City facing another raid-related lawsuit

The city of Pampa again has been cited as a defendant in a lawsuit alleging that officers of the Pampa Police Department illegally detained and strip-searched the 10 plaintiffs during a 1991 drug bust.

Filed Monday in 223rd state District Court in Pampa, the lawsuit seeks $3 million in combined compensatory, punitive, and exemplary damages for the 10 plaintiffs, in addition to various legal fees and interest on the damages.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are the city of Pampa; former Pampa Police Chief James Laramore; Gray County Justice of the Peace Bob Muns; City Manager Glen Hackler; former police officers Tracy Norwood and David Wilkin; police dispatcher Lisa Burden; and current police officers Steve Chance, Allan Smith, Kenneth E. Hopson and Kenneth E. Hall.

Asked for a reaction to the lawsuit, Hackler said Wednesday that "I think it's creative, but beyond that I don't think it would be appropriate to comment since it is a matter pending litigation."

Pampa attorney Mark Buzzard, who represents five of the plaintiffs in the case, said: "I think it is inappropriate at this time to comment on the case, except to say that I look forward to bringing that case right here in Pampa before the people who have the most interest and concern in its outcome."

Jeff Blackburn of Amarillo, the other attorney representing plaintiffs in the case, could not be reached for comment by press time on Wednesday.

Plaintiffs in the suit are Oralia Hernandez-Reyes, Elicia Dee Slattery, Tracy Walters Slattery, Lesa Maye Lewis, Rebecca Martinez, Richard Fleming, James Eustachio Martinez, Randall Todd Slattery, Frank Reyes Jr., and Andres Cortez. The plaintiffs were at 905 Twiford St. in Pampa when the house was raided by the Pampa Police Department on May 10-11, 1991.

Hernandez-Reyes previously had filed suit against the city in U.S. District Court in Amarillo concerning the raid. In that court case, which ended on Jan. 21, a federal jury absolved the city of liability for a strip search and body-cavity search that Hernandez-Reyes and four other women were subjected to during the raid.

The federal jury found that Hernandez-Reyes' constitutional right to be free of unreasonable searches was violated by the strip search and cavity search. But they did not find that a policy of the city of Pampa had caused the searches.

In the federal court case, the city of Pampa maintained that the strip and body cavity searches resulted from "miscommunication." The city also maintained that city policy had been violated during the raid and that it properly disciplined those involved in the raid.

Resident fumes as lobby effort goes up in smoke

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

The first obstacle to stronger smoking regulations came Tuesday as Pampa's City Commission refused to consider a proposed ordinance prohibiting smoking in many area businesses.

"The city commission is out-of-touch with the feeling of the citizens in Pampa concerning smoking and designated smoking areas," said Richard Gattis. "I was surprised, I was shocked at their attitude (considering) all of the information that we've given them and all the information that they have on their own, that they chose to take that route."

While commissioners and the mayor said they do not support smoking, they also said they do not like the idea of more government regulations placed on businesses.

"I don't want to tell a business what to do," said Mayor Richard Peet. "I have a real problem with that. We cannot solve all the health ills, or all the evils or all the problems, I don't know if that is the role of government."

Comments from other commissioners seemed to echo Peet's remarks.

"Being a nonsmoker, it galls me to think that in this country we have a drug that causes cancer and yet we subsidize the industry," said Commissioner Gary Sutherland. "It's asinine, totally asinine. But if anyone has ever complained about government regulation, it's me."

Commissioner Jerry Wilson, and the rest of the city commission, said that they believe any regulation against smoking should be initiated and implemented by the business.

"I think that the market place should govern," he said. "If people are offended by smoke, and they go into an establishment where smoking is allowed and they are offended, they should go elsewhere."

Gattis, however, said that smoking regulations are really a matter of public health. Therefore, he said, since the city requires business, such as restaurants, to meet certain health requirements, the city should also crack down on smoking.

"We are talking about public health," Gattis said. "You're already heavily involved in public health. Public health is something that is not determined by a democratic process. Public health is based on known fact and known guidelines that are issued to protect the general public."

Gattis then warned that if the city commission would not increase regulations on smokers, the federal government would.

"I can tell you for a certainty that there will be no discussion around this table when those guidelines come in," he said.

The next step open for the proposed ordinance is a city-wide initiative and then a referendum, according to Gattis.

In order to get a referendum, signatures from 25 percent of the qualified voters from the May 1 election will have to be collected. Twenty-five percent of the 2139 people who voted in the May election is a total 535 people.

Gattis went on to say that the next ordinance brought to referendum would be tougher on smokers in order to meet Federal Drug Administration guidelines.

"If we are going to have to go through the trouble of going through the petition process and the referendum process, we want something that's appropriate," Gattis said.

Clinton may deploy troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton said today the United States cannot turn its back on the bloody Balkan civil war for fear of getting into another Vietnam and predicted new allied steps in the coming days will "make peace more likely."

Although Clinton said no final decision has been made, it appears increasingly likely the steps will include sending a small contingent of American troops to join United Nations forces in the former Yugoslav republic of Macedonia, a symbolic deployment designed to stop the fighting from spreading.

"It is in the United States' national interest to keep this conflict from spilling over into a lot of other countries, which could drag the United States into something with NATO that we don't want," Clinton said in a morning radio interview.

Clinton has been frustrated by the refusal of European allies to endorse his calls for lifting the arms embargo against Bosnian Muslims and possible air strikes against Bosnian Serb targets. But today, after pointedly calling the crisis a "European issue" and repeating his insistence that the United States cannot act alone, Clinton sounded somewhat hopeful that a consensus was taking shape.

"I think you'll see over the next few days that we'll be able to take some more steps that will make peace more likely and will make the confining of the conflict more likely," he told NBC.

But White House Press Secretary Dee-Dee Myers said his comment did not mean a decision on sending troops to Macedonia was imminent.

"I wouldn't look for a particular timetable to send troops to Macedonia," Myers said this morning.

In the interview with New York's WFAN in advance of a visit to the city today, Clinton said "the United States, unlike (in) Vietnam, is not about to act alone and should not act alone" or take sides in the Balkan civil war.

"I'm trying to proceed in a very deliberate way to make sure that there is no Vietnam," Clinton said. But he added, "I don't think we can just turn away from this. Just because we don't want to make the same mistakes we made in Vietnam doesn't mean we shouldn't be doing anything."

Clinton's approach appeared to have bipartisan backing in Congress.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said the war in Bosnia was "perhaps the toughest foreign policy issue that's faced any president of the United States in this century. ... It's easy to get in but it's tough to get out."

In backing the president, members of Congress used pointed rhetoric in prodding Europe.

"The international community has committed moral rape" by refusing to come to the aid of the Muslims who are being slaughtered by Bosnian Serbs, said Delaware Democratic Sen. Joseph Biden. "I cannot begin to express my anger about the European policies."

Clinton said no final decision had been made on adding U.S. troops to the U.N. forces in Macedonia, the southernmost former Yugoslav republic. But he explained what the goal of such a deployment would be.

"We want to try to confine that conflict so it doesn't spread into other countries like Albania, Greece and Turkey," Clinton said Tuesday.

The president also is interested in a proposal to put U.N. monitors on the Serbian-Bosnian border to see if the Belgrade government carries out its promised cutoff of supplies to Bosnia's Serbs. Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said Clinton would pursue the idea with the Europeans.

The European opposition to Clinton's strategy has forced the president to pull back and await the outcome of the Bosnian Serb weekend referendum on whether to accept a U.N.-backed peace agreement. The United States views the vote as a sham but reluctantly agreed to calls from Russia and European allies to wait.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher was heading to New York today to discuss Bosnia and other trouble spots with U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and other officials. Clinton also was to be in New York for a speech on the economy and an evening reception.

Returning from the Midwest visit, Clinton sounded frustrated at the indecisiveness of the Europeans.

"The question is the United States never pretended it could or should act alone," Clinton said. "We can't do it legally and we shouldn't do it as a matter of policy. This is a problem that, after all, is in Europe's backyard."

(H)air can be a pain

By JOHN McMILLAN

Blow-drying indoors may lend serenity to your hairstyle, but when nature does the blowing — especially during springtime, the windiest season of the year in Pampa — the results can be stormy.

Far from being fashionable, the wind-swept look can appear unkempt and unattractive. Wind can also can dry out hair and split the ends of hair follicles, said Betty Rose, a local hair stylist.

"The wind will get your hair styled," Rose said with a laugh. "It'll tear it up."

Hair stylist Myrtle Carey recalled seeing wind-swept hair about five years ago that "looked like a horse's tail." The customer "asked if there was anything I could do to get her presentable because she only had a few minutes until she had to be somewhere for an appointment."

The average range of springtime wind velocity in Pampa is from 15 to 25 mph, said official Pampa weather observer Darrell Seahorn. He added that he has observed wind velocity of 70 mph in a thunderstorm on several occasions during the springtime in Pampa.

To protect hair from the wind, Rose recommended that people use hairspray.

Carey also suggested that hair be cut with a length of 2 1/2 to 3 inches throughout. "Something short and casual-looking that you can run a brush through," she said.

Cutting hair short because of windy conditions is not for everyone, however, said Kim Steffey, also a hair stylist. "... It wouldn't fit everyone's personality."

"Women that want a short hair style are usually ones that are very busy and don't have time to go spend a lot of time on their hair," Steffey noted. "... They want something that is easy to fix and easy to refix."

Rose advised that women wanting to protect their hair from the wind should wear a scarf if they expect to be outdoors for at least an hour.

As for wearing bonnets to protect hair from the wind, Carey noted that "I do not like (them) because that mashes your hair. It destroys your hairstyle."

Lack of tax money causes burden

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK

For the second consecutive year, the city of Pampa has had to go into the annual budget and make mid-year reductions.

The lack of money the city is running into is due, in large part, to the reduced tax money Pampa is getting, according to Glen Hackler, city manager.

Last year, the city's tax base was shifted. The emphasis was placed on the city sales tax, which was doubled, and taken away from property tax, which was cut in half.

"People are looking for the bargain and they are going to Amarillo and Lubbock," said Hackler in the city commission's work session Tuesday.

For the last month alone, the amount of money the city gets from sales taxes was down more than 25 percent.

Last year, Hackler said his staff and the city department head were able to cut the budget by taking 3 percent from each department, except personnel. In all, savings totaled nearly 15 percent of the operating budget, according to Hackler.

This year, the city is cutting back on non-essential, "big-ticket" items in hopes of meeting the budget.

"This year we've tried to make it more painless so we just targeted big-ticket items," Hackler said. "They were not critical need and (we) just postponed them or tried to develop a different way of doing them."

Some ways the city reduced the budget included:

- The reduction of tax service expense for $10,000.
- Delaying capital projects like weed spraying and purchasing storm windows for City Hall at a savings of $26,000.
- Re-scheduling vehicle replacement for a total of $66,000.
- Savings in the Internal Service Fund for $25,000.

• Freezing four vacant positions for a savings of $50,000.

