Search continues for more campers

By JOYA McTILLMON
Associated Press Writer

Ground teams today resumed the search for campers believed missing around the Great Smoky Mountains National Park since a storm blamed for more than 200 deaths. But rain prevented helicopters from joining the search.

Remaining effects of the devastating weekend storm today included impassable secondary roads, closed schools, mountains of snow on city streets and financial worries. Thousands still had no electrical service.

But West Virginia Gov. Gaston Caperton today lifted a state of emergency he imposed Saturday. And in New Jersey, Newark International Airport got its last runway open today.

The death toll from Cuba to Canada reached 220, and 48 people were missing at sea off Florida and Nova Scotia.

The last of a group of Michigan high school campers were rescued from the snowy Appalachian wilderness in western North Carolina Tuesday.

Smoky Mountains park spokesman Bob Miller said at least 11 people in four groups on planned itineraries were still unaccounted for since the record storm dumped as much as 5 feet of snow at higher elevations in the 520,000-acre park.

Tennessee National Guard Col. Larry Shelton said he had information that about 30 people were still missing in the park and 15 were unaccounted for outside the preserve.

While drizzle and fog grounded military helicopters, Miller said teams of rangers were going ahead with search efforts on the ground. "We don't feel like we can sit around and wait for a break in the weather," he said.

The National Weather Service warned Tuesday that much of the East, especially the Ohio Valley and New England, is likely to face springtime flooding because of the storm.

The last 24 campers from the Cranbrook Kingswood Upper School outside Detroit were found Tuesday near Fontana Lake in North Carolina, said Col. Larry Shelton of the Tennessee Air National Guard.

"When we heard the helicopters, we knew we were OK," said student co-leader Meghan Nealis, 18.

The 24 were among a group of 117 who set out more than a week ago for an expedition in the Smokies. Most were teen-agers who had undergone wilderness survival training. Some emerged from the woods on their own Sunday and others were rescued Monday.

One teacher and one student remained hospitalized today with frostbite after the ordeal that began with the blizzard that blew through on Friday.

Their boots froze. Their trails disappeared under fallen trees and waist-deep snow. They doubled up in sleeping bags to stay warm. "There was never any time to panic. There was never any time for fear because we knew what we had to do and we did it," said Shane Lavery, 16.

The group was to take chartered buses back to Michigan, leaving sometime this morning, said Ray Carson, spokesman for the exclusive private school. They were expected to get back to the school this afternoon.

Other survivors of the storm still were struggling today to get their lives back to normal.

Two Florida men who recently moved to Liberty, N.C., near the Tennessee line, spent the past few days taking water and wood to mountain residents trapped in their homes by waist-high snow drifts and fallen trees.

Among other efforts, Greg Kimble and Bernie Wooley rescued an elderly woman who had no heat.

"We tried to take the Jeep, but we couldn't make it, so we drug her down to the house on a sled," Wooley said of the quarter-mile ride. "We got her warmed up again."

Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter surveyed damage in the eastern part of his state on Tuesday.

"It's worse than I thought it would be," McWherter said. "It looks more like a hurricane came through here than a snow storm."

Hundreds of Georgia residents were snowbound but state officials had no idea how many because the worst-hit areas were so remote, said Ken Davis, a spokesman for the Georgia Emergency Management Agency.

Storm damage estimates — including crop losses — kept rising Tuesday. The estimate just for Florida, which was battered by tornadoes and heavy rain, as high as $1 billion.

Schools remained closed today in parts of Alabama, West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Georgia, North Carolina, Maryland, and New Jersey.

Shamrock adds touch of Irish

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

SHAMROCK — A small part of the Panhandle will be transformed into a bit of the Emerald Isle beginning at 9:30 a.m. Friday.

That is when the 47th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration begins in Shamrock. The theme of this year's celebration is "Up, Up and Away, St. Patrick's Day, 1993."

"It has a tremendous impact," said Kent Sharp, Shamrock's director of tourism and economic development. "The town swells by a few thousand people and they all spend tourism money in one way or another. The local shops know it and the local motels know it."

Headlining the first day of the celebration is Amy Parker, Miss Texas 1992. She is the featured guest at Friday's banquet which begins at 6:45 p.m.

Activities begin early Saturday morning and continue through the day and into the night.

For early risers, the Invitational Welcome Breakfast at the Irish Inn will begin at 6:30 a.m.

The St. Patrick's Day Parade is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m. on Main Street with the luncheon for parade entrants and an award presentation scheduled at noon at the school cafeteria located at 100 S. Illinois.

The parade generally attracts 100 entrants, according to Nan Reeves, manager of the Shamrock Chamber of Commerce.

Approximately 75 floats have entered this year's parade with more last-minute entries expected, said Reeves. Parade entrants range from commercial and noncommercial floats to horse driven carriages to antique cars.

Saturday's events conclude with two dances, one for teenagers at 8 p.m. and one for adults at 9 p.m.

Other events scheduled for Saturday include hot air balloon rides, a beard contest, sheep dog trials, a chili cook-off, bull riding, the "Miss Irish Rose" Pageant and other activities.

Things start to wind down Sunday, however, as the last of the hot air balloon rides, sheep dog trials, carnival and mini arts and crafts show come to an end.

For more information, call (806) 256-2501.

Approximately 8,000 people attended last year's celebration. The same number is expected to return this year although a lot depends on the weather, Reeves said.

Cult members watch treatment of those who left

WACO (AP) — As many as 30 Branch Davidians holed up for 18 days may come out if they are satisfied with the treatment of two members who left the fortified compound last week, the FBI said today.

Adults and 17 children remain inside the Mount Carmel compound, but FBI agent Bob Ricks said negotiators have been told "20 to 30 people, who if they are satisfied with treatment ... might be interested in coming out."

The compound has been surrounded since Feb. 28 when four federal agents and as many as 10 cult members were killed in a 45-minute shootout. Agents were trying to serve arrest and search warrants on Koresh for federal firearms violations.

Ricks said the meeting may take place this afternoon.

Ricks said the FBI is working with federal prosecutors to answer those questions. Attorneys for several cult members, however, have sought to talk to their clients inside the compound, suggesting their advice would be more trusted than government officials.

"I think his condition as he and others have relayed it to us ... is a progressive downhill condition," FBI special agent Richard Swensen said Tuesday. "He's played a lesser role. Less time on the phone, less preaching on the phone."

As part of the negotiations, FBI officials have sent in tapes from cult family members urging their relatives to come out.

But Ricks said today, "I cannot characterize his help as going downhill. In fact my impression is it's probably the other way."

They also have offered to allow wounded cult members to come outside the compound so medical personnel could treat their injuries.

Though Swensen said Tuesday that Koresh did not participate in the first face-to-face negotiations between law officers and cult leaders, Koresh remains in charge of the group holed up at the Mount Carmel compound.

Ricks said much of the negotiations have begun focusing on legal concerns, including what charges individuals may face, where trials would be held and if the 77-acre compound would be seized.

"You see Mr. Koresh's involvement less, but I think he's the power behind the scene," Swensen said. Koresh has said he and his followers are awaiting word from God before coming out.

Cult leaders are preparing a list of specific legal questions, Ricks said, and negotiators expect to receive the list at a second face-to-face meeting.

Koresh has said he suffered gunshot wounds the shootout.

Ricks also contradicted characterizations Tuesday of Koresh's physical condition, and its affect on negotiations.

"Initially he (Koresh) was in Miami welcomes return of football coach

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

MIAMI — In the wake of a "rebuilding effort" in the Miami High football program that resulted in an 0-10 record, the Miami school district has hired a new architect.

The board of trustees for Miami Independent School District on Monday accepted the resignation of head football coach Terry Bean and unanimously approved the hiring of Bill Hines, 57, a computer and physical education instructor for Miami, to direct the Miami Warriors.

Hines, a native of Candian, will be paid a stipend of $4,490 per school year for his football coaching duties, said Miami ISD Superintendent Allan Dinsmore.

Bean has been reassigned as a social studies and physical education instructor at the junior high and high school levels at Miami, Dinsmore said.

Asked whether he expects the next football season at the District I-A (six man) Miami High to be more successful than the last one, Hines replied, "I hope so, since they didn't win a game last year."

Asked for a reaction to his appointment as head football coach for Miami High, Hines replied, "I really don't have a reaction to it. They asked me to do it, so I said I'd do it."

Dinsmore on Tuesday praised Hines, who has six years of experience at coaching football, for having "some good motivational ideas. ... He's going to try to have complete involvement of students, parents, and community in the football program."

Hines's five years of football coaching experience at Miami, beginning in the late 1950s, includes one year of coaching six-man football. He has also coached one year of football at Silverton High.

Dinsmore noted that Bean, who was head football coach for three seasons at Miami, resigned because he does not want to continue coaching six-man football.

"He's more interested in 11-man football," the Miami superintendent explained.

Dinsmore said he received no complaints from the residents of Miami concerning the winless football season of the 1992-93 school year.

"Everybody realized this was going to be a rebuilding year, we were going to take our lumps," Dinsmore said, noting that there were only two seniors on this school year's Miami football team.

During Bean's first football season at Miami, the Warriors reached the playoffs as a runner-up to district football champion McLean, Dinsmore said.

Next football season holds promise for a return to success, Dinsmore noted.

"The returning players will have had a lot of experience at playing time, and there is potential there to have a very successful season if all facets pull and work together — the coaches, students, the parents, and community."

Barrow gang survivor dies

DALLAS (AP) — Ralph Smith Fults, the last survivor of the Bonnie and Clyde gang, has died of cancer. He was 82. Fults, who began his life of crime by stealing candy at age 14, died Monday at his home.

John Neal Phillips, an author of a book about the Barrow gang, said Fults robbed stores and was sent to Gatesville Reform School. He was later sentenced to prison for two years for burglary. He escaped, but was recaptured and returned where he met Clyde Barrow.

