A spokesman for Coronado Hospital said, "We have had an increase in the number of admissions which is common for this time of the year. It has been primarily pneumonia and various types of flu.

Nurses from local doctors' offices reported being double booked with patients.

Others around town who have gotten sick have continued with their daily routines of life, work and family without missing a beat.

Dianna Kile of Pampa recently started a new job and is trying to get over a cold she claims to have caught, partly from her co-workers.

"I hadn't had a cold in the last four years until I came here," she said. "The cough almost killed me. I'd go home and crash."

Kile said she went to the doctor and with a prescription seems to have gotten over the viral flu. She reports to be doing much better

Adults are not the only ones affected by the cold bug. It seems to have snatched the energy and the appetite from the younger generation as well. A Pampa Middle School atten-

"I like ... her objective of bringing Texas up, frankly, into the 21st century in things, for example, like teacher pay," Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said Wednesday. "My concern is the method of financing.

Richards doesn't call for new taxes in the budget plan she outlined Wednesday for the Legislature.

But she said it identifies more than $3 billion in "efficiency savings" and counts on at least $750 million in spending cuts that will be recommended in an upcoming state comptroller's audit.

Her plan includes a 5 percent pay raise for teachers, immunizations for all school children and a guarantee of access to basic health insurance. She said the school finance crisis, with its threatened school shutdown only about four months away, is the Legislature's top priority.

Bullock said his concern about financing also applies to a balancedbudget proposal by the Legislative Budget Board staff. The lieutenant tance of meeting the court deadline.

first nine days that I've been here." To be sure, Smith admits to feeling a bit overwhelmed by the new faces he is encountering, saying that it will take him a while to learn people's names. When he arrived in town and began his duties as chief deputy on Jan. 18, he said, "I virtually knew nobody.'

Smith said he has traveled around Gray County and is still acclimating himself to the area. He replaces Terry Cox as chief deputy for the Gray County Sheriff's Office. The monthly salary for Smith is $2,058.

The chief deputy said he is living in an apartment in Pampa and expects his wife, Sharmin, a firstgrade teacher at Glen Rose Independent School District, and their three children to move here this summer.

The new Gray County sheriff, Randy Stubblefield, has eased Smith's transition into the job, the chief deputy suggested. "So far I'm very pleased with him," Smith noted. "I'm impressed with his knowledge of law enforcement and ability to act in his capacity as sheriff."

Gay official reportedly picked for federal housing position

By KIM I. MILLS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) President Clinton plans to name San Francisco Supervisor Roberta Achtenberg, a lesbian, as assistant secretary for fair housing and equal opportunity, government sources say.

Achtenberg would be the highest ranking openly gay official in the history of the executive branch of the federal government if confirmed to the post in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

One White House source, however, cautioned that the announcement is not near and that Clinton could still change his mind. But the source, speaking on condition of anonymity, did say Achtenberg "is slated for that post, yes."

And a government official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that "she is the intended Achtenberg was elected in 1990 to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, which functions as the city council. She has championed San Francisco's local law recognizing the unions of homosexuals and unmarried heterosexual couples.

This month, she introduced a bill to make San Francisco's public.

Achtenberg may face trouble, though, from housing public-interest groups. Representatives of several of these groups met last week with Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros and voiced concern about what they said was Achtenberg's lack of experience in fair housing law, according to The Washington Blade, a gay weekly.

Achtenberg was an early Clinton backer and served on the 1992 Democratic Platform Committee.

If confirmed, Achtenberg would oversee HUD's fair housing and equal opportunity programs, be responsible for developing affirmative-action programs for the department and work to help increase job opportunities for Elsewhere, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said Wednesday he will reinstate a policy barring discrimination against gay employees in his department's western region. The four-year-old ban was overturned a day before Clinton took the oath of office.

In revoking the ban, outgoing Assistant Secretary John E. Schrote accused the park service of seeking to influence agencies that perform volunteer work, such as the Boy Scouts, to follow the non-discrimination policy. A park service spokesman, Doug Morrow, denied that on Wednesday.

The North Atlantic, Mid-Atlantic and National Capital regions of the park service have similar non-discrimination policies that were not revoked.

