Bush to reward Vietnam for aid in MIA resolve

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — President Bush plans to soon reward Vietnam for its increased cooperation in accounting for American MIAs, but full normalization of relations is not imminent, visiting U.S. senators said today.

Bush's promise to respond to Vietnam's help in resolving the fates of more than 2,200 American servicemen missing from the Vietnam War came in a letter to President Le Duc Anh.

Bush's letter was delivered by John Kerry, D-Mass., who heads the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs. Other committee members in Hanoi are Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Hank Brown, R-Colo.

Kerry told a news conference that the letter lays out a "road map" towards normalized relations between former enemies and promises reciprocal action by the United States for Vietnam's cooperation.

"Many options are available for the president. He did not say specifically which he would exercise ... He said he would act," Kerry told reporters.

The senator said he personally felt Bush should make a gesture before the select committee presents the U.S. president at year's end with the final report on its findings.

But committee members stressed that a reciprocal gesture by Washington would not be full normalization, at least in the near future.

The American president could lift a crippling trade embargo, withdraw U.S. objections to World Bank and International Monetary Fund aid and loans to Vietnam or take other conciliatory action short of full diplomatic ties.

On Tuesday, the senators toured the secretive Citadel, the nerve center of Vietnam's military, to check out reports of Americans being held there.

They were later presented with MIA artifacts and three large photo albums containing photos of dead and captured U.S. servicemen and, in some cases, original identification cards.

"We came to Vietnam to find answers and we found some very direct answers — what happened to soldiers with specificity — and we are on the road to getting more answers," Kerry said.

He said the MIA issue "stands as the greatest barrier between the United States and Vietnam in moving towards a fuller, more respectable relationship." The senators met this morning with Xuan Dich, who heads Hanoi's Vietnam Office Seeking Missing Persons.

Dich said that he had "not one set of remains in his possession" that the Americans didn't know about and also rejected reports that had surfaced earlier this year that some Americans held in Vietnam were transferred to the former Soviet Union.

The repatriation of an undisclosed number of remains is scheduled for Dec. 15.

'South Pacific' docks at M.K. Brown

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

The Pulitzer Prize-winning musical "South Pacific" will be presented this week by the Pampa High School music department under the direction of Fred Mays and Susie Wilson.

It premieres 7:30 p.m. Friday and plays again 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

In the classic, Ensign Nellie Forbush, a bright, wholesome, small-town girl and Navy nurse falls in love with Emile de Becque, a mature and friendly French planter, on an island occupied by the U.S. Navy during World War II.

Paralleling their love story is the tale of Lt. Joe Cable and Liat, beautiful, devoted Tonkinese daughter of shrewd entrepreneur Bloody Mary.

When Emile proposes to Nellie, she doubts her ability to overcome their age and cultural differences and refuses him. Emile then volunteers to accompany Lt. Cable on a dangerous mission behind enemy lines. Cable is killed and as Nellie comforts Liat, she realizes that she must seize her own chance for happiness and turn her back on petty prejudice. When Emile returns, they are joyously reunited.

Many cast members of "South Pacific" are veterans of PHS musicals.

Sharon Smith plays the part of Ensign Nellie Forbush. She is a two-year member of concert choir, show choir and is president of concert choir for this school year. Smith was selected for all-region choir and will audition for all-area choir in January.

Senior Jarred Shaw has participated in choir since fifth grade. He was selected for district and all-region choirs this year. Shaw is a two-year member of show choir and three-year member of concert choir. He plays the part of Capt. George Brackett.

Emile de Becque is portrayed by Scotty Gamble. He has been a member of concert choir for three years. He is a member of all-district and all-region.

Senior Todd Black is a two-year member of show choir and four-year member of PHS choir.

He is on the University Interscholastic League academics team.

Kirk McDonald, who portrays Commander William Harbison, is a four-year member of PHS choir and is member of concert choir. He was in all-district and all-region choir. He is a PHS senior.

Jury rules man innocent in assault

By BETH MILLER
News Editor

A Gray County jury deliberated less than an hour Tuesday afternoon before returning an "innocent" verdict against Robert Andrew Tipton, 30, who had been charged with aggravated assault.

Tipton, of 401 Yeager St., had pleaded not guilty to the charge, saying he struck the other man, Dewayne Gordon Hickman, in self defense.

Assistant District Attorney Tracey Jennings Warner said it was the state's contention that Tipton struck Hickman on the head with an unknown object, causing serious bodily injury.

Tipton was indicted on Aug. 26 on the third-degree felony aggravated assault charge. The trial began Monday with jury selection in 223rd District Court with District Judge Lee Waters presiding.

Warner said testimony in the case revealed Hickman suffered a cracked skull, and a piece of his skull bone was driven into his brain. She said doctors had to remove a piece of Hickman's brain and he is scheduled to get a steel plate in his head next year.

Tipton and Hickman were neighbors and had been friends at the time of the incident, according to the testimony.

Witnesses testified that Tipton had been popping firecrackers and Hickman came outside in the early-morning hours of July 10 and asked Tipton to stop popping the firecrackers.

Tipton alleged Hickman came at him and hit him on the head and that he struck out only in self defense, striking Hickman on the head one time.

Defense attorney Harold Comer said it was his client's contention that Hickman struck him in the head and that he responded by hitting Hickman with an instrument described as resembling an ax handle.

Comer said his client went to see Dr. Bob Julian the following day and the doctor prescribed pain medication for a bump on Tipton's head.

Tipton testified he had been popping firecrackers shortly after midnight when Hickman came out of his apartment with his dog named "Dirty," and a stick. Tipton said Hickman was upset and said the firecrackers had awakened him.

Tipton said he apologized, but that Hickman took his dog back to the house and then came back with the stick in his hand and hit Tipton, who responded by hitting Hickman.

Testimony in the case also showed that Hickman had bragged about being a member of the Aryan Brotherhood, a prison gang, and he was asked to remove his shirt and demonstrate various tattoos to the jury, including one on his back which said, "White Power."

Hickman denied belonging to any prison gangs. He had served time in the state penitentiary two times, after his probation was revoked in a felonious criminal mischief conviction, and after his parole was revoked.

Tipton is also on parole on a previous conviction.

Warner said that although she was disappointed in the jury verdict, she feels comfortable that the jury did what it believed was correct.

"I know we had a good panel of jurors, who worked hard and they did what they thought was right," Warner said.

Comer said, "The question before the jury was whether Mr. Tipton was acting in self defense. That was the only defense presented ... I think it was the only reasonable verdict under the evidence."

Report due on search of Clinton passport file

WASHINGTON (AP) — A potentially embarrassing report on the search of President-elect Clinton's citizenship and travel records is being made public amid reports that the trail may lead to the White House.

A Republican activist, Elizabeth M. Tamposi, already has been forced from her high-level State Department post in the widening controversy and now it may be known whether she implicated others.

And another official in the troubled Consular Affairs bureau, special assistant Steven Moheban, resigned on Monday "to pursue opportunities in the private sector," a department press officer said.

Ms. Tamposi, who headed the consular affairs office before she was dismissed by President Bush last week, is said to have told the department's inspector general in September of White House interest in having a search of files for information about Clinton.

At the time, Bush was making an issue of Clinton's character and opposition to the Vietnam War in an unsuccessful re-election campaign. The search found no evidence the Democratic challenger had inquired about changing his citizenship while attending Oxford University in England in the late 1960s or had engaged in illegal activities during a trip to Moscow in 1969-70.

The State Department cited requests for information from the news media as the rationale for the search, conducted on an expedited basis even though the criteria for doing so were lacking.

But there have been reports in the past week that Ms. Tamposi had been told the White House wanted the information.

State Department investigators have questioned other officials about the search. Searches also were made of the passport files of Clinton's mother, Virginia Kelley, and Ross Perot, the independent presidential candidate.

Results of the Inspector General Sherman M. Funk's investigation were to be made public today at a news conference by acting Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger and Funk.

Eagleburger, a career foreign service officer, has headed the department since James A. Baker III left in August to help Bush's re-election campaign.

Former foreign exchange student visits host family

Tariq Ali returned to Pampa this week to visit friends he met while a foreign exchange student at West Texas State University nearly 20 years ago.

Mattie Morgan and Tariq Ali look over a book with detailed diagrams Ali's wife purchased in New York for Mattie's husband W.A. Morgan.

"I went to West Texas today and observed that the school has changed quite a bit," Ali said during a Tuesday interview in the home of W.A. and Mattie Morgan of Pampa.

Ali and his wife Shaheen, Pakistani natives, and their three sons live in Connecticut. He said one of

"We had a lot of visitors when we were in Hong Kong," he said. "We have enjoyed living in the U.S. My wife has coped well by learning the ways in the U.S."

Ali said he is looking forward to the move.

"It is easier to move when you move every two or three years," he said. "My wife has been very supportive. There will be a lot of restrictions on the family. The dress code is different, but it shouldn't take long to adjust."

He said his oldest son, 10-year-old Aizaz, isn't as excited about leaving his friends.

"There are times you can choose to transfer," he said. "It will give our kids a broad exposure to different cultures."

Ali graduated from college in Pakistan.

"I came to the U.S. because I had a close friend here," he said. "At the reasons he came to visit his friends in the area is because his family is preparing to be transferred to Saudi Arabia in a month.

The Ali's have lived in Connecticut for seven years. He worked in Greece before he was married and since then they have lived in Hong Kong and the United States.

"I came to the U.S. because I had a close friend here," he said. "At the time, the currency in Pakistan was devalued and I couldn't afford the tuition. I came here and I liked it, so I stayed."

He earned a master's degree in business administration in the year and a half he was at West Texas, graduating in December of 1973.

Ali recalled attending rodeos and fairs in the cities surrounding and including Pampa and Canyon.

He met the Morgans, and the Browns, Jim and the late Betty, all Pampa residents, through the foreign exchange program at West Texas.

"We had just started taking part in the program before you (Ali) arrived there," Mattie Morgan said.

Ali said, "It is a family of international students. I keep in touch with their children (the Morgans') in San Francisco and they have met my wife and oldest son."

The families have become close friends.

"When we get together we reminisce about the old times," Ali said. "When I was a student here a bunch of us would help the Morgans paint their house."

He recalled one weekend when they were painting and something was going on in the road.

"I was standing on a plank and I turned around to see what was going on and I walked right off the plank," he said. "It wasn't very high off the ground and I didn't hurt myself."

He spoke highly of the people he met and the weekends he and his friends had spent in Pampa.

"We would sit around and discuss politics and world affairs," he said.

Recount shows Lewis victorious

A recount today for Gray County Precinct 1 constable confirmed James H. Lewis as the winner with 620 more votes than his opponent, Jerry Williams.

Williams, the incumbent, has served for 16 years in the position. He picked up one vote with a total of 1,179 and Lewis picked up three votes totaling 1,799 votes.

It took three hours to conduct the recount, petitioned by Williams. Recounts were conducted in voting Precincts 1, 6, 14, 15 and early voting for the general election.

D-FY-IT program on PISD board agenda

Pampa Independent School District Board of Education is scheduled to meet in regular session at 6 p.m. Thursday in the Carver Center conference room, 321 W. Albert.

Topics to be considered from the agenda include:

- Approval of the Drug-Free Youth in Texas program — D-FY-IT — as the official program Pampa High School should use to encourage students to live a drug-free life.
- An amendment to the current eligible deferred compensation plan as a result of Security Federal of Pampa that was purchased by AmWest Saving Association and which proposes changes to the current plan.

• Textbook selection committee for 1992-93.

• Sale of delinquent tax property at 904 Brunow for $509,40; 328 N. Dwight for $1,600; 743 E. Albert for $400; and 730 Lefors for $1,000.

• Bids for carpet needed throughout the district.

• Approval of a refund of taxes collected in error.

• Cash receipts and expenditures for October 1992.

• Monthly budget, investment and tax collection report.

• Minutes from previous meeting.

An academic spotlight is scheduled for the meeting.

The superintendent's report is scheduled to include the superintendent's evaluation, an initial audit report, legislative update, the Governor's National Involvement Conference and upcoming district events and activities.

Comments will be received from a student's family regarding assignment to an alternative education program and appropriate responses.

Members are scheduled to go into executive session to discuss personnel positions and then return to an open meeting and take any action necessary.

Tonight's lotto prize estimated at $4 million

AUSTIN (AP) — The jackpot for tonight's lotto drawing will be at least $4 million, Comptroller John Sharp says.

The drawing will be the second in the Texas Lottery's new pick-six numbers game. No one chose the correct numbers in Saturday night's drawing, so that jackpot rolled over for the next drawing.

"In addition to that hunk of cash, the jackpot this week is growing as more tickets are sold.

Sales have been so strong that we are now estimating this jackpot will be about $4 million," Sharp said Tuesday.

Lotto ticket sales Sunday and Monday totaled nearly $1 million.

"As we saw during the final frantic hours before Saturday's first drawing, players buy more tickets as the hour of the televised drawing approaches," Sharp said.

"We expect this increase in sales to happen again on Wednesday, meaning the jackpot could go higher."

