those two is very different now.

Former Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton is president, and one of the first things he did was challenge Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn's pre-eminent role in shaping military policy.

For years, the two men worked hand in hand to redefine their party. Both Clinton and Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, were hawkish on defense. Both were strongly committed to a for firing two gay staff aides who Georgia primary en route to the national service program. Clinton had sensitive jobs.

Devoll was cited for failure to yield right of way at an open intersection. Lawrence and his wife, Aldine Lawrence, 71, were transported to Coronado Hospital by American Medical Transport. A medical report was unavailable at press time.

Woman dies after wreck

An 84-year-old Pampa woman died Sunday in Amarillo from injuries she sustained in a two-vehicle accident last week in Pampa.

Lora Lou Barber, 2310 Aspen, had been in a critical care unit in St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

The Wednesday accident occurred when the 1987 Cadillac she was driving collided with a 1986 Ford driven by Darrel Eugene Adkins, 41, 1818 Chestnut, at the intersection of North Chestnut and East 22nd streets. Adkins failed to yield the right of way at the open intersection, according to Pampa Police.

Adkins was traveling north in the 2100 block of Chestnut and Barber was traveling west in the 600 block of East

Pampa Fire Department used Jaws-of-Life to remove a door on Barber's vehicle so that paramedics could rescue her. Barber was taken to Coronado Hospital by American Medical Transport and later transported in critical condition to St. Anthony's Hospital.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'Deficit' numbers don't tell the story

If Bill Clinton wants "to grow the economy," as he says, priority No. 1 should be to avoid the "managed trade" some of his advisers urge on us. He should ignore the numbers for the so-called "deficit" in merchandise trade, which the Commerce Department reported recently had risen by 5.1 percent in November, to $7.59 billion.

The trade "deficit," in fact, is essentially meaningless. For one thing, it excludes services. Include services, and the "deficit" becomes a "surplus."

The "deficit" numbers also always include petroleum imports. For November, petroleum imports were $4.47 billion, down a bit from the $4.83 billion in October. Now, if the petroleum numbers were subtracted, the overall trade "deficit" would be cut in half, to less than $3 billion. And if we allowed Alaskan oil to be exported - something now banned by the government - the Alaskan oil exports further would erode the trade "deficit."

Bill Clinton inherits a troubled but basically sound economy. Not too long ago the Labor Department reported that inflation rose 2.9 percent in 1992, the second best performance since the mid-1960s. And the Federal Reserve Board reported that factory use rose to 79.3 percent in December, up from 78.7 percent a year ago; and industrial production jumped 2.9 percent in 1992, up from a dismal increase of just 0.2 percent in 1991.

And the United States continues to lead the world in most critical high-tech areas. Cellular telephones are just one advance, with Motorola a key player.

Recently the Federal Communications Commission, reported The New York Times, "assigned a small block of radio frequencies for new satellite paging services that would let people send and receive brief messages anywhere on the globe." We have the lead in this area and should expand across the globe. Soon you'll be able to use an American-made pocket phone to link up to an American-made satellite, to talk with anyone with a compatible phone across the world. Yankee ingenuity isn't dead.

According to The Economist, America is conquering Japan with personal computers. In addition, "Just as ominous for Japanese computer firms, American software companies — especially Microsoft and Novell, but also IBM and tiny Santa Cruz Operation - have tightened their grip on the worldwide computer business by making users more dependent on their programs.'

"U.S. firms," reports Forbes, "almost own the Japanese mass market for software." A protectionist trade war would block out these American sales just as they're achieving dominance.

Bill Clinton should ignore the bogus trade "deficit" numbers. For information on trade, he should visit some firms going gangbusters exporting American know-how and quality.

Mrs. Baird and the immigration laws

The apparently unabatable furor over Zoe Baird expresses, surely, more than the modest history her little (little?) dereliction merits. There was a quite general public uproar, worth analyzing in terms of the general problem of finding a correct immigration policy.

To be rid first of the policy inessentials:

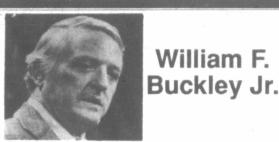

It is true that Mrs. Baird's salary of slightly over a half-million dollars, combined with the salary of her husband, a professor of law, put her in a bracket so high that, as Ralph Nader put it, "she could have hired Mary Poppins as her baby sitter." If Mrs. Baird had been struggling on a low salary to support a large family, probably the reaction would have been different.

