Documentary relates story of 'Mr. Pampa'

Editor's note: A 52-minute documentary film on M.K. Brown will be shown at 3 p.m. Feb. 28, in the Committee Room of the Chamber of Commerce Building, according to Anne Davidson, curator of the White Deer Land Museum. The title of the film is "In the Grand Tradition; M.K. Brown, Englishman in Texas," according to Davidson. An editorial, printed at the time of Brown's death, is on page 4 of today's edition. Additional articles concerning Brown and the making of the documentary film will be published this week in The Pampa News.

Mr. Pampa. That is the name by which many people knew Montagu Kingsmill Brown when he died on Sept. 10, 1964. Considering his contributions to Pampa, it's not an exaggeration.

During his time in the Texas Panhandle and more specifically Gray County, Brown made his fortune, established a museum, built bridges, administered cattle ranches, established civic organizations and delved into local politics while at the same time trying to help those who needed help.

To understand his story you would have to begin in the heart of Great Britain.

Brown was born to an Irish mother and a British father in the little village of Eastcote, Middlesex County, England, on Sept. 22, 1878.

At the age of seven he was sent to Brackley, England, where he attended Magdalen College School, just 20 miles from Oxford. Things went well for Brown until he was 15 years old and had to leave Brackley. His father had entered troubled financial waters and it was up to Brown to sink or swim.

Unfortunately, that meant the end of his formal education. Brown was forced into the real world of London to look for employment.

What formal teaching Brown had received by the time he was 15 years old left an impression on him. He knew the importance of education and promoted it vigorously. One of the many things he was known for in Pampa was his generosity with academic scholarships awarded through the M.K. Brown Foundation.

His first job was in London with a timber merchant where he worked as an office boy for two and one-half years. His salary was $2 a week, a sum he referred to in later years as "huge."

For his second job, he worked in a bank and made a grand total of $250 a year. After a year he received a $50 raise.

In the 1890s, adding machines were not yet available and whatever adding or subtracting needed doing had to be done with pen and paper or in the head. His ability and talent with numbers would prove to be valuable in the future.

As time passed, Brown became bored with the banking business and decided to set out on his own to make his own fortune. He believed by heading to Canada or Australia to farm or raise livestock he could do just that.

Destiny would have other plans. The Boer War began and Brown saw his opportunity to travel and seek adventure. According to his biography, his experiences in the war were colorful and he hoped to return to Africa again.

His uncle had other plans, however. Please see BIOGRAPHY, page 3

M.K. Brown

By JOHN McMILLAN

It was no coincidence that at the funeral of philanthropist M.K. Brown in 1964, Boy Scouts from the Pampa area served as his pallbearers.

Brown, who contributed heavily toward the Boy Scouts program in the area during his lifetime, had requested that the youths serve as pallbearers at his funeral.

Brown made all the arrangements for his own funeral, recalls Pampa resident Clotilde Thompson, a long-time friend of Brown. Thoughtfulness, it seems, was a forte of the English-born gentleman.

Eloise Lane, the official historian of Gray County and Pampa, remembers Brown for his congeniality. "He had the reputation of being friendly to everyone and helpful to people in need," she said.

Brown's altruism was legendary, in fact. "He always gave generously to everything he belonged to, and he gave to almost all the churches in Pampa," Thompson noted.

Brown's contribution to Gray County history was outstanding, observed Anne Davidson, curator of the White Deer Land Museum. "I think his vision and his enthusiasm for this part of the country, and his generosity, caused him to contribute greatly to things that still have a lasting effect on this area," she said.

Brown particularly excelled at befriending young people, Davidson recalled. "He was very concerned about young people and his contribution there, his generosity and his money that he gave toward that means, still has a great bearing on this community even today ... He would spend time and energy wherever young people had the need."

Bill Waters, chairman of the board of the philanthropic M.K. Brown Foundation, said Brown — whose formal schooling ended at age 15 — "was influenced by his not being able to pursue an education himself, on account of his father having suffered financial reverses at the stock market in London ... Mr. Brown thought it was highly important for young people to pursue obtaining an education and he helped numerous young people go to college."

Waters noted that Brown empathized so much with young people partly because he knew how humble his beginnings in the United States had been.

When Brown arrived in New Orleans at age 24 after a cross-Atlantic voyage from England, his possessions were few — $100 and an English hat and cane, Thompson said. Brown later told her that he threw the hat and cane away because he wanted to become a "full-blooded Texan," she said.

But his British-bred gentility and accent remained throughout his life. Thompson remembers Brown having a "very erect" posture, "just straight as a poker." Thompson, who did secretarial work for Brown when she was employed with the Pampa chamber of commerce, remembers his English accent as "very nice. If he was dictating a letter to me or we were just talking in conversation, he might say, 'Well, I got up this morning and had my bath'" (pronounced bawth). "Bath, to you," he would add, imitating an American pronunciation.

The congenial Brown loved to joke, Thompson said, "and when it was on himself, he thought it was even funnier. Some people don't quite understand a joke on themselves, you know. They don't want to."

Among the wittier anecdotes of Brown related to his participation on horseback in the Boer War, fought during the reign of Queen Victoria. "He always said that he learned to ride a horse from Queen Victoria," Thompson recalled.

Youngsters pose direct questions to president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty kids came calling at the White House for an extraordinary TV talk session Saturday in which they peppered President Clinton — and daughter Chelsea — with questions that were curious, serious and altogether touching.

"What do you do for fun around here?" asked one youngster.

"What are you going to do to end homelessness?" queried a 12-year-old with no home to call her own.

From a 13-year-old with the AIDS virus: "President Bush took $350 million away from AIDS research. I want to know if you're going to put that back."

And in the simplicity that can come only from a child: "A lot of people across the world are fighting and killing each other. I want to know if there's anything America can do to stop it."

Clinton sought to answer each question with sensitivity while offering realistic assessments of the giant problems at hand.

"I know it's hard to be young now," he told the youngsters. "When I was your age it was a lot easier to be a young man. We worried about liquor and cigarettes. Nobody worried about guns and drugs."

The live ABC special, "President Clinton: Answering Children's Questions," was extended from 90 minutes to two hours as the youngsters and Clinton established instant rapport trading experiences in the ornate East Room.

The children, ages 8 to 16, were gathered around him on risers, many dressed in their Sunday best. Others phoned in questions to host Peter Jennings on an 800-number during hours that otherwise might have been devoted to cartoon time.

Jennings also took the children on a tour of the Oval Office with Clinton, and teen TV star Jaleel White showed them what it takes to get a bill through Congress.

"I'd like to know that" Clinton quipped.

After the show ended, the youngsters ate lunch with Clinton.

The show gave America its first chance to visit with the Clintons' 12-year-old daughter, Chelsea, and the family cat, Socks.

Chelsea, dressed in blue jeans and a striped sweater, scooped up Socks and perched on a stool next to her dad to field a few questions from her peers.

Asked what it was like having Secret Service agents follow her to school each day, the eighth-grader shyly replied, "It's OK, they stay out of the way. ... They have an office on the third floor of my school and they sit there most of the day." She added that the agents come out to watch her during gym and for after-school soccer practice. The youngsters' questions to Clinton often came from their hearts — and from the particular problems facing their own families.

Twelve-year-old Venus Rodriguez told Clinton she became homeless when her family moved from New York to San Francisco without a set place to stay. Clinton told her he wanted to put more money into building affordable homes and rehabilitating rundown housing.

"I don't think Americans like the fact that children like you, your mother, are in homeless shelters just because they have to move from one town to another," Clinton said. "A lot of American who have money and homes really want us to do something about it and would really support our doing more about it."

He told Joey DePaolo of Brooklyn, N.Y., who has had HIV since he was 5, that he was pushing for more

AIDS research in legislation that "I think you'll be pleased with."

"Meanwhile, you hang in there," he told the young man. "We'll keep working until we find a cure."

Fifteen-year-old Angela Brown, a recovering drug addict from Fort Pierce, Fla., asked Clinton what he would do to cut down on the demand for drugs and stop them from coming into the United States.

"You're a brave girl and I'm glad you're here," Clinton told her. "My brother is also a recovering drug user."

Clinton said he was shifting money from drug enforcement to rehabilitation and treatment to try to "rescue a lot of young people's lives."

The youngsters also displayed typical curiosity about life in the White House. One young man told Clinton that the White House was "so perfect," so formal, that "I would feel constrained to actually live here."

Rapist-killer returns to Death Row

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Branded a sadistic sexual predator and condemned to die, rapist-killer Kenneth McDuff heads back to Death Row with some key questions still unresolved.

Foremost, of course: How many young women has he brutalized and killed?

"We think we've got three more in Waco," said Crawford Long, McLennan County assistant district attorney and a prosecutor in McDuff's most recent murder trial.

"I don't know how many others around the state," he added.

Counting three teen-agers he killed in 1966, investigators believe the McDuff death toll is at least nine, and probably more.

A Houston jury ruled last week that McDuff, 46, kidnapped and killed Melissa Northrup, 22, a pregnant mother of two, and that he should pay for the crime with his life. McDuff has continually denied killing anyone.

As he was being led from the courtroom one day, someone asked him how many people he had killed, and he glared at the questioner and said, "None. Yet."

Mrs. Northrup disappeared March 1, 1992, from the Waco convenience store where she worked as an overnight clerk. Her body was found April 26 floating in a Dallas County gravel pit.

Cause of death was unknown but her hands were bound behind her back.

An accomplice insists McDuff kidnapped, sexually assaulted, tortured and probably killed Colleen Reed, 28, who disappeared in December 1991 from an Austin carwash.

Her body has not been found.

In Austin, Travis County authorities must decide whether to prosecute the Reed case as "insurance" in the event the Northrup verdict is overturned on appeal.

McDuff's lawyers say that is probable.

Houston attorney Walter Reaves maintains that State District Judge Bob Burdette's "decision to permit the accomplice's testimony in McDuff's trial was inflammatory and reversible error."

Prosecutors scoff at that contention.

Meanwhile, Long says McDuff is the prime suspect in the disappearances of Valencia Joshua, Brenda Thompson and Regina Moore, all of Waco.

"All three of them were with McDuff right before they disappeared," he said. "In fact, he had Regina in a car and ran a police roadblock. She has not been seen since."

Falls County Sheriff Larry Pamplin said last week that McDuff remains a suspect in several other homicides, including some dating back to the 1960s.

In 1966, a Fort Worth jury assessed McDuff the death penalty for his role in the shooting deaths of two teen-age boys and the rape-strangulation of their female companion.

That sentence later was commuted to life in prison when the U.S. Supreme Court threw out the state's death penalty.

Marlin ex-convict Roy Dale Green, then 18, now 45, recounted for the Houston jurors last week how McDuff slaughtered the two young cousins before raping the young woman and strangling her with a broomstick.

Perot urges delay on new taxes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Ross Perot, whose independent campaign for president gathered a million votes in Florida last fall, exhorted an overflow crowd Saturday to refuse to send more money to Washington until Congress cuts spending and approves a balanced budget amendment.

"They can take every penny we send up there and spend it and ask for more," Perot told the enthusiastic crowd.

Perot's speech came exactly one year after he made an appearance on Larry King's radio talk show and told people he would run for president if they asked him to. He said he would make a national address on the economy on NBC on March 21.

"You have changed this country in the past year in ways people felt could not be done," he said. "You have proved that you can leap over tall buildings with a single bound ... just think about you could have done if you would have had a decent candidate."

The appearance, which included Perot dancing with a Girl Scout to his theme song "Crazy," seemed like a campaign appearance.

"We've got work to do, but we got the crazy aunt out of the basement," the Texas billionaire said. "This time last year, nobody talked about the national debt or the deficit. I said it was like a crazy aunt in the basement. Everybody knew she was there, but nobody talked about it."

Perot, who collected 20 percent of the vote in Florida last November, said several changes need to take place before any increase in taxes is approved.

"We've got to let Congress know that before we give them any more money to spend we want government reform.... We want to put our people back to work so we can balance our budget and pay off the national debt," he said.

Perot said very little about the new administration or Clinton's economic plan.

"They are trying to do too many big things at once and they are going to blow the tires off the car," he said.

Perot's speech was interrupted several times by applause and standing ovations.

The crowd thundered when he called for a balanced budget amendment, a line-item veto and congressional reform.

"In addition we want to get rid of all foreign lobbyists," he said.

He also blasted government bookkeeping and the ever changing figures given on the size of the deficit.

"We aren't going to give you a penny until you start keeping books," he said.

And he added that the government should provide a quarterly report to the taxpayers.

Perot also pushed those attending to join his United We Stand America organization and urged them to also sign up five friends and ask them to enlist another five other friends. He said until the organization gets rolling that he is taking the expenses out of his pocket.

"Maybe we should change our theme song from 'Crazy' to 'Nobody Does It Better,' he said.

Biography

Andrew Kingsmill, Brown's uncle and a prominent English banker, tried to get his nephew interested in a vast farm and ranch land in the southwest part of the United States. These were White Deer Lands, an extension of the old Francklyn Land and Cattle Co.

The Francklyn Land and Cattle Co. was owned and operated by a group of English businessmen headed by Lord Rosebury, the British Prime Minister at the time. Kingsmill was his agent and had visited the area, becoming friends with the manager, T.D. Hobart.

With the encouragement of his uncle, Brown traveled to the United States. His point of arrival was New Orleans. It was April 1903. He had little money and knew very few people, yet he made his way to the Panhandle and a job which waited for him in Hobart's office.

Brown was 24 years old and was in charge of keeping the books for the White Deer Land Co. His early experience in the banking industry was now paying off. Brown excelled at his job and soon his salary rose from $25 a week to $75 a week. But bigger things were in his future.

As time passed, Brown was made Hobart's assistant. At this time, Hobart managed both the White Deer Lands and the JA Ranch which covered most of Gray, Carson, Hutchinson and Roberts counties.

In addition to his growing responsibilities with the company, Brown had also married Josye Brown in August 1922 in Ardmore, Okla., her family home. She preceded him in death in 1959.

By 1957, the company had sold the last of its land and Brown had become the co-manager of the White Deer Land Co. along with C.P. Buckler.

Soon, Brown would buy the building located at 116 S. Cuyler for which he had great plans — he was going to turn it into the museum of history. Today, it is known as the White Deer Land Museum. Unfortunately, Brown would never see it open to the public, it was completed just a few months after his death.

From the late 1950s to his death in 1964, Brown was involved in many philanthropic programs, but that was nothing new for him.

As early as 1913, two years before becoming a citizen of the United States, he was elected as the second mayor of Pampa.

He was president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Board of City Development in 1928. In addition, he was a member of the Pampa Rotary Club, a member of Pampa's first Masonic lodge where he served as Master Mason for more than 50 years.

Throughout his life, Brown seemed very interested in history. His involvement as a Life Member of the Panhandle Plains Historical Society and a member of the Pampa Genealogical and Historical Society proved that devotion.

Examples of his generosity seem to abound both in Pampa and in the surrounding areas.

Brown financed the construction of a number of bridges in town including the London Bridge and the Red Deer Creek Bridge, both located near what would become the M.K. Brown Auditorium and Civic Center. Both these bridges were donated to the city by Brown.

Perhaps one of the things he was proudest of was his involvement with the local Boy Scout council.

Because of his work with the Boy Scouts, Brown received the Silver Beaver Award from the Adobe Walls Council of the Boy Scouts of America and the title of Chief Scout, its highest honor.

The high regard Brown had to the Boy Scouts was perhaps most evident at his funeral. In a letter explaining the arrangement he expected, Brown wanted only members of the Adobe Walls Boy Scout Council to be his pallbearers. Eight Eagle Scouts were chosen.

By his actions and deeds, Brown seemed to accomplish what he set out to do all his life.

"To give back to Texas and my own Gray County all that they have given to me. When I came here I had nothing. All I have come from this wonderful country ... and I plan to give it all back," so he said, and so he did.

Attorney questions reason for Bustamante indictment

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former U.S. Congressman Albert Bustamante and his wife, Rebecca, were indicted by a federal grand jury to justify the government's four-year, multimillion-dollar investigation, an attorney says.

A.L. Hernden, an attorney for Mrs. Bustamante, said former U.S. attorneys told him that when the Justice Department spends as much money on an investigation as was spent on the Bustamantes' case, indictments have to follow.

The Justice Department spent $4 million to $5 million on the probe, Hernden estimated.

Hernden said he would call on the San Antonio Bar Association, the League of United Latin American Citizens, the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund and women's rights groups to conduct independent investigations into the government's inquiry.

"We can't stand to see an injustice like this take place," he said during a news conference Friday.

Officials with the U.S. attorney's office would not comment on the charge.

The Bustamantes were indicted Thursday on 10 counts of racketeering, conspiracy, bribery and receiving illegal gratuities.

However, Hernden said the indictments do not show that Mrs. Bustamante did anything illegal.

"The money claimed (in the indictments) in gratuity is every penny she's earned in the last nine years," he said.

