City Manager Glen Hackler resigns Midland job next on agenda

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

City Manager Glen Hackler announced his resignation today to take the position of assistant city manager of Midland beginning June 5.

"I cannot begin to sufficiently express my heartfelt appreciation to the citizens of Pampa for allowing me to serve as city manager of this community for the past 3 1/2 years," Hackler said. "Teri and I will always have a very special place in our hearts for Pampa."

In attendance at the announcement were Teri Hackler, Glen's wife, Mayor Richard Peet and Pampa School Superintendent Dawson Orr. Orr was there as a friend of the Hacklers and not as a representative of the school district.

In his resignation statement, Hackler thanked the city commission members for their support.

"I am especially grateful to the Pampa City Commission . . . for giving me support and providing me the opportunity to be city manager," Hackler said. "It has been an honor to be city manager of Pampa."

The members of the current city commission were also the members of the city commission which first hired Hackler.

Commissioners will meet June 1 in special session to discuss finding a replacement for Hackler.

"We're going to meet next Tuesday, simply as a (brain)storming session to lay out on the table our thoughts," Peet said.

The meeting will not be a planning session for hiring a new city manager, according to Peet.

"I just want to get feedback from the other members, (ask) what their thoughts are and ask them how we should approach this," he said. "None of the members of this commission desired for him to leave. If anything, they were a little upset because they hated to see him leave."

Hackler's wife, Teri, said she had mixed feelings about leaving Pampa. She said the city had become a home and in years to come, they would think of it that way.

"I'm really excited for the opportunities that exist for both of us there," Teri said. "We know that God has been involved in this process the entire time and we know this door has opened for us and we're being obedient to Him."

In Midland, Hackler's wife will be working as an elementary school teacher with the Midland Independent School District. In addition, she will be considering an intern position as an elementary school's principal.

Hackler has been city manager of Pampa for the past 3 1/2 years. Before that, he was Pampa's assistant city manager for 1 1/2 years.

Some of the projects Hackler seemed to be proudest of during his service to the city include the completion of Hidden Hills Public Golf Course, the construction of Recreation Park, the passage of three multi-issue election items, the securing of a prison for Pampa and the development of Pampa on the "cutting-edge" of solid waste industries.

"He has gained a lot of experience here, and not at the expense of the people of Pampa," Peet said. "I think he has been an asset."

One of the accomplishments Peet said was due to Hackler's influence was the working relationship the city commissioners and mayor have with the city offices and departments.

Hackler said he does not believe there would be a problem going from the position of city manager to that of assistant city manager.

"I don't have a tremendous ego," he said. "I view my job very importantly and know that there are going to be challenges. I think I'll be overwhelmed by the challenges enough that I will not have time to think about not being city manager."

The city of Midland operates with a budget of $70 million and employs 850 people.

Hackler was selected from 127 people who applied for the job.

Hopkins follows father's footsteps

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

Marshall Hopkins, the son of a man who served on the original Grandview-Hopkins school board, has been elected president of that board.

Hopkins, a Grandview-area farmer in his early 30s, has been a school board member since 1990.

Marshall Hopkins' father, Jim Hopkins, served on the original school board of Grandview-Hopkins. That school board first convened in 1973 after the consolidation of Grandview and Hopkins independent school districts.

The election of Marshall Hopkins as president of the school board occurred at a specially called meeting on May 4, said Norman W. Baxter, superintendent of Grandview-Hopkins schools, who related news about the school board meetings held earlier this month.

Also at that meeting, the Grandview-Hopkins board elected Bill Ragsdale, 46, a farmer and the owner of Farmers Equipment Inc., as vice president. Ragsdale has been a member of the school board since May 1982.

Troy Ritter, 37, a farmer, was elected secretary. Ritter has been a member of the school board since March 1983.

The term for each of the board officer positions is one year.

Also at the May 4 meeting, newly elected board member John Mark Baggerman and incumbents Bill Ragsdale and Melvin Wills were sworn in as board members.

Baggerman, 33, is a Groom-area farmer. Ragsdale, has held his position on the Grandview-Hopkins school board for 12 years. Wills, 53, a Groom-area farmer, has been a board member since February 1993.

At a May 14 meeting, the board heard a report from Baxter concerning the district's finances.

Baxter said today that "there's been a lot of rumors going around that we're going to close, and that is not true." Baxter noted that the school district on its own would not choose consolidation, and that the legislative proposal calling for massive consolidation of school districts in Texas apparently has died.

Also at the May 14 meeting, the Grandview-Hopkins school board:

- Approved a calendar for the 1993-94 school year that is substantially the same as the one for the 1992-93 school year. The school calendar for the 1993-94 school year offers two early-release days for parent-teacher conferences, while the calendar for the 1992-93 school year offered no such early-release days.
- Opened four bids for financial audit services for the fiscal year ending in August of 1993 and directed the superintendent to evaluate the bids and make a recommendation to the board at the next regularly scheduled meeting.

The bids ranged from $2,500 to $4,200. The bidders were Billy Baker of Borger; Charles Gary Morrow of Borger; Brown, Graham and Company of Shamrock; and Brown and Grantham, PC, of Pampa.

- Approved the appointment of Jacki Lamberson of Grandview as a substitute teacher for the district. The appointment raises to six the number of substitute teachers for the Grandview-Hopkins school district.

Grandview-Hopkins school district offers classes in kindergarten through sixth grade.

The Grandview-Hopkins school board is expected to hold its next regularly scheduled meeting beginning at 8 p.m. June 8 in the school cafeteria.

School officials to meet over graduation uproar

Pampa school board is scheduled to hold a special meeting today to determine its response to pending litigation concerning the Pampa High School graduation ceremony.

The special school board meeting is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. in the board conference room of the central administration building, 321 West Albert St.

A group of Pampa High seniors who did not pass their exit-level TAAS test have obtained a restraining order from 223rd District Court Judge Lee Waters that would permit them to participate in the PHS graduation ceremony on Saturday.

State law requires that public high school students in Texas pass the exit-level TAAS test in order to receive a high school diploma. The students who did not pass the test are seeking the right to walk on stage along with the procession of graduating seniors.

In all, 14 PHS seniors did not pass their exit-level Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test; six of the 14 have filed the lawsuit.

Pampa Independent School District is expected to offer its response to the lawsuit at a court hearing that has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday in 223rd District Court on the third floor of Gray County Courthouse.

Senate approves school funding plan

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate voted 25-6 today for a school funding plan that would give property-rich school districts several options for sharing some of their wealth with poor districts.

Senators applauded after the vote for the bill, which is meant to meet a court order to equalize funding available to school districts of differing property wealth.

Lawmakers have a Tuesday deadline for approving a plan and avoiding a threatened court cutoff of state education aid. School districts rely on state money and local property tax.

"I absolutely believe that this comes as close as humanly possible to meeting the (court) test," said Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

House approval is still required for the bill.

Earlier, Gov. Ann Richards hailed the plan.

"I feel good about it, and I hope very much that the court feels good about it," Richards said Wednesday.

"This (plan) gives them options for action that better suits their particular circumstances rather than being given a plan that is essentially a mandate for one course of action," Richards added.

A House-Senate conference committee agreed Tuesday on the compromise bill, which still must be printed and signed by negotiators.

Some school districts have criticized the multiple option plan and have said they will challenge it in court.

"I think that no matter what system, or what plan we put together it would have been challenged by someone," Richards said. "I think the disagreement is based not so much on the system as it is on the amount of money appropriated."

The Texas Supreme Court has ordered lawmakers to come up with a plan to even out funding available to school districts with differing property wealth.

The compromise bill is aimed at ensuring none of Texas' 1,048 school districts has more than $280,000 in property wealth per student.

It would give the 109 school districts that exceed that level a choice of options for reducing their wealth.

The options include merging tax bases with poorer school districts, sending money to the state to educate students in poorer districts, contracting with other districts or voluntary consolidation.

Voter approval would be required for the first three options.

Richards praised several points of the legislation, including limits on administrative costs and report cards on the performance of schools to be sent to taxpayers.

Richards said she was disappointed there would not be funding for a teacher pay raise in the education package. But she agreed with lawmakers who felt any additional funding should be available to work out kinks in the new school funding plan.

If school districts didn't choose one of the options provided by the state, the state education commissioner would order commercial taxable property to be moved. If that didn't sufficiently reduce the district's property wealth, there would be forced consolidation.

