Osby a positive image on high school campus

The favorite hat of the student body president at Pampa High, a hat he wears frequently to school, bears the message, "Positive Black Man."

"It has a strong meaning behind it to me," Osby, a senior at Pampa High, said recently. "To me, it means someone who has character, who doesn't drink or smoke or do drugs ... I've seen the aftereffects of what happened to young teenagers, and I would just prefer not to do any of (those self-destructive habits)."

"I'm just somebody that is not out there doing bad," Osby noted. "I'm not a perfect angel, by any means."

Asked to describe a negative black man, the 19-year-old noted that he is "someone who's always cutting up" — a troublemaker, Osby said.

Students and faculty at Pampa High say the racial identity of Osby has not been an issue at the school, because he is fair toward all students and gets along with virtually everyone.

"Race is no problem, so far," Osby noted. "And everybody else just sees me as a good person. Not for what color I am, but for what I am."

However, Osby said the wearing of the hat points to a continuing overemphasis on racial identity in evaluating human beings. In the best of all possible worlds, he confided, he would prefer to wear a hat proclaiming himself to be a "Positive Man" rather than a "Positive Black Man."

It appears that Osby already has succeeded at presenting himself just as he would like to be. The first black president of the student body in the history of Pampa High, he has a reputation of being a smilemaker for everyone at the school.

Osby's entire face lights up when he smiles, and his smiles are contagious. The affable Osby estimates that he greets 600 students a day — more than half of the student population at Pampa High — with a cheerful salutation such as "Good morning" or query such as "How's it going?"

"If I can make somebody else smile, it makes me happy," the 19-year-old noted cheerfully.

In the fall of this school year, Osby made a lot of students smile when he persuaded the Pampa High administration to liberalize a long-standing rule that had prohibited the wearing of hats inside the school building by students.

About 450 students at the school had signed a petition, submitted to them by the student council, that sought the right to wear a hat inside the school, Osby recalled. The new policy permits students to wear hats in the hallways or in the cafeteria, but not in the classroom. The hats should be either caps or hats that have a bill or cowboy hats, said Daniel Coward, principal of Pampa High.

Osby said the success of the petition drive has demonstrated to students that a student council can exert influence over the policies at the campus. Before the hat rule liberalization, he said, many students were skeptical about what the student council could accomplish.

The only other issue that Osby said he has identified at Pampa High this school year relates to the amount of time permitted for lunch. Many students want the lunch period increased from 50 minutes to a full hour, he said.

"Yes, sir," Osby replied, when asked whether he supports 10 additional minutes for lunch period. At present, he said, "you have to run to your car to get to the restaurant before everyone else does" in order to finish lunch in the time allowed for it.

Regardless of whether the student council is successful with this second proposal — and the faculty sponsor of the council, Gail Cole, is among those who opposes taking 10 minutes from the advisory period for the sake of longer lunches, since she says that time is needed to prepare students for the exit-level TAAS academic skills test — Osby has earned a lot of praise from administrators and faculty at the school.

"Of the three (student body presidents) I have worked with, Jerry is the best, for the simple reason that he has the time to do the job," Cole noted. She estimated that during the fall Osby devoted at least five to six hours a week toward performing his duties as student body president.

"I really like Jerry," Cole said. "He's enthusiastic and he's easy to work with ... He gets along with everybody."

"Very good, super," pronounced Coward, when asked about Osby's performance as student body president. "I am very proud of him. He has accepted that responsibility very seriously and I think he's done a marvelous job of taking the students' interests at heart."

Does being president of a student body whet Osby's appetite for becoming president of the entire United States at some later date? Apparently not. "This is as far as I'm going with politics," Osby confided with a smile and a chuckle. "Politics to me is just a bunch of talk ... If you want to do something, then do it, don't just beat around the bush with it."

Noting that he believes there is too much empty rhetoric in politics, Osby recalled that during the spring 1992 campaign for student government, he did not make any promises he was unable to fulfill.

His campaign pledge, he recalled, was that "If we can make you happy, then I feel we've accomplished something."

Has Osby been successful at honoring that campaign pledge? "So far," he replied, "everyone's happy ... But we're just half a semester through (the school year)."

It would not be accurate to describe Osby as a political ideologue. His presidency, in fact, is reminiscent of the campaign button message of Dwight Eisenhower — "I Like Ike." At Pampa High, everyone seems to like Jerry.

"He's got the hat rule changed — that's pretty good," said senior Sean Hardman, who wears baseball and football hats to school.

Clinton: Budget cuts before tax increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today backed away from a controversial freeze on Social Security cost-of-living increases to help shrink the huge budget deficit.

White House officials said a freeze was highly unlikely, which increases the likelihood the administration will go for what has been the leading alternative: taxing more of the Social Security benefits paid to the higher-income elderly.

Retired couples with incomes above $32,000 — and individuals with incomes above $25,000 — now must pay income taxes on 50 percent of their Social Security benefits. That level most likely would be increased — to about 85 percent — in the Clinton economic plan.

Clinton was meeting with his economic advisers again this afternoon. Before asking Americans to pay higher taxes, Clinton this week will seek to prove his credentials as a budget cutter, starting with his own staff, Vice President Al Gore says.

Clinton met Sunday with members of the Cabinet-level National Economic Council to review spending cuts, tax increases and a jobs-producing economic stimulus package.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said increasing corporate taxes was one option under consideration. The current corporate tax is 34 percent.

She also said Clinton is considering an increase in the minimum wage, currently $4.25 an hour. It was last raised in 1991.

White House Communications Director George Stephanopoulos said today that it was "highly unlikely" that Clinton would call for freezing Social Security cost-of-living raises.

"That's something he never wanted to do," Stephanopoulos said on ABC's "Good Morning America," blaming unsubstantiated leaks for causing an uproar.

The president will present his plans to Congress in his State of the Union address Feb. 17, but the administration planned in advance to highlight its budget-cutting zeal.

"You're going to see announcements this coming week that will demonstrate quite clearly that the experience Bill Clinton has in balanced budgets is being brought to bear in weeding out the unnecessary wasteful kind of spending that's just been allowed to go on for too long," Gore said.

"Then we're going to ask those who benefited the most from the last 12 years, unfairly, to pay their fair share," he told interviewers on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Gore did not specify the cuts but said they would make it "unmistakably clear that we have been wrestling with the guts of these very difficult decisions."

A senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the first announcement, probably Tuesday, would focus on reducing the White House staff. Details of cuts elsewhere in government will follow on subsequent days, the official said.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that about 20 lower-level workers in the White House office that deals with letters, telephone calls and other public communication already have been given layoff notices.

The Washington Times, quoting unidentified sources in today's editions, said the administration is drawing up a $3 million supplemental appropriations measure to pay for 50 additional White House positions that would be given to political supporters. No further details were available.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said Clinton is going through the programs himself "in excruciating detail" and would not approve cuts that will hurt the poor or middle class.

"The president is asking detailed questions. Who's this going to hurt if we cut it? Who's going to gain? Is this something we need? And he takes his pen and he crosses it out. This is a budget-cutting president. ... But he's doing it very carefully," Reich said.

He predicted "fairly dramatic cuts ... anywhere from 25 percent, 20 percent" at the White House.

Meanwhile, Republicans suggested Clinton could most effectively reduce spending by scrapping his economic stimulus program, which they said is no longer needed.

Pampan gets gift of heart

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

A week before Valentine's Day, Cupid has proved to be a lifesaver.

Pampa resident Larry Morse finally received the heart donation and heart transplant operation he needed. And his wife, Beverly, is overjoyed.

"This is the best Valentine's gift that I could get," Mrs. Morse said Sunday. "I'm so thankful that things are going so well."

The heart transplant operation occurred early Sunday morning at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston.

Morse, 47, is in the intensive care unit recovery room at St. Luke's and unable to comment.

Mrs. Morse said he is expected to remain at St. Luke's for three more months before returning to Pampa.

The Rev. Lyndon Glaesman, pastor of the Moses' congregation at Calvary Baptist Church, said he was pleased by the successful operation. "When he gets home, that will be a Praise-the-Lord day that this church has not seen in a long time," Glaesman said.

Mrs. Morse said she plans to leave Pampa the latter part of this week to visit her husband.

Morse, a warehouse employee at IRI International Corp. and Pampa resident for about 20 years, has been in the Houston hospital since October. He has been suffering from congestive heart failure.

The crisis facing the Moses triggered much compassion and generosity in town, with offers of financial help from friends. In December, the Glaesman established a checking account fund at First National Bank to help pay for Morse's medical expenses as well as travel expenses incurred by the couple.

Mrs. Morse said today that about $1,000 has been donated toward that fund.

Brown settles overdue tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Ron Brown scurried to settle an overdue tax bill last month after failing to pay a part-time housekeeper's Social Security taxes, but the White House said today a "common sense" standard should apply to such cases.

George Stephanopoulos, President Clinton's communication director, said the question of employing illegal aliens and payment of required taxes is being asked of "all people who are coming forward for all nominations."

However, he said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that "we have to have a common sense standard" when it comes to such hiring and taxes.

Brown acknowledged the tax oversight in response to questions Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." He said he hadn't thought any Social Security taxes were due because the housekeeper worked for him only about three hours a week.

The revelation came as the administration continued to search for an attorney general after the first two choices were withdrawn because of controversies.

Corporate lawyer Zoe Baird two weeks ago withdrew her bid to become the first woman attorney general after being pressed about hiring two illegal immigrants for child care and failing to pay proper taxes.

Then New York federal judge Kimba Wood removed herself from consideration for the job after it was learned she had hired, though legally, an undocumented worker as a baby sitter.

Brown said he had never hired an illegal immigrant for domestic chores. Dee Dee Myers, Clinton's press secretary, called Brown's problem a "moot point" and said it was a different scenario from that which forced Baird to step aside.

The White House has sought to draw a distinction between Brown's case and that of both Wood and Baird.

"I don't think they're comparable situations," Stephanopoulos said Sunday, adding that Brown was not aware he had to pay the taxes and when he found out "made amends" before the issue became public.

Brown, who as a Washington attorney and Democratic national chairman last year earned an estimated $750,000, acknowledged he had not paid Social Security taxes for a woman who cleaned his house "on an irregular basis over the past four of five years."

