Pampa Police Chief Chuck Flemins, right, promotes patrol officer Stephanie Raymond to the rank of corporal in the police department on Friday while Sgt. Charles Love looks on.

PD promotes Raymond

Pampa Police Department Officer Stephanie Raymond recently was promoted from patrolman to corporal.

She began her career with the Pampa Police Department four years ago.

The Canyon native and Canyon High School graduate attended the Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy program after about 18 months as a student at West Texas State University.

"I got bored real easy and this job is the one I chose because of it never being the same," Raymond said.

While on the job, Raymond has taken classes to further her education on police procedures and on the crime of child abuse.

Raymond said her family background does not include any individuals in law enforcement, but she enjoys the excitement and variety of the day-to-day work.

"I love the profession itself," the corporal said.

Daily duties include patrol procedures, traffic control, service calls and other types of assistance needed by the public.

Cpl. Raymond said she hopes to continue her advancement in the department. — Cheryl Berzanskis

Probe determines arson in house fire

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

A deputy state fire marshal has determined that arson is the cause of a Sunday fire near Pampa that severely damaged a house owned by Johnny Carter, a fire official said today.

The state official, Troy McKee of the state Fire Marshal's Office in Lubbock, Pampa Fire Marshal Tom Adams, and Assistant Fire Marshal Gary Stevens made that determination Wednesday evening, Adams said today.

Adams declined to say what prompted them to cite arson as the cause of the fire, noting that the Gray County Sheriff's Office and the Texas Rangers are continuing the investigation.

Carter is a trooper with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The bedroom of Carter's house, which is located about one mile south of McCullough Street on Price Road, was gutted by the early Sunday morning fire. There was also smoke and heat damage to an adjoining section of the house. The house was unoccupied at the time of the fire, which Pampa firefighters extinguished by 6:01 a.m. Sunday.

Adams said today that he could not estimate the financial damage from the house fire, which was reported at 4:40 a.m.

Asked whether any suspects have been identified, Adams replied, "There could be several, but I couldn't give you any information on that."

Because there were no injuries in the fire, the arson is classified as a second-degree felony, Adams said.

The arson case was the first identified this year in the Pampa area, Adams said. There were approximately six cases of arson last year in the Pampa area, he said.

Gray County Sheriff's Office Chief Deputy Steve Smith said no information was available this morning on whether any suspects have been identified or on when arrests are expected.

Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield and Texas Ranger Gary Henderson are leading the investigation, with McKee assisting them, Smith said.

McKee was expected to leave Pampa later today, Adams said.

Adams said that Carter's house is too damaged for him to live in it.

Erdmann case to go back to grand jury

LUBBOCK (AP) — The work of former forensic pathologist Ralph Erdmann, who already has pleaded no contest to charges he falsified autopsy reports in three West Texas counties, is expected to go before a grand jury Friday.

"It is at the request of the police, and I don't know if they are going to request an indictment," said state District Judge Thomas L. Clinton, who appointed a special prosecutor in the matter Tuesday.

"I don't know what it (the Erdmann case) is. I have no idea," Clinton said.

Clinton named Johnny Actkinson, district attorney for Bailey and Parmer counties, as special prosecutor. Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware had asked Clinton to appoint a special prosecutor because Ware may be a witness Friday.

Erdmann performed hundreds of Lubbock County autopsies and testified at many trials Ware's office prosecuted.

Attorneys last February began accusing Erdmann of botching dozens of death investigations in the 40 West Texas counties where he performed autopsies.

His plea bargain in September forced him to relinquish his medical license during 10 years' probation. He also agreed to pay about $16,000 in restitution for autopsies he now acknowledges he never performed.

Waiting for Clinton's budget — sweaty palms time

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Get ready. In a town where bureaucrats live and die on the almighty federal dollar, the wailing and gnashing of teeth is about to begin.

The green eye shade crew at the president's Office of Management and Budget has been poring over the fine print in each federal agency's budget request for the next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. And they're making the cuts necessary to achieve candidate Clinton's promise to seriously attack the ballooning budget deficit.

According to a memo from OMB Director Leon Panetta that was obtained by The Associated Press, the agencies were supposed to get the grim news of what those decisions were beginning today.

However, administration sources, speaking on condition that they not be named, said Wednesday the original schedule had slipped slightly and that OMB officials would be working overtime this weekend to wrap up final decisions with the aim of letting most agencies know on Monday.

In the jargon of federal budget making, this process is known as the "pass back" when an agency's initial spending request gets "passed back" with OMB's deletions and additions.

The agency then has the chance to appeal before the final decisions are locked in and the mammoth budget book gets printed and sent to Congress.

This whole process normally occurs over a period of weeks in November and December, with the president presenting his budget by Feb. 1.

However, Richard Darman, President George Bush's budget director, decided to forgo the agony since whatever decisions the Republican administration would have made would have most certainly been overturned by the new administration.

Instead, Bush in January sent Congress a "budget baseline" that did not set any spending priorities but instead just projected what would occur if government activities for this year were allowed to continue without change into the future.

That document produced sharply higher deficit forecasts.

Since taking office, the new administration has insisted that President Clinton will live up to his pledge of cutting $145 billion from the deficit by 1997, when the shortfall is projected to be $305 billion.

But beyond that goal, there have been no details of just where the cuts will come.

While most agencies were still awaiting word on how they fared with OMB, the Pentagon has already been alerted to look for cuts of between $7 billion and $10 billion, according to Pentagon and defense industry sources.

Similar messages will echo throughout the government in the days ahead.

The OMB will also be delivering some good news, of course. During the campaign, Clinton promised to come forward with a "Rebuild America Fund" to boost investment spending for highways, roads, fiber-optic networks and education by $20 billion per year over the next four years.

But with the budget deficit looking so much worse, Clinton will have to propose even more spending cuts or tax increases to pay for the areas where he wants to increase spending.

Panetta said at his confirmation hearing that he expected to make $2 in spending cuts for every $1 the administration seeks in new taxes.

However, congressional leaders have let it be known that they consider that goal unrealistic because it would mean the administration would have to come up with nearly $100 billion in cuts in 1996, an election year, to meet Clinton's goal.

The new administration has had to compress the entire budget process in order to meet its goal of having the broad outlines of an economic plan ready for Clinton to reveal to Congress on Feb. 17, with the full budget due out on March 23.

Panetta's memo gave agencies only one week between receiving their revised budgets, filing appeals and having OMB make a final determination.

And the memo contained a pointed warning that "agency heads may appeal specific proposals by proposing alternatives that achieve the same amount of savings."

In other words, for the agency to escape a spending cut in a particular area it should come up with a matching cut somewhere else.

One killed, seven injured by gunman in Arkansas

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — A factory worker returned from lunch with a pistol in each hand and shot eight co-workers, killing one of them, before a wounded man clubbed him in the head with a pipe, authorities said.

Michael Wayne Burns, 37, indicated in a note that others had been harassing him at Prescolite Inc., an industrial lighting plant where he worked for 16 years, sheriff's officials said.

Traffic Commission meeting scheduled

The city of Pampa Traffic Commission is set to meet at 7 p.m. Feb. 11 at City Hall.

Possible erection of a stop or yield sign at the intersection of 22nd and Chestnuts streets is on the agenda.

He was listed in critical condition today with a head injury. Three of the seven wounded men also were in critical condition.

Fellow employees said Burns ate lunch in his truck Wednesday, then returned through a back entrance and began shooting. A sheriff's investigator told the El Dorado News-Times that Burns used three handguns.

The shooting spree ended when Darryl McCurdy, who had been shot in the side and wrist, hit the gunman with a pipe, the newspaper said. McCurdy, 39, was listed in stable condition.

Sheriff Huey Havard said in a statement that a note was found on Burns indicating "he was angry at fellow employees." Investigators said the note indicated he was upset over harassment. No details were released.

Some employees said Burns seemed to be targeting certain people as they returned from lunch. As many as 60 employees may have been in the plant in this town 120 miles south of Little Rock.

Co-worker George Turner said Burns appeared normal when he talked with him in the morning.

"He didn't act like nobody was messing with him this morning," he said. "He was just a guy who come to work every day. He didn't talk much. He acted like he never would do no harm to nobody."

Turner said he was in an upstairs lunchroom when he heard shots.

One of those wounded, Luther Ray McDuffie, 56, said he was walking ahead of Brown when he heard two shots. He turned toward the sound and saw Willie Earl Brown fall. Brown, 52, was killed.

"I was just about to turn the corner and felt a hot pain in my side," McDuffie said. He was treated at a hospital and released.

Throat-slashing incident under investigation

Pampa Police Department detectives are investigating the throat slashing of a 20-year-old Pampa woman as an attempted murder, said Sgt. Jesse Wallace with Pampa police.

Stacy Fellingham, 20, of 407 Hill, was the victim of an attack

Wednesday in her home, according to Pampa police.

Fellingham reportedly was discovered by Monty Kuykendall, also of 407 Hill, according to a police report.

Upon arrival at the residence at 8:40 a.m., police officers found Fellingham with her throat slashed. She was transported by American Medical Transport to Coronado Hospital, where she reportedly underwent surgery.

According to a police report, Fellingham suffered a 3- to 3

1/2-inch deep laceration to the right side of her neck with a "edged weapon."

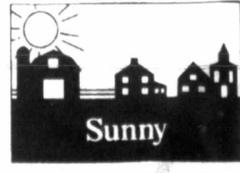

She was listed in stable condition this morning, according a hospital spokeswoman.

The offense is still under investigation, Wallace said.

Russian space official says mission 'completely successful'

By BRIAN FRIEDMAN
 Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A huge experimental mirror was unfurled in space today and briefly reflected sunlight to the Earth's dark side, tracing a weak 2 1/2-mile beam for six minutes across Europe, Russian space officials said.

The experiment could be the first step in creating revolutionary space tools for illuminating large areas of the planet at night.

The cloth-backed mirror, 82-feet in diameter, was unfurled at 3:53 a.m. (7:53 p.m. EST Wednesday) from the unmanned Progress supply ship flying next to the orbiting Mir space station, said Viktor Blagov, director of the Russian space flight control center.