To win the jackpot, a player must match six numbers between one and 50 which are selected at random during the televised drawing. Smaller pari-mutuel prizes also are awarded for matching five or four numbers, and matching three wins a player $3.

Sharp said that despite the start of the lotto game, sales of scratch-off instant-win tickets have remained stable.

Dead Superman should bring lively comic sales

NEW YORK (AP) — Look ... up in the sky ... it's a bird ... it's a plane ... it's sales of the latest Superman comic book, in which the Man of Steel meets his maker.

Comic book retailers will receive about 3 million copies today of issue No. 75, Superman's sort-of swan song, which is expected to smash all records for New York publisher DC Comics.

Demand is about 10 times that of the usual Superman comic, said

Roger Fletcher of Baltimore-based Diamond Comics Distributors, which provides comics to about half the nation's outlets.

"This is definitely the biggest buzz of any comic I can remember," said John Henegan of the Forbidden Planet comic book store in Manhattan.

"It's much bigger than anything else — it's the death of SUPER-MAN. That says it all."

Forgive Henegan if he's not sobbing over Superman's demise. The phones are ringing, customers are pouring into the store, advance orders are piling up — and it's all the work of the dearly departed Supe.

Henegan estimates the store ordered 2,500 copies, about 50 times its usual order. He expects to sell out at $1.25 a regular copy and $2.50 for a special edition with a souvenir black armband bearing the Superman logo and a trading card.

Leaders scramble for votes in House

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — State leaders have worked to find enough votes to at least keep alive a proposed constitutional amendment on school finance scheduled for House action today.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said Tuesday he didn't have the required two-thirds vote for House approval of a proposed amendment to allow redistribution of local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts.

He cited opposition from a number of Republicans, who total 58 in the 150-member House.

But Lewis said he thinks there are 76 votes to permit preliminary passage of the proposal.

That would allow leaders to target dissenting lawmakers and give them another chance to win the necessary 100 votes, he said.

If the House approves a proposal, a conference committee could be appointed to work out any differences between it and a measure earlier approved by the Senate.

If the chambers agree on a proposed amendment, it still will have to be approved by Texas voters.

Richards asked House Democrats Tuesday to vote for a proposed constitutional amendment passed by a House committee, in hopes of paving the way for a conference committee. She warned that the stakes are high if lawmakers don't meet a Texas Supreme Court deadline for a new funding plan.

"We are playing with our children's lives," she said in remarks that were audible outside the closed-door Democratic caucus meeting.

"You are playing with the future of the state of Texas and what's going to be written in The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times and Newsweek magazine and Time magazine, that this Democratic Legislature and Democratic governor cannot get its act together well enough to keep the schools of Texas from closing," she said.

Richards also has asked for help in passing the bill from more than two dozen business lobbyist, said her press secretary, Bill Cryer.

A state judge has warned that he'll cut off state and possibly local public education funding if lawmakers don't meet the June 1, 1993, court deadline for a constitutional plan to equalize the school finance system.

Lawmakers tried to equalize school funding in the current system by redistributing local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts within counties or groups of counties.

But the court said in January that's unconstitutional, so Richards called a special legislative session this month.

The Senate last week approved a proposed constitutional amendment backed by state leaders to allow the statewide redistribution of local property tax money.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards leaves a closed-door meeting of the House Democratic Caucus in Austin Tuesday. The governor met with Democrat lawmakers to discuss the school finance proposals.

The proposal also would set an equity standard in the constitution in an effort to free the state from continued court battles. The standard would require that for 95 percent of state and local money, school districts get the same amount of funds at the same local property tax rate. Public education is mainly funded from state aid and local property taxes.

The House Public Education Committee approved a different proposal that does not contain an equity standard and limits the amount of local money that can be redistributed.

Both the Senate and House committee proposals would allow the use of $750 million in state bonds to help pay for building new school facilities. They also would create a $1 billion Good Schools Fund from the Available School Fund, which currently gives every school district about $300 per student. The richest districts no longer would get state money from the fund.

Asthma shows increase among white children

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers said they are unable to explain a new study that finds a 40 percent increase in the incidence of childhood asthma among whites and no increase in blacks during the 1980s.

The study "raises a lot of questions," said Dr. William R. Taylor of the national Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, author of a similar study.

The authors of the report, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, speculated that some types of asthma, such as that triggered by exercise, are getting more attention among pediatricians. White children, they said, are more likely to be treated and diagnosed by pediatricians.

It may also be that white children are exposed to some irritant at higher rates than blacks, said the researchers, led by Dr. Michael Weitzman of the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry in New York.

Taylor said that despite the rise among whites, black children are still five times as likely to be unable to go to school or play normally with other children because of the illness.

Contrary to a common belief, the severity of asthma among most children is decreasing, the researchers also said, after analyzing federal data from 17,110 households in 1988, the latest year of the National Health Interview Survey.

The data were compared with similar information collected in the survey from 15,224 households in 1981.

Thirty percent fewer asthmatic children were hospitalized with asthma during the year before the 1988 survey than during the year before the 1981 survey, the researchers said. That was true even though the total number of children hospitalized over the interval rose 14 percent, they said.

Taylor's report, which analyzed the same data, said asthma afflicted 2.7 million children in 1988, causing 10.1 million missed days of school and 200,000 hospitalizations annually.

That report, published earlier this month in the journal Pediatrics, said 4.3 percent of children had asthma in 1988, up from 3.2 percent in 1981.

It said almost 8 percent of black children with asthma were unable to go to school or play normally with other children, five times the proportion of white asthmatic children unable to perform those types of activities.

Man wore bracelet of MIA for six years

Foster father happy, sad to hear news

By NANCY PLEVIN
Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — A New Mexico man says he'll mail a Vietnam MIA bracelet bearing the name of a Marine whose remains have been identified to the man's foster father.

The bracelet is inscribed with the name of Marine Gunnery Sgt. Joseph F. Trujillo of Deming, who was declared missing in action on Sept. 13, 1966. The Pentagon announced Tuesday that his remains have been identified.

Elfigo Lopez, a former Marine who has worn the bracelet for six years, talked by telephone late Tuesday with Trujillo's foster father, William "Bill" Drummond, 62, of Austin, Texas.

"He was very happy to hear from me," said Lopez, 23. "He kept thanking me. It's nice to just know that he (Trujillo) has a father that cares so much about him."

Lopez, a state Labor Department unemployment insurance processor, said he and Drummond arranged for Drummond to receive the half-inch-wide metal bracelet.

Bill Drummond holds an old picture Tuesday of his foster son, Gunnery Sgt. Joseph F. Trujillo, who had been missing in action in Vietnam since 1966.

"He said it was a real honor to receive my call and to receive the bracelet," said Lopez, whose three brothers also are current or former Marines. Their father is also a Vietnam veteran.

Lopez said he heard the news about Trujillo's identification on the radio.

"I can't tell you the feeling I got," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Tome, 20 miles south of Albuquerque. "It's overwhelming. My whole body just felt a chill, and I was happy and sad — happy that they did find his remains but sad that he has to be gone."

Trujillo was born July 29, 1946. Officials said he had joined the service after graduating from Deming High School in 1965.

His remains were returned to the United States on June 1 as a result of a joint field investigation in Vietnam. They are to be taken from Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii, to Travis Air Force Base, Calif., on Thursday, the Pentagon said.

Lopez said he hopes the government will keep pushing for information on Vietnam-era MIAs.

"Whether it be peace or wartime, those guys are all heroes," he said, "and I think that the people of the United States should know that these guys are very important people."

Lopez said he will request another MIA bracelet.

"Hopefully, I can return that one back too," he said.

'Solomon' compromise put before Catholic bishops

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops considered a Solomon-like compromise as they struggled over what to do with a controversial proposal on the status of women in the church and society.

Under a mounting tide of criticism, the document was up for more debate and a vote today, either up, down or to shelve it, after nine years of work.

A middle way out of the quagmire by postponing action was proposed Tuesday by Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, and several leading bishops backed his idea. But debate about it rolled on at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Bernardin said that either approving or rejecting the document would have damaging fallout and he moved that the document be referred to relevant committees to further study the issues.

"Given the controversy that has marked various drafts," he said, "it seems to me that this approach might assist us to move ahead with greater effectiveness and serenity."

Cardinal John O'Connor of New York called that way "Solomonically worked through" and a "valuable solution to the problem facing us."

Sharp criticisms of the latest version of the document, the fourth draft, have come from both conservative and reformist groups, along with demands from both sides that the entire business be dropped if drastic changes aren't made.

In the new draft, rejection of ordination of women is elaborated at much greater length, as are passages against contraception and those emphasizing the importance of motherhood and families.

Sexism is not specifically called a sin, as before, but rather a "moral and social evil."

The new draft says women themselves are partly to blame for sexism, and though it's mostly men's fault, "the victimization of women" includes violations of sexual standards by women as well as men.

"It is not only sexism but the sexual revolution that accounts for the present oppression of women," the draft says. It says blaming only males for sexism "fails to recognize its roots in original sin" of Eden.

Bishop Joseph L. Imsch of Joliet, Ill., head of a six-bishop committee trying to shape an acceptable document, said last week he doubted the letter would receive the necessary two-thirds vote needed for passage.

Some church officials contended Bernardin's proposal was just dodging a decision.

"Putting it in committee is putting it in limbo," argued Bishop Charles J. Chaput of Rapid City, S.D. "The division among us should not paralyze us from action."

In the same vein, Bishop Elden E.

Curtiss of Helena, Mont., said "it would be a mistake to let the draft get lost in the labyrinth of committee activities. It is important to speak to the issue."

However, Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis said the Bernardin route was "not a way out of our situation, but a way into a new way of dialogue and study."

The church's ban on ordination of women emerged as a crux of the debate, although Pope John Paul II has declared it closed to discussion.

Archbishop Rembert Weakland of Milwaukee, citing the proposed document's argument that tradition confines ordination to men, said that tradition was based on the view that women are inferior.

"We are just at the beginning of a long debate on the issue," he said.

Auxiliary Bishop Austin Vaughn of New York said he considered the papal rule against ordaining women "infallible and unchangeable."

It will still be the case "in the year 2000, 20,000 or 2,000,000 and this will still be the church and it will still have an all-male clergy," he said. "Women priests are as impossible as me having a baby."

Bishop Michael Kenny of Juneau, Alaska, said many of the church's "most learned, loyal and faithful" people are in dissent from the Vatican on women's ordination and the current debate has not "raised the stakes."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The chablis surprise

Recently the Bush administration foolishly scheduled $300 million in tariffs on imports from Europe, in particular on French white wines. But there's another angle. Before the Nov. 3 election, President-elect Bill Clinton evidently was dabbling in foreign affairs to the detriment of his own country and of world-wide free trade.

On Oct. 25, The Sunday Telegraph of London reported, "Jacques Delors, the European Commission president, is being accused of having a secret understanding with Mr. Bill Clinton ... to frustrate any chance of a world trade deal before the US elections ... in case it should boost President Bush in the last days of the campaign."

"Senior Brussels agriculture sources on Nov. 7 disclosed that Clinton campaign officials had made urgent contact with Mr. Delors after the trade talks came close to success (around Oct. 11)."

Sources said Mr. Delors, a socialist, "would prefer Mr. Clinton, a Democrat, in the White House, if only on grounds of ideology, and he was doubly happy to co-operate. 'Clinton's people were upset that we were going to stitch up a GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) deal so that Bush could get more votes," said one source."

These are serious charges. At a minimum, if the charges are true, Mr. Clinton's aides, and possibly Mr. Clinton himself, have violated the Logan Act, which forbids anyone but the president from negotiating with foreign countries. Was this Mr. Clinton's October Surprise — rather, Unsurprise, the object being to deny the president an upbeat announcement — to sabotage Mr. Bush's re-election?

Mr. Bush had threatened retaliation if GATT failed. He should not have made the threats, and he certainly shouldn't carry them out now. The last thing we need is a trade war. But as The Sunday Telegraph warned three weeks ago, "Without a deal in the near future, the fear is that Washington will have no choice but to go ahead with punitive tariffs on European foods, from cheese to cognac."

"This would trigger a massive EC response... (T)he ED's international trade committee had already approved a 'hit list' of US imports, mainly basic farm products." Even so, until Mr. Clinton's apparent intervention, Mr. Bush had worked out a way to avert the threatened duties.

With far less evidence, the US Congress has been investigating the alleged October Surprise concerning Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign, 12 years ago. Shouldn't Congress now look into Mr. Clinton's Chablis Surprise of October 1992? Don't the American people have a right to know, at a minimum, what Mr. Clinton and his staff discussed with Mr. Delors?

In the meantime, Messrs. Bush and Clinton should make Priority No. 1 the immediate end to the trade war. This crisis can't wait to be solved next January on Inauguration Day.

Clinton and the courts

WASHINGTON — Over at the Supreme Court, where I hang around a good deal of the time, the gossip is to this effect:

Justice Harry Blackmun, who turns 84 this week, will retire at the end of the term in July. President Clinton will name Judge Richard Arnold to succeed him. The Senate will confirm without a dissenting vote, and that will be that.

