Charles Johnson resigns PHS band director post

Pampa High School band director Charles Johnson has resigned after nearly 14 years with the music program.

Johnson submitted his resignation to the Pampa Independent School District on Tuesday. Johnson is resigning to attend Arizona State University in Tempe, Ariz., to pursue a master's degree. He will be band director at Mesa Junior High in Mesa, Ariz., a suburb of Phoenix, while pursuing the master's.

A search committee consisting of parents, students and school district representatives headed by PHS Principal Dan Coward is charged with finding a replacement. A new high school band director will be named in time for early band rehearsals in August, according to Coward.

Coward said he expected an excellent applicant pool to choose from due to the reputation of the band program.

Johnson, a native of Sweetwater, Texas, and a graduate of West Texas State University, came to Pampa as a private woodwinds instructor in 1979 and subsequently became assistant director in 1980. He took over as head director in 1982.

A farewell reception honoring

Charles Johnson

Johnson sponsored by the Pampa Band Boosters is planned for Thursday, July 8, from 7-9 p.m. in the parlor of the First Baptist Church. The public is invited to attend.

PISD offers summer school program to students from other area districts

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

One of the four high school students who participated in this year's summer school program at Pampa Learning Center resides in another school district, and Pampa school district officials this week expressed a willingness to accommodate students in the program from other school districts in this area.

The 4 1/2-week Pampa summer school program for high school students ended Wednesday at PLC. That program is primarily designed to provide remedial education for students who failed to obtain credit for a course.

The high school student from another school district who participated in this year's summer school program at PLC was a student at White Deer High School last school year, said Betty Beyer, coordinator of the summer school program at Pampa and coordinator of the PLC.

Pampa schools Superintendent Dawson Orr said in an interview that if other school districts in this area gave him a "clear indication that they have (high school) students that have a need" for participation in the Pampa summer school program, the Pampa school district would be receptive to such a request.

Orr added, however, that the Pampa school district would not want to "subsidize" the attendance of high school students from other school districts in the summer school program. The tuition charged to students in the program from other school districts would have to be high enough to pay all the administrative and instructional expenses incurred by such students' attendance, without exceeding that amount, he said.

Unlike in the regular school year, when the average daily attendance helps determine the level of state aid to a school district, the state of Texas provides no funding for summer school programs for high school students; Orr noted.

Orr declined to speculate on whether the tuition charged to students from other school districts for enrollment in future summer school programs should be more than the tuition charged to PHS students for that program.

The current tuition rate charged to PHS students for the summer program at PLC is $75 per course. The student from White Deer High was also charged at that rate, Beyer said.

In addition to the four students in this year's PHS summer school program at Pampa, 16 PLC students attending summer school there have been or expect to be enrolled in PLC during the regular school year as well. Housed in the basement of the Clarendon College campus in Pampa, the PLC primarily serves PHS students who, because of difficulties in their schoolwork, are admitted into the alternative school as PLC students.

Although high school students from other school districts may participate in the summer school program if they meet the same eligibility requirements as PISD students, Beyer said, PISD has not publicized the availability of the program to other school districts.

In 1991, the last year when summer school was held at Pampa High School, students from other school districts accounted for 13 of the approximately 40 students in the program, Coward said.

"I don't have a problem with our summer school program being open to area high schools' students," Coward said.

Allan Dinsmore, superintendent of Miami Independent School District, said Wednesday that having a summer school program in Pampa that is open to Miami students would be a benefit to us. ... Most of our students ... if they need to go to summer school, have to make arrangements to go to Amarillo."

Dinsmore said he does not know of any public school district-sponsored summer school in the eastern Panhandle, aside from that of PISD.

If area districts were made aware of a summer school program at PISD, the Miami superintendent estimated that two or three Miami High School students would enroll in a summer school program in Pampa each year. McLean High School Principal Charles Callum estimated that the same number of McLean High School students would enroll in the PISD program.