Lawmakers Tuesday agreed to add some education and regulatory relief issues to the funding measure, but to set aside such controversial proposals as easing the no pass, no play rule that bars failing students from extracurricular activities.

Those ideas are expected to be addressed by another conference committee in separate legislation, lawmakers said.

"I do not know if there will be adequate time to address those issues or not in this session," Richards said. "As it stands, if there is no further action taken, that means they will remain the same as current law, which I think is the best course."

One in five at Brownsville fail TAAS, can't graduate

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Graduation has become a bitter time for many students in Brownsville, where 20 percent of high school seniors won't get a diploma next month because they failed a standardized state test.

The school district announced a final decision Wednesday to prohibit students who failed the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test from participating in graduation ceremonies.

Only 7.4 percent of high school seniors statewide failed the test, compared to 20 percent — or 386 students — in Brownsville.

Meanwhile, Superintendent Esperanza Zendejas has come under criticism because she has twice failed the state exam for superintendents.

The Brownsville Herald reported today that she worked for seven months as Brownsville superintendent before applying for state certification.

A Texas Education Agency official said teachers and administrators coming to Texas from other states, as Zendejas did, have 60 days to apply for temporary certification. They then have a year to pass the superintendent's exam.

Zendejas was hired to the $100,000-per-year post in April 1992. She plans to take the superintendent's exam a third time in June.

Many students who failed the TAAS have objected to Zendejas' suggestion that they consider taking the General Educational Development high school equivalency exam.

"We're not going to give up and take the GED. We're not going to give up 12 years of education," said Pace High School senior Noemi Molina. "The GED is no option."

This is the first year students have had to score 70 percent on all three parts of the TAAS test. Last year, 60 percent was a passing score.

The school district will offer TAAS remedial classes this summer. Seniors have another chance to pass in mid-July, or again next school year.

The school district offered summer classes to prepare the 240 students who failed the TAAS last year.

"But only 55 passed. The concern I have is, what happened to the other 185 kids?" Zendejas said. "I'm concerned about the kids who fail the test five times. What do we do with those kids?"

SPS: 'Watch up for safety'

Ball fields are filling up; yard work is in full force; the skies are full of severe weather. All are signs of spring.

With the increase of outdoor activities that comes with spring, Southwestern Public Service Co. reminds its customers to "watch up for safety."

One of the places where many electrical accidents occur is the farm, according to Ronnie Walker, SPS Panhandle Division safety and claims specialist. "What happens quite often is that people forget to look up when they're lifting irrigation pipes or other metal pieces," he said. "It's important to always 'watch up' and know where the electric lines are."

Walker said the same warning applies to others who are on the job, particularly those who are working above street level. "Roofers need to be extra careful as they move equipment," he said. "Those trimming trees also have to be careful; that extra height could be just enough to get them entangled in lines."

Customers also need to be careful during severe weather that often occurs in spring.

"If an outage occurs at your home during a storm," Walker said, "call your local SPS 'repair or 'service' number listed in the phone book." SPS area control centers have extra employees on hand to answer the calls and to quickly dispatch SPS crews to correct the problem and restore service, he added.

If you see a fallen power line on the ground, call SPS and keep people away from the line. Do not touch the line or anything it is touching, such as a car or fence, Walker said.

Many of the service problems that occur during a storm can be blamed on fallen tree limbs or on lightning. Besides causing outages, lightning can also be dangerous to people involved in outdoor activities. If you are outdoors as a lightning storm approaches, remember that trees do not protect you from lightning and, in fact, attract it. Your best bet is to seek a location that is flat and barren, he said.

Parents should take the time to caution their children to avoid electrical facilities when playing outdoors. Fly kites and model airplanes in open areas, far from power lines. If a ball is hit over a neighborhood substation fence, don't try to retrieve the ball yourself; call the electric company, Walker said.

For additional information on electrical safety, contact your local SPS office.

Pulitzer dies at 80

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joseph Pulitzer Jr., scion of one of the most prestigious families in journalism and former editor and publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, has died. He was 80.

Pulitzer, who died Wednesday of cancer at his home, headed the Pulitzer empire's flagship newspaper for 31 years and took the new title of chairman of the Pulitzer Publishing Co. in 1979.

Under his guidance, Pulitzer Publishing grew into a multimedia operation with newspapers in three states and seven TV stations and two radio stations around the country.

He also served from 1955 to 1986 as chairman of the board of the Pulitzer Prizes, established by his grandfather Joseph Pulitzer.

"Joseph Pulitzer cast a long shadow over St. Louis journalism and the arts for half a century," said his half-brother, Michael E. Pulitzer, president and chief executive of Pulitzer Publishing.

"Joe was a worthy inheritor of the great Pulitzer tradition," said Katharine Graham, chairman of The Washington Post Co. "He carried it on in the pages of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It was, and is, a beacon of enlightened thought."

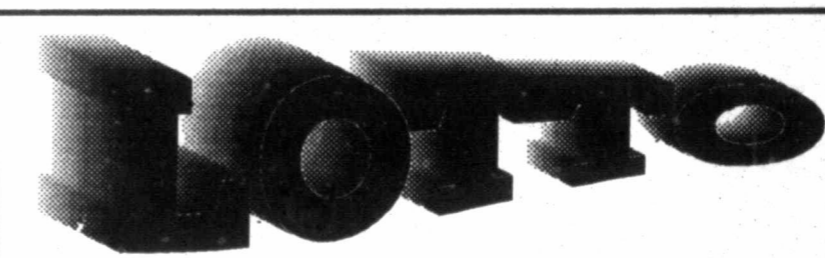

Pulitzer was born in 1913 and baptized Joseph Pulitzer III. He later adopted the "Jr." designation.

The first Joseph Pulitzer founded the Post-Dispatch in 1878 and later acquired the old New York World. The second Joseph Pulitzer expanded the Post-Dispatch's reputation.

Sorry Susan!

NEW YORK (AP) — Yes, Susan Lucci lost for the 14th time.

But Luke and Laura are back! Lucci, who has played the tempestuous Erica Kane on ABC's "All My Children" for 23 years, lost the Emmy Award for best daytime actress Wednesday night to Linda Dano, who stars as Felicia Gallant on NBC's "Another World."

"Mama, I did it," Dano exulted. Lucci, who has never won despite 14 nominations but usually steals the show anyway, was upstaged at the 20th annual ceremony by the surprise announcement that the most popular soap couple in history will be back this fall.

Genie Francis and Anthony Geary will be reunited as Laura Baldwin and Luke Spencer on ABC's "General Hospital" this fall. The characters' 1981 wedding remains the most-watched event in the history of daytime television.

"I felt it was time to go back," said Francis, who most recently played Ceara on "All My Children." She left "General Hospital" in 1984. Geary, who will reprise his role as Luke, now plays Luke's cousin Bill Eckert on "GH."

As for Lucci — who has made a second career of her perennial losses, including self-mocking commercials for artificial sweeteners — she said backstage that she was "disappointed, certainly. I would have loved to have won."

Asked what it will take for her to win, she responded: "When you find out you tell me."

She vowed not to abandon her alter ego, despite her successful forays into TV movies. "Erica Kane really has my heart," she said. "I can't walk away from her."

"The Young and the Restless" on CBS was named best drama series, defeating last year's winner, "All My Children."

David Canary from "All My Children" won as best lead actor for playing twin brothers Adam and Stuart Chandler. It was his fourth daytime Emmy, the most ever won by an individual.

Oprah Winfrey won for the third time as best talk show host, and her show won two other Emmys this year, including technical awards presented May 22.

"This is three in a row. This is good," Winfrey joked backstage.

"Good Morning America" on ABC was named best talk show, defeating "Donahue," "Live with Regis and Kathie Lee," "The Oprah Winfrey Show" and PBS' "This Old House."

Pat Sajak was named best game show host for "Wheel of Fortune" and "Jeopardy!" won as best game show.

Among other winners were Gerald Anthony, who was named best supporting actor as Marco Dane on "General Hospital," and Ellen Parker, who won as best supporting actress for the role of Maureen Bauer on "Guiding Light" — even though her character was killed off.

(AP Photo) Soap opera queen Susan Lucci smiles Wednesday despite being passed over for an Emmy Award.

Monti Sharp, who plays David Grant on "Guiding Light," was honored as best younger actor. Heather Tom won as best younger actress for the role of Victoria Newman on "The Young and the Restless."