The aluminum-coated mirror then was angled to reflect sunlight onto some areas of the night side of the planet.

Blagov initially said the experiment was a "complete success." But a member of the project team, Semyon Lukasky, later said the test was not perfect, "but it did go rather well."

The officials said they received reports that flashes of light were seen in the Brest and Gomel regions of the former Soviet republic of Belarus.

But neither had any information about whether it had shone on western and central Europe, as expected.

Called Operation Banner, the experiment was designed to create a weak beam of light, about 2 1/2 miles in diameter, on Earth. Since the light was orbiting the globe, the spot on Earth moved quickly across Europe toward the former Soviet Union.

Scientists said they had expected the spot to be too weak and moving too fast for anyone on Earth to see, although two starry points of light — the banner and the Mir's solar panels — might have been visible zipping across the night sky.

The experiment could be the first step in creating a stellar spotlight out of several such banners. Such a spotlight could be used to light up nighttime work, to aid in rescue operations and to illuminate blacked-out cities or sun-starved polar areas.

Russian television today showed videotape from the Mir of the spinning silver cloth mirror opening slowly like an umbrella from one end of the Progress. The footage showed the rear of the Progress with the glistening disk turning behind it.

Gennady Manakov and Alexander Poleshchuk, the cosmonauts aboard the Mir, also were expected to try to photograph the light spot on Earth.

Although no pictures were shown on television, the ITAR-

Tass news agency said the space-men had "observed a section of our planet's surface illuminated with sunlight."

The main purpose of the test was to see whether the sheet could be opened using centrifugal force and then maneuvered. After the experiment, the disposable banner was ejected from the cargo ship, Blagov said.

"All the principle scientific problems were solved by this experiment, (and) now we need to collect money to continue the program," he added.

The project had been funded almost entirely by the space agency and various Russian ministries. Officials hope a successful test will entice new investors.

Mir cosmonauts Anatoly Solovoyov and Sergei Abdeyev, who returned to Earth last week, told reporters Wednesday the banner could have many uses.

The sheet is designed to harness wave-like power from the sun, much as sailboats capture wind to move in the water.

Scientists and fiction writers have theorized for a century about spaceships moving with such a "solar sail."

"When I first heard about this experiment, I thought to myself that this was some kind of science fiction dream," Solovoyov said. "But then I understood that it's actually possible, that we could pull this off."

School board candidate workshop planned

AMARILLO — Area school board candidates will have the opportunity to learn more about the challenges of board service at a school board candidate workshop from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Feb. 22 at the Education Service Center Region XVI, 1601 S. Cleveland, Amarillo.

The workshop will provide school board candidates and other interested residents an understanding of what is involved in being elected and serving as a trustee. An experienced school board member and a representative from the Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) will explain board members' key responsibilities and outline the attributes needed for effective service.

Topics to be covered include the role of a board member, ethics in board service, campaigning for office, and the importance of board membership in community service. Participants will also view "A Call to Service," a new video highlighting many aspects of board service and featuring several experienced school trustees.

All those interested are invited to attend the workshop. Admission is free. For more information call TASB Leadership Team Services, 1-800-580-8272.

Two guns missing in house burglary

A Wednesday residential burglary netted thieves two .38-caliber Smith & Wesson handguns, Pampa police said today.

Ann Crossman, 500 W. Brown, discovered that her home had been entered sometime before noon and drawers rifled, according to a press release from Pampa police. Police officers searched the house but found no one inside.

The burglary is still under investigation, according to Lt. Steve Chance.

Morales plans stronger enforcement of Open Records, Open Meetings laws

AUSTIN (AP) — The state attorney general says he soon will unveil initiatives aimed at beefing up enforcement of Texas open government laws.

Attorney General Dan Morales said Wednesday that the efforts, some of which need legislative action, would be unprecedented by the attorney general's office.

"Among the things we are considering is a much more focused effort with regards to open records and open meetings enforcement activities than has been the case ever in the history of any administration of the attorney general's office," Morales said.

He said his office has been reviewing the situation around the state and believes there may be problems in enforcing the two major laws designed to make sure that the public's business is conducted in public.

"Our cursory review leads me to believe that it will be necessary for us to make some relatively far-reaching legislative proposals aimed towards strengthening various provisions in both the Open Records Act and the Open Meetings Act," he said.

At a meeting of the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas in Dallas last week, Morales assistant

Madelein Johnson said initiatives under consideration included:

— Appointment of a special prosecutor in his office to pursue government agencies that violate the open records law.

— Creation of a special open government section in the attorney general's opinions committee to focus on open government issues.

— Propose that legislators strengthen enforcement of open meetings and open records laws. The attorney general has the authority now to enforce the Open Records Act but not express authority on the Open Meetings Act.

The Houston Chronicle last month published a series of articles about the public access laws. Based on a review of more than 1,700 open records rulings by the attorney general's office in the past three years, the Chronicle reported that important government information increasingly is being closed to the public.

Morales said Wednesday he is still working on a package of proposals and hopes to make details public next week.

He said his office has been reviewing how other states enforce their open government laws. He also said he was trying to determine from Texas cases whether the laws on the books "are currently being enforced in a way the public could be confident in."

"There's no use having an Open Records Act or Open Meetings Act if there's no effective enforcement mechanism attached to it," he said.

Morales said there are problems in enforcing the law aimed at keeping meetings of governmental bodies open to the public.

Under current law, the attorney general's office may issue opinions about open meetings but doesn't have the power to pursue sanctions against agencies that fail to comply.

Violations of open meetings laws are prosecuted by local district attorneys.

"Perhaps it was unrealistic to expect local elected officials, that is county attorneys and district attorneys, to be solely responsible for enforcement of the Open Meetings Act," Morales said.

"What we ask local prosecutors to do ... essentially is prosecute the individuals who are signing their paychecks — county commissioners, city council people and others. I think there are obvious difficulties and there may be some obvious apprehension or hesitation on the part of local prosecutors," he said.

FBI calls $8.2 million robbery an inside job

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A guard who had told the FBI he was tied up by gunmen in an $8.2 million holdup at an armored car warehouse was arrested in the heist with three other men, and nearly all the cash was recovered, still in its wrapping.

The FBI knew the Dec. 27 heist on the Brooklyn waterfront was an inside job because the thieves got in easily, bypassed alarms and got out smoothly, James M. Fox, head of the bureau's New York office, said Wednesday.

"They had to have assistance from within the company," he said.

The thieves had been unable to dispose of the cash because the bills were sequentially numbered and could easily be traced, Fox said.

The theft at the Hudson Armored Car Co. was the second-largest cash heist in New York City history.

Among those arrested Wednesday was the lone guard on duty the night of the heist, Juan Jose Serrano, 34, of Brooklyn.

Serrano had claimed that he had been watching TV in the command room when holdup men surprised him and tied him up. He said he did not get a good look at the intruders and freed himself in about 20 minutes.

"We felt we knew very early on who the felons were in this case," Fox said. He said the case was solved by putting pressure on the suspects.

Also arrested were Serrano's brother Robert, 28, also of Brooklyn; the alleged driver of the getaway car, Joseph James Santiago, 24, of Bethpage; and Raymond Malave, 20, of Kissimmee, Fla. He was arrested in Florida.

The five unopened packages of loot were found in a nearby empty Brooklyn apartment a few blocks away from where Robert Serrano lives, the FBI said.

"This is what $8 million in cash looks like," Fox said at a news conference, pointing to the bricks of $100 bills in blue plastic wrap.

Fox said the thieves apparently each managed to spend about $60,000 in cash that was not sequentially numbered. An additional $40,000 in checks was burned.

The men face bank larceny charges, Fox said.

The biggest cash heist in the city's history was $11 million, discovered missing in 1982 from Sentry Armored Car. Authorities said a large portion of the money had been stolen over time by insiders. Five men were sent to prison.

About $1.5 million was recovered.

Family leave bill in Senate's hands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House urged the Senate today to quickly pass and not play "games" with a House-approved family leave bill that guarantees workers unpaid leave to care for sick relatives.

The House approved the bill 265-163 late Wednesday. The Senate was expected to follow suit within a day or two, although action has been delayed by Republican objections to President Clinton's efforts to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military.

"We hope that the Senate doesn't hold this bill up," Communications Director George Stephanopoulos said today.

"The president has said he wants that bill on his desk. He wants to sign it this week and we shouldn't let it be blocked by legislative games," Stephanopoulos said on NBC's "Today" show.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine planned to meet with fellow Democrats today to figure out how to proceed on the military issue.

The Senate version of the family leave bill is nearly identical to that passed by the House. Both guarantee workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year to care for a new child or a sick relative.

Democrats still hope to get the bill to Clinton by the end of the week, a feat they said would prove their claim that, with a Democratic-controlled Congress and a Democrat in the White House, gridlock in Washington was over.

Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that the bill was important "not just for the parents. ... It also sends a message that finally we have a government and a president who understand the problems so many of us are living with today."

House Democrats said voters in November issued a clear warning that they wanted Washington to act on their behalf.

"We have a mandate, a mission, a moral obligation to stand up for the American family," said Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga.

And Majority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., said the family leave issue was "one reason why we have a new president."

Family leave legislation was twice vetoed by former President Bush; Clinton asked Congress to get it to him as soon as possible.

During the lengthy House debate Wednesday, Republicans tried to amend the bill to give employers more leeway with leave policies, but Democrats voted down each proposed change.

The measure would exempt companies with fewer than 50 workers. The Labor Department estimates it would cover 5 percent of companies and about 40 percent of the work force.

Voting for the bill in the House were 224 Democrats, 40 Republicans and one independent. Opposed were 134 Republicans and 29 Democrats.

Democrats said the measure would give Americans job security and ultimately make U.S. companies more competitive by lifting morale and creating a more stable work force.

"It's not only humane policy, it's smart policy," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Republicans scoffed at the Democrats for making the issue a priority, saying it had nothing to do with turning around the economy — the thing Clinton said he'd work on from Day One in the White House.