Justice Byron White, who will be 76 in June, also will retire next summer. The White House will leak word that Clinton intends to nominate Harvard Professor Laurence Tribe to succeed him. Immediate uproar! Republicans will never forget what Democrats did to the nomination of Robert Bork, and Tribe would provide a perfect vehicle for revenge.

Tribe is about as far-out liberal as a Harvard professor can get. He was 51 last month, a prolific writer who delights in hurly-burly combat at the bar. He might find it more fun to continue his lucrative private practice, moonlighting in constitutional law, than to go into hibernation at the high court, but White's seat would be hard to decline.

If Clinton decided to make a last-ditch fight for Tribe's nomination, the president would wind up with new enemies in the Senate just as a major portion of his legislative program were coming on for action.

Is Tribe worth it? No. Not when such equally qualified constitutional scholars as Professor A.E. Dick Howard of Virginia are waiting in the wings. Howard would be a superb choice. He has impeccable credentials, including a term at Oxford and two years as clerk to Justice Hugo Black. He is, presumably, a Democrat, but he has steered clear of partisan politics. Like Tribe, Howard is a prolific writer, but he ruffles no feathers. His name should be right at the top of Clinton's list.

So the gossip goes in the lunchroom. By general agreement, Judge Arnold would be Clinton's first choice for a vacancy on the high court. A native of Texarkana, Arnold will be 57 in March. He too has impeccable academic credentials (Harvard and Yale), plus a clerkship under Justice William Brennan, plus 13 years in private practice, plus a time on Capitol Hill as legislative aide to Sen. Dale Bumpers, plus 14 years on the federal bench. He's a sure thing.

All this, of course, is nothing more than gab-gab over the liver and onions. Blackmun may not retire; White may go for the longevity record. In an era of good feeling, President Clinton at some point could decide to nominate a nominal Republican.

This has happened before, but it hasn't happened often. President Lincoln, a Republican, named Democrat Stephen Field to the Supreme Court. Franklin Roosevelt promoted Justice Harlan Stone to become chief justice. The Democrat Harry Truman chose Republican Sen. Harold Burton. Eisenhower, a Republican, named William Brennan, an inactive Democrat. ("Worst mistake I ever made," said Ike.) More recently, President Nixon nominated Lewis Powell, a non-partisan Democrat from Virginia. If there are others, the instances escape me.

Truth to tell, prospective appointments to the Supreme Court are of less concern to conservatives than appointments to the district and circuit courts. We troglodytes have six reasonably reliable justices on the high court now. In the 1991-92 term, the Supreme Court decided only 109 cases by written opinion. The action is down below.

George Bush will leave office in January with exactly 100 vacancies — 16 on the circuit courts, 84 on the district courts. Fifty or 60 lower-court judges die or retire every year. Clinton and his activist wife Hillary will find themselves, judicially speaking, in high cotton.

For good or ill, we may anticipate that Clinton will follow in the course set by George Washington 200 years ago. Washington named 10 men to the high court, stout Federalists one and all. When Jefferson's turn came, he appointed Livingston and Johnson, good anti-Federalists. Jackson, a Democrat, named Democrats. Grant, a Republican, chose four fine Republicans, including two who voted on the legal tender issue just as he wanted them to vote.

Lyndon Johnson named 122 district judges, all but seven of them Democrats. Nixon was as partisan — 166 Republicans, 13 Democrats. Carter, Reagan and Bush followed suit — 93 percent from their own party.

This is how the game is played. Two weeks ago Republicans lost the White House. Over the next four years they will lose one-third of the federal judges. So it goes, boys, so it goes. Gosh, it was fun while it lasted.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 18, the 323rd day of 1992. There are 43 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on Nov. 18, 1942, "The Skin of Our Teeth," playwright Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy about the history and survival of humankind as personified by a New Jersey family, opened on Broadway with Tallulah Bankhead as Sabina and Fredric March as Mr. Antrobus.

On this date:

In 1820, U.S. Navy Captain Nathaniel B. Palmer discovered the frozen continent of Antarctica.

In 1883, the United States and Canada adopted a system of Standard Time zones.

In 1886, the 21st president of the United States, Chester A. Arthur, died in New York at age 56.

In 1903, the United States and Panama signed a treaty granting the United States rights to build the Panama Canal.

Thanks-giving for the atomic age

As of Dec. 2, it will have been 50 years since we harnessed the atom and changed the world.

The fearful in 1942 were sure that we were playing with fire we could not control — but we did.

This week, 2,000 nuclear experts from 40 countries are in Chicago to celebrate the awesome power of nuclear technology.

The fact that it shortened a war is one of its least benefits. Today 95 percent of all nuclear licenses issued contribute to medical science, consumer products and biotechnology.

Countless humans are alive who would have been dead without nuclear technology.

Each year in the United States alone we perform 10 million nuclear-imaging procedures, more than 30,000 therapeutic procedures.

With nuclear radiation we can determine the existence, the location and the extent of disease — and often — with nuclear radiation — cure it.

Radioactive iodine treatments have virtually eliminated the need for thyroid surgery.

A highly focused beam of radiation can remove otherwise inoperable brain tumors.

Paul Harvey

Industry is using nuclear technology to test the quality of steel in cars, to bond paint, to detect flaws in jet engines, to keep ice from forming on airplane wings and to scan baggage for concealed explosives.

With nuclear technology we can pinpoint mineral deposits, extract more oil from shale, test welds and treat wood.

It is a radioisotope called americium-241 which activates our smoke detectors.

Cosmetics are sterilized with radiation to remove irritants.

Permanent press shirts are "irradiated." Wooden floors and veneer on furniture, "polymerized" with gamma radiation, are stronger, more resistant to water and abrasion.

We now measure and control the amount of air whipped into ice cream with nuclear gauges.

Spices and wheat flour, pork and poultry, are preserved by irradiation.

Our five scientific stations on the moon are powered by nuclear energy.

Nuclear technology has proved adaptable to insect control, to seed germination, to minuscule measurements of time and space.

Museums use nuclear techniques to detect forgeries. Any one of these harvested "blessings" might well justify all the research that went into harnessing the atom 50 years ago.

And I've not yet even mentioned the nuclear power plants that today produce one-fifth of our electricity. In Sweden it's 50 percent, in Belgium 60 percent, in France nearly 80 percent.

Like the fire the caveman feared, the atom under control has been good servant.

It's not just the economy, stupid

The buzzing is all about President-elect Clinton's priorities. It is said that "the economy" will be highest because we are in "an economic crisis," and because Clinton ran on "change" and "to grow the economy," all of which yields a "mandate" to — what else? — change the economy. Surely, and properly, Clinton will quickly try to spur economic growth. But I will guess this: If he makes his mark it will not be on economics, but on social policy.

There is a reason for this, and new proof. The American economy grows, and falters, and then grows some more. This yields a jagged but ascendant national trend line, regardless of who is president. This is made apparent in the new edition of America's best book "The Statistical Abstract of the United States." Clinton should read it as he takes inventory of his situation.

Consider the glum year of 1991. It was a year of a recession, a big deficit, corporate layoffs, and a wrenching global economic transformation.

Still, the Gross Domestic Product in 1991 only fell by an after-inflation 0.7 percent, after eight years of solid growth. (The 1992 figure will be positive again, probably around 2.2 percent.) The number of jobs fell by a million in 1991 after growing by 10 million since 1985. There are still 20 million manufacturing jobs, about what there were in the mid-'80s, but during that time professional and managerial jobs grew by more than 10 million.

It would be nice to report that our social situation also keeps getting better, with only temporary recessions. Alas, that is not where the Abstract's numbers take us.

In a more prosperous society fewer people should be dependent on welfare. But the number of Aid to Families with Dependent Children recipients went up by 8 percent from 1980 to 1990, to 12 million. The number of Food Stamp recipients has been hovering at about 20 million.

It is no wonder. The rate of divorced persons has climbed to an all-time high. The number of children living without both parents trended 15-23-28 percent in 1970-'80-'91. The proportion of babies born out-of-wedlock has climbed 11-18-27 percent in 1970-'80-'89, with the fastest growth rate among whites.

The violent crime situation is deteriorating. The rate is at an all-time high, up 31 percent from 1985 to 1990, and up 10 percent from 1989 to 1990, as measured by the FBI's "crimes known to the police."

We have much to be proud of in our education system, but student achievement, measured by the SAT and other tests, shows little upward movement.

In short: It's not just the economy, stupid.

Does Bill Clinton have a solution for our social ailments? The election issue of Newsweek ("How He Won") reminds us that Clinton has something important to say. He expressed his public philosophy, again and again, in these words: "No More Something For Nothing." That, too, is his mandate.

It is a worthy goal for an American president, particularly a Democratic president, particularly Clinton. His welfare plan — "a helping hand not a way of life" — is keyed directly to "No More Something For Nothing." So are his education ideas, linked to testing, and earned college scholarships.

Crime is tougher, but Clinton's idea of using military bases as "boot camps" for teen-age hoods makes sense. He may have to look seriously at the idea of using further military assets. Until punishment catches up to crime, there is a something-for-nothing quality to criminality, and it won't get better.

Going to a something-for-something government standard means changing the culture. Ultimately it bumps into America's most threatening issue, proportionalism, a loaded multi-cultural pistol, which yields our most tense politics. The Abstract sets the parameters: The number of Asian-Americans climbed by 108 percent from 1980-90, Hispanics 53 percent. There are an estimated 6 million Muslims. Immigration from former Iron Curtain countries is up.

We can no longer offer demographic distribution of goodies for race, or ethnicity, or gender; that is something for nothing. We either bolster the merit standard, or we're in for trouble.

A Republican president saying, "No More Something For Nothing" would be reviled. A Democrat, like Clinton, governing as "The Merit President," could fulfill his mandate, and offer America serious change.

Nixon to get $ for seized documents, Watergate tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 18 years later, Richard M. Nixon is about to collect from the taxpayers for the documents and tapes that were seized in the Watergate investigations that drove him from the presidency.

A federal appeals court ruled Tuesday that the government must pay the ex-president for the impounded — and still held — materials, including his infamous, once-secret recordings that sealed his fate for trying to cover up the 1972 break-in of the Democratic Party's headquarters.

The three-judge U.S. Court of Appeals panel unanimously ordered a U.S. district judge to determine the compensation — which could be enormous, given the potential collectors' value of the materials.

While it is impossible to predict how a judge would set the compensation, there is a record of sales for Nixon documents.

For example, a single Nixon letter about the Vietnam War has sold for $5,000. A press release of Nixon's "Checkers" speech, signed by the ex-president, brought $2,750. A letter to a couple who supported his anti-communism efforts fetched $3,500.

"Of the modern presidents, he's one of the most popular with collectors," said Kenneth W. Rendell, who runs galleries in New York City and Beverly Hills, Calif., that specialize in presidential manuscripts.

"Generally, Republican presidents sell for more money than Democratic presidents because conservatives have more money than liberals," he said.

Rendell said he has sold "fairly routine" typed Nixon letters from $500 to $5,000, with the content determining the amount. Rendell cited the prices on the Vietnam letter, the "Checkers" press release — in which Nixon defended himself against allegations of financial wrongdoing — and the letter to supporters.

Selby Kiffer, a vice president in Sotheby's books and manuscripts department, said ordinary, typed Nixon letters at his firm have sold from $150 to $400 from 1988 to 1991.

"The two great criteria that collectors judge letters on are condition and content," he said. "A letter that could be related to the Watergate affair or a visit to China would be worth more than declining an invitation to dinner."

The Justice Department did not respond to a question of whether it would appeal the ruling.

The three-judge appellate court said, "Upon reviewing the long and unbroken history relating to the use, control and disposition of presidential papers, we are convinced that Mr. Nixon had a well-grounded expectation of ownership."

"In the light of this history, we hold that Mr. Nixon, like every president before him, had a compensable property interest in his presidential papers."

The case centered on the "takings clause" of the Fifth Amendment, which prohibits the seizure of private property for public use without paying the former owner just compensation.

The papers include correspondence, political reports, telephone logs, drafts of speeches and the recordings made on the White House recording system. The discovery of the Watergate recordings involving Nixon and his aides revealed the presidential cover-up of the burglary and led to Nixon's resignation in the face of certain impeachment in 1974.

The voice-activated system recorded conversations in several White House locations, nearby offices and Camp David.

In 1974, Congress, concerned that Nixon would destroy documents necessary for the Watergate investigation, passed the Presidential Records and Materials Preservation Act.

The law, which specifically mentioned Nixon's records, authorized the government to retain possession of all Nixon documents and tapes and gave him a limited role in controlling access to the materials.

The Supreme Court upheld the law, rejecting Nixon's challenge. But the former president also challenged the taking of his property without just compensation.

While the Justice Department contended the papers and tapes belonged to the government, and won in U.S. District Court, the appellate panel agreed with Nixon.

"History, custom and usage indicate unequivocally that prior to (the 1974 law), presidents exercised complete dominion and control over their presidential papers," wrote U.S. Circuit Judge Harry Edwards, in an opinion joined by judges Ruth B. Ginsburg and Karen LeCraft Henderson.