PISD's Orr said demand among Pampa High School students for a PISD summer school program has declined because of the recent expansion at PHS — implemented during the 1992-93 school year — from six to seven course periods.

The Pampa schools superintendent noted that taking seven courses per day over the four years of high school gives students opportunities for taking some remedial courses during the fall or spring semesters while still earning the number of credits during regular school years that they need in order to graduate.

Clinton expected to OK base closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton intends to approve a federal commission's plan to shut or cut back dozens of U.S. military bases, and send the list to Congress for final action, a White House official said today.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton has studied the list developed by the base closing panel. "The report looks solid," said the official.

Commission Chairman James Courter said today the report recommends closing 130 bases and realigning 45.

Among the major facilities recommended for closing are the huge Charleston, S.C., naval shipyard and the Mare Island naval shipyard in Vallejo, Calif.

The commission is scheduled to submit its report to Clinton today, although its contents have been widely reported already. The president can approve the entire report or send it back to the commission. He cannot change the list and he can only return it to the commission once.

Courter said he is convinced that Clinton will approve the list.

"I would also suggest that the president get it off his desk very quickly, because if it languishes there, he will be subjecting himself to the same unpleasant pressure that the commission felt," he said in an interview.

Once Clinton approves the list and sends it to Congress, lawmakers have 45 working days to accept or reject the list in its entirety. Unless a resolution to disapprove the list clears both houses, the commission's recommendations are adopted.

Congress cannot change the list either.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Les Aspin today announced that 92 U.S. military facilities overseas will be closed or cut back. He said the total number of U.S. military sites overseas has been reduced by about 50 percent since 1990.

The president is expected to approve the U.S. list Friday, the White House official said. Clinton made his decision before formally receiving the panel's report because "their work has been very public," the official said.

The decision was made easier when the commission adopted most of the Pentagon's proposals, which Aspin has said would save about $3.1 billion per year starting in 2000.

The base-closing process promises to be politically painful for the administration and Congress because the cutbacks mean the loss of jobs and federal money across the country.

Clinton has promised to plow billions of dollars into programs that aid communities recovering from the loss of defense industries, help businesses find civilian uses for military technology and train defense industry workers and military personnel for new jobs.

The commission completed its list Sunday after weeks of hearing testimony in dozens of cities and towns around the country. Communities were pitted against each other, trying to keep their bases open at the expense of others.

San Francisco, northern Virginia, portions of upstate New York and Charleston, S.C., were among the areas hardest hit.

The commission eliminated naval facilities all over the San Francisco Bay area, including the Oakland Naval Hospital, two air stations, a shipyard and an aviation supply depot. In Southern California, the Long Beach Naval Shipyard was saved but the San Diego Naval Training Center was selected for closure.

In upstate New York, the panel decided to close Plattsburgh Air Force Base and leave almost nothing of Griffiss Air Force Base in Rome.

Northern Virginia, across the Potomac River from Washington, is set to lose eight different Navy commands, which would be transferred from rented space near the Pentagon to facilities elsewhere.

Things looking up for president as summit nears

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is preparing for next week's economic summit in Tokyo with polls showing his approval rating inching up and even Republicans offering support and saying he'll be seen as the strongest leader there.

That perception may have been strengthened today when Germany's central bankers shaved interest rates just a day after Clinton called for lower borrowing costs to help stimulate the world economy.

It could be a sign of better times ahead for the president — at least until he returns home.

"When you leave the American border, we are all Americans," House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia said Wednesday as he wished Clinton well at his first summit of the world's seven major industrialized democracies.

"I think all Americans want the American president to be successful, and to be successful as leader of the world," Gingrich added.

Although Republican leaders have been harsh critics of Clinton on domestic matters, they gave the Democratic president a warm send-off at a White House meeting Wednesday.

Clinton, whose approval rating has been going up in polls, leaves Monday for a weeklong trip to Japan and Korea. It will be his second trip as president outside the United States, following his two-day summit with Russian President Boris Yeltsin in western Canada three months ago.