Instead, Republicans said, it's just another government-knows-best bill.

"Despite all the new-team, job-creation rhetoric, it's the same old Democratic playbook," said Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas.

Senate Democrats also defeated GOP attempts to water down the bill, but a final vote was put off on the issue of homosexuals in the military.

"We're not trying to delay the bill," said Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., predicting the family leave measure could still be passed in the Senate today if the military gays issue was resolved.

Republicans want to either amend the family leave bill or offer a free-standing bill to preserve the ban on homosexuals in the military for six months, pending the outcome of congressional hearings. The Republicans also would prevent the president from acting by executive order alone and would give Congress a vote on any changes.

White House Communications Director George Stephanopoulos, referring Wednesday to the possible GOP move on military gays, said the American people would "know who to blame" if the family leave bill got held up.

House GOP critics dismissed the measure as a "feel good" bill that had the facade of helping workers but really would hurt the U.S. economy. Some 60,000 jobs a year would be lost under the bill, they argued.

Some Republicans argued that the measure would discriminate against women and make companies less likely to hire women of child-bearing age.

Clinton eyes nearly $9 billion in defense cuts

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton wants the Army, Navy, Air Force and the Pentagon's missile defense program each to trim $2.5 billion or more from the budget President Bush left them for next fiscal year, congressional sources say.

Overall, Clinton is calling for cutbacks totaling nearly $11 billion in real defense spending, although the official Pentagon budget number would slice about $8.5 billion from Bush's blueprint, from $267.8 billion to $259.3 billion.

That's because Clinton's budget planners have concluded Bush was wrong when he claimed that an administrative streamlining of the Defense Department would produce a $2.5 billion savings.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin detailed a breakdown of the planned cuts in a Feb. 2 budget memo to the military services. The memo circulated on Capitol Hill on Wednesday.

The Army is expected to trim

$2.5 billion from its budget, the Navy $3 billion and the Air Force $2.8 billion, according to sources who have seen the document and discussed it on condition of anonymity.

Spending on the Strategic Defense Initiative and the theater missile defense program would be reduced by $2.5 billion, the sources said.

The Bush budget planned to spend $6.2 billion on SDI, commonly known as Star Wars, and the missile defense program, which includes the Patriot weapon used in the Persian Gulf War.

The overall reduction totals about $10.8 billion, but the Pentagon is subtracting the $2.5 billion in savings it once thought it would realize from modernizing the department.

Pentagon and congressional officials have said the management overhaul will not produce the estimated savings.

Under the Clinton administration, U.S. troop levels in Europe will be reduced to 100,000 by the end of fiscal 1996, according to the memo. The current number is slightly more than 200,000, down from a high of about 325,000 during the height of the Cold War.

An additional cut of just over $1 billion for intelligence work by the Defense Department also is expected, the sources said.

The memo also proposes that efforts to convert defense work in a peacetime economy be coordinated with the National Economic Council, a White House group that oversees the government's economic policy.

Aspin has asked the services to report back to his office on the cuts by Feb. 8, which would give the defense secretary about three weeks before presenting a budget to Leon Panetta, the director of the Office of Management and Budget.

The services face another early deadline certain to be a factor in any defense cuts. They must submit their recommended list of base closures for 1993 by Feb. 12.

Clinton is expected to lay out an economic stimulus package in his State of the Union address on Feb. 17 and present the plan a day later. The president will submit his budget to Congress on March 23.

During the campaign, Clinton proposed defense cuts of $60 billion beyond the $50 billion Bush had proposed over a five-year period.

The sources said the $8.5 billion in cuts would come from funds the Bush administration wanted Congress to authorize for 1994 but which would have been spent over a number of years.

Since some military construction, such as shipbuilding, takes many years, such a cut would result in an actual spending reduction next year of only about $5 billion, the sources estimated.

Bush's budget envisioned a personnel cut of 83,000 active duty troops. To achieve the savings Clinton wants, the military would have to make additional cuts in personnel and in the operation and maintenance accounts for the services.

Clinton's planned budget cuts raises questions about the fate of the Army's Comanche helicopter, a twin-engine craft that is being developed for armed reconnaissance and light attack, and the Navy's new aircraft carrier, the sources said.

Seven killed in plane crash

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — A cargo plane used as a flying laboratory by Lockheed Corp. crashed and burned Wednesday shortly after takeoff, killing all seven Lockheed employees aboard and destroying an array of specialized electronic gear.

The L-100, a civilian version of the C-130 Hercules military transport, went down about 200 yards from the runway at Dobbins Air Force Base, where it had taken off. It clipped a Navy clinic, but no one on the ground was hurt.

Investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board worked through the night, combing through the wreckage, for clues to the cause of the crash.

The plane was called the L-100-20 High Technology Test Bed, a one-of-a-kind laboratory used to test improvements to Lockheed transport planes. It was equipped with advanced data-gathering equipment.

Julius Alexander, a spokesman for the aircraft maker, said the plane had undergone extensive modifications to its wings and flight control systems. It was fitted with special navigation equipment and cockpit displays.

The plane, which had been in use for nine years, also had more powerful engines than the standard C-130, Alexander said.

"It was not an ordinary Hercules by any stretch of the imagination," he said.

It was designed to fly at much lower than normal speeds, mainly to test short-distance landing.

One of the crew members was identified as the flight test engineer, Troy Cleveland Castana, 33. The identities of the others were withheld until relatives could be notified.

Douglas High, Navy chief hospital corpsman, was in the clinic when the plane crashed.

"I heard a hum. Something was coming down," he said. "Then I heard a boom. My first reaction was to get everybody out. All we tried to do was get everybody out the front door."

It came down in front of Marine Corps Gunnery Sgt. John Atkinson, who was driving.

"I saw it come in plain view from my front windshield and it hit nose first into the ground about 40 feet in front of me," he said.

Police suspect foul play in Amarillo man's disappearance

AMARILLO (AP) — Police are chasing leads in the disappearance of a prominent attorney missing since last week.

David Lewis, 39, was last seen Jan. 28 at the class he taught at Amarillo Junior College. Police suspect foul play, said Capt. Jimmy Stevens, detective division commander for Amarillo police.

"There are a number of things and leads that we're checking out with respect to information that's come in from friends, family and associates," Stevens said Wednesday.

"We do not have any firm leads as to his whereabouts."

Police heard that Lewis has received some death threats, Stevens said, adding "we have not confirmed that his life has recently been threatened."

Stevens said Lewis' wife returned from a weekend trip Sunday evening and reported Lewis missing Monday. His Ford Explorer was found downtown, Stevens said.

Lewis, a former teen court judge, was active in groups including the Boy Scouts, Cedar Creek Hospital board and Amarillo Area Literacy Council.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

He's backpedaling at the starting line

For the flimsiest of reasons, President Bill Clinton has tossed overboard two of his central economic promises of the fall campaign. In recent weeks, ever since the Bush administration predicted higher deficits in years ahead, Clinton has been busy backing away from his pre-election economic program.

If the government were to maintain all current programs and tax policies, the Bush administration estimates the federal deficit will grow to $384 billion by fiscal year 1997. That's more than $50 billion higher than earlier estimates.

Among the promises Clinton has jettisoned is to cut the federal deficit in half by the end of his first term. Another promise, that of a middle-class tax cut, has been put on the back burner by the Democratic leadership in Congress, with Clinton concurring.

In fact, Clinton has used the higher deficit projections to offer himself a blanket exemption from just about everything he said during the campaign. "I have to put everything back on the table," he told a group of journalists early last week, saying in effect, "Forget everything I said before Election Day."

If Clinton wants to break a campaign promise he should find a more sturdy pretense than an outgoing administration's deficit projections. Most government forecasts are notoriously inaccurate, but projections of future deficits have been so far off as to be practically worthless. Too many unforeseen factors, such as interest rates and economic growth, can intervene to drastically change the size of future deficits.

The president's quickness to dump his campaign promises makes us wonder how serious those promises were in the first place. His call for a middle-class tax cut was an obvious appeal to win the support of voters leery of tax-and-spend Democrats, while his call to cut the deficit was clearly an attempt to appeal to Ross Perot supporters. Now it appears both promises were nothing more than cynical ploys to win votes.

If Clinton and his allies in Congress are serious about cutting the deficit, then the campaign promises he should dump are those of higher spending. The deficit has not grown to the $300 billion level because Americans pay too little to the government in taxes, but because the government spends too much money.

President Clinton could meet both his promises to reduce the tax burden and to cut the deficit — if he and the leaders in Congress are willing to curb the government's appetite to spend. But somehow the promises to spend more money are always the last to be broken.

Bill Clinton's generation gap

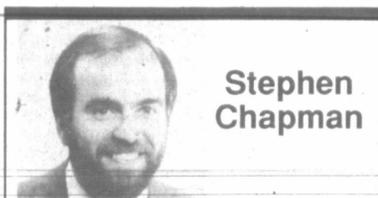

For months, we have been hearing the Bill Clinton and Al Gore are the political equivalent of Pepsi: the choice of a new generation. One message of their campaign was that, unlike the geriatric incumbent, they were youthful, vital and hip, with a new approach to issues that resonates powerfully with Americans who were weaned on John F. Kennedy, rock and roll and "Leave It to Beaver."

Rolling Stone magazine endorsed the Democratic ticket last fall by praising it as "young and fresh," which must have come as a surprise to dewy-checked 20-year-olds whose parents are younger than Clinton. "Bill Clinton and Al Gore are of this generation," it gushed. "They stand for what's been the best of it." Washingtonian magazine presumed to speak for baby boomers everywhere when it gloated on its cover, "Our Turn."

The inaugural festivities raised the theme to a mantra. In his swearing-in speech, Clinton announced that with his ascent to the White House, "a generation raised in the shadows of the Cold War assumes new responsibilities," while challenging "a new generation of young Americans to a season of service."