Papers of George Washington, James Monroe and James Madison were purchased by Congress in the 1830s and 1840s for $20,000 to $25,000 in each case, the court noted.

Some presidents destroyed their papers, including Chester A. Arthur, whose grandson said Arthur burned the records in three large garbage cans. James Garfield, the court noted, was said to have destroyed his personal and political records between the time he was struck by an assassin's bullet July 2, 1881, and his death on Sept. 19 that year.

Every president from Franklin Roosevelt through Jimmy Carter, with the exception of Nixon, donated his papers to the government in exchange for a publicly supported presidential library.

The papers of Ronald Reagan and George Bush are subject to the Presidential Records Act of 1978, which abolished private ownership of presidential papers.

Propane explosion

A school bus lies in ruins Tuesday night following the explosion of a 1,000-gallon propane tank in Mountain City, Tenn. The school bus garage for Johnson County was near the site of the explosion. Six people were injured in the blast and so many buses were destroyed that school had to be canceled in the Northeast Tennessee county today.

Mr. Clinton goes to Washington

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Mr. Clinton was going to Washington, and his first appointment was with President Bush to get a "candid assessment" about world issues the president-elect will face.

Clinton did not reveal precisely what he had in mind for his White House meeting with the man whose eviction he arranged. But he said Tuesday he was "pleased that he invited me up and I'll be pretty much at his disposal. ... There are one or two things I want to raise."

Meanwhile, the Arkansas governor was focusing his attention on putting together a new government with a distinctly different tone from his predecessor's.

Clinton on Tuesday appointed former South Carolina Gov. Dick Riley, a Washington outsider, to oversee the hiring of the upper-level bureaucrats — the insiders — for the new administration.

After meeting with Bush, Clinton was going to a black business district for a walk through the neighborhood. And in the evening, he was scheduled to attend a reception for the Children's Defense Fund, the advocacy group that his wife, Hillary, once chaired.

Since the election, Clinton and Bush have talked by telephone and communicated through emissaries, but today's meeting was their first face-to-face encounter. Foreign policy was on the agenda. "I want to get his candid assessment about some world issues, some problems I'll be facing at the beginning of my term," Clinton said Tuesday.

After a picture-taking session in the Rose Garden, their private conversation was set for the Oval Office, the symbolic center of presidential power.

Neither Clinton nor Bush has expressed since election night any public animosity about the rough-and-tumble campaign, during which the president referred to Clinton and running mate Al Gore as "Bozos" and Clinton called Bush a man without principles.

In fact, Bush has promised the full cooperation of his administration for the transition, and Clinton has praised the president's helpfulness.

However, there seemed to be some lingering bad feelings among their deputies.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater accused the Clinton camp of trying to score political points by turning down the president's offer of a military jet and the use of Blair House, the government guest quarters for visiting VIPs, for the Washington trip.

Clinton's people asked for those perquisites and then changed their minds, Fitzwater said, producing a letter from Clinton transition chief Warren Christopher to prove it.

"I resent them trying to portray us as offering them luxury and their turning it down, when they were the ones who asked for it in the first place," Fitzwater said.

"No one intended a slight at the White House," insisted Dee Dee Myers, Clinton's spokeswoman.

Clinton was traveling to Washington on his chartered campaign plane and staying at the nearby Hay-Adams Hotel instead of Blair House because of the cost, she said.

Clinton was spending just a single night in Washington, but two full days, including a meeting Thursday with Democratic and Republican lawmakers on Capitol Hill.

He does not plan to return to Little Rock to continue his transition work until late Thursday night.

With the exception of Hillary Clinton, Riley was the first person who Clinton has expressly said would serve in his new White House.

"The work that he has to do in helping us fill out these departments may not be completely done on January 20th," Inauguration Day, Clinton said.

"He's got a job that will probably take him well into the administration."

Trial: Cancer victim against tobacco giant

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — In the first trial since the Supreme Court cleared the way for such lawsuits, a man dying of lung cancer claims a cigarette maker persuaded him to ignore evidence that smoking is dangerous.

Opening arguments were scheduled for today in Charles Kueper's lawsuit against R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., the nation's second largest tobacco company, and two other defendants.

Jury selection was completed Tuesday in St. Clair County Circuit Court.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in June that warning labels on tobacco products don't shield companies that make them from lawsuits based on state personal injury laws.

Kueper, 51, claims he got lung cancer from smoking 1 1/2 packs of cigarettes a day for nearly 30 years.

His attorney, Bruce Cook, said Reynolds and the Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based trade association, tried to persuade people to ignore health warnings.

Kueper, a retired Army master sergeant, is suing for compensatory damages of $3 million and unspecified punitive damages.

Reynolds spokesman David Fishel said Tuesday the Supreme Court's ruling pre-empted lawsuits such as Kueper's because it found no proof tobacco companies tried to undermine health warnings against smoking.

"Personal responsibility is at the heart of this issue," Fishel said.

If the lawsuit against the Winston-Salem, N.C.-based company is successful, it could boost dozens of other cigarette liability lawsuits pending against tobacco companies, anti-smoking advocates said.

"The Supreme Court has said the tobacco industry does not have a license to lie," said Richard Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and chairman of the Tobacco Products Liability Project.

The Supreme Court ruled in a lawsuit brought by a New Jersey woman's family that a 1965 federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages didn't shield the companies from all lawsuits based on state personal injury laws.

The woman, Rose Cipollone, died of lung cancer.

The case was sent back to a lower court, but the Cipollone family dropped the lawsuit this month without saying why.

Kueper's attorney has subpoenaed Reynolds Chairman Jim Johnston to testify, along with a former Reynolds scientist who has said the company conducted tests in the late 1960s that suggested links between smoking and lung disease.

Group has plan to help improve family values

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of social thinkers has come up with a set of ideas intended to "set things right with our children and families."

The group wants married couples to work less and spend more time raising their family. The thinkers also want the assets of divorcing couples earmarked for the children.

And, in a policy paper signed by a number of prominent academics, they want the government to provide a full-year family leave when a child is born — half paid and half unpaid.

The ideas come from the "communitarian" movement, a group of liberals and conservatives who think society is paying too much heed to rights and too little to responsibilities.

Their most against-the-grain idea is a proposal that parents put children above job — even if it means less family income.

"For too many parents, long work hours are not simply a reflection of economic pressure but also of excessive careerism or acquisitiveness," they write.

"What these parents, and the communities that they live and work within, need is a change of their 'habits of the heart,' a change which reaffirms the value of children. We call on all parents to recommit themselves to their work as nurturers and stewards of the next generation and to put their children first."

Among their other proposals toward "taking the steps necessary to set things right with our children and families":

- Replace the current division of assets between parents after divorce with a policy that assigns assets to the needs of minor children. Control of children's assets would rest with the custodial parent.
- Ask parents to contribute at least four hours a week to the child-care centers where their children are placed. Too much child care is provided by people for whom it is just another minimum wage job and parents' involvement would make a difference.

—Give parents a government allowance of a fixed amount, perhaps $600 per child. They preferred that to an increase in the income tax exemption for children, which they said would discriminate against families where a parent stayed home.

—Require states to try to establish paternity at the time of birth and name both parents on a birth certificate to make sure fathers do not evade parental responsibilities.

Among those endorsing the proposals were Amitai Etzioni, a sociologist at George Washington University and founder of the Communitarian Network; Henry Cisneros, former mayor of San Antonio, Texas and a transition adviser to Clinton; Harvey Cox of the Harvard Divinity School; Betty Friedan, a feminist movement pioneer; John W. Gardner of Stanford University, founder of Common Cause; Adlai E. Stevenson III, a former senator; and Lester C. Thurow, dean of the management school at MIT.

Turkey with all the trimmings is American favorite

By Marialisa Calta

When my father was getting ready to immigrate from Italy to the United States in the late 1920s, he remembers traveling with his mother and sister from his hometown in the Italian Alps to the port city of Genoa, to speak to someone at the American consulate. It was a dreary Thursday in November, and the family was charged to find that the office was closed. "Those crazy Americans," explained an Italian guard. "They're off celebrating the Day of the Chicken."

It was Thanksgiving — or Turkey Day — that those crazy Americans were off celebrating, and, thankfully, we're still at it.

Now, most people have their menu set — perhaps handed down several generations. I salute them. Why mess with success?

But me... well, in culinary matters, it's sometimes hard for me to leave well enough alone. I've stuffed turkeys with cornbread and apples, sourdough bread and herbs, chestnuts and even (when a friend made the stuffing) Ritz crackers. I've basted birds with apple cider, sherry, maple syrup and orange juice. I've cooked them in brown paper bags, wrapped in butter-soaked cheesecloth and under aluminum-foil tents.

Finally, I was sent a copy of "The Turkey Cookbook," by Rick Rodgers (HarperPerennial, 1990), which gives an amazing variety of recipes not only for the bird itself, but for stuffing, condiments, relishes — and leftovers.

With the help of this book and another, as well as my friends at the New England Culinary Institute, I have devised my own favorite Thanksgiving menu, which I offer below.

The turkey is stuffed with "aromatics" — onions and herbs and the like — and the real stuffing baked separately, a system Rodgers and many other chefs endorse to both ensure food safety and enhance moistness in the turkey. Other safety tips include stuffing a turkey (if you must) right before roasting, and never — never — cooking a turkey (1) overnight, (2) at low temperatures or (3) over the course of two days. Refrigerate leftovers within two hours of serving.

PERFECT ROAST TURKEY WITH GORGEOUS GIBLET GRAVY

- 1 10-to-12 pound fresh turkey; neck, liver and excess fat removed; giblets removed and reserved
- 1 salt and pepper to taste
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 medium carrot, chopped
- 1/4 medium celery rib, chopped
- 1/4 cup fresh parsley
- 2 tablespoons fresh rosemary, chopped, or 1 teaspoon dried
- 2 tablespoons fresh sage, chopped, or 1 teaspoon dried
- 4-6 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
- 1 cup dry white wine or water
- 3 cups homemade turkey stock or 1 1/2 cups canned chicken broth mixed with 1 1/2 cups water
- 1/4 cup flour

Rinse turkey well, inside and out, under cold running water. Dry thoroughly with paper towels. Rub cavity well with salt and pepper.

In a medium bowl, combine onion, carrot, celery, parsley and seasonings; toss to mix. Loosely stuff the turkey's body and neck cavities with this mixture. Cover the large body cavity with aluminum foil to enclose the vegetables.

Using toothpicks or a thin metal skewer, pin the neck skin to the turkey's back. Fold the wings akimbo behind the back. Tie the drumsticks together with a piece of kitchen string. Rub the entire exterior of the turkey with softened butter, then season all over with salt and pepper.

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Place the turkey on a rack in a large roasting pan, about 2 inches deep. Pour wine into the bottom of the pan. Loosely cover the turkey breast with aluminum foil.

Roast the turkey, basting every 20 minutes with pan drippings, allowing 20 to 25 minutes per pound. It is done when a meat thermometer inserted in the thigh, not touching a bone, registers 180 degrees. If at any point the drippings threaten to burn, add 1/2 cup water to the pan. About 1 hour before the turkey is done, remove the foil to allow skin to brown, replacing foil if it looks like it is getting burned. Remove the turkey to a carving board and let stand 20 minutes before carving.

While the turkey is roasting, trim the heart and gizzard. Bring the giblets and stock to a boil over medium heat. Reduce heat to a simmer, cover and cook until tender, about 1 1/4 hours. Remove giblets, reserving stock, and chop finely. Set aside.

While turkey is standing, make gravy. Pour the pan drippings into a 4-cup glass measuring cup and let stand 5 minutes. Skim and set aside fat. Add enough of reserved stock to pan drippings to make 4 cups liquid. Set roasting pan over two burners on top of stove over moderately low heat. Add 1/4 cup reserved fat. Sprinkle in flour and cook, whisking often, about 2 minutes. Whisk in the 4 cups cooking liquid and bring to a boil, scraping the brown bits from the roasting pan. Reduce to simmer, add giblets and cook, whisking often, 3 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Serve.

Yield: 10 to 14 servings.

• Recipe adapted from "The Turkey Cookbook" by Rick Rodgers (HarperPerennial, 1990). This recipe will accommodate a bird up to 18 pounds; increase butter to 8 tablespoons and adjust roasting time, allowing 15 to 20 minutes per pound for any turkey 16 pounds or heavier.

WILD RICE, CRANBERRY AND PECAN DRESSING

- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup water
- 12 ounces fresh cranberries
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 2 large onion, finely chopped
- 2 large celery ribs, finely chopped
- 2 cups wild rice, well rinsed
- 5 cups homemade turkey stock or 2 1/2 cups canned chicken broth mixed with 2 1/2 cups water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1 cup pecans, toasted and coarsely chopped

In a medium saucepan, combine the sugar with the 1 cup of water over moderate heat. Bring to a simmer, stirring constantly until the sugar is dissolved. Add cranberries and cook just until almost all are popped, about 3 minutes. Using a slotted spoon, transfer the cranberries to a medium bowl, leaving syrup in saucepan. Reserve syrup for other uses (see note below).