Including the previously announced technical awards, CBS stars and shows received a total of 19 awards. PBS got nine, ABC seven and NBC three. Seven winners were syndicated. The Fox network won three.

Douglas Marland, a soap-opera writer who died recently, was honored with a posthumous lifetime achievement award. Marland, former head writer for "As the World Turns" and co-creator of "Loving," began his writing career in the 1970s at "Another World."

Winners were selected by members of the the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, and the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences.

Clinton health package to offer choice of plans

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's health package will offer Americans a choice of three types of plans and require everyone, including the poor, to pay something toward their own care, a senior administration official says.

The choices will be among fee-for-service coverage and two types of managed care — a health maintenance organization or a so-called preferred provider organization — said the official, who spoke Wednesday on condition of anonymity.

The three choices will have the same actuarial value, with the main differences being how much consumers would pay out of pocket in copayments and deductibles, the source said in an interview.

The deductibles may range from nothing for the person who joins an HMO to $200 for those who want fee-for-service medicine with no restrictions on which doctors they use, the official said.

In preferred provider organizations, the deductibles are lower if a patient chooses a doctor on the plan's pre-approved list and higher if the person elects to go elsewhere for care.

Meanwhile, President Clinton said today he wants to phase in a broad reform package "worth having" rather than giving people more limited protection "that's not worth a nickel."

Clinton, in a Rose Garden interview on CBS, said he did not buy the argument of some economic advisers who "say we ought to have just a major medical coverage and protect people from disaster."

"What I want to do is phase in the coverage, but when you give it to people, give them something that's worth having, that really gives family security," he said.

"I think the American people would rather see phase it in and ... do it right," the president added, rather than "do it overnight but give them something that's not worth a nickel."

The benefit package will be comprehensive and "above average" compared with the insurance most Americans have today, "but it's not going to be a Cadillac," the official said.

The copayments may be higher for prescription drug coverage and mental health than for other medical services, the official indicated.

Everyone, even the poor, will be asked to contribute something towards his or her own insurance, even if it is as little as a 50-cent copayment. "There should be some personal responsibility in this whole thing," the official said.

But the government also will subsidize copayments for low-income people, the source added.

The official, who is closely involved with the preparation of the White House package, also said:

—Clinton is likely to make the final decisions early next week. He still intends to unveil the package in mid-June after consulting with congressional leaders and others.

—Temporary cost controls on the health industry remain a possibility to keep costs from spiraling further out of control before the president's long-range reforms kick in.

"We're kind of caught between a rock and a hard place," the official said. "We are still looking at the possibility of some mandatory control ... (or) voluntary control with a trigger .. or we may not do anything."

—Clinton still is weighing whether to make all employers pay a percentage of their payroll for health insurance or pay a per-worker premium. If he opts for a percentage of payroll, it would only be taken out of wages up to $57,000, the same as Social Security.

—Workers with "esoteric" coverage above the guaranteed package such as insurance for cosmetic surgery may have to pay for it with after-tax dollars.

—The administration is aiming to achieve universal coverage sometime around 1996 or 1997.

—The administration will try to recapture the savings that hospitals and other providers will enjoy from having fewer charity cases to deal with. "We are looking at trying to recapture that windfall to reapply to the transition for the uninsured," the official said.

—The Clinton plan will include a higher tax on tobacco.

Toy store holdup probe nets arrests

EL PASO (AP) — A botched toy store robbery has resulted in the arrests of three men who may have been involved in a series of skillfully executed holdups in three states, police say.

The men, arrested following the bungled robbery at a Toys R Us that culminated in a hostage situation, used methods similar to those of a gang believed responsible for as many as 16 robberies in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, police Capt. George DeAngelis said Wednesday.

DeAngelis said El Paso police are contacting authorities in the other states to determine if Fabian Gutierrez, Jorge Rivas and Giovanni Novella were involved in criminal activity there. "We're in contact with them right now ... and I'm sure they'll be interested," DeAngelis said.

Gutierrez, 26, Rivas, 23, and Novella, 25, all of El Paso, were being held Wednesday on aggravated robbery charges stemming from the toy store holdup attempt Tuesday night. Bond was set at $50,000 each.

DeAngelis said charges may be pending in at least two other El Paso robberies.

Rivas and Novella were arrested and seven Toys R Us employees were freed early Wednesday by SWAT team officers who raided the store after a three-hour standoff.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information for our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

'Bleeding' isn't a cure for our ills

Listening to President Clinton and his advisors, and to most of the political chatter in most of the media, creates the distinct impression that within our dominant political culture, the understanding of political and social sciences is about where the understanding of medicine was in Western Europe during medieval times. Doctors for many centuries believed quite seriously that bleeding — drawing out a sick person's blood — was a good way to cure any number of diseases. Likewise, our modern doctors of democracy believe that bleeding is a sovereign and efficacious remedy for many of society's ills.

They also think straitjackets are good for us. Those of us who are the unfortunate subjects of their experiments should hope that more scientific knowledge within the political establishment advances fairly soon. But the auguries aren't especially auspicious.

We moderns, who think we are so scientific and rational, are generally horrified at the thought of people claiming to be medical helpers sucking the lifeblood out of a sick person. Those who understand how a society best functions are horrified at the idea that bleeding a society with taxes and putting it into a straitjacket with regulations is likely to restore health and vitality.

In medieval times, bleeding was the subject of putatively learned theses, which discussed the relative merits of "bleeding cups" and leeches, which parts of the body blood could be drawn from most usefully, just how much blood should be sucked out for various ailments and the like. In the 1936 Encyclopaedia Britannica there is an entry on bleeding. While acknowledging that bleeding became discredited by being used too widely in the past, it suggested some ailments for which bleeding was still indicated, and offered a detailed description of how to place leeches.

You can't help but be reminded of President Clinton promising that if we'll all just agree to bleed a little bit, trusting in his promise to place the leeches where they'll suck only from the rich, that the economy will get better soon.

Straitjackets can be adjusted, of course. Strapping them in a certain way might allow the mentally unstable patient to move his left arm freely enough to write or drink a cup of coffee, or move his shoulder enough to avoid cramps. If they're too tight, blood circulation might be cut off entirely, but if they're too loose, they might as well be removed, and you just can't predict what a patient might do.

Likewise, regulations can be adjusted so as to permit certain sectors of the economy a little more freedom of movement, or to direct the flow of capital or expertise into some other sector. Much of what passes for academic study of the economy — the speculations, plans, and forecasts of the fabled "policy wonks" amounts to study the effects of slightly tightening or loosening the straps on a straitjacket.

But by concentrating on the minute repercussions of slight tightenings and loosening, they often miss the bigger picture. Putting a straitjacket, of whatever design, on a society or economy is hardly conducive to maximum mobility.

The halls of Congress, the pages of newspapers, magazines, and policy journals, the programs broadcast by C-SPAN, CNN, and the networks, are rife with proposals on taxes. A higher tax on one class is to be offset by a piece of tax relief for another class. The experts tussle over whether a slight adjustment in rates in one sector will produce a 3.4 or 4.3 percent change in the output of some good or service.

Most of these discussions ignore the idea that sucking the lifeblood out an economy or a society is hardly likely to improve its overall vitality and vibrant good health.

Some doctors and researchers in medieval times doubted the efficacy of bleeding and decried its widespread use. But it took a long time for their views to prevail.

Likewise, many economists and policy analysts understand the dire effects of high taxes and tight regulations. But apparently our doctors of democracy haven't yet killed enough patients outright for their prescriptions to be thoroughly discredited yet.

A favor to unions won't help us

Organized labor is a decrepit force in the American economy, but not in American politics. Though unions are waning in popularity — they now represent just one out of every nine workers in the private sector — they are waxing in power in Washington, where the new combination of a Democratic Congress and a Democratic president promises to roll back one of the most infamous changes of the Reagan-Bush era.

The 1981 air traffic controllers' strike was to organized labor what the first battle of Bull Run was to the Union: a humiliating rout presaging a mortal struggle. When Ronald Reagan fired the strikers and replaced them with new controllers, it is claimed he ushered in a new era in which one employer after another hired new workers to do the jobs of strikers. (One of those was my employer, the Chicago Tribune, after a 1985 strike by production workers.)