Babbitt, at his first news conference, said he did not know all the details of the case but believed the She would have to be approved by department should "restore the poli-

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Mystery, perhaps; renewal, not quite

As far as inaugural speeches go, William Jefferson Clinton's, lasting a merciful 14 minutes on a crisp day in Washington's winter, seemed more than anything else an exercise in temporizing. The new president, preparing the oratory without the aid of speechwriters spoke of Lincoln's Second Inaugural as a model. Perhaps deliberately, his speech did not meet that measure. And there were selfconscious echoes of John F. Kennedy, but the "bear any burden, pay any price" ambitions were replaced by a mere sentimental sharing of hope with the world's aspiring democrats. Maybe the United States will send its forces around the world, but not before exhausting diplomacy. Shades of Jimmy Carter.

To be sure, President Clinton did offer enough bold-sounding platitudes to make the speech respectable among politics mavens, and he probably meant some of that stuff about reinventing America and reconstituting government. But government is government, of course, the sobering reality being that the vast, bureaucratic structure he fought to lead remains as it has always been: society's sanctioned monopoly on coercion. That, after all, is why he sought, and won, the presidency.

Did the speech's comparative brevity telegraph something all the pop culture icons who the past several days have celebrated the Clinton ascension which not to acknowledge — namely, that the former Arkansas governor really had spent every thought he ever had during the campaign? Did he really not have anything of substance to tell us, except that somehow, the 12 awful years of Republican rule behind us, we would now "force the spring" - springtime being a prosaic metaphor for renewal?

Indeed, how does government "force the spring," anyway — without, that is, interrupting natural cycles to a degree that would offend Vice President Al Gore? Is "force" the only language that Clinton's Democrats understand? Since at least Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration, the president's party has imagined they could force anything that in their wisdom they thought needed changing - form wages and prices to the manner in which the human heart expresses itself on the human tongue. Having failed to reinvent human nature, by means of their studied coercion, perhaps it is time to try to force seasonal changes.

But of course we take President Clinton's rhetoric too seriously. He was still, in a way astonishing to political observers, the "robopol" of the campaign — never a quiver, never a sense of awe brought on by the global audience before him. In some sense his delivery was reminiscent of Ronald Reagan's - only the former president managed to say substantive things that offended the dominant political culture. "Government is the problem, Reagan said a dozen years ago, thereby alienating the people Bill Clinton aimed to court.

Since he launched his candidacy, Clinton has tried to appropriate the Reagan style of confidence and optimism. That style was present during the inauguration — but again, without the substance. For those who grew up in Clinton's generation, reading D.C. Comics when they should have been studying history, it will do to compare Ronald Reagan's Superman to Bill Clinton's Bizarro the latter being a strange, de-souled creature who wore the same cape, possessed almost the same super powers, and succeeded only in failing and leaving a lot of mischief in his supersonic wake.

President Clinton, in Bizarro fashion, spoke of "the mystery of American renewal." Mystery, yes, Renewal, no.

Traps that snare presidents

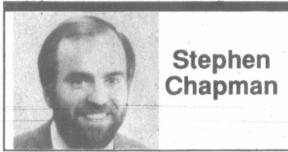

No one would play the lottery or run for president without the hope of being favored by the gods, and anyone who wins may be tempted to assume that destiny is a permanent friend. Bill Clinton isn't unusual in exhibiting great confidence in his ability and wisdom. But while few presidents expect to fail, many do.

The Democrats have a special talent for squandering the trust of the American people. They haven't had a president win more than one term since Franklin Roosevelt. Harry Truman, Lyndon Johnson and Jimmy Carter all charmed the electorate once, but the electorate didn't let them do it Ronald Reagan understood that brevity is a virtue twice. Three of the last four Republicans elected to the office, by contrast, have earned a second term.

This new president has a harder task than most. He got only 43 percent of the popular vote, the worst showing by a winner since Woodrow Wilson's in 1912. If Clinton wonders why he hasn't gotten a honeymoon, he might keep in mind that most Americans didn't want to marry him in the first place. While presidents can normally be content with satisfying their supporters, Clinton also has to win over many of his enemies.