Reworking tradition: The dressing and turkey in this Thanksgiving meal were cooked separately, ensuring food safety and enhancing the bird's moistness.

In a separate, large saucepan, melt the butter over moderate heat. Add the onion and celery and cook, stirring often, until the vegetables are softened, about 4 minutes. Add the wild rice and cook, stirring, for 1 minute. Add the stock, salt, thyme and pepper. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat to low, cover and simmer until the rice is tender but pleasantly chewy, about 45 minutes.

Remove from the heat and let stand, covered, for 15 minutes. (Drain the rice of excess liquid, if necessary.) Add the rice and toasted pecans to the cranberries. Toss to mix well.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place stuffing in a buttered 9-by-13 inch baking dish and bake, covered, until heated through, about 30 to 40 minutes.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

• Recipe from "The Turkey Cookbook," by Rick Rodgers (HarperPerennial, 1990). Rodgers suggests using the syrup for "Thanksgiving Kirs" instead of the traditional creme de cassis, add 1 part syrup to 3 parts chilled white wine or champagne. New England Culinary Institute students Julie Harrington and Bill Walker also suggest that the syrup be used instead of maple syrup or brown sugar in baking acorn squash.

CRANBERRY RELISH

- 1 pound cranberries, chopped
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 1-inch piece of ginger, peeled and sliced lengthwise into strips
- 1 rind of orange, grated, with juice

Combine all ingredients in a medium saucepan and cook over low flame until thickened. Remove ginger pieces. Cool. Serve at room temperature.

Yield: 8 servings.

How do you know what to eat when even experts disagree?

By MARY MACVEAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't drink the milk. Toss out that tub of cholesterol-free margarine. And you've heard about apples. And eggs? And chicken?

It's no wonder if you're baffled by the advice and warnings and studies about what to eat and what to avoid. So if it seems that everything is bad, why not just dig into the chocolate mousse and prepare for death?

Because, in fact, behind the ads and the headlines, the dietary advice is simple and essentially the same as it's been since the mid-1950s.

You've heard it before, probably from Mom: Eat lots of fruits, vegetables and grains, and cut down on fatty foods.

"It's really, really boring advice," says Marion Nestle, who chairs the department of nutrition at New York University and was managing editor of the 1988 Surgeon General's report on nutrition and health.

"There's a view that nutritional advice keeps changing," she says. "No wonder. Just recently, consumers have faced:

— A group of doctors, including baby guru Dr. Benjamin Spock, warning against feeding milk to kids, partly because of its fat content. Plenty of doctors disagreed, and Spock later said he hadn't intended to panic parents.

— Word that margarine, often advertised as cholesterol-free, could raise blood cholesterol levels because of the way the oils it's made from are processed. Generally, it's turning out that cholesterol levels are more complex a risk factor than the public was given to believe.

— Chefs complaining that even they can't always be sure the seafood they buy is safe.

There also have been warnings that apples treated with Alar were harmful (Alar is off the market), and that eggs and chickens could carry salmonella. And after all the flip-flops, it's hard for consumers to figure out whether oat bran helps lower cholesterol.

One bit of advice: Don't immediately embrace the cure-all or shun the villain identified in one study.

"Any time you look at a single nutrient, you're bound to find sort of funny research results," Nestle says. "People don't eat nutrients. They eat diets of food."

Chef Deborah Madison, author of the cookbooks "The Savory Way" and "Greens," copes by eating a diet based on produce and grains — bought fresh and prepared simply.

"I eat things that are as unadulterated as possible. I never wanted to eat margarine. I don't like the way it tastes, and I don't like the way it feels," she says. "Olive oil is much more delicious, and so is butter. I've never thought butter was going to kill me eaten in a moderate amount."

Alas, yes. Moderation. That's an elusive concept in a country always searching for bigger and jumbo and colossal. But it's comforting if some of your favorite foods register low on the nutrition charts. Dietitians these days say all foods can be part of a good diet if eaten in balance.

To come up with a good diet, people have to become savvy, says Jodie Silverman of the consumer advocacy group Public Voice. Ask questions, read labels carefully. Distinguish between nutrition information and advertising.

The standard federal guidelines are contained in the Food Guide Pyramid, which sets out a recommended daily diet: Of 15 servings of food, six should be grains (pasta, rice, cereal, bread) and five produce. That leaves two for dairy foods and two for meat, fish, eggs, dried beans or nuts.

In other words, a diet high in complex carbohydrates and low in fats.

Debate continues over the use of pesticides and other farm chemicals, but experts say the value of fruits and vegetables far outweighs any potential harm.

And most agree the No. 1 enemy in the American diet is fat. Fats should make up no more than 30 percent of calories.

It's not hard — or punishing — to follow the advice and still feast. You need only imagine a bowl of pasta with fresh tomatoes and basil, accompanied by crusty wheat bread and a salad.

The popularity of Italian food has helped Americans restore some balance to their meals, because the cuisine often focuses on pasta or rice and fresh vegetables, using meat as a condiment, says Joyce Goldstein, chef-owner at Square One restaurant in San Francisco.

With the American diet of burgers, fries, chips and processed foods, she says, "We have gotten it completely backward."

Spiced apple cordial is microwave easy

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine

While apples abound this fall, set a few aside to make your own microwave apple cordial. Cook chopped apples with spices, then add white wine and brandy. In a few weeks, when the flavor is fruity and mellow, strain off the liqueur, saving the brandied chopped apples. The liqueur is ready for drinking or bottling for gift-giving.

You can use the brandied apples as an elegant dessert topping for ice cream or cake. They'll keep in your refrigerator for up to two weeks. To warm the fruit for serving, place the apples in a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cook, covered, on high for 1 to 2 minutes or until heated through, stirring once or twice.

Spiced Apple Cordial

- 3 to 4 medium apples
 - 6 inches stick cinnamon, broken
 - 2 tablespoons water
 - 2 cups sugar
 - One 750-milliliter bottle (3 1/2 cups) dry white wine
 - 1 1/2 cups brandy
- Core and chop apples. (You should have 2 1/2 cups.) In a 1 1/2-quart microwave-safe casserole combine apples, cinnamon and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 3 to 5 minutes or until apples are tender, stirring once.

Add sugar; stir until dissolved. Cool. Stir in wine and brandy. Pour into a 2-quart ceramic or glass jar. Cover and store in a cool place for two to four weeks.

To serve, strain the mixture through several layers of 100 percent cotton cheesecloth, reserving the apples. Serve the liqueur in cordial glasses. Serve apples over ice cream. Cover and store the liqueur in a cool, dry place for up to a year. Makes 5 1/2 cups liqueur or 22 (4-ounce) servings.

For some kids, the luck is not in the draw

By TERRY MUTCHLER
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Melissa leans against a casino wall, looking crumpled, tired and scared. She is 9 years old.

A few feet away, coins fall from slots into tin trays as red lights flash and bells ring. Dealers with magicians' hands slide chips and money across green felt tables. Cocktail waitresses in skimpy skirts, low-cut blouses and push-up bras serve free liquor to gamblers plopping down $100 bills.

It is midnight on a recent Friday at the Trump Taj Mahal. Melissa is waiting for her mother to finish gambling.

She has been here two hours, says a security guard nearby. He is keeping an eye on Melissa while trying to locate her mom.

"My mother's in there and I want her," the little girl says, her brown eyes welling with tears. "I want to go to our room."

Melissa is one of scores of "casino kids," some as young as 6 months, whom workers say are left by their parents at the edge of gaming halls for hours at a time.

"They leave their kids and they expect for us to watch them," said Terriana Jones, a security worker at the Taj Mahal. "It's a crime. It's a sin. There should be a law to stop it."

There is a law against leaving children unattended, said Winnie Comfort, a spokeswoman for the Department of Human Services. Parents who abandon their children face civil and criminal penalties, which vary depending on the nature of the offense. Anyone who fails to report an incident of possible child neglect or abuse can be charged with disorderly conduct.

But Comfort said the department's Division of Youth and Family Services does not get an unusually high number of complaints about children left at casinos, and does not keep separate statistics on them.

"On a scale from 1 to 10, the problem is a 10," said Susan Raff, another Taj Mahal security worker. "They should have a special place for children to go, manned 24 hours."

Executives at Harrah's, Bally's Park Place, Bally's Grand, Claridge, Merv Griffin's Resorts and the Showboat acknowledge the problem, but class it as negligible.

Trump Plaza and the Taj Mahal did not return telephone calls for comment, but officials at the Sands, Caesars, Tropworld and Trump Castle said they've never seen children abandoned at their establishments.

Yet in interviews over the last two months, workers at all of the city's 12 casinos told stories of parents who left infants in carriages or parked their youngsters on carpeted steps for long stretches, stopping back every few hours to check on them.

Vivian Robinson, a retired Philadelphia schoolteacher now employed at Resorts, said she once stopped a woman from hitting her child after the boy had her paged because he was hungry.

Atlantic City police Capt. Carlton Duncan said he remembered a man who had to be physically removed from the casino floor to get his children. Another man left three young children for several hours until he was tracked down — in a different casino, Duncan said.

Late one night at Resorts not too long ago, 6-year-old Sharde spent hours waiting for her parents to come off the floor. Meanwhile, two fights broke out. A woman passed out nearby. A man who appeared drunk walked over to Sharde and said, "What a pretty little girl."

When the girl's mother returned, she insisted to a reporter that she had left Sharde only "for a few minutes." She said she didn't think it unsafe because there were so many security guards around.

"I told her to scream if somebody wanted to take her," the mother said. Another day at Resorts, four children ages 2 to 12 played in the hotel's video-game arcade, just pushing buttons and running around because they had no money. Sarom, a Cambodian who moved to Philadelphia with his family, was watching his younger siblings and cousins. They had been there for three hours, the arcade attendant said.

Sarom's unemployed father,

Sarom, returned after he lost $100 at the tables. He said he didn't think it was unsafe to leave the children unattended.

Duncan thinks differently. "It's wrong and it is dangerous," he said. "There is no doubt about it whether it's at a casino or a supermarket. It's dangerous."

All gaming halls offer arcades and tout swimming pools and outdoor activities for people under 21, who by law aren't allowed in the casinos.

TropWorld has an amusement park with a $9.95 admission charge. Harrah's Marina has a state-licensed nursery providing child care for hotel guests free of charge. It is open until 10 p.m. daily during the summer, with reduced hours off-season, casino spokeswoman Alyce Parker said.

The other 11 casinos don't offer organized child care, though some provide referrals to baby-sitters.

The casinos say they don't have written policies on the issue of unattended children because they rely on the common sense of parents.

Michael DiLeva, a spokesman for Bally's Park Place and Bally's Grand, said children's activity is "an area where we don't have a lot to offer."

"I wouldn't say it's a major problem, but occasionally ... parents will play the slots close to the edge and keep an eye on the children," he said.

Molly Dockery, a blackjack dealer at Bally's Park Place, said she sees unattended kids often, and it disgusts her.

"We talk about it all the time," said Dockery, herself an expectant mother. "These kids are here for four and five hours straight." Of their parents, she said, "I feel if they can gamble $200, they can pay a baby sitter."

Robinson, the retired teacher standing guard at Resorts, called unattended children victims waiting to happen.

"You have all kinds of people coming into the casinos — child molesters drunks, thieves. Every casino has them," she said.

Back at the Taj Mahal, supervisor Rose Ann Suydam kneels in front of Melissa and asks her to describe her mother. The girl fidgets with the string on her balloon and complains that she doesn't like coming to casinos.

Two pages go unanswered and Melissa starts crying harder. A 7-year-old friend of Melissa's warns that her mother will be angry about being paged.

Suydam and the night security manager, James Tirimacco, take Melissa to another part of the casino; they will not say how long it took to find her mother.

A group of workers standing nearby just shake their heads.

Smokeout is your chance to quit

DEAR ABBY: Last year, your column encouraging smokers to participate in the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout helped millions across the country to make the decision to quit smoking — at least for the day.

Would you please run that column again this year? It was a terrific morale booster for our 2.5 million American Cancer Society volunteers in the United States.

Thank you very much for your help, Abby. Your support is very much appreciated, and we are grateful for all your good work in the fight against cancer.

STANLEY I. TANNENBAUM,
CHAIRMAN, AMERICAN
CANCER SOCIETY,
ILLINOIS DIVISION

DEAR MR. TANNENBAUM:
With pleasure!

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow, Nov. 19, 1992, will mark the 16th annual Great American Smokeout, a one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours, just to prove they can do it.

Last year, 18 million smokers tried to quit for the day. This represents 36 percent of the nation's 50 million smokers. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women. But the No. 1 cause of cancer death among women and men today is lung cancer. Tobacco claims one life every 13 seconds. An estimated 146,000 will die of lung cancer in 1992.

problems and allergies than are children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt. Cigarette companies sell $1 billion of cigarettes to children every year.

Quitting "cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers tell me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the easiest. Those who need help to break their habit: Call your local chapter of the American Cancer Society or call 1-800-227-2345 for information.

