House to consider school plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The House today took up a school finance reform bill that would give property-rich school districts several options for sharing some of their wealth with poorer districts.

The debate began after a prayer asking that lawmakers focus on the students who would be affected by their actions on education. "May they not squabble over partisan issues while our children are forgotten," said Pastor Calvin Reynolds of San Pedro Presbyterian Church in San Antonio, who gave the daily prayer.

The Senate already has passed one plan. The House is considering its own, much different approach.

Chuck McDonald, spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards, Wednesday said the governor is optimistic that despite differences between the two chambers, a House-Senate conference committee will be able to forge a final plan.

"The governor is confident that if they can get something going in conference committee, that both the House and Senate can agree on something," said McDonald.

"The key now is to get something over in conference and work this out. It's just part of the process you have to go through," he said.

The Legislature has been ordered by the Texas Supreme Court to enact a plan before June 1.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown, who is overseeing the case, has told lawmakers that state funding for public schools will be cut off if they fail to meet the deadline.

On May 1, voters rejected a proposal that would have shifted about $400 million in local property tax money from wealthy to poorer school districts. That sent lawmakers back to the drawing board.

The Senate measure would require the state to shift some business property from wealthier to poorer school districts. The plan would allow property, such as a shopping mall, to be moved from one district to another for tax purposes.

Pending before the House is a bill to consolidate the 109 richest school districts in property wealth with one or more of their poorer neighbors — unless a district instead chose among the following options:

— Merging its tax base with one or more poorer school districts;

— Sending money to the state to pay for educating other students in poorer districts;

— Contracting to educate students in other districts;

— Consolidating voluntarily with one or more other school districts; or — Moving some taxable property to another district's tax rolls.

For the first three options, local voter approval would be required.

The House Public Education Committee's head, Rep. Libby Lineberger, offered Wednesday to meet with lawmakers and their local school superintendents to explain the multiple-choice plan.

"I feel confident that we'll have enough votes to pass it. I've heard no real negative reaction to the plan. I've heard positive things said about it, so I feel pretty good about it at this point," Ms. Lineberger, D-Manchaca, said.

However, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock has voiced reservations about the House proposal.

Bullock, who presides over the Senate, said the plan "has many, many moving parts. It bothers me to think that one of those moving parts of the many might get broken, and we'll be worrying about closing schools not just in June but in September, when a majority of our students expect to come back to school."

Richards has no preference between the House and Senate plans, McDonald said.

"She prefers a plan that gets this done. Any plan that gets us to the point where (Judge) Scott McCown wants us to be," said McDonald.

Plane found; 132 aboard feared dead

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The wreckage of a Colombian airliner that was carrying 132 people was spotted today on a mountainside in the Andes. There apparently were no survivors, rescuers said.

At least six Americans were aboard, authorities said. Their names were not immediately released.

Two pilots speculated Wednesday's crash resulted from the loss of radio navigation sites blown up by leftist guerrillas last year. The beacons are used by pilots to thread their way through the mountains of northwestern Colombia.

The pilots, who made the comments in separate interviews with the RCN and Caracol radio networks, spoke on condition they not be identified.

The SAM airline Boeing 727 was found 50 miles northwest of Medellin on the slope of a 12,300-foot peak, a search plane pilot said in a radio interview. The jetliner, bound from Panama, went down as it prepared for landing in Medellin.

The plane was carrying 125 passengers and seven crew members, the airline said.

It plowed into the side of a forested mountain in an area of deep canyons and turbulent rivers. Pilots said the rough terrain created problems for crews to reach the scene by helicopter.

The army, Red Cross and Civil Defense were asked to send in teams by land.

The nearest town is Urrao, about 25 miles away by a steep and winding dirt road. Urrao's mayor, Juan Posada, said rescue teams would have to reach the site by mule.

Medellin, 200 miles northwest of Bogota, is surrounded by mountains, including a snow-capped volcano that rises 16,000 feet.

Sales tax refunds improve, still lag

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Despite a drastic improvement in May sales tax refunds as compared to April's total, the city of Pampa is still coming up short of funds for the year.

For May, Pampa received $267,849.36 from the state in sales refunds.

That is an increase of $121,394.26 from April's refund of $146,455.10.

However, the city is under budget 7.2 percent, according to the city's sales tax receipts. The projected shortfall for the 1992-93 budget is now $334,625.74.

The reason why the city is receiving more money but yet coming up short in funds relates to last year's city sales tax increase and property tax decrease.

In 1992, Pampa residents voted to increase the sales tax by one cent. When the increase was finished, the total city sales tax totaled two cents, doubling the amount the city normally collected.

At the same time the increases came, the property tax was cut by the same amount. This was done in an effort to shift the tax base of the city.

Considering that, to stay even with the May 1992 sales refund, the city had to collect at least $277,840.72 this month. Anything less would be a decrease in the percentage of money collected, although it would seem to be an increase in money compared to last year.

Merchants collect the state's 6.25 cent sales tax and the local sales tax of two cents and send it to the Comptroller's Office with their tax returns. The state retains its share and returns to cities, counties and other taxing entities, their portion of the sales tax every month.

This month's sales tax rebates include taxes collected on March sales and reported to the Comptroller in April by businesses filing monthly tax returns. Businesses file monthly, quarterly or annually depending on the amount of sales tax they collect.

The city of Lefors received a check for $611.26, a decrease of 37.23 percent as compared to $973.78 the city received in May 1992. In total, the city has received $3,167.41 this year.

The city of McLean received a check for $2,905.42 from the state in May. It was an increase of 76.76 percent as compared to last year's check for the same month of $1,643.74.

In Carson County, all four cities in the Comptroller's report posted gains in the amount of money they received this month.

Officials discuss lake's future, but no firm commitments made

No firm commitments were made regarding Lake McClellan's future, following a joint meeting Wednesday afternoon among Gray County and officials of the U.S. Forest Service, which owns the lake property.

Attending the meeting were Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy; Gray County Commissioner Gerald Wright, who also is president of the Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. board of directors; District Ranger Reggie Blackwell of Cheyenne, Okla.; and Geanene Derby, Forest Supervisor, Albuquerque, N.M.

"We discussed Gray County's future involvement in the lake and we had a good meeting and discussed rules and regulations the Forest Service has sent down to be enforced," Wright said.

Wright added that "We made it very clear that if Gray County were going to continue as concessionaire, the county would need more input and control over decisions that are made regarding Lake McClellan."

The Lake McClellan Improvement board is expected to meet at 7 p.m. today at the Gray County Courthouse. The meeting is open to the general public.

Wright said the Forest Service expressed an apparent willingness to let the county have more say over rules and regulations governing management and use of the park. He added, however, that rules and regulations imposed by the federal government can "hamper (the county) in that area."

Also addressed at the meeting were some motorcycle trails that have been recently closed to motorcycle enthusiasts, a move which angered many who ride bikes at the lake.

"We let it be known to them that Gray County needed more input before such decisions are made and that although we are aware there is wildlife in the area, we feel some of the trails closed could be opened," Wright said, adding that, "hopefully they will reconsider."

Gray County Commissioners Court are scheduled to meet June 1 to again consider the concessionaire contract, which the county currently holds, and the possibility of the county continuing with lake improvements through an existing cost-share agreement.