Staking a leadership claim in advance of the summit, Clinton on Wednesday called on Japan to open its markets, on Germany to lower interest rates and on all of Europe to end a stalemate over farm subsidies.

Today, Germany's central bank leaders cut interest rates as much as a half a point. There have been consistent calls for Germany to lower rates, and the upcoming Tokyo summit had led to new pressure from Clinton and others.

"It's very hard for the United States alone to grow jobs without help from other nations," Clinton declared as he met with congressional leaders to discuss the Tokyo summit.

Even so, administration and congressional officials sought to lower expectations for the summit, suggesting political turmoil in Japan would make it harder for Clinton to achieve some of his goals — including a hoped-for agreement for summit partners to set a target for annual growth of about 3 percent.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said it would be difficult for Clinton to claim any major successes. "It's not his fault, just circumstances," Dole said.

But Dole, joining Gingrich in wishing Clinton well, said the domestic disarray in the industrial world was at its highest level since the end of World War II.

"In that context, even with the problems he has had here at home, President Clinton will be the strongest leader and Chancellor Kohl will be the only other really stable leader at the meeting," Dole said.

The July 7-19 meeting will attract the leaders of the so-called G-7 nations: Britain, France, Germany, Japan, Canada, Italy and the United States.

Clinton prepares for the summit as polls suggest he got a small boost in his job approval rating on Baghdad. That could mean his slump in the polls may have bottomed out.

After Saturday's attack on Iraqi intelligence headquarters, more than three in five Americans said his performance was improving, the Harris Poll reported Wednesday.

Seventy percent said Clinton's performance as president was better in the past two weeks than in the first four months in office, the poll said.

In other recent measurements of Clinton's popularity, a CBS-New York Times showed an 11-point boost in approval when 622 people from a poll last week were re-interviewed Sunday after the raid.

Escaped prisoner enjoys his freedom — for a brief time

WHEELER — An inmate of the Wheeler County jail "went on a brief venture" Wednesday night as he escaped and was then caught a few minutes later, according to Wheeler County Sheriff Jimmy Adams.

Carl Dale Graham, 23, of Chouteau, Okla., scaled a wall of the exercise yard of the jail and managed his way through barbed wire at approximately 9:15 p.m. Wednesday in an attempt to escape.

He was being held in connection with an armed robbery of a Shamrock service station when he tried to escape.

Graham was then re-arrested at approximately 9:20 p.m. by Deputy Joel Finsterwall, who was off-duty at the time and who saw Graham hitchhiking on the side of the road.

Apparently, Graham was trying to go west on Texas 152 when he was arrested and was still in the city limits, according to Adams.

Graham has been arraigned on charges of escape and is being held on a $25,000 bond for that offense. As for the armed robbery, he was charged with aggravated robbery, arraigned and is being held in lieu of a $40,000 bond.

Graham was apparently working alone in the escape. The two women he was arrested with in the armed robbery were not involved in the escape.

A pie-throwing booth and a dunking board will be set up after the parade as well.

The day's main event is the women versus men-dressed-as-women baseball game. It begins at 7 p.m. at the baseball field near the city water tower.

Following the baseball game is a community dance on the slab in the city park beginning at 9 p.m. A band will provide live music.

Also, children will be allowed to set off fireworks in the park after the baseball game.

Concessions will be available all day long from a food booth set up in the park.