If you're hooked and have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," why not start tomorrow? It won't be easy, but it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself — and those who love you. Love, ABBY

Naomi Brack to be honored with reception

Amarillo College Associate Degree Nursing Alumni Association and the AC Foundation will host a birthday party for Naomi Brack at 5:30 p.m. Sunday at the Amarillo Civic Center.

The celebration will honor Brack's 70th birthday and her 16 years as director of the nursing program at AC with a social hour and dinner at the Grand Plaza.

Brack plans to retire at the end of the 1992-1993 school year after 40 years in the nursing professions. She began her nursing career in 1951 following her graduation from the St. Francis School of Nursing in Grand Island, Neb.

She started as staff nurse at St. Francis Hospital. In 1956, she and her husband moved to Amarillo where Brack began her teaching career as an instructor in medical and surgical nursing at Northwest Texas Hospital. She joined the AC faculty in 1976 as director of the associate degree nursing program. In 1980, she was named chairman of the AC Nursing Division.

Tickets are available by calling the AC Foundation at 371-5100.

Breast cancer screening set for Lefors community

The breast cancer screening program of Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center and High Plains Baptist Hospital of Amarillo will continue community outreach clinics for early detection of breast cancer.

Funding is available through the Texas Department of Health for screening mammography for Texas residents qualifying for financial assistance.

Early detection of breast cancer is the major goal of cancer control for each woman seen in the clinic. It provides low cost screening which includes a breast exam by a registered nurse trained in breast cancer detection, teaching of breast self examination and a mammogram.

The American Cancer Society recommends women be screened for breast cancer even if they show no signs or symptoms of it. The society recommends self breast examination monthly, a yearly physical and a mammogram according to age.

A clinic is planned for 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. Nov. 20 at the Lefors Civic Center. Exams are by appointment only. For information about the clinic or to make an appointment, call the Harrington Cancer Center at 1-800-377-HOPE.

Watercolors on display at Square House

An exhibit of watercolors and portraits by Martha Kent Jacobs is showing at the Square House Museum. The selection of watercolor paintings combines flowers with landscape scenes from the northeast and Palo Duro Canyon. The portraits are of the artist's students in the Claude schools.

Born in New York, Martha Kent Jacobs received a bachelor of art degree from Bennington College in Vermont and a master of fine arts degree from the University of Pennsylvania. She has shown her work in the northeast, in galleries and museums from Pennsylvania to Maine, and has taught art on the college level in Pennsylvania, California, and New York. In 1990 she completed graduate work in education at Fordham University and has earned teaching certificates in secondary art in both New York and Texas. She currently teaches art in the Claude I.S.D. and in the Amarillo College Community Service Program.

She says this about herself and her art: "I moved here to marry my sweetheart a little over a year ago, and started teaching in Claude this year."

"The canyon is by far the most difficult landscape I have ever painted. The topography, light, and space are so different from the northeast. I enjoy the challenge the Palo Duro offers me."

Since moving to the Amarillo area I have been delighted to find so many people painting or interested in painting through the Amarillo Art Association. The kids at the Claude Middle and High Schools are wonderful and curious-minded. The assortment of young budding comic-illustrators I've taught through the Amarillo College Community Service Program are full of imagination and funny ideas.

"It's all been a nice switch from the hard pace of life in New York City."

Watercolors and Portraits by Martha Kent Jacobs will be on display in the Purvines Gallery of the Square House Museum through January 3. A reception for the artist, open to the public, will be held 3-4:30 p.m. Dec. 6. The Square House Museum is open Monday-Friday from 8:30-5:30, Saturday from 9:00-5:30, and Sunday from 1:00-5:30. Admission is free. For more information, call (806) 537-3524.

Bahamian shipwreck tells the 'hull' story

By 3-2-1 CONTACT Magazine
For AP Special Features

What a wreck! Under 20 feet of water, treasure hunters found a partly buried Spanish ship from the early 1500s. Experts say it may be the oldest shipwreck ever found in the Americas.

The ship, found off the Bahama Islands, may also be the most complete wreck ever found. Metal fixtures are usually the only parts left of old shipwrecks. But with this wreck, divers found parts of the wooden hull. (A hull is the sides and bottom of a ship.)

After studying the hull, experts think the ship was about 60 feet long. When it sank, it spilled out weapons, cannons, coins and other treasures onto the sea floor.

The sailing ship may be the first caravel ever found. (Caravels were sturdy explorer ships.) So far, only 15 feet of the ship has been uncovered. You might say they don't have the ... hull story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A secret ambition can be realized today — if you make it your primary objective. Don't get sidetracked into less meaningful situations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sometimes, it's wise to let others do the talking, but if you feel your opinions and ideas are better than theirs today, sound off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be intimidated by unanticipated obstacles today. You're a good performer under pressure, and a bit of adversity could help get your motor started.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) When it comes to negotiating bargains today, you should be a very good horse-trader. Instinctively you'll know how to get the terms you want without taking advantage of the other guy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A dormant situation you hoped would provide a second source of earnings can be infused with new life now. Don't write it off just because it has not yet fulfilled its promise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Since your executive abilities are enhanced today, you should be able to find situations where they can be put to constructive use. Organizing and delegating assignments are but two.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sometimes, to the amazement of others, you are able to take on two critical tasks simultaneously and handle them both equally well. Today could be one of those days.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll perform best in involvements today that challenge you both mentally and physically. Devote your efforts to endeavors where you can use your muscles and your mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have a matter dangling that is important financially, you might be luckier taking care of it today instead of scheduling it for a later date.

Ryan hits for 25 in season opener

Tascosa runs past Pampa, 66-43

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Senior Alana Ryan scored a game-high 25 points for the Pampa Lady Harvesters, but it wasn't enough as Amarillo Tascosa claimed a 66-43 victory in a season basketball opener Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Tascosa, led by Brinda Owensby's 24 points, jumped out to a 21-5 first-quarter lead and never trailed against the Lady Harvesters, who suffered from turnover problems in the early going.

Tascosa led by 14, 38-24, at half-time and never had less than a 12-point lead in the second half, but the Lady Harvesters put on some scoring bursts that kept the visitors from completely dominating the game.

"I was pleased with the way our kids hung in there. They had a lot of fresh players coming in off their bench, but we stayed in there and ran right with them," said Pampa head coach Albert Nichols.

Ryan, a 5-9 post player, had only one bucket in the first quarter, but she came on strong and finished the half with 11. She led the Lady Harvester on the boards with seven rebounds.

"Alana had a real strong scoring night and Katina Thomas came in and played with a lot of intensity and hustle," Nichols said. "We've got some young kids on the team and they're just going to have to get in and get their feet wet. We're going to stick with them and they'll start coming around."

Pampa could have made the game closer from the foul line, but the Lady Harvester could connect on only 56.6 percent (13 of 23) of their charity tosses.

"We had a good chance to close in on them before the half, but we missed four free throws right there at the end of the second quarter that hurt us," Nichols said.

"You're not going to win very many games shooting 50-some percent from the free throw line, but I feel like we'll be able to get that up around 70 percent before we're through."

Tascosa shot only 50 percent (8 of 16) from the line, but the Lady Rebels downed five in a row in the first quarter to help them get off to a quick lead.

Senior guard Christie Jones, the lone returning starter for Pampa, followed Ryan in the scoring column with eight points.

Tascosa's 6-1 Angie Wilson contributed 10 points and collared seven rebounds to help give the Lady Rebels a 27-26 edge on the boards.

Both Pampa and Tascosa are entered in the Fantasy of Lights Tournament this weekend in Wichita Falls.

Pampa's Christie Jones (10) cuts in front of Tascosa's Angie Wilson (33) Tuesday night in the season opener. Lady Harvesters also pictured are Kasey Bowers (54), Jame Davis (32) and Katina Thomas (20).

"It's going to be a good tournament for us. There's some real tough teams and that should help us get ready for district," Nichols said.

Pampa opens up with Wichita Falls Hirschi at 8:30 a.m. Friday in the D.L. Ligon Coliseum at Midwestern State University. The winner plays at 4:30 p.m. Friday in the Wichita Falls Rider fieldhouse while the loser plays at the same time in the Wichita Falls Hirschi fieldhouse.

Baseball's expansion teams take different paths in draft

Marlins big spenders

MIAMI (AP) — The Florida Marlins seem willing to open their wallet for a closer.

High-priced California reliever Bryan Harvey went to Florida in one of the most unexpected moves of Tuesday's expansion draft.

Since the Marlins figure to be behind in the ninth inning of most games, their need for an ace reliever is questionable. But team officials said they're willing to swallow Harvey's contract for $11.25 million over three years in a gamble that he'll recover from elbow surgery three months ago.

"We said we were going to have some surprises, and that was one," Marlins president Carl Barger said. "We picked Bryan Harvey to keep, not to trade. We think he's going to be a key component to our team."

The other high-profile acquisitions by Florida were California outfielder Junior Felix and Oakland shortstop Walt Weiss, the latter obtained in a trade after the draft for catcher Eric Helfand and a player to be named later.

The Marlins had drafted Helfand from the A's earlier in the day.

Florida general manager Dave Dombrowski acquired six other players in three trades following the draft. The deals:

— Pitcher Danny Jackson to Philadelphia for pitchers Joel Adamson and Matt Whisenant.

— Pitcher Greg Hibbard to the Chicago Cubs for shortstop Alex Arias and third baseman Gary Scott.

— Pitcher Tom Edens to Houston for pitchers Brian Griffiths and Hector Carrasco.

By the end of the night, Florida had acquired 22 pitchers, eight outfielders, seven infielders and two catchers.

The Marlins used their first choice and the second of the draft to take Nigel Wilson, a 22-year-old outfielder from the Toronto organization. He hit .274 with 26 home runs and 69 RBIs last season at Class AA Knoxville, but he also struck out 137 times in 137 games.

The Marlins flew Wilson from winter ball in Venezuela to Miami's Joe Robbie Stadium for a news conference.

"I'm almost in tears right now," he said. "I've never had anything like this happen in my life."

Florida's second selection was 21-year-old pitcher Jose Martinez from the New York Mets. He had a combined record of 11-7 with a 1.94 ERA last season at Class A St. Lucie and Class AA Binghamton.

The Marlins say they want a roster popular with Miami's Latin population, but Martinez was one of only four Hispanics they drafted.

Other pitching prospects selected included Trevor Hoffman from Cincinnati, Patrick Rapp from San Francisco, Greg Hibbard from the Chicago White Sox, Kip Vaughn from Baltimore, David Weathers from Toronto and John Johnstone from the New York Mets.

Florida also acquired two other pitchers with considerable major league experience — Jack Armstrong (31-47 career record) from Cleveland and Cris Carpenter (21-15) from St. Louis.

Harvey, 29, had a 2.49 ERA with 126 saves in six seasons with California.

"I felt everybody would leave me alone coming off arm surgery," he said.

"We want someone who can close games," Dombrowski said. "We have a young club out there, and if there's anything that can deflate a ballclub, it's losing games late in the game. Our reports are that Bryan Harvey's healthy, and he's the best closer in the game when he's healthy."

The Marlins' double-play combination on Opening Day could be Weiss and Bret Barberie, taken with their third pick. He hit .232 for the Expos last season.

Weiss, plagued by injuries the past four seasons, has a career average of .246 since joining the A's in 1987. Felix hit .265 in 303 games with Toronto and California.

The Marlins started the second round by taking outfielder Carl Everett of the New York Yankees. Everett was the Yankees' first-round pick in 1990.

"We have a lot of people who are just on the verge of playing on the major league level right now," Dombrowski said.

Rockies opt for vets

NEW YORK (AP) — The way Don Baylor sees it, the Colorado Rockies are set for their opener against the New York Mets next April.

"We went after the guys we wanted right away and that will probably be our opening day lineup," Baylor said Tuesday after the Rockies picked their players in the expansion draft.

Twelve of the 13 first-round picks had major league experience, but Colorado quickly traded second baseman Jody Reed to Los Angeles for pitcher Rudy Seanez, and sent outfielder Kevin Reimer to Milwaukee for another outfielder, Dante Bichette.

"We covered the things we felt we had to have," Rockies general manager Bob Gebhard said.

Colorado's first lineup figures to have Andres Galarraga at first, Eric Young at second, Freddie Benivevides at shortstop and Charlie Hayes at third. Jerald Clark will be in left, Alex Cole in center and Dante Bichette in right, with top pick David Nied on the mound and Joe Girardi behind the plate.

"It's been a pretty exciting day," Gebhard said after announcing the two deals following the seven-hour draft. "We do want to get out, look at our roster, study it a little and see what areas we needed to straighten and grow with."

Galarraga was signed as a free agent Monday. Young was taken from the Dodgers, Hayes from the New York Yankees, Benivevides from Cincinnati and Girardi from the Chicago Cubs. Cole came from Pittsburgh and Clark from San Diego; they join Bichette, who hit .287 for the Brewers last season with five homers and 41 RBIs.

"We have some power in the corners, at first and third and left and right," Gebhard said.

Nied heads the right-handers on the staff, a group that includes Darren Holmes (Milwaukee), Willie Blair (Houston), Andy Ashby (Philadelphia) and Kevin Ritz (Detroit). The Rockies have left-handers Scott Aldred (Detroit) and Butch Henry (Houston).