In 1932, both men were paroled and went to Denton where they teamed up with Bonnie Parker, also of Dallas, and started robbing banks, gasoline stations and oil company payrolls. In 1935, Fults was sentenced to nine years in prison in Mississippi. He received full pardons from Texas and Mississippi in 1954.

From 1964 to 1984, Fults worked as a security guard at the Buckner Baptist Children's Home in Dallas, where he encouraged children not to turn to crime. He also spoke to other young people about his conversion to Christianity.

Cost of revival from cardiac arrest shocking, study finds

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The routine hospital practice of reviving patients whose hearts stop beating costs more than $150,000 per survivor, because most victims never recover enough to go home, a study found.

In fact, the research found that most of those given CPR in hospital wards never regain the ability to breathe on their own. Instead, they spend their final days on respirators in intensive care units, often running up astronomical bills.

Doctors from Duke University watched what happened to 146 patients who were given CPR — cardiopulmonary resuscitation — after they suffered cardiac arrest in the general medical and surgical wards between 1988 and 1991.

Doctors and nurses were able to revive 58 percent of the patients. But only seven patients, or five percent, got well enough to leave the hospital.

The researchers added up the costs of taking care of all these people when they were pulled back from death and found it totaled about $1.1 million, or more than $150,000 per discharged patient.

Nationally, CPR is attempted on about one-third of all patients who die in hospitals. Many are elderly and in the final stages of heart failure, cancer and other diseases.

When they are revived, however, their medical bills shoot up dramatically, because most are transferred to intensive care and put on highly expensive life-support systems.

"It's a medical avalanche. You trigger everything," said Dr. Christopher O'Connor, one of the Duke researchers.

O'Connor and Dr. Mark Thel presented the findings Tuesday at a meeting of the American College of Cardiology.

O'Connor said that CPR first gained routine use during operations, when it often worked well. But it has since spread to all parts of the hospital with little thought given to the cost of interrupting death.

"We're not saying, 'Don't do something. Just stand there,'" he said.

Instead, O'Connor urged doctors to ask their patients how they would like to be treated if their hearts stop beating. While hospitals are required to ask such questions, it is usually done by clerks rather than doctors.

And when doctors bring up the subject, he said, they should keep the price in mind.

"We feel that the cost of CPR should be considered when the doctor counsels patients about whether they should get it," he said.

The researchers said doctors should be reluctant to recommend CPR to people who are gravely ill, such as elderly patients suffering from multiple diseases.

Typically, hospitals try to revive all patients after cardiac arrest unless a specific "do not resuscitate" — or DNR — order has been posted.

The cost of caring for patients in the last months of life has become a matter of concern, especially as health economists look for ways to slow medical inflation.

"When you look at the way we treat patients at the extremes of life, it's plain there is no reason why we doctors can't allow people to die with dignity," commented Dr. Adolph Hutter of Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Firefighters battle the blaze in Chicago Tuesday at the Paxton Hotel.

Hotel fire toll reaches 15

By TAMARA STARKS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Fire officials and city workers began demolishing a transient hotel, searching for more bodies after a fire killed at least 15 people, including three who jumped to escape smoke and flames.

Firefighters called off the search Tuesday night after tearing down about a third of the building. They were to resume a search for more bodies at daybreak today. Many of the 130 people registered at the hotel when the fire broke out still were missing.

The deaths were the most in a Chicago fire since March 1981, when 19 people died at another transient hotel.

A construction crane broke through the Paxton Hotel's brick walls late Tuesday, scooping out charred furniture, clothes and personal belongings in the search for more victims and the fire's cause.

Rubble was dumped on the street, where investigators shoveled and poked through it using long, metal-tipped poles.

"We're going to analyze every scoop of debris (the crane) brings out," said Deputy Fire Chief William Nolan. "It's going to be a long, slow process."

The fire began before dawn Tuesday — possibly ignited by a space heater that a hotel resident said was hooked to two extension cords he had spliced together. Police said they found the space heater but not the extension cords.

Flames traveled so quickly up two of three stairwells in the four-story building that escape was blocked for dozens of people, said Fire Department spokesman Mike Cosgrove.

When firefighters arrived, dozens of panicked residents were gathered at windows or dangled from them as wind-whipped flames rose 15 feet above the roof and shot out of windows.

Other victims lay on the ground, some shouting in pain, while firefighters tried to rescue those still in the building.

"The smoke was so intense, I couldn't see the flames, and it was driving people out the windows," said resident Minnie Byrd, 45, who was reading in her third-floor room when she smelled smoke. "I thought I had to jump too."

"I was praying real hard. I got one leg out the side and a fireman said, 'Wait! Wait!' and got the ladder to me."

Some residents tied sheets together and climbed out of windows. Others jumped. Two people died soon after jumping from windows; a third who jumped died later in a hospital from pelvic and skull injuries. The bodies of the remaining victims were found in the building.

"One woman was in a closet," Nolan said. "People were in hallways. People were still in bed — they never made it out of bed."

Hospitals treated 20 people — including a firefighter — for injuries ranging from burns and smoke inhalation to broken bones.

The hotel, built in 1928, met the city fire code, had fire alarms, and had passed recent inspections, authorities said. It did not have any fire escapes.

Single-room hotels in Chicago are not required to have sprinklers, and the Paxton did not. Mayor Richard Daley said the city will consider toughening its rules to require them.

Displaced residents were taken to at least five other residence hotels, according to a spokesman for the city Department of Human Services.

In the dim lobby of the Bel-Ray Hotel, J.D. Thompson, 62, was upbeat even though he lost his belongings and treasured family pictures in the fire.

"I got out," he said. "I can always get more money."

Around him other survivors argued loudly about what started the fire.

"What good is it to be bitter?" Thompson said, shielding his ears from the noise. "You just start over again. You just catch up."

School teammates convicted in N.J. rape

By FRED PIERETTI
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Three former high school football teammates were convicted of sexually assaulting a mentally retarded teenager in 1989 with a baseball bat after luring her into a basement with the promise of a date.

The defense had argued the woman was a willing participant. Jurors delivered their verdicts Tuesday, saying the victim, a 21-year-old woman with an IQ of 64 and the social skills of an 8-year-old, was incapable of consenting to sex because of her mental defects.

Christopher Archer, 20, and Kevin Scherzer, 22, were found guilty on two counts of aggravated sexual assault, the equivalent of rape, for using foreign objects to penetrate the woman's vagina. They also were found guilty of conspiracy.

Kyle Scherzer, Kevin's fraternal twin, was found guilty on one aggravated sexual assault count and conspiracy. A fourth defendant was convicted of conspiracy.

The accused and the victim all attended Glen Ridge High School. The promise of a date with a popular football teammate lured the victim, then 17, into the basement of the suburban Scherzer home in affluent Glen Ridge in March 1989.

There, the girl was penetrated by the bat, a broomhandle and a stick, and allegedly performed sex acts on five boys, including one who awaits a separate trial.

The four convicted Tuesday were allowed to remain free on bail. Defense attorneys said they planned to appeal.

Prosecutors sought to revoke bail for Archer and the Scherzers after the verdicts, but were denied. Essex County Assistant Prosecutor Robert Laurino said his office will go before the state Supreme Court today in a bid to revoke bail.

In trying to have bail revoked, Laurino said Archer raped a woman student at Boston College after the 1989 assault. "This guy went ahead and committed another rape while awaiting trial. He poses a danger to the community," said Laurino, who refused to give any details because the trial judge sealed the allegations. Archer's attorney, Thomas Ford, said he was unaware of any allegations against his client.

Sentencing was set for April 23. Archer and Kevin Scherzer face maximum prison sentences of up to 40 years, while Kyle faces 30 years. The fourth defendant, Bryant Grober, faces up to five years.

Defense attorneys contended that the young woman was not mentally retarded and that she consented to all of the sexual acts. Prosecutors countered that a mentally deficient person cannot consent to sex.

In an exception to New Jersey's Rape Shield Law, which protects the privacy of rape victims, the defense was allowed to bring up limited aspects of the alleged victim's sexual past in order to rebut the state's claim that the girl lacked the capacity to understand her actions.

The local National Organization for Women chapter monitored the trial and was pleased with the guilty verdicts.

"We're happy that they saw through the myths and lies about rape brought out in the courtroom," said Carol Vasile, a coordinator with Essex County NOW.

Young son of former minister may be key witness in trial

FORT WORTH (AP) — Walker Railey's young son could become a key witness when the former Dallas minister goes on trial next week in the choking attack that left his wife in a vegetative state, a newspaper reported today.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that Ryan Railey, who was 5 when someone attacked his mother in the garage of the Raileys' Dallas home, had told a family friend, "Maybe Daddy did it."

Margaret "Peggy" Railey was found on the floor of the garage nearly six years ago.

Dallas County District Attorney John Vance told the newspaper Tuesday that the young son, now 11, will be called to testify in the trial that begins next week in San Antonio.

Because Mrs. Railey appears to be in a permanent vegetative state in a Tyler nursing home and will not be able to testify, Vance said the young boy could provide the only eyewitness account.

"If he's ever going to be able to testify, he ought to be able to testify now," Vance said. "The way I understand it, they're (the prosecutors) going to call him and see what he says — kind of roll with the dice," Vance said.

In the year following the attack, the boy gave conflicting accounts of what he saw on the night of April 21, 1987.

Norm Kinne, Dallas first assistant district attorney, recalled that Ryan once told a Railey family friend, "Maybe Daddy did it."

At other times, Ryan told investigators and a psychologist that his mother's assailant was a balding "man in a mask" and also said his mother was attacked by more than one person.

Railey, former minister of the First Methodist Church of Dallas, has never been tried in a criminal court.

Peggy Railey's mother and legal guardian, Billie Jo Nicolai, filed a civil lawsuit accusing Railey of a "malicious" attempt to kill her daughter.