The Internal Service Fund is a fund all city departments pay into and then purchase equipment from.

Other areas in which the city lost money included damage done to city streets because of winter, higher than expected gas and electricity costs at the M.K. Brown Auditorium and engineering costs associated with the closing of one landfill and opening of another one.

The one "bright note" in the report was the cooperation between all of the departments "to hold the line on expenditures and participate in cost-reduction measures," according to Hackler.

While the city is not required to operate in the black, Hackler said it nevertheless was the policy of the city to do so.

"There's not a charter requirement or there's not a legal requirement that we have a balanced budget," he said. "But it sure is a philosophical mind-set."

Wheels spin over 'motor-voter' bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The voter registration bill on its way to President Clinton shows how the Senate and its quirky rules can turn a minor change in the law into a major headache.

It took months of partisan bickering and weeks of debate to pass the so-called motor-voter bill, and not because it didn't have a strong majority of support.

It took that long because, in the Senate, majority rule is an illusion.

"The Senate cannot continue to function in a manner in which it has so far," Majority Leader George Mitchell lamented late one night last week. "We have to do better."

Mitchell, D-Maine, and the Democrats have been frustrated repeatedly by the Republican minority, which is using the Senate's filibuster rule to block President Clinton's agenda. The rule says that as long as 41 senators say no — and there are 43 Republicans — almost nothing moves.

As Mitchell concedes, there's little chance of major changes in that situation.

Filibusters have become "almost a weekly event in the Senate," he said Tuesday. "We have a threatened filibuster next week, and probably the week after that and the week after that."

"We were told the president's not a king, and we agree with that," Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Tuesday, reminding Democrats of how they often blocked initiatives of the Reagan and Bush administrations.

On the voter registration bill, the Senate first spent three days in early March debating whether the bill should be debated. After a weekend of rumination, it finally was allowed.

Then another five days was needed before a compromise was reached to clear the procedural roadblocks, and the bill went into negotiations with the House, which had passed its own version.

Finally on Tuesday, after another three-day blockade, the Senate gave the final version a 62-36 send-off to the White House.

The Senate spent more time on this bill, to make states use their motor vehicle offices to register people to vote, than it did on President Clinton's budget. And, in the middle of it all, a filibuster killed Clinton's $16 billion jobs bill.

Lawmakers consider school plans

AUSTIN (AP) — Almost all of Texas' public school students would be in an equitably funded system under a plan to shift taxable value of $40 billion in business property among districts and avoid consolidation, its sponsor says.

"If 99.6 percent is not substantial, I don't know what is," said Senate Education Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

He said that percentage of the state's 3.4 million students would be in an equalized school finance system. The full Senate planned to take up his measure today, after it was passed 9-2 Tuesday by the Education Committee.

Legislators must pass a plan to even out school districts' access to funding by a June 1 court deadline or face a court-ordered cutoff of state education aid.

School districts rely on state aid and local property taxes, and differences in property wealth historically have caused large funding disparities.

"I believe this plan will solve our school funding crisis and get us out of the courts while, at the same time, avoiding any massive new statewide tax or diminishing the quality of education in any school," said Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock of Ratliff's proposal.

Ratliff has said his plan to redistribute a portion of the total $600 billion in property wealth would be more acceptable to the Senate than school consolidation, an idea being worked on the House.

The Senate action prompted a delay in House consideration of a school consolidation proposal, which had been planned for today. Rep. Libby Lineberger, head of the House Public Education Committee, said the postponement would give House lawmakers more time to consider the proposals.

"The problem we have is that there are no good options for solving the problem," Ms. Lineberger, D-Manchaca, said. "Everybody wants a Cadillac, but we've got a couple of broken-down Chevys to work with."

She has contended that her consolidation proposal would allow school districts to keep their local identities, including maintaining their football teams and retaining the power to hire and fire teachers.

Mrs. Lineberger's committee released a list of 281 districts that likely would be consolidated under the proposal, matching property-rich school districts and their less wealthy neighbors. That's out of 1,048 total school districts.

One wealthy district, Tuloso-Midway in Corpus Christi, mounted an anti-consolidation rally outside the Capitol Tuesday.

Carson County to reap performance reward

Carson County will receive more than $55,000 in funds from the Department of Criminal Justice as part of the county's Performance Reward Program.

The announcement of the grant was made Monday during the Carson County Commissioners Court meeting.

The funds will be allocated to three areas: transportation, which will receive $28,000, contract services for offenders, which will receive $15,000, and facilities, utilities and equipment, which will receive $12,794.

In other fiscal matters, the county will give $5,000 to each school district in the county to fund drug abuse programs.

The school districts include Groom, White Deer and Panhandle.

In other business, commissioners reviewed a pretrial order involving Orange County and the National Gypsum Company.

Orange County, located near Beaumont, is suing National Gypsum for damages allegedly caused by asbestos in public buildings and wanted to know if Carson County wanted to join the lawsuit, according to Judge Jay Roselius.

Commissioners voted to not include Carson County in the lawsuit.

Access by the handicapped to the War Memorial Building was also discussed and suggestions from the Health Department were heard by commissioners. Possible changes will be considered at a future meeting.

Commissioners also met after a noon recess to discuss the burn pit in the northwest section of the county and its clean-up.

The pit was created for debris from last year's tornadoes.

Because of state and federal regulations, Dwight Brandt, an engineer, was hired to come up with a plan to clean the area and prepare bids.

The next regular meeting of the Carson County Commissioner Court will be May 24.

Police report aggravated sexual assault

An unidentified 17-year-old Pampa woman reported to police an aggravated sexual assault early Tuesday morning.

The woman was transported to Coronado Hospital where she was treated for minor abrasions, examined by a sexual assault nurse and then released, according to a Pampa Police press release.

She had bruises on her arms, back and legs, according to the incident report. Also, a handgun was involved in the alleged attack.

Currently an investigation of the incidents is being conducted by the Criminal Investigation Division of the Pampa Police Department.

Police discovered the woman after they responded to a disturbance at the residence.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, left, talks to Marine Col. Fred Peck Tuesday on Capitol Hill.

Marine colonel proud of gay son but doesn't want him to serve

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Marine Corps colonel and his gay son spoke proudly of one another on nationwide television today but disagreed on whether homosexuals ought to serve openly in the military. Col. Fred Peck said he was fearful his son could be "killed or injured by his own men."

But Scott Peck, a 24-year-old college student, said, "I think I have a little more faith in members of the military ... they can be counted on to act honorably."

Father and son made the rounds of local and network television news shows after Col. Peck told the Senate Armed Services Committee on Tuesday that he strongly opposed President Clinton's plan to let homosexuals serve openly in the military. Peck then told the committee:

"My son is a homosexual and I don't think there's any place for him in the military."

The testimony from Col. Peck, a familiar face to Americans as spokesman for the U.S. military mission in Somalia, and retired Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, who led the allies against Iraq in the Persian Gulf War, strongly opposed President Clinton's efforts to formally end the ban.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said he believed "the testimony today nailed the final strokes in the coffin on this controversial issue."

Warner predicted that Congress would accept the interim policy of not asking recruits about their sexual preference — meaning homosexuals could serve as long as they don't overtly reveal their orientation.

The chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., also have spoken of a possible compromise: not questioning recruits about sexual orientation, imposing a strict code of conduct and not ferreting out homosexuals. However, personnel who declared themselves gay would not be allowed to serve.

"I can live with that," Col. Peck said today of the policy of not asking recruits about their sexuality.

But he said he was still concerned about violence.

"I would be concerned about homosexual out in front of his troops being killed or injured by his own men," Col. Peck said. "I would be fearful of Scott's welfare."

Peck said he was proud of his son, a college senior who weathered the divorce of his parents, then the death of his mother to become a military recruiter's dream.

But on the issue of his son following in his footsteps, Col. Peck said: "We don't agree on the subject. But you'd really have big news if a father and son agreed on everything."

"I very much appreciate what he had to say and I respect his professional opinion and I respect him as I always have, but I do disagree," Scott said. "I was extremely proud that he claimed me as his son on nationwide TV."

Schwarzkopf said ending the ban would significantly damage morale and the ability of the military to fight.

If Clinton goes ahead with ending the ban, Schwarzkopf said the military will follow, but unenthusiastically.

"To me, they will be just like many of the Iraqi troops who sat in the deserts of Kuwait, forced to execute orders they didn't believe in," he said.

Peck said he opposed homosexuals serving in the military, under any circumstances. He also expressed fears that if his son was in the military, his life would be in danger.

"I spent 27 years of my life in the military, and I know what it would be like for him if he went in. And it would be hell, and if we went into combat ... he'd be at grave risk," Peck testified.

"Fratricide is something that exists out there, and there are people who would put my son's life at risk in our own armed forces," the colonel said.

Scott Peck, 24, said in an interview with WJZ-TV in Baltimore that he told his father only Sunday that he was gay.

"Once soldiers and Marines find out that the men and women that they have been serving with and have been entrusting their lives to all these years have been gay or lesbian all along they will be able to have a working relationship," he said.

The younger Peck said he was prepared for "a heated discussion" when he told his father he was gay. "Instead I was amazed to find that he had no moral or religious problems with homosexuality; he was simply opposed to lifting the ban."

Schwarzkopf said he would be willing to accept the current policy of not asking recruits about their sexual orientation. But the president also directed Defense Secretary Les Aspin to draft an executive order on ending the ban by July 15.

Three military people forced out because of their homosexuality testified in favor of lifting the prohibition, offering as evidence their stellar military careers cut short simply because of their sexual preference.

Margarethe Cammermeyer, a former colonel in the Army Nurse Corps and former chief nurse of the Washington state Army National Guard, served for 27 years before she was separated from the service on June 11, 1992 for being a lesbian.

"There is no rational basis for the regulation barring homosexuals from serving in the military. Gays and lesbians have been serving since the beginning of time without disrupting good order and discipline," she said.

Hundreds rally for right to carry guns

AUSTIN (AP) — It's been called the issue that won't die.

And supporters of a proposal to allow Texans to carry concealed handguns are vowing to do anything and everything possible to keep the measure alive with just more than two weeks left in the legislative session.

"If it moves, we tack it on," Rep. Ron Wilson, a sponsor of the proposal, said of the legislation.

Hundreds of Texans seeking the right to carry rallied outside the Capitol Tuesday to urge Gov. Ann Richards to break her promise to veto the measure. The rally was the latest move in the ongoing gun battle.

"This is a litmus test. We want this bill done or we're not voting for you next time," said Wilson, D-Houston.

Suzanna Gratia, a survivor of the Luby's Cafeteria massacre in Killeen, challenged Richards to "stand by the women of Texas" by renouncing her veto threat.

"Richards can have armed security people ... and I'm not allowed to protect myself and my family," said Ms. Gratia, whose parents were killed in the Luby's incident. "This issue is not even up for debate in my mind."

The House last month passed a bill that would allow voters to decide whether Texans 21 and over should be allowed to carry concealed guns. But the Senate refused to consider the measure after Richards promised to veto it.