The right of businesses to hire permanent replacements dates back to at least 1938, but the AFL-CIO says it was rarely exercised until the bitter onset of the Dark Ages, known to the rest of us as the 1980s. So unions say it's time the right was repealed. Their proposal, endorsed by the president, would forbid companies to fill the jobs of people who won't work with people who will. The measure — recently given a pious new title, "The Cesar Chavez Workplace Fairness Act" — came close to passage last year, and its only sizable obstacle this year is a potential Republican filibuster in the Senate.

Supporters say it is unfair to fire a worker for participating in a lawful strike. "For working families," lamented House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, "there is no difference between being permanently replaced and being fired."

Ah, but there is. Three out of every four striking workers who are replaced are rehired within a year. When a company is found guilty of unfair labor practices, it has to give the strikers their old jobs back immediately, even if "permanent" replacements have to be given the boot.

Nor is the magnitude of this phenomenon exactly mind-boggling. In five out of every six strikes, employers don't resort to permanent replacements. No more than 4 percent of the workers who go on strike are replaced.

There is no doubt, though, that the prospect of losing jobs can usefully concentrate the minds of union members contemplating a strike. There is also no doubt that the threat of a strike would be a more powerful lever in negotiations if companies were denied the right to keep operating with new workers.

If this bill passes, many companies entering labor talks will face the choice of quick bankruptcy (having to shut down during a strike) or slow bankruptcy (giving in to union demands). The whole point is to make it easier for unions to extract what they want from employers.

Polls say only one out of three American employees would want to be represented by a union. But steeped in Woody Guthrie songs and Depression-era lore, most of us are reluctant to say that stronger unions are a bad thing. So let me say it. The amount to a conspiracy to raise wages above competitive rates by making it impossible for employers to seek out workers who would willingly work for less than the union demand — a conspiracy often backed by violence against companies and workers who try to defy it.

Aren't higher wages a worthy goal? Only if they reflect the real productivity of employees — something that is assured in a free labor market by the competition of companies to attract workers.

As Texas A&M economist Morgan Reynolds writes in the forthcoming Fortune Encyclopedia of Economics (edited by David Henderson), "If unions successfully raise the price of labor, employers will purchase less of it." Then "workers priced out of jobs by high union wages move into the non-union sector and bid down wages there." The result: Fewer jobs in unionized industries; lower wages everywhere else. The resulting inefficiencies are also a drain on the general vitality of the economy.

Supporters of the measure say it will merely bring the United States in line with other industrialized countries, particularly those in Western Europe, which already ban the permanent replacement of strikers. This policy may be part of the secret of Western Europe's chronically high unemployment, which the bill's advocates discreetly omit from their presentation. In East Asia, by contrast, the weakness or absence of unions has not prevented wages from soaring as economies have boomed.

The striker replacement bill outlaws capitalist acts between consenting adults — employers who need workers and workers who need jobs. That would be a boom to unions and a burden to everyone else.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 27, the 147th day of 1993. There are 218 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On May 27, 1937, the newly completed Golden Gate Bridge connecting San Francisco and Marin County, Calif., was opened to the public.

On this date: In 1647, the first recorded American execution of a "witch" took place in Massachusetts.

In 1818, American reformer Amelia Jenks Bloomer, who popularized the garment that bears her name — "bloomers" — was born in Homer, N.Y.

In 1837, American firefighter and frontiersman Wild Bill Hickok was born in Troy Grove, Ill.

In 1933, 60 years ago, Walt Disney's Academy Award-winning animated short "The Three Little Pigs" was first released.

Welcome to America's murder mill

A 19-year-old man is in his home one night last week with his mother and somebody is trying to kick in their door.

He and his mother had been the victims of breakers-and-enterers before. That's why he went out and bought a gun.

He goes and gets his gun and shoots and kills the person who is trying to break into his house.

I'm sitting there watching a television report about the incident, and the reporter tells me the district attorney is saying, "Not so fast here, we could have a homicide on our hands."

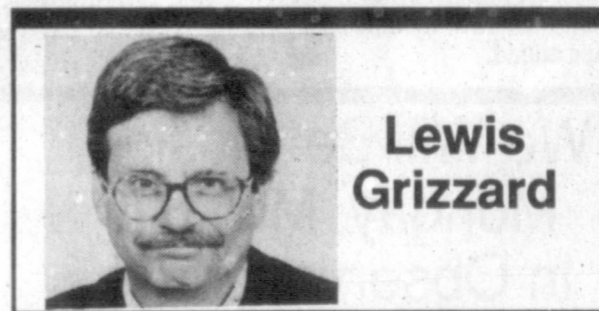

Want to hear something that should make your blood boil? You're supposed to be absolutely certain your life is in danger or you can be charged with murder for blowing away somebody trying to break into your home.

The TV reporter said, "No gun was found on the deceased."

It's dark. You're frightened. You've got your mother to protect. The punks have tried all this before.

But the crack cocaine addict (according to the dead man's mother) who is attempting to kick your door down has his rights. The 19-year-old resident can't attempt to protect himself, his mother, or his home until he's sure this creep is packing.

"Hey, Mr. Burglar, Sir, are you carrying a weapon?"

Lewis Grizzard

"Who, me? Certainly not."

"OK, then. I won't shoot you."

The next TV report you see is about the burglar blowing the insides out of the careful resident.

No charges were filed against the resident, but I don't believe the possibility should have even been brought up.

I've watched a lot of television in the past seven weeks. When you're recovering from heart surgery, it's one of the few things you can do without causing yourself any pain.

Every day, a news report has murder in it. A 25-year-old former Georgia Tech honor student is dead after a shotgun blast to the head.

Three little boys are brutally murdered in Arkansas. A disgruntled ex-worker shoots up his former place of employment and kills two. Slain human beings are found on train tracks, in the woods, in their own apartments and homes, victims of animals who force their way in.

But before you try to protect yourself from being shot, having your throat cut, or being raped and then killed, give it a moment and make sure what you see in your attacker's hands is a gun or a butcher knife, not a harmonica or a garden weasel.

The story I just related hit me as hard as it did, and seemed as absolutely asinine as it did, because of all the TV news I watched and my subsequent awareness I'm living in a country that's become a murder mill.

They'll shoot you down on the street, kill you in your bed as you sleep.

Don't make it more difficult to defend ourselves. Somebody breaking into a house in the middle of the night isn't there to ask for a dance. I'm going to assume in that instance my life is in danger, and there should be no law that won't allow me to make that assumption and take steps to protect myself. If a few unarmed burglars get it, that's baseball.

I presently do not own a gun. I have never liked guns I've never wanted to be around guns. I think gun control is a great idea.

I'm thinking of buying a gun.

A big one.

Boomers suffer from collective amnesia

To the class of 1993: We've bequeathed a cruddy world to you. Most of 1993's world is not of our doing, but much of it is a creation of our rigidity and bigotry. We're still fighting yesterday's wars — both at home and abroad.

For starters, you graduate at a time of prolonged uncertainty. One national consumer expert, Richard T. Curtin, says you've been living in a period of "diminished expectations."

You face a depressed economy, escalating political hostility, heightened class and ethnic tensions, the decline of the MBA as a ticket to corporate heaven, and the absence of something our generation took for granted: sustained optimism.

One of my students capsuled part of the problem in this final paper, "Generation X: The Lost Generation?" "Every since this generation was born, the media have found fault with it. They declared war on America's youth," wrote Tristan Louis.

"And they haven't let up yet. That's because both my generation and the baby boomers suffer from historical amnesia. We forget what a bunch of irresponsible knuckleheads we were at your age.

But I do think we had great love affairs with books and newspapers. We're in bed with television. And newspapers are only your weekend assignments.

I can't fault you for not reading newspapers. Most of them are exercises in elitist arrogance. They spend as much time taking to each other as they do to you.

Chuck Stone

A few weeks ago, a sociology professor at Rutgers University, Jackson Toby, wrote an op-ed piece for the Wall Street Journal called "College Students are a Poor Investment."

What nonsense. Are high-school graduates and functional illiterates better investments? Please!

Toby cited three students — one who didn't know what "allegiance" meant, one who spent most of her weekdays watching television, and a senior who wrote papers filled with spelling mistakes (and wrote out the days of the week with lower-case letters).

His problem may be that he's not teaching in an academically superior university. In my classes at the University of North Carolina, I have the usual share of dull students. But when the Socratic dialectic is working, the classes soar.

Most of them write very well and several write, as Cyrano would say, magnificently. One student began his paper about a prominent Southern authority as "the Boswell of Southern culture." I rhapsodized about his lead. But when blank stares greeted me, I asked how many knew who James Boswell was. Nobody.