Man in condom rape case denied new trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district judge today denied a new trial for a man convicted of raping a woman despite his claim that he request that he wear a condom constituted a willingness to have sex with him.
 Attorneys for Joel Valdez, 28, argued over a two-day hearing that he should be retried based on jury misconduct.
 But after listening to the testimony of several jurors in the case, District Judge Bob Perkins ruled against Valdez.
 "It's clear to me this jury did attempt to follow the law as closely as they could," Perkins said. "I think the jury system in this case worked. Based on that, I will overrule the motion for a new trial."
 Defense attorney Malcolm Nettles said he would appeal the decision.
 "I think the appeals court will find in our favor and we will redo the punishment phase of this trial," Nettles said.
 Prosecutor Dayna Blazey said she was happy with the decision. Valdez was convicted in May and sentenced to 40 years in prison for an early morning attack last year in the woman's Austin apartment.
 The case drew national attention after a grand jury declined to indict Valdez, drawing outrage from the community and women's groups. A second grand jury indicted Valdez.
 The victim said her request for her attacker to wear a condom was a desperate attempt to fight off AIDS and other diseases. Valdez testified the condom meant consent.
 Jurors Petra Padilla and Sharyle Solis took the stand Wednesday as the key witnesses in attempts by defense attorneys to get a new trial.
 The two women claimed the jury foreman, Terry Glenn Morris, convinced them to change their vote from a 20-year sentence to 40 years after assuring them Valdez would have to serve only seven years before getting paroled.
 The judge's instructions to the jury had said Valdez must serve one-fourth of his sentence — in Valdez's case, 10 years — before becoming eligible for parole.
 Prosecutors attempted to refute much of Ms. Solis's testimony and called other jurors who testified there was no confusion that Valdez would have to serve 10 years of a 40-year sentence.
 "I believed Mr. Morris because he was the head of the jury and I thought he knew what he was doing," Ms. Padilla said. "When he said he (Valdez) will come out in that time (seven years), I switched my vote to 40 years. I would have voted for 20."

Unemployment rates decrease

The unemployment rates for Pampa, Gray County and the surrounding area has decreased from the month of April to May, according to the Texas Employment Commission.
 In Pampa, the April 1993 unemployment rate stood at 5.6 percent. One month later, May's unemployment rate dropped to 4.4 percent.
 For Gray County, the unemployment rate for May was slightly worse than for the city and stood at 4.6 percent, a decrease of 1.2 percent from April's total of 5.8 percent.
 Last year's unemployment rate in Gray County for May was 6.1 percent.
 Fewer people were unemployed in Hemphill County in May than in April of this year.
 May's total is 4.5 percent, a 0.5 percent decrease from April's unemployment rate of 5 percent. In 1992, the unemployment rate in Hemphill County for the month of May totalled 5.7 percent.
 Carson County's unemployment also dropped 0.5 percent in the month of May from 3.8 percent in April to 3.3 percent. In May 1992, its unemployment rate stood at 4.5 percent and had just increased from 4.4 percent in April of that year.
 For Roberts County, the unemployment rate for May dropped 1.1 percent and rested at 5.3 percent. In 1992 for the month of May, Roberts County's unemployment rate was 5.4 percent.
 Finally, Wheeler County reported an unemployment rate of 3.8 percent in May, a decrease of 0.8 percent from April's total of 4.6 percent.

Organ-preserving plan raises questions

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
 AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — An experimental method to preserve kidneys inside newly dead patients and give families more time to decide about organ donation is raising some doctors' hopes — and some ethicists' concerns.
 Chilled salt water is pumped into and around the kidneys of people who have just died to keep the organs usable in transplants.
 Doctors initiate the procedure without family consent, saying it is a justifiable way to postpone the rapid deterioration of organs in cadavers whose circulation cannot be maintained.
 "It doesn't force anyone to be an organ donor," said Dr. David A. Hatch, a Loyola Medical Center transplant surgeon and board chairman of the Regional Organ Bank of Illinois, which launched the idea.
 "It doesn't mutilate a body. It isn't invasive any more than resuscitation attempts are," he said Wednesday.
 More than 23,000 patients nationwide will need kidney transplants this year, and only 7,800 will get them, according to estimates from the United Network for Organ Sharing.