Walsh: Trial would have exposed 'new evidence' of coverup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iran-Contra prosecutor reported today he planned to show at former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's trial that the White House tried to "rearrange the record" to cover up President Reagan's knowledge of the scandal.

Special Prosecutor Lawrence Walsh said President Bush's Christmas Eve pardon of Weinberger, which canceled the trial, was "inappropriate" and prevented new evidence from coming to light.

"The trial would have exposed new evidence of the administration's efforts to conceal the facts of the Iran arms sales from the public and from Congress," Walsh told Congress in an interim report.

Walsh reported that former White House Chief of Staff Don Regan was prepared to testify that Reagan had indeed known about a November 1985 shipment of missiles to Iran that the administration feared was illegal.

And former Secretary of State George Shultz was prepared to testify about his concern that the White House was trying to "rearrange the record" to protect the president by insisting he had been unaware of the shipment, Walsh said.

The Reagan administration had claimed in November 1986, when the Iran-Contra scandal began unfolding, that the president did not know about the shipment of 18 U.S.-bought Hawk missiles from Israel to Iran.

The shipment, which the CIA assisted, was designed to free American hostages held in Lebanon. Reagan administration officials feared it violated the Arms Export Control Act forbidding reshipment of U.S. arms to a third country.

The sale was a key element in the scandal, which also included diversion of arms sale funds to help the Nicaraguan Contras at a time when U.S. military aid to the rebels was outlawed by Congress.

Regan would have testified that, as White House chief of staff "he was concerned about the possibility of impeachment and that when (Former Attorney General Edwin Meese stated ... that the president did not have contemporaneous knowledge of the November 1985 HAWK shipment, Regan knew the statement was untrue," Walsh's report said.

Walsh said Shultz would have been a "reluctant witness," but would have confirmed that notes he dictated to an aide stated that he was concerned the White House was trying to "rearrange the record" to protect Reagan.

Walsh said Meese and possibly George Bush would have been called as defense witnesses for Weinberger and "would on public cross-examination have been subject to searching questions about the administration's conduct and their own in November 1986."

Weinberger was charged with telling lies to Congress and prosecutors in order to conceal the existence of notes he had taken of key meetings in the Iran-Contra scandal.

It wasn't until two years ago that Iran-Contra prosecutors found Weinberger's notes at the Library of Congress.

"Weinberger's notes, if they had been properly disclosed to Congress, would have provided a significantly more complete picture of the administration's response to the public exposure of the arms sales," Walsh reported.

Walsh noted that it was Weinberger's notes that revealed Meese's incorrect comment at a Nov. 24 White House meeting that the president had been unaware of the Hawk missile shipment from November 1985.

Pampa policeman injured in Saturday incident

A Pampa police officer was injured Saturday when answering a domestic violence call at 717 Lefors, according to police department reports.

Sgt. Kenneth Hopson was injured when officers attempted to place Terry Zane Burrows, 26, 717 Lefors, under arrest. Burrows resisted arrest and in the ensuing scuffle Hopson was injured, police said.

Hopson was treated and released at Coronado Hospital. His injuries included a 1/4-inch laceration and sprain.

Burrows was booked into the city of Pampa holding facility and was charged with domestic assault and assault. He was also wanted on two capias pro fine warrants issued by municipal court, police said.

Justice of the Peace Margie Prestige set bond on the charge of domestic assault at $10,000 and on assault at $10,000.

Police continue investigation of assault on woman

Investigation into the Wednesday slashing attack on a Pampa woman continues, according to Sgt. Jess Wallace of the Pampa Police Department.

Stacy Fellingham, 20, 407 Hill, was found in her home with a 3- to 3 1/2-inch deep laceration to the right side of her neck.

Fellingham was transferred to an Amarillo hospital, where her condition status is unavailable.

No new information about the case has become available, Wallace said.

"We appreciate any information anyone can give us," Wallace said.

Intruder could have forced shutdown of nuclear plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — An intruder who spent four hours inside a turbine building at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant would have been unable to get into the heavily protected reactor area, plant officials said.

Pierce Nye, 31, crashed a car through an interior gate and a door into the turbine building early Sunday, said plant spokeswoman Mary Wells.

A search by state police and plant guards turned up Nye hiding under a piece of machinery inside a five-story turbine building that houses electrical generating equipment, she said.

Nye was charged with causing or risking a catastrophe, criminal mischief, criminal trespass and reckless endangerment. He was held on $250,000 bail and a preliminary hearing was set for Feb. 17.

Nye told authorities he acted alone, had no explosives and didn't tamper with anything, said state police spokesman Charles Tocci. He refused to say why he entered the plant and details of his activities inside the turbine building weren't immediately released, Tocci said.

No radiation was released and the plant continued to operate at full power, said plant spokesman Ralph DeSantis. The plant was expected to begin a security review today, he said.

Nye had been released from the mental ward of Ephrata Community Hospital Jan. 17 and lived 40 miles from the plant in Bethel, the York County Emergency Management Agency said. The hospital wouldn't confirm that he had been a patient.

Tampering with the turbine generators or the steam lines could bring the plant to automatic shutdown, Ms. Wells said.

Accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following accidents during the 72-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

FRIDAY, Feb. 5

9:25 a.m. — A 1983 Chevrolet, driven by Jami Lynn Nixon, 18, 329 Finley, and a 1978 Oldsmobile, driven by Glenna Franks Gunter, 30, 1106 Duncan, collided in the 2000 block of North Duncan. Nixon was cited for no proof of liability insurance, failure to control speed and no valid driver's license on person. No injuries were reported.

7:36 p.m. — A 1982 Nissan, driven by John Joseph Haesle, 17, 2112 Lea, collided with two legally parked vehicles — a 1984 GMC, owned by James E. Bennett, 2217 N. Chestnut, and a 1989 Ford, owned by Clyde Bennett, Ninnekah, Okla., in the 1900 block of North Lea. Haesle was cited for failure to control speed and expired driver's license. No injuries were reported.

11:10 p.m. — A 1987 Buick, driven by Kirsten Renae Ritchey, 16, 737 N. Banks, collided with a tree owned by Russell Whitehead, 313 N. Wells, in the 300 block of North Wells. Ritchey was cited for no seat belt and failure to drive in a single lane. A passenger was cited for not wearing a seatbelt. No injuries were reported.

SATURDAY, Feb. 6

3:59 p.m. — A 1982 Oldsmobile, driven by Agnes Watson Hall, 80, 1900 Evergreen, and a 1987 Chevrolet driven by Clifford Wayne Sanders, 44, 2106 N. Russell, collided at Russell and 18th Avenue. Hall was cited for running a stop sign. No injuries were reported.

"I think he's doing a really great job," noted senior Soña Solano, vice president of the student body, who was Osby's running mate in the spring election. "He's got great ideas and enthusiasm that I think are essential to student government."

Enjoyment of people appears to be the guiding ideology for Osby — with tolerance toward a wide range of lifestyles.

"I hang around people that drink and smoke, and I see them as friends, too," Osby said, adding that he does not believe in excluding someone from being a friend to him based on such lifestyle practices.

At a student-sponsored New Year's Eve party that Osby attended this school year, he recalled, several of the party participants were drunk by 9 p.m. "and never did get to bring in the New Year's," Osby, by contrast, remained sober.

When the students teased him by saying he should be drinking on New Year's Eve, Osby replied that he already was.

"I have a Coke and a smile," he said.

Case against Lott reaches testimony stage

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) — There was no hint of trouble that morning.

Outside, the stately old courthouse shimmered under a fiercely hot summer sun. Inside, the halls hummed with the sounds of pre-holiday activity.

The date was July 1, 1992. The gunman climbed unnoticed to the fourth story of the pink granite building, strode across the marbled floor, entered the hunter green courtroom and quietly took a seat.

Shortly before 10 a.m., he rose from the wooden spectator bench and without a word or warning opened fire with a semiautomatic pistol.

A prosecutor fell dead. Two judges and a third man were wounded.

The intruder chased down an attorney who fled the courtroom and killed him on a stairwell with a burst of gunfire.

With the Tarrant County Courthouse in pandemonium, the man descended the stairs, made his way down a hallway and melted into the downtown pedestrian traffic.

Six hours later, after eluding a manhunt, Arlington attorney George Lott surfaced at a Dallas television station and claimed credit for the massacre.

"I was shooting at the bench and the judges," he said. In a rambling, disjointed interview televised by WFAA-TV, Lott said he wanted to draw attention to a flawed, indifferent judicial system rife with corruption.

He was angry over a long, nasty divorce case and child custody battle. "It is a horrible, horrible thing I have done today," he said. "I may have failed completely. You have to do a very, very horrible thing to catch people's attention."

Shards of glass from shattered windows still litter a dead space behind the bench where three appellate judges sat when the shooting began. Blackened bullet holes decorate the miniblinds.

Downstairs, guards and security devices now greet courthouse visitors. And beginning Tuesday, an Amarillo jury will determine the fate of George Lott, who, if anything, is more defiant now than at the time of his arrest. Jury selection is expected to end today.

Lott insists on defending himself because he wants to make a statement on the system he so profoundly detests.

"He wants his message heard and doesn't want it distorted or filtered through somebody else's mouth," says one court official. "He sees this as a public forum."

Since jury selection began Jan. 11, Lott has been openly contemptuous of the court, spurning conventional dress in favor of jail whites and sandals.

With poorly concealed sarcasm or anger, he has challenged prospective witnesses, including one woman whom he said could not help but be biased against him.

"I don't believe if Jesus Christ himself came down here and told her I was innocent she would believe him," he told presiding Judge Sharen Wilson.

She overruled his challenge. Even in a state renowned for violence, where high profile murder trials are commonplace, the circumstances of the Lott affair are extraordinary.

"This case is important because of the site of the crime," says Alan Levy, an assistant district attorney and Tarrant County's chief criminal prosecutor.

"The fact that somebody can come up to the courtroom and shoot two judges and kill two lawyers makes it a high priority case for our office."

Undoubtedly, Levy was personally affected by the shootings. Two of his colleagues were among the five victims, including Chris Marshall, 41, an assistant DA who was killed.

Another prosecutor, Steve Condon, 28, was wounded.