Last week, the proposal was tacked onto a bill to restructure the state penal code. In that form, the Texas Department of Public Safety would be authorized to issue licenses for carrying handguns.

The penal code bill is headed to a House-Senate conference committee, where several senators have said they will fight to remove the gun proposal.

Richards says she's confident the proposal will be removed in the joint committee.

But Wilson, D-Houston, and Rep. Bill Carter, cosponsor of the gun bill, promised to continue pushing the issue until it gets through the Legislature.

"The protection of good folks in the state of Texas is the most important issue in this legislative session," Wilson said. "We're going to get that bill out of here, and we're going to put it on the governor's desk."

One final possibility for passing the gun measure could come in the form of a proposed constitutional amendment, which would put the question before voters next year.

Help for elderly seen in Clinton health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is seeking to build support for its still unfinished health reform plan with promises to help the elderly pay for drugs and make it easier for the disabled to live at home.

President Clinton will also try to liberalize the rules on when people can get Medicaid to pay nursing home bills, senior White House adviser Ira Magaziner told consumer and health groups Tuesday.

Clinton is still making the final decisions on the cost and scope of the health overhaul he plans to send to Congress next month.

But Magaziner, in a nearly two-hour briefing intended to drum up support for the Clinton package, outlined key features and selling points of the package.

"The intention is to give a drug benefit to Medicare people which they do not now have," he said.

The elderly will be able to stay with Medicare as it exists now but eventually will get the option to join the revamped health system Clinton envisions, he said.

The long-term care benefits will emphasize home and community-based care and be available for anyone who needs them, not just the elderly, said Magaziner, Clinton's senior adviser for policy development.

Magaziner said the long-term care benefits will be separate from the basic benefit package that Clinton hopes to guarantee for all Americans.

"If you were to build a whole series of long-term care benefits into the basic benefit package itself, actuarially you'd get killed on your cost," Magaziner said.

Clinton will make "a serious start" on long-term care, he promised.

Magaziner said Clinton's plan also would "make it so that people don't have to spend themselves down to poverty the way they do now for access to nursing home care."

A confidential working paper from the White House Task Force on Health Reform indicates its long-term care work group laid out four options that would boost federal costs by $5 billion to $15 billion in fiscal 1994 alone.

The $15 billion option would provide social insurance for home care for people at any age without regard to income. It would require the elderly to pay an extra $20-a-month Medicare premium.

Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA, a seniors' advocacy group that organized the briefing, applauded Magaziner's message and said long-term care benefits are going to be "an important element of getting support for this plan."

Tricia Smith, health lobbyist for the American Association for Retired Persons, said the home and community-based care benefits sounded "very modest." The states would share with Washington the costs of any liberalization of Medicaid rules on paying for nursing home care, she noted.

Nineteen states now bar people from "spending down" their income to become eligible.

Clinton intends to steer most individuals and businesses into new, non-profit insurance purchasing cooperatives or alliances set up in every state to bargain with doctors and hospitals.

Magaziner said the health alliances' premiums will be risk-adjusted, with plans getting four to five times as much for enrolling chronically ill patients.

Individuals will pay the same for health insurance "regardless of whether they have AIDS or they're healthy," but the health plans will get higher payments to encourage them to sign up sick people.

Medicaid will be folded in to the new system and the poor will no longer have a "big 'M' stamped all over" them, said Magaziner, speaking figuratively.

"The goal here is to have a one-tiered, not a two-tiered health system," he said.

The benefit package will cover mammograms and five dozen other preventive health services that people now often have to pay for out of their own pockets, he said.

Students required to sign graduation contracts

VICTORIA (AP) — To prevent the kind of shenanigans that marred last year's graduation, students and their parents are being required to sign good-behavior contracts to participate in this year's ceremony.

"This is not a punishment. It's a chance to communicate the expectations we have for the ceremony," said Kathy Allen, assistant principal at Victoria High School in this south Texas community.

"It's not that we don't want them to have fun. This is a time for seriousness and dignity."

During last year's ceremony, Silly String spewed from aerosol cans, beach balls bounced from graduate to graduate and doves were released while the guest speaker talked, Allen said.

The contract prohibits loud or continuous talking, use of noisemakers, abusive language and the display of vulgar, obscene or suggestive language or symbols on graduation attire during the May 28 ceremony.

Violators will be removed from their seats and will have to wait until later to get their diplomas.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Economy already on the downside

Nothing rises in price faster than the cost of a government program — even one that hasn't yet been enacted. The health-care "reform" being worked on by Hillary Rodham Clinton first was advertised with a price tag of from $30 billion to $90 billion. The latest estimate: $100 billion to $150 billion.

Rodham Clinton and the 511 secretive government functionaries working on the "reform" seem to have no idea what a shock this would be for the economy. The $150 billion number would amount to $588 per person per year, or $2,352 for a family of four.

The Clintonians assure us that lower medical costs will offset higher taxes. But their mechanisms for cost reduction include price controls and "managed competition." Remember when oil costs were "controlled" in the 1970s? Prices quadrupled. Only when President Reagan removed price controls in 1981 did prices drop.

Rodham Clinton recently floated a new trial balloon to pay for her program: yet another payroll tax. On top of the current upper-income tax rate of 33 percent (which would rise to 40 percent under other Clinton plans), the 15.3 percent Social Security tax, and assorted state taxes, Rodham Clinton would pile on another 2 percent tax.

And that's for starters. Given the history of government programs, which has a tendency to grow far beyond even their critics' estimate, the current high-end estimate of $150 billion might well look like small change several years down the road.

Of course, Rodham Clinton refers to the proposed payroll tax as a "premium," just as the president refers to his tax increases as new "contributions." It's no wonder that George Orwell's 1984 is reported to be one of Rodham Clinton's favorite books; she certainly is applying Big Brother's "Principles of Newspeak." But even if the payroll tax were at first earmarked directly for the national health-care program (and thus resembled an insurance premium), we might better remember the example of Social Security, which started out as something like an insurance program with its own trust fund but has long since become a simple government entitlement program draining general revenues.

There are signs that the Clintons' tax increases might not get very far. Already, the economy seems to be recoiling from Clintonism. This week the government reported that the Index of Leading Indicators dropped 1 percent in March, the worst performance since November 1990, during the middle of the last recession.

President Clinton, no doubt, again will blame his problems on "the past 12 years of trickle-down economics." But that's more Newspeak. In fact, the president inherited a robust economy growing at a 4 percent annual clip.

What's happening, it seems, is that businesses and consumers are taking precautionary measures against the proposed new taxes. If one's family stands to be hit with more than $2,000 a year in new taxes, what else can one do but postpone purchases? Such dislocations cause recessions.

And if a new recession strikes, the federal budget deficit will soar even higher, leaving no money for a national health plan or much of anything else.

HERE'S THE PITCH

Is Markus Wolf guilty?

The trial of Markus Wolf in Dusseldorf is philosophically the most dramatic show in town. It poses the routine questions about the ethics of espionage, but poses also the metaphysical question that reaches beyond the Nuremberg decision (you can't legally execute an order that is manifestly a war crime) to the most basic question of all: Can you legally do work for an unjust society?

Markus Wolf was perhaps the single most successful spy of the Cold War. He succeeded, no less, in planting an agent in the inner, inner office of the chancellor of West Germany, Willy Brandt. Gunter Guillaume was Wolf's crowning achievement, but by no means exhausted his accomplishments. He had more than 500 agents working for him in various positions in West Germany.

The history of Wolf's spy network is not complete, but it is entirely conceivable that virtually nothing that went on in West Germany of concern to the Kremlin was unknown to East Germany — and, therefore, to Moscow.

The judicial narrative took an unanticipated turn as follows. In 1986, Markus Wolf retired. When few years later he saw that Germany was about to be unified, he buzzed off to refuge in the Soviet Union. But a few months ago he tired of his self-exile and decided that he wanted to spend his final years (he is 70) in his native country, so he went back to Berlin and was quickly arraigned.

What has upset proceedings is that in the interval, Wolf's successor as chief of intelligence was indicted, but his lawyers persuaded a lower court to quash prosecuted ex post facto — i.e., that the laws he broke were not laws by which he was governed when he broke them, because he was not a citizen of West Germany, but of East Germany, a different state. It is anticipated that the higher court will reverse the ruling of the lower court, and it is on that assumption that the trial of Markus Wolf proceeds.

But he is pleading exactly the same thing. "What country am I supposed to have betrayed?" he asked the court on Tuesday. "The intelligence services of both sides stood opposite each other during the Cold War. Whether their methods were essentially different is something that has to be extensively examined that thoroughly explored in the course of my defense. I have nothing to fear from the comparison. The methods of intelligence services do not fit the moral standards of polite society anywhere in the world, and certainly not in the confrontation of the Cold War."

That is an exaggeration (we didn't engage in wholesale torture and executions), but it is a sobering point. For instance, Markus Wolf is being charged with bribing West German officials, and bribery is against the law. Yes, but it is against a law that, says Wolf, had no jurisdiction over him. The Nuremberg precedent speaks in much grander terms than routine espionage and intelligence, invoking as it does such mandates as crimes against humanity, and waging aggressive war. What Wolf is saying is that intelligence work routinely requires ignoring such laws as that you are not permitted to bribe a public official. To do that, in the catechism of the spy world, is on the order of giving a hoffoot, and you don't get sent to prison for that.

But there is a graver philosophical question here to consider. Some years ago I wrote that if the British had prevailed over George Washington, they'd have been perfectly justified to try him as a traitor and hang him. Professor Harry Jaffa, the formidable constitutional-ethical scholar, reproached me most severely, on the grounds that a society that engages in manifestly unjust practices is not a society against which rebellion is illicit. King George and his emissaries were guilty of offenses eloquently enumerated in the Declaration of Independence. And whereas King George might have proceeded against George Washington by the simple act of declaring him to be a traitor, to have justified his doing so would be to violate canons of a superior law; a defensible and indefensible societies.

East Germany is guilty of every sin Adolf Hitler committed with the exception of organized genocide. You think of it, Markus Wolf and his agents did it. And we don't mean just bribery, but all the other stuff, from Gulag on down.

But there is this problem, namely that although much of their work was innocuous by its nature, there are several million people alive who worked for the communist government of East Germany, and if we start the equivalent of denazification over there, we are going to make great strides in solving the population problem in that part of the world.

Markus Wolf has entered an ingenious defense, and the resources of the best minds of the profoundest ethicists will need to be summoned to handle his arguments.

Today in history

Today is Wednesday, May 12, the 132nd day of 1993. There are 233 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 12, 1943, Axis forces in North Africa surrendered during World War II.

On this date:

In 1820, the founder of modern nursing, Florence Nightingale, was born in Florence, Italy.

In 1845, composer Gabriel Urbain Faure was born in Pamiers, France.

In 1870, Manitoba became a Canadian province.

In 1932, the body of the kidnapped son of Charles and Anne Lindbergh was found in a wooded area of Hopewell, N.J.

