School tax hike likely

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

The chief fiscal officer for Pampa Independent School District said Thursday that he expects the administration to propose a tax increase for the fiscal year beginning Sept. 1.

"I would imagine that it will (be necessary)," said Mark McVay, business manager for PISD. "We're not anticipating any additional state revenue."

McVay said he does not know how much of a tax increase will be proposed by the PISD administration, but that he plans to offer that proposal at the regularly scheduled school board meeting in July.

The current PISD tax rate is 46.5 cents per $100 property valuation; the County Education District tax rate is 89.4 cents per $100 property valuation. The combined tax rate is $1.359.

The higher tax rate, if it is approved by the Pampa school board, would be reflected in tax statements mailed to property owners in September.

The news about a probable tax increase came in an interview on Thursday after PISD administration presented the Pampa school board with a proposed $16.79 million budget for the 1993-94 school year that represents a 3.4 percent increase from the current budget. The proposed budget would provide $433,965 more for instructional expenses than does the current one.

The proposed new budget is based on the same teacher pay scale as the one used by PISD during the 1992-93 school year.

The salaries provided in that pay scale range from $20,000 for beginning teachers who have only a bachelor's degree to $36,200 for the most experienced teachers who have only a bachelor's degree. PISD teacher salaries are from $560 to $7,800 more than the state-mandated minimum salaries.

Because of pay increases offered to teachers in the pay scale for additional teaching experience, the average salary next school year for PISD teachers is expected to be about $1,000 more than their current average salary, McVay said.

In other news relating to teachers' salaries, the Pampa school board on Thursday approved career-ladder salary supplements for 174 teachers for the 1992-93 school year that totaled roughly $340,000. The career-ladder pay checks will be mailed to teachers next Friday.

On the subject of school finance in the state, the Pampa school board watched a videotape from the Texas Education Agency on the five options under Senate Bill 7 that are available to school districts with $280,000 or more in property wealth per student. The options, which include full consolidation with another school district or consolidation of the tax base with one or more districts, are designed to achieve greater equity in property wealth among the school districts of the state.

McVay noted in an interview that because the property wealth per student in PISD is only about $170,000, the school district will not have to select any of the five options.

In other news from the Thursday board meeting, Pampa school board:

- Accepted the resignations of Teri Hackler as a teacher at Austin Elementary; and Darren Bailey, Robert Murdock and Max Plunk as teacher/coaches at Pampa High School.

Somali warlord on the run

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Scout helicopters clattered across gray skies today as U.N. troops searched for warlord Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, whose backers claimed more than 120 people were killed in U.N. attacks.

United Nations forces hit his compound with a daylong air and ground assault on Thursday, but failed to capture the warlord. Aidid's fighters fought back using women, children and hospital patients as shields, they said.

One Pakistani and five Moroccan U.N. peacekeepers were confirmed killed and 43 wounded, U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said in New York. The number of Somali casualties was unclear but could range into the hundreds, given the firepower used in the assault.

In Nairobi, Kenya, Aidid's Somali National Alliance released a statement today saying the U.N. attack killed "more than 120 people, mainly women and children."

The statement also claimed Aidid's forces captured two American soldiers and 12 other U.N. peacekeepers. At the Pentagon, Lt. Cmdr. Joe Gradisher said no U.S. or U.N. soldiers are missing.

The United Nations and President Clinton said the operation to crush Aidid's military capability ended successfully. But Adm. Jonathan Howe, the U.S. special envoy who ordered Aidid's arrest, would not rule out additional British strikes.

Howe told the British Broadcasting Corp. this morning that he "wouldn't say it was over."

"I would say it has reached a new stage," Howe said. "Our focus now is on arresting Gen. Aidid."

Aidid, who is accused of masterminding a June 5 ambush that killed 23 Pakistani U.N. soldiers, escaped from his home during pre-dawn shelling that preceded Thursday's ground assault.

When American and Pakistani soldiers stormed his two-story, stucco house at mid-morning, they found it empty but badly damaged from strikes by 105-mm howitzers fired by American AC-130 aerial gunships.

U.N. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said in Mogadishu today that they did not know where Aidid was, but were getting a number of conflicting tips.

At a televised news conference in Washington on Thursday night, Clinton said the offensive "is over and it was a success." Although Aidid escaped capture, Clinton said his "military back ... has been broken" and he has largely lost his ability to disrupt U.N. humanitarian operations in Mogadishu.

PEDC honors Glenn Hackler

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

During Thursday's meeting of the Pampa Economic Development Corporation, Pampa City Manager Glen Hackler was given a plaque in recognition of his efforts for the city.

In addition, the PEDC Board of Directors passed a special resolution outlining Hackler's contribution to the PEDC and the city.

"I think it goes without saying I have a great deal of love for Pampa and each of you I've worked with, all of you on some painstaking projects, and I'm not sure I deserve this distinction," said Hackler. "Teri and I have really considered it a privilege and an honor to work with you."

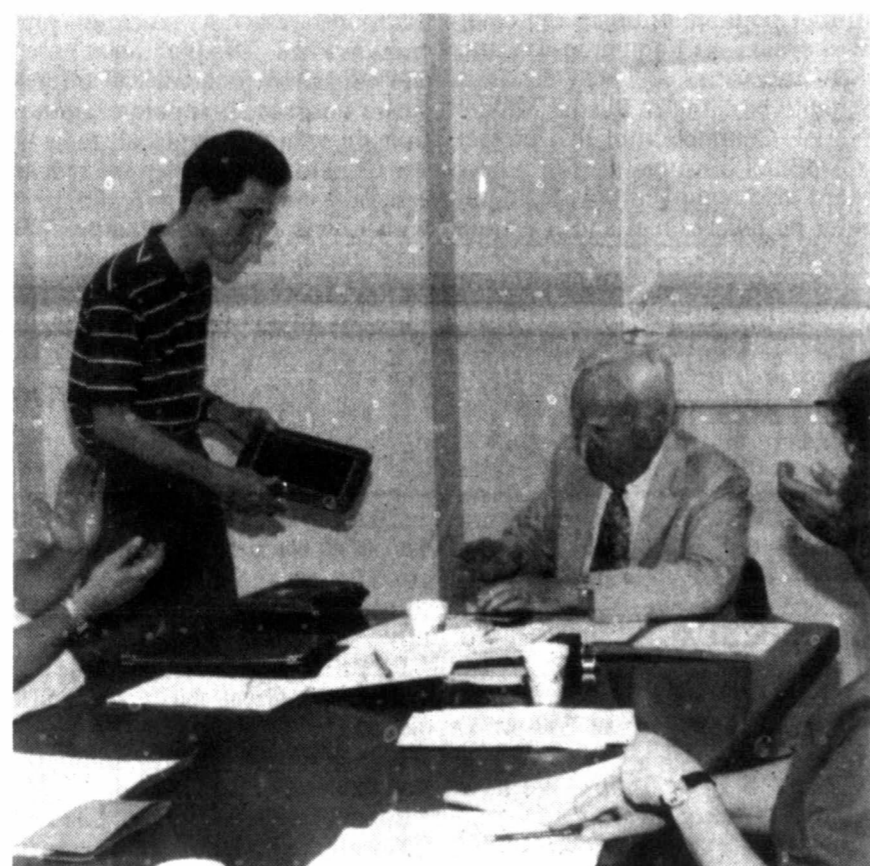

On July 5, Hackler will assume the duties of assistant city manager in Midland. His wife, Teri Hackler, will teach school in the Midland Independent School District.

In other business, the PEDC's Board of Directors elected themselves to new terms of office. Each term lasts one year.

Bill Waters remains president of the board, while Victor Raymond retains the title of vice president. Wayne Stripling is the acting secretary, Benny Kirksey is the organization's treasurer and Jim Morris is the assistant secretary and assistant treasurer.

According to the PEDC's by-laws, the five board members are appointed for staggered terms by the City Commission. One member of the board of director's term is for one year, two members are appointed for two-year terms and the other two members of the board are appointed for three-year terms.

In his report, Bill Miller, director of the PEDC, said a business prospect is scheduled to tour Pampa and the surrounding area June 22 through June 22.

The business prospect is in the primary metals industry and makes metal parts for a variety of products by grinding metal into a powder and mixing it with vegetable oil, after which it is pour into a mold.

The part is then removed from the mold and washed to get rid of the oil and then heated to 2,500 degrees, which changes the chemical structure of the metal, according to Miller.

Miller added that industries like the one which will tour Pampa is the type recruited by the PEDC as opposed to other types of business, specifically retail trade.

"I'm not into that," Miller said. "That was one of the non-missions (of the PEDC), to create competition in retail (trade); it's a different world. Mine is primarily manufacturing, trading and creating jobs that are value-added."

The PEDC Board of Directors meet on the third Thursday of every month in its office at 301 N. Ballard.

Red Cross relies on local chapters

Board members and volunteers for the Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross looked back over 75 years of service and viewed possibilities for the next 75 years during the annual meeting Thursday night.

The local chapter observed its 75th anniversary during the banquet held at Club Biarritz in Coronado Inn.

Guest speaker Kayla Roberts, Territory 1 manager for the Texas Red Cross, said the national organization has gone through some structural changes as it prepares to continue to provide services to communities into the 21st century.

Roberts, who is moving to Odessa where she will serve as field service manager, said the changes are designed to enable the Red Cross to be better able to provide services to communities in all areas. The structural reorganization will make services more readily available to the local chapters, with expertise in training and assistance more easily accessible to local managers and volunteers.

"Texas is one of the leaders in this new plan," she said, serving as a guide to other states implementing the reorganizational changes. "You can be very proud of that."

Roberts said that the national Red Cross officials will be relying on the local chapters "to take more control of themselves," but the national organizations will be providing better support structures for assistance.

Regional headquarters will be setting standards of service and monitoring chapters to measure their level of excellence and to assess their needs. State councils are being set up to be closer to the chapters to better provide delivery of services and assistance.

Chapter programs will be considered in three main areas, Roberts said. These are "must services," "should services" and "may services."

"Must services" are those every chapter is expected to fulfill in serving the communities, she explained.

These include disaster service training and assistance, a top priority for all Red Cross chapters.

"Should services" are those chapters should be implementing, including better education programs in such areas as water safety and first aid. "May services" include such matters as information referral programs and medical equipment loaner services.

The main purpose of the changes for the Gray County Chapter is to build and expand on the past 75 years and prepare for the next 75, the next 150 years, Roberts said.

"You're on the right track, and you've been on the right track," she said.

"I don't think our organization is going to die ... and it's because of people like you," Roberts said, adding that she cannot imagine the Red Cross not being around in times of disasters, wars, conflicts, epidemics and other similar crisis situations around the world.

Single mothers

Births to single women soared since 1950, when under 5 percent of mothers were single. In 1988, more than one-fourth of all births were to single women.

Magazine blasts Chisum

State Representative Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, said Tuesday at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce monthly luncheon that the just concluded legislative session was a successful one for him.

However, Texas Monthly magazine seems to disagree.

The Austin-based magazine has named Chisum one of the 10 worst legislators of the Seventy-Third Legislature.