The kidney-infusion procedure studied at Loyola could boost the organ supply 10 percent to 15 percent, Hatch said.
 During the procedure, icy, slightly salty water is pumped into the abdomen of the dead person and a medicated solution is pumped into the kidneys to postpone for at least several hours the rapid deterioration of the organs.
 Without the infusion, kidneys usually must be removed in less than 45 minutes, depending on the dead person's condition, if the organs are to be transplanted.
 Some doctors say the method allows the news of a death to sink in before family members must decide about organ donation. Families often refuse in the first moments of anguish but might reconsider given more time, they say.
 "The motivation, obviously, is to provide more organs for transplantation and to give people waiting a year or 18 months on the list an opportunity for something that is literally lifesaving," Hatch said.
 But some ethicists warn that without proper safeguards it could encourage early abandonment of resuscitation efforts. They also say it is disrespectful.
 "I'm concerned about invading the body of a newly deceased patient without the family's permission," said Dr. Stuart J. Youngner, director of the Clinical Ethics Program at University Hospitals of Cleveland.
 "I think that steps over a line we have respected in caring for patients and their families," he said.
 Youngner co-wrote an article in the June 2 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association questioning the approach.
 Laurence J. O'Connell, president of The Park Ridge Center for the Study of Health, Faith and Ethics in Chicago, said the lack of family consent puts the method in ethically "murky" water.
 "I don't think it's in the province of a group of physicians or a medical center on their own to determine what is ultimately in the interest of the common good," he said.
 But Dr. Wendy Marshall, chief of trauma services at Loyola, said the procedure could end the agony of many patients waiting painfully for new kidneys.
 "If we're not going to mutilate the people who have already died, why not help the people who are walking around miserable?" she asked.

Clarendon man arrested after standoff

CLARENDON — A Clarendon resident is charged with burglary of a building after a standoff with police Wednesday morning.
 Wendell Wayne Walker allegedly broke into Poor Boy's Antiques around 12:30 a.m. Wednesday and stole a .44-caliber revolver.
 Donley County Sheriff Jim Thompson said witnesses saw Walker breaking into the store and then reported the burglary.
 Sheriff's office personnel then located Walker at his residence in the 600 block of Sixth Street in the southeast part of the city. Officers with the Texas Department of Public Safety and two Texas Rangers soon joined the sheriff's department at the scene.

The suspect refused to exit the structure when officers arrived. He later fired one shot in the bathroom of the house. No one was injured.
 Walker surrendered and came out of the home voluntarily and without incident just after 9 a.m. Wednesday. Negotiations were conducted by Texas Ranger Leo Hickman.
 Following his arrest, the suspect was then taken to The Pavilion in Amarillo. A sheriff's office official said he has a history of mental illness.
 Sheriff Thompson said the suspect will be charged with resisting arrest in addition to the burglary count, which carries a penalty of two to ten years imprisonment.

Germany closes borders to refugee asylum-seekers

By TERRENCE PETTY
Associated Press Writer

BONN, Germany (AP) — Paramilitary police began turning back refugees at the borders today as Germany's restrictive new asylum law went into effect.

In an about-face to a liberal German immigration policy that allowed more than 2 million asylum-seekers to cross into the country since 1989, at least 32 refugees were stopped before dawn today after crossing into Germany from Poland. All were sent back to Poland.

The refugees originated from Ukraine, Romania, Eritrea, Pakistan, India and Algeria, said Heinz Heldmann, deputy chief at a border police outpost in Frankfurt an der Oder.

Most of the 438,000 asylum-seekers who crossed into Germany the past year used Poland and what is now the Czech Republic as transit countries.

Before today, refugees could just cross into Germany and ask for asylum. Refugees have stayed years as authorities considered their requests.

The new law essentially seals off Germany to asylum-seekers who try to enter the country by land. The refugees don't even have the chance to prove they are running for their lives.

Refugees already in Germany will be deported if they are unable to prove they are fleeing persecution.

"I'm just waiting for a knock on the door," said Trifi Caldaras, a Romanian at a Bonn asylum shelter.

Germany considers Romania a "safe country," although Caldaras and other Gypsies claim they face persecution there.

Neighboring countries, fearful the refugees Germany rejects will be dumped on them, are preparing to bolt their own doors.