Judges Clyde Ashworth, 69, and John Hill, 48, also were wounded and a Dallas lawyer, John Edwards, 33, was killed.

A third judge on the bench that morning, David Farris, escaped injury.

Although silenced by a judicial gag order, Levy indicated that Lott's decision to defend himself on capital murder charges might be considered foolish.

"It's highly unusual but it's not unprecedented," he said.

Despite Lott's formal plea of not guilty, lawyers outside the DA's office say that guilt or innocence is not the overriding issue confronting jurors.

"The issue is life in prison or death," said a former prosecutor.

Ice church

In search of budget savings, some big-ticket items could get the ax

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the campaign trail last year, President Clinton said space station Freedom was needed to "pave the way" for international ventures. Now, it and some other major projects may become road-side rubble in Clinton's drive to achieve big budget savings.

Clinton may still believe the space station is worth its price, but the mere fact that his advisers are steering him toward cancellation is stark evidence that controversial, big-ticket spending items are more vulnerable than ever.

"Some things that have merit have to be cut just because we can't afford them anymore," said Rudolph Penner, who was chief economist in President Ford's budget office and is a former director of the Congressional Budget Office.

"The idea that you can get all the needed budget savings through eliminating waste, fraud and abuse is pure myth," he said. "You have to cut programs."

Congressional sources said Friday that Clinton was considering a budget plan that would cancel the space station and the $8.2 billion superconducting super collider — two of the nation's largest and most debated science projects. One congressional aide, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the matter had been discussed but not decided.

Clinton, when asked Friday whether the two projects had gotten the ax, said, "That's not true."

The president has vowed to slash $145 billion from the deficit within four years. It currently is running at about $300 billion and clouding the nation's economic future.

Clinton is expected to unveil his plan in his State of the Union address Feb. 17. His formal budget is due before Congress in March.

Some analysts who think it's wiser to emphasize economic growth than to focus on spending cuts say that if Clinton achieves the budget savings he has promised he will have only a limited number of targets at which to aim.

Max Sawicky, an economist at the Economic Policy Institute, said the space station and the super collider, an atom smasher, naturally are among the vulnerable projects.

"The scientific community has been very critical of these things which tend to be glitzy and that have more political appeal than scientific merit," he said.

NASA has been working on the space station for several years and has already spent about $8 billion on design and testing of concepts. The station has met heavy objections in Congress in the past and has had to undergo at least one major redesign.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary had earlier voiced reservations about the super collider, which is under construction in Texas. Advocates of the project say it may eventually unravel the secret of how the universe was created.

Mrs. O'Leary said Thursday that she does "not feel passionately" about the super collider.

"This issue becomes, can we afford this?" she said in her first meeting with reporters.

Even if it and the space station survive another year, other ambitious science projects will be vulnerable to cuts or cancellation, analysts say.

One is the proposed National Aero-Space Plane, a futuristic spaceship that would take off like a plane and accelerate to 15 times the speed of sound. Supporters say it's an emblem of American commitment to advanced technology, but it already is feeling the pinch from pressures to cut the deficit.

The spacecraft, which once carried a projected cost of at least $10 billion, recently was scaled back in design so that its price tag fell to $3 billion.

Another is the Strategic Defense Initiative, the most expensive military science project in history, which already has consumed $30 billion but not yet produced a missile defense.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin sent a memorandum to managers of SDI, more commonly known as Star Wars, on Feb. 2 spelling out $2.5 billion in cuts as part of a Pentagon-wide effort to reduce spending.

SDI, which originated in the Reagan administration as an answer to the Cold War fear of a Soviet nuclear attack on the United States, is likely to continue spending billions on research, but it will be vulnerable to big cuts in the Clinton era.

Iranian passenger, military planes collide

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An Iranian airliner carrying Muslim pilgrims collided with a military plane and went down in flames today, killing all 132 people aboard the jetliner, Iran's official news agency reported.

It was not known what happened to the crew of the military plane, but the Islamic Republic News Agency reported that the pilot and co-pilot were believed killed. Earlier, IRNA cited witnesses saying they saw one crewman parachuting.

The 10:15 a.m. collision occurred minutes after the leased Russian airliner took off on a domestic flight from Tehran's main airport for the Shiite Muslim holy city of Mashhad, the report said.

Witnesses said they saw passengers thrown from the Russian Tupolev after the nose of the military jet, a Russian-designed Sukhoi, crashed into the passenger plane's tail, IRNA reported. The collision caused an explosion.

The jetliner had 119 passengers and 13 crew members, including a Russian pilot, the official news agency report said.

Local journalists reported that the wreckage fell on a military base at Karaj, west of the capital, and that fleets of ambulances ferried the bodies of the dead from the scene. It was not clear if anyone on the ground was killed.

The area around the airport is residential. Pilots who fly out of Mehrabad airport, which serves both military and civilian craft, complain of near-collisions nearly every week in Tehran's notoriously overcrowded skies.

IRNA quoted an unidentified eyewitness as saying the jetliner crashed about 10 miles west of Tehran, and that several helicopters were sent to the crash site.

"I saw the plane crashing as it was burning with smoke coming out of it," the witness was quoted as saying.

Mashhad, a northeastern city of 500,000 people, is the capital of Khorasan province. The tomb there of a founding imam of Shiite Islam is one of Iran's most important religious shrines. It is visited year round by pilgrims.

It was not immediately clear how many of the passengers were pilgrims.

The plane was one of 10 Russian airliners chartered by Iran Air Tour, a subsidiary of the national carrier Iran Air, used on normal domestic flights and to carry pilgrims to Mashhad.

The planes were leased for one year complete with Russian pilots, maintenance crews and cabin attendants.

Washington has banned the sale of U.S. technology to Iran, including aircraft, since relations were severed in April 1980 following the November 1979 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Iran by militants who held U.S. hostages for 444 days.

Iran Air's aging fleet of Boeing and Airbus aircraft are unable to keep up with the huge demand for flights, although early last year Washington allowed the sale of two Airbuses containing U.S. components to Iran Air.

Travelers must often wait for months for a seat.

The Soviet-designed Sukhoi attack planes are among acquisitions Iran is known to have made in the past few years following its 1980-88 war with Iraq.

The last major crash in Iran was April 26, 1992, when a Dutch-built chartered Fokker Friendship went down south of Tehran, killing 39 people.

NOW vows to help fired J.C. Penney employee

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The National Organization for Women in New Jersey will do all it can to help a hairdresser fired by J.C. Penney's for violating the company's dress code, a NOW official said.

Myra Terry, president of the New Jersey chapter, said Sunday her group was readying protests and a possible boycott of J.C. Penney stores in the state in support of 38-year-old Diane Carter.

Carter, of Hamilton Township, was fired Friday night for refusing to abide by a newly instituted policy at the chain's Quaker Bridge Mall store that requires female employees to wear skirts.

Carter, employed by the store's hair salon for eight years, said she had always worn slacks to work — they were more comfortable and easier to work in, she said.

"I believe an employer has the right to tell someone to dress properly," Carter said in a Saturday night interview. "I'm just totally against them taking away my right to choose how to do that."

Terry said Sunday she was totally dismayed by the company's attitude.

"It's hard for me to understand why there are still men who are punitive toward women," she said. "It's a macho thing, they don't want to realize they were wrong or may have made a mistake."

Carter said there were never any complaints about how she looked until Feb. 3, two days after the policy — adopted for most parts of the store in June — was extended to the hair salon and home furnishings department.

Carter said she was warned that she was violating the policy, and was subject to dismissal.

About 8 p.m. Friday, after working a full day, Carter was called into the office of Marty Wickes, the store's operations manager.

"His words were something to the effect that the dress code had been in effect for a while and that I was being dismissed on the grounds of wearing pants," Carter said. "I don't think I said anything. I had sort of resigned myself that it was going to happen."

Henry J. Rusman, spokesman for the Dallas-based store chain, refused to confirm Carter's dismissal. Rusman said he wouldn't discuss personnel matters regarding an individual employee.

Carter said her dismissal took effect immediately.

"As of (Friday) night, that was it," she said. "I had to turn in everything. I had to turn in the key to my locker, my apron, everything."

Carter says NOW and the American Civil Liberties Union have been advising her of her options.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

A deep recession may hinder future

It's entirely Bill Clinton's economic ballgame now. And the rules seem to have changed since the election campaign.

A new Federal Reserve Board report indicates that the economy grew a healthy 3.8 percent in the fourth quarter of 1992, the strongest performance in four years. It was the second straight quarter of growth above 3 percent.

The economy isn't perfect. The deficit for the 1993 fiscal year is rising above $300 billion — and could go much higher.

Unemployment, usually the last number to turn up during a recovery, remains stubborn. Still, the number of unemployed dropped by 600,000 over the past six months.

Economists now calculate that the last recession began in July 1990, precisely the month after George Bush broke his "no new taxes" pledge. Other factors were at work; the Federal Reserve was acting to reign in a too-rapid growth in the money supply.

But Bush's equivocation — uncertainty of federal tax policy always being a chilling factor in business decision-making — and his subsequent approval of new tax burdens were clearly a central contributing factor in the economy's plummet.

And what signals is the business community getting from President Clinton? In less than two weeks, his administration has moved in directions that are not hopeful:

He backed away from a campaign pledge to give the middle class a tax cut.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen has indicated the president would break another campaign pledge not to raise the gasoline tax.

Vice President Al Gore canceled his office's Competitiveness Council, one of the few worthwhile government agencies because it reduced red tape.

Finally, the Clinton Commerce Department slapped $2 billion in trade duties on steel import.

When Americans see a bandit around the corner about to rob them, they take precautions. They shift money into tax-exempt areas or move it out of the country. They may even (as departed Cabinet nominee Zoe Baird did) operate in the black and gray markets to get tax-free labor and goods. When the single agency devoted to cutting business red tape is eliminated, businesses might wonder about the Clinton administration's desire to help American industry remain competitive in a global market.

Mark it on your calendar and wait a few months. We could be wrong — we hope we are — but these early assaults on taxpayers and on job-creating companies indicate that a new, possibly deeper, recession might have just begun.

Berry's World

"Excuse me. Could you direct me to the $30 million toilet?"