In 1965, West Germany and Israel exchanged letters establishing diplomatic relations.

In 1970, the U-S Senate voted unanimously to confirm Harry A. Blackmun as a Supreme Court justice.

Misplaced pride

We have secretary of State more determined than George Bush ever was to "throw our weight around." Secretary Warren Christopher — if all alone — is committed to gunboat diplomacy.

Is he a loose cannon, chasing around the world trying to persuade Britain and France to join us in another military adventure in Bosnia?

Or is he, in fact, an appropriate representative of White House policy?

Sounding ever more belligerent, Secretary Christopher is saying, "I am very determined to turn back this aggression!"

Ray Coffey of Chicago's Sun-Times says, "For all the moral outrage we might feel about what's transpiring among the Serbs, Croats and Muslims in Bosnia, there is not a lot to be said for getting into another war which we can't or won't win."

War is a pyrotechnic demonstration of civilization in reverse.

An enlightened world should have wearied by now of old men waning virility sending young men off to pay with their arms and legs and eyes and lives for old men's misplaced pride.

It is not our nation's military leaders who are all gung-ho about a Vietnam rerun in Bosnia.

Paul Harvey

The other day, while President Clinton in Washington was assuring the media that he would make no decision on the use of American forces before he had consulted with "us," his Secretary of State in London was vowing to "keep making preparations for military strikes."

Shuttling around Europe, Christopher seems determined to force a military confrontation.

Now that world war no longer threatens us, a Secretary of State may feel himself to be unimportant and under-employed unless he can create crises.

There is no end of those.

If Secretary Christopher wants to flit around the world like a barefoot boy stomping ants, there are problems aplenty in our own home hemisphere.

In Guatemala, outlaw militiamen pillage mountain villages, raping, killing, robbing.

Haiti is at the mercy of a merciless military government; there are uprisings in Venezuela, authoritarianism in Peru.

But it has never been as much "fun" for our diplomats to concern themselves with bush-league skirmishes when they can hopscotch movers and shakers of "world" affairs.

While Secretary Christopher will defend his saber-rattling as the best chance for restoring peace, what he is doing is playing Russian roulette with American lives.

And on missions that have no lasting prospect of resolving anything!

When an outsider injects himself into anybody's tribal strife, he is likely to worsen rather than improve the situation.

And he might, as in Vietnam, get his own nose bloodied.

Americans in Bosnia are offside. Everybody in the world recognizes that except the party of the first part.

While military posturing might be considered politically appropriate for this President, his greater opportunity for achieving lasting world esteem is to make our own nation strong, solvent and respected again.

100 days vs. 43 gridlock gremlins

The poetic parallel was too good to resist — a comparison of Clinton's first 100 days, battling Senate Republicans from without and Leon Panetta from within to "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

"Into the Jaws of filibuster
Into the mouth of defeat
Rode the president...
GOP to the right of him
Panetta to the left of him
The media in front of him
Volley'd and thundered.
Stubbornly defending a minor bill
Fighting as if 'twas Bunker Hill
Clinton had blundered."

Franklin D. Roosevelt was just as stubborn. But his "first 100 days" succeeded in establishing a legislative benchmark by which all future presidencies — Democratic and Republican — would be measured.

The parallels between the presidencies of Roosevelt and Clinton are many.

Like Roosevelt, Clinton was swept into office with a powerful mandate — a Democratic president with a Democratic House and a Democratic Senate.

Like Roosevelt, Clinton faced a Republican-caused economic crisis.

But unlike Clinton, Roosevelt did not have to ride into the valley of legislative defeat, hogtied on one side by a group of GOP gridlock gremlins and sandbagged on the other side by a high-level agency head.

If Clinton's grin-in-your-face-but-stab-you-in-your-back budget director, Leon Panetta, is a loyal member of the team, then Bob Dole should be invited to deliver the keynote address at the 1996 Democratic National Convention.

Panetta unapologetically sabotages the president's agenda, and it's "candor." Attorney General Janet Reno stands courageously against a murderous religious fanatic in an attempt to resolve a crisis not of her making, and critics begin muttering sotto voce about her "resignation."

But that's only a small part of the cruel paradox of Bill Clinton's first 100 days. First of all, this youthful, idealistic president did raise democracy to a new representative high by appointing the most interracial, and mixed-gender Cabinet in American history.

The 13th Democratic president did keep faith with his political heritage by getting the Family Leave Act passed and lifting the restriction against any federally funded clinic mentioning abortion.

The youthful Rhodes scholar did stamp his economic imprimatur on his swiftly passed budget and his $500 billion deficit-reduction program.

Clinton did attempt to establish a new national morality of compassion by pushing the military off lift its ban on gays.

Clinton did negotiate the beginning of a new foreign policy with his support of Boris Yeltsin and offer of $1.6 billion in aid.

And he did dare to propose for the first time in presidential history that a comprehensive national health-care plan be enacted.

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., has enthusiastically hailed this "new political direction for America." For the first time in 12 years, this new direction welcomes women, blacks, Hispanics and ordinary middle-class families, who lost ground under Reagan and Bush.

But the cruel paradox is defined by what Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell called the "spectacular irony" of the 43 GOP gridlock gremlins voting against Clinton's $19 billion economic stimulus legislation, but 10 years ago, voting for a similar package introduced by Ronald Reagan. Those are spectacular phonies.

Bob Dole's partisan rhetoric may contain a smidgen of truth: The American people didn't vote for tax increases. But neither did they vote for a Republican-led House of Representatives, a Republican-led Senate nor a Republican-led aborting of the people's will — masquerading under that legislative hoax called a filibuster.

Decades from now, history will be far more kind to Bill Clinton's creative first 100 days than it will be to the obscenely obstructionist tactics of the 43 GOP gridlock gremlins.

Leaders identified from Davidian compound fire

WACO (AP) — The top three leaders of the Branch Davidian cult have been identified. The lingering question now is how many followers died with them.

Investigators thought they had recovered 72 bodies from the fire-ravaged ruins of the group's compound, but now they say that cult leader David Koresh may have been telling the truth about the number of followers inside.

"We're very much unsure of the totals at this point," McLennan County Peace Justice David Pareya said Tuesday. "We're in the very tedious process of trying to separate the bodies that were meshed together in the bunker-area."

"It very well could hit the total Koresh said were in the compound." Using the numbers Koresh gave authorities during a 51-day stalemate, there would have been 86 Davidians in the ruins. Officials called Koresh a liar when they found only 72 corpses.

Koresh also said five bodies were in an underground tunnel. All five — each victims of the Feb. 28 gunbattle with federal authorities that triggered the standoff — have been recovered. Pathologists' figures began changing when they determined what they thought were three bodies actually were parts of other corpses or debris, lowering their number to 69.

That figure, however, is expected to jump because medical examiners have discovered as many as 24 bodies could be in bags thought to have had only four corpses, Pareya said. He said the mistake was made because of the condition of the bodies.

From the autopsies they've finished, medical examiners have identified 32 victims. Only 18 names have been announced because relatives of the other victims have not been notified.

Twelve names were announced Tuesday, including Steve Schneider and Wayne Martin, both of whom advised Koresh during a 51-day standoff with authorities.

Schneider, 48, and Martin, 42, were located just feet from Koresh, who was identified May 2 as having been killed by a bullet to his forehead. Schneider also may have been shot.

The findings released Tuesday also increased to at least eight, and possibly 11, the number of victims with gunshot wounds that have been publicly identified.

One of those was Schneider, who died of inhalation of smoke and carbon monoxide with a possible traumatic head injury caused either by a blast or gunshot wound, said Peace Justice John Cabaniss.

Koresh and Schneider, who handled much of the negotiations with federal authorities during the standoff that followed the shootout, both were found in the fortress' "communications room," also considered the kitchen serving area.

Martin, a Harvard-educated attorney who also played a key role in negotiations, was found in a room less than 20 feet away, said Peace Justice Cindy Evans. His cause of death was pending.

Schneider and Martin jumped to the forefront soon into the saga. Their most pivotal moment came March 15 when they met face-to-face with McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell and FBI lead negotiator Byron Sage.

Schneider also was the last cult member to speak with outsiders, hanging up on Sage the morning of the fire just before tanks began ramming the compound walls and injecting tear gas. Schneider hurled the telephone out the front of the building, cutting off direct contact with authorities.

About six hours later, the blaze began. An arson team has said the cult started the fire in at least two places; the cult says the tanks tipped over lanterns, igniting the blaze.

Other victims identified Tuesday included: Alrick George Bennett, 35, of Britain; Juliet Santoyo Martinez, 30; Floyd Leon Houtman, 61; Susan Marjorie Benta, 41, of Britain; Doris Adina Fagan, 60, of Britain; Katherine Andrade, 24; Rosemary Morrison, 29, of Britain; and Mary Jean E. Borst, 49.

Ms. Borst, found atop a fortified room used to store ammunition, died of a laceration to her heart and lung caused by gunshot to her torso with inhalation of smoke and carbon monoxide, and extensive charring, Pareya said.

Bennett, found atop the room, and Ms. Fagan, found in a hallway, died of inhalation of smoke and carbon monoxide with extensive charring, said Collier and Pareya.

Ms. Fagan also suffered a possible gunshot wound to the head, Collier said. Ms. Morrison died of smoke inhalation.

The causes of death were pending for Ms. Martinez, Houtman, Ms. Andrade and Ms. Benta, officials said.

Winston Blake, 28, of Britain; and Peter James Hipsman, 28, were identified as those believed to have died in the Feb. 28 gun battle.

Although about 17 children are believed to have perished in the fire, Pareya said they won't be identified for awhile.

"In discussions with the ME's office, I feel as though their intentions were to work on the adult males and females first and then leave the harder cases toward the end. Those are the children," Pareya said, adding that four females and two males under the age of 18 have been found.

Another problem with identifying the children is that many lacked birth certificates or dental records, he said, so pathologists have resorted to videotapes and still photographs in hopes of matching names with bodies.

Also on Tuesday, Ted Royster, special agent in charge of the Dallas office of Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said his agents met about an hour with Assistant Treasury Secretary Ronald Noble, The Dallas Morning News said in Wednesday edition's.

Royster said agents have been concerned that the Treasury Department has not visibly supported their agency since the raid, which left four ATF agents dead and 16 wounded.

Hard-working Brooks & Dunn scoot off with 3 music awards

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Garth Brooks won his third straight entertainer-of-the-year trophy at the Academy of Country Music Awards for what he confessed is "not rocket science — it's about raising hell and having fun."

The denim-and-rhinestone audience at the 28th annual ceremony gave him a standing ovation Tuesday night as he picked up the award.

The Southern duo Brooks & Dunn walked away with three awards — top vocal duet, best album for "Brand New Man" and single record for "Boot Scootin' Boogie," which led the Western line-dancing craze over the past year.

"We're having so much fun with this, we feel guilty coming up here," Ronnie Dunn said as his partner, Kix Brooks, held one of their trophies aloft.