"Chisum belongs on the Ten Worst list because he would rather give litmus tests than solve problems," wrote Paul Burka and Patricia Kilday Hart, who compiled the magazine's annual list of the ten best and worst legislators.

The article criticizes Chisum for seizing "headline-grabbing issues like sodomy and abortion" while not playing a role in passing bills pertaining to public schools or inmate retention that "really could make a difference to families."

Chisum objected to a version of a bill that revised the state's penal code which overturned a state sodomy law.

In an interview Thursday afternoon, Chisum defended his record, saying that he had still voted in favor of a bill that revised the state's penal code and had authored one of the five options in the latest school finance bill.

The best-worst list is in the July 1993 issue of Texas Monthly, which is available on newsstands June 24. This year's list is the magazine's 11th.

Celanese-Kingsmill trial delayed

SWEETWATER — District Judge Weldon Kirk of Nolan County granted a postponement Thursday of the trial in the lawsuit filed by Kingsmill area residents against Hoechst Celanese.

Jerry Moore, plant manager of Hoechst Celanese's Pampa plant, said attorneys representing the company last week had requested a 30-day delay in the start of the trial. Hoechst Celanese felt more time was needed to gain information before proceeding with the case, Moore said.

The trial was to begin Monday in district court in Sweetwater.

Kingsmill residents allege that Celanese failed to report wastewater seepage from the plant's evaporation ponds which later contaminated ground water.

According to Moore, Celanese is continuing to sample the Kingsmill water supply on a monthly basis, and the well water meets all federal drinking water standards.

A spokesperson for the Nolan County district clerk's office said Judge Moore has not set a date for a hearing to reschedule the beginning of the trial.

Lake cleanup includes drawing

Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. plans to give away a new color television set on Sept. 18, the day of the annual Lake McClellan Cleanup.

Volunteers are being sought to work at the lake that Saturday.

Donations are being taken for a chance to win the TV, which will be given away that day. The TV was donated by Gary Gattis, owner of Gattis Appliance & Electronics in Pampa.

The 13-inch color set is remote-controlled, AC-DC, and is cable-compatible. Tickets for a chance to win the set can be obtained at Gattis A&E in downtown Pampa.

Members of the Lake McClellan Improvement Inc., a nonprofit corporation, decided to give away the television set during a meeting on Thursday in Pampa.

There are approximately 200 members of Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. The board of directors of Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. works with the U.S. Forest Service — owner of the Lake McClellan property — and with the Soil Conservation Service, Resource Conservation and Development, and Gray County in management of the lake area.

Lake McClellan covers 316 surface acres and is located approximately three miles north of Interstate 40.

Also at the meeting on Thursday, new Lake McClellan area tourist maps were distributed to members. Wright said the maps were available at area museums, the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, and the Texas Tourist Bureau.

The next meeting of the lake group has been scheduled for 7 p.m. July 29 in Gray County Courthouse.

Federal pensioners due tax refund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that states must refund billions of dollars in taxes collected unlawfully from retired federal workers.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, said its 1989 decision barring states from taxing federal pensions while exempting the pensions of their own retired state and local government employees must be applied retroactively.

One of the dissenters, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, said, "Today the court applies a new rule of retroactivity to impose crushing and unnecessary liability on the states, precisely at a time when they can least afford it."

The 1989 ruling said such differing tax treatment was unconstitutional.

Today's decision was a defeat for Virginia, which now faces paying tax refunds of nearly $500 million to some 200,000 retired federal workers, many of them retired military, living in the state.

Opinions vary as to just which states face refund liability for past unlawful taxes but the justices were told in the Virginia case that there were 16 states being asked for nearly $2 billion in refunds.

According to a brief submitted to the court, those states and their estimated potential liabilities were:

Alabama, $20 million; Arizona, $339 million; Arkansas, $45 million; Georgia, $100 million; Iowa, $41 million; Kansas, $95 million; Kentucky, $74 million; Mississippi, $35 million; Montana $20 million.

Also New York, $55 million; North Carolina, $140 million; Oklahoma, $20 million; South Carolina, $200 million; Utah, $20 million; Virginia, $467 million; and Wisconsin, $70 million.

Writing for the court, Justice Clarence Thomas said, "Nothing in the Constitution alters the fundamental rule of retrospective operation that has governed judicial decisions for near a thousand years."

Approved a bid of $221,816 from Comark of De Soto for construction and installation of a 69-by-52-foot portable building at Lamar Elementary and construction and installation of a 98-by-52-foot portable building at Pampa Middle School. Completion of that project is expected by Aug. 18. The school board also approved bids for computer hardware, fuel and intercom systems.

Reviewed Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test results from spring 1993 for grades four and eight and for the exit-level test.

School district administrators and board members expressed concern about the scores for mathematics being low.

Was told by Pampa Middle School teacher Lana Stump, who supervises the school's content-mastery program, that the number of PMS students on the six-weeks failure list has declined 70 percent over the last two school years. There were 110 PMS students participating in the content-mastery program during the 1992-93 school year. The program, which offers students special tutoring on a subject during a break from their regular class with that subject, two years ago replaced the traditional remedial education program at PMS. The traditional remedial education program had offered entire courses in separate classes from those of non-remedial students.

Considered and approved an auditor contract for 1993 and 1994 with Lewis Meers of Pampa. The fee for each financial audit and audit report is estimated at $10,000 to $13,000. Meers has conducted the financial audits for PMS for the last several years.

Presented certificates to 12 PMS elementary students for works of art they created, about half of them self-portraits, that will be kept on display in the Pampa school board meeting room through next school year. Two works of art were selected from each of the six elementary school campuses. Students created the art work under the supervision of Stephanie Spears, an artist-in-residence from San Antonio who was employed by PMS during a six-week period of the 1992-93 school year.

Approved a bid from First National Bank to be the official depository bank for PMS for a two-year period beginning Sept. 1. First National Bank has been the depository bank for PMS for the last two years.

Approved a property tax refund of $1,339 to Bob Tigrett under the terms of an adjustment made by the Gray County Appraisal Review Board.

Approved the sale of delinquent tax property at 1112 S. Wilcox for $300 and delinquent tax property at 927 E. Denver for $380.

Somalia

Fighting on Thursday engulfed much of the southern half of Mogadishu, which Aidid has controlled for nearly two years, and U.N. soldiers came under relentless sniper fire.

Aidid's gunmen fired at U.N. troops from behind hospital patients at Digfer Hospital, near the warlord's home and office, Sills said.

U.N. forces in the field also reported that Somali foes with hand grenades "hid behind women and children until they were within throwing distance" of U.N. troops, Sills reported.

Sills said 36 Moroccan and three Pakistani peacekeepers were wounded, as well as three French troops and an American soldier. The Moroccan forces came under fire when confronted by a large crowd of demonstrators, he added.

The night passed peacefully and the dawn brought people and traffic back onto streets, although it was the Muslim sabbath and a day of rest for most residents. A few small shops and rickety stalls opened, and reporters encountered hostility only from die-hard Aidid supporters near his ruined home.

Scout helicopters flew through the gloom, but the American Cobra gunships that provided cover for Thursday's fierce ground assault were not in the air above this seaside capital.

Howe said he ordered Lt. Gen. Cevik Bir, the Turkish commander of U.N. forces in Somalia, to arrest Aidid despite the fact that an investigation into the June 5 ambush is incomplete.

A U.N. Security Council resolution demanding the arrest of those responsible for the ambush did not name Aidid, although U.N. officials have openly blamed him for it.

"It is my feeling that General Aidid ... is a threat to Somalia and to the international community and ... must be detained," Howe told reporters Thursday evening. "I hope he will give himself up peacefully."

Aidid has also been held largely responsible for the more than 350,000 Somalis who have died from famine and disease caused by a clan war he launched in a quest for power.

Thursday's fighting came as foreign aid workers were beginning to trickle back into Mogadishu after being evacuated in advance of the U.N. strike.

Food distribution sites have been closed since June 6. The aid workers, protected by the peacekeepers from bandits and gunmen loyal to warlords, have been trying to restore order to Somalia.

"Keep the fire going in the organization, keep the spirit alive," she encouraged those attending the meeting.

During the meeting, Lynda Duncan, Gray County chapter manager, presented certificates of appreciation to special volunteers. These included Betty Gordon, who provided assistance in service to the military in 1947, and an exceptional volunteer service award to Jack Skelly, who has been with the Red Cross for 53 years. His wife, Lillian, was also honored for attending board meetings with her husband and helping him with his volunteer service.

Also honored for their volunteer service were Louise McCain, office volunteer; Bob Muns, community service; Donna Burton, blood pressure checks at the Red Cross office; Katrina Hildebrandt, office work with computers; David Winegeart, overall volunteer assistance; Frankie Hildenbrand, water safety chairman; and Reed Kirkpatrick, serving as county chapter chairman.

Receiving special mention were two senior developmental students at Pampa High School, Heidi and Jamie. Cindy Cooper, who works with the students, was honored for outstanding service and leadership in the community.

"The Red Cross is made up of volunteers ... without volunteers, the Red Cross could not work," Duncan said.

A special award was presented to Joe Gordon, representing the Nona S. Payne Foundation, for a foundation donation to the chapter's disaster fund.

Presiding over the meeting, Kirkpatrick expressed appreciation to those who have served on the board in the past year and those who have volunteered their service to the chapter.

"Each and everyone of you here tonight is special," he said.

New board directors Harley Madison and Morris Burroughs were elected at the meeting.

WT changes name with little pomp

CANYON — West Texas A&M University came into being June 1 with little pomp or circumstance. The fifth name change in the university's history was conducted quietly and smoothly over a period of time dating back to last September.

"I would have to say the name change was the smoothest, easiest transition I have ever been involved with," Dr. Barry B. Thompson, WTAMU president, said. "Our name now illustrates our strong tie to the Texas A&M University System, and that is what we were striving for."

Regardless of the institution's name, WTAMU is still committed to being a strong regional university. Increasing enrollment stood at approximately 6,400 students in the fall of 1992, and the faculty is a diverse group of men and women who represent many different backgrounds and points of view, Dr. Thompson said.

The economic impact of WTAMU on the Panhandle of Texas represents more than $125 million annually. A large majority, approximately 80 percent, of the university's students come from within a 150-mile radius and remain in the same area after graduation.

The university is a leader in many academic areas, Thompson said. Originally founded as a teacher-education institution, WTAMU continues to carry out that tradition. The university accounts for approximately 75 percent of the public school teachers in the top 26 counties of Texas.

Teacher education is not the only area in which WTAMU thrives. Of all the bachelor's- and master's-degreeed nurses in Amarillo, an estimated 70 percent are graduates of the university. Combined, the four hospitals in Amarillo hire 60 percent of the WTSU graduate class of nurses each year.

New academic programs are also on the horizon, Thompson noted. Initiatives in environmental science, equine science, teacher education, dryland agriculture and engineering technology will move the university into the 21st century.