There's tears for Cheers

BOSTON (AP) — For 11 years, one of the first things visitors to Boston have wanted to know is "Where's Cheers?"

And even after tonight's final episode of the hit TV show, the long lines outside the Bull & Finch aren't likely to go away.

The bar is the visitors' now, cleared of much of the local ambience that in 1982 inspired the show and its cast of lovable barflies. Gone are the days when everyone at the Bull & Finch knew your name.

For bar owner Thomas Kershaw and the city itself the basement tavern near the historic Public Garden is a souvenir-selling gold mine that has spun off a multimillion-dollar industry.

Bull & Finch Enterprises has sold more than 175,000 "Cheers" hats, 450,000 sweatshirts, 675,000 items of glassware, and 2 million T-shirts, Kershaw said.

While the bar has a souvenir stand upstairs, there also are concessions around the city, notably at Faneuil Hall and Logan International Airport. And there are other benefits for Boston.

"Every Thursday night in prime time there is a television commercial for Boston," said Patrick Moscaritolo, president of the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The city's farewell to the NBC show includes numerous private and public receptions for the cast, culminating with a huge bash at the Bull & Finch.

Many of the main characters are expected to be there, with the exception of Kirstie Alley, who's filming a movie, and possibly Woody Harrelson.

The celebration began Wednesday with cast members attending a Red Sox game against Toronto. John Ratzenberger, who plays Cliff on the show, threw out the first pitch wearing a Red Sox cap and jacket. He got a standing ovation.

Bleachers have been set up outside on Beacon Street and at Boston Common for viewing the final two-hour show, which opens with a 22-minute retrospective. Later, "The Tonight Show" with Massachusetts native Jay Leno will be broadcast live from the pub.

Among events elsewhere, the SkyDome, home of the Toronto Blue Jays, is expecting about 10,000 people to turn up to watch the final episode on the domed stadium's giant scoreboard screen.

Visitors to the 24-year-old bar in Boston are often disappointed by the real-life tavern, which has much of the same brass-glass-and-wood decor but a different layout from the Hollywood set.

Pull a seat up at the bar and you won't see Norm or Cliff. But there are a few regulars, hangers-on from the old crowd of professionals, neighbors and college students who once regarded the Bull & Finch as their haunt.

There's Tony Swain, a frequent visitor over 20 years who can be heard to complain about all the tourists, especially when he must wait to get a seat.

In place of Sam Malone is bartender Eddie Doyle, who's worked at the pub for 18 years. Some say he was the inspiration for the "Coach" character, played by Nicholas Colasanto until he died in 1985.

In the early days of the show, "suddenly people came in and took ash trays and glasses as souvenirs," Kershaw recalled. "We even lost a few bricks from the wall."

Doyle — who decided to hold a mock Irish wake for "Cheers" on Wednesday — admits there will be a void after the final episode. But he has little doubt tourists will still come for years.

"There's only one 'Cheers', and it's in Boston," Doyle said as he poured a beer.

That's true, said Valerie Thompson, a visitor from a Salt Lake City sitting at the bar.

"You say you're coming to Boston and you say you're coming to Cheers."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Clinton noticeably off-course — again

President Clinton keeps offering evidence that his old campaign assurances he was some kind of "new Democrat" were merely rhetorical flourishes. Instead, he embraces every opportunity to kowtow to organized labor, like all the "old Democrats." The latest move is to invite air traffic controllers who were dismissed after an illegal strike in 1981 to reapply for their former jobs.

The wisdom of outlawing strikes by government workers, particularly those said to endanger the public safety, is debatable. But such bans exist, and the traffic controllers who struck in 1981 had signed a pledge not to strike.

Offering to rehire some of them — the National Air Traffic Controllers Association estimates that 3,000 of the 11,400 controllers dismissed in 1981 might be interested in returning — perhaps makes those laws a dead letter.

To be sure, a case can be made that it would be useful to have those experienced controllers back in control towers. The best way to achieve that, however, would be through a thoroughgoing reform of the air-traffic-control system — the kind of "reinventing government" program to which Clinton also gave lip service during the campaign — rather than by throwing a symbolic bone to Big Labor protectors of the status quo.

One of the main reasons air-traffic control causes concern is that while much of the airline industry was deregulated — leading to more flights, lower prices, and improved safety — the air-traffic control system is still run by a stodgy, inflexible bureaucratic government agency that is subject to severe political pressures. Several think-tanks have worked out detailed plans whereby air-traffic control could be turned over to a private company, owned either independently or jointly by the airlines it serves.

If the air-traffic control system and some major airports were privatized, the flexibility, efficiency, and safety of the system would improve markedly. A private company would have strong incentives to update its equipment — a sore point among critics of the present slow-moving system — and to develop more flexible schedules that would reduce overcrowding during the most desirable flying times.

And a private company would be free to hire the most qualified controllers, including those dismissed during the 1981 strike if it desired. Shortly after the strike, many union members supported various privatization schemes, but neither the Reagan nor the Bush administration made a serious move to change the system.

If President Clinton wanted to be taken seriously as a "new Democrat" who seeks the most cost-effective way to get a job done rather than the method involving the most government spending, he would have looked into reforming the air-traffic control system. Instead, he chose to send a signal of submission to Big Labor.

"We are going to EMPOWER you — empower you to make larger contributions to and investments in the federal government."

Health care plan at war with itself

Americans have a serious problem. Automobiles are a necessity of life, but not everyone has a car, and some people have crummy ones. They are expensive, siphoning off a large share of our resources. Making the market function better is hard because these machines are too complex to be understood by ordinary people, who in any case can hardly negotiate with giant auto makers.

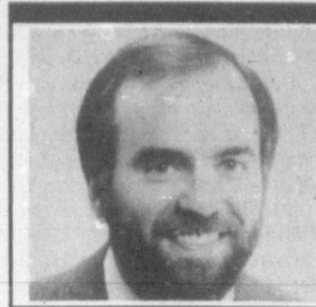

Here's a solution. First, the government ought to guarantee everyone a decent set of wheels. Second, motorists should get them through car purchasing cooperatives, which would insist that manufacturers offer high quality and low prices. Third, as a further brake on costs, Washington should restrict the amount spent on cars each year by all Americans.

Sound weird? Then I have good news: Nobody is about to consider this approach to automobiles. I also have bad news: Bill Clinton is about to recommend it for health care. It's called "managed competition," and according to the leaks from Hillary Rodham Clinton's task force, it provides the framework for the administration's proposed reforms.

The government would herd everyone into large purchasing groups, which would invite health care providers (like insurance companies and HMOs) to submit bids to provide a package of benefits to the group. Meanwhile, a federal board would limit the total amount spent each year on health care.

As advertised by Princeton sociologist Paul Starr, a member of the task force, it's "a proposal for universal health insurance, quality improvement and cost containment that cuts across ideological lines." Actually, it's a federal takeover of medicine that will lead to lower quality and rationing of treatment without necessarily restraining costs.

The key defect is inherited from our current system: The people getting the benefits are not the ones paying the bill, which means they have the incentive to consume all the treatment they can possibly desire. The result is ever-growing demand and outlays: Health care now consumes 14 percent of national output, up from 4.8 percent in 1950.

Exploding costs are just half of the health care problem. The other half is that so many people lack health insurance. But managed competition, in its zeal to correct what is worst about our medical system (high cost, insufficient access), endangers what is best (freedom for doctors and patients, the most advanced care in the world).