On April 22, 1988, a state judge ruled that Railey "intentionally, knowingly, maliciously and brutally attempted to strangle his wife." Railey was ordered to pay $16.5 million in damages.

The former minister has said he cannot afford to pay the judgement.

In July 1987, Railey appeared before a grand jury but invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and declined to give testimony.

Ryan and his sister Megan, 8, have remained in the permanent custody of John Yarrington, who is a former music director of First United Methodist Church of Dallas, and his wife, Diane, in Little Rock, Ark.

In August a Dallas County grand jury indicted Railey, who had left Dallas for California five years earlier and was working as an executive administrator at a Los Angeles church.

Vance said that prosecutors had once hoped that Peggy Railey would come out of her coma and that they waited for Ryan to be old enough to testify.

"I don't think we'll know what he's going to testify to until he testifies," Vance said. "I think they (his assistants assigned to the case) are planning to call him and let the chips fall where they will."

"I think if he is an eyewitness, certainly it helps the case. But I think they have enough circumstantial evidence without that."

Diane Yarrington said that Railey visited his children in June but he has not visited them since his indictment.

Pathologists disagree with Erdmann conclusions

LUBBOCK (AP) — Three pathologists investigating 77 autopsy reports have said they disagree with cause of death conclusions reached by Ralph Erdmann in more than one of every five.

Dr. David Hoblit, who headed the investigation, on Tuesday released a 21-page summary of the review performed in January by him, Ector County Medical Examiner Sparks Veasey and Wallace Graham of Salt Lake City.

They concluded that neither Erdmann nor his work was credible.

Faced with controversy surrounding his office and Erdmann, Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware requested the review of homicide cases that had occurred since Jan. 1, 1987, when Ware took office.

Capital murder cases were not included in the recent review because they already had been examined.

Hoblit said the $1,000 review focused on agreeing or disagreeing with the cause of death reported by Erdmann.

The pathologists went into the project disbelieving Erdmann's work and ended the project the same way, Hoblit said.

Hoblit said trust between Erdmann and law enforcement officers has been destroyed, but only in a "few remote cases" was the judicial system damaged. "In most of the cases where harm was done, bodies were exhumed."

Hoblit said his team of investigators agreed with Erdmann on cause of death in 60 cases.

Of the 17 in question, Hoblit said the panel as a whole disagreed with the findings in one case; one panel member disagreed in four cases because of wording and terminology problems, and 12 cases were deemed inconclusive.

No sign of rabies found after monkey bites boy's finger

AMARILLO (AP) — Tests show no signs of rabies in the black handed spider monkey that bit off the tip of a boy's finger, officials said Tuesday.

The 23-year-old monkey was put to sleep after biting Bobby Wyble, 5, at Storyland Zoo on March 9.

Duane Polster, director of parks and recreation, said the city zoo has been closed for construction since October. But the boy and his mother were allowed inside last week to donate a live turkey, Polster said.

The boy wandered to the monkey cage, where guardrails were removed for renovation. He stuck his right hand out to shake hands with the monkeys through the chain-link cage, reports show.

Doctors at Northwest Texas Hospital could not reattach the tip of the boy's right ring finger, Polster said.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A victory for liberties

When the traditional St. Patrick's Day Parade makes its way through the streets of New York City, it will signify more than the annual celebration of America's Irish roots. It marks a victory for basic American liberties.

The annual parade had been put in jeopardy by a group calling itself "Irish Gays and lesbian," who insisted that they be allowed to march in the parade. But the New York County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, sponsors of the parade, naturally objected on the reasonable grounds that a parade in honor of a Christian saint should not be forced to include a group that so openly flouts the basic teachings of the Bible. Not surprisingly, the city's Human Rights Commission side with the gays and lesbians, throwing the matter to the courts.

Lost in the grim news of the bomb blast at the World Trade Center was a New York judge's ruling that upholds the freedom of speech and association of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. In a ruling handed down the day of the blast, federal District Judge Kevin Thomas Duffy ruled against the Human Rights Commission by upholding the right of the Hibernians to hold their parade without the uninvited gay and lesbian participants.

The judge wisely ruled that the Human Rights Commission had violated the basic First-Amendment rights of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. By ordering that the Irish Gays and Lesbians be included in the parade, the agency had violated the rights of the order to control the theme and message of their own parade.

According to the judge, the Human Rights Commission violated the parade-sponsors rights in two ways: "(1) By rejecting the message that the (Ancient Order of Hibernians) claimed for the parade and by substituting its own version of what the commission thought the message of the parade was or should be, the city defendants have attempted to dictate what the parade sponsors would think," the judge wrote.

A second way basic rights were violated is that, "by forcing the inclusion of (the Irish Lesbians and Gays) in the parade, the commission sought to dictate how the parade sponsors would express their thoughts. Such activity (telling citizens what they must think and how they must express themselves) is something one would expect from the 'Thought police' described by George Orwell. The humor of naming the thought police the 'Human Rights Commission' is particularly Orwellian," the judge insightfully noted.

Judge Duffy concluded that if the Human Rights Commission believes the parade sponsors are being too exclusive, they should seek to persuade them that they are wrong, not trample upon their basic rights by ordering them to comply with the commission's view.

A parade is one of America's purist forms of public expression. A parade can express feelings, ideas and even religious beliefs. For the government to step in and dictate who may or may not participate in a parade is a direct assault on our traditional liberties of speech and assembly. If New York's Human Rights Commission had succeeded in forcing the St. Patrick's Day Parade sponsors to accept the unwanted contingent, its action would have been tantamount to shutting down the parade because its message ran a foul of official doctrine.

If freedom of speech, assembly and association mean anything anymore, groups such as the Ancient Order of Hibernians must retain the right to exclude certain people from their activities. They must be able to hold a parade without being forced by a government agency to modify and homogenize their intended message.

Members of the Human Rights Committee undoubtedly believed they were acting in the name of diversity and tolerance, when in fact they have become the enemies of both.

Democracy in Russia?

The rhetoric of recent political seasons is going to get in the way of a sensible reaction to what might well happen in the former Soviet Union in the near future.

Every day we suffer from the inordinate authority given by President Bush to the United Nations. Must recently China (China!) told us to cool it in the matter of doing something concrete to abort the development of a nuclear bomb by North Korea. Russia, a month or so ago, gave us a no trespassing signal on events in Yugoslavia. Given that China and Russia both have vetoes in the U.S. Security Council, and given that we have got into the habit of saying we will not cross the street without an OK from the Security Council, we are progressively burdened with devising policies that only China and Russia would approve of.

And it is so as regards our top-heavy penchant for "democracy." Our addiction to democracy is of very long standing, as also our confusion about it. I his book on democracy, John Dewey gave it 32 different meanings (somebody actually counted). Albert Jay Nock commented that if you photograph an American politician with his mouth open, you can be sure that he has just finished emitting the word "democracy." And if you photograph him with his mouth shut, you can be sure that he has just finished biting the word "democracy" in two.

Richard Nixon said something very wise, as usual, in his comment on the urgent need to help Russia, specifically, to help Boris Yeltsin. He said that we can't know what would happen if Yeltsin were overthrown, but that we could absolutely predict that whatever happened next would be worse.

Cosmopolites in the Beltway might smile at this, remembering the Bush-Baker enthusiasm for keeping Mikhail Gorbachev in power and squelching Yeltsin — who is certainly an improvement.

But we are pretty well at the end of the line in moving toward what Russia needs, which is political stability, monetary restraint and massive doses of free market enterprise. When Yeltsin had to dismiss prime minister Yegor Gaidar, one could there and then know that the forces hemming him in are from the wrong direction.

Ruslan Khasbulatov is the principal figure in the refractory Congress of Peoples' Deputies, and if he took power, he would join with ex-Communists, populists and hard socialists in pushing Russia in exactly the wrong direction.

Yet something has to be done. Yeltsin has no effective control over the mills that grind out rubles by the tens of millions. A burgeoning free market is giving Moscow for the first time in memory stores that groan with a variety of foods. But to buy one chicken costs the working man one month's salary. Paradoxes like that cannot be expected to last.

So Yeltsin will meet with President Clinton in Vancouver, and what they are worrying about, in our centers of diplomatic thought, is political correctness. What if, just before they meet, Yeltsin asserts authority over the Congress, sufficient to govern? Or what if, just after the Vancouver conference, he conducts his referendum and reads into it results that are undemocratic in character?

What happens is that we walk into 20 miles of barbed-wire rhetoric having to do with our devotion to democratic government. One sometimes has the feeling that as long as government practice is democratic, it is sacrosanct. They have, of course, never experienced democracy in Russia, and to expect happy political and happy economic development to go forward hand in hand is, well — to expect too much; to expect what is unlikely.

The globe is crowded with examples. Can we reasonably suppose that Taiwan would have prospered as it has, arriving as it has to democratic government, if it had had democracy beginning in 1949? As much can be said for South Korea and Singapore; and, as a matter of fact, for Japan, which for three critical years followed policies approved of by the satrap we sent out there, Douglas MacArthur.

Hating Francisco Franco was one of the most popular political pastimes in American history, beginning in 1936 and extending roughly until he died, leaving a prosperous democratic country. It will kill a lot of trendy historians, but it is progressively certain that Gen. Augusto Pinochet will be acclaimed as the man who saved Chile.

If Yeltsin arrogates the power necessary to pursue policies that point toward individual liberty, even if of a non-political nature for the time being, we should do what we can to free ourselves of our fixation on democratic formalism.

It would be ever so invigorating to have such reassurances from President Clinton. They are worth much more than a few billion dollars of aid.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, March 17, the 76th day of 1993. There are 289 days left in the year. This is St. Patrick's Day.

Today's Highlight in History:
On March 17, A.D. 461, according to tradition, St. Patrick — the patron saint of Ireland — died in Saul.

On this date:
In 1776, British forces evacuated Boston during the Revolutionary War.
In 1870, the Massachusetts legislature authorized the incorporation of Wellesley Female Seminary. (It later became Wellesley College.)
In 1905, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Eleanor Roosevelt were married in New York.