WTAMU has a tremendous impact on the cultural environment of the area as well, he said. The Sybil B. Harrington College of Fine Arts and Humanities is the only college of fine arts in the Texas A&M University System. The Amarillo Symphony boasts that 66 percent of its members are WTAMU students or faculty members, and an additional 16 percent are graduates of the university. Of all the actors, singers, dancers and technicians in the outdoor musical drama TEXAS, more than 50 percent are graduates or current students of the university.

The athletic programs at the university have expanded as well, Thompson said. The athletic budget has been brought under control, and all athletic scholarships for the past two years have come from private donations. With the return of football in the fall of 1992 and the addition of soccer, baseball and cross country, there is something for all sports fans, he claimed.

"WT," as the university has been affectionately known since 1910, is still "WT" and countless alumni are enthusiastically supportive of the fact," Thompson said. "The loyal alumni of 'WT' have made lasting contributions to teaching, law business, science, nursing, agriculture, the fine arts and the liberal arts. There is no doubt in my mind that West Texas A&M University will continue to add to the long list of institutional accomplishments already noted."

Baptists end convention without major fights

HOUSTON (AP) — The annual Southern Baptist Convention meeting ended with few sparks, considering the group's record of infighting.

Ironically, the roots of much of the convention's turmoil began in Houston in 1979 with a resurgence of the conservatives. For the next decade, moderates and conservatives fought over the powerful post of convention president.

"This has been the calmest convention in 14 years," said George Ward, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Papillion in Omaha, Neb., on Thursday.

"I think we have finally agreed to disagree. ... I think many from both groups are tired of fighting," he said. "I think there's been a feeling that America's morality is going down the tubes and we're here fighting with each other."

The more than 17,000 delegates, or messengers, did not, however, quarrel much among themselves. No one ran against the Rev. Ed Young of Houston, and he was re-elected president of the conservative-led convention by acclamation Tuesday.

Ward said he believes both moderates and conservatives are committed to the goals of missions and evangelism, but that they have decided to "go our own ways" in pursuit of those ideals.

Southern Baptists spent a good part of the three-day convention denouncing homosexuality and abortion. They also repeatedly singled out a fellow Baptist — President Clinton — for criticism for his support of abortion and gay rights.

On Thursday, the group's messengers overwhelmingly endorsed a resolution that said government should not give special legal protection to homosexuals or "impose legal sanctions against those who believe homosexual conduct to be immoral."

They passed several other resolutions Thursday, including one stating their opposition to abortion and any attempts to halt anti-abortion protests.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Valley Morning Star, on modern-day dinosaurs:

Those concerned about the future of freedom in this country and around the world might have reason to be grateful to Steven Spielberg and author Michael Crichton for the new dinosaur flick, Jurassic Park. Viewed from a slight angle, the movie contains political lessons, though not necessarily the ones intended by the creators ...

Don't mess with nature for profit? That's the surface message. But at another level, another message might be discerned ...

Many commentators have referred to the modern political state — huge, brainless behemoth that it is — as something of a dinosaur. But there's a temptation to view it as essentially benign, or harmless, if expensive and a nuisance.

Jurassic Park should remind us that some branches of the state, like some breeds of dinosaur, can be terrifying and dangerous. Think of the IRS, the ATF, or an innocent person put through the meat-grinder in the court system.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times, on the school-finance plan:

Recent Texas history is littered with failed school-finance plans. Now, there's reason to fear another one may be added to the wreckage. The current plan, crafted in the final days of the legislative session to avoid closing the schools, would leave many of the poor districts poorer. Its survival is beginning to look doubtful ...

John O'Brien of the Legislative Budget Board said 80 percent of the state's school districts will lose under the plan ...

The state relies too much on local property taxes to fund education, which creates the imbalance. The Legislature at some point will have to go back and rework the foundation. A new coat of paint won't do the job. It will have to increase the state's share of the cost of public education — from less than half now to somewhere around two-thirds or three-fourths. To do that, it should modernize the state's tax structure, which in itself is unfair and inefficient ...

It's a form of collective denial by the Legislature to ignore the best options to fix this problem, but it has done that for five years now and has become so myopic on the subject that it seemingly can't see beyond the quick fixes.

El Paso Herald-Post on religion and the schools:

In two new rulings on religion and schools, the Supreme Court showed a welcome moderation.

The amazing thing about the Lamb's Chapel case is that it ever came before the court. Unanimously, the justices held that when school buildings are made available after hours for social, civic or recreational use, they must be open on the same terms to secular and church-sponsored events. That, of course, is as it should be. Nothing in the Constitution permits government discrimination against religion ...

In another recent foray into church-state relations, the court refused to hear a case from Texas on graduation prayers. Last term, the court held that nondenominational invocations and benedictions led by clergy at graduation ceremonies were unconstitutional. In reaction, some districts incorporated student-led prayers in this spring's graduations.

An appeals court allowed such student prayers to go forward, and the high court declined to intervene. If the issue remains contentious, no doubt the justices will have chances to consider it further.

Meanwhile, in North Korea ...

June 12 is past, and that was a critical date at the other end of the globe. It is the date when North Korea was to disaffiliate from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. June 12 brings us to the required 90 days since, on March 12, the North Korean government announced that it would rescind — the first country to do so since the non-proliferation business began in 1970. The nation backed down from that stance — for now. But if it changes its mind again, what are we going to do about it?

It is hardly relevant to say in answer to that question, "What do you mean, 'we,' paleface?" You can argue about our non-involvement in the fate of Bosnia and make out a pretty good case, at least for a while. But if North Korea gets the bomb, it can't seriously be held that the United States can decline to involve itself on the grounds that although the North Koreans will have the bomb, they don't have the launch facilities to land one in Seattle.

Just to begin with, we have 36,500 troops in South Korea. Now the putative nuclear bomb entirely to one side, one learns that the study of existing military balances in Korea done by the Pentagon's Office of Net Assessment recently is still secret. But we know this much about it: Namely, that if the war were to begin tomorrow, the north, using only conventional forces, could occupy Seoul in "two to three days." The American military arm, to quote retired Col. Bob Gaskin of the Pentagon, "would either be swept up or wiped out."

One wonders what it is in the balance of the report that is still "secret." That the North Korean army could also take Tokyo?

The North Koreans number 22 million, and 1.2 million is the size of their army, the largest, per capita, in the world. What is truly surprising is that the morale of the North Koreans is startlingly high.

William F. Buckley Jr.

It is difficult to understand how this came about, in the most tightly closed society on earth. Radios in the north wear an electronic prophylactic that prevents them from insinuating any news from abroad — only local news. There is no mail. Practically no foreign commerce. Who knows, maybe the North Koreans believe that theirs is the land of prosperity, and that everywhere else people are starving to death.

What is surprising is that although meetings have been held twice within the United Nations between American and North Korean representatives, and we have insisted that the North Koreans rescind their rescission and stay inside the non-proliferation club, all that we have threatened them with is sanctions. It has been three years since the old Soviet Union stopped supporting North Korea, one year since China stopped, so that we are entitled to wonder: Just what is it that sanctions are supposed to do to a society relatively autarchic in its resources?

And are we actually going to wait until we see a little mushroom cloud in the sky above the DMZ before acting?

But then, of course, the second question arises: If we were to strike against the nuclear plant, imitating the character of the pre-emptive strike by Israel against the burgeoning nuclear capacity of Iraq back in 1981, would that be enough, given what we know about the conventional strength of the North Koreans?

That we are obliged to abort the nuclear bomb is axiomatic. Unless we do this much, the entire area will become a nuclear garrison.

Clearly Japan could not eschew the development of a deterrent nuclear force. And if Japan were to go ahead, we would see a revival of nuclear activity in Russia and in China. And, somewhere along the line, South Korea would wonder whether the security granted by the U.S. nuclear umbrella over all these years would have the strategic longevity required. It is unimaginable that President Clinton would allow such a situation to develop.

But we are left with the derivative question, and it is: What are we prepared to do to safeguard our own troops in South Korea, and the city of Seoul? It is one thing to use a few smart bombs to destroy the nuclear factories in North Korea, another to move massively against conventional forces gathered for a strike against the south.

The distance between North Korean Scud missiles and the city of Seoul is about 50 miles. One estimate heard in Seoul a year ago was that a quick-blitz Scud and artillery attack by the north against Seoul would result in between 150,000 and 180,000 casualties. We are talking about more casualties than Hiroshima. Close to Dresden.

There are those who believe that Kim Jong Il, the 51-year-old successor to his father, Kim Il Sung, is doing a little swaggering and saber-rattling to impress the locals. That may be. But he is also impressing this non-local, who among others wishes to know just what the commander in chief has in mind to protect our interests and our troops in that part of the world.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 18, the 169th day of 1993. There are 196 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
Ten years ago, on June 18, 1983, astronaut Sally K. Ride became America's first woman in space as she and four colleagues blasted off aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