"After the Cold War we were going to build a common European house. But instead we're building a European fortress, surrounded by walls," said Herbert Leuninger, spokesman for Pro-Asyl, a German lobby for refugees.

Germany's 44-year-old asylum policy, written into the Constitution to atone for the Nazis' persecution of foreigners, essentially let all refugees stay for an unlimited time. The policy made Germany the primary European refuge for asylum-seekers.

Politicians scrapped the policy because they said it was draining social welfare coffers. Some politicians also hoped that decreasing the number of refugees would enable police to get better control of skin-head violence against foreigners.

But violence has increased since parliament approved the measure in May. A month ago, five Turkish women and girls died when their home in Solingen in central Germany was firebombed. The attack by skinheads was the deadliest on foreigners since Germany unified in late 1990.

Under the new policy, asylum-seekers who arrive from a European Community country or one bordering Germany will be immediately sent back to those nations, since all Germany's neighbors are considered to be democracies that observe human rights.

Asylum-seekers arriving by airplane or ship will have a chance to prove they are fleeing a country at war or run by a dictator. They will be kept for up to 19 days while awaiting a ruling on whether they can stay.

To enforce the new law, Germany is adding 1,300 paramilitary border troops to 2,400 already stationed at the Polish and Czech frontiers. It also plans to equip border units with night-vision devices.

In many cases, other countries have started closing their doors to keep the refugees kicked out of Germany from settling in their lands.

Germany signed a treaty this year that obligates Poland to take back asylum-seekers, and it is negotiating a similar treaty with the Czech Republic. Warsaw in turn is planning its own repatriation treaties that would require fellow former Soviet bloc lands to take back most asylum-seekers.

Poland and the Czech Republic are also drawing up new visa requirements, as are Sweden and Denmark.

Stefan Teloecken, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said the result could be "chain deportations," with truly threatened people being passed from country to country until they end up in their own homelands or some other unsafe place.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards, left, visits with New Jersey Gov. Jim Florio and his wife Lucinda during a reception at the Governor's Gala in East Brunswick, N.J., Wednesday night.

Richards helps New Jersey fund-raiser net $2 million

EAST BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The Democratic State Committee raised an easy $2 million at its most expensive fund-raiser yet, a $2,000-per-ticket event that featured the sassy-tongued Texas Gov. Ann Richards.

The former Texas state treasurer who survived a nasty 1990 campaign to become governor said Florio didn't invite her to attend the annual Governor's Gala — she volunteered the helping hand, and he accepted.

"I firmly believe that if you have got a governor that has courage and backbone ... then he ought to get our support, and that's exactly why I'm here," Richards told more than 1,000 state Democrats Wednesday night.

The white-haired governor gained national stature during the 1988 Democratic National Convention for delivering a keynote address that showed off her wicked humor and sharp tongue.

The "gala" raised "in excess of $2 million," said Lewis Katz, finance chairman of the committee, who added that it will be used to aid Democratic candidates for the state Senate and Assembly this fall. The governor's post and all 120 seats in the Legislature are open in November.

"When you find a governor that is willing to speak up when it comes to welfare reform, when it comes to health care ... and when you find one that has reduced the crime rate by 6 percent as Jim Florio has done, then by gosh you ought to stand up and salute what he has done," Richards said.

She left the East Brunswick Hilton immediately after her remarks to attend a Democratic function in New York City.

Florio, who spoke after a dinner of chicken breast, mixed vegetables, roasted potatoes and broccoli, talked about what he believes are the successes of his stormy 3 1/2-year tenure.

The Democratic State Committee also showed a 5-minute video highlighting some of the governor's campaign events, with a voice-over of him talking about being the son of Italian immigrants, and the value of hard work.

"It's the political season. That means we'll hear a lot about what we've done wrong," Florio said. "Well let me tell you, we've done a lot that's right."