In 1906, President Theodore Roosevelt used the term "muckraker" in a speech to the Gridiron Club in Washington.

In 1910, the Camp Fire Girls organization was formed. (It was formally presented to the public exactly two years later.)

Reward: For breaking our laws!

Unemployment is the least it's been in 15 months, yet we have ever more Americans on food stamps.

Rep. Elton Gallegly notes that our nation's economy is vigorous; our problem is too many people.

In his home state of California, two-thirds of all babies born in Los Angeles County hospitals are born to illegal aliens, and immediately upon birth they are entitled to all the rights and benefits of citizenship.

Just that one county spends $400 million a year funding children of illegal immigrants.

Rep. Gallegly says it is our fault, not theirs. "We have provided this enormous incentive for foreign nationals illegally to enter our county."

While it would be inhuman to separate parents and children with deportation proceedings, "we must stop rewarding people for breaking our laws."

What the congressman is proposing is to bring our U.S. citizenship policy into line with the policy that almost all other nations have adopted.

Paul Harvey

It is not just "a California problem" or "a Florida problem."

Gallegly, a member of the House Judiciary Committee and its subcommittee on immigration, guesstimates that illegal immigrants are costing American taxpayers $5.4 billion a year in "direct services" plus the incalculable cost of the growing number of illegals who are turning to crime. Eighteen percent of California's jail population comprises deportable aliens.

So he proposes remedies that would cost only a fraction of that sum:

Increase border patrol staffing from 4,143 agents to 6,600 this year. Select 2,500 from recently discharged veterans.

Require one state-of-the-art counterfeit-resistant registration card be issued to all legal resident aliens.

Stop paying welfare and other benefits to illegal aliens.

Demand that local governments deport illegals and cut off all federal assistance to those who do not cooperate.

Throughout Europe, almost all nations have now closed the door on immigrants, legal or other.

The universal humanitarian instinct is being overwhelmed by the millions pounding on the doors of all enlightened nations demanding to be let in and demanding to be cared for once they are let in.

Triage justifies the necessarily cruel law of the sea: A lifeboat may not be overloaded lest all aboard perish.

Muting the voice of liberty

Spending cuts? Leave it to your government to do it penny-wise, tonfoolish.

Consider the case of budget-starved State Department bureaucrats conning the Clinton administration into an attempt to terminate "Radio Free Europe," "Radio Liberty," and their parent organization, the semi-autonomous Board for International Broadcasting. What seems like an arcane government turf war has potent implications.

In one swoop, the budget decision manages to 1) violate another Clinton campaign pledge, 2) work against democracy in Russia, 3) and China, 4) harm Clinton politically, 5) rewarded that stalwart of freedom, the emir of Kuwait and 6) display confusion.

To America, Russia is still the most important foreign country. The nuclear arsenal remains; in the wrong hands the weapons could threaten global stability. Further corrosion of Russian democracy could yield anarchy and an ugly global lesson: What follows totalitarianism may be worse. Clinton knows that. He is proposing financial aid, and the will soon be meeting with pro-democratic President Boris Yeltsin.

Yet, for U.S.-funded "home service" Radio Liberty — which broadcasts in 15 languages throughout the Former Soviet Union, which trains journalists in transitional societies that often still regard news as a propaganda weapon, which provides the best objective reporting of Russia by Russians to Russians — the Clinton budget proposes a Kevorkian solution.

Clinton thinks the job can be done by the Voice of America, an agency that — surprise! — would like to get its hands on RFE/RL's federal purse. But VOA is the "national service" voice of America, not of Russia. It is run by an always-nervous State Department, inherently reluctant and unable to do serious journalism about a foreign nation with which it is also negotiating.

China may be America's second most important foreign nation. The repressive communist government is building up nuclear-tipped military forces and sending arms to unsavory states. The economy is booming. If a second global superpower emerges, it will likely be China. America wants such a superstate to be democratic, which is why Clinton favors setting up "Radio Free China."

In a campaign position paper Clinton endorsed the report of the Commission on Broadcasting to the People's Republic of China, saying, "I am especially pleased by its principal recommendation: that a new surrogate radio service for Asia be initiated under the aegis of the Board of International Broadcasting."

Good idea. Emigre-based home service broadcasting would give non-propagandistic news about China, by Chinese, to China — encouraging democracy. Good idea, except that the Clinton budget zeroes out the aegis, the BIB. Again, Clinton gives the action to the VOA.

I was a member of that commission. The commissioners did not want VOA running the new Radio Free China because the Voice's marching orders come from the very State Department that was, to use Clinton's campaign language, "codding dictators." The commission discovered the VOA's China service did little broadcasting about China, and what it did was often muted lest it "provoke" the Chinese communist gerontocrats.

All this from one obscure budget line item. It gets worse. The same appropriation calls for building a $125 million transmitter in Kuwait. No Kuwait a minute! The emir's plantation spa may be the most unstable place on the planet. Is that a safe spot from which to broadcast about tumultuous events in the Islamic world?

Is Clinton serious? A spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget says it is a done deal. But Undersecretary of State-designate Tim Wirth says "no decision" has been made.

Meanwhile, Republicans plan to make an issue about the RFE/RL phase-out among East European ethnic groups in America. Hard-line Democrats view it as more mindless mush. And Congress, which will probably resolve the issue, has yet to be heard from.

The legislators may yet get Clinton out of the ditch. Support is growing to create a new quasi-independent agency that would save money by consolidating the national service VOA with the home service Radios, allowing each to do best what they do best, divorced from the cash-starved bureaucrats of the State Department.

Penny-wise, pound-sensible.

House ready to debate economic plan

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House neared its first vote on President Clinton's economic plan as top congressional Democrats tried to thwart party conservatives intent on trimming a companion jobs-creation package.

The House was set to debate the outlines today of the Democratic-written $510 billion budget-cutting plan, and perhaps a separate $16 billion jobs bill as well.

Votes on final passage of both measures were scheduled for Thursday, and Democratic leaders expressed confidence they would overwhelm outnumbered Republicans.

"I think we're in good shape," House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said Tuesday.

Senate debate on a similar half-trillion-dollar deficit-reduction outline also was set to begin as early as today.

Even before the House took them up, GOP lawmakers were sniping at the budget-cutting and jobs meaasures and preparing numerous budget alternatives of their own.

Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., scoffed at White House claims that the jobs measure would create employment for 219,000 Americans next year while stimulating the sluggish economy.

"It won't stimulate the economy. It's going to have the opposite effect, and it will add to the deficit," McDade, ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, told reporters.

And Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, a member of the House Budget Committee, criticized the Democrats' deficit-cutting plan.

The $510 billion in savings over the next five years outlined in the measure would come from spending cuts and $246 billion in tax increases — largely on the rich — that Clinton wants. The actual cuts would be made in later legislation, which won't be ready until May at the earliest.

"We cannot ask the American people ... to accept tax increases without first asking an even greater sacrifice of the federal government," Snowe said.

Meanwhile, behind the scenes, Democratic leaders in the House and Senate faced revolts by conservatives eager to shrink the $16 billion package that Clinton wants for road-building, summer jobs for youths and other job-creating programs.

In both chambers, conservative Democrats were worried the expenditure would upset voters believed to be more eager to shrink the federal deficit.

In the Senate, Sen. John Breaux, D-La., and others said about 15 of the chamber's 57 Democrats were reluctant to support the full $16 billion without a chance to vote first on the actual tax increases and spending cuts that are merely outlined in the plan being considered this week.

Breaux's vote count would spell trouble for Democratic leaders, who can afford to lose few Democrats and retain a majority in the 100-member Senate.

"I have a real concern that the whole thing could go down if we try to pass it now and do the cuts later," Breaux said in an interview.

Breaux, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., and others were proposing that while the entire $16 billion should be approved now, less than half the money should be released immediately. The rest — for items that need not be approved until after the summer — would wait until after Congress approves deficit-reduction legislation.

Among the alternative GOP budget proposals was a plan by Snowe and others that would cut spending more than Clinton, accept his tax increases on the rich, but eliminate his new taxes on energy and Social Security benefits.

Taking a back seat, at least for the moment, was a budget-cutting measure advanced last week by Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio. It would pare $429 billion in spending over the next five years without resorting to any of Clinton's tax boosts.

The House and Senate deficit-reduction plans are included in similar $1.5 trillion budgets that both chambers have written for fiscal 1994, which begins Oct. 1.

Witness: King disobeyed order to lie down

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rodney King seemed unfazed and joked after police hit him with a billy club during the videotaped beating that led to charges against four officers, a defense witness said.

In earlier testimony Tuesday, another defense witness said Officer Laurence Powell told her he was scared during the March 1991 beating and thought he might have to use his gun.

Both said King was laughing while lying hogtied on the ground afterward.

Officer Paul Beuregard of the Los Angeles school district police force said King disobeyed police orders to get down on the ground and was "turning around as if he was watching the (police) helicopter possibly and staggering."

He said the black motorist, who suffered serious head injuries in the beating, showed no sign of pain as he was hit.

"The baton was used several times," Beuregard said. "He was still standing. It didn't seem to have too much effect on him. He was just standing there as if he didn't know he was being hit."

The videotape shows King on the ground during much of the beating.

Earlier, city police Officer Susan Clemmer said shortly after the beating Powell came up to her, sweating and out of breath.

"He said, 'I was scared. The guy threw me off his back. I thought I was going to shoot him,'" Clemmer testified.

The defense in the federal civil rights trial maintains the officers were justified in using force to subdue King after a lengthy highway chase because he resisted and appeared intoxicated with the drug PCP.

Routine medical tests after the arrest failed to show any trace of the drug in King. He has conceded he was drinking that night.

The prosecution's medical witnesses have said the defendants never asked for blood or urine tests on King, suggesting they didn't suspect PCP intoxication.