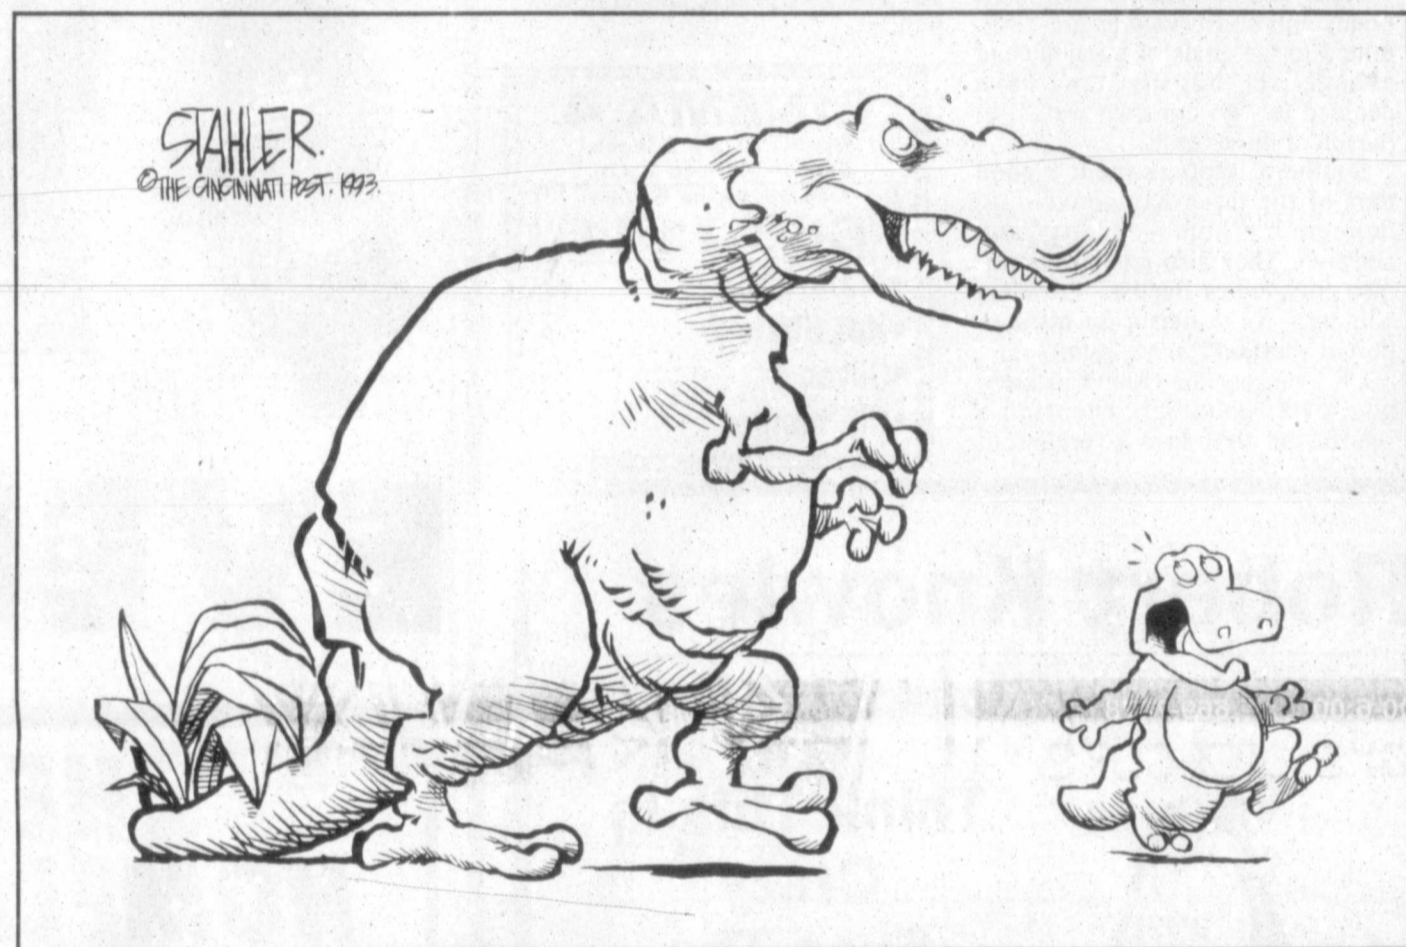

On this date:
In 1778, American forces entered Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, the United States declared war against Britain.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte met his Waterloo as British and Prussian troops defeated the French in Belgium.

In 1873, suffragist Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 for attempting to vote in the 1872 presidential election.

In 1928, aviator Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean as she completed a flight from Newfoundland to Wales in about 21 hours.

Good eating, good medicine

He was a scientist of enough renown to enjoy a comfortable retirement. A gifted chemist with two Nobel Prizes to his credit, with a generous retirement income from Stanford and a comfortable seaside home south of Carmel, Calif.

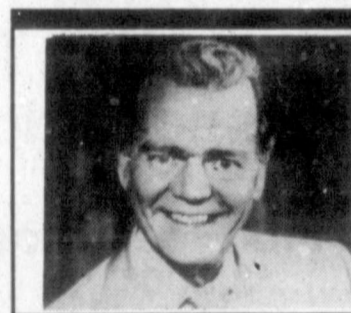

"Why," his scientific colleagues wanted to know, "why, Linus, are you willing to risk professional humiliation by devoting your time and money to this crackpot activity?"

"This crackpot activity" that got Linus Pauling laughed at by the scientific fraternity 20 years ago was his insistence that large doses of Vitamin E may help prevent heart disease and that Vitamin C can prevent most colds and may prevent certain cancers.

Dr. Pauling, now 92, has been vindicated by more than enough scientific studies affirming that Vitamin E may help prevent heart disease and that Vitamin C can prevent most colds and may prevent certain cancers.

If Dr. Pauling was that gifted in anticipating the future then, what has he to say now?

Now, he says he has put his own prostate cancer to rest with certain drugs and enough Vitamin C.

Paul Harvey

Loma Linda University in Southern California has been in the vanguard of those relating nutrition to health. Loma Linda research now recommends a small handful of nuts five times a week to reduce coronary heart disease risk by half!

Science writer Lowell Ponte for the current Reader's Digest collected and synopsized the United States Department of Agriculture discovery that the spice cinnamon can cause a 400 percent improvement in blood sugar regulation in human tissue.

Dr. Walter Willet, chief of nutrition for the Harvard School of Public Health, says the healthiest cuisine in the world is that of Mediterranean nations — Italian food, Greek food, French food — despite the fact that it features cholesterol-rich cheese and goose fat and olive oil.

But Mediterranean foods also include garlic, recognized as a blood-thinner that can kill a host of germs in the human body.

Asians for years have enjoyed green tea, which contains a cancer-gene-blocking chemical. Does this explain why Japanese men smoke twice as much as American men and yet have only half as much lung cancer?

Grandmother somehow knew that vegetables were good for you; now we know why. Cabbage and Brussels sprouts, kale and watercress contain anti-cancer chemicals called indoles.

The pectin in grapefruit and apples may actually reverse hardening of arteries.

In the science of nutrition we are all learners, but we are learning enough at least to hope that the new horizon in medicine will focus on the prevention rather than the cure of disease. Sure would cost less!

Political names that float and sink

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court search was exhaustive and awkward, a spring-long succession of stops and starts, of names that floated and sank.

President Clinton had interviewed Ruth Bader Ginsburg one day before he named her on Monday, after a hectic weekend of background checks by weary White House aides.

While a three-month selection process is not unprecedented — the last Democratic justice was nominated after that same time span — this one was semi-public. Candidates were at the brink, then suddenly gone.

But not without a consolation prize of sorts. Another time, perhaps, the president said of two men bypassed for the nomination. It seemed an aptly odd footnote to a search that could serve as a guide to problems to be avoided when selecting a nominee.

None of that will make any difference when, as seems probable, Ginsburg is confirmed by the Senate to move from the U.S. Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court. But the process hasn't helped Clinton's image problems. He's still got to deal with the impression that he wavers, and can be pushed into changing course — or candidates.

Clinton bristled when a TV correspondent began what was to have been a nomination news conference with a question suggesting just that, inviting him to dispel the notion "of a certain zigzag quality in the decision-making process here." The president snapped a reply to match the argumentative question, without answering. "I have long since given up the thought that I could disabuse some of you turning any substantive decision into anything but political process," he said.

"How you could ask a question like that after the statement she just made is beyond me," Clinton said, turning toward Ginsburg, who had just ended her thanks by invoking the memory of her mother.

The rebuke drew applause among the senators, guests and presidential aides assembled in the sunlit Rose Garden. But the question persists, a problem for Clinton.

So does the impression that political concerns were a factor. Presenting his nominee, Clinton said Ginsburg is a consensus builder, a moderate, neither liberal nor conservative but a leading centrist judge. That choice fits the Clinton effort to reclaim his own credentials as a centrist New Democrat.

Then, too, the selection of a woman for the court was his first major personnel move since the withdrawal of a black woman nominee to be head of the Justice Department civil rights division.

Until the last two days of the longest Supreme Court search in 26 years, the Clinton White House had been floating the names of two men for the seat of the retiring Justice Byron R. White.

First it was Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, until he ran up against both foes and friends. Senate Republicans indicated he might face a confirmation fight. And environmentalists wanted him to stay put in the Cabinet. That's obviously not what Babbitt wanted.

But suddenly his status switched from cinch to maybe, and the White House betting squad turned to Stephen G. Breyer, U.S. Court of Appeals judge in Boston. He'd been injured when his bicycle was hit by a car, so White House aides went to his hospital room in Boston on Thursday, and he took the train to Washington on Friday to see Clinton.

Done deal, they were saying by then.

Breyer did have the now-familiar problem of having employed a part-time maid without paying her Social Security, though when he found out he was supposed to last winter, he did. The White House knew that weeks ago, and discounted it as an obstacle, although two potential Justice Department nominees, one man and one woman, were dropped earlier over similar episodes.

Suddenly, on Saturday, things stalled again. Exit Breyer, enter Ginsburg.

Clinton said he'd been impressed with both men. "I think either one of these candidates, as well as the handful of others whom I closely considered, may well find themselves in that position some day in the future," the president said Monday.

Could be. Clinton may have another court opening before 1996. Justice Harry A. Blackmun, at 84 the oldest on the court, may be retiring soon.

Connally laid to rest with bullet fragments in body

By JOHN McFARLIN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Former Gov. John Connally went to his grave with the bullet fragments conspiracy theorists say could prove whether a second gunman took part in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Friends and relatives of Connally were cool to researchers' requests that the fragments be removed from the body, and the government made no move to halt the burial Thursday or have him exhumed.

"It's an appalling attempt to capitalize on Governor Connally's death to gain publicity for worn-out theories," said Julian Read, a family spokesman.

Connally, governor from 1963 to 1969, died Tuesday of pulmonary fibrosis at 76. He was buried Thursday in Austin.

He was sitting in the open limousine with Kennedy and the first lady when the president was assassinated on Nov. 22, 1963.

According to the Warren Commission report, one of the bullets — fired by Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone — passed through the president and pierced Connally's back. It exited through his chest, passed through his right wrist, went into his left thigh and was found on a hospital stretcher, the report said.

Critics of the Warren Commission report have said a single bullet could not have taken such a path and come out in such good condition.

Bullet fragments taken from Connally were examined in the late 1970s by the House Select Committee on Assassinations. The panel concluded that the fragments came from the same bullet that struck Kennedy.

Dr. Cyril Wecht, a Pittsburgh pathologist, said the fragments still in Connally's body would show otherwise. He was among researchers who signed a letter to Attorney General Janet Reno asking that the pieces be removed.

Under state and federal law, the fragments could not be removed without the permission of his family or a court order.

The JFK researchers contend that state or federal officials have the authority to compel an examination of the body because the fragments are critical evidence in a murder investigation.

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said the department agreed with the recommendation of Oliver "Buck" Revell, agent in charge of the FBI's Dallas office, who said the fragments should be removed if the family gave approval.

"I think it would be best for the family, best for the government, best for the country to take care of the issue now," Revell said.

Revell said that he does not believe the bullet fragments would prove a conspiracy but that an analysis might silence some critics of the single-bullet theory. He said that he had hoped the removal could be done before Connally's burial but that burial would not necessarily end the matter.

At Connally's funeral, relatives, friends and dignitaries remembered him as a giant of a man and a Texas legend. About 850 people gathered at First United Methodist Church.

"He was huge in our sight and strode across our lives like a colossus," John B. Connally III said of his 6-foot-2 father.

"He not only had lived a full life, but he left his fingerprints on the history of our generation. ... John Connally will stand tall in the history books of Texas and the nation," the Rev. Billy Graham said.

The service drew all five living Texas governors, former President Nixon, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and former House Speaker Jim Wright.

Hundreds waited in the hot sun outside the Capitol to file past his Texas flag-draped coffin before the funeral and burial at the State Cemetery.

French scientists plan nuke meltdown to test predictions

CADARACHE, France (AP) — In this former hunting reserve of Provence, among the oaks and red poppies, scientists are preparing a small nuclear meltdown.

For the first time, they will trigger a meltdown to test predictions about radioactive contamination in a nuclear plant and estimate the fallout that could escape.

"These are extremely severe conditions, and very improbable, in which safeguards wouldn't work and no operators would be able to take measures to reduce the consequences," said Andre Arnaud, chief of fission products analysis of the Phebus Program.