It's the other things, too, stupid!

Except that he hasn't quite earned it, one is tempted to feel sorry for Bill Clinton. He gives the air these days of the college student elected president for the day by his classmates and then wakes suddenly to find himself actually occupying the Oval Office.

Now when during the campaign George Bush kept stressing that we live in a dangerous world, and what his experience in maneuvering about in such a world was, one could not deduce exactly how Bush would have handled, mishandled or finessed some of the crises of the day. To say that the world is complicated isn't to reveal that one knows how to handle a complicated world. But it is a step in the right direction — the acknowledgment that we are a superpower in a very complicated world, and that the definition of our responsibilities is probably best done by someone who has had training in art.

One single day's newspaper, the International Herald Tribune, is a chamber of horrors on the subject of the world we live in. The main headline: "Clinton Weighs Signal/On New Trade Battle/Brewing with Europe."

The administration's decision to levy huge tariffs against the importation of steel products was a shot heard round the world. Clinton evidently understood himself to have pledged, during the campaign, to move along protectionist lines, and already it had been announced that we will raise by 1,000 percent the tariff on minivans, even though this violates our pledge to GATT.

To move toward protectionism at a time when we attempt to mobilize international opinion against the French farm lobby is an invitation to Smootism, which is not what one associates with people who were Rhodes scholars and presumably urban sophisticates.

William F. Buckley Jr.

"Now, Tokyo Takes Its Turn/To Yell 'Foul' on Dumping." Japan is aiming at China, but the tuning fork — on tariffs — was sounded by Washington. Searching for relief on that front page, the eye turns to a picture. The caption: "Rubble from a destroyed sluice gate in a spillway of the Peruca dam in Croatia that was blasted by Serbian forces." And the headline: "Blasted by Serbs, Dam May Collapse." Twenty thousand people are being moved out of the way.

Elsewhere we learned that David Owen and Cyrus Vance have said the hell with it — after five months trying to impose a peace plan on the former Yugoslavia, they are heading back and throwing the whole thing at the United Nations. Any impulse by the United States to take an active military lead is, to say the least, doused by Russian cold water, the foreign minister having announced that Russia does not wish the United States to go any further than it has done.

Meanwhile, Germany, France and Great Britain make it clear that their good military offices are available only as auxiliaries to an American military initiative. The careless newspaper reader is left with the impression that any decision involving the military will have to wait six months, pending a crystallization of the question whether announced homosexuals can reasonably be expected to advance on an enemy arm in arm with heterosexuals; or vice versa; or something.

One looks for relief on the bottom of the page. "For 21 African States, Breakdown Is Nearly Total." The French ambassador has been shot and killed in Zaire, along with 45 lesser mortals, and foreigners are crossing the river to Brazzaville in the Congo, while chaos sets in. This is the fruit of 30 years under "Marshall" Mobutu, whom this world-watcher, serving for a season as a delegate to the United Nations in 1973, remembers regaling the General Assembly with the scorn Mobutu felt for less civilized countries than his own, like the United States. (He traveled to the United Nations aboard the French superliner France with 100 equestrians, including his wife's hairdresser and his private photographer.)

A few hundred miles south, the dispatch speaks of another African country: "Angola 'Worse Than It's Ever Been.'" Eighteen years after the Portuguese were thrown out, a year or two after the communists were thrown out.

Well, where in Africa is the news good? South Africa? "De Klerk Sees Civil War if Negotiations Fail."

It almost has the effect of orienting us toward the Middle East in search of tranquility. But there is the matter of the 400 deported Palestinians, and the impending vote by the Security Council calling for sanctions against Israel. Clinton can veto that. All he has to do is surrender what good will we have with the Arabs.

On Page 3 of the paper, "Dialing the White House: Busy, Busy, Busy, Click." Could it be the voters calling? To say, "It's not just the economy, stupid?"

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Feb. 8, the 39th day of 1993. There are 326 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Three hundred years ago, on Feb. 8, 1693, a charter was granted for the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia.

On this date:

In 1587, Mary Queen of Scots was beheaded at Fotheringhay Castle in England after she was implicated in a plot to murder her cousin, Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1837, for the only time in history, the Senate selected the vice president of the United States, choosing Richard Mentor Johnson after no candidate received a majority of electoral votes.

In 1904, the Russo-Japanese War began as Japan besieged Port Arthur in Manchuria.

In 1910, the Boy Scouts of America was incorporated.

In 1915, the motion picture "The Birth of a Nation," directed by D.W. Griffith, premiered at Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles.

The B-bomb has a short fuse

Our involvement in Somalia has been a continuing reminder of the desperate degree to which overpopulation can impoverish a nation.

Yet, the malnourished and emaciated women of Somalia even now continue to bear an estimated six babies each, and 4.4 of those babies survive to compound the nation's starvation.

The Population Crisis Committee fears the B-bomb more than the H-bomb.

Too many babies, worldwide. Population increase abroad is now 90 million per year. The underfed overflow is being turned away in England, France, Germany and Scandinavia. In the United States we continue to accept a disproportionate number of immigrants, legal and other.

The United States presently accepts as many immigrants as all of the other nations in the world combined.

Haiti alone sends more legal immigrants to the United States than Ireland and Italy combined.

Mexico sends us more than all of Western Europe.

Include "illegal" immigrants from Haiti and

Paul Harvey

Mexico and our "share" doubles!

China has been trying to curtail its birthrate — and with some success.

China, with a current population of 1.17 billion, is the largest country in the world. In 1965 the average Chinese woman bore 6.2 children. Today the average is down to 2.4 children (and in urban areas, fewer than two children.)

Yet, China, recognizing that it still has too many mouths to feed, is making it easier for Chinese babies to be adopted by couples from Canada and the United States.

Thailand, with a population of 56 million, using modern methods of contraception, has cut its growth rates in half in 20 years.

In 1970 the average Thai woman had six children; today 2.4.

In Indonesia, population 185 million, the average number of children is down from 5.6 in 1970 to 3.0 today!

Mexico, too, has accomplished impressive reductions in its population growth.

If the Roman Catholic Church has previously been a major factor in promoting population increase in Latin America, today what was "national policy" has changed.

Mexican women who averaged six children each now average 3.2 — a reduction of almost 50 percent in 20 years.

"Backward nations" are moving forward fastest in defusing the B-bomb.

The one thing that these countries have in common is a strong commitment on the part of the government to reduce population growth. In practice that means accessible (or free), good quality family planning services offering a variety of contraceptives from which women can choose.

Are guns really the problem?

It's understandable why many Americans want to believe gun-control laws will reduce violent crime.

When you hear about teenagers shooting each other in school and read about an epidemic of drive-by shootings, you desperately want to believe something can be done to stop the carnage. The more you hear these horror stories, the more reasonable some of the gun-control proposals — such as mandatory "waiting periods" on handgun purchases — start to sound.

But don't be fooled: As seductively simple as gun control sounds, it isn't. Because it doesn't work.

Just because you've heard the slogans before doesn't make them less valid. Yes, it's true: Guns don't cause crimes, criminals do. Switzerland, Denmark and Finland, for example, have some of the highest gun-ownership rates in the world — and some of the lowest murder rates. Washington, D.C., Detroit, Chicago and New York, by contrast, have some of the toughest gun-control laws in the United States — including virtual prohibitions on private handguns — yet 20 percent of all homicides in the United States are committed in these four cities each year.

What we know about guns and crime is not just anecdotal. The national Center for Policy Analysis (NCPA) in Dallas has conducted an exhaustive review of the many studies on this subject and has found no correlation between the availability of guns and gun-related crime rates.

What this means is that America's crime problem is not a gun problem — and gun-control laws won't solve it. Indeed, as David Kopel points out in the current issue of Policy Review quarterly, there are already some 20,000 federal, state, and local gun laws on the books. Will one or two, or 10 or 20 more really make a difference? Come on now!

Consider the teenager who shoots a classmate. There is already a nationwide prohibition on the sale of firearms to minors. In other words, he gets his weapon illegally — as do approximately 85 percent of all felons.

While handgun restrictions won't keep guns out of the hands of criminals, who typically don't purchase their weapons from legitimate gun shops, they would handicap people who legitimately need guns for protection. Kopel reports that nearly 1,800 times a day — 645,000 times a year — private citizens use handguns to prevent crimes; 95 percent of the time they don't fire their weapons, they merely brandish them. Including rifles in this count would push the number of "crimes prevented" to more than a million. Leave crime prevention to the police? Suggest that to the shop owners of East Los Angeles.

America's men and women in blue don't usually know where and when an armed criminal will strike next. That's why crime data show that three-times the number of armed criminals are felled each year by ordinary citizens protecting themselves as by the police. When an armed robber breaks into your home, it's you and your family who are there, not Sgt. Joe Friday.

The sad truth is that stricter gun-control laws would disarm those who obey the law, while increasing their vulnerability to those who break the law.

In the 1960s, members of a New York-based anti-gun group proudly and naively posted signs on their homes saying, "THERE ARE NO GUNS IN THIS HOUSE." The signs came down when members of the group discovered that while a lot of criminals may have received "Fs" in conduct in school, they received passing grades in reading. Many of these homes were robbed.

It's easy to blame firearms for criminal behavior — less easy to confront the troubling moral and social problems that have unleashed this epidemic of violence. Yet, that's where the discussion should be focused.

'Faster, better, cheaper' push travels toward Pluto

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Maverick NASA scientists and engineers, heeding their boss' call for faster and cheaper space missions, want to send two small space probes to study Pluto, the solar system's last known unexplored planet.

The proposal has yet to receive congressional funding or NASA approval as a full-fledged mission. It has revealed tensions between the agency's tradition of building big, expensive spacecraft and those pressing to simplify and speed up such projects and reduce their cost.

Those designing the Pluto mission are following the "faster, better, cheaper" philosophy advocated by Daniel S. Goldin, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"It's a very young, aggressive, competitive team — guys who are too dumb and young to know we can't do it," said Rich Terrile, the Pluto mission's chief scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"We saw this space program turned into a fat bureaucracy and we're chomping at the bit to recapture the good old days," he said.

The Pluto mission could cost $600 million to $1 billion in current dollars, depending on whether the probes are launched by Russian or U.S. rockets, respectively. By comparison, NASA expects to spend more than $2 billion to launch the Cassini spaceship in 1997 to investigate Saturn.