Controlling medical costs by bureaucratic decree will probably work about like price controls on oil did — Germany's system resembles the Clinton model, but health care outlays rose faster there than here in the 1980s. A spending ceiling can "succeed" only by forcing patients to wait for many procedures or do without — as in Canada and Britain.

This painful trade-off may look inevitable, since it appears impossible to uphold existing standards of care while extending coverage to more people and containing costs. It's not impossible. But it requires giving more control and responsibility to patients — the opposite of what managed competition does.

The best alternative comes from John Goodman and Gerald Musgrave in their massive book, "Patient Power: Solving America's Health Care Crisis," published by the Cato Institute of Washington.

It attacks the lack of insurance by offering tax credits for the purchase of basic health coverage (with government subsidies for the poor) and by limiting the tax treatment to policies that are renewable without regard to the policyholder's health. It attacks rising costs by providing strong inducements for high-deductible policies — encouraging people to rely on insurance for the occasional large bills, not the routine small ones.

This last has two big advantages. First, it would discourage over-consumption. One study found that people getting free care consumed 50 percent more than people who had to pay for the first $1,000 a year — with no difference in outcomes. Second, it would reduce the price of insurance, providing savings that would help pay those routine bills.

The plan is a simple concept: Everyone gets protection against ruinous medical bills, and everyone incurs the obligation of paying for small ones. Managed competition tries to hold down spending by government dictate — but stimulates more and more patients to demand more and more services. Goodman and Musgrave give patients keen incentives to consume only the care they really need — and rewards them with monetary savings if they do.

Their approach harnesses economic forces and individual choice, which in other markets serve to foster efficiency, low prices and customer satisfaction. Managed competition addresses our health care problems by expanding the government's role and shielding more patients from the real cost of their decisions. That's like turning up the heat on a sizzling pot while putting a lead weight on the lid. Something's got to give.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 20, the 140th day of 1993. There are 225 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 20, 1927, Charles Lindbergh took off from Roosevelt Field in Long Island, N.Y., aboard the "Spirit of St. Louis" on his historic solo flight to France.

On this date:
In 1506, Christopher Columbus died in poverty in Spain.

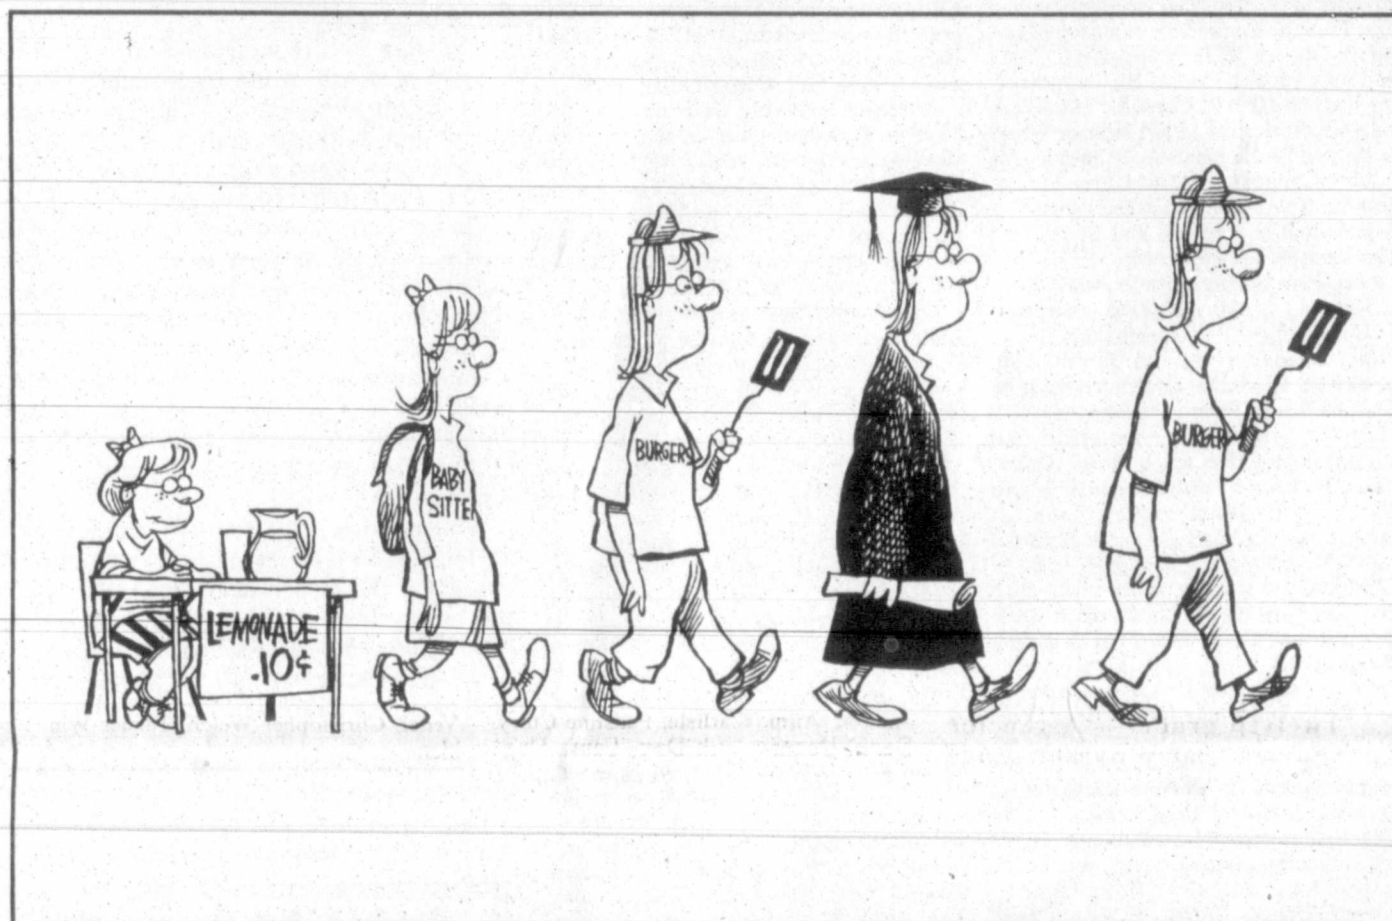

In 1830, the first railroad timetable was published, in the Baltimore American newspaper.

In 1861, North Carolina voted to secede from the Union.

In 1861, the capital of the Confederacy was moved from Montgomery, Ala., to Richmond, Va.

When 'the boys' grew up

Editor's note: This column originally was published in 1988.

"The weekly meeting of the Slim Pickens' Chapter of the Beer-Swilling, Tobacco-Chewing, Possum-Eating, Card-Playing Brotherhood of America will please come to order," announced Shorty Millsaps, club president.

The boys gunned down the last swallows of their beer and gave Shorty their attention.

"Men," Shorty began, "I must bring before the brotherhood tonight a serious matter that could affect this organization as nothing before ever has."

"As you might have heard, the Supreme Court has ruled that private clubs may no longer discriminate in accepting members."

"I'm here tonight to tell you that the time may come when we might have to accept women into this brotherhood."