"If you look at Three Mile Island, it is that type of accident," said Farouk El Tawila, chief of accident research at the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Rockville, Md.

Results could prompt changes in evacuation procedures and alterations in nuclear plant design, said Alain Tattegrain, deputy head of the project.

Reports of a meltdown in Provence frightened some local residents and potential vacationers, who decided to skip France's sunny south this year.

"We got calls from people who wanted to know when it was going to happen so they could make sure they wouldn't be around," said Tattegrain, whose program is overseen by the government's Nuclear Protection and Safety Institute.

Officials have taken precautions to keep radiation from breaching the gleaming concrete containment buildings.

"I can't say there isn't a chance. But the size of the reactor is such that the amount would be negligible," Tattegrain said.

He said Phebus is one five-thousandth the size of a commercial reactor.

The Cadarache nuclear research center employs 3,000 people and operates a half-dozen experimental reactors in a rural area 30 miles northeast of Aix-en-Provence.

Anti-nuclear activists say the experiment can't be compared to a full-scale accident, because if all goes well the public may be lulled into thinking a nuclear accident isn't particularly dangerous.

"It's a banalization of nuclear risks," said Jean-Luc Thierry, a Greenpeace spokesman.

Opponents say the $185 million for a 10-year project involving six meltdowns by the year 2000 would be better spent developing non-nuclear power.

But with 56 nuclear plants generating 75 percent of its power, France is going ahead with the experiments. The first is set for September.

Some area residents are getting nervous.

"The mayor was worried, and people were telling us 'We don't want a kind of Chernobyl,'" said

Marceau Matheron, deputy mayor of Vinon-sur-Verdon, a town of 2,800 four miles northeast of Cadarache.

"Some people from Paris came, there was a communication of facts, and everything calmed down."

Since the 1979 Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania, countries including France and the United States have melted small reactor cores to determine what fission products are released.

But this will be the first test of a reactor with a complete cooling system to determine potential contamination throughout a nuclear plant, Tattegrain said.

The reactor has three extra barriers of high-strength zirconium and other steel alloys to keep the exterior at about 320 degrees Fahrenheit while water coolant is reduced and the core melts at around 5,000 degrees, Tattegrain said.

Clinton rebounds at media conference, but who saw it?

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — With grace and good humor, President Clinton used an East Room news conference to give Americans a fact-filled tutorial on his budget plan — complete with Ross Perot-style charts — and to declare a victory of sorts in Somalia.

He was, at turns, charming and disarming Thursday night. He stopped one reporter in mid-question to compliment him on his Mickey Mouse tie.

To another reporter's question about strained relations with New Zealand, Clinton confessed with a smile, "I've given absolutely no thought to that question."

He also paused to accept a glass of water from a tuxedoed waiter and then cracked, "I hope his mother's watching."

The performance was a distinct change for a president plagued recently by missteps on everything from gays in the military to trouble with appointments.

The only drawback for Clinton was that many television viewers likely didn't see it.

ABC and CBS refused to carry the 8 p.m. news conference live and NBC cut Clinton off after 25 minutes. CNN carried it all.

Asked this morning if he was mad at the networks that didn't carry his news conference, Clinton said, "No, I'm grateful for those that did."

But the White House was angry, recalling that Ronald Reagan and George Bush didn't have much trouble getting prime-time coverage.

"We're really disappointed," Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos said.

But not with Clinton's performance.

"The president was relaxed last night, he was confident, he had a good time, Stephanopoulos said this morning on NBC. "We're hoping to do more of these as we move into the future."

"We are putting our economic house in order," the president said as his $500 billion deficit-reduction plan advanced in the Senate.

Pointing to a multicolored chart tracking the surging budget deficit that he inherited, Clinton said: "I may have a lot to learn but I didn't create the red line."

Explaining his plan in detail and pronouncing it fair and balanced, Clinton promised: "If this plan passes you will see a continuation of what's happened already in the last five months: low interest rates, increasing housing sales, more jobs coming into the economy."

Clinton opened his news conference by saying U.S.-led military strikes had "crippled the forces" of Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

He said the operation "is over and ... it was a success" in punishing Aidid for killing U.N. peacekeepers. "We could not let it go unpunished," the president said. Aidid, however, continued to elude U.N. forces trying to arrest him.

On other matters, Clinton: —Said he would have preferred preserving a multi-ethnic state in Bosnia, rather than carving it up into three ethnic zones as proposed by international mediators. However, he said the United States would have to look at the proposal very seriously if its accepted by all the parties. However, Clinton said that "Serbian aggression has been rewarded" to some extent.

—Said he remains optimistic that a health-care reform plan can pass the Congress this year. "We cannot get the deficit down to zero, which is where it ought to be, until we do something about health care costs," he said.

—Said that enacting a reform bill this year depends largely "on how warmly embraced it is by Congress."

The central message of Clinton's news conference was that he is making progress on issues important to Americans after a string of victories in Congress.

He cited action on his deficit-reduction plan, Senate approval of a campaign-finance reform bill and endorsement by congressional committees of his plan to offer college loans in return for community service.

Clinton called the economic plan, which includes hundreds of billions in new taxes, "the most progressive tax plan this country has seen in decades," with two-thirds of the increases to be paid by people with incomes above $200,000.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., grudgingly gave Clinton good marks for the news conference even while insisting that his deficit-reduction numbers didn't add up.

"I thought it was a good performance, but he didn't have his facts right," Dole said. "He's a nice person, he looks good. It's the product that ought to be traded in."

Officials believe DPS trooper was killed with own handgun

AMARILLO (AP) — Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Bobby Steve Booth may have been killed with his own service handgun, said Wayne Beighle, spokesman for the DPS in Amarillo.

Booth, 28, was shot several times Wednesday after responding to a report of an erratic driver just north of Stratford, 85 miles north of Amarillo.

Beighle said Booth was wearing a bullet-proof vest at the time he was shot. But, Beighle said, "There are a lot of places that a bullet-proof vest does not cover."

Beighle said authorities unsuccessfully have searched the immediate area for Booth's handgun and have since begun a "massive search" for the weapon in surrounding areas.

Joseph H. Horton, 48, of Tallahassee, Fla., was arrested in Stratford without incident Wednesday and charged with capital murder in connection with the shooting. Horton was held without bond on Thursday in the Sherman County jail, DPS spokesman Jerry Burgdorf said.

Funeral services will be conducted for Booth at 10 a.m. Saturday at First Baptist Church in Stratford. A graveside service for the Memphis native will be at 3 p.m. Saturday at Fairview Cemetery in Memphis. A memorial service will follow at 4 p.m. at the Church of Christ in Memphis.

Russians compare U.S.-Soviet environmental problems

AMARILLO (AP) — The United States and former Soviet Union face similar problems with nuclear waste and contamination left over from decades of weapons production, say members of a Russian ecological group.

The Russians were in Amarillo Thursday to meet with members of area environmental groups and to tour near the Pantex Plant, where U.S. weapons are assembled and disassembled. For security reasons foreigners are not allowed inside the plant.

Speaking through an interpreter, Boris Nekrasov, a journalist and a member of the Ecological Initiative at Tomsk, said Tomsk residents are concerned about possible contamination of their water supplies because millions of cubic meters of radioactive waste were pumped underground.

Ilya Popov, a computer specialist and network coordinator for the Nuclear Ecology Program of the Socio-Ecological Union in Moscow, said many details of the former Soviet Union's weapons program remain secret. However, he said ecological groups now are working to glean as many details as possible about its former operations.

Clinton backs super collider

WAXAHACHIE - Folks in this quiet Texas town aren't banking on President Clinton's avowed support of the super collider.

They want to make sure that Congress follows through with the funding for the $8.2 billion project being built here.

"We want the super collider finished. Let's bite the bullet and pay for it," says Waxahachie resident Richard Moir.

Clinton on Thursday reaffirmed his support for the embattled project in a letter to Congress much to the delight of most collider backers. The House is scheduled next week to consider whether to approve $620 million for the collider for 1994.

"These are tough economic times, yet our administration supports this project as part of its broad investment package in science and technology," Clinton wrote.

Still residents here aren't sure whether the president's stamp of approval will help or hinder the project.

"I'm not real positive about it because I think he's had a lot of negative publicity lately," Moir said.

Instead they're hoping common sense will keep the giant atom smasher under construction.

"They've already sunk so much money into it, if they stop it now, you've wasted all that money for nothing," Moir said.

Resident Mike Lyle agrees. "I don't want to see a half-done project out there with all the land they've acquired," said Lyle, whose tractor business has benefited from the project. "It'd just be a ghost town if they take it away."

Collider supporters were alarmed earlier this year by reports that budget director Leon Panetta proposed abandoning the project. The Clinton administration denied the reports, but speculation was rampant that the president's support would wane after the June 5 Texas Senate election, which was won by Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Now Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, said Clinton's letter proves his support of the project goes beyond politics.

"It has nothing to do with politics, with Senate races, with anything else," he said. "It's a project (Clinton) supports on its merits and I think that is a very positive signal to send to the entire Congress and it will help."

Raphael Kasper, associate director of the collider laboratory in Waxahachie, said Clinton's reaffirmed support of the project was well timed and will probably help secure last-minute congressional votes.

"The president has in the past indicated his support for the super collider, but coming at a time when Congress is considering the appropriations, it is gratifying to get this concrete statement of support," he said. "It probably will be a useful statement for people in Congress who haven't made up their minds."

Clinton's letter was delivered to the Appropriations Committee just before it took up consideration of a $21.7 billion energy and water development bill that contains $620 million for the collider next year. The bill passed without debate.

The $620 million is $20 million less than the administration requested, but 20 percent more than the $517 million received this year.

Critics are framing the House vote as a test of lawmakers' desire to reduce spending. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that killing the collider could save as much as $3 billion over five years.

The collider's price tag, still officially at $8.2 billion, is likely to be revised to $10 billion or more later this summer.

President gives support to new space station project plans

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) - Workers in NASA Building 4708 don't care exactly what kind of space station President Clinton wants. They're happy just to know he wants one.

Clinton ended weeks of uncertainty Thursday by saying he backed continued construction of a manned space station, albeit a scaled-back version. He also endorsed the Texas super collider, the atom smasher scientists hope will help them unlock secrets about matter and energy.

The space station announcement was met with almost visible relief at northern Alabama's Marshall Space Flight Center. Engineers there are building final test versions of the station's living and working quarters.

"I'm just glad we've got work to do," a smiling Dan Roark said as he showed off a digital X-ray machine designed to inspect welds on the station's skin. "I hope we get to use this thing. It sounds like we will."

Roark works in Building 4708, where NASA engineers once did final quality checks on the Saturn rockets that blasted Americans to the moon. The building is now occupied by the Boeing Defense & Space Group, Roark's employer and the prime contractor for the station's pressurized modules.

The White House said Clinton's plan for a scaled-down, $16.5 billion space station would save between $8 billion and $9 billion by the year 2000, and $18 billion over the life of the project. He also called for staff cuts at NASA.