He has underscored the youth-and-vigor point by giving half of his Cabinet jobs to people under 50 (George Bush's original Cabinet had none) and by including in the inaugural parties musicians whose best days were the 1960s and '70s, from Aretha Franklin to Fleetwood Mac. Everywhere in Washington last week, there were 40-ish celebrities proclaiming delight and relief at having a president who, as one of their own, can speak for them.

The only problem is that he doesn't. Maybe seeing a fellow boomer nominated for president inspires envy instead of identification; maybe boomers think anyone their age isn't old enough to run the country; or maybe they just know him better than anyone else. But Americans of Clinton's generation who are enchanted with their new leader are the exception, not the rule.

Clinton did worse with them than with any other age group. While capturing 43 percent of the total vote, he managed just 40 percent among people from age 30 to 39 — meaning three out of five spurned him for a sexagenarian. His share of the vote among people from age 40 to 44 was no higher than his share among the electorate as a whole.

Inspiring tepid affection from his fellow boomers, Clinton had to look high and low for support, and high and low is exactly where he found it. His best showing in November was with the oldest voters and the youngest — the Medicare set and the MTV generation. Those age 65 and over gave him a 50-39 percent margin over their fellow graybeard, George Bush (the only group that gave Clinton anything resembling an actual majority), and those under 25 preferred him by 46 percent to 33 percent.

On matters of general political outlook Clinton is also badly out of step with his co-generationists. His inaugural speech broke with Ronald Reagan and George Bush by quoting Franklin Roosevelt's call for "bold, persistent experimentation." But far from being weary of conservative policies and eager for can-do activism, baby boomers apparently have concluded from years of experience and observation that an increase in the amount of money collected by the Internal Revenue Service will only mean an increase in the amount of money vanishing down rat holes.

Asked in November exit polls whether they'd prefer a government that costs more but provides more or one that costs less but provides less, voters chose the latter by a gaudy margin of 55 percent to 38 percent. But the greatest opposition to bigger government came from those in the 40 to 44 age group, where the gap was 62-31 percent. Among those in their 30s, 56 percent wanted less government.

In fact, only one age group disagreed — the 18- to 24-year-olds. Fifty-four percent of them favored an expansion of Leviathan, which may owe something to the fact that they have little acquaintance with the obligation of paying for it. Certainly they had no trouble judging which presidential candidate was more likely to fulfill their preference.

What is clear is that the people who bear the burden of paying for government programs — the baby boomers and others in their prime working years — are not crazy about Clinton or his political vision. Those who are least likely to pay much in taxes (the young) and those who get the most goodies from Washington (the old), however, embrace him as an ally, and with good reason.

Clinton and Gore might like to think that being a baby boomer earns you special affection from baby boomers. Barry Manilow might like to think the same thing, but that wouldn't make it so.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1993. There are 330 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 4, 1789, electors unanimously chose George Washington to be the first president of the United States; however, the results of the election were not tabulated until April 6.

On this date:

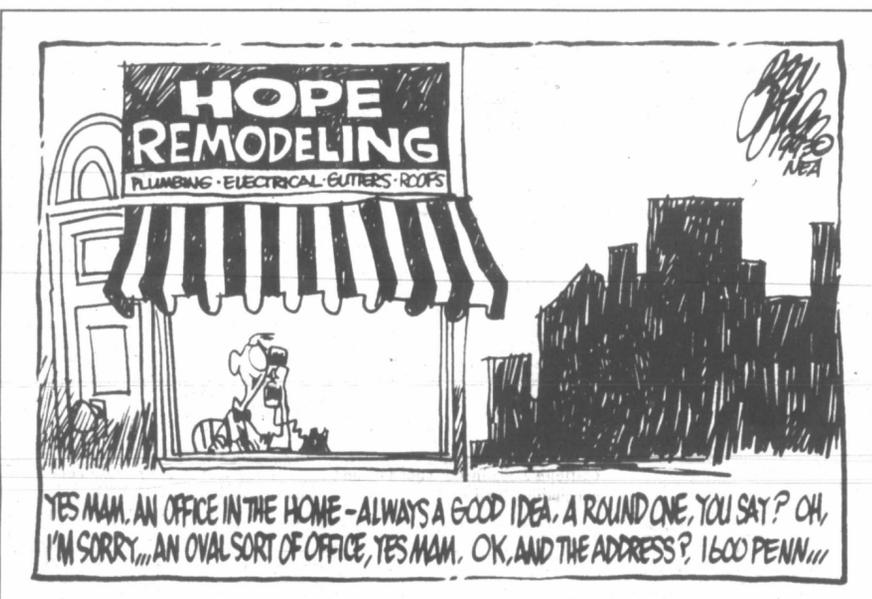

In 1783, Britain declared a formal cessation of hostilities with its former colony, the United States of America.

In 1801, John Marshall was sworn in as chief justice of the United States.

In 1861, delegates from six southern states met in Montgomery, Ala., to form the Confederate States of America.

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened the Winter Olympic Games at Lake Placid.

In 1938, "Our Town," Thornton Wilder's play about small-town life in America, opened on Broadway.

Super Bowl's coming to Atlanta in '94

If I had to pick between Zoe Baird being confirmed by the Senate as the nation's new attorney general or Rankin Smith selling the Atlanta Falcons, I'd have gone for Ms. Baird.

Sure, she broke the law. She and her husband hired two illegal immigrants from Peru.

But we knew ahead of time Bill Clinton might be a draft-dodging womanizer and we made him president anyway.

How I managed to put pro football and the current political scene together is that I was watching CNN and there was Ms. Baird, before she withdrew, squirming in front of the Senate confirmation panel.

Two seconds later, there was a man on my TV talking about the Super Bowl between Dallas and Buffalo.

We've had attorney generals guilty of a lot of things before, but the country survived.

But the Falcons, after nearly three decades of trying, have never been to a Super Bowl.

The Falcons are not in step with Atlanta. The Braves have hosted two World Series in a row. Atlanta will be the sight of the 1996 Summer Olympics. And the Super Bowl is coming to town in 1994.

Lewis Grizzard

You can quote me as saying the Falcons have the same chance of being in it as I do of winning the Olympic Gold medal in the marathon.

But look what happened to pro football in Dallas. It wasn't that long ago the Cowboys were worst than the Falcons.

But a new owner came in who hired a new head coach and the Cowboys won the Super Bowl again.

The Falcons came within a few minutes of going to the Super Bowl once. Once. Owner Rankin Smith fired the coach who took them to that point.

He's proved over and over he hasn't a clue to how to run a pro football franchise. A few years ago he put his sons in charge.

The Falcons' ineptness has made me stop paying attention to pro football altogether. I go to Super Bowl parties for the free food and drinks.

About the only way I'd give pro football another chance is if there was new ownership of the Falcons who would do something, anything to give the city a contender.

A new owner might hire Mike Ditka, fired by the Chicago Bears. He won it all in Chicago and the man has the fire in his belly to do it again.

I have nothing personal against the present head coach, Jerry Glanville, but I think he'd be better off in another sport.

Like motorcycle racing.

Put a for sale sign on the franchise, Mr. Smith, and give us the hope Bill Clinton still believes in.

And one more tie-in between pro football and what's doing with politics: Let's go back 20 years or so when former Falcons coach Norman Van Brocklin had just lost a close one on a field goal by a former soccer player from, I don't know, England, Yugoslavia, maybe even Peru.

Asked what he thought about the loss, Van Brocklin replied, "They ought to tighten the (expensive deleted) immigration laws in this country."

The torch never looked so good

I was working in India 37 years ago when I heard the hymn "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing" for the first time.

At an outdoor church attended by many of the American embassy personnel, the visiting minister from Harvard Divinity School, a snowy-capped, craggy-faced Methodist bishop, boomed the opening lines in a baritone voice, enriched by age and service: "Streams of mercy never ceasing, call for songs of loudest praise."

Those words and William Jefferson Clinton's inauguration mnemonically linked two merging streams of my life.

I am a partner in the generation that served in World War II, acknowledged by Newsweek in a cover story two weeks ago, "So Long, Soldier — the World War II Generation and How it Changed America." But I am also an older brother of the baby-boom generation. In fact, I have found a more comfortable home among baby-boomer activists than I have with the more status quo-protecting World War II generation that fought to save the world for democracy and fought just as diligently to deny it at home.

As a drum major for America's renewal, Bill Clinton is the defining nexus of the two generations. He is merging them into a triumphant river into which the streams of Jefferson's intellect, Franklin Roosevelt's egalitarianism and Kennedy's ecumenicalism seem to have flowed.

And he can "step," too. After "cooking" on sax with his soul friend, Ben E. King, the aggressively interracial band segued into "Your Momma Don't Dance and Your Daddy Don't Rock and Roll," and the 42nd president and his wife eased gently into a cool Lindy Hop. Unable to resist this gloriously funky moment in history, my wife, Louise, and I — members of the World War II generation — began jitterbugging at home with our baby-boomer presidential family on television.

It has been 32 years since a presidential inaugural address inspired me: I say presidential, because New York Gov. Mario Cuomo's first inaugural address in 1983 was as eloquently Lincolnian as John F. Kennedy's 1961 inaugural address was inspirationally brilliant.

Clinton borrowed liberally from the Past — as he should have. "People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to their ancestors," counseled Edmund Burke. Clinton reached back to Jefferson and adopted his use of the collective moral imperative — "Let us" Jefferson used it three times in his first inaugural address, Kennedy, seven times, Clinton, five times. "Let us blend biblical prophecy — Isaiah's "Come, let us reason together" — with the ruler-people covenant.

At the same time, Clinton offered us a clean vision of the sacrifices that this "new season of American renewal" will require: the reciprocity of service ("offer more opportunities to all and demand more responsibility from all") and no more free lunches ("It is time to break the bad habit of expecting something for nothing, from our government or from each other.")

I hope this means the death knell of the welfare system as we know it. The great abolitionist Frederick Douglass would have agreed: "Men may not get everything they pay for, but they must pay for everything they get."

At the ceremonial end, Bill Clinton's thematic splendor was packaged into a five-minute reprise by the audaciously poetic Maya Angelou. What a ba-a-ad sister.