Charged along with Powell are officers Timothy Wind, Theodore Briseno and Sgt. Stacey Koon. Acquittals in their state criminal case last year sparked riots that left more than 50 people dead and caused about $1 billion in damage.

The defense opened its case Tuesday after three weeks of testimony by prosecution witnesses, including King.

Clemmer, who said she directed traffic during the beating, said King laughed while handcuffed and bound by leg restraints and later in an ambulance, where she said he also spit blood on her shoes.

King testified earlier that he made a noise as he tried to blow blood out of his battered mouth, but said he never laughed or tried to spit blood on anyone.

Under cross-examination, Beuregard said King chuckled at a joke by an officer at the scene who said he was "in even more trouble now" because the school policeman was there and "King was a truant."

"Mr. King laughed first," said Beuregard. "He said, 'Oh, I guess I'll have to do detention now.'"

Detained cult members seek release from feds

WACO (AP) — A woman who left the Branch Davidian cult compound awaited word from a federal magistrate today on her possible release from jail, and another cult member prepared to ask the court for his release.

Kathy Schroeder, 34, has been held in jail by federal authorities since she left the armed compound Friday. She has been charged with no crime but has been held without bond as a material witness.

Ms. Schroeder was brought to court Tuesday wearing orange jail clothes, handcuffs and leg shackles.

Her court-appointed attorney, Scott Peterson, said releasing her from federal custody could help end the now 18-day-old siege at the Branch Davidian complex at Mount Carmel.

"If she is released ... she would send a message to all the folks back in the compound that she went through the legal channels and the system treated her fairly," Peterson said.

U.S. Magistrate Dennis Green said he likely would rule today.

The hearing was the first open session in federal court since the siege began. Ms. Schroeder's initial arraignment Saturday was held behind closed doors. Search and arrest warrants and other federal court matters connected with the cult case also have been secret.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Pfinizy said there is sufficient evidence to hold Ms. Schroeder. The government can detain a material witness for 60 days before another detention hearing must be held.

Peterson said the government didn't have proof that Ms. Schroeder would flee if released from jail.

"The government is in a difficult situation," Peterson said. "They have to think ahead that they need a potential witness. But they have to think about the balance of justice."

Ms. Schroeder, whose husband was killed in the shootout, said she wanted to leave the compound to see her child. Since leaving the Branch Davidian compound Friday, she has spoken with cult members by telephone as part of federal agents' negotiations.

She reportedly told other cult members she was being treated fairly and urged a peaceful resolution of the stalemate.

Brian Pollard, a court-appointed attorney for Oliver Gyarfas, the other adult who left the compound Friday, said he planned to ask the federal magistrate today for Gyarfas' release.

Gyarfas, 19, of Australia, also is being held at the McLennan County Correctional Center by federal authorities.

Musher Jeff King wins sled dog race, sets record

By T.A. BADGER
Associated Press Writer

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Jeff King and his 11-dog team won the 1,160-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race in record time today, turning what had been a two-way sprint into a solo cruise.

King, 37, crossed the finish line on Nome's historic Front Street at 12:39 a.m. Alaska time, winning in an unofficial time of 10 days, 15 hours and 38 minutes.

"It's a great feeling. It's been a great race for me," he said. "It's a real pleasure."

He broke the old record by more than four hours. Martin Buser won last year in 10 days, 19 hours and 17 minutes.

King of Denali Park set the record despite 10 additional hours of mandatory layovers added this year at the request of animal rights groups.

He left White Mountain at 4:50 p.m. Alaska time Tuesday, just seven minutes ahead of Dee Dee Jonrowe, who finished second, about 30 minutes behind King.

King had reduced his team to 11 dogs for the final push to the finish. He said a strong challenge by Jonrowe's team worried him.

"I could see that light back there bobbing, and I wasn't sure if someone was playing a joke on me or not," King said.

"I really did have a remarkable race. The dogs stayed very healthy and I was able to maneuver through some tough spots."

Jonrowe, who has been in some pain from a knee injury sustained in January's Alpirod in Europe, was driving a 14-dog team as both mushers pulled out all the stops for the final 77 miles.

She praised King's string of dogs. "The difference at the end was that Jeff's team was stronger," she said.

"See you in Nome, one way or the other," she said as King went back to his sled.

Hours later, a siren sounded King's arrival into this one-time Gold Rush community, and several hundred cheering, stomping fans turned out as the team moved off the Bering Sea's ice-covered beaches into town.

King earned $50,000 and a new pickup truck for his first-place finish. Jonrowe, 38, of Willow, collects $43,000 for finishing second.

The closest finish was in 1978, when Dick Mackey came in one second ahead of Rick Swenson.

King, who finished sixth last year, becomes just the second musher to have won both the 1,000-mile Yukon Quest International Sled Dog Race and the Iditarod. Joe Runyan, who won the Iditarod in 1989, was the first.

A number of mushers were forced to scratch or run slower than usual after their teams became ill from eating food that went bad on the trail because of warm weather. Three of the 1,300 dogs that started the race in Anchorage died on the trail, two in accidents.

The race usually lasts 11 to 14 days. Iditarod 21 started March 6 in Anchorage with 68 mushers. Eleven had dropped out by Tuesday night.

The Iditarod commemorates a 1925 relay of diphtheria serum to Nome during an epidemic. The race is named for an old mining town along the route.

GM recalls vehicles for fire danger

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. recalled 1.8 million 1988-93 full-size trucks to fix a problem that could result in an engine compartment fire.

The recall announced Tuesday involves about half of all 1988-93 Chevrolet and GMC full-size pickup trucks and 1992 Suburban, Blazer and Yukon models equipped with 5-liter, 5.7-liter and 7.4-liter engines coupled with 4L60, 4L60-E and 3L80 automatic transmissions.

The vehicles could have a condition in which transmission fluid is vented and may come in contact with the catalytic converter, especially when the trucks are used to carry heavy loads at high speeds or to carry heavy loads off road.

Dealers will install a longer vent hose to reroute the vented fluid from any heat source.

GM said it learned about the problem from field reports of about 400 fires which involved an undetermined number of minor injuries.

The condition has not resulted in any deaths.

Eating garlic for medicinal value? Plain good taste makes it a favorite

By Marialisa Calta

My husband and I love garlic. Our friend Andrew does not. In his bachelor days, when Andrew had a habit of dropping by for dinner, he suggested we hang a huge "garlic-ometer" outside the house, so he could decide in advance whether or not to come in.

Fortunately for garlic-lovers, garlic has received a lot of good press lately. Studies indicate that garlic may lower both blood pressure and blood cholesterol, and reduce the blood's tendency to clot (a possible protection against strokes). It is touted as a germicide, a fungicide, a decongestant, an expectorant, an antibiotic and an anti-fungal agent. Plus, legend has it, it helps ward off vampires.

Personally, I don't care much about garlic's medicinal properties. It's the taste I like.

My favorite way to eat garlic is to roast it and smush it on a piece of Italian bread. To roast, preheat the oven to 450. Halve a head of garlic (you can do several at a time) and coat lightly with olive oil. Place on baking pan and bake, covered, about 15 to 20 minutes. Squish and eat.

My second favorite way to eat it is in "bruschetta," a dish made of grilled or toasted Italian bread, well rubbed with cut garlic and sprinkled with olive oil and salt. (In the summer, add sliced tomatoes and fresh basil.)

My third favorite way to eat garlic is to add it to almost anything I put a few sliced cloves in the pot when steaming vegetables, mince some for scrambled eggs, and insert garlic pieces into most meats before roasting. I've even been known to add garlic to pop corn.

Perhaps I have gone a bit overboard; it's been a long, long time since Andrew dropped by for dinner. But then again, I haven't been bothered by vampires, either.

BAKED CHICKEN WITH 40 CLOVES OF GARLIC

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 4 pounds bone-in chicken pieces, skinned
- salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste
- 40 large cloves garlic, unpeeled (about 4 heads)
- 1 3/4 cups dry white wine
- 4 sprigs fresh thyme or 1/4 teaspoon dried
- 1 sprig fresh rosemary or 1/4 teaspoon dried
- 2 tablespoons Cognac
- 12 chopped fresh parsley slices (each 1/2-inch thick)
- coarse bread

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Heat oil over medium heat in a heavy bottomed, flameproof casserole dish wide enough to accommodate chicken in a single layer. Add chicken and season with salt and pepper. Sauté for 5 minutes, then turn over and sauté another 5 minutes. If bottom of pot scorches a little, don't worry. Remove chicken pieces from pot. Add garlic, reserving 1 clove, and sauté, stirring, for 3 to 5 minutes, until beginning to brown. Again, don't worry about scorching. Spread cloves in a single layer, and return chicken pieces to the pot. Add wine, herbs, and cover tightly. Place casserole in oven and bake 45 minutes. Check chicken. It should be tender and fragrant. If it isn't quite cooked through or very tender, bake another 15 minutes. Remove casserole from oven. Heat Cognac in small saucepan and light with a match. Pour over chicken and shake casserole until flames die down. Taste the sauce in the pot, adjust seasonings and sprinkle with parsley. Toast bread slices in oven, until they begin to color, about 10 minutes. Cut reserved garlic clove, and rub both sides of each piece of bread with cut-side of garlic. To serve, place two pieces of bread on each plate and top them with a piece or two of the chicken, some of the sauce in the pot and several garlic cloves, which your guests should squeeze out onto the bread before eating. Alternately, serve on a bed of steamed green beans and red onions, with bread and garlic on the side. Yield: 6 servings.

Recipe from "The Eating Well Cookbook," (Camden House Publishing, 1991).