To err is human, but to duplicate mistakes is stupid. Clinton won't enhance the intellectual reputation of Rhodes scholars if he refuses to learn Democratic predecessors. A look at Truman, Johnson and Carter suggests three important lessons:

1) Avoid inconclusive foreign conflicts. Truman had Korea, and Johnson had Vietnam. Americans which is not help to an incumbent president. rather than tax more and provide more.

in any military enterprise, successful (Grenada) or not (Lebanon).

Yet Clinton has endorsed using U.S. air power in Bosnia, where the chances of success are not high. And if aerial bombing fails, his own inflated rhetoric about the Yugoslav civil war may lead him to additional measures that could end in protracted entanglement. A party that suffered so much from Korea and Vietnam shouldn't be eager to plunge into the Balkans.

2) Keep inflation and taxes in check. Federal taxes not from the Mondale-Dukakis mold. declined as a share of national income between 1960 and 1964, one reason a Democratic incumbent was returned to office the latter year. In the following four years, taxes rose, with consequences distasteful from the chastening experiences of his recent to Democrats. The party, however, missed the signal: Under Jimmy Carter, taxes once again climbed, and voters once again reacted uncharitably.

Clinton, who has more programs to fund than money to fund them, may imagine that he was put generally lack great patience with military mis- in office with a mandate to create new programs sions, which they prefer to be concluded quickly even if they demand higher taxes. He wasn't: Fiftyand cheaply. Wars that go on for years without suc-five percent of voters in November said they would being inaugurated as president. He should avoid cess cause widespread frustration and humiliation, prefer the government to tax less and provide less

Judging from his aides' demands that the Federal Reserve keep interest rates low, whatever the risk of rising prices, Clinton thinks he can call a truce in the fight against inflation. Johnson and Carter, who had the same delusion, learned too late they were wrong. Americans are unhappy about joblessness, but if Clinton lets inflation soar, they will be equally unhappy about that.

3) Don't let the Republicans monopolize traditional values. The reason urban ethnics, blue-collar workers and Catholics have so often deserted the Democrats in presidential elections is feeling of cultural alienation from the Democratic left, with its support of gay rights, unfettered abortion and racial preferences and disdain for military power.

Clinton won partly because he sold himself as a different kind of Democrat — claiming that he had broken with most of his party to support the war against Iraq, a claim that was not any less helpful for not being true. His refusal to try to appease Jesse Jackson reinforced the impression that he was

But lifting the ban on gays in the armed forces will not allay the stubborn suspicion that Democrats put too much emphasis on sexual liberty and too little on national security. Nor will Clinton profit from pushing through a federal abortionon-demand law, which would give the Republicans a chance to look moderate and the Democrats a chance to look extreme. The abortion-rights side has 90 percent of what it wants, and good politicians know when to accept victory.

Clinton obviously enjoyed the experience of the traps that have snared other Democratic presidents if he wants to enjoy it again.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Jan. 28, the 28th day of 1993. There are 337 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: Twenty years ago, on Jan. 28, 1973, a cease-fire officially went into effect in the Vietnam War.

On this date:

In 1871, France surrendered in the Franco-Prussian War.

In 1878, the first commercial telephone switchboard went into operation, in New Haven, Conn. In 1878, the first daily college newspaper, the Yale News, began publication in New Haven, Conn. In 1902, the Carnegie Institute was established in Washington, D.C. In 1909, the United States ended direct control over Cuba.

In 1915, the Coast Guard ated by an act of Congress.

That fruitcake in Iraq

THE BILL CLINTON FAN CLUB

It was just like old times. There I sat in front of my television tuned in to CNN, the WAR Channel. Well, this time it wasn't "War in the Gulf" I was watching. This time it was, "Strike in the Gulf."

The difference between a war and a strike I suppose is that, in a war, CNN sends anchorman Bernie ("I'm Under the Table") Shaw to the front. In a strike, it only sends John Holliman, who sure enough, is back in Baghdad. Wolf Blitzer, meanwhile, is with the next Great Satan, the president-elect.