In another class, I cited the Thucydidean theory of history to explain the cycles of censorship, but his name touched no mnemonic chords.

So what! You kids have other cognitive strengths. Many of you play your computers as if you were composing a sonata. Your metaphors are audaciously eloquent: "rolling green hills that rise and fall like a baby's silent breath"; "The (Yosemite) falls gush like a Harlem fire hydrant in the middle of a New York summer"; "A sky so blue that it seems to confirm God's presence."

You may not protest as much as previous generations did, but you still have strong convictions about freedom of speech, freedom of gender association and abortion rights. And you have helped advance multiculturalism, which has made the lives of pale, patriarchal men deliciously miserable.

I call you "the crossover generation." You're enjoying each other's music and cultures. You're forced to make do with less, but your less still makes hearts feel young and gay.

Twenty-five years from now, you will have produced your share of scholars, corporate executives and humanitarians. Like Louis Armstrong promises, "It's a wonderful world." Make it even better. I know you will.

Where is Tagalog spoken?

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Jeopardy" game show host Alex Trebek pulled no punches at the National Geographic Society's fifth annual geography bee, challenging 10 teenage finalists with 47 nearly impossible questions.

Most answered confidently and were graceful in defeat. But some looked terrified and one blinked back tears, put his head down on his desk and kept it there after giving a wrong answer.

At the end of the tense, hour-long ordeal Wednesday, only one contestant was left standing — Noel Erinjeri, 14, of Flint, Mich., who walked away with a $25,000 scholarship.

Noel was helped in the last minutes of the competition when second-place finisher Michael Ring, 13, of Milford, Mass., mistakenly answered Indonesia after being asked: "Tagalog is one of the three main native languages of which island country in Asia?"

Noel's correct answer — the Philippines — put him one point ahead. Trebek pronounced Noel the winner after both boys answered three of the remaining four questions correctly and missed one. The final score was 4-3.

Noel, who attends Carman-Ainsworth Junior High School in Flint, improved over his performance last year, when he finished fourth. He said last year's experience gave him an extra measure of confidence this time.

He said he managed to remain calm even though this year's questions seemed more difficult.

The 10 finalists, all between 11 years and 14 years old, were allowed only 12 seconds to answer the questions, which began with "The Danube flows primarily in which cardinal direction?" (Answer: East) and "The Gambia, in West Africa, is almost completely surrounded by which other country?" (Answer: Senegal).

Contestants were eliminated after two incorrect answers.

A total of 6 million students participated in the bee, which began at the school level in December. Fifty-seven local winners competed for the 10 finalist slots.

Noel, Michael and third-place winner Jeffrey Hoppes, 13, of Lancaster, Pa., will travel to London on July 2 to compete in National Geographic's first international geography bee against students from Russia and the United Kingdom.

Michael, who attends Mount St. Charles Academy in Woonsocket, R.I., won a $15,000 scholarship for finishing second. He placed third at the state level last year, and won't be eligible to participate again next year because he'll be in high school by then.

"I was very nervous," he said. "It's always a little disappointing when you don't win first place after getting this far. But I have $15,000 and I'm going to London. I get to work with two of the best geography students in this whole country and perhaps we can bring back the gold medal for the United States in the international competition."

Jeffrey, who won a $10,000 scholarship, said he planned to study extra hard over the coming year.

Reward offered in cardinal killing

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Assassins seeking a drug lord mistook a Mexican cardinal for their target and killed him in a barrage of 14 bullets during an airport ambush, the government said.

Mexican Deputy Attorney General Antonio Garcia Torres, in a Wednesday night news conference, blamed the shooting on gunmen hired by rivals of well-known drug trafficker Joaquin Guzman Loera.

Cardinal Juan Jesus Posadas Ocampo, one of only two Roman Catholic cardinals in Mexico, and his driver were killed as they sat in their car in the parking lot awaiting the arrival of a church official. The cardinal was shot 14 times, his driver 11 times.

Five other people also were also killed. Authorities said three apparently were innocent bystanders and two were suspected drug members.

The gunmen evidently thought the cardinal was Guzman because he was in a white 1993 Gran Marquis, a car similar to those favored by drug traffickers, and was dressed in black, also common among the traffickers, state Attorney General Leonardo Larios told reporters.

The attorney general's office said it would pay $5 million to anyone giving information leading to the arrest of Guzman, a drug lord with the so-called Tijuana drug cartel; Hector Luis Palma Salazar, a Guzman ally; and the brothers Francisco and Javier Arellano Felix, the men police said contracted the killers.

The Arellano Felix brothers are cousins of notorious drug lord Miguel Angel Felix, a bitter rival of Palma who was captured by Mexican authorities in 1989. The brothers contracted some 15 gunmen for $10 million to kill Guzman, the Mexican deputy attorney general said.

Earlier Wednesday, coroner Mario Rivas Souza told ECO television a gunman stood as close as three feet from the cardinal when he shot the prelate, who was dressed in full clerical garb.

The coroner told The Associated Press he wasn't questioning the government's theory that the cardinal's death was accidental, and meant only that the gunman had aimed to kill.

Whether the gunman knew the cardinal is "up to the attorney general of the republic" to determine, he said.

Authorities said most of their information about the shooting came from Jesus Alberto Ballard Robles, arrested shortly after the killings.

Bayardo Robles confessed that he was among those hired in the border city of Tijuana to kill Guzman, Garcia Torres said.

Police officials earlier said they had arrested two men, but only identified one — Victor Escobar Anaya. Authorities at the news conference did not say if Bayardo Robles was the man they earlier had not identified or if he was a third suspect.

Polygamous sect members sentenced to life in prison

By LAURA TOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Life sentences have been handed to three members of a radical polygamous church who were convicted of federal charges in the 1988 murders of a young girl and three men who were slain for leaving the sect.

A federal judge Wednesday sentenced the three defendants, ending another bloody chapter in the violent history of the Church of the First Born of the Lamb of God, which was founded by polygamous leader Ervil LeBaron.

William Heber LeBaron, 29, Patricia LeBaron, 27, and Douglas Lee Barlow, 32, each were sentenced to four life terms, two 20-year terms and two five-year terms, all of which will run concurrently.

U.S. District Judge Simeon Lake also ordered each to serve five years in prison on a weapons conviction after the other terms are completed. The stiff sentences were not surprising since one conviction, tampering with a witness, carried a mandatory sentence of life without parole.

"Under the guidelines, life in federal prison means they get to die in prison," prosecutor Terry Clark said.

"For what they did, they deserve that (life in prison), in fact they probably deserve more than that. But they got the maximum the law will allow," he said.

The defendants also were ordered to jointly pay $134,000 in restitution and $6,000 for each victim's funeral. Lake said the sentences will be served in federal prison in Arizona.

Patricia and William are natural children of Ervil LeBaron, and Barlow is his stepson. Ervil LeBaron died in 1981 while imprisoned for masterminding the murder of another polygamous leader.

Before being sentenced, Ms. LeBaron described how she grew up in the sect without any freedom and only knowing what other sect members told her.

"I just feel regret for everything that's happened in my life," she said. "I wish I had known better."

She said she had "no desire to break any laws. For one, I didn't know what the laws were. For two, I was utterly without choice."

In January, the trio was convicted of nine federal charges in the June 27, 1988, fatal shootings of Jennifer Chynoweth, 8, her father, Duane Chynoweth, 31, his brother, Mark Chynoweth, 36, and Ed Marston, 32. The murders were carried out almost simultaneously in three locations in Houston and suburban Dallas.

Besides tampering with a witness, the convictions included civil rights violations and violation of the Rack-steering Influenced Corruption Organizations Act.

The defendants received the other three life sentences for violating the men's civil rights, prosecutor Mike Shelby said.

Prosecutors said the January verdict marked the first convictions in the nation under the federal statute that makes it illegal for a person to interfere with another's religious beliefs. The jury found the men were killed because they chose to disavow Ervil LeBaron's teachings.

At the time of the trial, federal jurors also found them guilty of conspiracy and murder-for-hire. But Lake acquitted them of those charges, saying he didn't think there was sufficient evidence to warrant the convictions.

During the trial, Cynthia LeBaron testified against her half-siblings, describing a deadly plot in which the victims were stalked and slain. She was granted immunity in the case and is in the federal witness protection program, prosecutors said.