MASHED POTATOES WITH ROASTED GARLIC

- 4 heads garlic
- 1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 1/2 pounds all-purpose potatoes, peeled and cut into large chunks
- 3/4 teaspoon salt plus more for pot
- 2 tablespoons butter, preferably unsalted
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 1/2 cups hot milk

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Leaving heads intact, remove all but the innermost layers of papery skin from garlic. In small baking dish, toss garlic with oil. Roast for 40 minutes, or until softened completely but not browned. Let stand until cool enough to handle. Place potatoes in a large pot and cover with cold, salted water and bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat to medium and simmer until tender. Drain well and return to pot.

Yield: 4 servings. Recipe by Irving Shelby Smith, in September/October 1991 issue of Harrowsmith Country Life magazine.

Separate garlic cloves, slip off remaining skins and add garlic to pot. Mash potatoes and garlic together, adding butter, parsley, 3/4 teaspoon salt and pepper. Thin to desired consistency with hot milk.

Yield: 4 servings. Recipe by Irving Shelby Smith, in September/October 1991 issue of Harrowsmith Country Life magazine.

CASTILIAN GARLIC SOUP

- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 4 thick slices Italian bread
- 2-4 cloves (to taste) garlic, minced
- 1 quart canned beef broth
- 2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
- 1 freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Put 1 tablespoon of oil in a skillet and fry bread over medium heat until golden on one side. Add another tablespoon of oil and turn bread over, frying until almost golden on that side. Add remaining oil and garlic, and continue cooking until bread is golden and garlic has colored slightly. Add broth, simmer 10 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and pepper.

To serve, transfer bread to bowls using a spatula. Pour remaining broth around each slice (most will have been absorbed by bread). Yield: 4 servings.

'The Bed and Breakfast Cookbook' takes you there

By LINDA BEAULIEU Johnson & Wales University For AP Special Features

When Martha Murphy prepares meals for her guests at Murphy's Bed & Breakfast in Narragansett, R.I., the menu might include Welsh country scones, British broiled tomatoes, fruit salad with lime ice, peach melba tart and lemon bars.

Murphy bakes her own breads and scones and uses whatever is in season. Guests are likely to dine on pancakes, waffles, French toast, ham, sausage, bacon and egg dishes.

In the winter, Martha likes to serve corned beef hash, one of her personal favorites. Afternoon tea is offered by a fieldstone fireplace in the living room or, when weather permits, on the front porch.

"My mother taught me that the best food is made from scratch and that it's also more economical," said Murphy, whose 100-year-old Victorian establishment, is located one block from the Atlantic Ocean.

A graduate of Johnson & Wales University in Providence, R.I., Murphy is the author of "The Bed & Breakfast Cookbook" (Stemmer House Publishers).

Featuring bed and breakfasts from all 50 states, the 276-page book, illustrated with color photos, describes each bed and breakfast with pertinent travel information. One or two recipes from each establishment are featured, including the following recipes:

- 3/4 pound Swiss cheese, grated
- 1/2 pound Monterey jack cheese, grated
- 16 eggs
- 3 3/4 cups milk
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 4 scallions
- 1 tablespoon German mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 1/2 cups sour cream
- 1 cup Parmesan cheese

Chop or break the bread into small pieces; distribute evenly between two greased 9- by 13-inch baking pans. Drizzle with melted butter. Chop the salami and distribute evenly over the bread. Sprinkle the grated Swiss and Monterey jack cheeses over the salami.

In a large bowl, beat together the eggs, milk and wine. Chop the scallions; stir into the egg mixture along with the mustard and peppers. Pour this over the casseroles, cover with foil and refrigerate overnight.

Remove from the refrigerator 30 minutes before baking. Bake, covered, in a 325-degree F oven for about one hour or until set. Uncover and carefully spread with the sour cream. Sprinkle the Parmesan cheese over the sour cream. Return to the oven; bake uncovered for 10 minutes. Cut into squares and serve immediately. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

Name game played by many but mastered by only a few

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the letter you received from Mrs. Dow in Florida who said everyone can say "cow," "now" and "how," but she couldn't understand why people were unable to pronounce "Dow."

When I married, I became "Mrs. Cowan." No one seems able to pronounce it. They say "Coe-en." There is an advantage, however. I can easily screen my telephone calls, and in this age of telephone solicitation, that can be a blessing. Anyone who doesn't know how to pronounce my name doesn't know me, which immediately causes me to forget that I'm home.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

A CALIFORNIA COWAN

DEAR CALIFORNIA COWAN: If misery loves company, you should be comforted by the following:

DEAR ABBY: While I do not belittle the seriousness of Mrs. Dow's problem, if she thinks she has problems, she should have my name: It's G-O-U-G-H, pronounced "Goff."

I have had substitute schoolteachers, telemarketers, receptionists, etc. call me "Mrs. Go," "Mrs. Gowtch" and "Mrs. Gootch."

My father told me to say, "It rhymes with 'cough,'" but he's a doctor. I usually get called "Lynette (cough cough)" as a response.

I'm told that this is a common name in England. Here, it's a curse. I'm hoping to marry (quickly) a man with a name like Jones or Smith.

LYNETTE GOUGH,
NEW ORLEANS

DEAR ABBY: I am employed in an office that has several secretaries, assistant secretaries, typists, etc.

I stayed late one evening to write some personal letters. Another female employee had also stayed after office hours to do some typing.

On my way to the water cooler to get a drink of water, I passed the boss's office. His door was about one-third open, and what I saw really shook me up. This other female employee was going through the boss's wastepaper basket!

I had no idea what she was looking for, but this has been gnawing at me ever since. I haven't told anyone about it, but I think maybe the boss should know about this. If you were in my place, would you tell him?

WITNESS

DEAR WITNESS: No. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: In your response to "Childless by Choice," you referred to them as "happy and well-adjusted." Maybe so, but they are not well-informed. They had written: "We enjoy traveling, and have seen not only the United States, but Canada, Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, Europe, South America and the Orient." Somebody needs to tell them that Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands have been two of the United States for a quarter of a century now.

The rest are the contiguous states, not the "continental states," which one often hears, for Alaska is in the same continent. To us up here, they are "the lower 48" or simply "down south."

JOHN B. D'ARMAND,
JUNEAU, ALASKA

DEAR MR. D'ARMAND: Thanks for the geography lesson.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY IRISH FRIENDS: On this St. Patrick's Day, may I extend this Irish blessing to you: May you never forget What is worth remembering, Or remember what is Best forgotten.

Kissing is more than meets the lips

By COUNTRY LIVING
For AP Special Features

Sexual harassment is nothing new — back in the 18th century you could sue somebody for wrongful kissing.

A woman of that era, Marlene Parkin wrote in an article in the current issue of Country Living, could bring suit against a man who kissed her against her will.

In the late 1700s, a German jurist wrote a treatise classifying kisses as either lawful or unlawful. Lawful kisses were spiritual, reconciliatory, customary, respectful or loving gestures between married or engaged persons, family, or friends. Treacherous, malicious or lustful kisses were considered unlawful.

In 1837, Thomas Saverland brought suit in England against Caroline Newton for severely biting his nose after he tried to kiss her. The judge acquitted her, saying that "when a man kisses a woman against her will, she is fully entitled to bite his nose, if she so pleases."

Authorities are divided about the origin of the kiss. One theory holds that primitive man believed the air he exhaled had magic power. Men and women who kissed mingled their souls. Another view holds that kissing evolved from nose rubbing. Others attribute it to early ancestors who provided food to their children by way of a "kiss."

The Romans had three terms for the custom: basium, for a kiss between acquaintances; osculum, for a kiss between close friends; and suavius, for a kiss between lovers. During the Roman Empire, friends and family were greeted with a kiss, as were shopkeepers, tradespeople, everyone. The nuptial kiss at the altar began then as bride and groom exchanged "the breath of life."

During the Middle Ages, rank determined where a kiss was placed — on the mouth, hand, knee or foot. The lower one's status, the farther from the face.

The practice of illiterate people marking an "X" on contracts in place of a signature, then kissing it to affirm their sincerity, originated in the Middle Ages. Eventually the kiss and "X" became synonymous. The friendly kiss remained popular for centuries, but in the 1850s Americans turned to etiquette books to develop standards of behavior distinct from Old World manners.

One etiquette book called "the general kissing of the bride, a distasteful and even disgusting practice."

Farrar's book "Young Lady's Friend" warned: "Never join in any rude plays that will subject you to be kissed or handled in any way by a gentleman."

In 1879 John H. Young wrote in "Our Department:" "The custom which has become quite prevalent of women kissing each other whenever they meet in public, is regarded as vulgar, and by ladies of delicacy and refinement is entirely avoided."

A 1905 book declared, "It is not well-bred to kiss anyone on the street, even a baby."

Later in the century, writers seized upon the germ theory to editorialize against kissing.

While a kiss has meant many things over time, its use as a symbol of love has never lost its significance.

Duke faces uphill battle in going for 'three-peat'

By The Associated Press

College basketball's next dynasty? Don't close the book on the last one, says Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski.

"People are waiting to close the chapter," Krzyzewski said as he prepared his Blue Devils for their NCAA opener on Thursday night. "What we have to try to do is use that to our advantage, don't let anybody close any darn chapters on us. This is our time."

Of course, Krzyzewski also realizes his Blue Devils are not as powerful as in the last two seasons, when they won the national championship.

While the Blue Devils have plenty of postseason experience with star players like Bobby Hurley, Grant Hill and Thomas Hill, who have two championship rings each, Krzyzewski said his 1992-93 team has been more apprehensive at times.

"They are more easily distracted than my last two teams," Krzyzewski said. "They might be distracted by a performance of a player against them ... it knocks them back. A call, or if they miss a couple of shots. In some games that will impact on them more than we would like."

"This team gets along great, but that's what we mean by maturity. It has nothing to do with something like 'you stole my towel and I'm mad at you for life.'"

A comparison to last year's team, which beat Indiana and Michigan in the Final Four to win the crown, is unfair, he said.