I'm not sure where Peter Arnett is — maybe he's with Ross Perot covering the 1996 presidential Iraq will be the mother of all piles of rubble. campaign. A CNN poll, by the way, has Perot's lead over David Letterman, as the nation's favorite television comedian, falling 6 percentage points.

But full scale war or strike, there were a lot of similarities. Once again Saddam Hussein was the man of the moment. Two years ago, the Iraqi leader thumbed his nose at the West, and the West blew up his country and his people.

blown up his country and his people.

When the West leveled Iraq in the Gulf War, Saddam Hussein said he had won a great victory. Last week, after coalition planes dropped coalition bombs on coalition targets in Iraq and wiped them off the face of the earth, Saddam Hussein said he'd won another great victory.

A couple of more great victories for Saddam, and

Once again CNN showed us video-tapes of our bombs hitting their targets. I found myself wishing those things were in color as I did during the Gulf War. I like a little orange fire, blue smoke and red blood when I see something explode on TV — like what you get when Chuck Norris blows up a North Vietnamese prison camp on sister station TBS. Who was missing besides Peter Arnett was Gen. Now he's done it again. And, again, the West has Schwarzkopf. He was somewhere signing copies of

I wanted Gen. Schwarzkopf to do an interview into a home. and say, "I know it sounds like 'I told you so,' but if George Bush had listened to me the first time and we'd taken out Saddam and finished the job, this strike wouldn't have been necessary and Bill Clinton might be stuck in Little Rock for good."

I also listened to the experts CNN had asked about Saddam's motives for not complying with those resolutions.

One said Saddam just wanted to upset George Bush one more time before he left office. Another said he was merely protecting the sovereignty of his country. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said it was because Saddam is unstable.

Unstable? Saddam Hussein is downright crazy.

A sane individual would have figured it out by now: "Hey these people are serious. Not only that, but praise Allah, do they have some kind of firepower too. Duck, Akbar, this holy war business is getting out of hand."

But not Saddam Hussein. He gets his country and his people bombed and he clicks his heels and says hurray for our side.

I can see only three ways to deal with Saddam: 1. Get his own people to kill him.

2. Kill him ourselves.

3. Figure out how to get him a straitjacket and

He will be Bill Clinton's problem now and I'm staying with CNN.

How Clinton deals with Saddam Hussein may give us a clue as to how he will deal with the fruicakes in Congress as well.

moderate's manifesto

Consider a picture of another Inauguration Day. It is Jan. 20, but the year is 1997. The crowd assembles at the Capitol. The band plays. Then there is a stillness. The chief justice moves forward. He is joined by the man he will swear in. The man raises his hand and intones: "I, Jack Kemp, do solemnly swear ..." Or, alternatively, it might be "I, Dick Cheney, do solemnly swear ... Or maybe it's not a man: "I, Jeane Kirkpatrick, do solemnly swear ..." Or try Dan Quayle, Bob Dole, Phil Gramm, Dick Lugar, Bill Weld, Pat Robertson, Pat Buchanan or Pete Du Pont. Or Ross Perot. Could this happen? How could this happen?

It could happen. After all, the campaign theme of 1996 is already set: "Bill Clinton said he was a Different Democrat, but he didn't deliver."

Of course, Republicans will make such a claim whether or not Clinton delivers. So, in this inauguration week, as a gift to the new president, before the partisanship starts, we ought to remember what Clinton promised, and to what standards may he be fairly held.

Clinton said he would restart the economy and My guess is that we'll make some progress on the deficit, and that's good. Clinton said he would reform health care. That's a tough nut, but I guess that we will end up with

Clinton said he would try to intensely promote global democracy. That's a great tack, the best shot for peace in out time, worth testing, but perhaps hard to measure politically.

Clinton promised more. To his credit, he divined the central problem in American public life. He reliance and self-discipline, mindlessly encouraging sloth, dependency and criminality. Liberals have problems with all those views.

