europe.

Neoconservative writer Joshua Muravchik notes prosperity of the United States. The other camp in Commentary magazine that opposition to U.S. military action against Serbia has come from the right, with the chorus for intervention coming from such traditionally dovish voices as The New York America's purpose in World War I was to "make the Times and The Christian Science Monitor. Writes Muravchik, "I have yet to uncover a single clear liberal statement against intervention.'

Bill Clinton likewise comes from the Wilsonian school, believing America had a mission to promote human rights everywhere. In an October speech, he called for a "pro-democracy foreign policy," attacking Bush for his "eagerness to befriend potentates international affairs - particularly its willingness and dictators." Whether he will carry through on morality. Those who want morality, as a statesman to employ military force. They find themselves on this approach will soon become clear in his choices once said, should look to their archbishops.

regarding two countries: China and Bosnia. Bush's China policy was one of the challenger's favorite campaign targets, giving him a chance to contrast his own devotion to democracy with the president's supposed indifference. Clinton has agreed with Congress' attempts, since the Tiananmen Square massacre, to impose trade sanctions on Beijing unless it eases its repression.

This is a clear example of placing human rights above America's foreign policy interests. On a number of important subjects - nuclear proliferation, control of the spread of missile technology, tension on the Korean peninsula, peace in Cambodia, the Gulf War - China has cooperated with the United States. If Clinton insists on dictating Beijing's domestic policy, it may not only reject that demand but conclude that it has nothing to lose by opposing Washington on international matters as well. That could mean trouble for both the United States and China's Asian neighbors.

More worrisome still is Clinton's call for the use of force in Bosnia, where the United States has neither solemn commitments nor important interests. The only reason to send American pilots or soldiers into the fray is altruism, since the United States faces no discernible danger from the fighting in the Balkans, however ghastly is may be. Yet it is precisely the absence of any selfish motives that makes intervention appealing to liberals, who yearn for a morally pure cause.

We have learned from World War I and Vietnam that morally pure causes can quickly turn bitter. Before the United States sacrifices lives or resources in disputes far beyond our borders, we should make sure that Americans have something more at stake than some politicians' vision of Somebody was saying, "It's got to be tough being a lame duck president.'

That, of course, is what President Bush is, our lame duck president. I'm not certain if that makes Vice President Dan Quayle our quack or not, but the idea came to my mind.

President Bush has from now until January to remain in office before Bill Clinton moves in.

blown out of office after one term. Several million people said, "Pack you bags."

So you know there are all these people out there who got together and ran him out of office. He knows nobody is going to take him seriously during the period he still has in the Oval Office, and he knows everybody will be talking about him behind his back. He has to be hurt. He has to be brokenhearted. And mad as hell.

But Jimmy Carter went quietly in 1980 and I presume George Bush will do the same thing.

Group helps blended families

DEAR READERS: In recent years, the mail from stepchildren, stepparents and steprelatives has increased at an alarming rate. Perhaps it's due to the fact that divorce and remarriage have become more popular and less stigmatized in the last 20 years.

Take heart — there is help out there for stepmothers, stepchildren, stepfathers and all manner of steppeople. It's called the Stepfamily Association of America. The group was founded in 1979. It offers information and advocacy for stepfamilies: self-help programs through local chapters, educational resources, a quarterly bulletin, annual national conference, and chapter start-up information.

You need not send a selfaddressed envelope to receive information: Simply write to: Stepfamily Association of America, 215 Centennial Mall South, Suite 212, Lincoln, Neb. 68508. The toll-free telephone number is 1-800-735-0329 (U.S.A. and Canada).

This organization provides helpful information for people contemplating becoming stepparents, and those already involved with a blended family who are having a difficult time dealing with her kids by her first husband, his kids by his first wife, or the new set of grandparents who find competing with biological grandparents more than they bargained for. The association offers some intelligent guidelines that will make those new steppeople less threatening and more welcome. Trust me.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband was married before and has a 12-yearold daughter who lives with her mother in a distant state. I'll call my stepdaughter "Carla." My husband can afford to fly Carla here only twice a year. My husband and I also have a daughter of our own who will soon be 3 years old. The problem is that we would like to have a family portrait taken and can't decide whether Carla should be in it or not.

I do not dislike Carla, but we see her so seldom, it's hard for me to consider her part of the immediate family. I would hate to hurt her feelings, but I also don't want to pretend to be a family because actually we are not. When Carla visits us, she is more like a guest.