Hernden also said the $30,000 gratuity she is alleged to have received in November was for real estate work she did for State Realty Inc.

In addition, Hernden said the gratuity charge in connection with a $20,000 loan guarantee from San Antonio Video Corp. was all repaid.

As for the $35,000 bribery charge, Hernden said there never was a bribe.

The $35,000 in question came from the sale of a note secured by the sale of a home the Bustamante's owned near St. Mary's University, he said.

Hernden and Bernard Campion are representing Rebecca Bustamante. Alan Brown and former U.S. Attorney Paul Canales of Corpus Christi are Albert Bustamante's attorneys.

The Bustamantes met with their attorneys Friday morning, but did not speak to the media. Canales and Brown have also declined interviews.

Brown

Among the wittier anecdotes of Brown related to his participation on horseback in the Boer War, fought during the reign of Queen Victoria. "He always said that he learned to ride a horse from Queen Victoria," Thompson recalled.

Brown also had a festive side to him that revealed itself frequently, the Pampa woman suggested. "If the sun came up, he felt that was reason enough to have a party," Thompson said. "I remember the last one that he had — it was not long before his death — and he was honoring the early-day schoolteachers in Gray County."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our Opinion

Remembering 'Mr. Pampa'

Editor's note: This is the editorial which appeared Sept. 13, 1964 in The Pampa News.

"Mr. Pampa" has released mortal contact with his legion of friends in Pampa and throughout Texas, but his noble deeds will long live in the hearts of those who knew and loved him.

Thousands from near and far joined Saturday afternoon (Sept. 12, 1964) to pay final tribute to Montagu Kingsmill Brown, the kindly man who had done so much for so many.

Only a few hundred could get into the church to say their farewell. Great crowds were outside and others said a silent prayer as the funeral rites came into their homes by radio.

Mr. Brown was a great man. His memory will always be a part of Pampa. It would be impossible to list all of his many philanthropic benefactions.

He always said that Texas, the Panhandle and Pampa had been good to him and he felt a great personal satisfaction and warmth in being able to repay in his own way what he considered a debt he owed to his neighbors and friends.

His heart was good to overflowing. There, of course, were many public philanthropies, but the ones he liked to think best were those in which he helped friends and those in need without the fanfare of publicity.

No history of Pampa and the Panhandle area can be written without highlighting the guiding influence and hand of Mr. Brown in the march of progress from the time he arrived here when Pampa was a village of a few hundred pioneers right down to the modern day city.

Tribute will again be paid to Mr. Brown's service to his fellowmen in Pampa churches this morning.

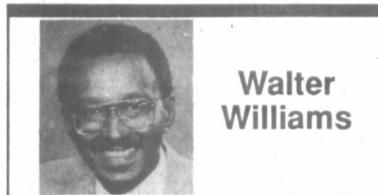

Prayers will be said from the heart of a city bereaved over the loss of a good man, a good friend and a good citizen whose memory will be revered among Pampans in all walks of life.

Racial double standards

America's intellectual elites, aided by the media, are bringing racial/ethnic chaos to our country. Part of this process is found in Jared Taylor's well-documented book, "Paved with Good Intentions." We've all heard of the 1986 Howard Beach incident in New York where a bunch of bat-wielding whites brutally beat two black youths and sent another running to his death. This became national and international news. Three years later, a black was set upon and shot in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn — again, nationally reported.

But here are some stories I bet you haven't heard. In 1989, a white man was badly beaten by a group of blacks in Cleveland. As he was lying in the street, a black got in the man's truck and ran over him to the cheers of the crowd. In January 1991, four blacks agreed to kill the first white person they saw. A Northeastern University student in Boston was unlucky enough to be the first; he was stabbed to death. In 1991, a black man was arrested for murdering seven white people. He explained the murders by "a deep-rooted hatred for white people."

Of course, this could be your standard news-media's selective reporting of the news, but it could also be a result of their college training. Some universities, among them the University of Cincinnati, have student handbooks that say, and professors who teach, that blacks are incapable of racism. Therefore, media people see the Howard Beach and Bensonhurst incidents — where whites murdered and beat blacks — as racist and view situations where blacks do the same to whites as simply crimes.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson led the call for Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott's suspension for making racially derogatory remarks about blacks. In 1989, Gus Savage, a black congressman from Chicago, responded to a reporter: "I don't want to talk to you white (expletives deleted)." Do you think Jesse called for censure of Gus Savage? Can you imagine the outrage if Jesse Helms made similar remarks to a black reporter? Then again, Brother JJ has a problem with racially derogatory remarks as well, having referred to New York as "hymietown." In 1991, Dr. Khalid Muhammad gave a talk at Columbia University in which he referred to the school as "Columbia Jewiversity" and New York as "Jew York City" and advised that the blacks who attacked the Central Park jogger were in jail because of a "no-good, low-down, nasty white woman." Jesse didn't call for Muhammad's suspension. Jesse probably shares Stanford Professor Charles Lawrence's view that speech codes should only protect "historical victim groups."

With Donna Shalala as head of Health and Human Services, ideas of the intellectual elite might become the law of the land. At her University of Wisconsin, a white student was suspended for addressing a black as "Shaka Zulu." However, when three white students objected to being called "rednecks," they were told that the word was not on the forbidden list and no offense could be taken. At UCLA, a student newspaper editor was suspended for running a cartoon featuring a rooster who, when asked how he got into UCLA, replied, "affirmative action." However, when a UCLA minority student newspaper said the Europeans "do not possess the qualities of rational thought, generosity and magnanimity," nothing happened.

There's a real question of how long we can remain a reasonably civil society in the wake of elite half-baked schemes that are tearing us apart. "Paved with Good Intentions" should be on everybody's bookshelf. Admittedly, it is tragic reading. But it's far better to know and do something about liberals tearing down our country before it's too late.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Feb. 21, the 52nd day of 1993. There are 313 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 21, 1965, black activist Malcolm X was shot to death by assassins identified as Black Muslims as he was about to address a rally of several hundred followers in New York.

On this date:

In 1846, Sarah G. Bagley became the first female telegrapher as she took charge at the newly opened telegraph office in Lowell, Mass.

In 1866, Lucy B. Hobbs became the first woman to graduate from a dental school, the Ohio College of Dental Surgery in Cincinnati.

In 1916, the longest and bloodiest battle of World War I — the Battle of Verdun — began in France.

In 1925, the New Yorker magazine made its debut.

In 1972, President Nixon began his historic visit to mainland China.

Looking for a jump-start

For years and years Americans have been looking for some sort of concoction to take as a pick-me-up.

That's how Coca-Cola became so popular in its early days.

Coke was supposed to be an elixir that would cure the tired, the doldrums, and the blahs. There's the old rumor early Coca-Cola had a bit of cocaine in it. That rumor has never been confirmed, but when new Coke appeared several years ago somebody wondered, "What did they do? Take the cocaine out?"

Older Americans, like my own father, called Coca-Cola "dope." I can hear him now, "Let's go in here, son, and get us a cold dope."

Then, there was the infamous Hadacol. It was to be the remedy of all time for the puniest, and it sold like wild fire until somebody figured it was all that alcohol that made Hadacol so effective as a lifter of spirits.

Remember SSS tonic? "Say, 'Yes, yes, yes,' to SSS," went the commercial. There was also "Serutan."

"And don't forget," went its commercial, "Serutan spelled backwards is 'natures.'"

We were all trying to avoid "tired blood" back then. "Tired blood" — also known as iron deficiency anemia, was what you took when, as they used to say back in the '50s, your get up and go, got up and went.

Now, of course, it's health food that's supposed to cure what ails you. My problem is I don't like health food. I don't eat seaweed, trail mix, or organically grown Jerusalem artichokes As a matter of fact I don't eat artichokes from anywhere, even Beirut.

Lewis Grizzard

So what does a guy like me do when his "get up and" says adios, when he's tired, overworked, and needs a little something to get through the rest of the day?

I think I've found it. I was going through the newspaper the other day and came across quite an intriguing article from Japan.

It was about medicinal tonics that have become a billion-dollar industry in Japan. These tonics, explained the article, are aimed at "exhausted Japanese, from children cramming for exams to executives working late on reports — in fact, anyone who seeks that extra burst of energy."

One can buy a small bottle of such tonics from anywhere from $1.20 to $24. The cheaper tonics, said the article, contain vitamins, amino acids, caffeine, and minerals such as calcium and iron.

The more expensive tonics, however, are a bit more exotic. How exotic?

Pretty damned exotic.

They include Korean ginseng and essence of the genitals of deer, turtles or snakes.

The article did not explain what exactly is the essence of the genitals of deer, turtles or snakes (I didn't know snakes had genitals) or just exactly how it is captured and how it is put into those little bottles. All of which I would really like to know. Maybe a follow-up to the article will explain.

Anyway, users of the tonics are enthusiastic about them. The article quoted a 28-year-old Japanese man who works for a computer firm as saying:

"My diet is unbalanced. I have no time for breakfast. I eat too much precooked food, and not enough vitamins or vegetables. I drink tonic to make up for my diet."

Sound like you?

It sounds like me. My breakfast usually is several cups of coffee. I love Wendy's hamburgers for lunch and you can add broccoli, asparagus and spinach to my list of hated vegetables.

I could use a few bottles of the Japanese tonics myself, but I'm not too sure about drinking anything that includes the essence of the genitals of deer turtles and snakes.

If I drink it, would I want to run through the woods, sun on a log after a nice swim or slither through the grass with my beady eyes and darting tongue?

Or would I spend all my time chasing girl deer, turtles and snakes?

The more I think about it, all that sounds like a lot of fun, as long as I could get the taste out of my mouth.

Perot still haunts President Clinton

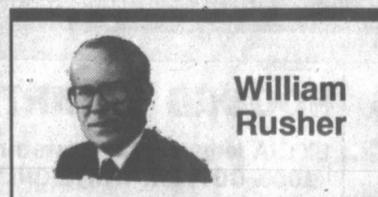

Which single thought do you suppose is uppermost in President Clinton's mind these days? The problem of restoring health to the economy? Finding an attorney general? Stopping the slaughter in Bosnia?

I have no doubt that he spends a lot of time on each of these — and on many other problems equally difficult. But Mr. Clinton, like most presidents, is first and foremost a politician. And presidents in their first term spend an extraordinary amount of time worrying about how to be elected to a second.

No doubt Mr. Clinton (again, like most presidents) tells himself that his chance of re-election depends on how well he does during these next four years, and, thus inspired, goes briskly off to the Oval Office to do the best he can.

But Mr. Clinton has one problem that is unique; at least, I can't think of any recent parallel. For across his path to a second term there falls not only the shadow of the Republican Party, a highly competent organization still firmly in the grip of the conservative movement, but another shadow as well: that of Ross Perot.

Never forget that George Bush won 38 percent of the popular vote last November, and Bill Clinton 43 percent. The rest — 19 percent — went to Mr. Perot, whose platform was simplicity itself: outrage over the federal deficit, and a grim determination to do something about it. What's more, this outsider (who happens to be a multimillionaire) has already signaled his intention to keep his political following organized under his management, and is hitting what looks very much like the traditional campaign trail preparatory to a second run in 1996.

Of course, there is a sense in which Mr. Clinton can afford a second Perot candidacy better than the Republicans can. After all, in 1992 their three-way split elected Mr. Clinton. But there are all sorts of pitfalls for him on the road to re-election, if he fails to reduce the federal deficit and those Perot supporters start to increase, or begin to move in the wrong direction. That alone is enough to convince me that Mr. Clinton is dead serious about cutting spending and increasing taxes.

Paradoxically, Mr. Clinton might actually like to see Mr. Perot run again, provided the president's own record on the deficit is acceptable enough, or

Mr. Perot's appeal still strong enough, to prevent more than a quarter of 1992 Perot voters from switching to the Republican candidate.

On the other hand, if Mr. Perot doesn't run, Mr. Clinton will need to capture more than a third of 1992 Perot voters to win re-election, and the Republicans would need just about two-thirds of them to defeat him. Since most of them are so-called "Reagan Democrats," and the GOP's general reputation for fiscal responsibility is still a good deal higher than George Bush's or the Democratic Party's, that might not be too hard for an attractive Republican candidate to achieve. One more good reason for Mr. Clinton to reduce that deficit.

Moreover he must assume that the Republicans will be busy opening lines of communication to Mr. Perot. They certainly won't want him as their own nominee in 1996 — after all, the man has demonstrated remarkably little in the way of real qualifications to be president. But they must surely long for his endorsement of their candidate, and there may be things that they can in good conscience offer him in return, short of the nomination. Of course, if there's to be a bidding war, that's a game at which the Democrats, too, can play.

The long and short of it is that Ross Perot is back (if he ever went away), and that is probably the biggest single fact in the run-up to 1996.

Letters to the editor

The value of life

To the editor:

Years ago my dad said to believe very little of what you read, and only half of what you see. Advice well given but never heeded.

Today the papers are full of things that I wish that I never knew. Murder, rape, racism, and hate. WHY are people so self-destructive? Do they realize life is not just for them?

1) Murder. A most foul deed, regardless of who or why. To take something away that GOD only can replace they have no right and should be punished to the full extent of the law. God said that if a man should willfully murder another man he should be put to death.

2) Rape. What is it? Taking something that is not given freely. Remember the word NO means just that, not maybe or in a minute, or later, NO means NO. Sooner or later it will come back to haunt, on this you can rely.

3) Racism. I am color blind when it comes to people. I don't understand it, I will not accept it, nor will I try to explain it. Racism is a poor excuse for anything, and must not be allowed to live or thrive in any form!

4) Hate. Where does it come from? My Bible says it comes from the devil. It must because man cannot live long enough to be able to acquire the amount of hate they have displayed in the paper and on television news.

If man does good tell him, it belittles his contribution bringing his race into focus. Let people see the man not the color. If a woman accomplishes a task that no other woman has. Give her honor for that which she has done. Not her gender.

This world is full of humans that are misguided, misused, and manipulated then discarded by men and woman of power, then left to suffer the consequences. What is sad that happens more often than not right here in this great country.

You may not agree with all or any part of this letter but you must agree that something needs to be done soon. Whether it will help or not remains to be seen.

Dallas Cowboys fan

To the editor:

I have been sitting here pondering back about the miraculous events which occurred that Sunday at the stupendous edifice, The Rose Bowl, where the Super Bowl XXVII took place. The weather was just astoundingly beautiful. The crowd was titillatingly enthusiastic and I longed to be there.

I was completely enthralled by the exuberance exhibited by the enthusiastic Cowboys team by the end of the first quarter. By the end of the 2nd quarter the Cowboys had clearly established their superiority; it was funny how the Bills desperately struggled all the way through the fourth quarter.

The Bills could not even come close to the magnificent and dominant Dallas Cowboys.

This is a reminder to me of when the buffaloes laid slaughtered on the prairie hundreds of years ago. This is very astonishing, but true.

We have been very amorous for the time that Dallas can produce such a happy obnoxious occasion with excruciating pain to an opponent. The weather in my cell was just overwhelming for a day of football. The crowd noise never bothered me over the F.M. stereo headphones. I clapped to purple hands and screamed Novacek until I was perfectly convinced that not a soul in other cells was trying to take a nap. Again we all want to thank the Dallas Cowboys for their outstanding performance.

After a careful study I deemed it appropriate to add that the early Cowboys rode appaloosas and used rifles to gun down the buffalo as a sport of moving targets. "As we pledge our allegiance to Novacek for our place in history books, we can also note the immaculate Emmitt Smith. We have often had an idol as a kid. Mine was Batman; but if I were a kid again I'm sure school would have been let out in honor of our most honorable thoroughbred. He is of pure stock as the Cowboys racehorse. Thanks for TV-VCR

To the editor:

Lamar Elementary would like to thank the 151 individuals who took the time to participate in "Driving for Education" at Culberson-Stowers. Because of your help and the generosity of our local Chevrolet dealership, our school will be provided with two TV-VCR combinations and eight basketballs. "Driving for Education" is an excellent program and an opportunity for community involvement and support of our schools. Thank you Culberson-Stowers and each and every test driver.

Lamar Booster Club

Appreciates the support

To the editor:

On Feb. 13, many people in our city volunteered their time to support area mentally handicapped athletes at the Pampa Special Olympic basketball Tournament. Volunteers are the foundation of Special Olympic events. Without their support the organization would not exist. Pampa I.S.D. provided all the facilities for the tournament. Mr. Gattis' furnished lunch for all the athletes, coaches and volunteers. The Pampa-Borger Officials Association contributed their judgment skills for the day. Many local businesses sponsored the tournament by donating products which were used at the activities. The tournament was a huge success due largely to the support of these organizations and the community volunteers. We would like to express our sincere gratitude to the community of Pampa.

Detainees not 'prisoners'

To the editor:

Before people like W.A. Morgan and Ray Velasquez condemn the sheriff for "coddling" inmates, they should first take the time to gain some knowledge about how our legal and jail systems work. Their comments clearly show that neither of them has any idea of what they are talking about.