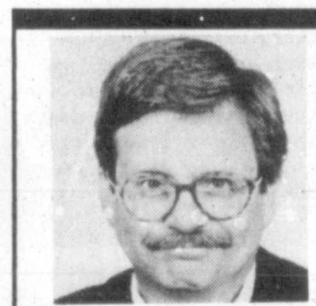

A hush fell over the startled listeners.

"You serious, Shorty?" asked Cootie Carnes.

"As your mother-in-law's drawers, Cootie," replied Shorty.

There was much murmuring and cursing and finally Gilbert Harskins said, "This is the last place we got, men."

"You can't get away from women at work no more. They on television giving the news and they're all over the golf course and they've even got in the Rotary Club.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see one playing outfield for the Pirates before it's over."

"Hell," said Marvin Coddlemeyer, "if we get women in here, we going to have to change a lot of things."

"Like what?" asked Gilbert Harskins.

"Well for one thing, we won't be able to spit on the floor or have the weekly belching contest. Women don't go in for spittin' on the floor or belching."

"We'll also have to quite tellin' nasty jokes and Leon Caldwell won't be able to do that funny thing where he paints eyes on his belly and uses his navel for a mouth and pantomimes, 'She Was Just a Stable-man's Daughter, but All the Horsemen Knew Her.'"

"That'd be a shame," said Cootie Carnes.

"I'll tell you what else," said Marvin Coddlemeyer.

"Women will want to have congealed salad and celery sticks instead of possum and sweet potatoes, and I guarantee you it won't be a month before they'd be sittin' around here drinkin' white wine and talking about their hair stylists."

"Marvin's right," said Cootie Carnes. "A man's just got to have a place he can go now and then and just be himself and say what he wants to and scratch where it itches. Dammit, Leon, quit spittin' on my shoes."

Curtis Knowles hadn't said a word during the entire discussion. Curtis had been married four times, once to a lady lawyer, and was held as an expert on females.

"Boys," he said, "if a woman can sit here with us and listen to all the bull and put up with chewin', spittin', belchin', cussin', and Leon Caldwell's navel, I say she's what I've been lookin' for all my life and hadn't been able to find. A woman who would put up with a man just bein' himself."

A hush fell over the crowd.

"I move we put an ad in the paper," said Cootie Carnes. "I'd like to meet a woman like that myself."

Property rights under siege

Ann Corcoran is a lifelong nature lover who worked for the Nature Conservancy and lobbied for the National Audubon Society. In 1985, she and her husband fulfilled a lifelong dream: They bought a 160-acre farm in Sharpsburg, Md., an hour-and-a-half northeast of Washington, D.C. They spent the next two years renovating the farmhouse and getting the place in working order.

Then they found that their dream was in danger. The National Park Service, they discovered, was planning to broaden the boundaries of the Antietam Battlefield National Park. The new boundaries would include the Corcorans' farm.

Without alerting local residents, the Park Service had asked the Conservation Fund, a sister group of the Nature Conservancy (Corcoran's former employer), to begin quietly buying up the farms around Antietam. The Fund was to hold the farms briefly, then turn them over to the government in exchange for a hefty tax break. Any farm that fell within the boundaries formed by these government-owned farms would be on federal property.

Why did the Park Service want to extend the boundaries of Antietam? Because, it claimed, the area had to be protected from commercial development. The problem is, neither the Corcorans nor any of their neighbors could find any evidence that such development was imminent.

What the Corcorans did know was that if their land fell within the boundaries of a national park, they would have to contend with a barrage of restrictive regulations. The government could condemn their land, for example, bar them from certain types of agriculture, or require them to obtain permits even for such cosmetic changes as applying a coat of paint to their home. The Park Service's threatened action raised an important question: What about the Corcorans' property rights?

When the community caught wind of what was happening it organized and waged a successful campaign that forced the Park Service to curb its plans to expand the park. Corcoran's activism put her in touch with thousands of other citizens across the country whose property rights also are being threatened by federal agencies and radical environmentalists.

This movement, Corcoran notes in a recent article, "consists of ordinary people — farmers, families, retirees — who think they can take care of their land as well as or better than the government can, and who are not about to let the public authorities confiscate their property."

Another victim is Alice Menks, who with her husband built a house in the central Virginia community of Graves Mill in 1984. Soon she found out that her home fell within the boundaries of a tract of land Congress had earmarked for a national park in 1926, but had never used. Again, the Park Service was encouraging the Conservation Fund to purchase land in her county, "threatened" as it was by development.

Menks founded Virginians for Property Rights in 1991 and is still battling the Park Service, which she says "treated us like little children who needed to be kept in line."

Such cases are not rare. In recent years federal agencies have adopted an increasingly condescending attitude toward private-property rights, expelling thousands of families from homes and farms, and limiting what others could do on their own land without the government's permission.

Federal, state and local governments already hold title to more than 40 percent of the land in the United States. Do their appetites know no bounds?

Merit Scholarships awarded

EVANSTON, Ill. — Josh Seabour, Pampa High School senior, has been awarded a University of Oklahoma merit scholarship, and Rochelle Rives, Wheeler High School senior, has garnered a University of Texas merit scholarship. These scholarship awards were announced by the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

College-sponsored scholarships provide between $250 and $2,000 annually for up to four years of undergraduate study. Winners were chosen by officials of the sponsor institution from among Merit program finalists who will attend that college.

Winners are selected from those who took the 1991 PSAT/NMSQT. In the fall of 1992, approximately 15,000 of the original 1.1 million test takers were designated as semifinalists.

In order to become a finalist, a semifinalist had to meet extremely high academic standards, be endorsed and recommended by the high school principal, confirm earlier test performance on a second test and provide information about activities, interests and goals. Winners of all Merit Scholarships are chosen from the group of approximately 14,000 finalists.

Senior Rochelle Rives won the state championship in literary criticism. Gold medals also were won by the WHS literary criticism team — Rochelle Rives, Kristin Smith and Amanda Rives. Individually Smith placed fourth and Amanda Rives, eighth.

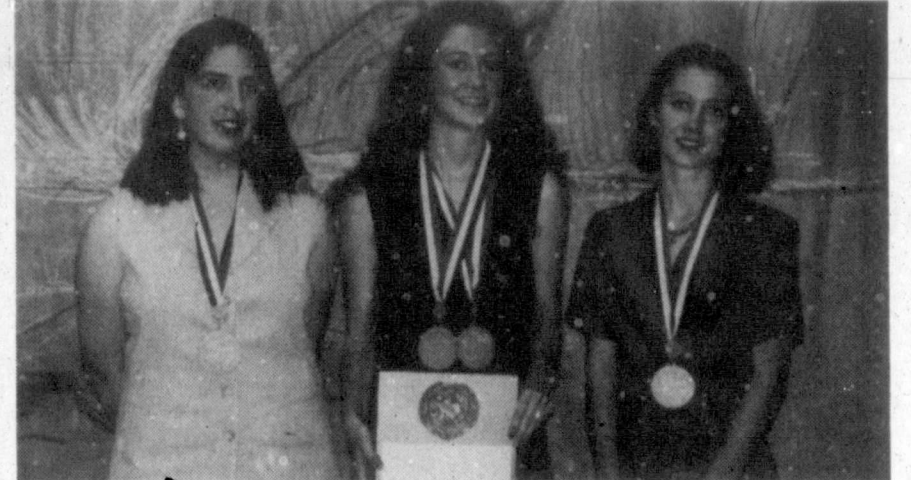

Literary criticism is an academic contest which tests the knowledge of literary history, the terms used in analyzing literature and the skills of application and interpretation. An essay is required in the case of a tie.