Vince Gill was the only other multiple winner, taking the top male vocalist award and the best song trophy for "I Still Believe in You."

"Achy Breaky Heart" sensation Billy Ray Cyrus was shut out. He had been nominated in four categories.

Brooks, who took a break from touring last year to spend more time with his wife and daughter, said that he is rested now and that his latest honor was an appropriate lead-in to his return to the road on July 30.

During his three years of fame, he said, he's come to realize one thing about country music: "It's not rocket science — it's about raising hell and having fun."

Mary-Chapin Carpenter, led by the success of her ribald smash "I Feel Lucky," won the female vocalist trophy.

Tanya Tucker, who won best video honors for "Two Sparrows in a Hurricane," spoke about her hair-dresser-friend Michael Tovar, who is dying of AIDS.

"I don't think country music has gotten involved in AIDS projects and I think we need to step out," Miss Tucker said backstage.

The academy's Pioneer Award for unprecedented achievement went to George Jones, known for his songs of hard-drinking pain. Past winners include Hank Williams, Gene Autry, Roy Rogers, Kitty Wells, Johnny Cash and Willie Nelson.

Convicted cop killer put to death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A South Texas man known to authorities as an enforcer in the Rio Grande Valley illegal drug trade was executed early today for killing a police officer nearly 12 years ago.

Leonel Herrera, 45, of Edinburg, received lethal injection after Texas officials and courts rejected his claims that he was innocent of fatally shooting Enrique Carrisalez, a rookie Los Fresnos police officer who had pulled him over for speeding.

The execution took place after a more than four-hour delay as defense attorneys unsuccessfully waged an 11th-hour effort to spare Herrera.

The legal tussle was similar to one in February 1992 when attorneys argued through the night before a reprieve finally was granted just before the death warrant expired at dawn.

In a final statement, Herrera repeatedly proclaimed his innocence. "I am innocent, innocent, innocent," he said.

"And make no mistake about this. I owe society nothing. I would like to encourage all those who stood by me to continue the struggle for human rights and continue to help those who are innocent, especially Mr. Graham," he said, referring to a fellow death row inmate, Gary Graham, who is facing execution next month and is claiming innocence.

"I am an innocent man," Herrera continued. "And something very wrong is taking place tonight."

He was pronounced dead at 4:49 a.m., 10 minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing into his arms.

Prison officials had until sunrise, 6:31 a.m., to carry out the execution. The execution night delay was the longest ever in Texas before the punishment was carried out, exceeding the 3:44 a.m. time of death for Edward Ellis, who was executed March 3, 1992 for a Houston slaying in 1983.

Outside the prison today, about four dozen death penalty opponents chanted and held candles and signs protesting the execution. Their numbers dwindled to about 20 as the night wore on.

Demonstrators, however, for the first time brought in a huge searchlight that scanned the skies. One of them, Mike Heath, said the light was intended to "search for justice."

Carrisalez was one of two policemen slain moments apart Sept. 29, 1981 in South Texas' Cameron County. Herrera, convicted and condemned for the Carrisalez death, pleaded guilty and received a life sentence for shooting David Rucker, a Texas state trooper who prosecutors said also had pulled him over for speeding.

The execution, the second in two weeks and the fourth this year in Texas, came despite a campaign by Herrera's attorneys and supporters who insisted his brother, Raul, slain in 1984, was the person who killed both officers.

Gov. Ann Richards and the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles this week were given results of polygraph tests and videos of Herrera's relatives who insisted Raul Herrera was responsible for the slayings.

The claims of innocence were not new, surfacing last year when attorneys won Herrera his early morning reprieve. The polygraph material, obtained in recent weeks, was the focus of today's legal battle.

State attorneys said early today the polygraph tests, not allowed as evidence in state and federal courts, were flawed and that physical evidence to convict him was overwhelming.

Early this year, the high court upheld Herrera's conviction and sentence, saying in a landmark ruling that inmates generally may not make new claims of innocence in federal court once all other appeals have been exhausted.

PROPERTY TAX PROTEST AND APPEAL PROCEDURES

(Information Provided to the Taxpayer by Gray County Appraisal District at 815 N. Sumner, Pampa, Texas (806) 665-0791)

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these procedures if you have a concern about:

- * the value placed on your property;
- * exemptions that may apply to you;
- * cancellation of agricultural appraisal;
- * whether your property is taxable;
- * which local governments should be taxing your property; or
- * you think the appraisal district has done something else that adversely affected you.

INFORMAL REVIEW: It is requested that if a taxpayer has any of the concerns listed above that he or she should come by the appraisal district office at 815 N. Sumner, Pampa, Tx. 79065, or call 665-0791 and ask to speak to an appraiser concerning your property value, etc.

REVIEW BY THE APPRAISAL REVIEW BOARD: If you can't resolve your problem informally with the appraisal district staff, you may have your case heard by the appraisal review board.

The appraisal review board (ARB) is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with the appraisals and other concerns listed above. They have the power to order the appraisal district to make the necessary changes to solve problems. If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice of protest) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notification of the time, date and place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the appraisal district office at 815 N. Sumner, Pampa, Tx. 79065.

Note: You shouldn't try to contact ARB members outside of the hearing. The law requires ARB members to sign an affidavit saying that they haven't talked about your case before the ARB hears it.

REVIEW BY THE DISTRICT COURT: After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision you have the right to appeal to district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

If the appraisal district has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more, you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

MORE INFORMATION: You can get more information by contacting your appraisal district at the Gray County Appraisal District, 815 N. Sumner, Pampa, Tx 79065, (806) 665-0791. You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the appraisal district or from the State Property Tax Board, 4301 Westbank Drive, Building B, Suite 100, Austin, Tx 78746.

Deadline for filing protests with the ARB (the deadline is postponed to the next business day if it falls on a weekend or holiday)
Usual deadline:	On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a notice of appraisal value was mailed to you, whichever is later).
Late protests (if you miss the usual deadline for good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.)	Before the day the appraisal review board approves records for the year. Contact the appraisal district for more information.
Special deadlines:
Change of use (if the appraisal district has informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land)	Before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.
ARB Changes (if the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed)	Before the 10th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.
If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

Rhubarb's possibilities are many as it comes into season

By Marialisa Calta

"Well, I made The Pie," my neighbor, Debbie Clark said, sighing. I knew what she meant. Rhubarb season had been upon us with a vengeance. Debbie makes a killer rhubarb pie — one that does not pollute the rhubarb by mixing it with, say, strawberries. Her crust is superb. But the unspoken question hung between us: How many rhubarb pies can one family eat?

A lot, it turns out. Hungry, by spring, for anything homegrown and garden-fresh, my family makes a feast out of rhubarb pie. The tartness is the perfect antidote to the duller foods of winter. It's a just-us pie and a company-for-dinner pie. And I've found it's a great breakfast pie, as well.

Since my husband and I are mediocre gardeners, we grow a lot of rhubarb; like zucchini, it's hard to kill. So when I'm sick of making pies I turn to rhubarb sorbet, rhubarb pandowdy, rhubarb jam. My kids even eat it raw — being careful to cut off the leaves, which are poisonous.

Not all my rhubarb recipes have been resounding successes. My family prefers strawberry shortcake to rhubarb shortcake. Having read somewhere that ginger and orange especially enhance the taste of rhubarb, I once made a really terrible rhubarb-ginger chutney. My rhubarb muffins were pretty awful, too.

The late Jane Grigson, an extraordinary personality and the author of several extraordinary cookbooks, hated rhubarb. She called it "nanny-food" and "school-meal-food." But in "Jane Grigson's Fruit Book" she included some pretty wild recipes, including a "spring soup" with rhubarb and cayenne, and a Persian dish with lamb and rhubarb.

I've chosen here to stick with the more traditional rhubarb dishes. Because, unlike Grigson, I like rhubarb.

SOUR CREAM RHUBARB COFFEE CAKE

- Topping
- 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1/2 cup chopped nuts
 - 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
 - 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- Cake:
- 1/2 cup shortening
 - 1 1/2 cups brown sugar
 - 1 egg, beaten
 - 2 cups all-purpose flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking soda
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 cup sour cream
 - 1 1/2 cups fresh rhubarb, cut into 1-inch lengths

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour a 9-by-13-inch baking pan.

In a small bowl, mix topping ingredients together. Set aside.

In a large mixing bowl, cream the shortening, adding brown sugar and egg. Cream together.

In another bowl, combine flour, baking soda and salt. Add to creamed mixture, alternating with sour cream. Mix thoroughly. Add rhubarb and mix to distribute evenly. Pour into prepared pan. Sprinkle with topping. Bake 40-50 minutes, or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.

Yield: 8-12 servings. Recipe from "The Green Thumb Harvest," by Johanna and Patricia Halsey (Vintage Books, 1984). Maurice Boulter, student, New England Culinary Institute, Essex, Vt., suggests serving this with whipped cream or yogurt, strawberries and mint.

DEBBIE CLARK'S RHUBARB PIE

4 cups rhubarb, rinsed, dried and sliced in 1-inch lengths

1/2 cup flour

1 1/2 cups sugar

zest of one orange

egg, lightly beaten

1 1/2 tablespoons Grand Marnier or orange juice crust for a 1- or 2-crust 9-inch pie (or for a 1-crust 9-inch pie with lattice top)

In a large bowl, toss rhubarb with flour, to coat. Add sugar, orange zest and mix well.

Add egg and Grand Marnier or orange juice. Mix well.

Spoon mixture into 9-inch pie plate lined with crust. Leave uncovered or cover with top crust or lattice, as desired. Cover edges with aluminum foil to prevent burning. Bake at 425 degrees for approximately 50 minutes, until rhubarb is tender and bubbly or top crust is lightly browned.

Serve warm, plain or with vanilla ice cream or frozen yogurt.

Yield: 8 servings. Recipe from Debbie Clark, Calais, Vt.

RHUBARB FOOL

- 1 1/2 pounds rhubarb, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 cup light-brown or granulated white sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon powdered cloves
- 1/2 vanilla bean, cut lengthwise in half (or 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract)
- 1/2 juice of 1/2 orange
- several large pieces orange peel
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 Grand Marnier or orange flower water, to taste (see note)

In a saucepan, combine rhubarb, sugar, cloves and vanilla bean (but not vanilla extract, if using), the orange juice and peel. Cook over medium heat until the rhubarb has melted into a thick puree, about 15 minutes. Stir toward the end of cooking to prevent scorching.

Remove vanilla bean (if using) and scrape out seeds with tip of a knife and stir them into fruit. Discard pod. If using extract, add it now.

Transfer mixture to a covered container and refrigerate several hours or overnight.

When fruit is cold, whip cream with 1 tablespoon of sugar, and flavor to taste with orange flower water or Grand Marnier. (Note: Orange flower water can be found in Greek or Middle Eastern specialty shops.) Fold it into the rhubarb to give a marbled texture. Pile into tall glasses and serve. It can be refrigerated several hours until serving. Best served very cold.