Most of the detainees at the jail are not "prisoners" and they are not there to be punished, either. They are people who have been accused of a crime and are unable to post bail due to their financial situation; or, in the case of detained parolees, are accused of a specific violation of the rules and/or conditions of their parole status, being held on a pre-revocation or "blue" warrant under which there is no bail until after a parole violation hearing.

Even icons of society such as W.A. Morgan and Ray Velasquez are subject to arrest if someone files a complaint and that complaint is accepted for prosecution by the county or district attorney. They would be jailed and required to post bail if they could not post bail, they would be held in custody until they obtain a court adjudication on the alleged offense. With today's overcrowded and overburdened court system, getting an adjudication will take weeks, maybe months. I'm speaking from first hand knowledge. I recently spent five months in the Gray County Jail over something I was not guilty of. When I got the matter to a hearing it was shown that the woman making the allegation lied on me in order to exact revenge for an imagined wrong I'd done her.

What I'm saying is that in our country, under our present legal system, people are presumed innocent until proven guilty. The constitution prevents pre-trial detainees from being punished in any manner until after conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction. Those guys (and girls) have just as much right to watch TV as any person out here walking the street free, W.A. Morgan and Ray Velasquez included. These self-righteous bigots need to gain some proper perspective along with a dose of human compassion for their fellow man, in jail or otherwise. If either of these folks spent just one day incarcerated they'd be very grateful for a TV to look at, to give them some contact with the outside world, to help pass the long hours spent waiting for justice to be meted out.

We're not living in Hitler's Germany, the sheriff's office isn't the gestapo, the folks locked up in jail aren't "prisoners" — prisoners are taken during an act of war. Nobody is suggesting the sheriff install saunas or whirlpools — that would be ridiculous. But a few cheap TVs from a discount store aren't hurting anything or anyone, except the Morgans and the Velasquez's of this county.

I'm a taxpayer here, too. I think Randy Stubblefield is doing a great job in the office of sheriff, I applaud his efforts in every way and I support him 100 percent. I think Randy will prove to be the best sheriff this county has ever had — he's proving it already. If I had the financial resources to do it, I'd pay for the TVs in the jail out of my own pocket, knowing I'd brought a little relief to the troubled minds awaiting trial who're stuck in jail.

By the way, convicts in Texas prisons have big screen TVs in every cell block and dayrooms, but don't tell W.A. Morgan or Ray Velasquez, their precious tax dollars paid for those, too!

Insurance firm lifts suspension

AUSTIN (AP) — State Farm Insurance Cos. will resume selling auto insurance policies to new customers Monday, ending a six-month suspension of sales in Texas.

State Farm officials said the suspension was needed to catch up with the record sales experienced in the first half of 1992. The company has not sold new policies since August.

"We needed a little time to catch our breath," said State Farm spokesman Charles Wirth. "We've now handled that backlog, trained additional employees and are ready to begin selling automobile insurance again to new customers."

During the first six months of 1992, State Farm received more than 600,000 new applications for auto insurance — double the amount for the same period in 1991.

Wirth on Friday said much of the increased demand was due to the state's compulsory insurance law, which took effect in September 1991. The law requires drivers to show proof of insurance to obtain a driver's license, auto tags and vehicle inspection stickers.

Wirth said another factor was a Department of Insurance rule that required insurers to offer coverage to uninsured motorists at lower than normal rates.

State Farm, the largest auto insurer in Texas, has about 3 million policyholders.

VFW launches campaign

To the editor:

This is an open letter from VFW Post 1657 in Pampa to all the residents of Gray County and the surrounding area.

At our Feb. 9 regular meeting, the membership in attendance voted unanimously to send out a letter to all the churches in our area pertaining to the Clinton proposal to openly allow "homosexuals" to serve in the United States military. Along with our letter, we included copies of letters we hope everyone who feels strongly about this matter will sign and forward to our elected officials, those being President Clinton, Senators Gramm, Nunn and Kreuger, and Congressman Sarpalius. Both the state and national headquarters of the VFW have voiced strong opposition to this proposed policy change. As a post, we too are absolutely opposed to this proposal. This is not a political issue, but rather a moral one. We believe that any change in existing policy would be detrimental to the good order of our military as well as in direct conflict with the Christian principles this nation was founded upon.

We have asked each church leader to read our letters to his congregation, emphasize the importance of this issue to the well-being of our nation, and make copies of our letters available to their memberships. We would respectfully ask all concerned citizens to take these letters, sign them, and forward them to the elected officials named on each letter. The cost of sending five letters is minimal when compared to the horrendous damage that will result in the lowering of our standards and morals. In conjunction with our letter writing campaign, we also voted to start placing the $29 American Flag stamp upside down on all our future correspondence as yet another sign of our distress regarding this issue. Please join us in making our elected officials aware of your absolute objection to the Clinton proposal. Only we can make a difference and only our objection to the Clinton proposal. Only we can make a difference and only our apathy and indifference will allow this tragic mistake to become national policy.

Grandmother missing

ARLINGTON (AP) — Police searched Saturday for a missing west Texas woman last seen by relatives on Thursday.

Bertie Seales Purcell, 66, of Muleshoe was last seen about 8 a.m. Thursday when she dropped off her grandson at Arlington's Pantego Christian Academy, said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson.

Ms. Purcell was visiting her daughter in Arlington when she disappeared.

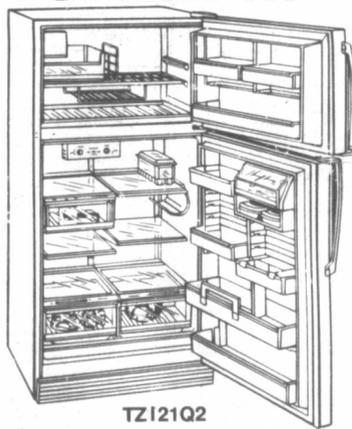

The six-year-old grandson told police Ms. Purcell did not get out of the car and that nothing seemed suspicious as he walked in front of the school.

Police searched the woman's home in Muleshoe and officers traced the route from Arlington to the Bailey County city without finding any clues, Anderson said.

Ms. Purcell has no health problems. She was last seen driving a 1980 baby blue Mercury Marquis four-door sedan with Texas license plates 855-LHK.

You've had potato salad, but have you had sweet potato salad? Mix cooked, cubed potatoes and a little cubed Granny Smith apple. Season with chopped green onions and toss with a vinaigrette made with orange juice and orange rind. Add toasted pecans for crunch.

Bread and Danish, even eclairs, need the high-gluten content of bread or all-purpose flour. But finer cake flour produces the more tender crumb you'd want in a cake.

And here's elegant icing for that cake. First frost it with white icing that doesn't harden right away, then pipe on narrow stripes of chocolate icing. Now, while icing is still wet, draw a knife across the lines, first in one direction, then the other.

Ordinary crescent rolls from the dairy case are terrific as is, but wow! when you spread on a filling before rolling 'em up. Try your favorite herbs mixed into a tablespoon of sour cream, or chopped cranberries, orange peel and a little sugar. Bake as package directs.

Minding your own Business

By Don Taylor

Marketing's dying art

Often in workshops and seminars I ask business owners to define the term "marketing." One of the most common answers I get is "selling." While selling is certainly a very important part of marketing, it is only a part.

To define marketing as selling is a little like describing an automobile as an engine. Yes, autos have engines, but there is much more. An engine alone does not make an automobile. However, the engine does provide the power for that automobile.

I believe personal selling provides the "go power" in a marketing program. Selling is a function that is critical to every element of the marketing mix. Many feel that selling is also a dying art.

We all sell

There is an old saying that nothing happens until somebody sells something. I have seen this proved again and again.

In the early 1970s, I traveled extensively in the state of Michigan. I worked in many of the cities where automobiles rolled off the assembly lines. I can still recall seeing thousands of acres of brand new cars in towns like Flint, Pontiac, Saginaw, Bay City and Detroit. The cars weren't selling and there was a glut of brand new automobiles.

I also remember the boarded up windows of the businesses in those cities. The message is clear to me now; it doesn't matter that you can produce, your business will struggle if you can't sell it. It is equally true for big corporations and for each of us as individuals.

Robert Louis Stevenson said, "Everyone lives by selling something." Stevenson was right. A teacher lives by selling ideas and sound educational principles. A business consultant lives by selling solutions to difficult problems. An automobile dealer lives by selling dependable transportation and status. A welder lives by selling mechanical skills.

Some of you are thinking wait a minute, Don, what about the "dying art" statement. If everyone is selling something, how can selling be a dying art?

Unfortunately, few workers today realize how important selling is to their livelihood. Most do not understand how their only job security comes from a healthy economy. An economy where businesses are selling their products and services at a profit. Even if you work for the government, business profits and taxable wages paid by those businesses generate the salary you receive.

Although it is a common misconception, no one is a "born salesperson." You must develop sales skills in the same manner you develop other skills — through knowledge and practice.

Some thoughts on selling

In my more than 40 years of selling experience — for the record I started selling my mother on the concept that cookies were good for me when I was 4 years old — I've learned a few good selling basics I'd like to share with you.

- Always tell the truth.
- Sell the benefits — not the features.
- Selling is a service — a service with value.
- Don't underestimate the value of product knowledge — it is important.
- Don't argue with a potential customer — you may win the argument, but you'll lose the sale.
- Put yourself in your customer's shoes — even if they don't fit.
- Look for "I'm ready to buy" signals — then ask for the business.
- Don't laugh at your competitor's selling errors — there is a lesson to learn if you're alert.
- The sale isn't over when you get the money — give follow-up service and sell them again.
- Don't bet the farm on customer loyalty — you're only as good as your last sale.
- Don't wait until you're in trouble to start selling — dig the well before you're thirsty.

Highlights in business

BERLIN (AP) — Mercedes-Benz AG may follow the lead of archrival BMW and build its first passenger vehicle plant in the United States, a company spokesman said.

Mercedes said it will decide within six months where to build the new factory, which will produce a recreational vehicle similar to Chrysler Corp.'s Jeep line.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the agency that disposes of failed savings and loan institutions will resign in two months, he told employees.

Albert V. Casey, president of the Resolution Trust Corp., said Thursday he would leave the RTC at the beginning of April.

Casey, 72, has been the chief executive of the RTC since October 1991.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Humana Inc. shareholders overwhelmingly approved a plan separating the company's hospital business from its health insurance operations.

Company officials said Thursday 96 million of 159 million voting shares were voted in favor of the split.

The company that will run Humana's 77 hospitals will be called Galen Health Care Inc.; the health plan side, which insures 1.7 million people, will retain the Humana name.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tiffany & Co. announced a voluntary recall for hand-painted china that may exceed federal lead levels. It's the first time the tony retailer, famous for its crystal and jewels, has ever recalled a product.

Hijacked plane flies from Russia to Estonia, Sweden

By MICHAEL WALLIN
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A hijacker commandeered a Russian jetliner today and stalked the aisles with hand grenades, demanding to go to the United States. The plane flew to Estonia and then Sweden, where the man finally surrendered, police said.

Police said none of the approximately 42 people still aboard the plane was injured.

They said the hijacker placed his hand grenades on the stairs to the plane and gave himself up at Stockholm airport, after about 5 1/2 hours of negotiations. He was taken away in a police bus.

The hijacker, accompanied by his wife and baby boy, commandeered the twin-engine Tupolev-134 plane on a flight from Siberia to St. Petersburg. His wife was stunned by his actions and sat in the back of the aircraft during the ordeal.

The hijacker agreed to stopovers in Europe after authorities convinced him the aircraft did not have enough fuel to fly to the United States directly.

The aircraft landed first in Tallinn, Estonia, then in Stockholm, and it was believed the hijacker hoped to hopscotch his way to the United States.

Sixty-six passengers and six crew were originally aboard, but nearly three dozen people, including three Americans, were released in Estonia.

There, the Baltic News Service said the hijacker gave officials a three-page, handwritten letter stating, "We will land in New York together or we will die together."

The man relented and freed 12 more people in Stockholm, but police spokesman Ola Karlsson quoted the hijacker as saying there would be no further releases.

Superintendent Nils G. Danielsson, the chief police negotiator, said the hijacker had repeated his demand to fly to the United States.

Estonian Defense Minister Hain Rebas, who led a team of negotiators in Tallinn, told reporters the hijacker was believed to be an ethnic Azerbaijani.

After hours of talks, the plane was refueled and allowed to take off for Sweden, said Valentin Privalov, the deputy head of Russia's civil aviation air traffic control center in Moscow.

Stanley Olochovik of Fayetteville, N.C., said the hijacker freed him in Estonia because he was an American. Olochovik described the hijacker as extremely nervous, and said he smoked heavily and walked up and down the aisle with the grenades in hand.

The man and his wife were believed to be in the 20s; their son was about a year old.

Olochovik said the man's wife told him her husband had had trouble finding work in Azerbaijan.

The jet originally took off from Tyumen, in Siberia. Nearly three hours into the flight, the hijacker handed a note to the crew containing his demands and a pin from one of the hand grenades, Privalov said.

Estonian authorities said the hijacker also walked into the plane's cockpit and showed the pilots the grenades.

The hijacker threatened at one point to blow up the plane unless his demands were met, Privalov said. Authorities said the man had not harmed any passengers or crew members.

The man initially wanted to fly to Helsinki, Finland, but agreed to allow the plane to land in the Estonian capital when told that it had insufficient fuel for the trip, Privalov told The Associated Press.

Rebas, the Estonian defense minister, said he tried to persuade the man to give up in Tallinn, but the hijacker refused.

"It would be better to surrender in Estonia because we would deal more leniently with you than the Americans," Rebas recalled telling the man. "The hijacker was polite, bowed and said: 'No thank you.'"

Olochovik told The Associated Press that he spoke at length with the hijacker and urged him to let the passengers go.

"I told him: 'A friend of mine is having heart problems.' And I told him that we were Americans. He said: 'OK, I'll let you go. I like America. That's where I'm going.'"

"I gave him my card and said, 'Listen, when you get to America, mention my name and they'll help you' — just to pacify him," Olochovik said.

"He said: 'I'll probably die anyway, but thank you.' Then he put the card in his pocket."

Two other Americans were released with Olochovik, authorities said. They were identified as a Las Vegas couple, Alvin Snapper, 63, and Kathleen Snapper, 53.

Pampa faces familiar foe in bi-district clash

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

The Pampa Harvesters face a familiar foe in the Class 4A bi-district round at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night at the West Texas State University fieldhouse in Canyon.

At the same site a year ago, the Harvesters raced to a 77-64 win over Lubbock Estacado on the way to the Class 4A state semifinals in Austin.

Of course, the Harvesters are looking for a repeat performance against the Matadors, who have been to the playoffs four times in the last seven years.

A year ago, the Harvesters jumped out to a 9-1 advantage and led by as many as 21 points, but head coach Robert Hale remembers last year's game as quite a skirmish.

"We didn't really have that easy a time with them. We had to fight pretty hard before defeating them," Hale said. "They'll definitely be out to avenge that situation."

Dwight Nickelberry, the only returning starter from last year's state semifinals, scored 11 points in Pampa's well-round scoring attack.

Zebbie Lethridge, who had game-scoring honors with 21 points, returns at one of the guard positions for Estacado. In fact, three other starters are also back for the Matadors.

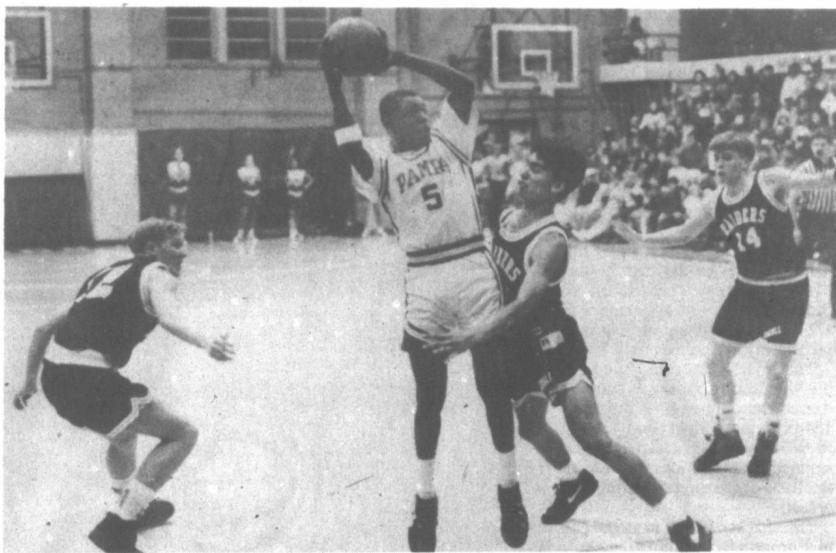

"Estacado's got basically the same team they had last year. They've got four starters back, plus a sophomore, to go with them," Hale added. "Zebbie is their top scorer and best outside shooter. We're going to face an experienced team."