 The tendency was to overlook the ambient hypocrisies, foremost among them, as one observer pointed out, the legislator or professional who is asked by the baby sitter to be paid only in cash. One does not need legal advice to guess what are the designs of people who desire to be paid in cash.

- Mrs. Baird had a difficult time from the beginning to explain her failure to pay the Social Security taxes. Plainly the reason for not doing so was the fear that said taxes would be smoking gun pointing to the Peruvian illegals.

But the larger question of immigration policy is not sharply enough addressed. The journalist Peter Brimelow fired a very large shot in National Review last spring raising the alarm about unregulated immigration, and in the current issue critics from the left and from the right weigh in.

There is the libertarian position. It holds, pure and simple, that anybody who wants to come in ought to be permitted to do so, that our experience of thought qualifies as what Henry Hazlitt once believe that freedom of immigration is a good thing, and therefore the more of it the better.

Mr. Brimelow defends his thesis with some pretty persuasive arguments. He reminds us, for instance, that the "unimpeachably free-market Gary Becker," on the very day that he received his Nobel Prize for economics, had written for The Wall Street Journal a piece in which he said that contemporary America's massive transfer payments made open immigration impractical. If we redistribution must come from those whose income is above that level.

It is a second's work to acknowledge that since there is only a finite amount of wealth above the poverty level, there cannot be an infinite demand for it below the poverty level. Since nobody knows how of this dissipation is the relative failure of Puerto that the number that did come would be ingested.

out of the 2,000-mile border we have with Mexico. He goes on to point out that the emphasis we put on education is gainsaid by a policy that puts no emphasis on education, and that the problem is irrespective of race. "In 1986, for example, 36 percent of male immigrants had less than 12 years' education," in contrast to native-born Americans, only 15 percent of whom have less than 12 years' education. "Just as economic growth is caused by ideas, not raw labor, so U.S. pre-eminence in the world is based on the quality, not the quantity, of its called the sin of "extreme apriorism." I.e., you population. Unskilled immigration can't help much. And, by causing economic distortion and social stress, it may actually hurt."

Mr. Brimelow points out that in the past, U.S. policy has given us breathing spells between the great inflows of immigrants. These permit the ingestion that has traditionally gone into the gradual transformation of immigrants into Americans.

And of course today there is the further problem of the stubborn insistence on ethnic attachments. It is one thing to celebrate Columbus Day or St. are simultaneously committed to helping everyone Patrick's Day, something else to think of oneself as whose income is below the poverty level, then the primarily an Italian-American or an Irish-American. And added to it all is the distinction stressed by Professor Thomas Sowell, namely that the sinkor-swim environment of the historic immigrant generated pressures for acculturation that have slowly dissipated. The best evidence of the result many immigrants would come to America if the Ricans — who are U.S. citizens entitled to all the doors were held wide open, we cannot safely predict economic and social amenities of the Great Society - to assimilate, contrasted to the upward-bound Mr. Brimelow then goes on to confront the arguillegals from other parts of Hispanic America.

The attorney general will need to worry about transform into productive citizens, and that their trol. "Because of terrain, illegal crossings can only these matters. He/she might want to consult Mrs.

For weeks, he had had to suffer while the emperors of the Holy NBC Empire kept him twisting in the ind about David Letterman as a possible replacement — not that this should have been a major event on the Richter news scale. After all, it was competing with the incoming Clinton presidency, Saddam Hussein's death wish, and Charles' and Di's penchant for indiscreet telephone assigna-

But the media faked out the public. It quickly transfigured the double-L (Leno-Letterman) tauromachy into globe-shaking event. lion a year. Fortunately, NBC seems to have enough brain power to know that Letterman isn't worth anything remotely approaching that stratospheric figure. But NBC was also nervous and didn't relish the idea of a budget-draining nighttime head-to-head dog-fight, hence, the exploratory notion of replacing Leno with Letterman.

During this silly struggle, you kept wanting to pull NBC's coattail and demand, "Be real."

Well, the tumult and the shouting have died, the captains and the kings have departed, Leno is staying with NBC, and who really cares — other than Letterman's most devoted viewers - whether he Jay Leno, David Letterman, John McLaughlin, jumps to CBS, PBS, ABC, BCC or TTC (the Tasmanian Television Corporation).