Engineers already have been working on the space station for nearly a decade, during which time the United States has spent $9 billion.

Clinton's announcement came after he ordered NASA to redesign the project for a third time to save money. The administration settled on a combination of two versions that were recommended by NASA and favored by European countries with a stake in the space station.

John B. Winch, a Boeing vice president, said Clinton's proposal would let NASA use equipment years in the making.

"We're not going to be starting over again. That's really good news," said George Hopson, manager of the space station office at Marshall.

It was great news in a city of 160,000 where some 4,400 people work on the project. About 2,400 of them are employed by Boeing, which stood to lose parts of its $2.6 billion contract had Clinton chosen a radically different design or killed the program outright.

Marshall director Jack Lee expressed hope that the cost savings, combined with a revamped management structure, would smooth the project's path in Congress, where critics have tried for years to eliminate funding. Rep. Dick Zimmer, R-N.J., a space station critic, said there are more votes than ever for killing the project.

...AN AIRPLANE!

WHAT DO THESE DIFFERENT PLACES ALL HAVE IN COMMON?
...WHY A GIDEON BIBLE, OF COURSE!

IN 1908, AT THE SUPERIOR HOTEL, IRON MOUNTAIN, MONTANA, THE FIRST GIDEON BIBLE WAS GIVEN AWAY. SINCE THEN, GIDEONS INTERNATIONAL HAS PLACED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD 211 MILLION BIBLES FOR THE TRAVELER TO READ!

WHY DO THESE DEDICATED MEN, ALL VOLUNTEERS, CALL THEMSELVES GIDEONS? IN JUDGES 6:12, THE BIBLICAL GIDEON WAS CALLED UPON BY AN ANGEL OF THE LORD. TODAY'S GIDEONS BELIEVE THEY HAVE BEEN CALLED TO DISTRIBUTE THE WORD OF THE LORD AS IT IS FOUND IN THE BIBLE!

Hundreds of Pampanos participate in annual 'March for Jesus'

"Exalting Jesus" was the theme for the Annual March for Jesus held last Saturday in Pampa. Local believers joined with more than one million Christians from 80 countries around the world and 300 U.S. cities, in a simultaneous March for Jesus.

In Pampa, more than 220 adults and children, representing more than thirteen area churches, met at Central Park for singing and prayer led by six area pastors.

For two miles marchers sang and danced while carrying banners, flags, posters and balloons down Duncan Street to Foster, then onto Hobart, Francis and back to the park.

"Not one negative thing has been said about the march," according to Jan Edmondson, Pampa coordinator for the march said. "Everyone loved it. I heard great testimonies of what the Lord did for people during the march."

Melody Ferguson, another marcher and site coordinator along with her husband Terry, said the march was fun. People were nice and waved (from their cars). Ferguson remarked that she was happy Christians are still free to openly magnify and worship the Lord.

The first March for Jesus was held in 1987, when the Ichthus Fellowship organized 15,000 people who marched through the streets of London, England in the pouring rain. In 1989 over 200,000 people participated in the march, gaining international media attention. March for Jesus crossed the Atlantic in 1992, when over 600,000 in 142 U.S. cities held a simultaneous march with 25 European countries.

Plans for next year's march are already underway, Edmondson stated. Anyone interested in more information about the march may contact Edmondson at 669-6582.

Feds on Pepsi: No evidence of tampering

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are finding no proof that foreign objects were deliberately sealed into Pepsi cans and are arresting people for lying about finding such things in the soft drinks.

"It is well-known that even one report of possible tampering can — and will — lead to unfounded reports," said Food and Drug Administration Commissioner David Kessler. "It is a vicious cycle."

"On the basis of the information we have so far, the notion that there has been a nationwide tampering of Diet Pepsi is unfounded," Kessler said at a news conference Thursday.

He said the conclusion was based on investigators' judgment, logic and forensic analyses.

Kessler said there had been a handful of federal arrests of people who claimed to have found syringes, nails or other objects in Pepsi cans and that other people who had made such claims are recanting.

"I would not be surprised if there were other additional arrests," Kessler said.

He said that in addition to an arrest earlier this week in Pennsylvania, federal authorities arrested three people Thursday in Covina, Calif.; Albion, Mich., and Ohio. Officials on Thursday also arrested a woman in Colorado and a man in South Carolina after store security cameras captured them putting objects in Pepsi containers.

Kelly Jo Fitzwater, 29, of Beach City, Ohio, was arrested on a federal charge of knowingly communicating false information that a product had been tainted, said FBI spokesman Bob Hawk.

Ms. Fitzwater, who said she found a sewing needle in a can of Diet Pepsi, appeared before U.S. Magistrate James Gallas in Akron and was released on $10,000 bond, Hawk said.

Federal authorities arrested Maria Luz Martinez, 62, of Covina, on charges of making false and fictitious statements to the FDA, said Carole Levitsky, a spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney's office in Los Angeles. Covina police said Ms. Martinez confessed that she had fabricated her story about finding a syringe in a Pepsi.

"Let me stress one point, and I am serious about this: We will prosecute false reports of tampering," Kessler said.

Working day and night since the reports of possible tampering began, "we have been unable to confirm even one case of tampering," Kessler said.

Kessler at first said he did not want to speculate on motives, but asked later why anyone would make a false report, he said: "They may have thought there's something in it for them."

The first report came June 9, when an 82-year-old man in Tacoma, Wash., said he peered into a can of Diet Pepsi to find out if he'd won a prize and found a syringe. Soon after, similar reports came pouring in.

The FDA and Pepsi-Cola would not release numbers, but local media accounts compiled by The Associated Press indicate more than 50 reports of tampering in at least 23 states had been made by Wednesday night.

Most complaints involved hypodermic needles or syringes, but other items were reported as well, including a crack cocaine vial, a bullet and a glob of dark brown goo.

By Wednesday, officials had confirmed just two reports of foreign objects in sealed soda cans — a screw found inside a Diet Pepsi can in Jacksonville, Fla., and a piece of machinery in a Coca-Cola can in Litchfield, Conn. In both cases authorities said the objects apparently fell off machinery.

"I will not stand before you today and promise that you will never find a foreign object in any food or beverage," Kessler said. "Millions of products are produced every day. Quality control problems will occur."

He also warned that tampering is still possible: "No product, no container, is ever 100 percent tamper-proof."

Church game offends some

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended our annual mothers and daughters banquet at the church I've belonged to for more than 20 years. (I am 52 years old.)

First, they asked all the women who were mothers to stand up. Then they asked all the mothers who wore dentures to sit down. Then they kept eliminating mothers according to their ages ("All mothers under 30, 40, 50 years old," etc.). The last woman left standing got the prize for being the oldest mother present with her own teeth.

Abby, I have had dentures for a long time, but it was not something I cared to advertise. I spoke with several women who attended that banquet, and they all agreed that the teeth contest was in very poor taste.

I told the program chairman that I was offended by the teeth business, and she laughed and said, "Oh, everyone knew it was just a joke. Don't be so sensitive."

I will leave it to you — and your readers — if you want to print this. How do you feel about such a "joke"?

NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO TOWN: I agree with you. It wasn't a very good joke. It was insensitive, unkind, and an invasion of privacy. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to ask how to obtain a passport or visa. What is the difference between them? How do you obtain them? I am planning a trip to the Philippines this summer and need this information, and I'm too embarrassed to ask anybody else.

JUST PLAIN BILL

DEAR BILL: A passport is proof of your citizenship and allows you to leave and re-enter your country. It also offers identification protection while you are in foreign countries. Your U.S. passport will allow you to leave the United States and travel, with the guarantee that you can re-enter the U.S.

According to the State Department's Office of Passport Services, Washington, D.C.: To obtain a passport, contact your local post office, courthouse or U.S. passport office. (A U.S. passport is valid for 10 years for adults.) You must fill out an application, provide proof of birth, pay a fee, and have passport photos taken. Allow four weeks to obtain a first-time passport.

A visa is stamped in your passport and allows you entry into a specific country. In your case, the Philippines does not require a visa for trips under 21 days. To obtain a visa, contact a travel agent or the local consulate of the country you wish to visit. To simplify the process, contact a travel agent for information about both the passport and visa.

DEAR ABBY: May I offer another fractured name? When my wife and I checked out of our hotel in Kagoshima City on Japan's southern main island of Kyushu for an overnight side trip, I left a roll of film to be developed and asked the desk clerk to hold it for our return.

When we checked back into the hotel and I asked for my pictures, they were nowhere to be found!

Finally, a thorough search was made and they were found — filed under "Mr. Hold-for-Return."

Forensic entomologist solves murders

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

BURNABY, British Columbia (AP) — A decomposing body is found dumped along a country road, long dead and crawling with maggots. The crime is far too old for pathologists to determine the time of death with any accuracy.

That's where Dr. Gail Anderson, Canada's only full-time bugbuster, enters the picture. She's a forensic entomologist who is able to calculate elapsed time since death by a close study of the creatures crawling in the cadaver.

"Insects are usually the first witnesses to a crime," says Ms. Anderson, whose salary is paid partly by the British Columbia Coroner's Service and partly by Simon Fraser University.

Forensic entomology is in its infancy as an investigative tool in North America, emerging only in the last 10 years or so. However, its first reported use dates to 13th-century China.

As one ancient tale goes, a man was murdered in a rural village, hacked to death with a sickle.

Authorities ordered all sickle owners to line up with their implements. As they waited, flies began to collect on the sickle held by one man. That's because despite a thorough cleaning, there were still traces of blood which attracted the insects.

Ms. Anderson's work is seldom that dramatic. It's essentially aimed at determining the time of a death, usually a key element in an investigation, though it can be applied to other mysteries, such as determining the point of origin of a cargo of marijuana.

"This isn't the kind of stuff that's going to convict anybody," says Ms. Anderson. "It's corroborative evidence. But it could exonerate somebody."

First onto a fresh corpse are the blowflies and houseflies interested in blood and body fluids. Then, as odor develops and fats become rancid the larger beetles check in. Further decomposition is accompanied by succeeding waves of other critters, such as cheese skippers, carrion beetles and darkling beetles.

"Forensic entomology is usually used to determine the date of death where no other means is available, or when you have to corroborate other information," said Inspector Herb Leroy of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Ottawa.

"We are quite anxious to set up a national ability not only for the RCMP, but other departments to access forensic entomology," said Leroy. "While it may not be a precise science, it is definitely an investigative aid."

The two principal ways of using insects to determine time of death are studying the age and development of maggots and examining the succession of insects that invade the corpse.

In the first method, flies land on the body and almost immediately lay eggs in the wounds or natural orifices.

Scientists know the time required for the development of the maggots, which are fly larvae, through their various stages.

"So if I know the temperature and I know the species, I know how long the person has been dead," said Ms. Anderson, who is also an assistant professor of biology at Simon Fraser.

This method is most effective in the first few weeks. In that period, Ms. Anderson can give the day of death or a range of days.

The second method is used when the corpse has been dead between two months and several years. In those cases, the range of time is greater. She can estimate the month, or the season. But used in conjunction with other information, such as when the victim was last seen, or last paid a bill, a more precise determination can be made.