Another sect member, Richard LeBaron, pleaded guilty last summer to charges in the deaths of Duane and Jennifer Chynoweth and is awaiting sentencing. Two other group members have been indicted and are believed to be in Mexico.

Prosecutors said the defendants were following Ervil LeBaron's writings, which said that those who left the church must be killed to bring on the "kingdom of God."

The girl was killed because she witnessed her father's death, prosecutors said. The tampering with a witness charge was filed in her slaying.

Those who killed the defectors, called "sons of perdition," believed they would be richly rewarded with worldly and spiritual goods, prosecutors claimed.

Two defense attorneys Wednesday said the convictions would be appealed, and Ms. LeBaron's lawyer said she would file a request for a new trial.

Defense attorneys hardly disputed their clients' involvement in the slayings, but they portrayed the defendants as victims of child abuse who were seeking revenge on the people they said abused them — the three male victims.

Bees choose a honey of a neighborhood when they adopt local chimney

By CHERYL BERZANSKI'S
Lifestyles Editor

You've heard of people dropping in for a spell, but Otto and Willie Mae Mangold got more than they bargained for when a swarm of honeybees set up housekeeping in their chimney.

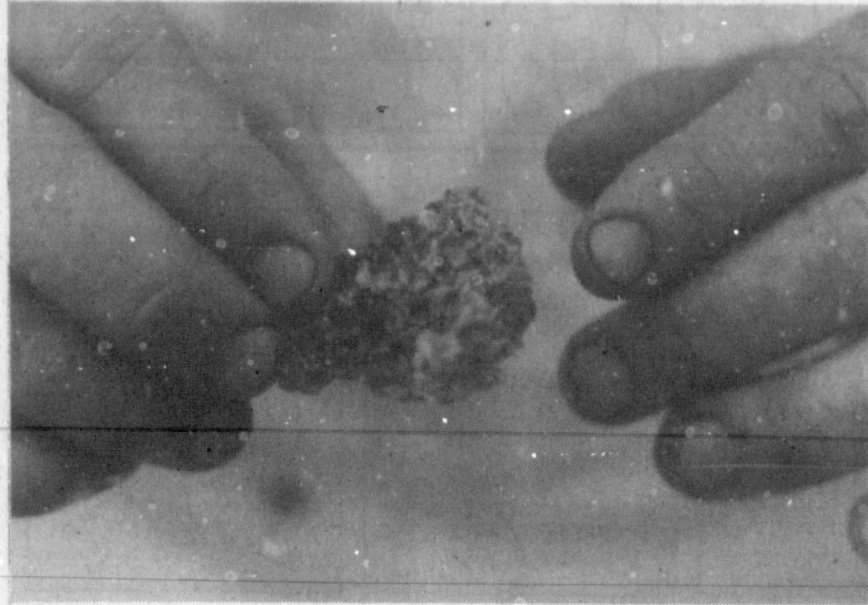

The swarm-on-the-move was noticed Sunday by the Mangold's neighbors, Teresa and Randy Dyson. They notified the Mangold's but not before the bees declared squatters' rights in the unused brick chimney.

By Monday night a beekeeper, Joel Smith of White Deer, had been engaged to relocate the industrious insects. Hardly more than 24 hours after the swarm was spotted, they had begun a comb and filled it with pollen.

With the chimney damper open, Mrs. Mangold said, the buzzing was clearly audible in their den. Honeybees came down the chimney and into their home. Seventeen bees lost their lives before Mr. Mangold could shut the damper.

An exterminator declined to remove the bees but one thing led to another and Smith was engaged to go head-to-head with the bees. In beekeeper's regalia — white overalls, netted hat and veil and elbow length gloves — Smith was safe working with the stirred up nesters.

A good dousing with sugar water slowed the bees quite a bit so that they would remain in the chimney.

Smith holds a piece of comb already under construction by the honeybees.

Smith put his hands down the chimney and gathered the bees onto his gloves then removed them to a large cardboard box. When Smith left the Mangold's home Monday about dark, the box was full and taped shut for the ride to White Deer.

Mr. Mangold sported two stings — one to his forehead and one to a finger.

"I don't know why — things just gravitate toward him," Mrs. Mangold said.

By Tuesday night, approximately 50 bees remained in the chimney, Mrs. Mangold said.

The Mangolds are mystified why they became host and hostess for the creatures. However, their yard is home to a multitude of flowers and a tub of rainwater used for the house plants.

"Their instincts and socialization activities are just remarkable," she noted.

Smith, in a telephone interview, noted that the honeybees were "acting wild" in their new beehive home. The queen bee may not be alive and without her reproductive capability, the hive will die out. The average life span of a drone is about three weeks.

death," Smith said. The pampered queen may live three to four years. A new queen may be purchased, and Smith thinks that if he discovers that she is missing, he may purchase one to keep the hive alive. He expects that a queen bee will cost in the area of $10-$15.

Smith explained that when a hive becomes overpopulated, it will divide after first selecting a new

Wife wonders if born-again husband will sin again soon

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old with a baby and a husband. My problem is my husband. It all started when I was six months pregnant. "George" started staying out late, saying he was with the guys, which wasn't true. After I had my baby, I found out he had been seeing a young girl who lives next door to his mother. A few friends had told me this, but I didn't believe them. When I asked George if there was anything between them, he denied it.

A month later, I found a letter he had written to one of his buddies in the Army and never mailed. In the letter he said he got a girl pregnant and had to rush her to an abortion clinic. That's not all. Next, George got 90 days in the county jail for shooting a gun at his girlfriend. (He missed her.)

When I visited George in jail, he broke down and told me everything. He said he was sorry for cheating on me, but he is now born-again and has learned his lesson, and wants another chance.

Abby, should I give him another chance? He has lied so much, I don't know if I can ever trust him. He has even agreed to counseling. Our second anniversary is next week. What should I do? I still love him.

GEORGE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Since you still love him — give him another chance. I hope his being born-again will keep him straight and honest. But if it doesn't, say goodbye and close the door on this relationship.

Aggies lose two more

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two more Texas A&M football players were suspended Wednesday for accepting payments from a prominent booster who gave them summer jobs.

Coach R.C. Slocum said wide receiver Brian Mitchell and linebacker Jesse Cox have been added to the list of five Aggies declared ineligible.

"They realize the tremendous problems they have caused to us and our program," Slocum said at the Southwest Conference spring meeting.

"They're embarrassed about it. It's an isolated case with these players, one that I regret."

The two players suspended Wednesday worked summer jobs at a Dallas company owned by Warren Gilbert and were paid $200 weekly salaries, Slocum said. Gilbert owns several low-income housing projects in Dallas.

A Texas A&M and NCAA investigation revealed that though the athletes worked at Gilbert Properties, they were paid for some hours they did not work. NCAA rules require athletes be paid only for work performed at summer jobs.

There were no time sheets or other records to help determine how many hours the players worked, Slocum said. Mitchell and Cox volunteered the information during interviews conducted this spring by university and NCAA officials.

"It's more a question of defining how much they worked, more than anything else. There's no question that they worked," Slocum said.

Four Aggies, including star running back Greg Hill, were suspended Dec. 26 and declared ineligible for the Cotton Bowl after The Dallas Morning News first reported the allegations.

Receiver Percy Singleton and offensive linemen James Brooks and Darius Smith also were suspended for the bowl game.

Slocum said a fifth player was found in March to have received illegal payments, but he refused to release the player's name, saying he hadn't sought the player's permission to do so.

Slocum said the players had made "mistakes in judgment." He said all the athletes involved remain on scholarship and will pay back any money to which they were not entitled. The players also will receive other undetermined NCAA penalties.

Slocum said the seven players were paid a total of about $12,000 over two years for the jobs. However, he estimates the total restitution will be about $5,000 in all for the seven players.

After an internal investigation, school officials confirmed two of the players declared ineligible Dec. 26 had accepted payments from Gilbert for the summer jobs in Dallas while they were attending summer classes in College Station, some 200 miles away.

The university submitted a report to the NCAA in February, asking the players be reinstated.

Slocum said the university is cooperating with the NCAA. He said that as a show of "good faith" he and assistant Tim Cassidy took, and passed, lie-detector tests three weeks ago regarding their knowledge of the scandal. Slocum said the tests were performed by a Houston polygraph expert at the campus police station.

"There has not been and there will not be any type of cover-up on the part of Texas A&M," Slocum said. "We could not have pursued this more honestly and more aggressively than we have."