Yet, many of my colleagues are Letterman fans, preferring him, as well as Arsenio Hall, over Leno. That they are still my friends attests to my broadmindedness. Besides, de gustabus non est disputan-

Letterman's success still baffles me, because I think he is one of television's most rigidly limited comics. I watched him when he started his "Late Night With David Letterman" gig. After a few weeks, I was appalled by four things: (1) his mediocrity as an interviewer (only Larry King is as limited); (2) his adolescent capacity to screw up the simplest of jokes; (3) his inexplicable paucity of black guests; and (4) that I had wasted several good hours watching him.

Granted, Letterman has made one valuable contribution to our lore of humor: his lists of "10 read sons why." And in the very-late-night time slot he has occupied, superiority is not a requisite.

As for Leno, he's the thinking person's comic! Funny, literate and knowledgeable. Johnny Carson, of course, was the sine qua non of talk-show hosts? If Ralph Waldo Emerson was right — that, "an institution is the lengthened shadow of one man" then TV talk-show hosts are the lengthened shadow of Johnny Carson. All of them together - Bob Costas, Phil Dono ahue, Whoopi Goldberg, Arsenio Hall, Larry King, Sally Jesse Raphael, Geraldo Rivera, Joan Rivers, Charlie Rose, Montel Williams and Oprah Winfrey are still playing in the sand box that Carson built for them. I'm relieved that NBC came to its good senses and is sticking with Leno. And now, take David Letterman - please!

NEW YORK (AP) — Picture this: a Hasidic Jewish scholar rapping with a black Baptist minister - to the tune of "Hava Nagila!"

"Hava Nagila! Yo! Oy vey!" bearded David Lazerson sings, his skullcap bobbing to the beat as they rehearse in his living room.

"Oy? Yo! Hit it!" the Rev. Paul Chandler snaps back as they hip hop cross-armed on a Persian rug.

Two 16-year-old break dancers, one Jewish and one black, take center stage. They somersault over each other, their legs jackknifing on the

'Tell me a story about the blacks and the Jews, the Crown Heights blues," sing the rappers.

There's a method in this melange. Lazerson's troupe of three blacks and three Jews, known as Dr. Laz and the Cure, sing and dance to ease racial tension in their Crown Heights neighborhood. They spell out the "Cure" in their lyrics:

"C — Communication across the nation, let's all sit down and have a conversation, U — Understand it, I listen to you, you listen to me, we can work things out in harmony, R - Respect, respect each other's feelings, respect to your art, respect each other's cultures and we'll all go far, E — Education, a point of elevation, it even goes on after graduation. If any place needed a cure, it would be Crown Heights.

The Brooklyn neighborhood erupted in August 1991 after a 7year-old black boy was accidentally killed by a car driven by a Jewish man. The vehicle was in a motorcade carrying Rabbi Menachem Schneerson, spiritual leader of the Lubavitcher sect of ultrareligious Hasidim.

Within hours, a young Jewish scholar was fatally stabbed in reprisal as rioters ran through the Brooklyn neighborhood shared by 20,000 mostly orthodox Jews and 180,000 mostly poor Caribbean

Two months ago, Hasidim protested when a jury acquitted a black teen-ager who had been accused in the fatal stabbing. More recently, a black man was beaten by a group of Hasidim who claimed he was a bur-

To stem the original conflagration, Lazerson and Chandler were tapped by city officials to organize "Dialogues" so people could share their racial concerns — and pray together. The scholar and the minister stayed together to build understanding.

The black kids wanted to know why we wear the clothes we do, why our married women wear wigs, says Lazerson, 42. "They asked if we were all rich, all successful. Our guys asked about dreadlocks, Rastafarians and reggae. The black guys learned some of us were surviving on public assistance and that some of us were not very good students. Our guys learned that some of them studied more than almost any of

"We spoke to a mountain of tradition," says Chandler, 48, "the tradition that we can't be together, we can't do things together. We can."

Project CURE was designed to spotlight the things blacks and Jews can do together — organize interra-cial basketball games, plant "peace"

Girls killed, mother shot

EUSTIS, Fla. (AP) — A pair of teen-agers abducted a woman and her two young daughters from a shopping center parking lot, then killed the girls before raping and shooting the mother, police said.

Richard Henyard, 18, and a 14year-old boy whose name was withheld because of his age were charged Sunday with murder in the deaths of the 7-year-old and 3-yearold sisters, police said.