Estacado posted a 17-13 record this season and finished second to Plainview in the District 2-4A standings.

The Harvesters, 23-5 overall, have won five district titles in a row and are seeking their third straight trip to the Class 4A state tournament in Austin.

Pampa concluded the 1992-93 regular season by going unbeaten at McNeely Fieldhouse for the fourth year in a row. The Harvesters' have a 46-game homecourt win streak, the area's best record. The team's four seniors — Dwight Nickelberry, Lamont Nickelberry, Matt Finney and Sean Hardman — were never involved in a losing game on the home floor.

Tickets ($2 for students, $3 for adults) are on sale at the Pampa High School athletic office. Tickets will also be available at the gate.

Groom, Fort Elliott girls claim bi-district wins

Tigerettes, Lady Cougars to meet in 1A area round

By DAN FROMM
Sports Writer

Girls' basketball coaches Terry O'Dell of Groom and Curtis Smith of Fort Elliott kept their promises Friday night.

O'Dell was sure his Tigerettes wouldn't overlook any of their opponents in the playoffs and they didn't, coasting to a 62-30 bi-district win over Silverton Friday. Smith promised that both teams from district 10-1A would be able to win in the playoffs and held up his end with a 76-68 win over Hartley.

The Tigerettes went on an impressive 11-0 run to open the game, stopping Silverton's offensive attack with tenacious defense and finding the hoop from inside and outside. O'Dell said afterwards, "It's the same thing that's been happening the last few games. We've been fortunate enough to get after some pretty good teams and intimidate them and play good offensively... and that's what happened tonight."

Silverton coach Bobby Jenschke said her team just didn't execute their game plan.

"We had seen films of them and what we've been working on all week, we just didn't execute well at all. We just played a really terrible first half."

And Groom played an excellent one. The Tigerettes lead 19-2 after the first quarter and the game was over for the most part. But O'Dell didn't want his team to let up. "We just tried to keep our intensity up and have our young girls come in and play well," he said. Ten players made entries in the scoring column for Groom, with senior Karen Babcock leading the way. Babcock scored 15 points; 11 in the first half. Sophomore Misty Homen added 11 points as the Tigerettes improve to 26-3 on the season.

The highlight of the game for O'Dell came late in the second quarter. The Tigerettes were running a deliberate half-court offense. When senior Marie Conrad drilled a three-pointer, the smile on O'Dell's face lit up the gym. "That was a play we've been working on. We called it and she hit it. It's something that's gonna help us down the road," he said.

Next on the road, the Tigerettes meet Fort Elliott. The Lady Cougars will battle Groom Tuesday in the area round, after Fort Elliott beat Hartley in Canyon Friday night. Hartley came into the game 19-2, but the Lady Cougars took the lead early and held on at the end. "We played as well as could have," Smith said in a phone interview Saturday morning.

Fort Elliott, 21-5, was lead by Deidre and Andrea Dukes, who combined for 57 points in the game. It was Deidre early and Andrea late as the Cougars led from start to finish. "I don't remember Deidre missing many shots," Smith said. "She was probably over 70 percent for the game."

But the senior Dukes fouled out with more than six minutes left in the game. The Lady Cougars lead by 10 points at the time. When Hartley made a run and cut the lead to four points, Smith said, "My heart was really thumpin'." Sophomore Andrea Dukes put him at ease as she scored 14 of her 26 points in the fourth quarter.

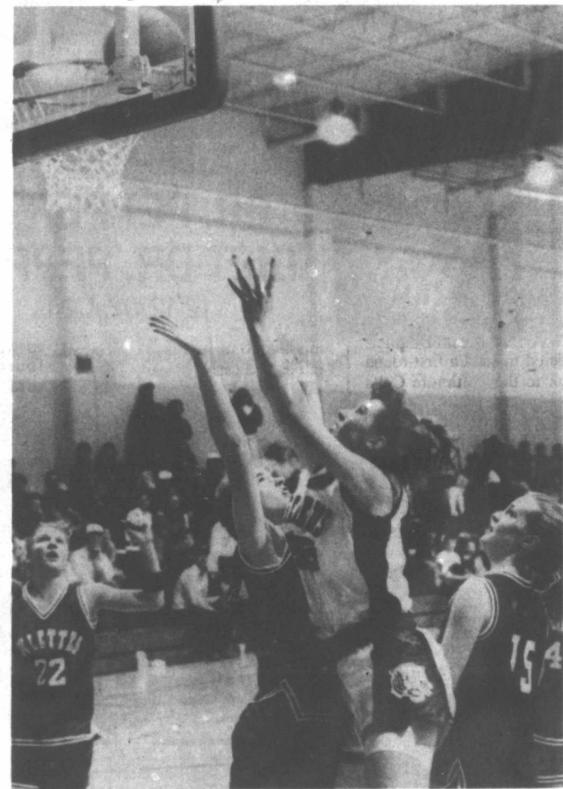

"She told me before the game that her stomach was bothering her," Smith laughed. "But she got all the jitters out. I told her she had to take control with Deidre on the bench and she did." Andrea hit three three-pointers in the quarter.

Tuesday night's area round game in Borger will be a rematch of an earlier meeting between these two teams. The Tigerettes edged the Lady Cougars in overtime 54-51 in the finals of the Samnorwood tournament Dec. 12.

"These girls are ready for Tuesday," O'Dell said. "They are ready and we're not gonna be happy until we step up to that next level."

PHS boys' golf team takes third at Big Spring tourney

Big Spring Invitational

The Pampa High boys' golf team opened the spring season by placing third with a two-day score of 660 in the Big Spring Invitational over the weekend.

The results were surprising for the Harvesters, who haven't been able to practice because of a combination of freezing temperatures and snow-covered links.

"This was the first time out for the boys and they did pretty good, considering the fact they haven't been able to practice," said Harvesters' head coach Frank McCulloch. "I was pretty pleased with them."

Leading the way for Pampa was Cory Stone, who was second medalist with a two-day total of 151.

The Harvesters finished just three shots back of second-place Lamesa. Monahans shot a 608 to win the championship.

The Lady Harvesters were sixth in the girls' division after placing third in the San Angelo Invitational two weeks ago.

At San Angelo, Leslie Bridges led the PHS girls with a two-day total of 193 (108-85). Bridges was followed by Angie Everson, 196 (107-89); Crecia Lindsey, 216 (112-104) Anna Nail 217 (111-106) and Amy Bailey, 230 (121-109).

Marlins will honor late club president throughout '93 baseball season

By The Associated Press

H. Wayne Huizenga had tears in his eyes Saturday when the Florida Marlins held the first practice in team history. And it wasn't because he spent $95 million for a club expected to finish last in the National League East.

"I like what I see," said Huizenga, whose eyes dampened several times during his visit to training camp at Melbourne, Fla. "This is a tribute to the baseball organization that's been put in place here."

Spring training

Marlins president Carl Barger, largely responsible for putting the organization together, collapsed at the winter meetings on Dec. 9 and died. The Marlins will wear a patch on their uniforms in his memory.

"I just think this reminds us that Carl put together the best organization possible," Huizenga said. "From the baseball side of it and the (business) side of it."

Across the country at Tucson, Ariz., the Rockies had their second practice, and Colorado's bad medical news continued. Eric Wedge, projected to be the team's backup catcher, still had pain in his right elbow following offseason surgery to remove bone spurs and reattach muscle to bone. He was told to rest and will be examined Sunday.

"I can do everything but hit and throw," Wedge said, managing to laugh at the extent of his limitations.

At Bradenton, Fla., Pirates manager Jim Leyland surveyed his new-look team, which figures to be much weaker than Pittsburgh's three-time NL East champions. Gone are starters Barry Bonds and Jose Lind and starting pitcher Doug Drabek. Also departed from the 1992 team are reserves Gary Redus, Cecil Espy, Gary Varsho and Alex Cole and pitchers Danny Jackson, Danny Cox and Roger Mason.

The core of the new-look Pirates are three prospects from Triple-A Buffalo — outfielder Albert Martin and infielders Kevin Young and Carlos Garcia.

"The balance isn't as good as it has been — who we've got to pinch-hit, for example," Leyland said. "There are a lot of intangibles here that we'll have to look at."

At Scottsdale, Ariz., rookie manager Dusty Baker is treating spring training like an educational experience. He's inviting guest lecturers to address the Giants.

Hall of Famers Willie Mays and Joe Morgan are scheduled to visit, along with Orlando Cepeda, Bert Campaneris, Vida Blue and Matty Alou. Hall of Famer Willie McCovey has been invited.

"Having all that expertise available is very helpful," Baker said. "I'm trying to bring some tradition back, and also having guys instruct in their specialty, like Campy on baserunning."

Montreal manager Felipe Alou may have a different lecture — one for his son.

Expos outfielder Moises Alou has raised the possibility that he will be holdout because of an impasse in contract negotiations. Felipe Alou may be in the unenviable position of having to fine his son if he stages a boycott.

Rangers' catcher Geno Petralli takes some swings in the batting cage during the opening day of practice.

Moises Alou, one year shy of arbitration eligibility, was second in voting for National League Rookie of the Year in 1992, was angry when he heard from his agent that his salary will be $185,000.

"Moises is very frustrated, very upset," agent Bob LaMonte said. "This contract just isn't going to get done. It's not right. The offer is not fair. Moises said he may not show up at camp on time. He said he just can't live with that salary number."

Deion Sanders, another sometimes unhappy outfielder, was offered a three-year deal worth about $8 million by the Atlanta Braves. However, general manager John Schuerholz isn't optimistic about getting a multi-year contract done.

"It's very unlikely that it will happen," Schuerholz said.

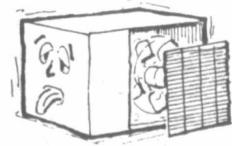

Back on the field, several aging and oft-injured players stretched out their aching muscles.

"It's a matter of staying healthy," Mike Witt said in assessing his chances of filling one of two vacancies in the New York Yankees' rotation.

NBA All-Stars bring back Olympic memories

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — While it's not exactly a Dream Team reunion, Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen might rub their eyes and remember steamy Monte Carlo when they take the court in wintry Utah today.

The entire starting lineup for the Western Conference in the NBA All-Star game consists of players from the U.S. Olympic team. Starters Jordan and Pippen, plus reserve center Patrick Ewing, are the only Eastern Conference All-Stars who played for the United States in the Olympics.

U.S. Olympians absent from the All-Star game are retirees Larry Bird and Magic Johnson, rookie Christian Laettner and Chris Mullin. Mullin was selected as a West reserve, but won't play because of injury.

Because Jordan and Pippen are averaging a combined 78 minutes for Chicago, neither is looking forward to a repeat of the intensity of those epic pre-Olympic practices at Monte Carlo seven months ago.

"It's an opportunity, but honestly, I'd like to get some rest," Jordan said. But with first-time All-Stars Shaquille O'Neal and Larry Johnson in the East starting lineup, Jordan added, "There might be some nervousness. Scottie and I are established, so some of the scoring responsibility will fall to us."

"I don't want to play a whole lot," Pippen said. "But with all the young players on our side, Michael and I may have to do a lot of the scoring."

Eleven-time All-Star Isiah Thomas also will start for the East, while the West has Olympians David Robinson at center, Charles Barkley and Karl Malone at forward and John Stockton and Clyde Drexler at guard.

Despite the fact that many of the players are the same, Barkley said that while the All-Star game is special, it doesn't compare to the Olympics.

"I always look forward to playing in the All-Star game," Barkley said. "I played with the greatest team ever last summer, and while the players at the All-Star game are great, it won't be the same as the Olympics. There was a lot of pressure to win the Olympics. Even though we were heavily favored to win, it wasn't a sure thing. There are only three sure things — death, taxes and staying the same color."

Malone and Robinson also remember the pressure of the Olympics as being much greater than the All-Star game.

"It's great to see these guys again without the competitive thing," Malone said. "This is more of a relaxed atmosphere."

"I've enjoyed playing in the All-Star game," Robinson said. "The guys make the game easy, and I look forward to it. There's no pressure to win or lose. I look at this as a vacation because of the players I'll be playing with."

After 17 months of basketball with little letup, the Dream Teamers might be excused for sounding a little tired. And while deserving of All-Star status, the weariness is showing up in the statistics.

Counting Mullin, eight of the nine Olympic All-Stars have lower shooting percentages than last season. Six of those — Jordan, Pippen, Ewing, Robinson, Barkley and Drexler — are down more than 0.25. Stockton and Mullin have negligible drops, and Malone is the only Olympian whose shooting has improved.

In 1988, the last year collegians and NBA draftees made up the Olympic team, many of them sustained season-ending injuries. Many critics of bringing the NBA into the Olympics suggested this would happen again, robbing the NBA of its biggest stars.

Malone said he was aware of this criticism and has made a point of countering it.

"I feel I had to get myself up more than I ever did before," Malone said. "I've said to myself that

I'd never use fatigue as an excuse. "If I am terrible the rest of the year, I'm not going to say, 'It was the Olympics.'"

Mullin played several games despite a sprained thumb on his non-shooting hand, then reinjured it Feb. 4, forcing surgery that will sideline him for up to eight weeks.

Drexler missed nine games after playing for several weeks with sore knees, and Ewing missed one game with an hyperextended right knee. Otherwise, the Olympians have been healthy.

Drexler doesn't think his knee problem had anything to do with playing at Barcelona.

"I was injured in March," he said. "It was speculative whether I would have surgery. I ended up having surgery, but I don't think the Olympics did anything to make my situation any worse."

Although a rest during the All-Star break might help Drexler improve his 42-percent shooting, he is looking forward to seeing his Olympic teammates.

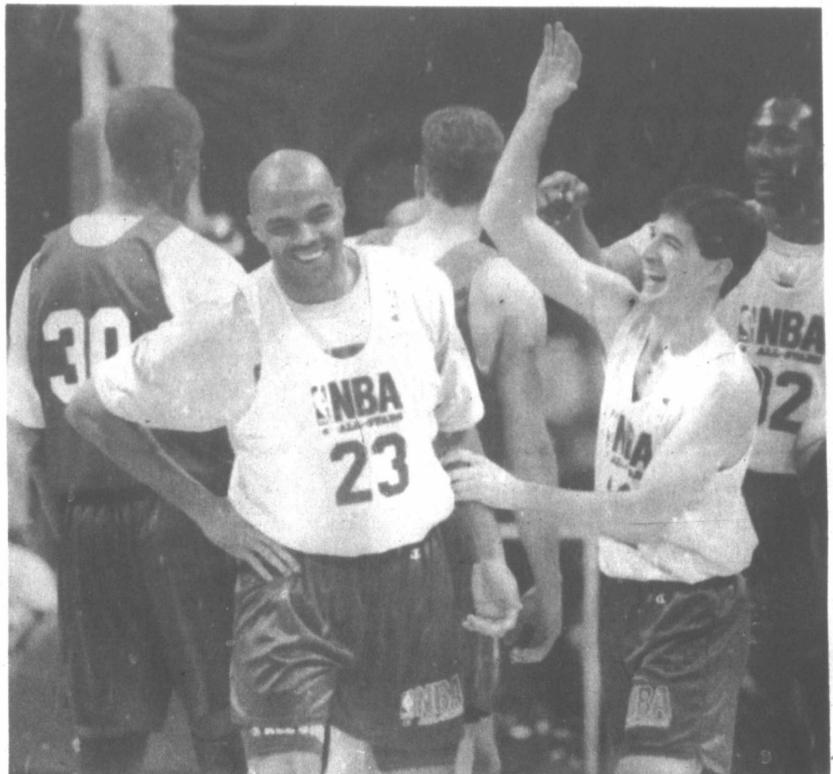

"I think the guys on that team will forever feel a sense of camaraderie," he said. "It's like a reunion when you look at it."

Robinson said he learned about leadership from Jordan and Johnson during the Olympics, lessons he has been able to use this season because of the freedom allowed him by coach John Lucas.

"I saw guys and how they lead," Robinson said. "I tried to pick up the finer points of being like Magic or Michael. Just from watching those guys, I could see when you need to push somebody or get on someone."

Joining Ewing as Eastern reserves are Brad Daugherty, Mark Price, Larry Nance, Joe Dumars, Dominique Wilkins and Detlef Schrempf, another Olympian and the first European NBA All-Star.

The West reserves are Sean Elliott, Tim Hardaway, Shawn Kemp, Dan Majerle, Danny Manning, Hakeem Olajuwon and Terry Porter, who is replacing the injured Mitch Richmond.

Longhorns hold off Baylor comeback

WACO (AP) — Terrence Rencher scored 27 points as Texas withstood a spirited second-half rally by Baylor Saturday during a convincing 88-73 victory.

The Bears (14-8, 6-5 Southwest Conference) rallied in the second half and led 55-54 when Anthony Lewis hit a layup with 9:23 to play. Moments later, Lewis hit a short jumper and added a free throw to give Baylor its biggest lead at 59-54.

But Texas became more aggressive on defense, forcing several Baylor turnovers and regained control of the game.