Rochelle Rives competed for the second year in literary criticism. She is a National Merit Scholarship Finalist and plans to attend the University of Texas in the Plan II Honors program.

Amanda Rives competed in keyboarding at the state level her freshman year. The students plan to compete in literary criticism next year.

'Caution' is parent's motto in dangerous world

DEAR ABBY: I was a little puzzled by your response to "Better Cautious Than Sorry," who wrote to say that she made a practice of being aware of her 6-year-old child's friends and their families. Your response seemed to be somewhat tongue-in-cheek, as if to say, "But don't get upset if they want to investigate you, too."

With all the drugs and firearms around these days, a parent would be considered negligent to allow a 6-year-old to freely wander into a stranger's home. As a matter of fact, I make it a point to invite my son's friends' parents the first time a new friend visits, and I expect the same courtesy. Six-year-olds are not capable of using the good judgment necessary to keep themselves out of trouble if left unsupervised in a play situation. What if the child was invited to someone's home where the parents don't get home until 6 p.m.?

I am firmly in "Better Cautious" corner and commend her sense of parental responsibility, and I feel she deserved more support than your lukewarm nod.

DIANE W. BLACK, ATLANTA

DEAR DIANE: My response to "Better Cautious" was as follows: "Your vigilance is commendable, and a good example. I hope you are willing to reciprocate the hospitality and invite the mothers of your son's playmates to investigate the suit-

'The Firebird' tells tale of hunter and minstrel

By SARAH NORDGREN
Associated Press Writer

A hunter and a minstrel populate two new books for children, "The Firebird," retold by Selina Hastings, and "The Minstrel and the Dragon Pup," by the late Rosemary Sutcliff.

"The Firebird," illustrated by Reg Cartwright, is the story of a tyrannical king's dedicated servant, who one day finds a firebird's feather while riding in the woods. Although warned away from the feather by his loyal and wise steed, the huntsman gives it as a gift to his king — and here is where the trouble begins. "The Firebird" is a lovely old Eastern European fairy tale that deserved retelling. It was first collected by 19th century folklorist A.F. Afanasyev.

"The Minstrel and the Dragon Pup," illustrated by Emma Chichester Clark, is a new story, also set in the days of kings and queens. This minstrel's songs are much sweeter when his pet dragon pup is nearby. When the pup is stolen, much of the joy goes from the minstrel's life. Ultimately, the two enjoy a happy reunion.

ability of your home as well." I am puzzled as to why you thought my answer was tongue-in-cheek, lacking in support, and merely a lukewarm nod. I assure you, it was none of the above.

DEAR ABBY: I have read many letters in your column concerning mothers who won't let go of their married sons. Among them are those who dislike their daughters-in-law without any real reason. Don't those mothers realize that they are the losers?

My sister-in-law tells me what my mother-in-law says about me, and it really hurts me. If I could write a letter to my mother-in-law, this is what I would say:

"Dear Mom: I'm always pleasantly surprised to meet someone who doesn't judge people by their race, religion, size or shape. I think to myself, 'How nicely the parent taught the child.' But it isn't always that way.

"It is not fair to be judged by one's appearance. Nor is it pleasant to be declared lazy, stupid, unworthy or unlovable. I don't know all the ugly things you think or say — only that you are willing to dismiss me as unsuitable.

"Make all the obnoxious, repulsive remarks you can think of. I will feel hurt — and I will cry. But I will ride the river of tears far away from you. And I will take your son and grandchildren with me.

"Judge me as you deem appropriate. The choice is yours."
 HURT IN TEXAS

DEAR HURT: A word about your sister-in-law who tells you all the ugly things her mother says about you: I am reminded of this bit of philosophy I memorized when I was very young: "It takes an enemy and a friend to hurt you to the quick. The enemy to badmouth you, and a 'friend' to tell you about it."

DEAR ABBY: I am a supervisor of a large business and regularly have to dispose of notes, reports, correspondence and files containing sensitive and confidential information. I take great pains to properly dispose of those materials; an office "snoop" would not find much of interest in my trash.

Even though dishonest employees could get little information of value to sell or use as grist for gossip, I would be interested in the fact that they had made an attempt. I would not overreact or confront the snoop. But from then on, I would lock the door to my office at night.

Royals work two-out magic against A's

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Hal McRae — and probably everyone else in Royals Stadium — was stunned by what he saw. Oakland manager Tony La Russa can only hope he never sees it again.

AL roundup

"It's incredible. It's really unbelievable," McRae said Wednesday night after the Royals scored nine runs after two were out in the first inning. "To get as many hits and runs like that all bunched together after two were out is just hard to believe."

When asked if the tablesetter for Kansas City's 13-8 victory was the longest inning of the year, La Russa paused for a moment.

"I can narrow it down," he said. "It was the longest last out of an inning."

Wally Joyner had two of his three hits and two RBIs in the inning. Fourteen Royals came to the plate. Every starter scored before it was over.

"Is that right?" asked McRae. "That's even more amazing."

After Troy Neel gave Oakland a 2-0 lead in the first with a two-run single, George Brett began Kansas City's two-out assault with a single. Joyner doubled, Mike Macfarlane singled, Chris Gwynn singled, Phil Hiatt walked, Greg Gagne singled, Chico Lind singled, Felix Jose singled, Brian McRae grounded into a fielder's choice that left all runners safe, Brett walked and Joyner singled before Macfarlane's grounder ended it.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was New York 11, Minnesota 6; Baltimore 6, Cleveland 3; Boston 10, Toronto 5; California 2, Chicago 0; Texas 4, Seattle 3; and Detroit 8, Milwaukee 6.

Joyner, Brett, Jose, Macfarlane, Gagne and Gwynn had two RBIs apiece for Kansas City, which finished with 14 hits.

Shawn Hillegas (1-4) was the loser.

"He didn't get ahead of a lot of those hitters, and it makes them better hitters when they're ahead in the count," La Russa said in somewhat of an understatement.

Tom Gordon (1-2) got the victory in relief. Jeff Montgomery got the final four outs for his 11th save.

"After the first inning, I really wasn't thinking I would get a save tonight," Montgomery said. "I didn't even think I'd get in the game. We may never see another game like this one in our lifetime."

The Athletics scored twice in the eighth on Brent Gates' first major-league homer and an RBI single by Mike Bordick. He had three hits and three RBIs.

Red Sox 10, Blue Jays 5

Red Sox killer Dave Stewart was pounded in his comeback from an arm injury, allowing 10 runs, seven hits and five walks in 1 2-3 innings as Boston beat Toronto at Fenway Park.

Stewart (1-1) had won 13 straight decisions against the Red Sox before losing his last start against them last season to Danny Darwin. Stewart then left Oakland as a free agent. He was beaten again by Darwin on Wednesday.