The teen-agers approached the children and their 35-year-old mother at gunpoint Saturday night apparently picking them at random - and forced them into the mother's car, police said.

They drove to a wooded area and allegedly began shooting.

"We believe the two children were killed instantly at the scene," said police spokesman Lt. Carmine Aurigemma.

The mother told police she then was shot twice in the head and raped. After the attackers drove off, the woman said she walked nearly a mile to a home for help.

Investigators discovered the girls' bodies early Sunday.

The mother, a widow, was in serious but stable condition late Sunday at Orlando Regional Medical Center. She was shopping with her children for food to take to a Sunday church service when the teens approached Community help and the woman's description of her attackers led to the suspects, Aurigemma said. He released few other details.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Christmas correspondence makes day merry and bright

DEAR ABBY: What a treat you gave our Marines here at Camp Kinser on the island of Okinawa! We placed the Operation Dear Abby mail under the tree on Christmas Eve, and it was the most popular part of the room. The Marines even abandoned the free snack table to get to those letters!

It was so sweet to see them scanning the envelopes looking for a letter from their home state. Others stood in little groups reading parts of letters aloud to their buddies; some passed snapshots around.

Our USO was open from Christmas Eve morning until the following Sunday night - 83 hours straight — to give the lonely troops somewhere to be. We served a festive Christmas Eve dinner, and a great Christmas morning breakfast with tables of snacks in between. Movies were shown, games and tournaments for prizes were held, but the highlight of Christmas was all those Dear Abby letters from your wonderful readers.

When I get close to the Marines who are young, away from home for the first time, and have no one, it hurts my heart. One fellow told me he had joined the Marine Corps because he had no job, no money, nothing to eat and nowhere to sleep Here was this tough-looking, handsome Marine - the kindest and gentlest of men.

Dear Abby, please let your readers know what a wonderful gift they gave those young men who are serving on this faraway island in the East China Sea

BRENDA CARNES, DIRECTOR, KINSER USO

DEAR BRENDA: You just did - and very well. Thank you!

DEAR ABBY: I know this letter is too late for the holiday season, but I hope the guilty parties will see any gift-giving occasion.

Just before Christmas, I had three women ask me: "What are you getting for Christmas?" One was my boss's wife and the other two were co-workers.

Abby, how am I supposed to know what I'm getting? To each I replied, "Well, it wouldn't be a surprise if I knew, would it?"

Abby, I find these questions to be nosy and in poor taste. How dare people ask such personal questions? Even if I knew, I wouldn't tell them.

Please print this letter for people who don't realize how rude this PREFERS PRIVACY

DEAR PREFERS: Good letter! Another equally nosy question: "What did you get for Christmas?"

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the one-finger salute: My father, Frank Simancik, artist, philosopher and notoriously unorthodox driver, has received many of these salutes. Preferring not to take these gestures as an insult, Dad simply states that he has to be the best driver around because everywhere he goes, people indicate that he's "No. 1.

With such an outlook on life, it's no wonder that, at 81, Dad is healthy, active, sharp as a tack and well-loved.

DEAR READERS: Here's a quote I love but whose author I can't identify. Can anybody

'We Can Do It' includes disabled children in photos By SALLY WILLIAMS COOK For AP Special Features

In "We Can Do It!" vibrant color photographs show children at the beach, racing in and out of water sprinklers, working at computers and cooking. These children, however, have disabilities such as spina bifida, Down syndrome, cerebal palsey and blindness.

The photographs and simple text by Laura Dwight are designed to appeal to all children (Checkerboard Press). But the 40-page picture book has a special meaning for a child with a disability, said Terry Savoy, Checkerboard's president. Savoy's 13-year-old son, Patrick, has Down syndrome.

"A child with a disability can sit down and look at this book and he doesn't feel abnormal," Savoy said. "If Patrick had had a book like this when he was little, he would have looked at it all the time.'

Debra Shine, Checkerboard's editor-in-chief, first came to Savoy a few years ago with the idea of including a child with Down syndrome in a series of photo board books for babies.

Savoy said he was very enthusiastic about the idea.

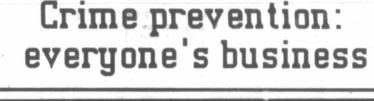

"Patrick is the driving force in terms of my sensitivity toward wanting to include special kids," Savoy said. "Most publishers don't want to do anything that is controversial. But with these books, I can make money and I can feel good,

In addition to the baby board books and Dwight's "We Can Do It" picture book, Savoy has published three other books that focus on children with disabilities:

"Special Friends at the Park" by Rochelle Bunnett; "Animal Signs;" and "Word Signs."