The proposed mission to Pluto and its moon, Charon, has found favor with Goldin.

Goldin declined to be interviewed by The Associated Press. And his chief spokesman, Jeff Carr, insisted Goldin hasn't made the Pluto mission a priority, but only gave it "higher visibility" as a model for his "campaign to do things faster, better, cheaper."

That still upsets some researchers who say Goldin, nevertheless, is putting Pluto ahead of more important projects.

Goldin is a Bush administration appointee and his future under President Clinton is uncertain. The same goes for any projects that get his blessing. This, too, raises the tension level.

Goldin is trying to put public fascination with space exploration on an equal footing with NASA's scientific pursuits, according to Bruce Murray, a California Institute of Technology professor and former director of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The young Pluto Mission planners — scientists and engineers mostly in their 30s — want to use two 362-pound, space probes. Each would measure 4 1/2-feet in diameter and 3 1/2 feet high and bear just four instruments each, including a tiny television camera.

The probes would be launched around 1999 to reach Pluto between 2005 and 2007, flying within 6,200 miles of the planet. Each probe would study one side of Pluto.

A Pluto mission the old NASA way would cost at least twice as much, take more than 20 years to execute and would employ one- or two-ton spacecraft laden with scientific instruments.

"Instead of sending another houseboat, we're sending very sophisticated desk-sized spacecraft," said Alan Stern, a planetary scientist at the Southwest Research Institute in San Antonio and chairman of one of two NASA advisory panels that support the proposed mission.

Voicing the other side, John Pike, space policy analyst for the Federation of American Scientists in Washington, said, "NASA has a process for selecting missions on the basis of scientific merit, and Pluto was pretty far down on that list."

Learning more about planets already visited, for instance, holds more interest and import for many researchers, he said.

NASA once developed state-of-the-art technology. To reduce the risk of failure, NASA's recent planetary spacecrafts have used existing technology.

If space probes are to reach distant Pluto, however, they must be lightweight and fast. That means using cutting-edge technology, said Robert Staehle, the project's manager.

Pluto, discovered in 1930 by U.S. astronomer Clyde Tombaugh, is the solar system's ninth and smallest known planet at roughly two-thirds the diameter of Earth's moon.

While NASA has sent robotic explorers to every other known planet, it has yet to explore Pluto, named for the Roman god of the underworld, and its moon Charon, named for the mythical boatman who ferried the dead across the River Styx into Pluto's realm.

Usually, Pluto is the outermost planet, but its long elliptical orbit sometimes bring it closer to the sun than Neptune, as it has been since 1979. It again becomes the outermost planet in 1999.

"It's the Mount Everest of planetary exploration," Staehle said. "It's usually the farthest away. It's the coldest. It's the hardest to see."

Pluto is "the missing piece of the puzzle which helps us understand the origin of the solar system," Terrile said.

Scientists know Pluto is rocky and icy, unlike the other planets in the outer orbits of the sun — Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune — which essentially are balls of gas.

The solar system formed 4.6 billion years ago when a swirling disk of dust, ice and gas clumped to form the planets. Many astronomers believe the known solar system may be surrounded by a belt of hundreds, maybe thousands of never-seen objects they call "ice dwarfs," thought to be between comets and planets in size.

Pluto and Charon could turn out to be large ice dwarfs. Scientists said craters on Pluto and Charon may disclose something about the nature of ice dwarfs, if such objects have hit the planet and its moon.

NASA last launched spacecraft toward an unexplored planet in 1977, when the twin Voyager probes sailed off to Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune.

The disquiet over Pluto arose some months after NASA managers told Staehle in January 1992 he could start at least planning the mission.

That May, Staehle got Goldin's ear when the NASA chief was in Los Angeles returning an Oscar. Shuttle astronauts had taken a statuette into space as part of a special Academy Award honor last year for George Lucas, creator of the Star Wars film series.

Soon Goldin was touting the project. And soon criticism ensued.

"I object to the offhand way in which the Pluto mission suddenly was raised in priority when Staehle intercepted Dan Goldin in Hollywood," said Clark Chapman of the Planetary Science Institute in Tucson, Ariz.

But taxpayers are fascinated by missions to unexplored planets, so Congress may find the Pluto mission appealing when asked to start financing the project, probably next year, Staehle said.

This artist's conception shows one of NASA's proposed twin space probes flying near the planet Pluto (top) and its moon Charon (bottom). A group of young scientists and engineers want NASA to launch the space probe in 1999 or 2000. Sometime between 2005 and 2007, the probes would reach Pluto, the solar system's last known unexplored planet.

NASA told Staehle the cost of two Pluto spacecraft can't exceed $400 million. Titan 4-Centaur launch vehicles alone cost $400 million. That would boost the mission's price to $1.2 billion, not including costs for launching and running the mission. But Staehle said NASA expects to get a price break on the American rockets, bringing the mission cost to under $1 billion. Or it may buy cheaper, slower Russian Proton launchers. They would slow the mission's arrival at Pluto to 2007 to 2010, but drop the mission's entire cost to $600 million.

Relative sees rhyme but no reason in thank you

DEAR ABBY: Following the funeral of a close relative, I received a store-bought printed card bearing this poem:

"Perhaps you sent a lovely card,
"or sat quietly on a chair.
"Perhaps you sent a floral piece,
"if so, we saw it there.
"Perhaps you spoke the kindest words
"As any friend could say.
"Perhaps you were not there at all,
"but thought of us that day.
"Whatever you did to console our hearts,
"We thank you so much for whatever the part." (signed) The Entire Jones Family (not their real name).

Abby, this is the most insulting card I have ever received! Not only was I there, I traveled through two states to get there. I also sent a costly floral arrangement and paid for my own lodging.

What a rude message: We don't know whether you made it to the funeral or not — perhaps you weren't even there, but just thought of us instead. I am furious! This stupid message was supposed to be a "thank-you" from the entire Jones family. Abby, the entire Jones family numbers close to 100 people.

Believe me, after this, I am not going to speak to any of them. Am I wrong?

ONE OF THE FAMILY

DEAR ONE: Please don't be hasty in your judgment. If all probability, the person who selected the card did not read the message carefully before sending it. This can easily happen in times of stress.

Dear Abby

Don't analyze the message; the intent was to thank you for your presence and the lovely floral piece. Overlook the inappropriate poem. Life is too short to be critical when the intentions are good.

DEAR ABBY: On Christmas morning, I found a lost Labrador retriever who was wearing a choke chain and a length of rope. Since the animal shelter could not pick him up until the 26th, I drove around asking people if they recognized him, and posted "Lost Dog" signs with his description. The dog wound up spending the night and was picked up by the shelter the next day.

My husband, who is normally a loving and sensitive man, was irate with me — claiming that it was "mean" to lock up the dog in our fenced yard. Rather, he said, we should have let the dog loose to find its way home.

My fears were that the dog would not know how to get home, and/or be run over trying. Anyway, my husband was as adamant in his stance as I in mine. We would like your opinion, please.

SAN DIEGO DOG LOVER

DEAR DOG LOVER: Since the dog had no license or ID on its choke chain, it could have been dumped in your neighborhood by someone who had stolen him or who no longer wanted him. You did the compassionate thing by keeping the dog safely secure while you tried to find the owner. Tell your husband Abby says it's time to bury this bone of contention.

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled to read your letter from the hotel desk clerk. I have been in the hotel business for 16 years, working for the Sheraton Corp., where we are committed to guest satisfaction. I am a trainer these days for all the employees who come to work for our hotel, and we try to stress that if you don't like to serve people, you are in the wrong business!

If this desk clerk whose letter you published came to work for us, I would soon be advising him (or her) to seek some other line of work. Abby, I sure wish you could share with us what hotel resort this "friendly" person was from so we could all avoid that hotel like the plague.

HAPPY TO OBLIGE OUR GUESTS IN OREGON

DEAR HAPPY: Suffice to say — it wasn't a Sheraton!

Why do some people get sick when they read in the car?

By 3-2-1 CONTACT Magazine
For AP Special Features

For some people, reading in the car can cause car sickness, or "motion sickness." Motion sickness is a feeling of nausea or dizziness. Sometimes it makes you throw up. It may be caused by the motion of a car, bus, train, boat, airplane — even rides at the amusement park. You don't have to read to get motion sickness, but reading can make motion sickness a lot worse.

Let's say you're reading a book while riding in the car. The motion of the car begins to confuse your inner ear — the part of your body that helps you keep your balance. When you are bouncing along or taking sharp turns in the car, your inner ear system sends messages to your brain that your body is out of balance. At the same time, your eyes are sending their own signals to the brain — the words on the page. Because of all these signals, your brain may trigger a feeling of nausea.

If you do get motion sickness from reading in the car, you can try staring straight ahead. That way, your eyes are not as busy. Sit back and enjoy the ride!

Students accepted for nursing program

Frank Phillips College Department of Nursing is accepting students for the licensed vocational nursing program until April 1, according to Director of Nursing Mackie Wood.

"Those who wish to enroll must be either TASP exempt or must pass the TASP test prior to April 1," said Wood. "There's still time to sign up for the test. The deadline is February 10."

Wood also noted that potential students must take the nurse entrance test before March 12 in order to be considered for inclusion in the spring semester. "Our program runs from May of this year until May of 1994," she said.

When students complete the required course of study, they will be eligible to take state board exams. Wood said that 93 percent of FPC students who took state boards passed last year, and all those who wanted positions in the field are now working.

L.V.N.'s work in several areas: general hospitals, home health care, and nursing homes. Salaries in the Texas Panhandle range from $6 to $11 per hour, says Wood, and those who want to complete an A.D.N. or B.S.N. degree at either Amarillo College or West Texas State can work in the field while they complete the more advanced training.

"We have a 'stepladder'

R.N. program with Amarillo College. Students who complete our courses next spring are accepted into leveling classes at FPC in the fall of 1994. They then participate in spring 1994 clinicals and classroom requirements at A.C.," she noted.

For more information, contact Sue Miller at Memorial Hospital in Dumas, 935-7171; Cindy Bryant at Coon Memorial Hospital in Dalhart, 249-4571 (Tuesday through Friday only); or Liz Hodges at Ochiltree General Hospital in Perryton, 435-3606.