Baylor started cold from the floor, missing 10 of its first 11 shots, and fell behind early.

The Bears, who have relied on the 3-point shot this season, were 0-10 from behind the 3-point arc before intermission and hit just 3 of their 28 attempts for the game. Baylor shot only 34 percent from the field.

Meanwhile, it was the Longhorns (9-12, 3-6) who shot well early and led 41-31 just before halftime. The Bears cut the lead to 41-35 at the break.

Rencher added six assists, seven rebounds and two steals for Texas. Teammate Gerald Houston added a career-high 16 points.

Aundre Branch led Baylor with 21 points, while Lewis and Alex Holcombe finished with 17 each. Lewis led all rebounders with 20.

Texas coach Tom Penders said he's never seen a better performance from Rencher.

"Terrence Rencher was the difference," Penders said. "He took control of the game early. That has to be one of the best games he's played since he's been at Texas. He did it all for us today."

Baylor coach Darrel Johnson warned that the Longhorns, despite their disappointing record, could be a factor in the SWC tournament next month.

"I don't think anyone is going to want to play Texas once the tournament starts," Johnson said. "They will be a factor in the rest of the SWC race. I promise you."

Red Raiders fall to Owls, 86-79

LUBBOCK (AP) — Adam Peake scored a career-high 21 points and Rice held off a Texas Tech rally in the final minute Saturday for an 86-79 victory over the Red Raiders.

The Owls led 82-72 with 56 seconds remaining when Lenny Holly hit a pair of 3-pointers and Texas Tech added a free throw to pull within 82-79 with 24 seconds to go.

But Marvin Moore sank a pair of free throws and Peake added a

And Penders added that the Longhorns weren't even at their best Saturday.

"We shot a red-hot 38 percent from the field today," he joked. "You don't win too many games hitting only 38 percent of your shots, but today it was enough. I think we caught Baylor at a bad time."

"But our players were hungry. They came out with fire in their eyes today and played a good game against a team we've had trouble with."

Added Branch, "They didn't play like a last-place team. They took control of the game right from the start and outplayed us. I think this has to be our most disappointing loss of the season."

jumper as time expired to seal Rice's victory.

The Owls improved to 9-2 in the Southwest Conference and 15-6 overall while dropping Texas Tech to 3-7 and 12-11.

Rice, which led 41-37 at halftime, took the lead for good on a pair of Peake's free throws that made it 45-43 with 18:09 to go.

Moore and Torrey Andrews each contributed 18 points for the Owls. Lance Hughes led Tech with 22 points.

Eagles ask NFL to investigate Ryan

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles have accused former coach Buddy Ryan of improperly trying to lure Reggie White to Ryan's new team, the Houston Oilers.

The Eagles asked the NFL this week to investigate after Ryan publicly suggested White would want to join the Oilers now that Ryan is their defensive coordinator.

"We have sent a formal letter to the league requesting that the matter be reviewed," Eagles spokesman Ron Howard said. "It's in their hands at this point."

White, an All-Pro defensive end, will become a free agent on March 1, along with 300 other NFL veterans. No club besides the Eagles may officially talk with him until next month.

The Eagles filed the complaint after learning of published statements of Ryan, the Eagles' coach from 1986 to 1990.

In a conference call with writers at the Super Bowl after he was hired, Ryan said: "The Houston Oilers are probably going to be Reggie's top team when he finds out I got the job."

Oilers spokesman Chip Namias said Friday that to his knowledge, Ryan's Super Bowl comment was his only statement about White since being hired.

Ryan told The Philadelphia Inquirer on Friday he was unaware of the complaint, but said White is his friend and had called him several times during the past two years "just to talk."

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello confirmed the league would investigate Ryan.

"One thing the commissioner has to look at in tampering cases is whether someone gained an advantage by his actions," Aiello said. "Did the actions or statements give them any advantage in getting the player?"

Aiello said the last time a team was penalized for tampering was in 1971, when the Miami Dolphins were ordered to send a first-round draft pick to the Baltimore Colts for their improper hiring of head coach Don Shula.

The NFL defines tampering as "interference by a club with the employer-employee relationship of another club, or any attempt by a club to impermissibly induce a person to seek employment with that club or with the NFL." It makes no reference to free agency.

The Eagles last year filed a tampering complaint against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, accusing the team of persuading 1991 draft pick Craig Erickson not to sign with the Eagles. The Bucs later picked Erickson in the 1992 draft and quickly signed him.

Florida State, Kansas will play in Kickoff Classic

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Florida State, expected to be the preseason No. 1 pick in college football, will play Kansas in the Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium Aug. 28, The Associated Press has learned.

Sources said the announcement will be made Saturday. Officials at the New Jersey

Sports and Exposition Authority, which runs the game, declined comment.

Kickoff Classic officials also considered Boston College and Texas A&M as opponents for Florida State. But the Seminoles vetoed A&M because they're still upset they didn't get a chance to play the Aggies in the 1993 Cotton Bowl.

And Boston College was worried about playing consecutive games against Florida State and Miami, which visits BC the week after the Kickoff Classic.

It will be the first Kickoff Classic for Florida State and Kansas, but fourth for the Atlantic Coast Conference and third for the Big Eight. Nebraska represented the Big Eight in 1983 and 1988, while the ACC has sent Virginia (1989), Georgia Tech (1991) and North Carolina State (1992).

Florida State returns 16 starters from an 11-1 team that beat Nebraska in the Orange Bowl and finished second in The Associated Press poll. The Seminoles will be led by quarterback Charlie Ward, who finished fourth in total offense last season with 286 yards per game.

Kansas has 14 starters back from an 8-4 squad that defeated Brigham Young in the Aloha Bowl and finished No. 22 in the AP poll. It was the Jayhawks' best record since 1981 and their best finish in the poll since 1973.

Hearst may undergo knee surgery

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia running back Garrison Hearst will be examined at a clinic in Columbus next week before deciding whether to undergo surgery for a knee injury.

Hearst, whose injury may threaten his status as a top pick in the NFL draft, will be checked at the Hughston Sports Clinic.

Georgia team orthopedist Dr.

William Mulherin has confirmed the finding of NFL doctors that Hearst has a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee. Hearst did not participate in a scheduled workout for NFL scouts Thursday.

The All-American decided to forego his NCAA eligibility for a senior season and enter the draft.

You can make a difference in city cleanup

By PAM LOCKE
Guest Writer

Clean Pampa, Inc. is a non-profit volunteer organization of citizens who want to make our community a cleaner, more attractive place to live, work and play.

We are a member of the Clean Community System (CCS), sponsored by Keep America Beautiful, Inc. The CCS program is the nation's first proven method for utilizing behavioral science principals to change people's attitudes and habits toward litter. There are over 350 CCS communities in the United States. Many of the CCS communities have reduced litter by as much as 80 percent.

We are also affiliated with Keep Texas Beautiful. Established in 1967, KTB works through its more than 300 local Texas affiliates to provide grassroots solutions to Texas' solid waste and litter issues. KTB serves as the coordinating body for Texas' litter prevention, beautification, and solid waste education organizations. KTB and its affiliates work to preserve the natural beauty and environment of Texas through partnerships between grassroots volunteer organizations and the public and private sectors.

We begin by attempting to change human norms about littering. A norm is an accepted way for people to act. Research has proven that there are three situations in which people litter:

- where someone cleans up after them
- where the property does not belong to them
- where litter has already accumulated

Clean Pampa, Inc. focuses on a systematic plan to accomplish its goals, the elements of which include:

- updating ordinances
- improving sanitation technology and waste handling practices
- continuous public education
- better enforcement and publicity of enforcement

How does Clean Pampa get the community involved? Clean Pampa develops programs which teach proper disposal of solid waste to our youth so that future generations will not have to contend with the litter problems we face today.

Clean Pampa, Inc. encourages local business and industry to join us in our efforts to produce a litter free environment and to recycle in all areas.

Clean Pampa, Inc. works with the City of Pampa to improve sanitation technology, and waste disposal practices, together with review and revision of municipal code provisions to make the laws governing litter and waste disposal practices up to date, concise understandable and more easily enforceable.

Clean Pampa, Inc. gives presentations to local civic groups in an effort to enhance the public's awareness of Clean Pampa, Inc. We also assist civic organizations in developing special projects tailored to their particular goals and interests.

Clean Pampa, Inc. works with the local media to improve the awareness factor among the citizens of Pampa concerning our programs and our belief that a clean community is a goal to which we all should strive. Our ultimate goal is to instill pride in our community in order to achieve a cleaner Pampa.

Can you make a difference? Yes! First, don't throw trash anywhere except in a properly covered container. The candy bar wrapper you throw in the gutter today may very well end up in someone's front yard tomorrow.

Second, pick up the litter where it occurs. You should show as much pride in your community as you do in your own backyard.

Third, you can help educate others. Pass along what you know about Pampa's litter problem to others. Show your fellow community members how they can change their behavior towards, and attitudes about littering. Only then will we be able to see visible and lasting improvement in the appearance of Pampa.

Finally, find out how you can get involved with Clean Pampa, Inc. The success of our efforts ultimately depends on community participation and support.

We can't clean up Pampa in one single effort — we need the combined efforts of each and every citizen doing his or her own share — only then can we keep Pampa clean.

For more information, contact Clean Pampa, Inc. at 665-2514, P.O. Box 2697, Pampa, Texas 79066. We can make a difference. The measure of our success depends on your help.

Fierce weather wracks the West

By The Associated Press

Two major avalanches cut off sources of the Aspen, Colo., water supply on Saturday, and traffic through the Sierra Nevada ground to a halt as the latest winter storm dumped up to 3 feet of snow in the Lake Tahoe, Nev., area.

In Southern California, workers battled to stabilize rain-saturated hillsides and tame an overflowing river that threatened homes. As they labored the sun peaked from behind clouds in a reprieve from fierce winter storms that hit the area earlier in the week.

In Tijuana, Mexico, three people drowned early Saturday as water ran swiftly through city streets. No new deaths were reported on the U.S. side of the border, where the toll stood at six from the earlier storms.

The most recent of the storms moved out of Southern California early Saturday after dropping more than 4 inches of rain on some areas.

But weather forecasters said the saturated soil would have little time to dry out with another storm building over the Pacific. It was expected to reach the coast by Tuesday.

In Arizona, Flagstaff declared a state of emergency while more than 30 people were rescued from a mobile-home park, and the National Weather Service issued a flood warning for the Gila River west and south of Phoenix.

Mudslides and erosion threatened costly homes overlooking the sea in the Pacific Palisades area of Los Angeles and along the Mojave River about 60 miles to the east.

In Colorado, Pitkin County Sheriff Bob Braudis didn't know whether the avalanches claimed any victims, because the area was too dangerous to enter.

Cholesterol Discovery Passes Mom's Test

WASHINGTON -- The mother of a research scientist recently lowered her cholesterol more than 20% without changing her eating habits.

After a visit to her doctor, a Florida woman learned that her cholesterol level was an elevated 308 and she was encouraged to change her eating habits. When she returned 10 weeks later, the doctor was astounded that her cholesterol level had dropped to 243. Asked if she achieved the amazing results just by dieting she replied, "No I didn't diet at all, in fact I ate the things I shouldn't eat like bacon, sausage and ice cream. The only thing I did different was take some tablets my son gave me."

The woman's son is Dr. William Morris, director of research and development at National Dietary Research, an organization that seeks nutritional solutions to health problems. Dr. Morris admits that the tablets called Vancol 5000 were designed as a dietary supplement to be used with a low fat diet plan. "She just wanted to put the tablets to the test," says Dr. Morris. "Of course I was pleased with the results she achieved, but now were working on reducing some of the fat in her diet to lower her cholesterol even further."

Vancol 5000 is a chewable food tablet that contains extracts from foods known to lower cholesterol. According to the exclusive distributor for Vancol 5000, inquiries about the new discovery are being received from all over the country and has peaked the interest of doctors used to prescribing expensive cholesterol lowering drugs. A 30 day supply of the Vancol 5000 Cholesterol Lowering Plan is only $29.98.

Killer

He quoted McDuff as saying kidnapping and killing women "is like stealing ... and killing chickens."

Green said he asked McDuff if he'd killed before.

"Yes," he recalled McDuff saying. "I've got them buried in shallow graves."

Pamplin said his father, Brady Pamplin, who was sheriff in Falls County for nearly 30 years, told him that Fort Worth authorities considered McDuff a suspect in several Tarrant County slayings.

"He's always been a vicious, coldblooded killer," Pamplin said. "He's more animal than human."

McDuff was paroled first in 1989 and again in 1990, and investigators say he wasted no time terrorizing a new generation of women. His release touched off a firestorm of controversy.

"It's a shame the man could not have been executed for the 1966 killings," Pamplin said. "Look how many lives could have been saved."

Daughters of the American Revolution present

☆☆☆ GOOD CITIZENS ☆☆☆

By DARLENE BIRKES
Guest Writer

Six area students have been chosen from their high schools for exemplifying outstanding leadership, service, patriotism and dependability — the qualities of good character emphasized in the annual selection of the Daughters of the American Revolution good citizens nationwide.

These students will be honored at a reception by the Las Pampas Chapter of the DAR at 2:30 p.m. today in the Lovett Library auditorium.

Honorees and their schools include Holly Hefley of McLean High School; Michelle Shedeck, Lefors High School; Amy Phillips, White Deer High School; Bobbie Havens, Clarendon High School; Karen Babcock, Groom High School; and Christie Jones, Pampa High School.

American Field Service exchange students Christine Gwiazda of Dassel, Germany, part of the former German Democratic Republic, and Ove Fladberg of Krakstad, Norway, will present the program. Both of students at Pampa High School. Gwiazda's host parents are the Dan Malones, and Fladberg is hosted by the Richard Peets.

The winner of the DAR essay contest conducted in the Pampa schools will also be introduced during the program.

Each of the honorees will be presented a DAR Good Citizen pin designed with a ring of 13 stars representing the original 13 colonies. In the center of the pin are four books entitled "Dependability," "Leadership," "Service" and "Patriotism." A laurel wreath for honor encircles the books, and a torch for understanding is emblazoned in the background.

Each of the DAR good citizens wrote a 500-word essay on their American heritage and their responsibility to preserve it. These are entered in competition for state and national scholarships.

HOLLY HEFLEY

"Hefley has achieved a rare balance of excellence in both scholastic and extra-curricular activities," said Sam Haynes, mayor of McLean.

He noted that she has a scholastic record probably unmatched in McLean High, with averages of 97, 99 and 100 in the past three years. She is president of both the National Honor Society and Student Council and has received academic awards in English, Spanish, typing, history, math, agriculture and the sciences.

Hefley placed in regionals in the University Interscholastic League Current Issue and Events team and in district in spelling. She was a member of the bi-district champion basketball team and placed on the all-state academic team last year. She placed in district in track and was a member of the all-district honorable mention volleyball team in 1992.

Other honors include being a member of the pep club, serving as Tiger mascot, being chosen most spirited of McLean High School, Homecoming Queen candidate for three years, Miss Congeniality in the Miss McLean Pageant, and Lions Club Sweetheart. She served as a class officer, was elected to Who's Who, and was recipient of the Presidential Academic Fitness Award.

She served on the staff of the Panfork Baptist Church Camp and taught in the Vacation Bible School. As a member of 4-H, she participated in the highway clean up projects to served her community.

She noted in her essay that "to preserve our American heritage, people must stand up for what they believe in. They must not be afraid to voice their opinions and take action."

The McLean senior plans to attend Texas Tech and is interested in both education and business administration.

Her parents are James and Charlotte Hefley of McLean.

MICHELLE SHEDECK

An honor roll student at Lefors High School, Michelle Shedeck is secretary of the National Honor Society and has placed in numerous UIL events, including calculator, number sense, typing, and science categories. She has been a class officer or student council representative the last four years, was elected to Who's Who, and has attended the Hugh O'Brien Youth Seminar. Shedeck was crowned Halloween Carnival Queen last fall.

Active in sports, Shedeck has participated in cross country, basketball, tennis, golf and served as cheerleader.

Like Hefley, she was a staffer at the Panfork Baptist Church Camp. She teaches pre-school Sunday School and helps with Vacation Bible School. She also helps clean up the highways around her town and has worked in a political campaign.

She likes to hike and bike in the country and is very supportive of her parents Mike and Connie Shedeck.

In her essay, Shedeck expressed concern that people are ignorant of the past and are allowing monuments of the past to be destroyed. She wants to encourage people to pass on stories of the past to preserve our American heritage.

AMY PHILLIPS

In her essay, White Deer High School senior, Amy Phillips mentions that people around the world yearn for freedom — "something Americans lost sight of because it surrounds and pervades our society."

Good Citizens

An honor student, Phillips received outstanding student awards in history, chemistry, microcomputer, typing, Spanish and algebra. She served as a class officer, student council officer and was elected to Who's Who.

In UIL, Phillips has participated in the one act play contest for three years, in science and poetry contests, and qualified in regionals in typing.