Nied, 14-9 at Class AAA Richmond last season, was 3-0 in six games with the Braves.

"I don't look at it as being the best player," Nied said. "I'm 23. I'm young. I don't have a high price."

Cole, obtained by Pittsburgh from Cleveland in a July 4 deal, saw himself as the leadoff hitter.

"I'm happy I'll really get a chance to play and go out and do what I think I can do," he said.

He expects to get a lot of work in Mile High Stadium, where the air is thin.

"The ball's going to hang up for you longer than it would somewhere else," he said.

Hayes, Colorado's second pick, had a good season for the Yankees, who obtained him from Philadelphia last Feb. 19. He hit .257 with 18 homers and 66 RBIs and was sorry to leave New York.

"I guess the Yankees protected the players they wanted to protect," Hayes said. "I was kind of surprised."

Girardi, a former starting catcher for the Cubs, said he had completely recovered from a back injury.

"I was really happy to be drafted," he said. "We'll welcome the chance to play everyday again like I did in 1990."

Clark was hitting .192 with four homers and 15 RBIs at the end of June, but wound up at .242 with 12 homers and 58 RBIs. He was looking forward to better numbers in the light air.

Grant twins have double the fun against Boston, Minnesota

By The Associated Press

Horace and Harvey Grant pulled off a twin killing against Boston and Minnesota.

Horace hit 10 of 12 shots and scored 24 points in the Chicago Bulls' 124-103 rout of the Timberwolves in Minneapolis on Tuesday night. His twin brother Harvey matched his career high with 34 in Washington's 101-97 decision over the struggling Celtics.

Horace, whose point total was four short of his career high, also gave a defensive lesson to Wolves rookie Christian Laettner, who scored most of his 17 points after the outcome was decided.

"My main goal was to use my experience," Horace said. "You don't want a rookie to come in and embarrass you. You don't want your teammates to give you the business on the team bus."

"Christian had a tough first half. Probably Horace Grant had something to do with that," Minnesota coach Jimmy Rodgers said.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Utah 108, New Jersey 97; Golden State 125, Miami 119; Charlotte 134, Dallas 111; Indiana 128, Denver 98; Milwaukee 114, Atlanta 106; Houston 116, Sacramento 109; San Antonio 106, Cleveland 95; Seattle 100, New York 90; and Los Angeles Clippers 115, Detroit 106 in overtime.

NBA Roundup

Michael Jordan scored 32 points and Scottie Pippen had 12 assists — all in the first three quarters — as the Bulls rolled to their fifth consecutive victory.

Chuck Person had 26 points and 12 rebounds for the Timberwolves, now 0-7 against Chicago since joining the league in 1989-90.

The game's outcome was never in doubt as Jordan's 3-pointer made it 27-12 late in the first period.

Bullets 101, Celtics 97

Harvey Grant, averaging just 13.5 points, stepped forward in the absence of injured starters Pervis Ellison and Rex Chapman.

"We didn't have Pervis or Rex, so I tried to get to the hole a little bit more and look for my shot more than I had in the past," Grant said. "I'm sure the coaches will ask me why I don't do this every game."

Grant made 12 of 19 shots and 10 of 12 free throws against the visiting Celtics, whose 2-5 start is their worst since going 1-6 in 1978-79, the year before Larry Bird arrived.

"Grant did whatever he wanted out there," Boston coach Chris Ford said. "He drove by us, he posted up, he went to the foul line. We didn't have anyone who could cover him. He dominated the game."

Reggie Lewis and Xavier McDaniel each scored 17 points for the Celtics, who went from an 88-82 deficit to a 93-92 advantage with 2:03 left. But a free throw by Tom Gugliotta tied it and Michael Adams gave the Bullets the lead for good with a fast-break layup.

SuperSonics 100, Knicks 90

At Seattle, Derrick McKey scored eight points in the last six minutes and reserve Eddie Johnson had 28 points, leading the SuperSonics past New York.

Leading 73-72 with 9:30 left in the game, Seattle took charge with a 17-7 run capped by Shawn Kemp's dunk that made it 90-79 with 2:12 left.

Patrick Ewing led the Knicks with 25 points and 12 rebounds. Kemp scored 22 points for the Sonics.

Rockets 116, Kings 109

Hakeem Olajuwon had 34 points, 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots, leading Houston past visiting Sacramento.

Olajuwon scored 15 points in the first quarter, when the Rockets had a 23-0 run, and 12 in the fourth period. But the Rockets blew most of a 20-point lead before Olajuwon scored eight straight points, defusing the Sacramento rally and allowing Houston to survive the Kings' 9-2 run at the end of the game.

Sacramento was paced by center Duane Causwell with 20 points.

Spurs 106, Cavaliers 95

At San Antonio, Dale Ellis scored 20 points and David Robinson had 19 points and 13 rebounds as the Spurs averted their worst start ever by defeating Cleveland.

Larry Nance led the Cavaliers, losers of three straight games, with 22 points.

San Antonio (2-4) used a 13-4 run in the fourth quarter to take a 91-78 lead with 6:30 left, and the Cavaliers got no closer than eight after that.

Pacers 128, Nuggets 98

At Indianapolis, Rik Smits continued to make a career of playing against Denver, scoring 27 points in 23 minutes as Indiana won its fourth straight game.

The Nuggets, led by Chris Jackson with 23 points, have lost five straight games, four of them on the road.

Smits, the Pacers' 7-foot-4 center, has had the top three scoring games of his career against the Nuggets — 34, 32 and 31 points.

Jazz 108, Nets 97

Karl Malone had 29 points and 16 rebounds as Utah improved its road record to 3-0 with a victory at New Jersey, which has lost its last 10 games to the Jazz.

Utah scored the first nine points of the second half, including four by Ty Corbin and three by Malone, to open a 64-49 lead. A 10-4 run later in the period increased the margin to 74-57.

Drazen Petrovic and Kenny Anderson each scored 25 points for the Nets. It was a career high for Anderson.

Hornets 134, Mavericks 111

Larry Johnson scored 21 points, but starting forward Johnny Newman broke his left hand in Charlotte's victory at home against Dallas.

Dell Curry scored 19 points and rookie Alonzo Mourning had 15 points, 14 rebounds and four blocked shots for the Hornets.

Doug Smith paced the Mavericks, who have one victory in five games, with 17 points.

McNeil dumps Graf in Slims tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — Lori McNeil can now drop the "almost" tag. By rushing the net, she rushed Steffi Graf right out of the Virginia Slims Championships.

We're talking first round, and Graf's already gone.

That hasn't happened since Oct. 24, 1985, 100 tournament ago. That was the last time Graf lost before the quarterfinal round.

"I stayed aggressive," McNeil said. "That's the key."

She chipped and charged for 1 hour, 21 minutes, staying with her game plan. And in the end, she had a 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 victory and a berth in the quarterfinals of this season-ending tournament for the first time in five tries.

Next, McNeil will face eighth-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Bulgaria's Katerina Maleeva in Tuesday night's final match.

Also advancing to the quarters Tuesday was Jana Novotna, who knocked off No. 6 Mary Joe Fernandez 7-6 (7-3), 6-2. Novotna next plays top-seeded Monica Seles.

Tonight, the first round is completed when No. 5 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario plays Zina Garrison, No. 7 Jennifer Capriati meets Helena Sukova and No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini battles Amy Frazier.

But it was McNeil who starred at Madison Square Garden on Tuesday night.

Until now, she was remembered for almost upsetting Graf in the 1987 U.S. Open, where she was an easy forehand volley away from taking a 4-3 lead and up a service break in the third set of their semifinal match. Instead, McNeil buried the ball into the net and Graf went on to win the match.

"I'll never forget that one," McNeil said at the time. "I took my eye off the ball."

She did just that Tuesday night, keeping constant pressure on the German right-hander who just three years ago dominated women's tennis.

Graf had come into the Slims Championships on a roll, having won her last four tournaments. In that 20-match win streak, her victims included seven of the 16 players in this elite field, including McNeil.

"The times that I've played her well was when I came in a lot," McNeil said. "That's my strength, and in order to beat a top player, you have to match your strength against their weakness."

Graf started the match as if she was double-parked outside the Garden in midtown Manhattan. By the time the fans had settled in their seats, Graf had a 5-1 lead and McNeil had yet to hold serve.

"I think in the first set, up until 5-1, I was attacking and serving well. I was playing great tennis," Graf said. "Then, suddenly that disappeared."

What appeared was McNeil, chipping and charging, always to that backhand and away from the most powerful forehand in women's tennis.

In the seventh game, McNeil broke Graf for the second time in the match, beginning a four-game stretch that saw her pull even. The two then held serve to go to the tiebreaker, which McNeil dominated, finally closing it out when Graf double-faulted.

At the beginning of the second set, Graf, who won this tournament in 1987 and 1989, appeared to have her game back in sync, breaking McNeil, then holding for a 2-0 lead. But McNeil wasn't daunted. She had trailed in this match before.

"She got tentative and started rushing a little bit," McNeil said of Graf. "Steffi is a great player. She just got a little tentative today."

And McNeil took advantage, winning the third and fourth games to pull even. Although Graf broke right back in the fifth game, McNeil took charge, losing only three points while winning three straight games for a 5-4 lead, then breaking Graf from deuce to close out the upset.

Cowboys face changes

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — There is a given at Valley Ranch. When the Dallas Cowboys lose, coach Jimmy Johnson is going to make some changes.

Such was the case Tuesday when rookie Kevin Smith, the top draft pick, was named starting left cornerback over veteran Issiac Holt.

"Kevin has been practicing well and warrants a start the way he has performed," Johnson said. "Kevin gives us several things. He is a tight coverage man on man-to-man coverage. We like what we've seen."

Holt was beaten several times in Sunday's 27-23 loss to the Rams which dropped Dallas to an 8-2 record.

Smith, an All-America from Texas A&M, played in the second quarter of the Rams game and Johnson feels he has acquired enough experience to be the starter.

"When we drafted Kevin we felt he would be a starter but there was a glitch when he was injured in training camp," Johnson said. "He deserves to be thrown into the starting lineup."

Johnson said he realized that Smith might have some hard times as a starter.

"When we put (right cornerback) Larry Brown into the lineup he struggled at first and so did (defensive tackle) Russell Maryland,"

Johnson said. "Kevin has played some and I believe his experience level will make it less of a problem than we had with Brown and Maryland."

Johnson said he told Holt who will still play on nickel pass-defense packages.

"We feel like Ike will approach it in a positive way," Johnson said. "Jim Jeffcoat hasn't been a starter and has been very productive with his sacks this year coming off the bench. Ike has played well and done some good things. This is not a negative on Ike Holt."

In another move, Johnson placed defensive end Tony Hill on injured reserve with a hamstring problem.

"We hope to get him back at the end of the year," Johnson said.

It was a gloomy mood at Valley Ranch as the Cowboys sought to deal with a loss to the 14-point underdog Rams.

Dallas plays at Phoenix on Sunday. The Cardinals defeated the Rams two weeks ago but the Cowboys are still a nine-point favorite.

"I feel we'll bounce back," Johnson said. "We've got to understand that this (an upset) will happen on occasion to a young team not playing as well as it's capable of."

Johnson warned that the Cardinals "are just as dangerous" as the Rams.

"They beat the Rams two weeks ago and defeated San Francisco three weeks ago," Johnson said.

Bowl picture looks promising

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

The new bowl coalition couldn't have asked for a better start.

With three weeks left in the regular season, the coalition controls the top four teams in The Associated Press poll and has a good chance of producing a national championship game in the Sugar, Cotton or Fiesta bowls.

In the past, fierce competition forced bowl officials to lock up teams long before the season ended, a risky system that often led to disappointing matchups.

But now all the major bowls except the Rose are part of a postseason alliance designed to produce the best possible pairings on Jan. 1. As a result, teams and fans may not know their New Year's destination until Dec. 6, when the AP releases the rankings that will determine the selection order for the big coalition bowls.

If the season ended today, No. 1 Miami would play No. 2 Alabama for the national title in the Sugar Bowl. But both teams have two games left, and a loss by either could open the door for No. 3 Florida State or No. 4 Texas A&M.

Here's a few possibilities:

— Miami and Alabama lose, while Florida State and Texas A&M win their remaining games. Result: No. 1 Florida State vs. No. 2 Texas A&M in the Cotton.

— Alabama loses; Miami, Florida State and Texas A&M win and stay in the same order. Result: No. 1 Miami vs. No. 2 Florida State in the Fiesta (Miami beat Florida State 19-16 earlier this season, but the rematch would be required under coalition rules).

— Alabama and Florida State lose; Miami and Texas A&M win. Result: No. 1 Miami vs. No. 2 Texas A&M in the Cotton.

— Miami loses; everybody else wins. Result: No. 1 Alabama vs. No. 2 Florida State in the Sugar.

If Alabama and Texas A&M finish 1-2, they can't meet because Alabama would be committed to the Sugar as Southeastern Conference champion and Texas A&M would be obligated to the Cotton as Southwest Conference winner.