Clinton believes in government. He indicated that what government caused, government could cure. And so, Clinton promised to restore a "personal responsibility" standard. This meant, he said, "No More Somereduce the deficit. The economy has self-started. thing for Nothing." He said our public programs should be based on "reciprocity." That meant "re-inventing government." In short, he promised to change the culture of government. That, in turn, could help revalue America, which is just what we need.

He didn't just offer abstractions. There were specifics regarding education, criminal justice, and, most importantly, welfare. He said welfare was the pledged to "end welfare recipients from the rolls after doesn't have a second inauguration, two years. That radical reform could change the culture. Liberals, and their interest groups, are already chipping away at the professed Clinton ideas. At her confirmation hearings Donna Shalala, the secretary-designate for Health and Human Services. offered a lengthy opening statement. Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan noted with displeasure that only a single sentence dealt with Clinton-style welfare reform, and he said he heard "the clatter of campaign promises being tossed out of the window.' Moynihan noted that the Children's Defense Fund, which both Shalala and Hillary Clinton previously chaired, had historically opposed such welfare saw that, in too many realms, mindless government reforms. Sen. John Rockefeller said, "I am picking up was screwing it up, mindlessly eroding self- rumors ... from the Children's Defense Fund ... that welfare reform is going to be put on a back burner."

This sort of battle between special interest liberals and the professed Clinton program will be repeated a hundred times in the years to come.

Will Clinton deliver on his promises? Or will he fold, and lose in 1996, pensively watching a successor sworn in?

Our politics work in strange ways. Supporters of Clinton's ideas can best support them by publicly opposing Clinton, with vigor and heat, if and when he backs off. A prominent Democratic senator says doing that would be doing Clinton "a great service."

Millions of Americans, many of them so-called Reagan Democrats, repaired to the Clinton banner because they believed in what he said. But if he worst abuse of the something-for-nothing standard. He doesn't deliver, they will not be crestfallen if he

Texas will have the opportunity to participate in a social studies program which could lead to prizes and scholarships and a trip to Washington, D.C., in June 1993.

Schools who have registered to participate in the Close Up Foundation Citizen Bee included Pampa High School.

The Citizen Bee is an academic program which focuses on U.S. history, economics, government, geography, and on current events. Students progress through school, regional, and state competitions and three participants from a school will advance to regional competition. Top finalists there will then advance to the state final later this spring.

Conservation groups estimate that parrots account for roughly half of the 500,000 birds imported legally and illegally into the United States each year. African gray parrots are not included in the moratorium because they are still widely found in Africa. They are classified as threatened, not endangered.

Pepperberg explains that her bird-training technique is based on "what these birds probably do in the wild." She creates a social atmosphere in which parrots learn by watching and hearing their peers and parents.

Traditional techniques basically rely on repetition of words until the bird says the word and is rewarded with a food item that doesn't relate to the word's meaning. But Pepperwatch her "teach" a person who Pepperberg prefers to let others interpret what she has proved about Alex. Griffin, who has written textbooks on animal thought, believes her work does suggest what goes on in an animal's head.

"Here is a case where an animal's communication tells us he is really thinking and it's rather unlikely he's the only one," Griffin says. "It's a sort of opening up of (Photo by Michael Goldman) the whole recognition of mental changes the whole way we think about parrots and other animals."

When thousands of parrots come together in the wild "like a stock exchange with a lot of shouting and yelling, they're probably trying to trade off information about the resources they use," he says.

Munn's own bird-conservation research in the Peruvian Amazon has taught him that "different shrieks mean different things" to parrots. For example, he says he can identify vocalizations used by the colorful Amazon parrot to signal such things as a U-turn in flight or a brief flight from one tree to

Jnhappy relationship may be truth behind the lies

DEAR ABBY: Recently I've noticed how much I have been lying to people about little things, when the lie does not in any way benefit me.

For instance, if I am asked what I've been doing, I will lie, even though the answer is no more glamorous. He is out of college now and has a than the truth. Yesterday, I told someone I had to stop and get gas before going home, even though I knew I was going straight home.

I once heard someone who had been abused as a child say that she started lying about everything in order to feel that she was in control of the situation. Abby, I have never been abused, and I don't know why I lie so much. It's really been bad the last year, but the lie is always out of my mouth before I realize it.