Borger students may contact Mackie Wood at the FPC campus at 274-5311.

'Youth for America' campaign rewards service

NEW YORK — Alex Trebek, Phylcia Rashad, Kirk Cameron and Chelsea Noble head the judging panel charged with choosing the nation's top community service winners in the 1993 "Colgate's Youth for America" campaign.

The award winning program presents cash grants for the best executed projects in the U.S. by local units of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Boys and Girls Clubs, Girls Incorporated, Camp Fire and 4-H. More than 240 local clubs and troops of these leading youth organizations will receive checks for up to $2,000 for their outstanding projects. In celebration of the program's 20th anniversary, the grand prize-winning club or troop will receive their award at The White House.

Colgate's program director Michele Macchia said, "Our 'Youth for America' program inspires and promotes the positive side of today's young people, proving their genuine concern for their world."

Recent winning projects reflect a wide range of creative solutions to many of today's problems, from environmental conservation programs to raising funds to build a therapeutic playgrounds for handicapped youngsters.

Part of a world-wide network of Colgate-Palmolive Company-sponsored youth programs, the campaign launched in 1972 to promote social responsibility among America's youth, has won a Freedoms Foundation Award and has been saluted by the White House, Congress and governors and mayors throughout the nation.

Entry forms are available through the regional offices of the national organizations, or may be obtained by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to Colgate's Youth for America, P.O. box 1058, FDR Station, New York, NY 10150-1058.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It might be difficult for you to distinguish between positive or wishful thinking today. One assures success, the other invites disappointment. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think twice today before putting additional funds into an investment that so far has been rather sour. It's time for you to seriously review this entire situation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be cooperative today, but don't make concessions for the sake of expediency. Restructuring a deal could weaken it for both you and the other guy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Duties and responsibilities will not take care of themselves today, although you might be inclined to believe they will. Whatever you neglect today could be more difficult to do later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Romance must be handled in a compassionate, considerate manner today. If not, you may do something that could severely hurt the one you love.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The harder you try to impress others today, the less effective you're apt to be. If you want to make a good, lasting impression, be both natural and sincere.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Give praise where it is merited today, but don't use flattery for purposes of manipulation. Others will perceive your intentions and not like them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you are a prudent and careful shopper, but today you could be knowingly extravagant and pay more for something than it is really worth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Guard against inclinations today to prejudice people whom you do not know too well. Give everyone the benefit of the doubt, and don't tag them with labels they don't deserve.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to be a nice person today, you might take on an assignment another should be handling on his or her own. You could wind up being used instead of appreciated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be very mindful of your behavior today, because your social image is a trifle more fragile than usual. If you do something distasteful, it could become the topic of gossip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It won't be what you say today that will make a good impression on others, it will be what you do. Performance, and not personality, will be graded.

Aikman exits early; AFC triumphs in Hawaii

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — The AFC dominated again. Only this time, the AFC won.

Mustering just 114 yards of total offense to the NFC's Pro Bowl-record 472 yards, the AFC made its own breaks Sunday for a 23-20 overtime victory.

The AFC, which has lost nine straight Super Bowls and had won just one of the last four Pro Bowls, blocked two field goal attempts and turned those into 10 points, got another 10 points with the help of interceptions and, finally, at 4:09 of overtime, converted a fumble by San Francisco's Steve Young into Nick Lowery's 33-yard field goal for the game winner.

As a sign of how the game went, Buffalo's special teams star Steve Tasker was voted the MVP of the first Pro Bowl to go overtime.

Tasker blocked a field goal attempt by New Orleans' Morten Andersen in the fourth quarter and bobbled the ball down the field. AFC teammate Terry McDaniel of the Los Angeles Raiders finally scooped the ball up and ran 28 yards for a touchdown that made it 20-13 with eight minutes left in regulation.

Young came up with some late heroics to send the game into overtime, driving the NFC down the field and throwing a 23-yard touchdown pass to Rodney Hampton of the New York Giants on fourth-and-12 with 10 seconds left in regulation.

But Young, who threw three interceptions, then lost his costly fumble in overtime when Derrick Thomas of Kansas City tackled him from behind. Howie Long of the Raiders fell on the ball at the NFC 28, setting up the third field goal of the game by the Chiefs' Lowery.

As a footnote to the game, Dallas' Troy Aikman, one of three NFC quarterbacks, mysteriously left Aloha Stadium early in the fourth quarter without even NFC coach George Seifert knowing why.

Asked if Aikman had spoken with him about leaving, Seifert said: "No, we did not discuss it. I think we'll just have to check into it and see what happened. I don't really know any more about it than that."

Seifert said he didn't believe Aikman would have played any more if he had remained.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league didn't know why Aikman left early, but said it would investigate the matter.

Aikman played in the second quarter and the first series of the third, completing 10 of 15 for 120 yards and a 9-yard scoring pass to Dallas teammate Michael Irvin.

The AFC's other scores came on a 31-yard interception return by San Diego's Junior Seau, a 42-yard field goal by Lowery after the Chargers' Leslie O'Neal blocked an Andersen field goal try and Miami's Bryan Cox returned the ball to the NFC 35, and Lowery's 29-yard field goal after the Bills' Henry Jones intercepted an Aikman pass.

Andersen field goals of 27 and 37 yards accounted for the NFC's other scores.

Seau led the AFC defensively with five solo tackles, four assists and one pass deflection, in addition to his interception for a touchdown.

AFC coach Don Shula of Miami was impressed by the play of his all-star squad's defense and special teams.

"Defensively in overtime, we took it away just like we had done the whole game," Shula said. "Steve (Tasker) was unbelievable. We've admired him from the opposing sideline for a long time. He came up with the big field goal block when we had to have it."

"I came inside the wingback and the tackle on the right side. I went through and thought, 'When is he going to kick it?' I've never blocked a placement kick before, ever," said Tasker, who blocked a Dallas punt the previous week in the Super Bowl.

The NFC placekicking game probably suffered because Joel Hilgenberg of the New Orleans Saints, the long-snap specialist, had a sore thumb and Mark Stepnoski of the Dallas Cowboys filled in.

"They (the snaps) were all slow, and that's to be expected," Stepnoski said. "I'm not a snapper. Joel can really snap, but he's got a bad thumb so I had to do it."

There were a few impressive offensive numbers put up by the NFC, including Young's 18-of-32 passing for 196 yards while playing less than half the game, and eight receptions by Atlanta's Andre Rison, tying a record shared by Steve Largent and Irvin, for 80 yards. The 49ers' Jerry Rice had four catches for 78 yards, giving him 20 in the Pro Bowl and surpassing Walter Payton's career mark of 18.

Chairez falls in overtime

Chad Chairez came close to winning his second consecutive state title, but Cedrick Cooper of Lewisville outlasted the Pampa High senior, 8-6, in overtime at the Texas High School Wrestling Championships.

The two met in the 130-pound finals Saturday at the El Paso Convention Center.

Chairez had won the state title in the 125-weight division last year. He reached this year's championship round by pinning Robert Davila of San Antonio Madison in 1:45 in the semifinals.

Senior heavyweight Chris Whitney of Pampa advanced to the semifinals where he lost to Gordon Chapin of Euless Trinity on a pin in 2:33. Whitney pinned Mike Lamb of Plano in 1:46 in the fifth-place match. He lost an 11-4 decision to Craig Brangnover of Hurst Bell in the consolation semifinals.

In the fourth round of the consolation bracket, Pampa junior Chris Fox (180) decisioned Rick Torres of El Paso Coronado, 9-3. Fox won by default for fifth place and lost to Jay McCown of Amarillo High, 9-7, in overtime in the consolation semifinals.

Pampa senior David Borsheim (145) lost a 7-3 decision to Chris Jackson of LBJ in the fourth round of consolation.

Pampa was ninth in the team standings with 63 points entering the championship round.

The Pampa boys claimed sole possession of first place last Friday night with a 79-73 win over Amarillo Caprock. Both teams were tied for first going into the contest.

The Pampa Harvesters are 20-5 for the season and 6-1 in district play.

Hereford is 7-18 overall and 1-6 in district.

It will be the final game of the season for the Lady Harvesters, who have won their last two district games.

The Lady Harvesters are 11-12 overall and 5-4 in the district standings.

The Lady Whitefaces are 2-22 for the season and 0-9 in district.

Knicks find new star; Shaq brings down the house (and rim)

Tony Campbell is a very overstanding fellow.

Now, all he can hope is that New York Knicks coach Pat Riley understands his predicament. In short, Campbell wants more playing time.

"I don't know coach Riley that well," Campbell said after coming off the bench to score a season-high 21 points in New York's 104-82 victory Sunday night over Miami at Madison Square Garden. "If he calls me, I'll be ready. If he doesn't call me, I'll overstand."

Campbell, who led Minnesota in scoring for three seasons before being acquired by the Knicks, hopes his recent output will earn him a little less time on the bench. He is averaging 14.2 points in his last five games and shooting 61 percent — a marked improvement from his season averages of 7.1 points and 44 percent.

He is averaging under 19 minutes per game, but played 31 Sunday night because Charles Smith was out with the flu.

NBA Roundup

"Not playing is something I had no control over," said Campbell, who scored 16 points in New York's victory at 108-105 at Miami on Friday night. "It was very hard.

"This team is deep and coach has to make a tough decision every night. I just sucked it up, worked hard in practice and kept myself ready for the opportunity."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Seattle 103, Detroit 101; Chicago 101, Portland 91; Phoenix 121, Orlando 105; Boston 87, Golden State 82, and New Jersey 105, Milwaukee 102.

To say the Heat can't beat the Knicks in New York is one thing. To say they can't beat them anywhere is another. Lately, both are true.

The loss, coupled with Friday night's defeat at Miami, was the Heat's seventh straight against the Knicks. Miami's franchise record at Madison Square Garden is 0-11.

Patrick Ewing added 21 points for New York, which won its fourth straight overall and eighth in nine games.

Rony Seikaly had 21 points and 11 rebounds for Miami, which scored just 13 points in the fourth quarter.

The Knicks, who led by as many as 10 points eight times in the first half and by as few as three early in the third quarter, began to pull away in the final 1:19 of the period.