The only "Tier One" coalition bowl that doesn't have a shot at a national championship game is the Orange, which gives one berth to the Big Eight winner. No Big Eight team is currently in the Top 10.

The four top teams in this week's poll all have tough games remaining.

Miami plays No. 8 Syracuse and San Diego State, led by Heisman Trophy contender Marshall Faulk. Alabama faces bitter rival Auburn and either No. 9 Florida or No. 10 Georgia in the SEC title game. Florida State finishes against Florida, and Texas A&M closes with Texas Christian and traditional rival Texas.

"There's still a lot of football to be played," said Jim Brock, selection chairman for the Cotton Bowl. "We may not have these bowls figured out until Dec. 6."

If there's no change in the rankings between now and then, Brock will have to make a difficult decision. Which team should he pick as A&M's opponent in the Cotton, No. 3 Florida State or No. 7 Notre Dame? Florida State would be higher ranked, but Notre Dame would be a better television draw for a game that usually gets low ratings.

"I'm not sure what we would do," Brock said. "We'd all have to sit down and figure out what's best for the schools, the Cotton Bowl and the coalition."

Based on facts, figures and a little guesswork, here's the AP's projected bowl lineups: Sugar (Miami-Alabama); Cotton (Texas A&M-Florida State); Orange (Nebraska-Notre Dame); Rose (Washington-Michigan); Fiesta (Colorado-Syracuse); Blockbuster (Penn State-Stanford); Gator (North Carolina State-Georgia); Citrus (Ohio State-Florida); Hall of Fame (Boston College-Tennessee); Liberty (Air Force-Mississippi); Freedom (Southern Cal-Wisconsin); Hancock (Arizona-Texas); Independence (Wake Forest-Oregon); Aloha (Hawaii-Kansas); Peach (Mississippi State-North Carolina); Holiday (San Diego State-Michigan State); Copper (BYU-Iowa); and Silver (Bowling Green-San Jose State).

Bowe offered millions to fight Lewis

LONDON (AP) — World heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe has been offered $12 million to defend his title against Britain's Lennox Lewis in England next April.

Frank Maloney, Lewis' manager, said he sent the offer by fax Tuesday to Bowe's manager, Rock Newman.

"If he is a world champion then he should be prepared to defend against the No. 1 contender," Maloney said. "We feel we must keep up the pressure on Bowe."

Maloney said the fight could be held at one of two soccer stadiums — Highbury in London or Old Trafford in Manchester. He predicted the bout would draw 40,000 fans and gate receipts of $6 million, plus millions more in television fees.

Maloney conceded that Bowe will probably turn down the offer.

Supporters of Pakistan's former Prime Minister and leader of the opposition Benazir Bhutto, in scarf at left, try to stop police from arresting her Wednesday in Islamabad.

Pakistan's Bhutto arrested, police charge anti-government crowd

By ZAHID HUSSAIN
Associated Press Writer

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — Police arrested former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto today after she and supporters broke through police barricades to lead a banned anti-government protest.

An Associated Press reporter watched as about 200 police surrounded Ms. Bhutto and took her into custody along with other political leaders who support her bid to oust the government of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif. She was driven to an unknown destination, escorted by police vans.

"My arrest won't make any difference. The struggle will continue," she told a crowd of 30,000 to 40,000 supporters, who endured steady bursts of tear gas to listen to her brief address.

She urged her supporters to storm the Parliament in Islamabad and throw the government out. After her arrest, the angry crowd battled thousands of riot police in Rawalpindi's dark, narrow streets.

Ms. Bhutto and many supporters were injured earlier when baton-wielding police attacked the crowd as it broke through barricades around her home in nearby Islamabad. Ms. Bhutto, who wore a bullet-proof vest, was hit several times but appeared unhurt.

Bhutto supporters and police clashed in at least two other cities as well, and police arrested the former prime minister's mother, Nusrat, in the eastern city of Lahore while she was traveling to Islamabad to join the march.

Ms. Bhutto, an articulate politician known for her ability to attract crowds, was arrested as she proceeded with her plans for a 10-mile march from Rawalpindi to the federal capital, Islamabad. Public protests are banned.

She is demanding the dismissal of Sharif's conservative Islamic government, charging it is corrupt, repressive and came to power through a rigged election in October 1990.

Ms. Bhutto, who was dismissed from power in August 1990 for alleged corruption, nepotism and abuse of power, had called on Pakistanis to join her march and help remove Sharif, who commands a solid majority in Parliament.

The U.S., British and other Western embassies had urged Ms. Bhutto to cancel the march, saying it was irresponsible and could lead to unnecessary bloodshed.

Sharif charged that Ms. Bhutto was trying to incite rebellion against his democratically elected government. He ordered her arrest and took unprecedented security measures, deploying the army around Parliament and at key intersections around Islamabad.

Along the planned route to Islamabad were thousands of government troops, who set up barricades every 100 yards. Armored vehicles moved slowly, firing tear gas canisters every 10 yards to prevent people from gathering.

At the Rawalpindi park where Ms. Bhutto's supporters planned to start the march, riot police used tear gas and batons to disperse about 500 rock-throwing students.

At Ms. Bhutto's home in Islamabad, hundreds of police wearing flak jackets, helmets and carrying huge shields watched her calmly step through the barrels and barbed wire erected outside before police charged the crowd.

"Pakistan cannot remain a country under siege," Ms. Bhutto said as she emerged from her house.

"We have proved that this government does not have the people's mandate," she said. Supporters shouted, "Long Live Bhutto."

Police smashed the windshield of Ms. Bhutto's vehicle before she sped to the park in Rawalpindi. She was arrested at the park.

In Lahore, a government stronghold, witnesses said some 200 of Ms. Bhutto's supporters threw rocks at riot police, who fired back with tear gas. Demonstrators set one policeman on fire, critically injuring him, they said.

Marchers also clashed with security forces in the northern city of Peshawar, where one supporter was hit by a tear gas canister and critically injured. Minor clashes were reported in other major cities.

On Tuesday, troops sealed the headquarters of Ms. Bhutto's left-leaning party and arrested at least 15,000 party workers, Ms. Bhutto said. The government put the number at 1,285.

Ms. Bhutto was dismissed from power by President Ghulam Ishaq Khan in August 1990, accused of corruption, nepotism and abuse of power.

Ishaq Khan established one-judge tribunals to try her administration on charges of corruption and mismanagement. If convicted on any count, Ms. Bhutto could be banned from politics for seven years.

Ms. Bhutto insists she has done nothing wrong.

Lawmaker proposes concealed weapon measure

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker says his proposal to allow Texans to carry concealed handguns would put law-abiding citizens "on a level playing field with the criminal."

But some law enforcement officials and Gov. Ann Richards' office were cool to the idea. And a handgun control group said Carter's measure was "hogwash."

Rep. Bill Carter, R-Richland Hills, filed the bill Tuesday for next year's regular legislative session.

Although previous attempts to legalize hidden weapons have failed in the Legislature, Carter was confident his would pass because of growing concern about crime. "We know criminals prey on the weak," he said.

But Ron DeLord, president of the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, questioned the need for Texans to carry hidden guns when they already can have firearms at home, work, and in their vehicle without a permit.

DeLord said CLEAT will survey 100 police and sheriff departments to see whether the 12,500 member organization wants to support the legislation.

"To just tell the populace in general you can carry a gun because you want to, to me is an admission of anarchy, that we are unable to protect you anymore, so arm yourselves," DeLord said.

Richards press secretary Bill Cryer said, "If you have 10 people carrying handguns, you have 10 times the chance of those guns being used either accidentally or otherwise. That's just not a good deal."

Carter, chairman of the House Public Safety Committee, said he drew up the legislation after people testified that they wanted to be able to legally carry a concealed gun.

One of those who testified was Suzanne Gratia of Copperas Cove, whose parents were among the 23 people killed by George Hennard during the Oct. 16, 1991 mass shooting in the Luby's cafeteria in Killeen.

Ms. Gratia, who was eating lunch with her parents, said she would have had a chance at stopping Hennard had she had her gun in her purse.

Under Carter's proposal, a person who is at least 21 and passed a criminal and personal background check by the Texas Department of Public Safety could get a license to carry a concealed handgun for $150.

People convicted of a felony or Class A or B misdemeanor in the last 5 years could not get a license, nor could anyone "chemically dependent or of unsound mind." In addition, license applicants would be required to take at least 15 hours of training.

Carter said a similar law significantly reduced the murder rate in Oregon. Murders dropped from 128 to 110 during the year that law took effect in Oregon, but then increased to 129 in 1991, according to statistics.

And before the law took effect in 1990, Oregon allowed concealed handguns, but sheriffs had broad discretion in issuing permits.

Carter also said the homicide rate dropped 6 percent in Florida after passage of a concealed gun law. But an official with Handgun Control Inc. said that Florida's overall violent crime rate, which includes murder, rape, robbery and assault, has increased 21 percent.

U.S. rescues Montagnard rebels years after abandoning them

By SHEILA McNULTY
Associated Press Writer

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The U.S. government flew the first of nearly 400 Vietnamese insurgents to new homes in the United States today, a decade and a half after abandoning them as Communist forces seized South Vietnam.

Forty-three Montagnard rebels, women and children — some clutching mini American flags — stoically climbed aboard the planes to begin the journey to North Carolina.

They were recently discovered after years of living in the isolated, dense forests of northeastern Cambodia, which borders Vietnam.

Col. Y. Hinnie, one of their leaders, said that when the Americans fled Vietnam in 1973 they pledged to return for him and his compatriots.

"For many years America forgot me," Hinnie, who fought with U.S. Special Forces in the Vietnam War, said in halting English as he approached the plane. "I am very sorry it took too many years."

The U.S. envoy to Cambodia, Charles Twining, stood silent on the Phnom Penh runway as the plane prepared for takeoff.

The U.S. government is to fly the rest of the Montagnards to North Carolina within the next two weeks, where they will resettle in cities like Charlotte and Greensboro with the help of compatriots who went before them.

"This is probably one of the final pages of the Vietnam War," said Sergio Vieira de Mello, the head of the U.N. refugee repatriation effort in Cambodia. "It's a major page that we're turning in their lives."

The insurgents are members of the United Front for the Liberation of Oppressed Races, usually known by its French acronym FULRO.

FULRO was formed by ethnic minority mountain people in Vietnam in 1964 to fight for the right to continue living on their ancestral lands, maintaining traditional lifestyles. They later became embroiled in the U.S. battle against Communist forces during the 1960s and 1970s.

After seizing all of Vietnam in 1975, the Communists launched offensives against the insurgents in the Central Highlands, forcing many to flee into Cambodia.

Some fled Cambodia years ago and were resettled in North Carolina in 1986, but this group of 398 that the United States is now resettling continued to struggle on in the high plateaus of Cambodia's Mondulkiri province.

The outside world had all but forgotten them; they had not been heard of for almost two decades.

In June, the Montagnards, most of them suffering from malaria or other diseases, contacted U.N. peacekeepers and asked to be resettled in the United States.

The request was at first troubling for the peacekeepers, who were already having difficulties trying to guide Cambodia out of its own civil war.

But once the group agreed to turn over their 194 aged weapons and 2,567 rounds of ammunition, the U.S. government stepped in.

"There was a great, deep sense of responsibility by the United States" and it moved more swiftly than anyone could have imagined, said a U.N. official who spoke on condition he not be named.

The United States is by far the largest resettler of Indochinese refugees in the world.

Report: Detroit beating victim had substances in his system

DETROIT (AP) — A man beaten to death, allegedly by police swinging flashlights, had alcohol and traces of cocaine in his system when he was killed, a newspaper reported today.

Malice Green had an 0.03 percent level of alcohol in his blood when he was killed, according to an official who reviewed autopsy reports, the Detroit Free Press said. The newspaper did not name the official.

"It's still no excuse," said Green's sister, Sherry. "I wouldn't give a damn if he had a gallon of liquor in his system, there's no excuse."

The level is less than a third of the 0.1 percent blood-alcohol level that constitutes drunkenness under Michigan law. The exact level of cocaine in his system was not reported, the newspaper said.

Calls to the home of Wayne County Medical Examiner Bader Cassin weren't returned Tuesday night.

Green, 35, died of head injuries after being bludgeoned Nov. 5 on a street near a suspected drug house.

Officers Larry Nevers and Walter Budzyn were charged Monday with second-degree murder. Sgt. Freddie Douglas was charged with involuntary manslaughter and willful neglect of duty. Officer Robert Lessnau was charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

"The results of the toxicology report will not make a difference in the prosecution," said Richard Padzielski, chief of operations for the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office.

Defense attorneys for the officers disagreed.

"If there was cocaine in Mr. Green's system — and depending on what level and in what mixture with alcohol — it clearly casts new light on his behavior on the night in question," said John Goldpaugh, who represented Nevers, Budzyn and Lessnau at their arraignment.

The four officers are free on bond pending a Dec. 14 preliminary hearing.

If convicted, Nevers and Budzyn would face up to life in prison. Douglas would face up to 15 years and Lessnau would face up to 10 years.