Phillips has served as team mascot the past two years and was a member of this year's Homecoming Queen's court. She has participated in basketball and tennis and is a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

In serving her community, Phillips helped with the student council blood drive and with the cheerleading camps and food drives.

She is Bible school assistant and active in the youth program of the Methodist church. Phillips plans to attend college.

Her parents are Curtis Phillips and Vicki Barrow.

BOBBIE HAVENS

Being a friend when needed and assuming the responsibilities of head cheerleader are important commitments of Bobbie Havens, a senior at Clarendon High School. She has been a student council member, officer in the National Honor Society, FFA Sweetheart, Miss FFA and Homecoming Queen.

Active in sports, Havens participated in basketball and track all four years and was basketball captain. She is also active in the Methodist church program.

Havens helps her parents, Bob and Connie Havens, on their family farm and has been active in FFA in high school.

She has helped beautify the town area by planting flowers from the family greenhouse around the courthouse and jail.

The senior plans to attend college and major in business management. She would like to own a small clothing store some day.

Havens stated in her essay that American's are leaders in the world, and must "water our roots" — our pride and heritage every day.

KAREN BABCOCK

Another head cheerleader is Karen Babcock of Groom High School. She is also in varsity basketball and made all-district the past three years. She was a state qualifier in varsity track.

She has been a regional qualifier in UIL and participated in prose, typing ready writing and science. She was a state qualier as a JETS team member. Babcock is student council president and editor of the yearbook, senior class president, member of Who's Who, the Homecoming Court, junior and sophomore class officer, runner up in the Miss Carson County pageant, Six-Man All-Star Queen, and former Tiger band member.

An all-A honor student, she received outstanding student awards in home economics and band. As vice president of FHA, she helps coordinate the Secret Grandparents activity which involves interaction with the senior citizens. She is also a volunteer in the bike-a-thon annually, has played AAU basketball two years, and served Lions Club Sweetheart.

The daughter of Kenneth and Linda Babcock, she plans to attend West Texas State University and maybe play basketball. Her major will be business management or management.

In her essay, she praises her grandfather who earned the Purple Heart in World War II and the many other soldiers willing to risk their lives to preserve the American heritage and freedoms.

CHRISTIE JONES

Another basketball star is Christie Jones, the DAR winner from Pampa High School. She has been star point guard two years and on the girls basketball team and was bi-district qualifier the past two years. She has gone to state in track the last three years in the 4 X 200 meter relay.

Jones is president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and vice president of the National Honor Society. As a member of the Key Club she helps put out American flags on special holidays and is involved in other Kiwanis Club activities, such as helping raise money for victims of child abuse this year.

She is a student representative on the Hoechst-Celanese Community Advisory Board, a sounding board for employees.

As a member of Teens Needing Teens, a positive peer group, she helps new students get acquainted and organizes activities that have a positive influence. During the Red Ribbon Week campaign, she and other students gave talks to students in the elementary and middle schools about the dangers of drugs and the importance of being drug free. She also helps with the D-FY-IT program in which voluntary drug testing is given for any student who chooses to participate.

Active in the Baptist church program, she helped with Vacation Bible Schools, been active in the choirs, taught in the backyard Bible clubs each summer at Prairie Village Park, and participated in the summer mission tours.

The Pampa High School senior plans to attend college and become a physical therapist in a sports medicine clinic. She is the daughter of PHS counselor Jo Ann Jones and the granddaughter of Clotilde Thompson, retired curator of the White Deer Land Museum.

Ardell Briggs celebrates milestone

Br-r-r-r-r!!! Thoughts of the 20th week of winter can be put aside in favor of scanning last week's calendar for pleasant happenings.

Belated 90th birthday congratulations to Ardell Briggs of Lefors! More than 80 relatives, friends and former students braved last Sunday's snow to attend her party at the Lefors Civic Center. Hosts were Sue Smiley and Ardell's nieces Jacquetta Owen, Denise Bertrand of Clarendon, Wanda Moore and husband Jim of Bowie. A nephew and great-nephew Eddie Briggs and son came from Tulsa. A group of Eastern Star friends came from Pampa.

The registration, gift and serving tables were decorated in matching pink satin cloths with nosegays of ribbon roses and stephanotis and crystal and silver appointments on the serving table. Ardell wore a corsage sent by her sister-in-law Lillian Briggs of Asheville, N.C. to go with her party dress designed and made by her close friend Sue Smiley. The Smiley family sent a bouquet of roses and one member video taped the party. There were telephone calls, lots of cards and gifts, including a black mum from Virginia Archer.

Mayor Wendell Akins paid high tribute to Ardell for her dedication to her life's work and in the community and for the place of respect and high regard in which she is held by family, friends and former students. Then presented her with a Texas flag provided by Rep. Warren Chisum and Omega, both former students. She responded with a quick hug and a peck on the cheek, which she said was what Warren would have done.

Ardell, self-sustaining at 90 is still on the go to Senior Center, church and Eastern Star meetings. Her teaching career spanned more than 50 years, 19 as school librarian at LHS after teaching first grade several years. At 65, she moved to Liberal, Kan., and taught there several years. Retired? Never!

The Pamel Retirees Club enjoyed a slide presentation by Harold and Yvonne Scrimshire of several of their scuba diving jaunts in exotic places as a go-along with a potluck dinner. Special guests were the Scrimshire's granddaughter Anna, plant manager and wife Jerry Moore, who spoke to the group on pertinent issues, and Linda; manager of human relations department Dave Gill, Marsha and Lindsey. Lonnie Richardson is club president.

Picture book is undersea enchantment

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

Think creatively, parents: "Pacific" by David Doubilet is a master underwater photographer's look at fish and much of what lies beneath the Pacific Ocean from California to Australia. It's a wonderful children's book. For that matter, it's a wonderful adult book as well.

My son is 6 years old and has carted this coffee-table book on trips and car outings since it was published last fall. It's by far his favorite book and he loves to show it to friends, never tiring of the close-up photos of colorful fish, coral formations, divers and wrecks of ships from World War II.

Did you know?

The blindness that afflicts 100,000 Americans each year leaves eight out of 10 with at least a sense of light and shadow and even measurable vision, according to National Geographic.

Sight begins when even a single particle of light energy from a distant star enters the eye and splashes down on one of a thousand raftlike cellular disks stacked in a rod photo-receptor in the retina.

Ernie Wilkinson serves as local coordinator of the AARP Tax Aide program available at Pampa Senior Center each Tuesday and Friday 9-3 p.m. The program is designed but not limited to helping those 55 and older with preparing their income tax returns.

Consultants working on a strictly volunteer basis are Ernie, Lorrie Griffin, Fawnsa Burroughs, Tony Campos, Carrie Duroy, Joe Johnson, Lefoy Frazier, Betty Epperson and Doris Davis.

Employees of Shepard's Crook saw a need and organized Helping Hands, a non-profit group, about four years ago to help indigent patients. On a short term emergency basis they meet needs not otherwise met for medicine and doctor's visits for the elderly. Costs are funded by the employees through give away fundraisers and recently photographs at Pampa Mall. They gathered 200 people and cars for the Groom filming of the Steve Martin movie for additional funds. They have an annual street dance, which this year will probably be held on the SC site. Officers are Teresa Henson, president; Vardene Searl, vice president; Dauna Wilkinson, treasurer, and Linda Landsverk, secretary.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to Danny Bruton, physical therapist at Shepard's Crook. He and his wife Lindsay, formerly of the Dallas area, are parents of two sons. They are enjoying the process of becoming total Pampans.

Rotarians honored their ladies last Saturday night with a banquet and dance at the Pampa Country Club. Decorations were hot air balloons with net and in baskets, foil heart garlands. Above the dance floor were pink, red and white helium balloons.

Jana Albracht, Jana Meyer, Georgia McVey, Nancy Ruff and Dorothy Ware received the compliments for the decorations. Virginia DeWitt, dressed simply and elegantly in black served as emcee. Kent and Jana Meyer received an award for being married the shortest length of time, three years, and Lois and E.E. Shelhamer for being the longest, 54 years. Congratulations!

Bethany Knowles looked her always lovely best. Nancy Ruff chose a simple red dress buttoned down the front in black for accents. Chester and Vivian Huff danced a lot and to perfection. Vivian wore creamy ivory and sequins in a tea length. Brenda Cornelison and Dorothy Neslage (accompanied by son Bob) were also lovely in red.

The Rotarians and their ladies consider this THE special event of the year.

Already the Knights of Columbus are hard at work with several items already done for their 41st annual Polish sausage dinner on March 7 at their hall. Bob McKernan serves as general chairman, Don McGrath, publicity, Hub Homer, tickets, Milton Brown, head cook, Norman Quillard, waiter, Chuck Albus, desserts. Wives will bring their best desserts of pies and cakes. The food will take four days to prepare, which includes setting up tables and chairs, too. Remember the recipes are authentic. Save your calories for March 7.

Spied Kimberly and her proud dad David Cory shopping and having fun together. Another time Kimberly looked ultra spiffy in a red jacket over a red and black pleated skirt, topping black hose. The young ones do grow up! In a hurry!

A welcome guest in the home of Billie "Nanny" Bruner last week was Miss Koy Dog, owned by Billie's daughter Kelly and husband Kirk Fisher of Oklahoma City. Koy, who knows of only two or three of her breeds, on command shakes hands, sits, lies down, rolls over, plays dead, speaks, sings, counts to three and to five. She loved her visit!!! Kelly's last words before leaving for Las Vegas were, "Now, Mother, if Koy shows the least symptom of being sick, you call Dr. Royce immediately!" Koy should be on TV.

See you next week, Katie.

This handsome book also features interesting text interspersed among the full-page color photos for older kids. "Pacific" by David Doubilet. Little, Brown and Co. 191 pages. 144 color illustrations. All ages.

Winter wonderland conditions rob skin of moisture

By DR. JEROME L. SHUPACK
New York University School of Medicine

A downhill run on the ski slope or a walk in the snowy woods might add a healthy red glow to a person's cheeks. But the cold dry winds of winter combined with the artificial heat of indoors can rob the skin of needed moisture, leaving it dry, itchy and flaking.

Altering cleansing habits and using a moisturizer during the winter months can help keep skin moist and healthy.

Moisturizers do not add wetness to the skin; instead they are a mixture of oil and water that form a seal that helps lock in moisture that has already been absorbed.

Special attention should be paid to the elbows and knees, areas especially susceptible to dryness.

To help keep skin in top form, select a shower instead of a bath and keep the water lukewarm. Apply the moisturizer immediately afterward when the skin has absorbed the most moisture possible.

Touchy-feely furniture gains favor

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Features

Texture can cure a sickly room as much as color can, and it is being prescribed in ever-larger doses particularly for furniture, upholstered and otherwise.

The beauty of some of the more popular finishes and materials, such as chenille upholstery fabric, sisal carpet, twig and bark accessories and textured patinas on metal furniture, is in the feel as well as in the look.

"Adding more texture definitely warms a room," says Karol DeWulf Nickell, editor of Traditional Home magazine. "It's like putting on a cardigan sweater."

While faux finishes create the illusion of texture, Nickell says a growing trend is to mix textures on a single piece of furniture — say the roughness of rattan with the smoothness of metal in a table or chest. This creates a one-of-a-kind look, even though it is mass-produced.

"Across the board ... we're noticing that chenille is a popular upholstery fabric," Jones says. "The pile is deeper than Lucille Ball's old bathrobe, and now plaid or striped designs are woven in."

While a heavily textured look is preferred for the living room and bedroom, clients still want highly polished surfaces in the dining room, Jones says. But even in this formal room, she says, buyers are likely to select a textured jacquard fabric for chair seats.

Every kind of texture found in fabrics is also available in wallcoverings, Ann Leheny says. Choices run the gamut from a rather smooth silk look to heavier grass cloth, linen and burlap. Moire and slightly iridescent finishes also offer textural interest, according to Leheny, director of residential product development for GenCorp Polymer Products of Hackensack, N.J.

"With a bright multi-color floral pattern, it's the color that makes the decorative statement," she says.

Curiouser and curiouser

Performances are set for 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday and March 5-6 in the Pampa Mall Theater. For ticket information call 665-3710. Story action revolves around the irrepressible Ethel Savage and her ridiculous attitudes about money, according to a story synopsis. Horse says nay to people sense

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Betty M., California Cowgirl" about horse sense really wrung my tail.

First of all, if it was up to us horses, we wouldn't be in fires at all — we wouldn't even be in barns; we'd be in herds roaming the plains the way we did 10,000 years ago, until you cave dwellers locked us up.

Incidentally, Abby, how long do you think you'd last on the open prairie, stark naked, in a blizzard at 20 below? If you got turned around, could you find your way home? Guess my horse sense comes in handy then.

You might also wish I was with you if you ever have to weave your way through an area that has a few hidden quicksand pits and an occasional poisonous snake. Let's face it, Abby, alone you'd be a goner.

You human beings, claiming to be the smartest mammals, really crack us horses up. You drive around in vehicles you can't control, running into trees, walls and each other. Even worse, you drive drunk. You fall off ladders and out of buildings. You smoke cigarettes in bed and burn yourselves up. (At least we run out before we come back in.) You use drugs, you deal drugs; you buy guns and then shoot yourselves or somebody else.

Half of you are starving, and you're living next to millionaires. You hate each other because you're different colors. You spill oil in the ocean, ruin your forests, and now you're messing up the ozone.

I guess I'd rather settle for my kind of sense.

SONNY SANGAREE,
AMERICAN QUARTER HORSE,
PEMBROKE, N.H.

DEAR SONNY: Can't say that I blame you. Horse sense is what keeps horses from betting on people.

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to all those holier-than-thou readers who regard unmarried couples who are living together with such contempt.

After dating for three years, Ryan and I moved in together to minimize living expenses. We planned to get married after I graduated from college.

Well, my family practically disowned me when we told them we were living together! (His folks were more broad-minded about it.)

After Ryan and I had lived together for a year, I found out he had a terrible temper. The day he grabbed me by my blouse and threw me against the wall so hard I thought my shoulder was broken, I walked out on him. I thank God I didn't marry Ryan. What a fix I'd have been in if, after we were married and had a child, I had learned that he was capable of physically abusing me!

Abby, the next man I fall in love with, I will make sure I live with, before making a lifetime commitment.

Living together before marriage may be a "sin," but it's the only way you can really get to know a person.
GLAD I DID IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR GLAD: I'm glad you did, too. I never thought I would reverse myself on this issue, but I now believe that couples who are serious about marriage should take a few weekend trips together to test their compatibility. (I can't believe I wrote that!)

P.S. This doesn't mean hopping in the sack with every Jim, Joe or Harry, but living together first is a sure way to avoid a possible disaster.

Salvador Dali exhibit is the surreal thing

St. Petersburg, Fla. (AP) — A new exhibit at the Salvador Dali Museum focuses on Dali's skill and originality as a printmaker. It's also intended to help protect collectors from fraud and distinguish what is authentic work.

The exhibition of 28 rare and unusual graphic works dating from 1933-75 includes some pieces using Dali's experimental techniques.

There's his "bulletism," for example — he fired ink-filled bullets at a lithographic stone, ran a print off the stone, then embellished the ink-blot- ted image with his drawing to produce the battling figures for his "Combat" print.

The exhibition, "Dali's Graphic Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection," runs through Sept. 7. Two lectures are scheduled: Feb. 24, "The Dali Print Market," and Feb. 25, "Art Fraud."

Who's the hottest new star? It's Michael Jackson

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson's high-profile television appearances capped off by the Oprah Winfrey interview have reinvigorated his career, sending sales soaring for his 14-month-old "Dangerous" album.

Jackson fans snapped up 60,000 "Dangerous" albums last week, compared with 8,000 the week of Jan. 10-17, according to Sound-

Scan sales data released Wednesday.

"Dangerous," which debuted at No. 1 on Dec. 14, 1991, also is leaping back up the Billboard 200 in its 63rd week. After bottoming out at No. 149 last November, the album reached No. 26 in this week's chart.

"I can't remember an album that opened that big and staged this sort of resurgence this late in its shelf life," said Geoff Mayfield, who manages the Billboard 200.

"Dangerous" has sold more than 4 million copies domestically. Jackson's other albums also are getting a boost. "Thriller" is moving up a special chart for older albums, and even Jackson's old Motown albums are doing better, said Mayfield.

The sales surge is attributed to Jackson's media blitz this year, including TV appearances at the NAACP's 25th annual Image Awards, the Clinton inauguration, American Music Awards and the Super Bowl halftime show.

Jackson also attracted attention when his lawyer held a news conference to deny rumors the entertainer hired a white boy to portray him in a Pepsi commercial, and when Jackson appeared at a news conference to unveil his Heal L.A. program for riot-torn Los Angeles.

The biggest event was the Feb. 10 prime-time interview with Winfrey on ABC. The show was seen in 36.6 million households, or on 56 percent of the televisions in use, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Lee Solters, Jackson's publicist, said the pop star's recent appearances amounted to "just a happy coincidence," and weren't part of a campaign to boost Jackson's sagging record sales.