Sonics pass road test against Suns to even series at 1-1

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics finally found life on the road Wednesday night.

After dropping their first four playoff games away from home, the Sonics beat the Phoenix Suns 103-99 to even the Western Conference finals at 1-1, with the best-of-7 series now shifting to Seattle.

The Sonics won on a gutsy 3-pointer by Sam Perkins with 9.8 seconds to play and 34 points by Ricky Pierce.

Perkins was in a dreadful shooting slump before hitting the winning basket. On Seattle's previous possession, he forced a fadeaway 3-pointer with sufficient time left on the shot clock. But this time his shot was true.

Danny Ainge of the Suns then attempted a floating one-hander from the baseline. Charles Barkley of Phoenix elbowed Shawn Kemp underneath, and Kemp hit both foul shots with 1.7 seconds left to make it 103-99.

Game 3 will be Friday night in Seattle, where the Suns have not won this season.

Pierce scored eight points after Phoenix took an 80-70 lead with 11:17 left on Dan Majerle's 3-pointer. Perkins finished with 19 points and Kemp with 16.

Majerle led the Suns with 29 points, and Barkley added 24. Both had 10 rebounds.

Phoenix held 6-point leads after the first, second and third quarters but was unable to fend off the Sonics in the final 12 minutes.

Majerle, who had 10 points in the fourth period, appeared to save the team with three clutch shots. The last, a 10-foot clock-beater with 3:06 to go, gave Phoenix a 95-90 lead.

However, Kemp hit his last six free throws, and Perkins dropped in a 3-pointer with 1:58 remaining to cut the deficit to 97-96. Kemp's second pair of foul shots gave Seattle a 98-97 lead with 1:23 to play.

With a minute to go, Miller gave the Suns a 99-98 lead with a layup after Ainge's scoop assist, and the Suns missed a chance to put the game away when Barkley rebounded a missed shot by Kemp with 38 seconds left. With 17.4 seconds to go, Majerle's pass went off Barkley's fingertips out of bounds.

The Sonics, who never led by more than three points until Kemp's last two shots, outrebounded the Suns 41-39 and outscored them 33-13 after offensive rebounds.

Phoenix, which had been 5-0 at home when leading at the half, was up 54-48 at the half and led 76-70 after three quarters.

The Suns made only one field goal in the first six minutes but still were close enough to lead 10-8 on Majerle's 3-pointer. The shot was the first of a 12-2 run which lifted the Suns to a 19-10 lead with 2:34 left.

The Suns led 24-18 after one quarter, but Pierce led the Sonics back in the second, scoring 13 points. Eddie Johnson tied it 30-30 with a 16-footer, and Pierce tied it again at 32 with a pullup jumper and at 34 with a free throw.

Perkins hit a turnaround in the key with 5:49 left, giving Seattle a 36-34 lead, and Dana Barros' 21-footer put the Sonics ahead again, 40-39, after the Suns came back.

Majerle hit a layup 19 seconds later and the Suns had the lead until Perkins hit his first 3-pointer early in the third period, allowing Seattle a brief 56-55 lead.

Bulls are back home

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bulls' dream of a third straight championship is hanging on their ability to turn things around on their homecourt.

Down 2-0 in the best-of-7 NBA Eastern Conference finals against the New York Knicks after 98-90 and 96-91 losses in New York, the Bulls must win their next two games in Chicago Stadium on Saturday and Monday afternoons to retain any hope of surviving.

"We're concerned, very concerned," coach Phil Jackson said. "We have to win. But they played their style on their home floor and that's not going to happen on our floor. We're going to make sure it doesn't happen."

It wasn't so much style as it was making the big plays and controlling the boards that allowed the relentless Knicks to take the Bulls twice.

John Starks outplayed Michael Jordan in the first game Sunday, when he scored 25 points to go with Patrick Ewing's 25 points and 17 rebounds. Although kept relatively in check Tuesday night, Starks' flying jam over Jordan and Horace Grant with 47 seconds to play gave the Knicks a five-point lead the Bulls could not overcome.

Sam Perkins of the SuperSonics attempts to get past Oliver Miller of the Suns in the first half Wednesday night. Perkins hit the winning basket.

Little-known players knock off Becker, Lendl in French Open

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The French, as usual, sent a horde of men to play in the French Open. While most tumbled out quickly, two little-known upstarts have upstaged the entire field with their giant-killing act.

The victims couldn't have been more illustrious — Boris Becker and Ivan Lendl. Their conquerors, Rodolphe Gilbert and Stephane Huet, weren't even familiar to many of the knowledgeable fans at Roland Garros.

As play resumed today, Gilbert and Huet were among only three of a 19-strong French contingent still in the men's tournament. And Lendl and Becker were the only seeds, men or women, to have lost.

Gilbert, ranked 92nd in the world, ousted Becker 7-5, 6-3, 7-5 in a second-round match Wednesday. He had taken heart from Huet's heroics the day before, a four-set shocker over Lendl by a qualifier with a ranking of 297.

Gilbert, who never has won a tournament or survived the third round of a Grand Slam, said he didn't resent being neglected by France's Davis Cup selectors in recent years.

"But a match like that, and like Huet's yesterday, shows there are other Frenchmen capable of making good results," he said.

Aside from Becker's and Lendl's losses, the seeds have been marching forward with only a handful of serious challenges. The two favorites, Jim Courier and Steffi Graf, won second-round matches so easily Wednesday that reporters quickly ran out of questions for them.

The toughest query for Courier was whether he minded being consigned to an outside court for his rout of Spain's Tomas Carbonell.

"I play wherever they put me," the two-time defending champion said. "It doesn't matter."

Gilbert, thanks to French-friendly schedule-making, was able to perform his heroics on center court, and termed it his most important match ever.

"On center court like that, with so many people, against No. 4 in the world, it was very important," he said. "This will help me be known by the public."

"The strongest point in my game is consistency," Gilbert said. "Boris was steady with his serve, but for the rest of his game, and especially for his backhand, he made many mistakes."

Becker had only praise for the victor.

"In the third set, I was trying to come back a little more, and I was there," Becker said. "But he kept the pressure on. He kept his nerves. He had one break point at 5-all and he hit a good forehand passing shot. So that was it."

Gilbert said he was a soccer goalie as a boy and didn't take up tennis until the relatively late age of

11. His biggest victory previously was over Pete Sampras at Key Biscayne, Fla., in 1991.

Sampras, the No. 1 seed thanks to his edge in the computer rankings over Courier, was to play his second-round match Thursday against South African Marcos Ondruska. Third-seeded Stefan Edberg was matched against American Aaron Krickstein.

Becker's defeat opened up his quarter of the draw for Goran Ivanisevic, who could have faced the German in the quarterfinals.

But Ivanisevic said he was wary of his third-round opponent, clay-court specialist Carlos Costa of Spain. Costa posted an impressive straight-set victory Wednesday over Russian Andrei Chesnokov.

West Texas Ford stays unbeaten in Tee-ball

In Wednesday night's Tee-ball action, West Texas Ford extended its record to 3-0 with a 24-17 victory over Northcrest Pharmacy.

Scoring for West Texas was led by Keaton Hutton, Christopher Moody, Tyler Doughty and Brady Plunk with three runs each. Scott Hollingsworth, Clayton Hall, Raecanna Cowan and Dusty Langley had two runs each. Colin Howard, Lindsey Dyer, Calli Carter and Russell Angel each contributed one run. Hutton had two home runs while Moody, Doughty and Langley had one home run each.

Scoring two runs each for Northcrest were Jacob Potter, Cody Russell, Logan Baker, Jeremy Pritchett, Cooper Brazille, Andrew Smith and Lindsay Gill. Michelle Evans and Cody Hukill each contributed one run each.

Leading batters for Northcrest were Chance Putman and Potter, each hitting one double and two singles.

Northcrest led off the first inning with three runs by Potter, Russell and Baker.

Anglers greeted by hungry fish at Lake Greenbelt

Sunny skies and hungry bass greeted 41 anglers from 12 towns at the May FUN FISHING TOURNAMENT on Lake Greenbelt near Clarendon. Twenty-three of the 41 contestants brought fish to the scales, and following the weigh-in ceremonies, all bass were released alive. CONGRATULATIONS TO RANDY HOOBLER of Amarillo whose best three bass weighed 11.31 lbs. and earned him $410. Randy used a jig and pumpkin saltcraw to catch fifteen keepers before 8:00 a.m.!! Second place and $205 went to RANDY RISELEY of Borger, with three bass that weighed 5.17 lbs.