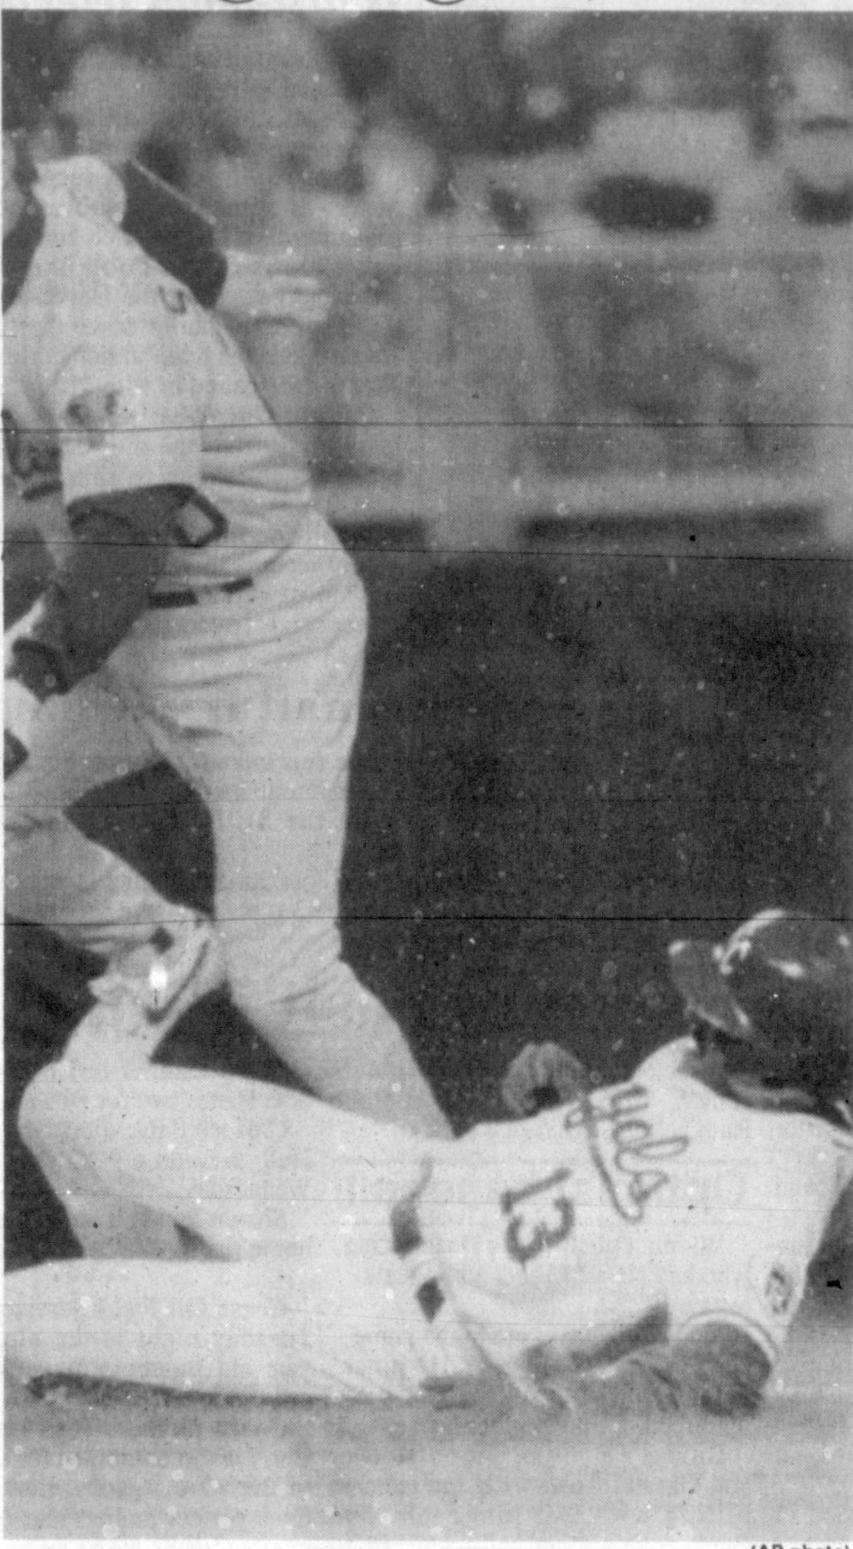

Darwin (4-4) won his fourth straight start, but had a 20-inning scoreless string stopped on John Olerud's RBI single in the fourth. He allowed six hits, including three doubles by Joe Carter, who had four hits.

Stewart (0-1) began the season on the disabled list with a torn muscle in his right forearm. He pitched 3 2-3 shutout innings Thursday against Detroit.

Orioles 6, Indians 3

David Segui and Sherman Obando had three hits and three RBIs apiece, leading Baltimore over punchless Cleveland.

Obando had two singles, his first big-league homer and first three-RBI game. Segui had three doubles and his first three-RBI game since 1991.

The Royals' Chico Lind, right, slides into third, beating a tag by the A's Kevin Seitzer Wednesday night in the first inning.

'Super line' has anglers hooked

After hearing rumors about a new "super line," I finally laid my hands on a single 100-yard spool. The key ingredient is something called Spectra fiber. Developed in Germany and now produced under license by Allied Signal, Spectra fibers are braided into a revolutionary new fishing line.

Unlike popular monofilament lines, this new line has virtually no stretch or reel memory. It is very sensitive, super strong, and very thin. The forty pound line has a diameter similar to most 12 lb. monofilament. This line comes in several sizes including 35, 40, 70, or 80 pound. It is so abrasion resistant that a nail clipper can barely cut it, and anglers are warned against trying to cut it by biting. Sounds too good to be true, doesn't it?

Remember the good old days of setting the hook hard enough to "cross their eyes"? This new line has virtually no stretch, and anglers are warned to modify their hook set or risk breaking those high-dollar graphite rods. My package also suggested anglers should "carry a small dowel to wrap line around when trying to free" hung up lures.

Several major companies are working overtime in order to supply eager anglers with this new line. It will soon be available in quality tackle stores and major catalogs under several brand names including Lazer or Tuf line.

Anchor Marine in Amarillo received a small, preview supply called Lazer Line from the Phantom Products and quickly sold out. This new line will not be cheap but it should out-fish that old kinky stuff that lays coiled on our reels. When you get some, let me know what you think and we will share your views with our other readers, okay?

"Gamefish live in an eat-or-be-eaten world; if something acts like it is hurt, something else will eat it. That's why your lures need to change directions, pause, or bump into something," according to leading professional angler Gary Klein of Dallas. Klein is an expert with the finesse baits, those tiny plastic baits that are used to catch the wary bass that reside in clear water lakes. Next time the fish stop biting during a normal weekend of heavy fishing pressure, try using some smaller lures on lighter lines and catch a few extra fish.

What is the GUN CONTROL position of candidate Bob Krueger or candidate Kay Hutchinson? One of them will become Senator and then could cast the deciding vote.

Glavine hurls four-hit shutout as Braves slip by Expos, 1-0

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves pitching staff is living up to its reputation.

Tom Glavine pitched a four-hitter for Atlanta's sixth shutout, and the Braves beat the Expos 1-0 Wednesday night on Ron Gant's second-inning homer.

"This is the way I want to pitch all year long," Glavine said. "It was a big game for me after coming off two miserable starts."

Glavine had given up 11 earned runs in 9 1-3 innings in his two previous outings, getting a no-decision and pitching five innings in a 10-7 victory.

"I think I had been trying to be too perfect," said Glavine, who hadn't thrown a shutout since last July 3. "Tonight I attacked. I threw strikes and got some spectacular defense."