I'm sure the people I lie to know that I am lying, so why do I feel so powerless to stop? Could this have anything to do with the fact that I am in an unhappy relationship and want out?

Dannie Cagle, who works for Diamond Shamrock, has been a referee for 15 years. He got into it by going to a game with a friend of his who was a ref. "They were having a good time," Cagle said. "So I thought I would enjoy it."

And for the most part, he has. Cagle explained that when he first began officiating he carried the job's burdens home with him. "It'd be days later and I'd be worrying about a call," he said. "Now, I hardly remember the last game I called. It's just a job. If you let it linger, it will affect your performance."

Tommy Watson is a machinist. He's been a ref for four years and said he enjoys close games. "That's when the official is really on the ball," Watson said. "Our adrenaline is flowing too. We're excited too and want to do well... We may be nervous about blowing a call, but we're on top of it."

Regardless of whether they blow a call or not, the official usually hears from the fans and coaches. Rudy Dudley, an internal auditor for the government, has been officiating for

Game of the week

Groom (11-8; 5-0) at Kelton (12-5; 3-2)

On neutral ground, back in December, the Kelton Lions beat Groom 58-50. On Jan. 12 at Groom, the Tigers beat Kelton 64-54 in their district opener. Friday, the Lions host the Tigers in what should be a bear of a matchup.

Groom is riding a six-game winning streak that has propelled them into the district driver's seat. Kelton coach Brad Slatton said he feels they need to win the rest of their home games to have a chance at making the playoffs. "We've got our backs to the wall," Slatton said. "Our kids are excited to play."

Slatton said the difference between their win against Groom and their loss was defense. "In that first game, we played about as good defensively as possible.

"We've got to do a better job on Wes Hall, keep the score down and grab some rebounds," Slatton explained.

Hall scored 30 points in the last meeting, but sat out six minutes in the second half because of foul trouble. "The key is to make that entry pass tough," Slatton said. Kelton has won three of four since their loss at Groom. Their loss was a three-point setback at Samnorwood. "Our offense is finally coming around," Slatton said. Their leading scorer is Brian Kirkland, a junior, who Slatton said, struggled early in the season. "He's a good finisher and provides most of our offense," Slatton said. "But when he has to carry the load as much as he has lately, we struggle. The other guys start to depend on him too much."

As for the home court advantage, Slatton said he doesn't feel it's that big of an advantage. "Our crowds are pretty small so it doesn't make a big difference in that sense, but we tend to shoot better at home," Slatton said. "I think we'll come out pumped up. I just hope we can stay with it."

Friday's other area games:

White Deer (10-6; 1-0) at Shamrock (13-8; 1-0) The Bucks lost to Shamrock in the Groom tournament last month. McLean (3-16; 2-3) vs. Hedley (2-15; 0-5) Christian Looney scored 35 in the first meeting. McLean won 57-40. Miami (6-14; 2-2) vs. Allison (7-12; 0-4) Miami won the first meeting 63-48, but have lost three straight. Fort Elliott (14-6; 3-1) vs. WCA

The Cougars have won five of six and take a break from district action. Lefors (6-6; 1-4) at Samnorwood (11-7; 4-1) The Pirates lost the first meeting Jan. 12. Wheeler (8-15; 1-4) vs. Panhandle (2-16; 1-4)

The Mustangs won their first district game Tuesday vs. Canadian. Canadian (9-7; 2-3) vs. Wellington (11-6; 4-1) J.K. Hester is averaging 17.4 points per game in district play. White Deer (9-10; 0-1) at Shamrock (9-10; 0-1)

The Does lost the first meeting at the Groom tournament. McLean (8-10; 4-1) vs. Hedley (9-8; 3-2) Mindy Magee had 20 points in the first meeting. McLean won 52-49. Kelton (2-13; 1-4) vs. Groom (19-3; 5-0) Groom won the first meeting by 53 points. Fort Elliott (17-4; 2-1) vs. WCA Diedre Dukes is averaging 17.4 points in her last five games. Lefors (2-10; 0-5) at Samnorwood (10-9; 2-3) The Lady Pirates lost the first meeting 60-29.