She began with the resonance of her hymnal heritage ("I call you to my riverside, if you study war no more"), then she metaphorically linked the past, the present and the future: "A Rock, a River, a Tree." The passed torch never looked so good.

On a coldy crisp day, gentled by the sun, the majestic best of two generations came together — Maya Angelou, the grandmother's black woman poet, and Bill Clinton, the baby-boomer white male Arkansan. From this day forward, it can become a "Good morning" for all Americans.

Houston Livestock Show attracts Gray Countians

Eleven Future Farmers of America members from Gray County will join other 4-H and FFA members from throughout Texas for showing competition at the Houston Livestock Show, Feb. 20 through March 7 at the Astrohall.

Representing Gray County FFA are Bobby Carroll, Shonda Carroll, Melissa Coutts, Scotty Henderson, Shannon Hughes, David Potter, Matt Reeves, Michel Reeves and Jerry Thompson of Pampa; and Jenny Coutts and Julie Coutts of Groom. All will exhibit market barrows.

Representing Gray County 4-H at the show will be Megan Coutts, Kelby McClellan, Crystal Packard, Alan Parker, Eric Parker and Matt Rhine of Pampa; Craig Seely, Melody Seely, Mark Tucker, Tracy Tucker and Jason Winegeart of Lefors.

The exhibitors will compete in one of two divisions of the show — the junior show division. The other division, the open show, attracts exhibitors from the agricultural industry, who are primarily professional breeders and ranchers.

The junior show is expected to exceed 11,000 entries this year. A variety of animals shown in the junior division: market steers, market swine, market sheep, market poultry, beef and dairy heifers, breeding sheep, goats, commercial steers and breeding rabbits.

The four market animal categories (steers, sheep, swine and poultry) represent animals raised by the exhibitor as food sources. Top animals in each category are eligible for individual market auctions. Total money paid in 1992 at the four junior shows exceeded $3 million.

Tax-Aide program opens

AARP Tax-Aide program for older persons provides free tax help for low and moderate income taxpayers age 60 and over, sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.

Volunteer counselors trained in cooperation with the IRS will staff a counseling desk 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays through April 15 at Pampa Senior Citizens, 500 W. Francis.

The Tax-Aide service is designed to help older persons understand the various tax forms and take advantage of special provisions in the tax laws for retirement income. Counselors have been trained to prepare returns for older persons. Those needing help should bring their last year's returns and all tax-related materials.

Tax-Aide is a community service of AARP. For more information call Emie Wilkinson at 665-0356.

Body with a view, courtesy magnetic resonance imaging

By DR. ANDREW LITT
New York University School of Medicine

Physicians today are discovering safer, more detailed and increasingly versatile ways of "photographing" the brain through advances in the field of magnetic resonance imaging (MRI).

The brain, a complex, delicate organ shielded by a thick layer of bone, is not a naturally photogenic subject.

Photographing the brain through other scanning techniques, while often providing useful information, sometimes has been uncomfortable, may be potentially risky for the patient, and occasionally has yielded limited results.

But MRI uses the natural magnetic properties of the body's atoms to yield detailed pictures of the body's organs, without some of the drawbacks of older techniques involving X-rays.

MRI also has the potential to uncover information about the workings of the brain and how it processes and stores information that could someday be used to better understand and control ailments such as Alzheimer's Disease.

X-rays, including CT scans, work by passing radiation through a patient's body onto a film or imaging screen; dense tissue, such as bone, stops much of the radiation and thus shows clearly in the picture.

In MRI, the patient is placed within a doughnut-shaped machine that generates a strong magnetic field. The machine harmlessly disrupts the alignment of protons (subatomic particles) in the patient's body with a brief radio frequency pulse.

By measuring the effects of this disruption and analyzing those measurements by computer, the MRI machine produces an image.

Unlike CT scans which require X-ray exposure, the MRI process is able to create an image without the use of ionizing radiation.

MRI offers a number of other advantages in brain scanning. Unlike CT scans, it can image the brain from various angles. Also, it can measure various properties of brain matter, not just its density; for example, it can detect multiple sclerosis lesions that would be invisible on CT. And physicians can adjust the way the MRI computer analyzes the readings, depending on what information they need.

Because of its ability in detailing soft tissue, MRI also is supplanting invasive angiography (blood vessel imaging) in some cases, and is being used in the study of soft-tissue injuries often suffered by athletes around elbows, shoulders and knees.

In many cases, MRI can allow physicians to perform these scans without the contrast media injections required in some procedures to make blood vessels and soft tissue show up on X-rays or CT scans.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Man's wife thinks he's welchin' on his belchin'

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a disagreement over his belching — at least, that's the surface issue.

I have asked him to please say "excuse me" when he belches. He argues with me, saying that if he's in the next room or another room of the house, he doesn't see any reason to. I say that no matter where he is, if I can hear him, he should say "excuse me."

He finally agreed to a polite "excuse me" if we are in the same room.

He says I am trying to control him. I say it's a matter of basic courtesy and has absolutely nothing to do with controlling him. Our home has open doorways, and when he's in the next room, I can hear every sound, so out of respect for me, if he belches loudly, he should say "excuse me."

I am tired of talking to him about this. The etiquette books don't cover this. Thanks for any help you can give me. I'm sorry this is even an issue. There are so many more important things to worry about. Please don't use our last name.

IRKED IN BLUE SPRINGS, MO.

DEAR IRKED: This is a first. I'll go along with you on the matter of expecting a polite "excuse me" when your husband belches within hearing distance. However, I wouldn't call it a "surface issue" — it's more like a gut feeling.

DEAR ABBY: Please keep reminding people never to leave a small baby alone in a house where the family "pets" can get to it. Recently, right in our neighborhood, a 2-month-old baby was left on a couch, where it was mauled to death by three large German shepherds "pets."

The parents of the baby were devastated. Abby, please run that warning in your column often. It could avert a terrible tragedy.

MARTHA BROWN, HOUSTON

DEAR MARTHA: I have been advised that one dog is usually no threat to a child, but two dogs — and most certainly three — compose a "pack," and they can be vicious if left in the presence of a helpless child. Most people assume that their pets are incapable of attacking a child. Not true. The most docile pets have been known to turn on a child, unprovoked. After a tragedy of that kind occurs, the pet owners always say, "We never dreamed that our dog could ever be a danger to a child."

DEAR ABBY: When I was in Kunkle High School more than 60 years ago, I gave a book report on Woodrow Wilson. The only thing I remember was that his hobby was writing limericks.

I think the one he wrote about himself is a gem:

"For beauty I am not a star
"There are others more handsome by far
"But my face, I don't mind it,
"For I am behind it,
"It's the ones in front that I jar!"

WILMA KRISHER, WEST UNITY, OHIO

DEAR WILMA: I couldn't verify whether Woodrow Wilson wrote this or not. One of my staff remembers singing this as a camp song. Whatever, it's clever.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It is best not to request favors today from people whom you've just recently met and haven't established strong bonds of friendship with yet. It could kill the chance of a relationship.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful about inviting others to casually drop in and see you today unless you really mean it. This could invite more disruptions than you can handle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ideas or suggestions that you have never tested yourself shouldn't be recommended to others today. They might look good on paper, but fail miserably in execution.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Avoid taking gambles today that could affect your resources or someone else's. Lady Luck might be in the area, but she could be busy helping another out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A member of the opposite gender might come on rather strong today and, though his or her attention is flattering, you could be in trouble if this is the wrong person for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Relying too heavily upon your wit and charm to get you by today could be a mistake. It might work up to a point, but lose its impact when the going gets tough.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your hopes could be dashed today if they are built upon weak foundations. Erect your castle of expectation on bedrock, not shifting sands.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your behavior and motivations will be closely scrutinized by others today. Don't do anything foolish that could detract from your image.

Tigerettes return to the spotlight

Groom has 21-3 record

By DAN FROMM
Sports Writer

After amassing 29 wins during the 1991-92 season, the Groom Tigerettes dropped a 38-37 heart-breaker to Follett in the area round of the playoffs.

Coach Terry O'Dell, now in his second year, said his team remembers that loss and hopes it will help them advance even further this year. "I told them after that game that it was a lesson for us," O'Dell said. "We knew we could apply it to this season."

The application is working so far. The Tigerettes are 21-3 this season and 7-0 in district 10-1A.

According to O'Dell, the Tigerettes are still focusing on the immediate future, but they also have bigger things on their minds. They face losing their best player after this season and are hoping to make a lasting impression in girls basketball.

"Our goal for now is to get past the first game at regionals, but it's not out of our reach to beat Happy," O'Dell said. The Cowgirls lost in the regional finals last year and are 21-6 this season, 3-0 in district 13-1A.

"Last year we felt like we had a let down," O'Dell explained. "We're really trying not to look ahead as much this year."

With 50 wins under his belt in less than two full seasons, O'Dell says his team had to adapt quite a bit to a new strategy. "Groom had been successful before I got here, but my game plan was completely different than what they were used to. They had some real talented individuals, but I wanted to get everybody involved in the offense."

"Everybody bought into my plan from the start," he added. Now, the Tigerettes have three starters that average double figures in scoring. That's despite having a star post player in senior Karen Babcock, who was last year's district MVP.

Babcock has gone from averaging 19 points last season to 14 this season. But other players have more than picked up the scoring slack. Sophomore Misty Homen has gone from 10 last year to 14 this year and senior Marie Conrad has also jumped from six to 10.

Being able to win without having Babcock dominate the game is also an important stepping stone for the Tigerettes.

Around the rim

Babcock is headed to West Texas State University next fall and the basketball team will have to work hard to replace her.

"It's definitely going to hurt to lose her," O'Dell admitted. "But we've got a 6'1" freshman that's been playing some this year and she's going to be able to fill in well."

While he laughed at the mention of the word dynasty, O'Dell is serious about building a tradition at Groom.

"We've got some excellent young girls and this program is gonna have success for a long time to come," he said. "Our junior high program is awfully good and there are good players all the way down through the sixth grade."