With New York leading 72-67, John Starks ignited a decisive 25-7 burst with a 3-pointer. But Campbell did most of the damage, scoring 10 points in a span of 7:10.

Suns 121, Magic 105

Shaquille O'Neal broke the backboard in Phoenix, but Charles Barkley broke him. Barkley induced O'Neal into fouling out as Phoenix won its 15th straight home game.

O'Neal was gone with 3:16 left, after logging 20 points — 14 of them in the first quarter when his thunderous dunk collapsed the backboard support. It held up the nationally televised game for 35 minutes.

"The thing started coming forward, and I thought the whole thing was going to fall on me for a minute," O'Neal said.

Instead, he fell all over Barkley. "He's got to learn, and that's going to take some time," said Barkley, who had half of his 28 points and nine of his 19 rebounds in the fourth quarter while he faked and tricked the rookie center into four of his six fouls.

Nick Anderson, who had 27 points Friday night in a 114-108 victory over Portland, led Orlando again with 26. Scott Skiles added 23.

Richard Dumas added 31 points for the Suns.

SuperSonics 103, Pistons 101

Shawn Kemp got the save. In addition to 22 points and 13 rebounds, his successful dive for a loose ball helped preserve the victory for Seattle.

With the visiting Sonics leading 102-101, Detroit's Terry Mills missed a baseline jumper with 27 seconds left. The rebound nearly went out of bounds off the Sonics, but Kemp managed to shovel the ball to teammate Nate McMillan.

Mark Aguirre hit three 3-pointers as the Pistons closed to 100-99 with 2:09 to go. Then the teams traded baskets before Kemp's save.

Detroit's Joe Dumars, who had 25 points despite the flu, missed two jumpers as time ran out.

Nets 105, Bucks 102

New Jersey is dominating Milwaukee. Drazen Petrovic scored 27 points and Kenny Anderson 19 as the visiting Nets withstood a late rally for the sixth straight victory over Milwaukee in two seasons.

Derrick Coleman added 18 points and 15 rebounds for the visiting Nets. Bernard King, signed by the Nets on Saturday after a lengthy rehabilitation of an injured knee, did not play.

Frank Brickowski led the Bucks with 26 points, and Eric Murdock had 18.

Milwaukee's Blue Edwards missed a long 3-pointer at the buzzer.

Bulls 101, Trail Blazers 91

Portland's losing streak reached four with its third straight at home.

Michael Jordan had 34 points and 11 rebounds for Chicago, which won its fourth straight game with one remaining on an eight-game trip.

Portland has lost four in a row for the first time since March 1, 1991, and three straight at home for the first time since Feb. 18, 1989.

The Blazers are 1-4 since allegations surfaced that some members of the team had sexual contact with two 16-year-old girls in Salt Lake City.

Cliff Robinson had 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Blazers. Scottie Pippen added 23 points for Chicago.

Celtics 87, Warriors 82

Without injured Chris Mullin, Golden State was slowed in more ways than one. Missing their scoring leader, the visiting Warriors switched to a slowdown offense. The result — their lowest point total this season.

Kevin Gamble had 20 points and Reggie Lewis added 19 for the Celtics.

"We made an offer to them and they turned it down," he said. "We didn't turn them down."

Dokes, a former WBA champion, kidded that he was "going to Disneyland" after Santarpia stopped the fight. Bowe scored a knockdown midway through the first round and then battered the 34-year-old Dokes. Boos cascaded down on the ring from the crowd of 16,322 when the fight ended.

"It's difficult to measure this now," said Dokes, who added he will continue fighting. "I don't feel I was given a fair opportunity."

He was given an opportunity, however. He simply didn't measure up to Bowe.

"They should have stopped it after the first knockdown," Bowe claimed. "I said early on that Michael Dokes would be right in front of me and I expected to knock him out. It was just a matter of when."

Now, it's a matter of who — who is next.

Bowe ready for next victim

NEW YORK (AP) — After a mismatch in his first defense, will Riddick Bowe look for more of a challenge in his next fight?

Or will the heavyweight champion find another easy victim, perhaps a Tommy Morrison or Alex Stewart?

Bowe's homecoming at Madison Square Garden lasted all of 139 seconds Saturday night. He pummeled an outclassed Michael Dokes with 20 punches before referee Joe Santarpia stopped the bout.

The 25-year-old native of Brooklyn said it would "be my pleasure to come back to the Garden and fight again." But his next defense of the WBA and IBF crowns is expected to be in May at Atlantic City, N.J., and will be a pay-per-view affair. Bowe seemed to lean toward a rematch with Evander Holyfield, from whom he took the undisputed title last Nov. 13.

"I would welcome that fight," Bowe said.

Rock Newman, Bowe's manager,

wants his man to fight twice more this year. The biggest purses would come from matches with Holyfield, who announced his retirement following his loss to Bowe, the first of his career, and 44-year-old George Foreman.

Holyfield, now managed by rock star Hammer, has indicated he wants to fight again. Foreman, who worked the Bowe-Dokes fight for HBO, was noncommittal about his future, except to say he planned to fight again this year.

"Those are possibilities," Newman said. "We'll sit down, talk it out with all the parties and see where we stand."

None of those parties will be Lennox Lewis of Britain, the WBC champion. Lewis was awarded that belt after Bowe dumped it in the garbage during a dispute over sanctioning rights and payments.

Newman made it clear again Saturday that Lewis is not in Bowe's immediate future.

"We made an offer to them and they turned it down," he said. "We didn't turn them down."

Dokes, a former WBA champion, kidded that he was "going to Disneyland" after Santarpia stopped the fight. Bowe scored a knockdown midway through the first round and then battered the 34-year-old Dokes. Boos cascaded down on the ring from the crowd of 16,322 when the fight ended.

"It's difficult to measure this now," said Dokes, who added he will continue fighting. "I don't feel I was given a fair opportunity."

He was given an opportunity, however. He simply didn't measure up to Bowe.

Fromm the Outfield

By DAN FROMM

A true hero

I was getting ready to watch the Riddick Bowe vs. Michael Dokes fight Saturday night, when the ring announcer said that Arthur Ashe was dead.

I never saw Ashe play tennis that I can remember, but I know he was a great player. He was a superstar because he won the U.S. Open and Wimbledon and more importantly because of his personality both on and off the tennis court.

Arthur Ashe personified everything that is good about sports. Like Jackie Robinson in baseball, Ashe was a black man excelling in a white man's game. He used his stardom to fight for things he believed in. He spoke out on apartheid, taught tennis to underprivileged children and became a spokesman for AIDS education.

Hearing the announcement of Ashe's death before the Bowe-Dokes fight provided a clear picture of a growing problem in professional sports. Riddick "Big Daddy" Bowe, the heavy-weight champion of the world, was set to fight a middle-aged ex-con. Bowe would earn seven million dollars for the fight; "Dynamite" Dokes only 750,000 dollars.

"Big Daddy" knocked out Dokes in about 90 seconds—big deal. Dokes is a has-been and never should've been in the ring with the "champ." Lennox Lewis is the number two-ranked boxer in the world and he should've been fighting Bowe, but "Big Daddy" pulled off a big duck.

Bowe will probably fight George Foreman next in a 500-pound battle of the bulge.

The fight Saturday represented everything that is wrong with professional sports: a chump champ being paid way too much money to fight the eleventh-ranked fighter in the world; a champ who is even a bigger "trash-talker" than Deion, and Dokes, a rehabilitated drug-user getting paid three-quarters of a million dollars for doing absolutely nothing. He didn't deserve a title fight and it's clear that he hadn't worked for it either.

Arthur Robert Ashe Jr. represented everything that is good in professional sports. He was an unlikely champion, who, through determination and hard work, rose to the top in his sport. He then used his celebrity status to help others.

Ashe was a gentleman. He is remembered by many as having a high moral code and playing tennis with dignity. He is a true sports hero and an example to all.

Arthur Ashe personified one of the oldest rules of sports that is lost among the majority of professional athletes today, for it wasn't whether he won or lost (he usually won), it was how Arthur Ashe played the game that made him great. I wish there were more like him; he'll be missed.

Ashe remembered by Clinton

By The Associated Press

Arthur Ashe, who rose from the segregated courts of Richmond, Va., to become a tennis great, is remembered by President Clinton as a great man off the court.

"Arthur Ashe never rested with fame," Clinton said Sunday after learning of Ashe's AIDS-related death the previous day. "He used the strength of his voice and the power of his example to open the doors of opportunity for other African-Americans, fighting discrimination in America and around the world.

"In the last years of his life he continued his tenacious battle for others in the face of a disease he could not beat. He was a true American hero and a great example to all of us."

A man who rose through the tennis ranks of the court, U.S. Indoor tournament chairman Tom Gowen — Ashe's ballboy at the 1963 tournament — remembered Ashe not just as a great player.

"He was such a gentleman, on and off the court," Gowen said. "He never threw his racket, never argued a call. He handled himself with quiet dignity."

Tributes to the only black male to win Wimbledon and the U.S. Open came from all over the world and from all walks of life.

"I ask that we stop for a moment of silence here to remember an extraordinary human being who transcended his sport, his race, religion and nationality and in his own way helped to change the world," Martina Navratilova said as she offered a prayer after winning a tournament in Yokohama, Japan. "We will always remember you, Arthur."

Ashe died Saturday in New York from pneumonia related to the AIDS virus, which he contracted from an unscreened blood transfusion during heart surgery in 1983. But he never ceased to be active until forced to cancel a speaking engagement Saturday in Hartford, Conn.

"He didn't take it lying down, did he? He was out there doing things, taking care of business to the end," said Jimmy Connors, who lost to Ashe in the 1975 Wimbledon final.

"If anybody would say to go ahead and play and go give them a show, it would be him."

"That's what he did. He never sat still. He had a style and a form all his own. He didn't copy anyone's game. He made his mark not just in tennis, but in world events."

Black tennis players credited Ashe with opening the doors for them professionally.

"It was thanks to him that I could have a career in tennis," said Frenchman Yannick Noah, who won the French Open in 1983. "It was him who, when I was young, gave me the dream."

"He was a missionary for black American sports. Just appearing on a tennis court was a challenge."