It was only Glavine's fourth victory in 15 decisions against Montreal, and the first time the visiting Expos were blanked this year.

NL roundup

"He's one of the best pitchers in the league," Montreal manager Felipe Alou said. "This was our first shutout of the season, but we hit the ball hard."

In other games, New York beat Pittsburgh 6-4 in 10 innings, Florida beat Philadelphia 5-3, Chicago beat St. Louis 5-3, San Diego beat Colorado 7-3, Los Angeles beat Cincinnati 5-2 and San Francisco beat Houston 6-3.

Glavine (6-0), who won his first five decisions in 1989, struck out three and walked one as the Braves won for the 10th time in 13 games.

"I haven't seen a game like that, where we hit the ball so hard, but right at somebody," Expos outfielder Larry Walker said.

Glavine needed just 94 pitches for his 11th career shutout and 25th complete game.

Mets 6, Pirates 4

In Jeff Torborg's last game as manager of New York, the Mets rallied with three runs in the ninth and Bobby Bonilla's two-run homer in the 10th off Blas Minor (4-1). That stopped New York's five-game losing streak, but Torborg already was a goner because of the Mets' last-place 13-25 record.

Less than a half-hour after the game, Mets general manager Al

Harazin appeared at a Shea Stadium news conference and replaced Torborg with Dallas Green, a former manager of Philadelphia and the New York Yankees. Green, who had been a Mets scout, will take over before Friday night's game against the Atlanta Braves.

John Franco was the winner in his first decision this year.

Marlins 5, Phillies 3

A two-out error by Philadelphia second baseman Mickey Morandini led to three unearned runs in the seventh as the Marlins rallied. Florida, which had been 0-16 when trailing after six innings, avoided its first series sweep.

Morandini bobbled Junior Felix's easy grounder with runners at first and second. Chuck Carr then walked on a 3-2 pitch from Mark Davis (1-2), forcing in a run and tying the game at 3. Rich Renteria put Florida ahead with a two-run single.

Richie Lewis (2-0) pitched two scoreless innings at Joe Robbie Stadium, and Bryan Harvey got four outs for his 12th save in 13 chances.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3

Mark Grace snapped an eighth-inning tie with a run-scoring single at St. Louis.

Reliever Rob Murphy (1-4) helped the Cubs get started, covering the bag late on pinch-hitter Willie Wilson's leadoff infield hit and then throwing late to second on Jose Vizcaino's sacrifice. After Grace's hit, Ryne Sandberg added a sacrifice fly off Mike Perez.

St. Louis rallied from a 3-1 deficit off

Mike Morgan (3-6), who gave up three runs and eight hits in seven innings.

Padres 7, Rockies 3

Greg Harris (4-5) won his third straight start despite giving up three home runs as San Diego got six runs and 12 hits in 4 1-3 innings off Lance Painter, a former Padres farmhand making his major-league debut.

Harris finished with a six-hitter and his second straight complete game. He struck out five and walked two.

Daryl Boston had visiting Colorado's first two-homer game with leadoff drives in the fourth and sixth innings.

Dodgers 5, Reds 2

Tom Candiotti (2-4) put Los Angeles ahead 3-2 with a run-scoring single in the sixth inning.

"The WTSU soccer program has done well in its first two seasons and has far exceeded the expectations," said Chandler. "There was no doubt in my mind that we should offer coach Lauffer an extension."

Lauffer, who will be the guest speaker at the Texas High School Coaches Convention held in Fort Worth on July 26-28, has guided the Bootin' Buff program since its inception in 1991 and compiled a 17-19-2 record.

Rockets want one more chance at Sonics

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets want one more chance at Seattle Coliseum.

The Rockets roared into the old building Tuesday night after two impressive home victories over the Seattle SuperSonics in their Western Conference playoff series only to lose 120-95.

Now they trail 3-2 and must win Thursday night in The Summit or be eliminated. A seventh game, if necessary, would return to Seattle on Saturday.

"We've had some great games on the road this year and I still believe we have one more in us," Rockets' guard Scott Brooks said. "We've got to take care of business in Game 6 and give ourselves one more shot in this building."

No team has won a road game in the best-of-7 series.

"At home, there's momentum and intensity and so far in the series, it's been the home team," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "We've got to go home and do it and then break them in Seattle."

The Rockets won by 18 and 11 points in their two home games and thought they had momentum for Game 5. Instead, the Sonics, against a backdrop of their supportive fans, responded with the biggest blowout of the series.

The tense game broke into a bench-clearing brawl that involved both coaches when Brooks and Sonics guard Nate McMillan were ejected late in the third quarter.

Tomjanovich shook a finger at Seattle's Shawn Kemp and Rockets forward Otis Thorpe went jaw to jaw with Seattle coach George Karl.

The Rockets' Scott Brooks, shown guarding Nate McMillan in Tuesday's game, believes his team can respond with one more great road game.

Owner faced with impossible task as Indy 500 draws near

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mathematics and time are against owner Dale Coyne at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The final weekend of time trials for the Indianapolis 500 is only two days away and Coyne is faced with the impossible task of placing three drivers in two cars.

All three drivers are injured from four crashes and a fire which plagued the team's effort to join the 26 cars that qualified last weekend for the 33-car starting field.

Coyne, who runs a low budget operation on the Indy-car circuit, had two cars destroyed in accidents 29 minutes apart Wednesday. The crashes by Eric Bachelart of Belgium and rookie Robby Buhl came exactly one week after Buhl and Coyne's third driver, rookie Ross Bentley, crashed during practice.

"This is definitely a setback for us. The morale on the team is probably not as high as it could be," Coyne said. "We just have to pick up the pieces, maybe combine some programs."

Bachelart, who made the race last year as a rookie, lost control of his car in the first turn at about 11:15 a.m. He struck the wall hard twice and the safety crew had to cut Bachelart out of his Lola. He was released, but not cleared to drive, after being taken to Methodist Hospital for examination and treatment.

"He has bruises to his heels, ankles and knees, and a very sore neck," Coyne said. "He's got a neck brace on. ... He's very sore. He's had some torn ligaments in his knees before, and his knees are very sore."

Buhl, who was idle for a week after sustaining a concussion in his first crash, was able to walk away from the second accident.

"He seems to be fine. His spirits are down, naturally, as everyone's (on the team) are. It seems like this month has kind of bitten us pretty hard," Coyne said.

Several drivers already in the tentative starting field practiced with race day setups Wednesday. The day's 10 fastest laps were recorded by drivers already in the May 30 race.

Emerson Fittipaldi, who qualified in what was his backup car, had his fastest lap this month at 226.051 mph in his primary car. Arie Luyendyk, who placed his Lola-Ford Cosworth on the pole with a 223.967 mph average for his four-lap, 10-mile qualifying run, had a lap at 225.898.

Others topping 220 were Scott Brayton, Raul Boesel, Teo Fabi, Mario Andretti, Scott Goodyear, defending champion Al Unser Jr., Nelson Piquet and Stefan Johansson.

The fast laps by drivers hoping to qualify included Olivier Grouillard, 219.571; Eddie Cheever, 219.272; Jim Crawford, 219.266; and Geoff Brabham, 216.164.

Coyne was hoping to have two of his cars on the list before the weekend.