"There's no pressure on us just because Karen (Babcock) is leaving. We don't feel like this is our last chance." But O'Dell does feel his team has a good chance to be very successful.

After a lopsided win over Kelton last Friday, O'Dell said the topic came up again. He told his team to remember what happened last year. "One of the younger players said, 'Yeah, but coach we've grown up since last year.' It's true," he said. "I think they've matured a lot from the end of last season."

O'Dell and the Tigerettes are hoping their maturity will make the difference in the upcoming post-season.

Player of the week

Gary Bryant scored 23 points in each of Kelton's district 11-1A games this week which resulted in two victories, putting the Lions back in the district race. Bryant, a senior, hit five three-pointers in their win over Groom Friday.

In her last two games, Fort Elliott's Deidre Dukes is averaging 24 points, 11.5 rebounds and four assists. The Lady Cougars' senior is the first repeat player of the week.

Game of the week

White Deer (11-7; 2-1) vs. Shamrock (14-10; 2-1)

Quality not quantity is the rule in district 1-1A basketball. With just four teams in the district, the importance of each game is magnified. The first half of district play is now over, just 10 days after it started; two teams are 2-1 and the other two may be too late.

White Deer lost to Shamrock last Friday, 69-47, and tomorrow they'll face off again in what could decide the district champion. The Bucks, after winning a barn-burner Tuesday against Booker, are looking to take control of the district. Shamrock will try to stop them.

"Whoever wins is gonna be one of the teams in the playoffs," Bucks coach Clay Richerson said. "We all know that each game is bigger than the last. Our goal is to make the playoffs."

They can make a big stride towards reaching that goal with a win tomorrow night, but they'll have to overcome a lot, including the memory of last week's 22-point Buck bashing. "They got hot in the second quarter and hit some three-pointers. They're a team that works in spurts and they just started a landslide we couldn't stop," Richerson said.

Shamrock coach Mike Prescott agreed with Richerson. "We can be cold and all of a sudden we play well and that's something we've struggled with all year," he said. "The up-side of that is that we can get down 15 or 20 points and still get back in a game. Our kids have shown a lot of character in that respect."

White Deer's weakness may be too much consistency. The Bucks have five players that average between eight and 12 points per game, but no real star scorer.

Richerson feels a balanced scoring attack helps his team. "If you have that many different guys scoring, you're gonna put enough points on the board," he said. "But you still have to play tough defense."

The Bucks are going to have to do more than that Friday. "We're gonna have to play the game of our lives," Richerson said. Prescott thinks the game will be a tough one. "They're a lot better team than last game's score indicated," he said. "We played real well against them at home and I think they're going to shoot better in their own gym."

But regardless of the outcome, Prescott said his team isn't placing too much importance on this game. "Of course, it's an important game for us, but you're gonna win and lose in basketball and you can't look back either way," he said.

For Richerson and the Bucks, there's more at stake than just a district game. The Bucks haven't had a winning season in many years, according to the coach, and although they've already assured themselves of that, they want to win big. "They know they're making history," Richerson said. "They all want to be a part of something special... something that hasn't happened in quite some time."

Friday's other area games:

Boys

Miami (8-14; 4-2) vs. Follett (17-4; 5-0)

Follett is in sole position of first place in district 10-1A.

McLean (4-17; 3-4) at Samnorwood (12-8; 5-2)

Christian Looney is coming off a 42-point effort Tuesday.

Kelton (14-5; 5-2) vs. Hedley (3-16; 1-6)

The Lions have won three straight, averaging 83 points per game.

Fort Elliott (16-6; 4-1) vs. Higgins (3-12; 1-5)

Travis Goad has 27 points and eight assists in his last three games.

Lefors (6-8; 1-6) vs. Groom (12-9; 6-1)

The Tigers won the first meeting 73-47.

Wheeler (8-17; 0-2) at Wellington (13-6; 2-0)

The Mustangs are looking for a win in the second half of district.

Canadian (9-9; 0-2) at Clarendon (17-9; 0-2)

The Wildcats edged Clarendon 49-48 in their first meeting.

Girls

Miami (10-9; 1-3) vs. Follett

The Warriorettes won their first district game Tuesday.

White Deer (9-12; 0-3) vs. Shamrock (10-11; 1-2)

The Does are still looking for their first district win.

McLean (10-11; 5-2) at Samnorwood (11-10; 3-4)

McLean rebounded from two straight losses with a win Tuesday.

Kelton (2-15; 1-6) vs. Hedley (11-8; 5-2)

Keli Crockett and Jennifer Kirkland combined for 27 points Tuesday.

Fort Elliott (18-4; 2-1) vs. Higgins (7-10; 1-4)

Deidre Dukes is this week's player of the week.

Lefors (2-12; 0-7) vs. Groom (21-3; 7-0)

The Tigerettes were 6-1 in the month of January.

Wheeler (12-11; 1-1) at Wellington (8-11; 2-0)

Wheeler's Misty Glassey is averaging 11 points in her last two games.

Canadian (12-7; 0-2) at Clarendon (7-17; 1-1)

Canadian won the first game 63-33, behind Misty Risley's 17 points.

Southwest Outdoors

By Mel Phillips

Nature's simple pleasures attract interesting people

A good way to keep track of how your life is going is to recall some of the interesting characters and acquaintances that have crossed your path. One of the real pleasures of writing an outdoor column is the opportunity to introduce my readers to some of the colorful and exciting people who have translated their love for the great outdoors into a full time business. Most could probably make more money by working for some huge company, but they have exchanged the security and a fluorescent tan for the simple pleasures that can only be found in nature.

Permit me to introduce just some of the characters who will be attending OUTDOOR WORLD 93 at the Amarillo Civic Center on Valentine weekend.

Have you ever dreamed of catching a huge fish that would lead to fame and fortune?

When you visit this huge sportsman show, be sure to attend one of the great fishing seminars by big bass expert and professional guide MARK STEVENSON. In November of 1986 Mark caught the Texas state record 17.67 lb. largemouth bass on Lake Fork and ushered in a wave of enthusiasm that has resulted in the best fishing in the history of that sport. Mark is married to BARBARA COOK STEVENSON, a national champion on the Bass N Gal circuit. Both outstanding anglers will be giving daily seminars on the secrets of catching big bass and will offer tips on how to have a successful trip to the world's best bass lake, Lake Fork.

If going to the mountains is one of your passions, don't miss the wilderness survival seminars hosted by "Papa Bear" WHITMORE from Wheat Ridge, Colorado. Papa Bear is one of a kind and I guarantee that you will learn some great survival techniques while sitting back and listening to one of the great story tellers of our time.

If you just want to learn how to catch more crappie, the seminars by professional crappie angler WALLEY MARSHALL will unlock the seasonal patterns of this delicious and plentiful fish. Mr. Marshall spends over 200 days each year either catching crappie or giving seminars about his favorite fish. His recipes for cooking fish are worth the price of admission to Outdoor World.

For only $2.50 the kids will love catching tasty rainbow trout from the indoor trout pond.

MEL GILLIS, of Alaska Trophy Hunting and Fishing headquartered in Anchorage, will have your booking the next flight for "the best hunting and fishing in the world." He loves the North country and should be right at home in this part of Texas during the Valentine weekend. Snow, ice, or a sunny day, our new Alaskan friend will see the largest selection of RV's, boats, campers, and vacation destinations that have even been assembled in West Texas.

Baseball banishes Schott for one year

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Baseball banished Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott for one year, saying in its strongest tone ever that racial and ethnic slurs will not be tolerated.

The 64-year-old Schott, who has controlled the Reds since December 1984, also was fined $25,000 Wednesday for remarks the ruling executive council said "brought substantial disrepute and embarrassment to the game."

Schott, the fifth owner given a major penalty by baseball in the past half-century, agreed not to contest the sanctions in court. The suspension will begin March 1, but she will be reinstated on Nov. 1 if she complies with the sanctions, which call for her to attend multicultural training programs.

"There should be no question that language of the type repeatedly and commonly used by Mrs. Schott is offensive and unacceptable to people of all races and ethnic backgrounds," the 10-member council said in its unanimous decision.

Following a two-month investigation, the council said more than 10 people provided evidence that Schott used offensive language. The council concluded she referred to blacks as "nigger, lazy nigger, damn nigger and dumb, lazy nigger," often while addressing employees of the club. It said there was substantial evidence that Schott referred to Jews as "Jew bastards" and "dirty Jews," and stated that "Hitler had the right idea for them but went too far." The council also said "Schott commonly referred to people of Japanese origin as 'Japs.'"

Schott did not have any public reaction to the decision, issued after 8 1/2 hours of meetings at O'Hare International Airport. Her lawyer, Robert Bennett, negotiated changes in the deal with baseball's lawyers on Tuesday night and Wednesday.

Schott, according to Bennett, was "very upset and very depressed — I don't mean in a clinically sort of way — that she has been singled out."

"She has apologized for what she admittedly has said on occasion," the lawyer said. "She feels many others in baseball — A to Z — made similar comments."

Bennett said Schott can remain as managing general partner, continue to earn revenue and participate in major policy decisions. However, she cannot be involved in the team's day-to-day operations and she cannot sit in the owner's on-field box. But she can sit in the executive suite in Riverfront Stadium.

Since Schott's remarks became public in November, when depositions were released in a lawsuit filed by former Reds controller Tim Sabo, baseball has had to defend itself against charges of institutional racism.

"Mrs. Schott's remarks reflect the most base and demeaning type of racial and ethnic stereotyping ... indicating an insensitivity that cannot be accepted or tolerated by anyone in baseball," said executive council chairman Bud Selig, the president of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Sharon Jones, a former Oakland Athletics executive assistant who was one of Schott's accusers, said the punishment was "too little, too late."

Henry Aaron, the career home run leader and a senior vice president with the Atlanta Braves, also thought the council was lenient. "I know Marge is laughing all the way to wherever it is she is going," he said. "She won this one. I am very much disappointed. That just gives everybody else, the owners, the right to do and say what they want. Nobody is going to attack one of their own peers. It's a country club. It sends out a message that we're still living in a captivity world where blacks are treated no better than 20 or 30 years ago."