"There are limitations," she said. "If the body has been laying out in Yellowknife (Northwest Territories) in the middle of winter, there won't be any insects on him. But then you'll know he died in winter."

Ms. Anderson has worked on about 35 cases across Canada, not all of them homicides; she's frequently called as an expert witness in trials. When not dealing with specific cases, she lectures at police academies and conducts research into such questions as how a victim's drug abuse might affect the entomological evidence.

In one of her cases, a woman's death had been written off as a suicide because no wounds could be found on her badly decomposed body. The family won an appeal and the case was reopened years later.

The entomologist noted a lot of maggot activity in the chest and the palms of the hands, suggesting wounds in those areas. That in turn suggested the victim might have been stabbed after attempting to defend herself with her hands.

A closer examination of the bones then revealed knife marks not seen the first time; the case was reopened as a murder investigation.

It all sounds rather gruesome as professions go.

"Obviously it is," says Ms. Anderson. "I'm dealing with death."

But she rarely finds it necessary to probe around in corpses.

"The insects are usually on the outside chewing their way in. If they are inside, that means the outside is gone."

"By the time the pathologist makes his first incision, I'm already out of there."

Some consumers bitten by mosquito repellent claimers

By GARDEN IDEAS
& OUTDOOR LIVING

Claims that a scented geranium known as the "mosquito plant" has the ability to repel mosquitoes are only half true, according to a horticulturist with the University of Minnesota's Extension Service.

The citronella geranium is being marketed by some mail order nurseries and garden centers as the answer to the hot weather's peskiest insect problem, explains Garden Ideas & Outdoor Living magazine. Developed in the Netherlands, the citronella plant purportedly carries a gene that produces the citronella oil scent, which keeps mosquitoes at bay.

However, Deborah Brown of the Extension Service warns that gardeners should not expect the plants to reduce the mosquito population on their properties. "Testing by the department of environment biology at the University of Guelph in Ontario, Canada, has proven the oils are only released when you crush the leaves or rub them," she says. "Even then, rubbing the released oils onto your skin only yields moderate, short-lived mosquito-repelling activity."

Brown adds that there is nothing wrong with growing citrusa geraniums, characterized by their lacy, scented foliage.

"Just don't expect citronella to keep your patio or deck free of mosquitoes."

Three tied for U.S. Open lead

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — It's 1980, Joey Sindelar is 22 years old and he's playing in the U.S. Open at stately old Baltusrol. Why wouldn't he feel like pretty hot stuff?

Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf, that's why.

"It's my first U.S. Open. I come out here the first day, and I think I'm doing pretty good to shoot a 74, thank you very much," he said. "And that's what blew my mind. Not one guy, but two guys shoot 63."

The 63s by Nicklaus and Weiskopf tied U.S. Open records, and Nicklaus went on to win the last Open at Baltusrol. Now, Sindelar, who missed the cut 13 years ago, has put in an early bid to win this one.

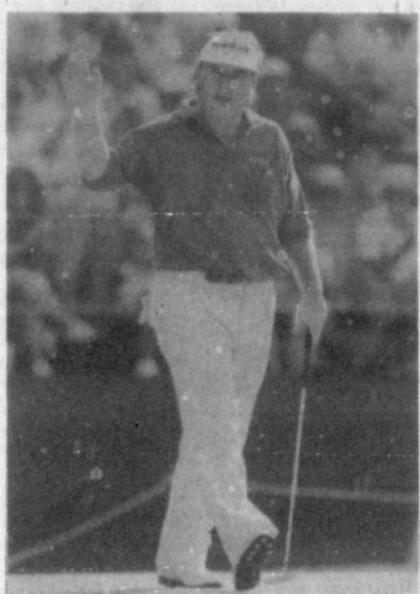

Sindelar, Scott Hoch and Craig Parry were tied at 4-under-par 66 after the first round of the Open on Thursday, leading Craig Stadler and Lee Janzen by one stroke.

Sindelar made the turn Thursday at even par, then birdied the 11th, 12th, 13th and 15th holes to go 4-under. His only regret? He didn't birdie either of the two closing pars.

"I was particularly disappointed on 18," he said. "If you hit the fairway there, you're really licking your chops. But I can't complain. I got away with more than I should have today."

Hoch birdied the final two holes, the only par-5 on the course, for his 66, and Parry, an Australian and one of only two foreigners on the leaderboard, birdied the 630-yard No. 17, the longest hole ever played in the U.S. Open.

Raymond Floyd, Fred Couples and Corey Pavin were in a group at Joey Sindelar shoots first-round 66.

68 that also included Mike Smith, Robert Wrenn, Blaine McCallister and Rocco Mediate. At 1-under 69 were Michael Weeks, Wayne Grady, Bill Glasson, Jeff Maggert, Grant Waite of Australia and U.S. Amateur champion Justin Leonard of Dallas.

Floyd had one of today's early tee times and immediately went to 3-under for the tournament with a birdie on the first hole, a par-4. Mediate was even par for the day and 2-under for the tournament through four holes that included a birdie and a bogey.

All three leaders had late-morning tee times.

In all, there were 18 players who broke par in the first round over the 7,152-yard course, and the scoring average of 72.282 was an all-time Open record, besting the previous mark of 73.402 in 1989 at Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, N.Y.

"This is a good, hard golf course," said Stadler, using a new putter this week. "The old one is out of commission. It didn't float too well."

In practice this week, the players agreed: The rough is not of normal U.S. Open length or thickness. And, with dry, hot weather predicted through the weekend, it's not likely to get any longer, although the greens could get even harder than they already are.

There was no better indication of how hard these greens have become than Sindelar's birdie on the 15th, a 430-yard par-4. He hit an 8-iron approach shot about 14 feet from the hole. His putt appeared to stop even with the cup, about six inches to the left, then began to roll.

"When I putted it, I figured the commentators were wondering where I was going," Sindelar said. "At first, it looked to me like it just started to roll sideways and went in. But when I saw it later on TV, it actually came back a little bit, but-ton-hooked."

Hoch said he would have been glad to get off the course at 2-under, which is where he stood before the last two holes.

Nobody, not Davis Love, not Fred Couples, not John Daly, not even Hulk Hogan, gets on that green in two. So, Hoch laid up and put an 8-iron 12 feet past the hole, sinking the putt for that bird.

The 542-yard, par-5 18th is reachable in two, but Hoch decided to lay up on that one, too.

He pitched up, again about 12 feet away, and made another birdie for his 66.

"I had a Band-Aid on my swing all day, and it was holding up," said Hoch, who hasn't won since 1989. "When I got to about 16, the way I had been playing, I was looking for the clubhouse. With about four or five holes to go, I was thinking 2-under would be good, let me just walk in right now."

Jordan, Bulls go for glory tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan is still competing with Olympic teammates Magic Johnson and Larry Bird. This time, it's not for points or rebounds.

It's for glory.

Jordan and the Chicago Bulls will try tonight to finish off their season-long bid for a third consecutive NBA championship, something Bird and Johnson couldn't do for the Boston Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers.

With a 3-1 lead over the Phoenix Suns, the Bulls are one win short of becoming the third franchise to win three straight NBA titles.

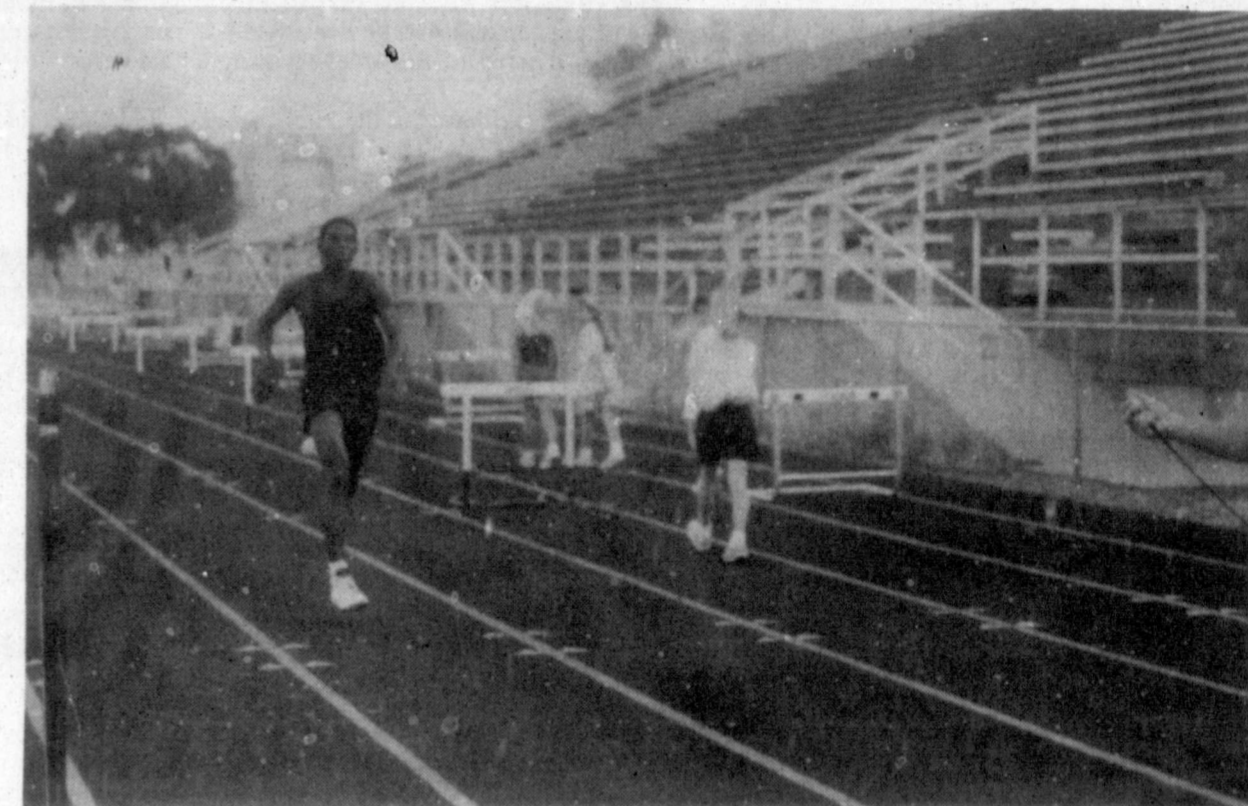

"I think it's an individual driving force for me," Jordan said Thursday. "I think everybody needs challenges, and this is a chance for me to accomplish something that they haven't. Magic won five championships, but to win three in a row is something he has never done."

The Minneapolis Lakers won three straight titles from 1952-54 and the Celtics captured eight in a row from 1959-66. Only Boston in 1968-69, the Lakers in 1987-88 and Detroit in 1989-90 have won two straight since then.

"We're trying to do something that hasn't been done in a while," Jordan said. "It really hasn't been heard of in today's basketball, in terms of the competition and the parity that's within the league. It's a goal I set for myself to achieve through a team concept."