Zina Garrison and Lori McNeil, two black tennis players from Houston, remembered Ashe as a friend and a mentor who transcended the issues of race, sports and AIDS.

"The man was bigger than just one race and one group of people," Garrison said from Atlanta, where she was appearing at a tennis-equipment exhibition. "He was loved by us all, and I think he will be remembered as a loving and caring person."

McNeil, also at the Yokohama tournament, said she met Ashe in 1975 at a clinic at Houston's MacGregor Park. They last spoke at an AIDS benefit in November.

"As a black player, I admired him a lot and looked up to him," she said. "Like any other black player, he gave us a dream and made it a reality. He was definitely a forerunner for all of us."

The Colorado AIDS Project in Denver canceled a fund-raising event scheduled for April 17 at which Ashe was to have appeared.

"The sports world has lost a tremendous spokesperson for AIDS," said Julian Rush, executive director of the Colorado organization. "No one didn't like Arthur Ashe."

Mark Miles, chief executive officer of the ATP Tour, sent a message to the players Sunday.

"I cannot think of a better role model, not only for our game but for everyone," the message said. "Arthur holds a special place in our hearts as he was a founding father of the Association of Tennis Professionals and the ATP's second president."

Philippe Chatrier, former president of the International Tennis Federation and now a member of the International Olympic Committee, was among those who seemed shocked that Ashe had died, although it was known since last spring that he had AIDS.

"I am truly sad," Chatrier said. "He was one of my best friends. I knew that he entered the hospital two weeks ago, but I learned the news with a lot of sorrow."

Aussie feels at home at Pebble

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Maggie has a mission when she and husband Brett Ogle return from a three-week trip home to Australia.

She'll go house-hunting, looking for a new home in the United States, possibly in Denver, maybe in Orlando, Fla., Brett said.

Then he changed his mind. "Oh, hell, maybe we'll just pitch a tent here at Pebble Beach," Ogle said.

The lanky, chipper Australian demonstrated his affection for the area — and his joy at success in the United States — by planting a kiss on the 18th green Sunday after his three-stroke victory in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

"I really feel like I belong here," Ogle said. "I really feel like I belong on the American tour. I really feel I have the game to play against the best players in the world."

He proved his point in chilly showers, compiling a hard-fought, 1-under-par 71 to turn back Billy Ray Brown and acquire his first American triumph with a 276 total, 12 under par.

The triumph confirmed the faith he had in himself when he ended a five-year stay on the European tour by voluntarily giving up his playing rights there to join the American circuit this season.

"What this means to me is unbelievable," Ogle said.

"It was a goal, a lifelong dream, to play in the Masters," said Ogle, who now is assured him of a place in the annual spring gathering at Augusta, Ga. "Maggie and I had a goal of a home in the United States," he said. And the $225,000 he pocketed from the

Humphrey shot in leg

ALABASTER, Ala. (AP) — Miami Dolphins running back Bobby Humphrey, recently arrested in a Georgia drug case, was shot in the leg today on an interstate highway.

Alabaster police Lt. Stanley Oliver said Humphrey was taken to Shelby Medical Center, where he was reported in good condition. Humphrey was a star player for the University of Alabama from 1985-88.

Oliver said a suspect was taken into custody but had declined to give a statement until an attorney arrived. The name of the suspect was not released.

Police Chief Larry Rollan said officers were alerted to a problem on Interstate 65 near the Alabaster exit about 7:10 a.m. by motorists who called police headquarters. When police arrived at the scene, he said, Humphrey was lying on the side of the road with a gunshot wound to the leg.

Rollan said a U.S. marshal, who happened to be driving past, had stopped and was holding a revolver when police arrived. The police chief said the suspect was at the scene and was taken into custody at that time.

Police did not immediately know what led to the shooting. It occurred in the northbound lane of I-65 about a half-mile south of the exit to Alabaster, some 20 miles south of Birmingham.

Humphrey, a Birmingham native who became Alabama's all-time leading rusher, was arrested Jan. 31 in a Columbus, Ga., hotel on charges of cocaine possession, aggravated assault and destruction of hotel property. He also was charged with giving police a false name.

The assault charge stemmed from a fight with former Alabama teammate Vantries Davis of Phenix City, Ala.

Humphrey, who was released on $12,500 bond, did not appear before authorities as scheduled last week in Columbus.

The 26-year-old Humphrey was acquired by the Dolphins in a 1992 trade that sent running back Sammie Smith to Denver. Humphrey had 102 carries for 471 yards and a touchdown and caught 54 passes for 507 yards and a TD for the AFC East champion Dolphins.

Nine ranked teams go down; Kansas falls short in Lincoln

By The Associated Press

A shakeup could be in store among the best teams in the Top 25

when The Associated Press college basketball poll is released tonight.

Three of the top 10 teams — No. 3 Kansas, No. 4 Cincinnati and No. 9 Iowa — lost over the weekend.

Among the entire Top 25, a total of nine teams lost.

The biggest shocker came Sunday at Lincoln, Neb., where Kansas lost for the 13th time in its last 17 games at the Bob Devaney Sports Complex.

Freshman Terrance Badgett led a second-half surge and made some key plays at the end that lifted Nebraska to a 68-64 upset. The Cornhuskers (15-7 overall, 2-4 Big Eight) have won four of the last five meetings with the Jayhawks (18-3, 5-1), including a home game last season in which they won on a last-second basket.

"I think we give them our best shot every year," Nebraska forward Bruce Chubick said. "Our crowd really got up for us today. They gave us a lift."

Rex Walters opened the second half with a 3-point jumper to give Kansas a 12-point lead, but Badgett scored six points in a 11-point Husker run that put Nebraska up 44-43 with 12:58 to play.

Nebraska led 66-64 with about 15 seconds left when Walters drove for the basket and kicked the ball out. Badgett came up with the ball, raced for the basket and made a layup to wrap up the win.

In other Top 25 games Sunday, No. 7 Michigan downed Purdue 84-76, No. 8 Arizona beat California 93-81, No. 13 Wake Forest crushed Temple 106-69 and N.C.-Charlotte surprised No. 18 Tulane 68-64 in overtime.

No. 1 Indiana 73, No. 9 Iowa 66

At Iowa City, Calbert Cheaney scored 27 points and Indiana (20-2) completed a season sweep of Iowa in the Big Ten. Iowa (14-5) retired Chris Street's jersey number at the game, honoring their inspirational leader who was killed in a Jan. 19 three-vehicle collision.

No. 2 Kentucky 82, No. 11 Vanderbilt 67

Travis Ford made four 3-point shots and had nine assists as Kentucky (17-1) avenged its only loss of the season back on Jan. 13. The Commodores (17-4) remained winless in 19 games against Kentucky in Rupp Arena.

Memphis St. 68, No. 4 Cincinnati 66

Memphis State stopped visiting Cincinnati's 14-game winning streak behind Billy Smith's career-high 27 points. Cincinnati (17-2) trailed 67-66 when Lazelle Durden missed a 3-point try from the left corner with 10 seconds left.

No. 5 Duke 67, Notre Dame 50

At South Bend, Ind., Thomas Hill scored 17 points and Grant Hill had 16 as Duke (17-3) won its 35th straight game against non-conference opponents. The Blue Devils have won 15 of 17 against Notre Dame.

No. 6 North Carolina 104, N.C. State 58

North Carolina (18-3) rebounded from a pair of recent losses by scoring the most points in its 180-game series with North Carolina State. George Lynch scored 14 for the Tar Heels at home.

No. 7 Michigan 84, Purdue 76

At Ann Arbor, Mich., Michigan held two 15-point leads in the second half and Purdue could pull no closer than six. Jimmy King scored a career-high 24 points for Michigan (18-3, 7-2 Big Ten) and Juwan Howard added 18.

No. 8 Arizona 93, California 81

At Tucson, Ariz., Arizona withstood a second-half rally. Arizona (15-2, 9-0 Pac-10) had a 71-49 lead with 9:42 left, but Cal then went on a 15-0 run. The Wildcats converted 14 of 16 free throws in the final 4:46 for their 13th straight win.

No. 10 UNLV 82, UC Santa Barbara 69

J.R. Rider scored 31 points as the Runnin' Rebels (14-2) extended the nation's longest homecourt winning streak to 58 games.

No. 12 Florida St. 86, Connecticut 74

At Storrs, Conn., Rodney Dobar scored a season-high 26 points, and Florida State (16-6) sent Connecticut to its fourth straight loss. The Seminoles have won eight of nine.

Boston College 63, No. 14 Seton Hall 62

At Boston, Billy Curley scored off a rebound with less than a second left, lifting Boston College past Seton Hall (16-6). The Eagles have won four straight Big East games.

No. 15 Pittsburgh 71, St. John's 69

David Cain missed a potential game-tying jumper as time expired, and Pittsburgh (14-4) held off St. John's at home.

No. 17 Arkansas 74, Florida 66

Corliss Williamson scored 18 points, and Arkansas (15-4) won despite shooting just 30 percent in the first half at Gainesville, Fla.

N.C.-Charlotte 68, No. 18 Tulane 64

At Charlotte, N.C., Bershan Thompson's jumper from the top of the key with 22 seconds left in overtime proved to be the game-winning points. The loss snapped an 11-game winning streak for Tulane (16-4, 6-1 Metro).

No. 20 Marquette 87, DePaul 76

Freshman Roney Eford scored 24 points as Marquette (17-2, 5-0) won its 10th straight game and took over the Great Midwest Conference lead at the Rosemont Horizon.

No. 21 Utah 84, Colorado St. 71

At Salt Lake City, Utah got 24 points from Josh Grant and 21 from Jimmy Soto, avenging its only Western Athletic Conference loss of the season.

No. 22 Georgia Tech 93, Maryland 79

Travis Best made 6 of 8 3-point shots and finished with 25 points, leading Georgia Tech (12-6) over Maryland at Atlanta.

Providence 66, No. 23 Georgetown 58

At Landover, Md., Tony Turner got the game's only field goal of overtime, leading Providence past Georgetown (12-6).

No. 25 Michigan St. 75, Minnesota 63

Shawn Respert scored 21 of his 28 points in the second half and Michigan State (12-6) snapped a four-game home losing streak.