Others thought the penalties were appropriate. Abraham H. Foxman, national director of the Anti-Defamation League, said baseball's "strong stand against bigotry and prejudice is to be commended."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who has threatened opening day boycotts unless baseball improves minority hiring, called the decision "a responsible step." But he warned there could still be boycotts unless other teams hire more minorities.

Pampa hosts Caprock in district basketball

Pampa meets Caprock in District 1-4A basketball doubleheader Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The girls' game begins at 6 p.m., followed by the boys' contest at 7:30 p.m.

Pampa and Caprock are tied for first place in the boys' standings with 5-1 records.

Pampa and Caprock both have 4-4 district marks after the Lady Harvesters edged Dumas, 32-30, and the Lady Longhorns lost to Randall, 79-36, Tuesday night.

This is the last homecourt game for the Lady Harvesters.

Bird's number to be retired tonight

BOSTON (AP) — This night, like so many others, belongs to Larry Bird.

Even in retirement, the rural Indiana native whose exceptional talent forced him to sacrifice his cherished privacy can draw a full house. Boston Garden will be packed when his number is retired at a star-filled ceremony tonight.

Splashes celebrations clash with Bird's down-to-earth personality. He'll have to put up with the splashiest of any of the other 15 Celtic players whose jerseys were retired.

It will be a separate event with a separate admission, not held at halftime or as a preliminary to a game. The list of luminaries is long.

Magic Johnson is the only opponent expected to attend. Bob Costas will be the emcee.

Agassi advances in Volvo Tournament

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two matches into his season, Andre Agassi already feels he's off to a better start than he was last year.

On Wednesday night, he tuned up against Patrick McEnroe, using scorching ground strokes to beat him 6-0, 6-2 in the second round of the Volvo-San Francisco tournament.

"This is the most prepared I've been starting a tournament and especially the year," said Agassi, top seed in the $300,000 tourney.

Last year, Agassi started off badly and got worse, dropping out of the top 10 rankings for the first time since May 1988. He fell all the way to 17th last April before regrouping to win his first Grand Slam title at Wimbledon.

The difference between now and then is a more settled routine and more discipline, said Agassi, currently ninth in the world.

"I've been working really hard the past few weeks and giving myself as good a chance as possible to win," he said. "It's coming together."

Agassi seemed to have it all together against McEnroe, who struggled with his serve throughout the match. Using his power strokes to move his opponent around the court, Agassi never faced a break point during the 64-minute match.

McEnroe got only 31 percent of his first serves in and double faulted six times, including once at break point with the second set tied 2-2.

PHS wrestlers head for state mat meet

Four Pampa High wrestlers left today for El Paso and the Texas High School Wrestling Championships.

Chad Chairez, Chris Whitney, Chris Fox and David Borshiem all earned state berths after qualifying last weekend at the Region I Tournament in Amarillo.

Chairez and Whitney, both seniors, captured championship medals in their respective 130-pound and heavy-weight classes.

After losing his opening-round match, Fox advanced to the 180-pound finals where he lost to Amarillo High's Jay McCown by a pin.

Borshiem, at 145, defeated Eric Garner of Boys Ranch, 5-3, in a wrestle-back after earlier defeating Jeff Willis of Dumas in 2:28 of the third-place match.

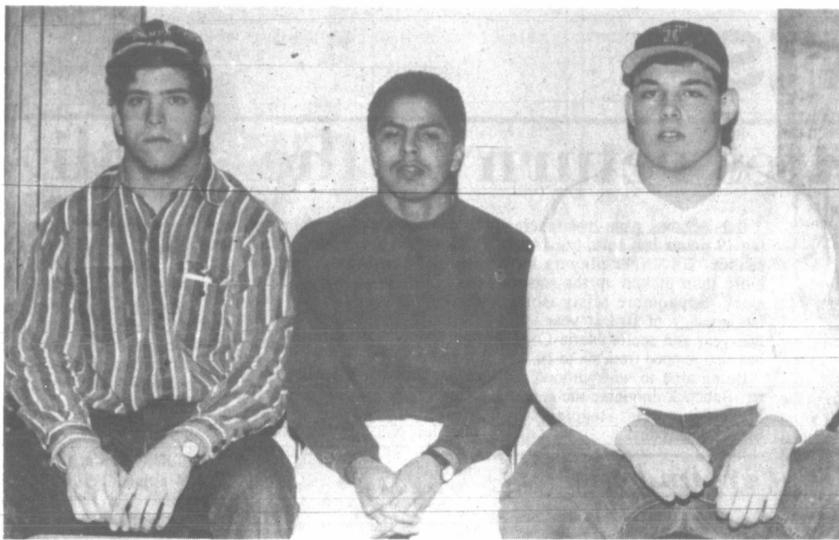

The top two in each weight class qualified for the state meet, which will be held in the El Paso Convention Center.

This will be the second straight trip to state for Chairez, who won the 125-pound title as a junior last season. Chairez, who defeated Elias Gutierrez of Boys Ranch, 2-0, in the regional finals, posted an 18-2 dual record this season with his only losses coming in tournament finals at Liberal, Kan. and Holly, Colo.

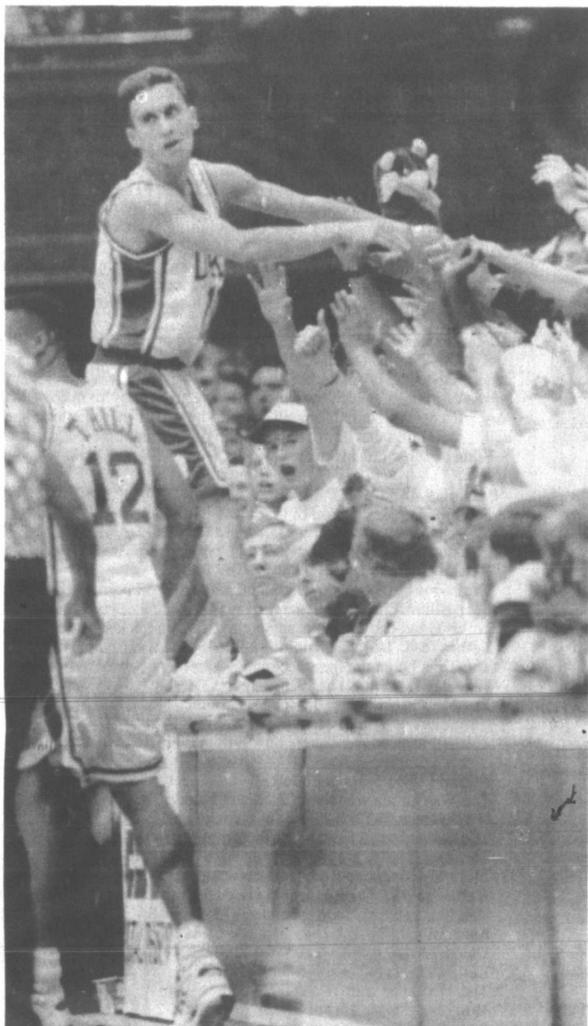

Chairez was unbeaten (15-0) in Texas matches. Whitney was 14-1 overall and was also unbeaten (9-0) in Texas duals. Fox posted a 7-2 record while Borshiem, a senior, was 6-3.

Fox, a junior, is the only Pampa grappler to wrestle in Friday's first-round action. The other Pampa wrestlers drew first-round byes.

The finals are scheduled for Saturday night.

Duke downs North Carolina; Beane hits clutch foul shots in Kansas State victory

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

No one should have any problem imagining a big shot by Bobby Hurley paving the way for another victory by Duke. Now, clutch free throws by Kansas State's Anthony Beane? That's another matter.

But as sure as Hurley broke a temporary scoring drought with a key 3-pointer in the Blue Devils' victory over North Carolina, Beane put aside his 66-percent efficiency from the line to give the Wildcats a victory over Oklahoma.

"I was teasing him that my sister can shoot free throws better," Kansas State coach Dana Altman said after Beane gave the Wildcats a 62-61 victory over the Sooners Wednesday night. "He looked over and let me know everything was going to be all right."

For Beane, it was a matter of positive thinking in the face of a negative number.

"I was as confident as I could get," the 5-foot-10 point guard said. "When I stepped to the line, I had it in my mind that I was going to make those two, no matter what."

In went the first. In went the second. Three seconds later, it was over and thousands of jubilant fans poured onto the court at Manhattan, Kan., to celebrate the defeat of the 16th-ranked Sooners.

At Durham, N.C., Hurley hadn't scored a point in the second half and No. 5 Duke was clinging to a three-point lead over No. 6 North Carolina. Then he popped a long one to start a 20-9 final push that led the Blue Devils to an 81-67 victory over the Tar Heels.

"My eyes kind of lit up when they went to that 1-3-1 zone because I figured that the ball would come around to me and I would have an open shot," said Hurley, who finished with 20 points and seven assists. "Those are the kind of shots I like to take when we're looking to gain the momentum."

As the ball went through the net, Cameron Indoor Stadium erupted. It was Hurley's fourth 3-pointer of the game, his only field goals.

"When the game is on the line like that and Bobby takes an open 3-pointer, you can pretty much count it," Grant Hill said. "He just gets his feet and body square. He has made so many of those big shots for us."

Elsewhere in games involving the ranked, it was No. 2 Kentucky 87, Mississippi State 63; No. 4 Cincinnati 98, Austin Peay 61; No. 11 Vanderbilt 76, South Carolina 72; Villanova 82, No. 15 Pittsburgh 76, and No. 19 Purdue 62, Ohio State 57.

Kansas State (14-3, 4-1 Big Eight) got the ball after Terry Evans of Oklahoma (14-6, 2-3) missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw with 20.3 seconds to go.

Following a timeout, Beane brought the ball up court and tried a 15-footer that was blocked by Pete Lewis. During the struggle for the loose ball, a foul was called on Angelo Hamilton, sending Beane to the line for a one-and-one.