"Last year's team was very unusual," Krzyzewski said. "Last year's team was one of the best teams to ever come out of this conference. So, when you have extremes ... your standard of comparison is that we have seen how great it can be, and can we ever measure up to that? Well, you'll never measure up to that. You are not going to measure up to that."

The Blue Devils have lost seven games, including four since Feb. 13, and questions surround Grant Hill's effectiveness. While they're favored to beat Southern Illinois in a Midwest Regional opener in Rosemont, Ill., on Thursday, the Blue Devils (23-7) are 10-to-1 to make it three in a row.

Duke is looking to join UCLA as the only schools to win three consecutive Division I basketball titles.

Among the teams standing in the Blue Devils way are the four No. 1 seeds — Kentucky, North Carolina, Indiana and Michigan.

North Carolina will open against East Carolina in the East on Thursday. Kentucky goes against Rider in the Southeast, Michigan will play Coastal Carolina in the West and Indiana will face Wright State in the Midwest on Friday.

There will be 16 games on each of the first two days of the tournament, when the field will be cut in half. The Final Four will be held in New Orleans on April 3-5.

While Duke may be a longshot to "three-peat", the chances are considerably longer for the 16th-seeded teams in each region to even get past the first round.

Since the tournament went to 64 teams in 1985, no 16th seed has won. In fact, last year, all four lost by an average of 26 points. Overall, they're 0-32.

Just to make it a little tougher this year, the top seeds in each of the four regionals each received first-place votes in the final Associated Press poll, and all four have been ranked No. 1 at some point this season.

"I don't think our kids are going to be in awe," Wright State coach Ralph Underhill said.

Underhill brings a 317-113 record in 15 seasons at Wright State into the NCAA tournament. The Raiders won the Division II national title in 1983.

"Indiana is a great basketball team," Underhill said. "But I think we can match up well in certain situations."

Coastal Carolina coach Russ Bergman isn't so sure about his game with Michigan in Arizona.

"The best thing for us to do is circle the wagons and pray for a dust storm," Bergman said. "If that happens out in Arizona, then we've got a good shot."

Coach Mike Krzyzewski and his Duke team were a happy bunch after receiving the NCAA championship trophy last April.

Harvesters rip Dalhart

DALHART — It was one of those games where everyone got to play and everyone contributed as Pampa walloped Dalhart, 14-4, in a non-district baseball game Tuesday.

Chris Poole started on the mound and was the winning pitcher for the Harvesters. He gave up one hit while striking out two and walking two before being lifted after three innings with Pampa ahead, 11-0.

"Chris has really been pitching well," said Pampa head coach Rod Porter. "We had the game pretty well in hand after the first couple of innings and we were able to take a look at kids who haven't got to play very much. It's good experience for them and it could help us on down the road."

Matt Garvin relieved Poole on the mound and gave up four runs on two hits while striking out two and walking three in one and two-thirds innings. Gregg Moore finished up, allowing one hit while striking out two in one and a third innings.

Leading hitters for the Harvesters were Matt Finney, two singles, two RBI; Poole, single, triple, three RBI; Kurt West, two singles, two RBI and Moore, single, triple, three RBI. West is hitting over .400 to lead the Harvesters' offense.

Tony Cavalier had one hit, Hank Gindorf, one hit and one RBI, and Kyle Parnell, one hit, three RBI, for Pampa.

The Harvesters, 4-5 for the season, meet Brownfield at 2 p.m. Thursday in the first round of the Canyon-Randall Tournament. The game will be played at the Randall High School field.

NCAA women's tournament tips off tonight

By MEL GREENBERG
For The Associated Press

A year ago, the University of Washington slowly faded from the NCAA women's tournament picture as the season concluded.

Now, the Huskies (16-11) have come back into focus and will be at home for a first-round West game tonight against Big Sky champion Montana State (22-6).

"We don't know a lot about Montana State, but we've had enough trouble with Big Sky teams in the past to know that they're legit if they won that league," Washington coach Chris Gobrecht said.

"For us, the difference between now and a year ago is last year we just kept getting worse, while this year we've been getting better since January."

"We've been starting three sophomores and have had two freshmen coming off the bench, which is why we were lousy early in the season and are pretty good now."

The winner will advance to face No. 5 Texas Tech (26-3) on Saturday.

In another West first-round game tonight, No. 21 Georgia (20-12), a team — like Washington — that seemed unlikely to make the 48-team NCAA field a month ago, will be the host for San Diego State (19-8).

The Bulldogs recently upset then-No. 1 Tennessee in the Southeastern Conference playoffs and finished runner-up to champion Vanderbilt.

"We feel like we played our way into the tournament and we feel good about that," Georgia coach Andy Landers said. "San Diego State was a quality team in December and is a quality team now, as their record shows."

"The question is, have we improved more than they have?" Landers asked in reference to San Diego State's 70-63 victory over Georgia at a tournament in December.

The winner will travel to meet defending champion Stanford (25-5), the top seed in the West, on Saturday.

In all, 14 more first-round games will be played tonight, with the winners advancing to second-round games this weekend against the seeded teams that drew byes.

The remaining West first-round games have No. 22 Nebraska (22-7) as a host to San Diego (16-11), the surprise West Coast champion, with the winner moving to No. 15 Southern California (21-6) on Sunday, and UC Santa Barbara (18-11), the surprise Big West champion, against Western Athletic champion Brigham Young (24-4), with the winner going to No. 10 Colorado (25-3), the West's No. 4 seed.

In the East, No. 18 Vermont (28-0) puts its unbeaten status on the line in the tournament, hoping history won't repeat itself.

The Catamounts (28-0) will open play in the East Regional tonight. The opposition is Rutgers, the Atlantic 10 champion.

Last year, the Catamounts traveled to George Washington and lost in the closing seconds to the Atlantic 10 champion. This time, however, the 18th-ranked Catamounts, winners of the North Atlantic Conference, will be at home.

Rutgers (21-8), coached by Theresa Grentz, who headed the U.S. Olympic squad last summer, could be more of a challenge. The Lady Knights will have an edge in size and athleticism in the front-court.

So coach Cathy Inglese's Catamounts will need to be at their defensive best if Vermont is to advance to meet No. 3 Ohio State (24-3), the top regional seed, on Sunday.

"We feel a lot more mentally prepared this time," Inglese said. "Last year we didn't know a lot of things, it was all new. This year we're home and we have more preparation time. We're pretty comfortable about that."

In another game in the East tonight, it's St. Peter's (18-10), the Metro Atlantic champion, at No. 20 Miami (23-6), the Big East champion. The winner will visit Western Kentucky (23-6) on Saturday.

Georgetown (21-6), the regular-season Big East co-champion, will be home for No. 21 Northern Illinois, the Mid-Continent champion, with the winner advancing to No. 5 Penn State (22-5) on Saturday.

No. 19 Bowling Green (5-4), the Mid-American winner, will be host to Florida (18-9), with the winner advancing to No. 9 Virginia (24-5) on Sunday.

Pole vaulter

Tony Bybee of Wayland Baptist University in Plainview was second in the pole vault with a personal best of 16-4 at the NAIA National Indoor Track Meet held earlier this month in Kansas City. Bybee is a Pampa native. As a team, WBU scored nine points to finish sixth. In the women's division, WBU was second with 65 points. Central State Ohio won both the men's and women's divisions.

Tournament trivia

By GEORGE SMITH
Pampa News correspondent

Note: George Smith of Pampa is a former high school coach from Oklahoma who annually attends the UIL boys' basketball tournament in Austin. His observations on the recently-completed 1993 tournament are as follows:

It seems the 3-point shot is here to stay. Of the 15 games played, there was a total of 446 3-point shots with only 138 made. Ferris' Kyle Rogers was named "Mr. 3" by making 13 in his two games.

The days of the elaborate offenses of the 60's, 70's and 80's seem to have gone by the wayside. It appears the teams who can dribble the best, are faster than the rest and can jump higher are the ones who seem to win. Shooting percentages for all the games played was only 42.9% with the Class 1A Conference leading the pack at 45.8%.

One of the most heart-breaking situations came in the 3A conference semifinal game between Ferris and Gonzales. Gonzales was trailing Ferris, 61-60, with 2.9 seconds remaining when Chris Carrizales was fouled on a 3-point attempt. He only needed one free throw to tie or two to win. He missed all three shots. He will be remembered for missing all three free throws, but his 22 points scored in the game will be forgotten.

Of all the MVP's of the different conferences, only one was from a losing team — Solomon Jones of Port Arthur Lincoln in the 4-AAAA conference. Corey Barnes, Laneville's MVP in 1-A, had a double-double in the finals against Brock, 22 rebounds and 23 points. He's only 6-2. Other MVP's were Greg Austin from Troup in 2-AA; Justin Dobbs from Southlake Carroll in 3-AAA and Charles Smith from Fort Worth Dunbar in 5-AAAAA.

Bad news for 1-A and 2-AA conferences for 1994. Laneville and Troup are loaded for next year, returning several underclassmen. Itasca had no seniors and "Mr. 3" from Ferris is only a junior.

Southlake Carroll became the first school to win state titles in both basketball and football since the 1961-62 Dumas teams accomplished this feat. Converse Judson just barely missed as they won the Division I 5-AAAAA football title, but finished up second to Dunbar in the basketball finals.

Phil Ransopher has been announcing UIL tournament games for the past 48 years.

PA Lincoln's Solomon Jones, shooting over Plainview's Dibi Ray in the Class 4A semifinals, was the only player from a losing team named as a tournament MVP.

Oklahoma Baptist wins opener

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Top-seeded Oklahoma Baptist passed its opening round test in the 56th annual NAIA Tournament. Cumberland College's 13-hour late-night trek out of snow-covered Kentucky wasn't as fruitful.

Oklahoma Baptist (31-3) ran its winning streak to 16 Tuesday with a 79-71 win over Tri-State of Indiana. Leading by as many as 17 points midway through the second half, the Bison saw the lead cut to 71-65 before a layup by Darrell Barnett and a tip-in by Fabio Sant'Anna reopened the lead to a safe 75-65.