Yield: 4-6 servings.

Winners named in national high school recipe contest

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Two high school seniors have been named the grand-prize winners in the fourth annual National High School Recipe Contest sponsored by Johnson & Wales University.

Toni Flynn of Detroit, Mich., is the winner in the healthful dinner category with her recipe for stuffed sole with pasta nest. Regina Lie of Denver, Colo., won top honors in the healthful bread and dessert category with her recipe for carrot, pineapple and raisin bread, and fruit-glazed cheesecake.

The two young women were awarded full four-year tuition scholarships to Johnson & Wales University, valued at more than $35,000 each. They were among 20 high school seniors from across the country who competed for $337,000 in scholarships.

The competition was held in cooperation with the American Cancer Society. The goal of the contest is to promote the pursuit of excellence in the foodservice industry. Entries were judged by a panel of food professionals. The winning recipes will be published in a cookbook later this year.

Other winners: Gregory Foss of Tequesta, Fla., first runner-up in the healthful dinner category; Diana Cierach of Southold, N.Y., first runner-up in the healthful bread and dessert category; Melody Skinner of Littleton, Colo., second runner-up in the healthful dinner competition; Greg Lopshire of South Whitley, Ind., second runner-up in the healthful bread and dessert category.

The following are among the winning recipes:

Stuffed Sole with Pasta Nest

- 2 slices bread, crusts removed, chopped into cubes
- 2 egg whites
- 1/4 cup whipping cream
- Four 4-ounce pieces of sole
- 1/4 cup pineapple, diced and drained
- Zest from 3 oranges
- 4 sprigs parsley, chopped
- 1 tablespoon red pepper, diced small
- 1 tablespoon green pepper, dice small
- 3 sprigs fresh thyme, chopped
- Salt and pepper
- 2 cups white wine
- Juice from 3 oranges
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 2 teaspoons water
- 2 teaspoons whipping cream
- 1-3rd cup olive oil
- 1 small onion, minced
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 16 asparagus tips, sliced in half

- 30 to 40 medium-size fresh spinach leaves, stems removed
- 1/2 cup zucchini, sliced
- 10 ounces cooked angel hair pasta
- 16 cherry tomatoes, peeled and seeded, cut into quarters

In a food processor, puree together the bread crumbs, egg whites and cream. Leave mixture in food processor.

To prepare fish, trim the edges of fish; add trimmings to ingredients in food processor; blend. Remove and place in a stainless steel bowl.

Stir the pineapple, orange zest, parsley, red pepper, green pepper, thyme, salt and pepper into the fish mixture; fold until completely mixed.

Lay each fillet out flat. Season with salt and pepper. Spread fish mixture evenly over each fillet until completely covered. Roll each fillet from end to end and cover with plastic wrap. Twist ends of wrap and tie shut.

Using a toothpick, poke 12 holes on each rolled fillet. Put fillets, in plastic wrap, in a baking dish large enough to hold fillets in a single layer.

Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 20 minutes. With slotted spoon, remove fillets and retain juice for sauce. Unwrap fish.

In a separate saucepan, combine the reserved juice, white wine and orange juice and heat until simmering. Mix cornstarch and water together, then whisk into simmering liquid. Remove from stove and whisk in cream.

To make the pasta nests, heat olive oil in a skillet. Add onion, garlic, asparagus, spinach and zucchini. Sauté slowly until tender. Add pasta and tomatoes; continue to cook 30 seconds. Season with salt and pepper, remove from heat. To serve, divide pasta mixture among four serving plates. Top with one rolled fillet, spoon wine sauce over all. Makes 4 servings.

Carrot, Pineapple, Raisin Bread

- 1 cup prune puree (recipe below)
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 3/4 cup egg substitute
- 2 and 1-3rd cups all-purpose flour
- 1 cup wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 2 cups grated carrots
- 1 cup crushed pineapple, drained

- 1 cup raisins
 - 1 tablespoon orange rind
- For the prune puree: Combine 1 cup prunes, 1/2 cup canola oil and 6 tablespoons hot water in a food processor. Process until smooth.

Combine prune puree with the sugar and egg substitute in a mixing bowl; beat until well mixed. Add remaining ingredients. Mix until moistened. Pour mixture into a large, greased loaf pan. Bake in a 325-degree F oven for about 45 minutes. Let cool on rack. To serve, cut into slices. Makes 10 servings.

Recipe by: Regina Lie of Denver, Colo., grand-prize winner in the healthful bread and dessert category, National High School Recipe Contest.

Fresh Fruit-Glazed Cheesecake

- 3/4 cup graham cracker crumbs
- 3/4 cup grape-nuts cereal
- 2 tablespoons canola oil
- 2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
- 1 cup plain, nonfat yogurt
- 12 ounces light cream cheese, softened
- 1 1/4 cups sugar
- 3/4 cup egg substitute
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon vanilla
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 teaspoons grated lemon zest
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 fresh kiwifruit, cut into 12 slices
- 1/2 pint fresh raspberries (at least 14 whole)
- 1/2 pint fresh blackberries (at least 14 whole)
- 1 slice fresh starfruit
- 18-ounce jar no-sugar-added apricot preserves

To prepare crust: combine graham crackers, cereal and canola oil. Press into the bottom and along sides of a pie tin. Set aside.

To prepare filling: drain cottage cheese. Puree cottage cheese, yogurt and light cream cheese until smooth. In a large bowl, combine mixture with sugar, egg substitute, cornstarch, vanilla, cinnamon, lemon zest and lemon juice. Mix until smooth. Pour filling into prepared crust. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 30 minutes. Remove from oven. Cool completely.

Arrange fruit on top of cheesecake, as desired. Melt apricot preserves until liquified. Strain the preserves to remove particles. Coat the top of the cheesecake and all the fruit in a thin layer of the preserves, covering completely. Let set and serve. Makes 8 servings.

The book includes lots of traditional favorites, too, such as chicken pot pie, macaroni and cheese jazzed up with chilies, oven-fried chicken and peanut butter cookies.

To accomplish their goal, Dojny and Barnard focused on seasonal produce and regional cuts of meat, shopping in volume, coupons and in-house brands.

Good news for hostesses: 'Cheap Eats' fit for company

The Associated Press

Cooking for your friends is still a sure way to impress them, but it's no longer necessary to cook with gourmet store ingredients to show off. Cheap food, in fact, fits in with '90s concerns about both diet and pocketbooks. Less expensive ingredients often are the legumes and seasonal produce health authorities want everyone to eat more of.

Brooke Dojny and Melanie Barnard, authors of "Parties!," now have written "Cheap Eats" (Harper-Perennial), full of 44 menus for four for the cost of their book or less.

"Today ... people have come back to the delicious reality that a plate of perfectly cooked pasta with a garlicky clam sauce will win a lot more accolades than a tiny mound of fish eggs imported from halfway around the world," they write in the introduction.

The menus in "Cheap Eats" are organized by season, and among the spring choices are dilled salmon

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Long name is a mouthful and apparently a handful

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from Mrs. Dow who was amazed at the number of people who mispronounced and misspelled her name, I had to smile.

I sympathize with her. Then I read the letter from Mr. and Mrs. Solomon, who tried to explain that their name should be easy to remember because of King Solomon; then they started to get mail addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. King."

Well, my name is Andrea Guastadisegni, which is not easy to spell or pronounce. I once ordered something over the telephone and requested that it be sent to my home. I asked the salesperson if she was writing it, or putting it in a computer. She said she was writing it, so I said, "Please write small because my name is long." Then I spelled it for her.

Sure enough, a few days later, I received the merchandise addressed to "Mrs. Long."

ANDREA GUASTADISEGNI

DEAR ABBY: I have a son-in-law who has never worked steadily; consequently he has never provided for my daughter (Anne) and their children. Due to Anne's religious convictions (we are Catholic), she has supported this lazy, irresponsible deadbeat for many years. The situation makes me angry.

My problem, however, is how to respond to the people in this small town when they ask, "What is Sam (not his real name) doing now?"

I don't want to give a rude answer, but the question is very embarrassing. How should I respond?

GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: Simply say, "Sam is between jobs at the moment."

DEAR ABBY: Concerning engagement rings: An engagement ring is considered a gift to a woman, conditioned on her marrying the giver. Once the condition is fulfilled (she marries the man), the ring becomes the property of the woman — no strings attached.

If the woman breaks the engagement, she must return the ring. If the man breaks the engagement, the woman gets to keep the ring. This is not just a generous gesture; it is the law in most states — including Illinois.

DAVID N. SHAFFER, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, CHICAGO

DEAR READERS: I'm getting a lot of flak from readers objecting to my advice to "Broken-hearted Wife" — married 5 1/2 years to a man she dearly loved. Hubby is a big basketball fan, she is not, and since he had season tickets (for two), he asked his wife if she objected to his taking a female co-worker to a game. Although the wife was hurt, she said it was OK.

When the next basketball game came up, hubby said he'd like to take the same female co-worker, so I advised "Broken-hearted Wife" to have a long talk with her husband, tell him how she felt about his taking this lady to another game, and I suggested that they see a marriage counselor, or it could be the beginning of the end of their marriage.

Well ... did I get letters telling me it was perfectly OK for married men to have female friends, and there was no reason for me to assume that this could be damaging to their marriage. OK, perhaps my reply was a bit old-fashioned and distrustful; so for those who think a "mea culpa" is in order, will this do?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you find yourself in need of advice today, there's a chance that the counselors you'll seek will be the ones who are least capable of offering it. Be very selective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Rely upon your basic morality today instead of your materialistic motivations. The former will keep you out of trouble, the latter might steer you toward it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In a partnership arrangement today, both parties must be on the same wavelength. If not, one might undo what the other accomplishes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you want something done today, don't look for surrogates to do it for you. In fact, even when you do it yourself, you might not perform up to your usual standards.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Regardless of your good intentions, the financial or business advice you offer a friend today might be more harmful than helpful. It's best to say nothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Sometimes unsolicited attempts to assist people we love are judged as interference. Today you might have to deal with this phenomenon first hand. Be tactful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you make a mistake and try to blame it on someone else today, it could create a serious incident. Keep this in mind before pointing the finger at an innocent bystander.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you are rather practical in business and financial matters, but today you might be prone to taking chances you ordinarily wouldn't attempt. Look before you leap.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not try to be a self-appointed leader today in an endeavor you share with others. The only vote of confidence you might get is yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Rely upon your logic today rather than your powers of intuition. The world you perceive through your emotions and feelings could be a trifle distorted.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Strive to be businesslike in any financial arrangements you have with friends today. This is a tentative area where something could go wrong and create hard feelings.

Nickelberry picked to play in McDonald's All-Star Game

Pampa senior Dwight Nickelberry has been selected by the Texas High School Coaches Association to play in the McDonald's All-Star Game in Fort Worth. Nickelberry, a three-year starter for the Harvesters, will play for the North squad.

The all-star game tips off at 7:30 p.m. July 26 at Daniel Myer Coliseum on the Texas Christian University campus.