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs — perhaps mindful of his team's 104-75 and 117-76 drubbings of Kansas State last season — said the Sooners will take a measure of revenge when the teams meet again on Feb. 23.

"We're going to beat the hell out of them in Norman," he said. "You mark that down. I don't give a damn how good they are."

Askia Jones led Kansas State with 17 points. Beane had seven points and five assists. He was 2 for 2 from the line. Oklahoma got 19 points from Hamilton and 16 from Evans, whose only miss in four foul shots was the one that helped doom the Sooners.

Eric Montross led North Carolina with 22 points and 13 rebounds. But he spoke afterward of his respect for Hurley.

"That's a clutch player for you," Montross said. "He's able to come in at the end and make some tough shots."

Thomas Hill added 16 points and Grant Hill 15 for Duke (16-3, ACC 5-3), which canned 12 of 13 free throws in the last 1:37.

George Lynch added 17 points for the Tar Heels (17-3, 6-2).

No. 2 Kentucky 87, Mississippi St. 63

The Wildcats (16-1, 7-1 SEC) proved rude hosts to the Bulldogs (11-8, 3-5), winning on the strength of 23-2 and 14-6 surges. Travis Ford made three 3-pointers in a 23-2 first-half run and finished with 21 for Kentucky.

After Mississippi State closed to 56-50 with 10:37 left, the Wildcats went on a 14-6 spurt.

Jamal Mashburn added 18 points as Kentucky won its fifth straight game. Marcus Grant led Mississippi State with 17 points.

No. 4 Cincinnati 98, Austin Peay 61

The Bearcats (17-1), getting 31 points from Nick Van Exel, won their 14th straight game while handing the Governors their 13th straight loss. Van Exel made four 3-pointers to become Cincinnati's career leader with 114.

Rick Yutl led Austin Peay (3-15), a loser of 21 straight road games, with 19 points. Cincinnati scored the first 13 points and forced Austin Peay into 14 turnovers in the first half.

No. 11 Vanderbilt 76, South Carolina 72

The homestanding Commodores (17-3, 7-1 SEC) won their sixth straight game, thanks to Billy McCaffrey. He scored six of his 27 points in the final 55 seconds.

The Gamecocks (8-10, 4-5) trailed 45-34 at halftime, but put themselves back in the game in the second half with a zone defense and the Commodores' worst shooting half of the season.

Rice cooks as Miami rolls past Atlanta in NBA action

By The Associated Press

Glen Rice was on, and all of a sudden the Miami Heat were gone.

Rice hit 17 of 22 shots from the floor and 10 of 11 from the free-throw line and scored 18 of his 45 points in the fourth quarter when the Heat outscored Atlanta 33-13 in a 116-96 victory Wednesday night.

"They could have cooked on his head, he was so hot," teammate Rony Seikaly said of Rice, who missed his career high by one point.

"When you've got a guy as hot as I was, you've got to get him the ball," Rice said.

The Heat did a good job of getting Rice the ball in the final quarter, when he hit all six of his shots and 5 of 6 free throws.

The 13 points in the last quarter by Atlanta were less than any opponent has scored in any period this season against the Heat, who also set a franchise record for fewest points allowed in a fourth quarter.

Atlanta hit just 4 of 22 shots in the final period, while Miami was 11 for 15. The Heat also claimed a 14-6 rebounding edge, with Rice grabbing five of his 14 rebounds in the quarter.

"It's just the flow of the game," Hawks coach Bob Weiss said. "Somebody gets hot and somebody gets cold. Boom, it's over."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Charlotte 129, Philadelphia 118; Cleveland 108, Milwaukee 100; Houston 119, Dallas 102; Utah 100, Denver 96; Phoenix 122, Minnesota 102; and Chicago 107, Sacramento 88.

After Duane Ferrell scored the opening basket of the fourth quarter to give the Hawks an 85-83 lead, Rice and Bibbo Coles each had six points during a 12-2 run.

With the score 96-90, Rice scored 12 more points as the Heat used a 18-4 spurt to pull ahead 114-94 with just over a minute to play.

Dominique Wilkins, the NBA's second leading scorer with a 28.4 average, had 34 for Atlanta and has scored over 30 points in seven of his last 10 games.

Suns 122, Timberwolves 102
Phoenix won its 15th game without a loss to Minnesota and extended its home winning streak to 13.

Danny Ainge scored 19 points for the Suns, including a spectacular 3-pointer to end the first half. He put Phoenix ahead 61-37 as time expired, getting rid of the ball with a twisting, shotput motion while falling out of bounds.

Charles Barkley had 17 points and 14 rebounds for the Suns, who are 32-9 at the season's halfway point.

The Timberwolves were led by Christian Laettner and Luc Longley with 16 points each.

Jazz 100, Nuggets 96

Utah edged visiting Denver behind Karl Malone's 28 points, Jeff Malone's 25 and 22 by John Stockton, including the go-ahead basket with 40 seconds left and two free throws with 7.8 seconds remaining.

Stockton's pull-up jumper from 14 feet followed two missed shots and offensive rebounds by Tyrone Corbin and Mark Eaton. The basket gave Utah, which trailed by as many as eight points in the fourth quarter, a 97-96 edge.

The Nuggets' Chris Jackson missed a 3-point attempt with 25 seconds left, and Stockton's two free throws gave the Jazz a three-point lead.

Marcus Liberty had 20 points and 13 rebounds for the Nuggets, who won five of their six previous games after a 10-25 start.

Super Bowl XXVII drew biggest audience in television history

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — America's team is now America's most-watched team.

On Tuesday, the national Nielsen ratings revealed that the 1993 Super Bowl had the largest viewership in the history of television, an estimated 133.4 million people.

That's about 6.4 million more than watched the 1986 Super Bowl, the previous record-holder. Both games were on NBC. Estimates were based on figures supplied by the A.C. Nielsen Co., and researched jointly by NBC and Nielsen.

The Super Bowl drew a

Nielsen rating number of 45.1 and a 66 share, the highest marks since CBS did 45.8 and 66 for the New York Giants-Denver Broncos Super Bowl in 1987.

NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol attributed the ratings success, in part, to Michael Jackson's halftime show, which gave NBC a 45.5 rating during the half hour from 8-8:30 p.m. EST.

"While the game didn't stay as close as we would have liked, the record-breaking viewership was beyond our expectations," Ebersol said. "A significant factor in the ratings success was that Michael Jackson's performance held the audience at halftime."

It also helped that while Dallas wound up winning 52-17, the Cowboys' halftime lead of 28-10 was not yet a total runaway.

Last year's Super Bowl on CBS did a 40.3 rating and 61 share. The all-time ratings record for a Super Bowl was 49.1 by CBS for the 1982 San Francisco-Cincinnati game, but there were only about 81.5 million TV households in America then.

Each ratings point now represents 1 percent of 93.1 million TV homes, meaning that about 42 million U.S. homes had their TV's tuned to the Super Bowl, another all-time record, NBC said.

The share represents the percentage of TV's in actual use at the time.

The old record-holder for total viewership also was a blowout, the Chicago Bears' 46-10 victory over New England in '86, and it was watched by an estimated 127 million people.

Of the all-time top 10 most-watched shows, only one is not a Super Bowl. That's the final episode of M-A-S-H on Feb. 28, 1983, seen by an estimated 121.6 million people, now fourth all-time.

The Super Bowl gave NBC an average rating of 15.1 for the week and its first weekly Nielsen victory since Aug. 3, during its telecast of the Barcelona Olympics.

ABC was second with 12.4, and CBS trailed the big three at 11.6.

Average advertising rates for the Super Bowl were estimated at $850,000-$900,000 per 30-second unit. The cost of units for next year's Super Bowl, which has yet to be awarded to a network, will be based on this year's ratings, as well as the marketplace.

"It was a great example of teamwork between the NFL, Michael Jackson and NBC, and we can all be happy with the results," Ebersol said.

The first full half hour of the game, from 6:30-7 p.m. EST, was rated at 43.5.

The next half hour was 45.0, and the highest-rated half hour was the one just before halftime, 7:30-8 p.m., at 46.1.

The 30 minutes that included halftime, which was dominated by Jackson's mini-rock concert, had 45.5, the same as the next half hour. The 9-9:30 p.m. half hour was 45.3, and the final 15 minutes of the game until about 9:45 drew 44.8 as the Nielsen numbers held up well despite the lopsided score.

The postgame show from about 9:45-10:15 p.m. was rated at 32.2, leading in to the new NBC police drama, "Homicide," which got a healthy 17.9 rating and 31 share for the hour starting at 10:23 p.m. EST.

Meteorologist Steve McCauley demonstrates wind motion to fifth grade students at Wilson Elementary on Jan. 28.

Meteorologist delivers stormy lecture

Fifth grade students at Wilson Elementary School were treated to a "windy" weather discussion on Friday by meteorologist Steve McCauley.

He briefed students on the origin of types of weather patterns — specifically tornadoes — and showed them slides and videos of storm formation and activity.

Students were impressed by the size and magnitude of the heavenly storms. They repeatedly "oohed" and "aahed" at the pictures of swirling masses of air which, as they saw, caused so much earthly destruction.

Tornadoes love flat land, he said, demonstrating by slide photographs, the location of "tornado alley" smack dab in the middle of America. Plainview is the tornado capital of Texas and a spot about halfway between Oklahoma City, Okla. and Enid, Okla. is the tornado capital of the world, he continued.

Making his own prognostication, McCauley predicts a turbulent spring: "If El Niño continues, it's gonna be a wild spring."

The unusually warm Pacific waters coupled with the cooling effects of Mt. Pinatubo (1' to 2') have already produced an abundance of rain, snow and ice for the Panhandle.

Forecasting models, he said, depend on multiple mathematical equations which may be calculated lightning fast on modern computers. Different models serve different sections of the country more accurately. Doppler radar makes a difference in the accuracy of forecasting because it can "see" wind and night time skies as if it were day, he explained.

McCauley earned his undergraduate degree at Purdue University and his master's degree at Texas Tech University. He explained to the gathered 10- and 11-year olds the necessity of studying math in order to have a career in meteorology.