"We did not set the inauguration date. We didn't set the Super Bowl date. We did not set the NAACP (date). We did not set the American Music Awards date," said Solters. "It happened that he was in town, not on the road and not recording an album."

What makes the public appearances baffling to many observers is that Jackson doesn't have much to sell beyond his "Dangerous" LP. He isn't cutting a record and there has been no announcement of a U.S. tour.

"As far as timing is concerned, it's a weird time to break this campaign out," said Billboard's Mayfield. "It does appear he wants to be in the public eye. I also have to concede they couldn't have planned a lot of these things."

Top stars fail to make it to Oscar dance

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A few star turns, including Tom Cruise in "A Few Good Men" and Jack Nicholson in "Hoffa," didn't make it to the Oscar dance. Instead, independent films got some of the choice invitations.

Academy Award voters were lavish in their praise of movies made without major studio money in nominations announced Wednesday.

Big-budget productions, including "Malcolm X" and "Chaplin," received acting honors but little else, while a third of the nominations in the best picture, actor and actress categories went to independent films.

The Edwardian drama "Howards End" and Clint Eastwood's Western "Unforgiven" collected the most nominations, with nine each. They were nominated for best picture, as were "The Crying Game," "Scent of a Woman" and "A Few Good Men."

Nominated for best actor were never-before-nominated Eastwood for his role as a gunslinger in "Unforgiven," Al Pacino as a blind man in "Scent of a Woman," Stephen Rea as the reluctant terrorist in "The Crying Game," Denzel

Washington in the title role in "Malcolm X" and Robert Downey Jr. for starring as "Chaplin."

Among the films nominated for best documentary feature was "Liberators: Fighting on Two Fronts in World War II." But a public TV station in New York pulled the movie from broadcast last week after its accuracy was questioned. The movie is about black soldiers who helped liberate the concentration camps.

Best actress selections were Emma Thompson for a love-torn woman in "Howards End," Susan Sarandon as a devoted parent in "Lorenzo's Oil," Michelle Pfeiffer as an obsessed Texan traveler in "Love Field," Mary McDonnell as an invalid in "Passion Fish" and Catherine Deneuve as an Indochinese plantation owner in "Indochine."

Pacino earned a rare second nomination in the supporting actor category for "Glengarry Glen Ross." Other supporting actor picks were

Davidson in "The Crying Game," Gene Hackman in "Unforgiven," Nicholson in "A Few Good Men" and David Paymer for "Mr. Saturday Night."

Marisa Tomei was a surprise supporting actress nominee in "My Cousin Vinny." Joining her were Judy Davis in "Husbands and Wives," Joan Plowright in "Enchanted April," Vanessa Redgrave in "Howards End" and Miranda Richardson in "Damage."

"I'm beyond ecstatic," Miss Tomei said, adding co-star Joe Pesci may have helped when he showed her his "GoodFellas" Oscar.

"When Joe Pesci got his Oscar he came back to the set of 'My Cousin Vinny' and he brought back his statuette and he made me rub it for good luck," she said.

The awards will be presented March 29.

Nominations were made by 4,649 voting members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

19th-century jail restoration under way

By JOHN FUQUAY
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph

TYLER (AP) — Taking a page from East Texas' 19th-century history, Randal B. Gilbert wants to become a true jail-house lawyer.

He already has an established Tyler law practice. But it's the restoration of the former Smith County Jail at 309 E. Erwin St. that will fulfill his dream. The 1881 jailhouse will become Gilbert's office.

The structure still has original narrow-gauge railroad iron every 8 inches in the exterior walls surrounding what once were the jail cells.

Original weights and pulleys will be built into new window frames, and the building's walnut stair banisters will be put back just as they were at the turn of the century.

Some of the original features cannot be salvaged but will be painstakingly duplicated. The building will have new handmade bricks from North Carolina and roofing slate from Des Moines, Iowa.

When complete, detail-oriented Gilbert, who describes himself as a "hands-on general contractor," hopes the old jail retains enough original character for national and state historic landmark status.

"This is something I've wanted to do for a long time. I looked at this six or seven years ago before the oil crunch in 1986, and I decided then wasn't the time to do this," said Gilbert, who has long been fascinated with 19th century Texas history.

Gilbert began more seriously considering renovation of the jail in September, partly motivated by another downtown restoration project — "Rick's" restaurant by Rick Eltife. He hired the same restoration contractor, John O'Sullivan of Tyler.

After securing financing from a private source, Gilbert said, "It took about three months of going through and analyzing how it went together."

This actually will be the third renovation of the building. A jailer named Jefferson Lewis converted it into a hotel after the county stopped using it to house prisoners in 1916.

"Lewis changed it from a two-story jail into a three-story hotel without changing the roof elevation," Gilbert said.

The jail actually had been remodeled before its conversion into a hotel, and its architectural history is complicated. Gilbert pieced together its various transformations using Smith County Commissioners Court records and other chronicles.

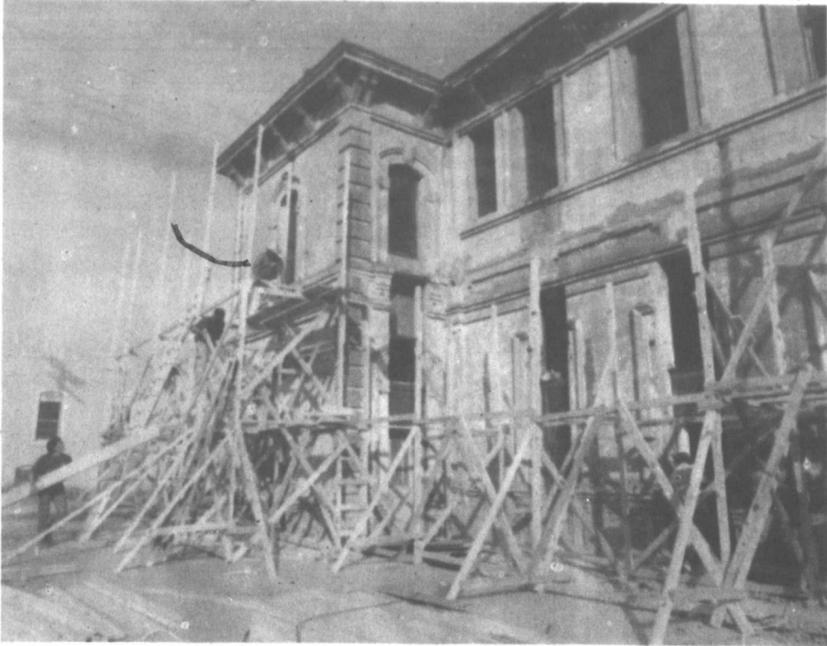

The original jail was designed by Eugene L. Heiner of Houston in 1880 and cost $11,789 to build. Its design was a blend of Italianate and French Second Empire with a cornice and mansard roof. It was accepted by Smith County commissioners in 1881 and immediately refortified to end recurring escapes.

The 1881 structure had two stories in a front section, each with 12-foot ceilings, and a one-story rear section with a 16-foot ceiling. The rear section had inmates' cells and the iron railroad tracks in the exterior walls, which Gilbert said was typical of 19th century jail construction.

Jail overcrowding became a problem near the end of the century, and in 1894 a second floor was added to the rear section, with more railroad iron, to house more prisoners.

The front portion remained unchanged, while the roof over the rear section was lifted and new walls were inserted to create the second story, which had a 12-foot ceiling. The changes resulted in a 4-foot difference in elevation between the front and rear sections.

The jail served 35 years until 1916 when it became unfit in the eyes of county commissioners, who approved construction of a new jail.

After Lewis bought the jail, he converted it into a hotel, using innovative renovation tactics.

With Tyler's oil boom in 1933 hotel space was scarce. Gilbert said Lewis "scabbed in a floor and cut the windows" in the original first-floor jail. Instead of a 16-foot ceiling in the first floor's rear section, Lewis made two levels with 8-foot ceilings, and the former jail's second floor became the hotel's third floor.

Lewis also lowered the 12-foot ceiling in the front section to match the 8-foot ceiling in the rear, and built a new third floor in the front to join the third story in the rear section.

Gilbert is undoing the tricky hotel renovations to bring back the original 1894 jail dimensions with a 16-foot elevation in the back and two 12-foot stories in front.

"You can see it took me months to figure out how to put it back together," Gilbert said. "They cut the stair in half and turned it around. We'll simply pull it off and put it back where it's supposed to be."

Gilbert intends to restore virtually all the original architecture. Doors and floors can be almost entirely restored, and window casings will be duplicated to match the originals.

An unusual brick used around the exterior window frames will be duplicated by hand by a North Carolina brick maker.

"He made the wood mold, poured the clay, cut it with a wire, let 'em air-dry for two days, then fired them," Gilbert explained. "It's the same manufacturing process as the original bricks."

After all that trouble, the bricks will be covered in stucco, and no one will know they exist.

"It's just knowing it's right," Gilbert said.

Gilbert also plans to match the paint over the stucco to give the building its original limestone appearance, as well as restore a bracketed cornice along the front that was destroyed by Lewis in 1933.

After Lewis died, he deeded the hotel to his wife, Gilbert said, who deeded it to her brother when she died in the 1970s. It began to deteriorate and was condemned by the city in 1984. Gilbert said its current value is $21,000.

Gilbert doesn't know who may have served time behind bars at the old jail, but he said a tragic break-in was chronicled in 1909 when a mob stormed the jail and kidnapped and lynched were jailed and held in lieu of $5,000 bond each. Gilbert said the prisoners received considerable public sympathy, and the jail had to be protected by Texas Rangers sent by the governor.

Gifts poured in, including fresh fruit, cakes, a telephone, typewriter and phonograph, and charges against the defendants ultimately were dropped.

While stripping walls in the old jail cell, contractor O'Sullivan uncovered more history in graffiti left by former jailbirds.

One inscription reads, "Druke 1-1-1915 Pen Bound," and another partial message reads, "Rudolph Koolan for not pleading guilty I did not do..."

"These walls have seen a lot," O'Sullivan said.

Weather permitting, Gilbert hopes to be finished in April. The 1881 jail then will be equipped with a kitchenette, a handicapped-accessible bathroom, a modern climate-control system, appliances, business machines and offices for five lawyers in the Lee and Gilbert firm.

"I'll be a real jail-house lawyer then; we'll all be jail-house lawyers," Gilbert laughs.

Few farm programs take hits in economic proposal

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's economic package leaves major farm support programs largely intact until the next farm bill in 1995.

In the plan released Wednesday, the administration proposed to offset increased spending for rural development with payment limits for some high-income farmers, cuts in some programs and a streamlined Agriculture Department.

The package includes increases in fees for grazing, meat and poultry inspections and commodity grading and grain inspection. Some proceeds would be used to hire 160 new meat and poultry inspectors as a result of the food-poisoning outbreak last month in Washington state.

Major crop support programs, costing billions of dollars a year, would get off lightly because they are covered by the five-year 1990 farm bill and out of concern that eliminating subsidies would hinder trade talks.

"Farm programs have been cut, and cut and cut," Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy told reporters. "There is a relative reduction in impact compared with what they've given in the past."

Proposals that will have to wait include increasing the amount of acres of wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice for which farmers cannot collect deficiency payments, and reform of crop insurance and annual commodity disaster payments.

Dusting off a proposal last year by President Bush, the new administration wants to end farm program payments for farm operators earning $100,000 or more off the farm, such as doctors, lawyers and business people. The administration estimates it can ultimately save $140 million a year.

The administration plans to end subsidies to honey producers and limit subsidy payments to wool and mohair producers to $50,000 per person. These have been popular targets of farm program critics.

Espy said he wants to create a Farm Service Organization to consolidate USDA's farmer-service activities. That could save $65 million as early as 1994 and up to $307 million in 1997, the administration estimates.

It was shown by B&C Cattle Co. of Miami, and Schmidt Hereford Ranch of Mason. In the female show, reserve honors were awarded to B&C Cattle Co. with their calf champion heifer. The cattle company of Miami also won reserve senior bull and claimed the top awards in both the best six head and get-of-sire group classes.

Report: Immigration program doesn't protect farm workers

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An immigration program designed to maintain a good supply of seasonal farm workers while improving their living and working conditions is falling short of its goal, a federal commission says.

The congressionally chartered Commission on Agricultural Workers said in a report released Wednesday that illegal immigrants are glutting the job market and employers are not providing the benefits they should.

The panel also said Congress should amend immigration laws to let sugar cane workers apply for permanent U.S. residency.

"Problems within the system of agricultural labor continue to exist," the report said.

"In most areas, an increasing number of newly arriving, unauthorized workers compete for available jobs, reducing the number of work hours available to all harvest workers and contributing to lower annual earnings," it said.

"Increasing numbers of workers are covered by state-mandated unemployment insurance, but employers are less likely to provide such non-mandated benefits as housing, meals and transportation," it said, noting the reliance of growers on labor contractors.

The commission also said sugar cane workers should be allowed into the Special Agricultural Worker program.

The program was created to let seasonal farm workers apply for residency if they could prove they harvested perishable crops for 90 days during the year ended May 1, 1986.

The Agriculture Department had excluded sugar cane from the definition of perishable commodities.

The commission was created as a result of the Immigration Reform and Control Act to study the effects of the 1986 immigration law on agricultural production.

The Farmworker Justice Fund, a workers' rights group, criticized the report, saying growers should be held liable for the failure of contractors, or crew leaders, to uphold labor laws and provide good living conditions.

The group also urged creation of a single unit within the Labor Department to enforce all farmworker laws.

ASCS receives conservation funds

The Gray County Office of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Pampa has received its 1993 allocation of funds for cost share assistance in performing conservation practices on farms and ranches, according to the Gray County ASCS Executive Director Matt Street.

"Under the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP), any farmer or rancher wishing to perform a conservation practice on their farm or ranch may apply to receive cost share assistance from the USDA to help carry out this practice," Street said.

A few of the conservation practices administered through the ASCS office include grass establishment, terrace construction, livestock water wells, water impoundment reservoirs, reorganization of irrigation systems, along with other practices which promote the saving of water and the prevention of erosion. This is a one year conservation program with a multi-year maintenance agreement.

Anyone interested in these programs should contact the Gray

County ASCS office at 665-6561 Gray County Courthouse Annex, 1/2 miles east on Highway 60.

Feds probe possible bread bid-rigging

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal authorities are investigating possible bid-rigging in bread sales to schools and military bases and have subpoenaed documents from two of the country's leading bakeries, The Wall Street Journal reported this week.

The newspaper said the probe is believed to be part of a widening government crackdown on the cost of food sold to school districts and other publicly financed U.S. institutions.

Last week Borden Inc., one of the nation's leading dairy companies, agreed to pay an $8 million fine to settle charges that it conspired to fix prices for institutional buyers in Texas ranging from schools to an Air Force base.

The Journal said Continental Baking Co., a unit of Ralston Purina Co., and Campbell Taggart Inc., a unit of Anheuser-Busch Cos., received subpoenas seeking business records. The two companies acknowledged in the Journal account that subpoenas had been received and that they were cooperating.

The newspaper said the subpoenas were issued in December by a federal grand jury in San Francisco, and that grand juries in two other cities were pursuing similar investigations.

Continental Baking, the nation's largest baker with more than $2 billion in sales last year, sells bread, rolls, cakes and other baked goods across much of the country. Its products range from Wonder bread to Hostess Ding Dongs.

Campbell Taggart doesn't disclose annual sales but is believed to be the nation's second largest bakery. Brands include Rainbo, Iron Kids and Earth Grains.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaner lamb may be on the way for health-conscious consumers as a result of work done by Agricultural Research Service geneticists.

The researchers are working now on a way to predict whether lambs will be fat or thin.

"One way to do that is with a genetic marker — a specific gene that correlates with how lean an animal will likely be," said ARS geneticist Gary D. Snowder, who is at the U.S. Sheep Experiment Station near Dubois, Idaho.

The genetic marker could help researchers select the best animals for future breeding, and also guide farmers in feeding their lambs diets that keep them trim, says a report on Snowder's work in a recent issue of Agricultural Research Magazine.

Snowder and colleagues at Utah State University have found that two genes important in fat metabolism may be useful markers to identify leaner lambs. They are adipocyte P2, or AP2, and lipoprotein lipase, or LPL.

Other researchers already had discovered both genes in humans, cattle, mice and birds. But Snowder's study, the report said, is the first to link them with specific characteristics used to determine fatness in lambs.

"We found that fatter lambs tended to have higher levels of AP2 gene expression, yet lower levels of LPL gene expression," Snowder said.

He also plans to test five other genes. When he determines which genes are the most accurate fat predictors, he said, a simple blood test taken at birth might be all it takes to pinpoint fat-prone lambs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sheep and lamb inventory in the United States at the first of this year totaled 10.2 million head, down 5 percent from a year earlier, the Agriculture Department reports.