"Eric, we're hoping to get him back into a car," Coyne said. "We'll have to see if he's ready, physically."

Bentley also was expected to drive today for the first time since he received first- and second-degree burns to the hands, neck and face when his car caught fire on Friday after a fuel regulator split open.

Five Harvesters named all-district in baseball

Record-setting West is first-team selection

The Pampa Harvesters had five players named to the 1-4A all-district baseball team, including all four of their seniors.

Chris Poole received second-team honors as a pitcher. Poole was 7-5 this season with a 4.43 earned run average and 42 strike outs. Poole threw five complete games for the Harvesters and was their go-to hurler down the stretch. He also led the team in home runs with six and runs batted in with 31.

Catcher Kurt West was named first-team all-district, the only Harvester to receive that distinction this year. West led the team in innings played, runs, hits and doubles. He also set three school records this year for most career hits, most career doubles and highest career contact average.

Matt Finney picked up second-team honors for his play at first base. Finney lead the Harvesters with a .407 batting average and a .961 fielding average. He also pounded out a surprising four homers.

Second baseman Brad Smillie was also named to the second team. Smillie lead the team in walks and defensive assists and was in the top four in doubles (10), runs scored (21) and stolen bases (10).

The sole underclassman selected to either team from the Harvesters was junior Tony Cavalier, also named to the second team. Cavalier played center and left field for Pampa, batting .303 with nine doubles and 11 stolen bases.

Bankers cash in runs against Bowers

First National downed Bowers Ranch, 10-6, Wednesday in Babe Ruth action at Optimist Park.

Optimist baseball

Winning pitcher was Duane King, who had six strikeouts while walking two.

Blaine Northcutt came in the game and pitched three innings. He struck out four and walked four. King gave up three hits and Northcutt five.

Brooks Ferguson, Jerrod Hoover and Gabriel Cowan led the team in hitting with two hits each. The Bankers as a team had eight hits to improve their record to 2-1.

Casey Danner had three hits and Seth Hanes two for Bowers.

Citizens Bank slipped by McCarty Hull, 9-8, in a 9-10 year-old game Wednesday.

Shawn Pope hit an inside-the-park home run for McCarty Hull.

Chase Oil Field Service beat IRI Tuesday night in the nine and 10 year old Bambino division at Optimist Park.

Chase pitchers Josh Larkin and Chris Jewitt combined for a no-hitter in the 10-0 victory. Larkin threw three perfect innings and Jewitt surrendered four walks in two innings of relief.

IRI also had good pitching performances from Travis Lancaster, Adam Jones and Marcus Ross, who combined for 15 strikeouts in the game. Ross lead the way with nine K's in three innings of work.

Offensively for Chase, Larkin racked up three hits and scored three times and David Jenkins reached base three times and scored a run.

With the victory, Chase improves to 2-0 on the season. They'll face McCarty Hull at 5:30 Friday night.

IRI evens their record at 1-1 and faces Holmes Gift Shop at 7:30 Monday night.

Jerrod Hoover, right, of First National Bank rounds the bases in a Babe Ruth contest Wednesday night.

Mrs. Clinton is investor in fund with health care stocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton, who heads President Clinton's health care reform task force, holds a stake in a fund that has invested more than $1 million in health care company stocks. But she and the president are "moving toward" putting their assets in a blind trust they cannot control.

Documents show that Mrs. Clinton owns a 0.9 percent share, valued at between $50,001 and $100,000, in a special growth fund managed by Smith Capital Management Inc. of Little Rock, Ark.

The fund through Dec. 31 had invested $1.2 million in stocks of 10 health care companies such as hospital corporations and medical equipment makers. The fund had total investments of $8.9 million.

Rowland Smith, vice president of Smith Capital, said Mrs. Clinton is an investor in the fund. As a limited partner, she has no control over the investments but is apprised of the fund's performance, Smith said.

Mrs. Clinton's investment and a list of the stocks were disclosed on financial forms released by the White House this week.

White House spokeswoman Ricki

Seidman said Wednesday that Mrs. Clinton "owns ... less than 1 percent in this mutual fund. She is a limited partner and has absolutely no control over the investments that are made by this fund."

As a result, she said, the investments create no potential for conflict of interest.

Seidman said that although not legally required to do so, the Clintons "have been moving toward putting" their assets into blind trusts that they cannot control. Previous presidents have done so to avoid the appearance of conflict.

Beth Nolan, associate counsel to the president, said the Clintons' attorneys have submitted documents to the Office of Government Ethics with a view to setting up blind trusts.

If Mrs. Clinton was on the government payroll, ethics regulations might force her to get rid of any holdings that would pose a conflict of interest, a government official said Wednesday. Mrs. Clinton is unpaid in her role as head of the president's health care task force.

If she were a government official, her health-related investments

"might be an issue," said Gary Davis, a spokesman for the federal Office of Government Ethics. "It's the kind of issue that at some point you'd have to deal with it."

Charles Lewis of the government watchdog group Center for Public Integrity said White House attorneys "should have advised (Mrs. Clinton) to further distance herself" from the investments.

"In terms of appearance, whatever (proposal) she introduces is going to be controversial. This doesn't exactly bolster her credibility," Lewis said.

Other health care companies that the Smith fund invested in included

Columbia Hospital Corp.; Bioplasty Inc., a maker of plastic surgical devices and implants; Health Care & Retirement Corp. of Toledo, Ohio; National Rehabilitation Centers Inc. of Brentwood, Tenn.; and United Healthcare Corp. of Minnetonka, Minn., which operates health maintenance organizations.

In 1991, the fund had several other health investments, including stocks in pharmaceutical giants Bristol-Myers Squibb and Merck & Co. Inc., according to the campaign disclosure form Clinton filed in May 1992.

The reports show Mrs. Clinton earned between $5,001 and $15,000 in dividends, interest and capital gains from the fund last year and another $1,000 to $2,500 in 1991.

Like other federal officials and members of Congress, the president is required only to report values of his family's assets in broad ranges rather than specific figures. The Clintons on Monday reported between $534,000 and $1.7 million in assets last year, most belonging to Mrs. Clinton.

The president appointed his wife to head the 500-member task force, which is expected to present its proposals for a massive overhaul of the nation's health care system next month.

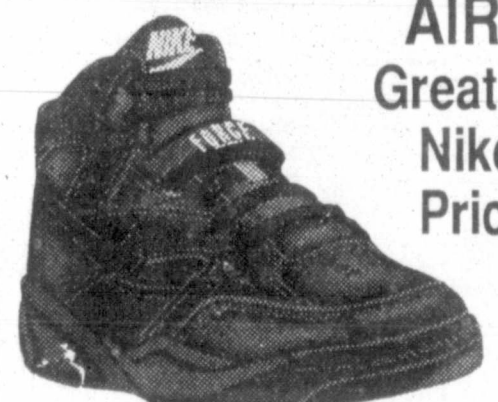

Smith said Mrs. Clinton's fund is described as a "special growth" fund because it buys shares in small and medium-sized companies and also engages in short-selling of stocks.

Short-selling is a technique used by investors who believe a stock's price is about to go down. The short-seller sells stock he does not yet own, but is able to borrow from a broker. He then delivers the borrowed shares to the buyer, collects payment and waits for the price to fall. Once it falls, he buys shares at the lower price and gives them to the broker to replace those he borrowed.