Third place was earned by PAMPA bass angler JIMMY BAGGETT for loading up 4.43 lbs. of bass with spinnerbaits and slug-gos. Jimmy and his guide/son Jason split the $102 prize money.

Other top finishers include RODNEY SWEET (4.41 lbs.) of Borger, GARY CARTER (4.40 lbs.) of Pampa, BOBBY POST (4.31 lbs.) of Amarillo, DARREL BLADES (4.29 lbs.) of Canyon, SANDY CARROLL (3.93 lbs.) of Pampa, and KEN ALLEN (3.78 lbs.) of Amarillo.

If you enjoy working in the garden or if you hate lawn care, then I have found the perfect companion for your passions. How could one book bridge the gap between lawn lovers and lawn haters? Read Native Texas Plants: Landscaping Region by Region by Sally and Andy Wasowski from Dallas. After driving over 35,000 miles and interviewing hundreds of local authorities, they have produced a book that emphasizes using native Texas plants. Why use native plants? Less water, less fertilizer, less insecticides, and more time to spend on important things like camping, fishing, and hunting.

If your yard has the manners of a thirsty demon who demands an endless cycle of water, mow, water, fertilizer, water, you can break that cycle. Smart anglers and hunters will use this book to phase-in some hardy native Texas plants that will attract wildlife and can stand the stress of our hot summers and cold winters. For a great $30 gift idea, contact Gulf Publishing at 800-392-4390 or shop your local bookstore.

Cubs down Giants to snap slump

CHICAGO (AP) — The victory that snapped the Chicago Cubs out of their recent slump was highlighted with ejections and pregame controversy.

The Cubs beat San Francisco 4-2 Wednesday after having lost four of their last five and handed Giants starter Billy Swift his first loss since April 14.

Forget pitching and hitting. It was finger-pointing and arguing that was the talk of Wrigley Field.

Chicago outfielder Willie Wilson, who was involved with teammates Dwight Smith and Derrick May on Tuesday in a finger-pointing session, failed to show up in time for batting practice Wednesday and was scratched from the starting lineup. He did show up by game time and was inserted as a defensive replacement in the seventh inning.

Then there was manager Jim Lefebvre being ejected in the fourth inning for arguing a ball-and-strike call. The next inning, second baseman Ryne Sandberg and third-base coach Chuck Cottier were thrown out for arguing a close play at first on a chopper hit by Sandberg.

"I couldn't figure out why I got tossed," said Sandberg who had never been ejected before. "All I said (to umpire Charlie Williams) was 'You should have taken a closer look at the play.'"

Wilson had nothing to say. "I have no comment to make," he said. "You're going to make your own judgments. And, even if you ask me questions unrelated to what has happened, you'll still get the other stuff in."

Senate runoff candidates meet face-to-face

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON (AP) — Interim U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger and State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison both claimed to have done all right in their hourlong televised debate sponsored by Ross Perot's United We Stand America.

With their runoff election only a week and a half away, the candidates clashed in an hourlong debate Wednesday night on the campus of the University of Texas at Arlington.

Krueger said, "I thought we did very well, that we drew the distinctions we wanted to draw, particularly in the area of health care reform."

Mrs. Hutchison said: "The debate went very well. We're sending a message, that we can't stand business as usual anymore. Clearly the people just don't think we need new taxes."

Krueger, and Democrat, and Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, are on the ballot for a June 5 runoff election. They finished in almost a dead heat in the first election on May 1, with Mrs. Hutchison slightly ahead.

Perot appeared only briefly at the start of the debate to introduce the moderator, former television network commentator Sander Vanocur.

"The No. 1 issue facing us is the need for health care reform," Krueger said. "About 142 million people get health insurance through their employers. I favor continuing that, expanding that. We can do that. Many people are left out of health care," he said.

"But we also need to get rid of the high cost we now have. We should have a mandatory price freeze on all health care insurance costs and drug prescription fees," Krueger said.

There is a clear difference between the way he and Mrs. Hutchison view health care, Krueger said. She wants to abolish employees' health plans altogether and force the people to negotiate for health care on their own, he said.

That would be catastrophic, he said.

Mrs. Hutchison said it's peculiar that Krueger just became concerned about health care in the past four weeks.

"Bob Krueger is a health care reformist by convenience, not by conviction," she said. Krueger came up with his health care position at the last minute because a similar campaign helped elect a candidate in Pennsylvania, Mrs. Hutchison said.

"Before May 1, he was in my position, but because it elected a candidate in Pennsylvania, he's

Police shooting trial nears end

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Lawton Chiles ordered National Guardsmen to report to Miami-area armories today as a verdict drew near in a police shooting that touched off riots four years ago.

Closing arguments in the manslaughter trial of Officer William Lozano were scheduled for today in Orlando.

Hoping to prevent another outbreak of violence, top-ranking police officers took neighborhood walks and community leaders held meetings in Miami's mostly black Over-town section, where the shooting took place.

An undisclosed number of troops were ordered to report to South Florida armories in case police need help, Florida National Guard spokesman Ken Forrester said.

Circuit Judge W. Thomas Spencer agreed to hold any verdict for at least four hours to give law enforcement officials time to prepare. He said if jurors reached a verdict after 5 p.m., it would be held until the next morning.

"If there are any problems, any disruption at all, we have our officers ready," said Miami police spokesman Ray Lang.

And Metro-Dade police Detective Lizette Williams said officers would go on 12-hour shifts as soon as jury deliberations begin, and all days off would be canceled.

Lozano is charged in the 1989 slaying of black motorcyclist Clement Lloyd and the death of his passenger, Allan Blanchard, in the ensuing crash. The deaths triggered three nights of racial violence that left one man dead and caused $1 million in damage.

Five prosecution witnesses said they saw Lozano step away from a parked patrol car, aim and fire at the motorcycle, which was fleeing a patrol car. The Hispanic officer testified at his first trial, in 1989, that he fired in self-defense as the motorcycle bore down on him.

This time, the defense rested without calling Lozano or any other witnesses.

Lozano was convicted in Miami in 1989 and got seven years in prison, but an appeals court overturned the verdict, saying jurors may have feared more violence. The retrial was moved five times, ending up in Orlando.

changed his position. I don't think Bob Krueger understands his own health care position," she added.

A statewide poll conducted for The Dallas Morning News and released today showed that 54 percent of likely voters favor Hutchison, compared to 35 percent for Krueger. The rest were undecided.

The survey of 888 people was conducted May 20-25 and the margin of error was four percentage points.

Asked about the poll, Krueger said he doesn't worry about polls and feels good about reports that early voting is up in some areas by 60 percent.

"People are turning out to vote, who did not vote May 1. This is a crucial election, and we're going to win it on voter turnout. A lot of people got a wakeup call, so to speak" once they realized that their vote is needed to send a Democrat back to the Senate.

Mrs. Hutchison said she won't slow down her campaign because of polls showing her gaining ground.

"I'm going to campaign like I am No. 2, and try harder," she said.

The two candidates differed on the issue of term limitation during the debate.

Mrs. Hutchison said limiting U.S. representatives to two 4-year terms and senators to two 6-year terms is vital if problems in Washington are to be solved. She said too many longtime congressmen have been in Washington so long they don't realize the effect of their legislation on the people.

She praised the service in the Senate of Texans such as Lyndon Johnson and Lloyd Bentsen, both of whom had long tenure there, but said if they had been limited to two terms, the state would not have suffered. They would have been replaced by other capable people, she said.

Krueger said although he has voluntarily agreed to limit himself to two fulltime terms in the Senate, he doesn't want to impose that on others. He said voters should be able to decide for themselves whether to allow their lawmakers to remain in office.

"Lloyd Bentsen served in the Senate for 22 years, and his service in the last two terms was more effective for the state than the first two. The same could be said of John Tower," Krueger said.

"The voters should not have this taken from them. They are entitled to experienced lawmakers just as they are entitled to experienced eye surgeons and experienced attorneys."

Krueger said his opposition to the Brady Bill and President Clinton's tax and budget bills show he won't vote in lockstep with anyone.

"I am probably the most independent person serving in the U.S. Senate, which distinguishes me from my opponent. The Republicans vote the same every time. The people want someone who has the gumption to oppose the president when he disagrees with me," Krueger said.