However, the value of sheep and lambs rose to $716 million, 9 percent above a year earlier, according to the Agricultural Statistics Service.

The 1992 lamb crop of 7.25 million head was down 5 percent from 1991, it said. This compares with the lowest level of 7.21 million head set in 1988.

The 1992 lambing rate was 102 per 100 ewes one year old and older on hand Jan. 1, 1992, compared with 103 in 1991.

The number of operations with sheep during 1992 totaled 101,040, down 4 percent from 1991 and also a record low.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. dairy exporters may find 1993 marketing opportunities in Mexico due to trade liberalization, improved economic conditions and peso stability, say trade experts.

"U.S. cheese exporters may expand exports if they offer a product that is competitive in quality and price," says a recent report in AgExporter magazine put out by the Foreign Agricultural Service.

A limited supply of study materials for the test are available on a first come, first served basis by contacting the Wheeler County extension office at 826-5243.

A fee is required for those who pass the test and qualify for the license. The license is good for five years.

Those producers who currently hold an applicator license should remember that they must accumulate 15 continuing education units (CEU's) within 5 years from the time their license was issued. Certified applicators (those who got their license prior to January 10, 1989) must have 15 CEU's by December 31, 1994. This training session will not count for CEU's.

New prisons hold revival hopes for West Texas towns

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

CHILDRESS (AP) — This West Texas town was drying up faster than tumbledweed in the 1980s.

The population had dropped from 5,800 to 5,000. Blocks of houses were for sale. Teen-agers graduated from high school and left.

"There just wasn't anything for the young people to do unless they wanted to be a waitress or gas station attendant," Mayor Pro Tem Bill Haseloff said.

So city leaders turned to a recession-proof industry: prisons.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice in 1990 built the 1,000-bed T.L. Roach Unit, with 255 employees and a $1.4 million annual payroll.

And now, 16 months after the prison opened, it can be hard to find parking at stores or an apartment to rent in Childress.

"We have stopped the hemorrhaging," Haseloff said. "Before, we were like a dying community."

The economic salvation represented by state prisons has become more and more attractive in Panhandle and South Plains cities, where land is plentiful and agriculture and oil have been hurt.

But to some, they are salvation of dubious value.

"Please don't come to me and talk about the economic benefits of prisons," Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said in a recent speech to newspaper executives in Dallas.

Bullock said he worries about the impression people making their first visit to Texas will get when they see so many prisons along their drive.

"One might say to the other, 'Let's get the hell out of here. What's wrong with these people here?'" Bullock said.

But such worries matter little when local leaders are faced with a dwindling tax base. Stability, good pay and benefits to employees outweigh normal prison stigmas.

Last year, 63 cities offered the state various incentives to lure a lockup. Few in the winning cities — from Dalhart and Plainview to Brownfield and Colorado City — protested the bids.

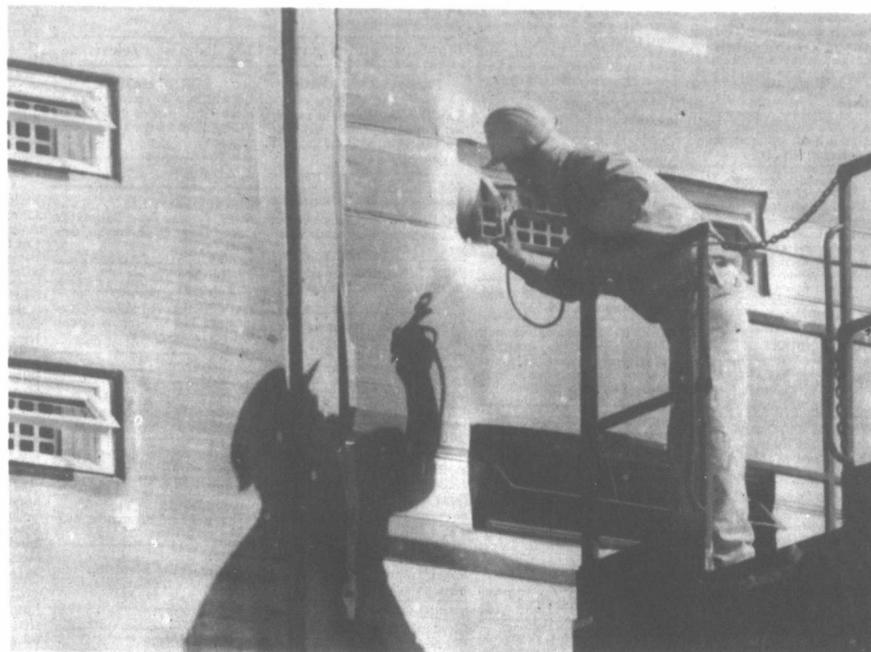

"We need the jobs," Dalhart city manager Greg Duggan said. "If small towns are not progressing, then they're drying up."

"West Texas in general is losing population and losing industry," said Lewis Hill, economics chairman at Texas Tech University. "Over the past 50 years, agriculture has become so highly mechanized. The more mechanized it becomes, the fewer people they employ in agriculture. It's killing all these small, county seat towns."

"When I first went on the board we had communities that wouldn't even accept a prison," said Jerry Hodge of Amarillo, vice chairman of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. "That has changed dramatically since we broke the East Texas corridor."

"It had been the mentality for years that first of all, communities didn't want the prisons. And then it was the philosophy of the prison board to have them concentrated in East Texas," Hodge said.

With the exception of the prisons clustered near Gatesville in central Texas, the first state prison to open west of Interstate 35 was the 1,000-bed Price Daniel Unit in Snyder in 1989.

A worker paints vents on the walls of the French Robertson Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in Hamby last spring.

Of the 11 that have opened since then, seven have been west of that line.

In Abilene, the TDCJ is preparing to build a 2,000-bed facility next to the French Robertson unit that opened just a few weeks ago.

City Manager Jim Blagg said the

Robertson unit has provided 850 jobs and helped reduce Abilene's unemployment rate. "We're still sold on the idea," Blagg said.

The enthusiasm remains evident in Childress too.

Mashburn Realty Investments' billboard on U.S. 287 proclaims "We welcome you to Childress, TDCJ." The city has honored prison employees with several ice-cream socials on the courthouse lawn.

"Years ago, if someone would have said, 'We want to build a prison on your backyard,' they'd run," Haseloff said. Now, it's a "feather in our cap."

In Denmark, sexual revolution mellows

By JOHAN RAPP
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — In this hotbed of sexual revolution, the free-love generation has settled into family life and the pornography industry has retreated from the streets.

So dramatically have things changed that a Museum of Erotica opened last year to preserve relics of the 1960s and 1970s, the age of sexual liberation.

Denmark legalized pornography in 1969, creating a new export industry, and held the world's first international sex fair that same year. In 1989, it became the first country to permit marriages of homosexuals.

By 1975, there were 75 theaters showing X-rated movies in Copenhagen, a city of 1.1 million. The last one closed early in 1992 and the famous sex district has dwindled to about 15 adults-only stores.

Intellectuals, who advocated sexual promiscuity a generation ago, say little about it now. Suzanne Brogger, 49, a household name 20 years ago for writing about her carnal exploits, extols the joys of monogamy.

Brogger said the sexual revolution was "historical necessity" that liberated social attitudes, but that it is over for now, partly because of AIDS. Her play, "After The Orgy," addresses the new trends.

"The young of today are revolting against our generation and want to live in a more orderly fashion," she said.

While Brogger's generation was drawn to radical socialism, young Danes are attracted to conservatism. Denmark has had conservative-led governments for 10 years, breaking with decades of dominance by the Social Democrats.

During that period, civil and church marriages increased from 25,000 a year to 31,513 in 1992, according to government statistics.

Despite the changes, Denmark's reputation for free sex persists. When foreigners see topless beaches and parks, and explicit media reports about sex, they find it hard to believe much has changed.

Berl Kutchinsky, a Copenhagen professor and researcher, said Danes are no more sexually free-wheeling than other Westerners, just more open about it.

"We do not have the double standards; we accept the sexual liberality," said Kutchinsky, who studies the relationship between crime and sex at the Institute of Criminology.

Steen Hegeler, a psychologist who runs a private sex clinic, said Danish children learn at home, in schools and even in some churches to be relaxed about sex.

For example, an unmarried young couple might spend a night together at the home of one of their families and, without reproach, join the parents for breakfast.

"In southern Europe, the kids are in the parks," Kutchinsky said. "In the United States, they have to buy a car."

The easygoing attitude makes it easier to discuss sex and AIDS openly. Few Danes blush when the government had giant condoms painted on the sides of public buses in a campaign against acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Some small religious groups have tried to frighten Danes into celibacy with the threat of AIDS, Kutchinsky said, "but everybody laughs at that. There has been no change in sexual morality, but of course, a certain apprehension."

Karina Bahner of the privately owned Museum of Erotica said there is still a market for pornographic movies, usually on videotape, but nothing like in the old days.

"When the first sex fair opened in 1969, everyone wanted pornography," she said. "They could not get enough. ... Now, interest keeps going down. People want to be more erotic now. The difference is that eroticism has something to do with feelings."

Permanent exhibits at the museum include photographs of Etruscan pottery depicting love goddesses, a replica of a room in a turn-of-the-century Danish brothel and assorted sex paraphernalia. In one room, 12 video machines show an array of hard-core films.

The museum coffee shop is named Aphrodite, for the Greek goddess of love.

Police raid hippie community

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Riot police swept into one of Europe's best-known hippie communities for the first time in seven years Tuesday to try to break up a thriving hashish market.

About 150 police entered the Christiania community in central Copenhagen before dawn. They arrested at least 17 people among the brightly painted walls of "Pusher Street," where hashish and hash pipes have long been sold openly.

"We consider Christiania part of Copenhagen and we want to patrol here as we do elsewhere," said Criminal Inspector Willy Eliassen. "Nice people in suits come from outside Christiania to buy hashish. This must stop."

Some residents threw eggs at the officers and set off firecrackers near them. "Go home, cops," a young woman shouted.

"Want to buy some hash, pig head?" a man asked, taunting a policeman who took his name and told him he'd be fined $80 for insulting an officer.

No injuries were reported. The sweeps continued throughout the day.

Police estimate hashish with a street value of more than $41 million changes hands annually in Christiania, Denmark's biggest hashish market. Eliassen said more than 20 pounds of hashish is sold every day in the community, home to about 800 people.

Well-to-do leftist youths, protesting housing costs, began Christiania in 1971 by barricading themselves inside a derelict 18th-century cavalry barracks owned by the Defense Ministry.

The 84 acres of brick buildings and fields became a sanctuary for hippies, drug-users, political radicals, artists, criminals and drop-outs. It became one of Europe's best-known symbols of counter-culture and social experiment.

The squatters fixed up their homes and installed water and electricity, held craft fairs and concerts and opened restaurants and art galleries.

Hundreds of dogs roamed the grounds and, in a communal blurring of family lines, children seemed to have dozens of parents. Authorities fretted over the situation but put up with it.

In recent years, Christiania has been gradually moving toward the mainstream. The community expelled criminals and heroin addicts in 1980. Residents took jobs, began paying taxes and electricity fees and enrolled for national health insurance.

But they resisted demands the hashish market be shut down in return for official permission to stay in the barracks and end their squatter status.

Police stepped up the pressure last year and put the community under video surveillance from a camera set up on the roof of a nearby building.

Defiant 'Dr. Death' vows to assist more suicides

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

He has hovered at death's door many times, beginning as a young doctor.

He has experimented with transfusions, transferring death's blood from a fresh cadaver to a living volunteer. He has made nightly rounds to peer into the eyes of hospital patients at the moment they succumbed.

Now 64, Jack Kevorkian no longer is a young doctor. He has looked death in the eye again and again and again. Thirteen times, he has helped death along, with lethal drugs or gas. Death no longer is his avocation or even an obsession.

Death is Jack Kevorkian's life. And he is offended and outraged that anyone should think that what he says and does is unethical or immoral — much less criminal. "All these silly religious nuts. All these people, they don't care about suffering humanity," says the man known as "Dr. Death."

"(They say) 'Well, Kevorkian must be insane.' The incompetent medical examiner, he keeps calling it homicide when the court decision says no such thing. Now they're using name calling ... 'Kevorkian must be a little bit crazy.' They love that. They hate what I'm doing. ... They don't talk about suffering patients."

Kevorkian says it's time doctors follow his lead.

Lawmakers say it's time to stop Jack Kevorkian.

On March 30, a new measure takes effect in Michigan that bans assisted suicide for 15 months, making it a felony while a commission studies the issue.

Jack Kevorkian's name isn't on the bill, but it should be. Since Kevorkian's first assisted suicide in 1990, authorities have been furious. One after another, Kevorkian has helped 15 people die in his home state, despite efforts to thwart, punish and jail the retired pathologist.

Kevorkian has defied their threats.

His Michigan license has been taken away, but he continues his work, using carbon monoxide instead of drugs, which no longer are available to him.

This month, he has helped six people die — three in the past week.

He vows to assist others, even after the Michigan ban is implemented.

"After that," he says, "I get one shot." Then, he expects a trial.

No doubt, it will be a trial in the limelight, the stuff of headlines, editorials and talk-show debate. At the center will be a doctor who has gone from obscurity to notoriety in 2 1/2 years.

In June 1990, Janet Adkins — a 54-year-old mother, music lover and mountain climber suffering from Alzheimer's disease — traveled from Oregon to die.

Kevorkian obliged with his suicide machine, the Mercitron, a three-bottle contraption he built for $30 after scouring flea markets for parts.

Mrs. Adkins was hooked up by an intravenous tube; it took Kevorkian five tries to get the needle in her arm properly. She pressed a button, releasing poison into her veins.

"She was very happy to exit," said her husband, Ron. "She believed in Dr. Kevorkian. She looked in Dr. Kevorkian's eyes and said, 'Thank you, thank you, thank you.'"

Kevorkian was charged with murder. It didn't stick; nor did it in the next death, or the one after that. No law prohibited assisted suicide.

Authorities stopped filing charges. But in a sense, Kevorkian has been on trial ever since.

Kevorkian's critics in law and medicine are varied and many. Some oppose the man, some just his methods.

"I see him as a zealot, a dangerous one," said Arthur Caplan, director of the University of Minnesota's Biomedical Ethics Center.

Caplan said Kevorkian's attitude is "I couldn't care less what the rest of these fools think is wrong. My morality is correct and I'm going to follow it come hell or high water."

Even right-to-die supporters say the problem isn't the message — terminally ill people shouldn't have to endure intolerable pain — but the messenger.

"I don't want any doctor making the rules by himself. That's what it comes down to," said Dr. Tom Preston, a Seattle cardiologist who supported an unsuccessful Washington initiative to allow doctor-assisted suicide.

Others say they're troubled that Kevorkian doesn't have a history with his patients, one built on caring for and treating someone before they're dying.

"You want an established relationship, not one based on assisted suicide," said Dr. Timothy Quill, of Rochester, N.Y., who helped a terminally ill leukemia patient commit suicide by prescribing barbiturates.

In one case, a coroner's autopsy found that Kevorkian helped a woman die who suffered no active disease — a woman who had twice been involuntarily admitted to psychiatric hospitals.

Kevorkian's reply: He has a checks-and-balances system he completes before helping anyone, including videotaped counseling, family meetings, a review of medical records and consultations with their doctors, if they will cooperate.

And he says regardless of its cause, the woman's pain was very real.

Kevorkian has no patience for doctors who criticize. He chides them for being wimps, for letting patients suffer. He says the only — and the obvious — answer would be to help them die. No law is needed, he says.

"If they did their duty, none of this would happen," he says. "They're sitting on sidelines, scared to death."

"He doesn't argue for a change in the law. That's what baffles me," said Derek Humphry, founder of the Hemlock Society and author of the best-selling suicide manual. "He seems to think that doctors are going to follow his example and they're not."

Guns N' Roses prepares for concert

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Technicians for the rock group Guns N' Roses are using the Mississippi Coast Coliseum this week to re-calibrate sound equipment after the band's European tour, but fans won't find the rock group there.

"The Coliseum is the closest place to the Texas (concert) date where they could get a building that is empty during the week and large enough to set up all the equipment to do the work," said Coliseum director Bill Holmes.

The group plays Tuesday in Austin at the Frank Erwin Center.

Trucks carrying the group's equipment arrived at the Coliseum on Monday and are expected to be en route to Texas by Sunday. The building is closed to the public this week.

Members of the group may come to the Coast to check their own equipment this week, but "to this date I have no knowledge of the band coming in," Holmes said. "There have been no requests for beefing up security Friday or Saturday."

The enormously popular Los Angeles rock group is famous for such hits as "Welcome to the Jungle," "Sweet Child of Mine" and "November Rain."

The group, which has a history of rowdiness, played before a sell-out crowd of 15,000 at the Coliseum in January 1992.

About 100 security officers were stationed throughout the Coliseum during that show, but there were no arrests.