"That was a tough time," Aikman said. "Players would be there one week and gone the next."

Aikman was the staple, the blue chip quarterback with impeccable credentials. After transferring from Oklahoma, he played two seasons at UCLA, completing 64.8 percent of his passes for 5,298 yards and 41 touchdowns and finished his college career as the third rated quarterback in NCAA history. Of Bills and wings

In one corner were movie posters— The Untouchables, Stand By Me and The Godfather. Above the television, next to the closet, was a picture of dogs playing poker (fine art at its best). And next to the window, above my roommate's bed, were clippings from the Buffalo News, a Bills hat, pennant, two posters and an action figure of Jim Kelly taped to the wall.

I lived with a Bills fan and when they beat Denver to advance to last year's Super Bowl, I was living a nightmare. More clippings went up and for two weeks, there were no days, no nights, no time in and of itself. There was just a countdown to the Super Bowl.

I rooted against the Bills last year. My roommate made me do it. In 1991, I rooted against both teams. I prayed for a tie, because of my roommate and because I hate the New York Giants.

My roommate was a Bills fan. He lived in Buffalo, the poor sap, and most people that live in Buffalo brag about two things-buffalo wings and Buffalo Bills.

But he's still in Boston and I'm in Texas now. I was free at last to root for whichever team I liked best... and I rooted for the Buffalo Bills. I did it because they're an AFC team and I grew up watching the Kansas City Chiefs. I also did it for my roommate. But mainly, I rooted for the Bills because I didn't want to hear people label them "Super Losers."

Well before the final gun sounded, Super Bowl XXVII was over. I think the fat lady was an understudy for Garth Brooks and I swear I heard her warming up when Ken Norton landed on Jim Kelly's already-damaged knee.

The Cowboys are a better team than the Bills. That much is certain. They'll most likely be back to the big dance with the young talent they have. The Bills may not.

Buffalo has a long road in front of them and I'm not sure they can recover. I hate thinking that, because I hate thinking of what the Bills have to recover from. Over 1200 professional football players were watching last night's game, wishing they were playing; 26 head coaches watched it, wishing they were coaching.

So far, I haven't heard any of those players, coaches, general managers or owners use the term "Super Loser." That's because they all wish their team was as successful as the Buffalo Bills.

On the post, post-game on ESPN last night, they explained it well. When you win the Super Bowl, you're viewed as the best, but when you lose, you're not viewed as second best; you're viewed as the worst.

So the labels will start coming now. One of the finest-teams in football will be termed losers. "Super Losers" after winning the AFC three years in a row; "Super Losers" that have won over 35 games in the last three seasons. I only wish the Chiefs were that Last night's game made me a Buffalo Bills fan. If they would've won, I probably would've just been happy for my roommate. Instead I'll be rooting for them next year (as long as they're not going up against the Chiefs). I'll be doing it for the AFC and for my roommate, but mainly because I want to hear what people call them when they make the Super Bowl four years in a row.

$100 to $150 an acre, but the title searches, appraisals and survey work are expected to cost $17.4 million, according to estimates prepared by the government agencies. "It's going to be quite a task," said

Terry Walters, the Bureau of Indian Affairs superintendent on North Dakota's Fort Berthold Reservation.

Sen. Kent Conrad, who helped write the land settlement into law, said the cost estimate is outrageous, and he asked Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt last week to investigate the matter.

"It's like they're sitting around a room trying to make this as difficult $7.2 million, according to the govas it can be made. ... These numbers are ridiculous," said Conrad, D-N.D. Conrad, a former state tax commissioner, said the cost estimate is at least triple what it should be. Most of the land that was seized from the Indians - rich bottom- officials say.

> Government officials say the task of transferring the land is enormous. They say they will have to hire private companies to do much of the work because of the short time period Congress allowed.

The Army Corps of Engineers must first mark the boundaries of the land, which zigzags for 1,200 to 1,300 miles along the Missouri River, and then ensure that there are no hazardous waste sites on the property. A marker must be placed every 500 feet down the river, according to the law.

The survey work alone could cost ernment estimate.

It is then the Interior Department's job to find the owners. Because of the way Indian land was originally distributed, there could be as many as 60,000 heirs involved,