Players were first nominated by their coaches and then underwent a thorough screening and evaluation process before being chosen to represent their local high schools.

Nickelberry and Anthony Pope of Carthage were the only Class 4A players named to the North roster.

"The athletic abilities of these young men seem to get better every year," said Executive Vice-President Eddie Joseph of the Texas High School Coaches Association. "In fact, we've had some tough decisions to make, given there are a few two-sport nominees who could be all-stars in either basketball or football."

Ken Cook of Southlake Carroll will coach the North all-stars. Harry Miller of Temple will coach the South.

Nickelberry was earlier named to the first-team, all-state team by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches and the third-team all-state team by the Texas Sports Writers Association. In leading the Harvesters to a 26-6 record, Nickelberry averaged 24.4 points, 8.6 rebounds, 5.3 steals and 5.1 assists a game this season. Nickelberry was also District 1-4A's Most Valuable Player. He participated in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches All-Star Games last month in San Antonio. Pampa's Robert Hale was selected as one of the all-star coaches.

The Harvesters, coached by Hale, finished with a No. 6 state ranking and advanced to the Class 4A regional finals.

North All-Stars

Dwight Nickelberry, 6-0 guard, Pampa; Charles Smith, 6-4 forward, Fort Worth Dunbar; LeShell Wilson, 6-10 center, Waco High; Glonet Cooper, 6-7 center, Killeen Ellison; Lonnie Alexander, 6-5 forward, Lufkin; Anthony Pope, 6-4 forward, Carthage; Brock Barnes, 6-6 forward, Perryton; Mack Tuck, 6-6 guard, Mineola; Jason Hamm, 6-6 guard, Krum; Rob McIlhenny, 5-11 guard, Holiday; Vance Millican, 6-5 forward, Water Valley; Tim Fox, 6-6 center, Petersburg.

South All-Stars

Jesse Cravens, 6-6 center, San Antonio Marshall; Jerode Banks, 6-4 forward, Temple; Jimmy Smith, 6-1 guard, Victoria; Robert Crawford, 6-3 guard, Houston Eisenhower; Matt Gotsch, 7-0 center, Friendswood; James Perrin, 6-7 forward, Tulo-so-Midway; Rodrick Monroe, 6-5 center, Hearne; Rob Bumpus, 6-2 guard, Lampasas; Anthony Jones, 6-1 guard, Troup; Todd Naff, 6-3 guard, Liberty Hill; Corey Barnes, 6-4 forward, Laneville; Andre Broadnax, 6-4 forward, Karnack.

Johnson ignites Phoenix in victory over San Antonio

PHOENIX (AP) — Kevin Johnson, the shortest player in the Phoenix lineup, offset David Robinson's dominance inside with his ballhandling and 25 points Tuesday night, leading the Suns past San Antonio 98-89 and into a 1-0 lead in their best-of-7 series.

Robinson had 32 points and 10 rebounds, but it wasn't enough to keep the Suns from grabbing the series opener, unlike the opening round, when they dropped the first two games.

Johnson was fouled on a drive to the basket with 2:39 left in the game and sank two free throws to give the Suns a 92-85 lead. Then the 6-foot-1 guard somehow managed to get a jump ball away from 6-9 J.R. Reid and feed Richard Dumas for a basket.

Oliver Miller's dunk off a Johnson feed with 36.8 seconds remaining made it 94-87, wrapping up the victory.

Danny Ainge finished with two free throws and a layup in the final 20 seconds.

Dumas scored 22 points and Charles Barkley had 18 points and 10 rebounds for the Suns. Carr was the only other Spur in double figures, with 19.

Bulls 91, Cavaliers 84

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan scored 43 points to lead the two-time champion Chicago Bulls to a 91-84 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers on Tuesday night in the opener of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Jordan scored 16 points in the fourth quarter, including 10 straight at one point to give the Bulls an 83-72 lead.

Jordan, who was 16 for 30 from the field, entered the game averaging 38.9 points against the Cavaliers in the playoffs.

Game 2 of the best-of-7 series is at Chicago Stadium on Thursday night.

B.J. Armstrong scored 10 points, the only other Bull in double figures.

Gerald Wilkins led the Cavaliers with 19 points, while Mark Price had 17 and Brad Daugherty 15. Bill Cartwright and Scott Williams each had 10 rebounds for the Bulls, who hadn't played in a week.

Schultz quits as NCAA chief

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — With the destruction of the NCAA's credibility and perhaps the NCAA itself a possibility, Dick Schultz followed the advice of his top aides and quit.

An innocent victim of circumstance? A victim of his own reform movement? A dubious character caught in a lie?

Many questions remain. But, without a doubt, the NCAA will never be the organization it was before its top official got pulled down in the same kind of unseemly scandal that has engulfed so many schools and individuals before him.

Schultz, 63, was accused of having knowledge of an improper loan program while athletic director at Virginia. He still insists he was innocent, despite testimony to the contrary from at least five individuals.

"If you take this as an admission of guilt, you're dead wrong," he said in a teleconference Tuesday shortly after the decisive meeting with his aides.

"I was really concerned that if I stayed on, there was a risk this could damage the credibility of the NCAA. I just don't want every time an infractions ruling comes down somebody saying, 'Look what they did here, and the executive director wasn't penalized.'"

Many of Schultz' strongest supporters agreed that is exactly what would have happened.

"As always, Dick was thinking of what was best for the NCAA, for college athletics," said Thomas Hearn, president of Wake Forest and a key member of the powerful NCAA Presidents Commission. "There would always have been the presumption on the part of many people that the executive director was given preferential treatment."

Three former Virginia staff members had testified that Schultz knew about the illegal loan program while he was Virginia AD from 1981-87. But most damning was a special report by James Park Jr., commissioned by the NCAA to look into Schultz' involvement.

The 164-page report contained allegations from at least one former Virginia athlete and the mother of a former athlete that also disputed Schultz' claims. The mother told investigators Schultz had told her in a telephone conversation her son could not transfer from Virginia until he repaid his loan.

In summarizing his report, Park said "one must conclude that Mr. Schultz had actual knowledge of at least some of the ... loans to student-athletes." Park also said in a letter to David Berst, the NCAA's assistant executive director for enforcement, that Schultz had not been entirely forthcoming until confronted with certain facts.

"We acknowledge the conclusion reached by the fact-finder that Dick Schultz had actual knowledge of some loans," NCAA president Joseph Crowley said. "The facts in this case and those facts still remain in dispute."

Schultz' resignation was greeted with sadness by athletic officials. The soft-spoken former Iowa basketball coach had maintained high popularity with every one of the NCAA's quarrelsome, diverse constituent groups while helping lead the Presidents Commission's far-reaching reform movement.

"It's as sad a day as I can remember," said Curtis McCray, president of Millikin University and a former member of the Presidents Commission. "But sometimes in the human experience events occur around leaders that make it impossible for the leader to continue."

"I believe we will pay a price for this," said Hearn. "It will not be irreparable, however, because the reform movement will go on. But the energy and effort Dick Schultz would have given to keeping us on track the next several months will be given to finding a new executive director."

"Dick Schultz made more friends for the NCAA and for college athletics than anybody else in history," said Gregory O'Brien of the University of New Orleans, chairman of the Presidents Commission.

Schultz, who will remain on the job until a replacement is found, said he reached his decision 30 minutes before announcing it.

His contract was to run through August 1995. Francis Canavan, the NCAA's group executive director for public affairs, said a financial settlement had not been fully agreed to yet.

The NCAA executive committee had given Schultz the vote of confidence he needed to stay on the job. Crowley said the executive committee's faith in Schultz had not wavered.

"In view of his record of personal accomplishments as an athletic administrator and his leadership role in the reform movement, and our personal knowledge of him as a man of integrity, we believe Dick Schultz could continue to serve as executive director," Crowley said. "We understood ... we would be charged with giving preferential treatment to the executive director that is not available to others. However, his position fairly subjected Dick Schultz to a greater scrutiny, not less."

Names mentioned as possible replacements include Judy Sweet of Cal-San Diego, the immediate past president of the NCAA; Hearn and O'Brien; Big Ten commissioner Jim Delany; Tom Jerstedt, the NCAA's deputy executive director; Gerald Turner of Mississippi, former chairman of the Presidents Commission; and Tom Hansen, executive director of the Pacific-10 Conference.

Under Schultz, the NCAA signed a $1 billion television contract for its postseason basketball tournament and began making a more equitable distribution of the money among its schools.

It was also a time of far-reaching reforms. NCAA schools have reduced time demands on athletes, trimmed coaching and scholarship limits and tightened academic requirements.

In addition, the NCAA took some steps toward making its rules more accommodating to athletes. For example, schools are now no longer barred from paying athletes' transportation to the funeral of a teammate.

"Reform will be the Schultz legacy," McCray said.

The executive committee, a 14-member body made up of presidents and administrators from NCAA schools, will decide on a successor. But the Presidents Commission, which has taken control of the NCAA's legislative process the past five years, is certain to have a strong voice.

"We will approve the appointment," said O'Brien, adding the new executive director will be someone who will "see that athletics functions effectively and with integrity."

Mariners put an end to White Sox win streak

SEATTLE (AP) — Throwing 99 mph, Randy Johnson allowed only two hits in seven innings and struck out nine as the Seattle Mariners ended a five-game Chicago winning streak, beating the White Sox 4-3 Tuesday night.

Johnson (5-2), who pitched a no-hitter for Seattle in 1990 and a one-hitter in 1991, increased his major league-leading strikeout total to 63 and cooled off a White Sox team that had won 11 out of 13 games.

The AL West-leading White Sox took a 1-0 lead on Ellis Burks' third homer of the season in the second inning, but Chicago's only other hit off Johnson was Lance Johnson's single in the fourth.

The Mariners took a 2-1 lead against Dave Stieb (1-1) in the bottom of the second on Mike Blowers' two-run single. Seattle made it 4-1 in the third on Jay Buhner's RBI-triple and Tino Martinez's run-scoring single.

Frank Thomas hit his sixth homer of the year, a two-run shot with one out in the ninth off Norm Charlton that made it 4-3, but Charlton then struck out George Bell and Robin Ventura for his seventh save.

Johnson improved his career record against the White Sox at 8-1, including six in a row dating back to 1990. His fastball was clocked at 99 mph in the first and second innings and 98 in the seventh.

Stieb, making his second start of the year for the White Sox, went six innings, giving up four runs on eight hits and three walks.

Giants 5, Rockies 3

DENVER (AP) — Bill Swift pitched well, winning for the fourth straight time as the San Francisco Giants beat the Colorado Rockies 5-3 Tuesday night to end a three-game losing streak.

In a rare pitching battle at hitter-friendly Mile High Stadium, Swift (4-1) outdueled Colorado's David Nied (3-4), who hasn't won in his last four starts.

While Nied struggled in virtually every inning — leaving nine Giants on base in the seven he worked — Swift was a model of efficiency. Aided by three double plays and two Colorado baserunners who were caught stealing, he faced only two batters over the minimum through seven innings.