Wheeler (11-10; 3-2) vs. Panhandle (16-5; 5-0) Wheeler will try to rebound from a 15-point second half Tuesday. Canadian (10-7; 3-2) vs. Wellington (6-11; 3-2) Canadian's Myrlah Jaco scored 16 in the first meeting, a 56-52 loss.

Hunters, anglers hit hard by hidden taxes

Anglers and Hunters Pay the Bills

According to a press release from the outgoing Secretary of Interior MANUAL LUJAN, "Without the excise taxes ... on hunting and fishing equipment, states would not be able to pay for many of the fish and wildlife restoration and recreation projects the public has come to take

Translation - the free loading environmental extremist continue to pick the pockets of the hunters and anglers. How much do our sportsmen pay? 351.8 million dollars that come from hidden taxes. Hidden taxes like an 11-percent excise tax on rifles and ammunition, an 11-percent tax on certain archery equipment, a 10-percent tax on fishing equipment, and the list goes on.

So next time one of the environmental extremists puts the hurt on this country's hunters and anglers, just remind them who is actually paying the bills for those restoration and preservation projects. And paying the bills without even so much as a thank you from the tree huggers and animal rights crowd.

OUTDOOR WORLD 93, the largest sportsman show between Dallas and Denver, will take place at the Amarillo Civic Center on February 12, 13, and 14. Special attractions include three seminar centers that will feature FREE instructions from leading experts on fishing, camping, and FACT OR FICTION If you are interested in learning more about the seasonal patterns and daily habits of big bass, the free seminars by JOHN HOPE of "Fishing Texas" television offer you a chance to learn from a master angler. John spent this last year at Lake Amistad where he used a video camera to chronicle the behavior of several bass that were implanted with radio transmitters. Not just guess work but the result of long, hard work by John Hope will help you catch more fish.

My old friend and a great fisherman, DREABON JOINER, will discuss catching big bass at his home lake, LAKE FORK. His daily seminars will disclose some mid-lake hot spots for catching bass at UTE LAKE, where he won $30,000 at a REDMAN national tournament.

TOM SMITH from Denver and star on "Lure of the Wild" television show, will share some secrets on fly fishing for trout and monster northern pike in Canada. A national champion elk caller, Tom can answer your questions about hunting for deer and elk in the Rocky Mountain

Good News - It is a tradition of the OUTDOOR WORLD shows that a copy of my newspaper column will save our readers $1,00 off the cost of a $4.00 adult admission ticket. In 1993 this offer is limited to one discount per adult. Stop by our Southwest Outdoor booth on the floor of the coliseum, I look forward to meeting you.

Seles takes on Graf for clash in the final with overpowering performances Thursday in the semis. Seles, the two-time defending champion, doesn't astonish anyone by winning, yet she amazed even herself with some shots in thrashing an enervated Gabriela Sabatini 6-1, 6-2.

Seles, 20-0 in this Grand Slam event over three years, assured herself of retaining the No. 1 ranking in women's tennis. Three-time champion Graf, who beat Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 7-5, 6-4, reigned as No. 1 for 3 1/2 years until March 11, 1991 when Seles became the youngest player to take over the top spot.

Graf can narrow the point gap in the rankings by beating Seles, putting the German in position to reclaim No. 1 later this year.

Their match Saturday will be their fourth for a Grand Slam title. Graf won the last meeting on the grass at Wimbledon last summer, Seles won the first two, in the French Open in 1990 and 1992.

But in the Australian Open, which Graf won on a rubberized hard surface in 1988, '89 and '90, the courts should even out their strengths and weaknesses. Neither player has ever lost an Australian final.

"It is special to play against her," Graf said. "I think it's a great opportunity to play against the best woman in the world. But she's human, too. Everyone makes mistakes. You have to constantly pressure her. You can't let up on your game, that's for sure."

Graf dismissed her own play in the semis as, "sort of OK, not extraordinary, nothing special." And that seemed accurate, even if she came up with a couple of very special back-to-back aces while facing double break point at 4-2, 15-40 in the second set. Graf went on to hold and run out the match.