Should we have the portrait taken with just my husband and me and our baby, and hide it when Carla visits? Or should we wait several months for her next visit to have the family portrait taken? Abby, how important would it be for your readers who are stepchildren (grown or otherwise) to have been included in their absent parent's new family portrait? Maybe it wouldn't mean anything to Carla. Am I making a big deal out of nothing? Sign me UNSURE STEPMOM

DEAR UNSURE: Please do not have a picture taken that you will have to hide when your stepdaughter visits. Better to include her in the family portrait whether it will mean anything to her or not than to exclude her and risk hurting her.

DEAR ABBY: If your readers are beginning to make Christmas lists and are wondering what to give the "old folks," here's a suggestion:

How about a once-a-month cleaning person? Many "old folks" are able to handle the daily chores of dusting, vacuuming, laundry, grocery shopping, cooking, cleanup, etc., but when it comes to heavyduty cleaning, they can't manage it.

They would like to remain inde pendent (if they are lucky) until they drop dead, and a little assistance of this sort would make their remaining years easier and more comfortable

There are a lot of us out there. Think about it! "OLD FOLKS"

Ditka again at center of controversy

Bears' coach has fracas with fan By JOE MOOSHIL AP Sports Writer

LAKE FOREST, III. (AP) - As the Chicago Bears' losing streak gets longer, coach Mike Ditka gets harder to live with.

After the Bears suffered their third consecutive loss Sunday, 20-17 at Tampa Bay, Ditka again found himself the center of controversy.

First, he chastised Kevin Butler after one of Butler's kickoffs went out of bounds to give the Buccaneers the ball on the 35yard line.

Then, after the game, Ditka got into a fracas with a fan. And on his Monday morning radio show on WGN-AM, Ditka ripped the media, contending some people are happy because of the losing streak.

"At least we've made somebody happy - the malcontents and the lousy people in the media," he said.

Spencer Promotions, however, didn't pay the fees and Johnson said the check would be held up until that happened.

"I'm quite sure something will get worked out in the near future," she said. "I still have the check in the safe."

Newman said Saturday he was not worried about paying the sanctioning fees, especially to WBC president Jose Sulaiman, who has threatened to strip Bowe of the newly won title if he doesn't defend it first against Lennox Lewis.

"I'll be damned if I'm hurrying down to Mexico waving $90,000," Newman said.

The $2.9 million was the basic purse paid Bowe, who was expected to earn up to $8 million once his share of the pay-per-view receipts were tallied.

Johnson said Holyfield got a check for $4.8 million, after deducting $130,000 for a WBC sanction fee and similar amounts for the other sanctioning organizations.

Under Bowe's contract with fight promoter Main Events, he was to pay $90,000 to both the WBC and WBA and $60,000 to the IBF for his portion of the sanctioning fees.

"I cannot remember ever having fighters climb through the ring to fight without sanctioning fees being met," Johnson said.

Expansion teams expected to target Braves, Blue Jays By RONALD BLUM AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Toronto and Atlanta, the best teams in baseball, figure to be the first to lose players in today's expansion draft.

Braves pitcher David Nied was expected to be taken by the Colorado Rockies as the first pick, and Toronto outfield prospect Nigel Wilson was expected to go to the Marlins on the second pick.

"From what I understand, Nied already has taken a flight out to Denver," said Casey Close, who represents Braves teammate Kent Mercker. "That's what Kent found out. That's what he told me.'

Nied's agent, Steve Pierce, said he wasn't sure.

"I've heard so much speculation," Pierce said. "I think there's going to be the biggest mass movement in the history of baseball."

Colorado started baseball's big week Monday by signing free agent first baseman Andres Galarraga to a $500,000, one-year deal with the chance to earn another $600,000 in performance bonuses. Galarraga became only the second of 153 free agents to sign and the first to switch teams.

"Galarraga is a veteran," Rockies manager Don Baylor said. "He's been around the National League for a couple of years."

Each team will draft 36 players, and plenty of big names are available. Lee Smith and Shawon Dunston and Jose Lind may be drafted and dealt just after the picking ends at 9 p.m. EST. Lind is widely rumored to be heading to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Danny Tartabull, Jack Morris and catchers Mike LaValliere, Don Slaught, Greg Olson and Damon Berryhill were among the others left off 15-man protected lists. Each existing team can lose just one player per round, and can protect additional players after each round ends.

"We're not naive going into this," Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski said. "We know that a team might talk to us about drafting a player and then trading him, and then call the Rockies and see about the trade for the same player."