He encountered mild difficulty in the eighth when he erred on Joe Girardi's bunt, and Vinny Castilla singled with one out. But Swift induced Gerald Young to hit into a double play.

A two-run homer by Dante Bichette finished Swift with one out in the ninth. San Francisco has no complete games this season. Rod Beck got the last two outs for his eighth save.

Swift allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings, struck out seven and walked one.

The bottom half of the San Francisco order did most of the damage, accounting for the first three Giants runs.

In the second, No. 6 hitter Robby Thompson doubled and scored on eighth-place hitter Jeff Reed's single.

In the fourth, Thompson hit a bloop double behind first base, stole third and scored on Royce Clayton's single. Clayton went to third on a single by Reed, and Swift hit a sacrifice fly.

The Giants also scored single runs in the eighth and ninth off Colorado relievers.

In the eighth, Clayton singled and Reed walked, and Swift advanced them with a bunt. Willie McGee then hit a sacrifice fly to center off Willie Blair.

In the ninth, after singles by Matt Williams and Barry Bonds off Gary Wayne, Thompson hit his third double.

Colorado scored in the first. Bichette reached base on shortstop Clayton's throwing error and scored on Charlie Hayes' two-out double. Hayes was thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple.

Over 200 swimmers from West Texas and New Mexico competed in the first Long Course swim competition of the season. The city of Midland team captured first place in the team standings. The Amarillo Swim Team placed second.

No points awarded in grade school track meet

No official points were awarded in the Pampa elementary grade school track meet, which was held last weekend at Randy Matson School.

The winning school used to be recognized with a trophy, but that format was abolished because changing enrollment made some schools larger than others.

Fourth and fifth grade students compete in the all-day meet, held annually near the end of the school year.

Soccer day is planned

Pampa Soccer Association will have a Pampa Soccer Day on Sunday, beginning at 2 p.m.

Trophies will be presented to the players. There will be coaches and parents soccer matches, plus other events.

Concession stands will also be open.

Byrd compares his plight to Job

By TED BRIDIS
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — As Dennis Byrd lie crumpled on the turf at Meadowlands Stadium, his neck broken and muscles strangely heavy, he worried his wife Angela might leave him if he were paralyzed.

He worried his 3-year-old daughter Ashton might not love him if he could not hold her or run with her.

He worried that his New York Jets teammates would forget him. That he would die a pauper, his career so obviously ended.

In a heart-wrenching moment of introspection, Dennis Byrd wondered whether he had lost his manhood.

Byrd leaned against a podium Tuesday in Tulsa for a speech to the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, very much a man. He shifted nervously from one leg to the other. He cracked jokes.

He told the group how wrong he had been. "It makes a fellow think he can lose his faith in God," Byrd said. "How could this happen to somebody? All those things came floating in so fast, so prematurely. They really weren't the case."

Byrd broke his neck Nov. 29 when he collided with a teammate in a game against the Kansas City Chiefs. He attends rehabilitation three times a week and has gone from bed to walker to cane to hesitant steps.

Byrd, a devout Christian, compared his plight to Job's, the Old Testament figure whose faith was tested with hardship and plague but whose faith endured.

"Six-foot-5, 272 pounds. This is how I identified Dennis Byrd as a man," Byrd said. "This is what I thought made me the love of my wife. This is what I thought made me the respected father of my daughter. This is what I thought people looked to when they saw Dennis Byrd."

"Understand what this tragedy did to me. I was stripped of what I thought was my manhood. I was stripped of my physical prowess, of my speed and my strength, my physical agility. All this was gone."

"Looking back now, I was so completely wrong."

Byrd recounted his wife's rush from her stadium seat to the waiting ambulance, and the couple's prayers en route to the hospital. His teammates visited to help him eat. His contract had been approved, an insurance policy paid up.

When his daughter walked into his hospital room, she carried a toy doctor's kit: "She comes in with her doctor's kit and she climbs up onto the bed, and she takes care of her Daddy."

"Out of this lesson, I learned more about myself and about my God than I could have learned in a lifetime," Byrd said.

"This is a wonderful, wonderful time in my life. I can't imagine through such tragedy how a man could be so blessed. Isn't it unbelievable that I'm standing here on my own?"

Violence and intimidation rule in Cambodia

By PETER ENG
Associated Press Writer

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Khmer Rouge guerrillas have stepped up attacks on government workers and U.N. volunteers, while the government turns on its rivals in a campaign of terror and intimidation.

Yet the United Nations is pressing ahead with what had been envisioned as Cambodia's first democratic election in decades.

U.N. officials admit the May 23-28 vote will be nowhere near the ideal outlined in a peace accord all of Cambodia's factions signed in Paris in 1991. But they say it still is the best, perhaps final chance for Cambodia to put behind two decades of war and bloody revolution.

Clinton becoming Bush

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe it has something to do with the heavy burdens and frustrations of being president. Or something in that White House water. The more President Clinton finds his presidency challenged, the more fractured his syntax becomes.

In other words, the more he sounds like George Bush.

Bush had a reputation for murdering sentences, speaking without verbs, talking about his "vision thing" and often starting a thought only to halt in midstream and start all over again, off on another tangent.

"Outta here," Bush often would say at the end of an event. "Message: We care," was one of his more memorable lines as he campaigned for votes in New Hampshire.

Clinton came to office being praised for speaking in complete sentences — ones with actual subjects, verbs and objects.

But in recent days, Clinton has been lapsing into a kind of Bushspeak.

His journey to rekindle interest in his economic program — two days in the Midwest this week, a trip to New York today, a Western swing next week — has just begun. But already it has produced a syntactical kaleidoscope rivaling Bush's best.

For instance, in a speech Monday at Cleveland's Galleria shopping mall, Clinton had this to say: "I've been criticized for doing more than one thing at once. I've always felt — can you do one thing at once? Can you do — wouldn't it be nice if all you had to do was go to work and not take care of your family?"

"Would it be nice if you could pay your bills and not earn any money to pay them? I don't understand this whole — you can't do one thing at once. But anyway, that's what they say."

Or Tuesday, at a suburban Chicago high school: "Look, I've lived most of my life. Unless I beat the odds and live to be 94, I've lived half my life — or 92. I can't even add anymore. I've lived more than half my life unless I live to be 92 years old."

At a Chicago restaurant, the president also had some trouble with math. He told a person at the restaurant he spent only 25 percent of his time on national security, and half of his time on health care and the economy. (The other 25 percent was unaccounted for).

Bogus motorman 'really knew what he was doing'

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Keron Thomas was a subway buff, hanging around train stations and crew rooms, making friends with workers, asking questions and, above all, watching. By all accounts, he was a fine student indeed.

Transit officials on Monday accused the 16-year-old of posing as a motorman and taking a 10-car subway train with hundreds of passengers on a 2 1/2-hour, 45-mile ride on the system's longest line Saturday.

He made all the stops, safely delivered all his passengers and was just two stops away from completing a regulation run when he rounded a curve too fast, tripped the emergency brakes and couldn't reset them, the transit agency said.

Even then, Transit Authority spokesman Jared Lebow said, no one suspected the 6-foot, 180-pound teen-ager who looks about 25 was an impostor. Transit officials thought he was a real motorman by the name of Regoberto Sabio.

But when he was driven to the Transit Authority headquarters in Brooklyn for drug and alcohol testing — routine after drivers are caught speeding — he panicked and bolted. And that's when transit officials got suspicious.

The United Nations invested more than $2 billion and 22,000 personnel in Cambodia in its largest peace-keeping and rebuilding operation ever.

The fanatical Communist Khmer Rouge is boycotting the election because it fears the Vietnamese-installed government, which holds 80 percent of the country, will win and gain a stamp of legitimacy.

The guerrillas have been disrupting elections preparations and trying to scare people into not voting by bombarding government and U.N. posts in several parts of the country, including a major provincial capital last week.

In the past six weeks, nine peacekeepers have been killed in attacks mostly blamed on the Khmer Rouge.

The government, led by Khmer Rouge defectors, has been attacking opposition parties because it doesn't want to share power.

And there is "very widespread" intimidation of the 4.7 million registered voters by both sides, said Reginald Austin, chief U.N. electoral officer.

U.N. officers say the violence, while serious and increasing, is confined to certain areas and Cambodia is nowhere near war. The 20 parties are campaigning peacefully and according to Austin, and in many areas people are very enthusiastic about voting.

Pre-election violence has been bloodier in many countries without armed civil conflict.

"We're obviously concerned but in relative terms the situation is not unmanageable," said Dennis McNamara, head of the U.N. mission's human rights unit.

U.N. workers on the ground may be less sure.

After a colleague was killed in an ambush earlier this month, civilian policemen from Japan left their posts in the countryside, disobeying orders of the U.N. mission. Japan, the U.N. mission's top funder, was among several governments demanding greater security for their personnel.

The Cambodia mission was Japan's first deployment of ground forces overseas since World War II, and it was fiercely opposed by pacifists at home. By law, Japanese forces must be withdrawn from Cambodia if the cease-fire breaks down.

Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa tried to address his countrymen's concerns during a televised news conference today, saying the truce was generally holding despite sporadic violence. Miyazawa said he had no intention of withdrawing Japanese peacekeepers.

Of the 700 U.N. workers trained to supervise the polling, 53 have quit in fear. And governments that have been asked to send a total of about 1,000 personnel to monitor the election may think twice if things worsen.

A specialist on Cambodia said that since at least the middle of last month, Khmer Rouge cadres have been threatening villagers in government-controlled areas. The threats are delivered orally or through leaflets distributed to villagers or posted on trees.

The practice is widespread in northern, central and southern provinces, said the specialist, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.N. investigators have so far confirmed that the Khmer Rouge has killed 17 government civilian workers or police officials since April 1.

Government forces have killed at least seven opposition party members while seven others were killed by unknown assailants, U.N. officials confirmed. Opposition parties say many more have died.

The government was installed in a late 1978 Vietnamese invasion that ousted a Khmer Rouge regime.

Over the years, Amnesty International has accused the government of widespread human rights abuses, including killings of political prisoners.

During its 1975-78 rule, the Khmer Rouge forced people to build huge rural communes; perhaps 1.5 million died from disease, slave labor and purges.

The prime target of government agents has been FUNCINPEC, the royalist party led by the son of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the country's popular former ruler.

Party offices have been bombed. Ung Huot, FUNCINPEC's campaign manager, says a bounty of $50,000 is out for the killing of seven FUNCINPEC officials including himself.

In the countryside, he said, "they come into your office and scold you or they come by in a motorbike and scream that they're going to shoot you."

Even in Phnom Penh, leaders of some smaller parties are too scared to hold rallies — or even leave their offices to campaign.

U.N. officials say the government has been using its huge administrative apparatus down to the village headmen to intimidate people into voting for it and preventing people from traveling to opposition rallies.

They also say teachers and other civil servants have campaigned for the government — under threat of losing their jobs.