Pampa sprinter

Devin Lemons of the Pampa Track Club heads toward the finish line in the 100-yard dash during a recent practice at Randy Matson Field. Lemons and other club members compete in the first meet of the summer season Saturday at Hereford. Lemons qualified for the National Junior Olympics last year.

Pampa's Barker wins USTA tennis crown

Jamie Barker, a Pampa High School sophomore, won the 16-year-old girls' singles championship at the USTA Major Zone Tournament held recently in Lubbock.

Barker defeated Maria Villarreal of Big Spring, 6-2, 6-2, in the semifinals. Villarreal was a Class 4A regional quarterfinalist this past spring. In the finals, Barker defeated Emily Johnson of Friendswood, 6-4, 6-1.

The tournament win qualified Barker for the Super Championship Division, the top level of junior tennis offered by the United States Tennis Association. She next competes in a Super Championship Major Zone Tournament July 3-5 in San Antonio.

BASKETBALL

Pampa High's McNeely Fieldhouse will be open to the public on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights this summer, according to Harvesters' head coach Robert Hale.

"This is for anybody who wants to play basketball," Hale said. "It's not restricted to the high school players."

The gym will be open from 6:30 to 8:30.

Hale also reminded campers that his Top of Texas Basketball Camp opens Sunday afternoon from 1:30 to 5.

PHYSICALS

Physical examinations for Pampa athletes from the 7th through 12th grades will be held throughout the summer.

The physicals are for both male and female athletes and will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday in Dr. Keith Black's office at Northcrest Medical Building.

Pampa athletic trainer Stuart Smith said no fee will be charged and he urged 7th and 9th graders to have their physicals completed as soon as possible.

A 4-man scramble is scheduled for June 26-27 at the Pamcel Golf Club.

SOFTBALL

The city of Pampa is now offering a fall teen softball league for both men and women, ages 16 to 21.

There will be three divisions, men's and women's and co-ed.

Signups are today through June 28.

FOOTBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have announced that Pro Bowl middle linebacker Al Smith has agreed to terms on their one-year minimum tender offer.

However, there's no word yet from running back Lorenzo White and receiver Ernest Givins, said Bob Schranz, an Oilers' spokesman on Thursday.

For the three Oilers, minimum offers mean big raises, including an increase from $500,000 to at least $2.2 million for Smith.

Under the NFL's new labor agreement, teams had to make contract offers by Monday to retain transition players' right of first refusal. Minimum offers must be at least the average of the 10 highest-paid players at their positions.

Also Thursday, the Oilers released safety Derrick Crup and quarterback Mike Power, Schranz said.

BOXING

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randall "Tex" Cobb has pulled out of a scheduled eight-round heavyweight fight Friday night against "Young" Joe Lewis because of an arm injury.

Cobb, unbeaten in 10 fights since returning to the ring, said doctors advised him not to box. He was released Wednesday from Vanderbilt Medical Center where he spent two nights undergoing tests on his left arm.

Cobb, 39, also an actor, lost a title match to Larry Holmes in 1982.

The fight was to have been held at Nashville's Municipal Auditorium.

Rangers light up scoreboard against Angels

Gonzalez sets club record with 8 RBI

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Juan Gonzalez and the Texas Rangers gave Kenny Rogers an early lead even he couldn't squander. Gonzalez helped build a 14-0 cushion against the California Angels on Thursday night with a three-run triple in the second inning and a grand slam in the fifth. Then he finished off the 18-2 victory with an RBI single in the sixth.

"It never entered my mind that I'd go 4 for 4 with eight RBIs," Gonzalez said. "I'm just looking for a good game. But it's more important that everybody is playing together."

The Rangers totaled 18 hits, while Gonzalez established a major-league season high for RBIs and eclipsed the seven driven in by Detroit's Cecil Fielder on June 6 against the Angels. The previous Rangers record was seven, set by Larry Parrish in 1982 and matched by Pete O'Brien in 1987.

"Nobody can do what Juan can do right now," Rogers said after allowing two runs and five hits over 7 1-3 innings. "That guy's just phenomenal. He's a tough out. He doesn't just knock the ball 450 feet, but he can hit for average, too. It's nice that he's on my team and I don't have to face him."

Rogers (5-5) has been the recipient of 18 first-inning runs in his last five starts. In his previous four, the left-hander won only once — despite being staked to first-inning leads of 3-0, 4-0, 4-0 and 5-2.

But after the second career grand slam by Gonzalez and two-run homers by Jose Canseco and Rafael Palmeiro, Rogers was able to breeze to the victory.

"I like that," said Rogers, who entered the game with the highest ERA among AL starters at 6.40. "These guys can score runs. I've had some games where I've struggled and games where I've pitched well. This was just one where I had to give us some innings so that we didn't wear out the bullpen."

The only bullpen that was worn out was on the Angels' side of the field. It got so low that designated hitter Chili Davis took the mound for the final two innings.

Davis did a better job than any of his four predecessors, retiring six of the last seven Rangers. The only one who reached base was Canseco, who was hit by a pitch.

"Rene Gonzales told me just to throw strikes and not try and overpower anyone," Davis said. "I tried to throw everything I could."

Texas threw everything but the kitchen sink at Scott Sanderson (7-6). The Rangers built a 10-0 lead in four innings against the right-hander, who absorbed his fourth loss in as many starts after winning six of his first seven decisions.

"We had to leave him out there to be the sacrificial lamb," said Angels manager Buck Rodgers, who was forced to overwork his bullpen Monday night when John Farrell lasted only two-thirds of an inning and was subsequently demoted to the minors.

"I hate to leave a pitcher out there like that when he doesn't have good stuff, but I didn't have a choice," Rodgers said. "I asked for volunteers and Chili volunteered. Fortunately, getting beat 18-2 is no different than getting beat 2-1."

The carnage began when Canseco — who had three RBIs — followed a walk to Dan Peltier with his 10th homer. Texas scored four more in the second on a bases-loaded sacrifice fly by Peltier and a three-run double by Gonzalez, only his third hit in 28 at-bats.

Gonzalez was able to get the two-out hit because center fielder Chad Curtis dropped Peltier's scoring fly ball.

The margin widened to 8-0 in the third on Doug Strange's RBI single and a run-scoring groundout by David Hulse, who added a two-run single in the sixth. Palmeiro knocked out Sanderson in the third with his second homer of the season.

Gonzalez made it 14-0 in the fifth with his 18th homer, following three consecutive two-out walks issued by reliever Ken Patterson.

Kile pitches Astros past Padres

HOUSTON (AP) — What a difference a year has made for Houston Astros pitcher Darryl Kile.

Kile boosted his record to a team best 6-1 Thursday night as pitched the Astros to a 4-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

A year ago at this time, Kile's 0-4 record earned him a ticket to Triple A Tucson. He got back to the Astros before the end of the season but wound up with a 5-10 season record.

Kile is tied for the team lead in victories and has the fewest losses among regular pitchers and has a 2.96 ERA.

"I think I've been a little on the lucky side," he said. "This team's going to score some runs and as a pitcher you just have to keep them in it until they do."

"We just have a very good team this year. As a team gets better, the pitchers are going to look better. It's not always the pitcher getting that much better. I feel fortunate to be on this team."

Kile limited the Padres to only five hits and the one run while striking out six in seven innings. His performance generated nothing but praise from the Padres.

"He's a fine young pitcher," Padres manager Jim Riggleman said. "His ball really moves and he was in and out on us all night. The Astros are fortunate to have him."

"He has great stuff," Padres second baseman Jeff Gardner said. "Early in the game, he didn't have command of his breaking pitch. But when he started throwing it for strikes later in the game, he was difficult to hit."

"He's the hardest thrower I've seen," outfielder Phil Plantier said. "He has a good fastball and he was really bringing it tonight."

Treasury probe figure maintains he's innocent

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — A key figure in the investigation of U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison says he would be willing to go before a grand jury to clear his name of any wrongdoing.

Tom Bowden, the San Saba County judge who lost the Democratic primary for treasurer, on Thursday accused two Democrats of urging him to confess to accepting a Treasury job in exchange for endorsing Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, in the 1990 election.

Bowden told The Associated Press that he was offered immunity, a job and legal help by Bill Young, a General Land Office official, and by former Texas attorney general Jim Mattox.

Bowden said the offers in exchange for his testimony came on May 28, a week before Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, won a landslide victory June 5 over Democrat Bob Krueger in a special election for Lloyd Bentsen's former U.S. Senate seat.

"Bill came to my home, concerned as a friend, and said if I would confess that they could provide me with an attorney at no cost and help me get immunity from the grand jury and help me find employment in the private sector," Bowden said.

"Jim Mattox told me I needed to act quickly and make a decision in the next couple of days," Bowden said. "He said he would either represent me or get an attorney to represent me."

Young, who could not be reached at the General Land Office on Thursday, told The Houston Post he wanted to advise Bowden not to perjure himself. He denied offering Bowden immunity and a job, saying, "I went up there as a friend because I didn't want Tom to get in trouble."

Mattox could not be reached at his Austin law office Thursday. His spokeswoman, Elna Christopher, said: "The allegations are not true. Mattox did receive a phone call from Bowden saying he thought he might need a lawyer."

"Jim said he would be glad to talk to him about representing him or referring him to another attorney. But he did not offer representation for free. He is in the law business to make a living," Ms. Christopher said.

A Travis County grand jury met again Thursday about allegations of wrongdoing at the Treasury under Mrs. Hutchison.

Three former aides in Bowden's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer have submitted affidavits saying Bowden told them Mrs. Hutchison promised a state job in return for his endorsement.

After Mrs. Hutchison won, he took a $31,000-a-year job with the treasurer's office.

"I think the Democrats convinced them (his ex-aides) to give these statements," Bowden said.

Young works for Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, an adviser to the Krueger campaign. Young also is Krueger's selection for U.S. marshal in North Texas. That nomination is pending with President Clinton.

Young told The Houston Post he had merely urged Bowden to get an attorney and seek immunity, and told him "you might ought to think about going into the private sector."

Bowden said he would be "quite happy to go before the grand jury and tell the truth."

"I want to do whatever the grand jury wants. I have nothing to hide. Neither I or Kay Bailey Hutchison have done anything wrong," he said.

Hutchison campaign spokesman David Beckwith and consultant Karl Rove charged that Young and Mattox were key players in a smear campaign designed to tarnish Mrs. Hutchison before 1994, when she faces re-election to the Senate.

"They knew that they could not beat her on the issues," Beckwith said. "They knew that their only hope next year to prevent a very strong incumbent U.S. senator from leading the ticket was to somehow impugn her character and cause a loss of confidence among voters in her basic integrity."

Mattox's spokeswoman, Ms. Christopher, said, "It sounds like to me that the Republicans are trying to take a shot at Mattox because he is the Democrat who could be their main Senate opponent next year."

Karen Hughes, executive director of the state Republican Party, filed requests Wednesday under the Texas Open Records Act for telephone logs, travel records and personnel documents at the General Land Office. She also sought records of two Democratic state senators.

"My only advice would be that the Republicans get the auditors and some lawyers and prove that Kay Bailey Hutchison is innocent and quit asking for everyone else's records," Mauro said.