Seles abandoned her usual restraint in appraising her performances and acknowledged that on the backcourt I played great. I didn't have any unforced errors."

Sabatini, who has lost to Seles nine times in 12 matches, tried every shot in her repertoire volleys, drop shots, topspins, slices. Seles had an answer to all of them, smacking line-drive passing shots or approaches into the

"There were a couple of shots I made, I don't believe," Seles said, recalling one backhand crosscourt drop from Sabatini in the second set that Seles charged and put into the corner, far from Sabatini's reach. It was the kind of shot, Seles said, that she'll remember for years, just as she recalls some great shots from three years ago.

The 53-minute match had none of the suspense of the quarterfinals each played, in part because Seles was so dominant and Sabatini made so many mistakes.

Sabatini, while giving Seles credit, blamed the lopsided loss on a possible illness.

"I think I have a virus because I feel very weak and tired," she said. "I was a little bit slow. I was not feeling well. I didn't sleep too many hours."

Seles made only 11 unforced errors to Sabatini's 25, but more than the numbers it was Seles' invincible attitude and style that won it for her — the same factors that brought her the Australian, French and U.S. Open titles last "Her best thing is her mind," Sabatini said. "That's the most important thing. That's why she's the best. She's so focused. She plays her best on each point.'

On nearly every key point, Seles showed the stronger will, the ability to come up with the better shot and put Sabatini on the defensive. Even as Sabatini attacked, she did it in a haphazard and slow manner.

Sabatini had a bit of bad luck, popping a string on a return to lose the fifth game of the second set. But she dug herself a bigger hole by double-faulting to start and finish the next game and fall behind 3-2. From that moment to the end; Sabatini looked lost on the court, eager to get it over and escape the embarrassment.

Seles, playing in her 14th Grand Slam event, reached the semis for the 10th time. This was the ninth time she's reached the final, and she'll be playing for her eighth Grand Slam title.

Fired employee kills former bosses

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A fired a mad dash to escape by the 30 other insurance claims manager carried a diners. grudge and a gun into his old office building and methodically killed three former bosses and wounded two others as they ate lunch in a cafeteria.

'That's what you all get for firing me!" Paul Calden reportedly shouted Wednesday before firing 10 blasts from a 9mm handgun.

Two hours later, he was found dead on the 13th tee of a Frisbee golf course in a park 15 miles away. Police said he shot himself in the head.

Calden, 33, was fired eight months ago from the Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. office, police spokesman Steve Cole said. Cole did not elaborate, and the company refused to comment on Calden's dismissal.

The five who were shot, all supervisors or executives in the office, were known to have a regular lunch each week at the cafeteria.

"He apparently knew these people would be there and he targeted these people," Cole said. "It was not a matter of him going into the cafeteria and just spraying in every direction."

According to police, Calden walked into the 12-story office building wearing a gray business suit. In the small cafeteria just off the lobby, he bought a soft drink, set it down, walked over to the table where his former supervisors were sitting, and pulled a gun from under his coat.

"They didn't have a chance to say anything — he just shot them," said Sarah Reid, 33. She said Calden was an arm's length away from her when he began firing.

"His first shot was to the back of one of the victims' head," police Maj. Ken Taylor said. "Then he began to fire at the others seated around the table." At least two others at the table escaped injury, Taylor said.

A picture window behind the table was shattered. The bloodstained cafeteria was strewn with overturned tables, food and women's shoes after Debbie Stevens said she heard the shots as she sat outside the cafeteria next to the lobby fountain. When she looked up, Calden had his back to her. She said she hid behind the fountain, then decided to run for it, sprinting toward a parking garage where she saw people walking toward the build-

"I was running and yelling, 'Get out of the way! There's a man in there shooting!" she said.

While two people tried to calm her, Calden walked by. She told the others who he was. "He heard me say it and he looked right at me," she said.

But with a blank stare, he walked past the three and into the parking garage, she said.

John Kozero, spokesman at Fireman's Fund headquarters in Novato, Calif., wouldn't comment on the shooting.

Sarah Reid relates to the media the scene in an office building cafeteria where three men were slain Wednesday.