"The bottom line is winning, but you've got to play the game of your life every game you're here," said Oklahoma Baptist coach Bob Hoffman.

Cumberland didn't arrive until 12:30 a.m. Tuesday because of the heavy snow, then dropped a 74-70 decision to No. 8 Briar Cliff (Iowa).

"Yesterday, I thought it (the 13-hour drive and late arrival) would hurt us, but in all honesty, I don't think it bothered us at all," said Cumberland coach Randy Vernon.

What did bother Vernon was 31.4 percent first-half shooting and a 28-point, 14-rebound performance by Briar Cliff star Leon Trimmingham. "We felt we had to hold him to under 20 points, but he was too mobile and athletic inside," said Vernon.

Seeded teams not fortunate in opening-round play, as No. 8 Incarnate Word (Tex.), No. 11 Wisconsin-Stevens Point and No. 15 Findlay (Ohio) were beaten.

Hole-in-one shot at Pampa Country Club

Dr. Joe Donaldson had a hole-in-one Tuesday at the Pampa Country Club course. His ace came on the 165-yard, par 3, No. 5 hole.

Witnesses were Pete Blanda, Jay Baker, Don Russell and Ed Myatt.

Caprock slips by Pampa in girls' district soccer match

AMARILLO — Pampa's Lady Harvesters fell to Caprock, 3-2, in a District 4 soccer shootout Tuesday at Southwest Park.

The score was tied 2-2 at the end of regulation play. Nichole Garcia scored the winner for Caprock in the shootout.

Pampa's goals were scored by Elasha Hanks and Lizeth Arreola.

The Lady Harvesters, 3-9 overall, finished tied with Palo Duro for fifth place in the district standings.

The top three teams in the district advance to the area round of the playoffs, which are tentatively scheduled for March 23 in Midland against El Paso teams from Districts 1 and 2.

Tasoca and Amarillo High girls are the district champions. Tasoca won a playoff for the No. 1 seed. Caprock emerged from a three-way district playoff for the No. 3 seed.

In the boys' division, Pampa finished as the No. 2 playoff seed behind first-place Amarillo High. Caprock is the No. 3 seed.

The Harvesters finished the regular season with an 8-6 record.

Haley sticks with Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — The NFL's new open market wasn't even tested by Charles Haley.

The pass rusher supreme wanted to stay with the Dallas Cowboys so much that he signed a three-year deal Tuesday without putting his services up for bid.

Haley said he did it for "respect" because the world champions took a chance on him.

Haley, 29, whose sack of Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly in the Super Bowl produced a fumble which was returned for a touchdown by Jimmie Jones, said: "Johnson traded for me and believed in me. I owe the Cowboys some respect and that's why I didn't try the open market."

Terms were not disclosed but Haley's package with incentives was expected to approach $6 million over the next three seasons.

The sometimes moody Haley only had six sacks during the regular season but as Johnson said, "There's no question Charles had a big impact on our football team. His addition allowed our defense to improve. I look forward to him being a great player in the future. I believe he will even be a better player."

Haley, who was obtained in a trade with the San Francisco 49ers last fall, said after the Super Bowl victory that he wanted to stay with the Cowboys.

"I was just waiting for the Cowboys to nod," Haley said. "Money isn't everything to me. If I had wanted money I could have stayed in San Francisco. The Cowboys respected my ability and my loyalty is to them and this is the way I reward them."

Haley said his reputation as a troublemaker is overblown. "People like to remember all the bad things you did, not the good things," he said.

Haley held several interviews at the Super Bowl which he cut short when he got questions he didn't like.

Johnson kidded Haley, saying something happened in the Super Bowl he didn't like.

"I'm going to get on him for messing up my hair," Johnson said.

After Johnson was doused with water, Haley and running back Emmitt Smith ran their fingers through Johnson's coiffure.

UNLV suspends Rider

By The Associated Press

Blessed with what is generally considered its best field in recent years, the NIT must now go forward without its marquee attraction.

J.R. Rider, projected as a lottery pick in the June NBA draft, was suspended by UNLV on Tuesday. No. 19 UNLV (21-7), which is at home for Southern Cal (16-11) in an opening-round game tonight, has found that senior forward did not do all his own classwork.

"It was a difficult decision because I know the commitment J.R. Rider made to stay at this institution instead of turning pro last year," UNLV athletic director Jim Weaver said at a news conference also attended by first-year coach Rollie Massimino.

Even without Rider, the 56th NIT has plenty of high-profile teams to keep interest high.

In other games Wednesday, it will be Miami of Ohio (20-8) at Ohio State, Michigan State (15-12) at Oklahoma (19-11), Florida (16-11) at Minnesota (17-10), Georgia (15-13) at West Virginia (16-11), and Rice (17-9) at Wisconsin (14-13).

Despite the presence of the big-name teams, Jack Powers, executive director of the NIT, doesn't see his tournament as competition for the more prestigious NCAA.

"We are a springboard for the NAAs," Powers said. "We want our teams to do well here and then be able to move on."

Virginia won the NIT last year and is in the NCAA tournament this year. Stanford won the NIT in 1991 and moved into the NAAs last season. The natural progression was reversed this year, when a number of traditional NCAA heavyweights were squeezed out of the 64-team field and slid back to the NIT.

So Powers' tournament inherits some of college basketball's most familiar coaching faces, including Rollie Massimino, Billy Tubbs, Jud Heathcote, Hugh Durham, George Raveling, Clem Haskins and Randy Ayers, all in action on opening night. Some of them aren't thrilled to be there.

Haskins at Minnesota and Tubbs at Oklahoma were particularly vocal after their teams were snubbed by the NCAA. Less strident was Massimino.

One coach who won't complain is Wisconsin's Stu Jackson.

"After I watched us play the Russians (during the pre-season), I didn't know if we'd make the CYO tourney. I didn't think it was a realistic goal when I first saw this team," Jackson said.

In most cases, struggling finishes doomed the big-name teams as they tried to make the NCAA field. UNLV, Minnesota and Oklahoma split their final 10 games of the regular season.

NIT preview

Oklahoma and Michigan State in particular seemed headed for bigger and better things this season. The Sooners opened 16-1 and the Spartans were 8-1. Both then did U-turns, Oklahoma finishing 9-10 and Michigan State in a 7-11 spin.

But Tubbs says the past is just that.

"Anytime we have a chance to play, we're going to do it," he said. "We've had a tough season. This is a chance to get together and have some success."

Haskins reluctantly has accepted his fate, but remains disappointed.

"It'll be tough," he said. "When you have your heart set on something ... it's like that toy for Christmas, when Mom gives it to you, you'll accept that second toy, but you wanted that first one. You don't want that 20-inch bike, you want that 24-inch bike."

Florida's Lon Kruger says his Gators have no one to blame but themselves for missing out on the NCAA.

"Our disappointment is just that we didn't finish and take care of business," he said.

The NIT's first round continues Thursday with Virginia Commonwealth (20-9) at Old Dominion (20-7), Boston College (16-12) at Niagara (23-6), James Madison (21-8) at Providence (17-11), Auburn (15-11) at Clemson (16-12), Alabama-Birmingham (17-13) at Alabama (16-12), St. Joseph's (18-10) at Southwest Missouri State (17-10) and Georgetown (16-12) at Arizona State (18-9).

On Friday, it will be Jackson State (24-8) at Connecticut (15-12), Houston (21-8) at Texas El-Paso (20-12) and Pepperdine (22-7) at UC Santa Barbara (18-10).

Lubbock Christian stuns Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Lubbock Christian rallied for eight runs in the final two innings to charge from behind and shock No. 1 Texas 9-7 Tuesday night at Dish-Falk Field.

Chaparral shortstop Chris Teeters knocked in the winning runs with a two-out, three-run triple in the top of the ninth off Mark Lummus, the fifth Texas pitcher of the game. The hit was Teeters' third and made a winner out of Lubbock Christian's John Bimmerle (3-0). Bimmerle entered in the third and surrendered only one run and three hits in six and one-third innings of work.

Jo Jo Hinojosa (0-1) took the loss for Texas, now 24-4 on the season.

Lubbock Christian, ranked sixth in the latest NAIA poll, improved to 14-10 on the season.

Texas rocked Chaparral starter Jeese Armendariz for five runs in the third inning as Darrick Duke, J.P. Webb and Peter Gardere knocked in runs and Armendariz allowed two more on a wild pitch and a passed ball.

Lubbock Christian cut into the Texas lead with a four-run rally in the eighth, scoring via consecutive doubles by Michael Evans, Scott Hoyes and Trent Petrie.

Rockets set club record

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets had the lead only three times, but they had it when it really counted to give them a franchise-record 14th straight victory.

Rookie Robert Horry hit a 3-pointer with 42 seconds remaining to give the Rockets a 92-91 lead over the Orlando Magic and they held on for a 94-93 victory Tuesday night.

Their only lead prior to that came when Hakeem Olajuwon scored the game's opening basket to make it 2-0.

Following Horry's go-ahead 3-pointer, Kenny Smith made two free throws with 16 seconds left and Orlando's Jeff Turner's two free throws with 12 seconds remaining closed out the scoring 94-93.

"It's a good feeling," said Smith, who scored a team-high 23 points, 19 in the second half. "We're celebrating more because we won a close game against a good team than winning 14 straight."

"The streak is wonderful, but the main thing is the best possible positioning in the playoffs. I'm proud of the streak and if people can look back and say the '93 team did it with great defense and great effort."

The Rockets' record-setting victory improves them to 41-21 and gives them a 2-game lead over San Antonio in the Midwestern Division.

Houston survived a scare at the end of the game when Olajuwon committed a turnover with 11 seconds remaining and the Rockets up 94-93, giving the Magic one last possession.

But Orlando guard Litterial Green misfired on an 11-foot jumper with four seconds remaining as the Rockets held on.