He talked about state efforts to keep General Motors Corp. in Linden and General Electric Co. in Camden, preserving the state ban on semiautomatic firearms and invest-

Space shuttle back on Earth

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Endeavour returned to Earth today with six astronauts and their trophy — a huge science satellite they snared in orbit.

The shuttle glided through a clear sky and landed at 7:52 a.m. CDT at Kennedy Space Center, where the journey began 10 days ago.

For the first time in three days, it was a fine morning for a shuttle landing. Thunderstorms and cloudy weather had thwarted Endeavour's landing attempts the previous two days.

"It's nice to have you home," Mission Control's Curtis Brown told the crew after Endeavour rolled to a stop on the concrete runway. "It's great to be home," replied shuttle commander Ronald Grabe.

NASA's newest shuttle added 4.1 million miles to the odometer — nearly 1 million miles more than intended — and circled Earth 155 times. It was the space agency's 56th shuttle flight and Endeavour's fourth.

Mission highlights included retrieval of a European satellite loaded with science samples, solar monitors and a telescope, and a nearly six-hour spacewalk by two astronauts to push in the satellite's antennas and practice techniques planned for the Hubble Space Telescope repair mission.

The crew also broke in the world's first commercial space laboratory, called Spacehab.

Despite their success, the four men and two women were more than ready to come home.

"If we do this much more, we're going to know much more about each other than we all want to know," Grabe joked to Mission Control as he prepared to come down.

Clinton issues logging, spotted owl plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is hoping to end the deadlock over the northern spotted owl and logging in the Northwest by severely scaling back timber harvests and injecting $1 billion to help ease the loss of logging jobs.

A timber plan to be announced at the White House today would reduce timber harvests to about one-third what they were in the 1980s when logging in federal forests west of the Cascade Mountains was at its peak, administration officials said.

To offset the economic impact, Clinton is offering more than $1 billion over five years for new jobs and retraining, economic development for businesses and community assistance, officials said.

The jobs will be mostly in watershed restoration and ecological programs, and the money would have to be approved by Congress.

The administration proposal comes nearly three months after Clinton at a forest conference in Oregon promised to resolve the longstanding dispute between loggers and environmentalists over protection of the threatened owl.

But it is not likely to end the fight.

Timber industry representatives and their allies in Congress already have said the proposed logging reductions — an annual drop from 4 million board feet in the 1980s to 1.2 million board feet — is too severe. Efforts will be made to increase the harvest, Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., predicted Wednesday.

And either environmentalists or the timber industry — or both — may yet go to court to challenge the Clinton plan because it is either too restrictive or not protective enough.

ments in education, environmental protection, welfare reform and the state economy.

He didn't mention the $2.8 billion tax increase of 1990 — the source of most of his misfortune. Nor did he directly name Christie Whitman, his Republican opponent in this year's governor's race.

Whitman has said she doesn't want to talk about 1990 and what she would have done had she been governor three years ago. Instead, she has said she wants to focus debate on New Jersey's future.

"I am looking forward to the campaign and the opportunity to talk about the issues," Florio said. "It's not enough to tell us only what you're against, and not what you're for and how you'll pay for it."

"People are entitled to straight answers. And that's what they'll get from me," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Clinton could use one less tar baby

Last year, when former President George Bush was finishing up his foreign policymaking with a humanitarian dispatch of U.S. troops to Somalia, a first-ever American military mission to feed the starving, his crusty ambassador to neighboring Kenya expressed some misgivings in a cable to Washington. "If you liked Beirut," wrote Smith Hempstone, "you'll love Mogadishu." To some Americans the cable seemed overwrought.

What Hempstone, a former newspaperman who built decades of affection for Africans, evidently wanted Americans to know — which might explain why the message was so widely leaked — was that Somalia likely would prove to be a thicket from which Americans could extricate themselves only with much difficulty. His infelicitous (some claimed racist) metaphor, which helped officialdom to pooh-pooh his advice, was that Somalia would act as a "tar baby." (His critics would consider Joel Chandler Harris, whose literary skills gave us "tar baby," to be politically incorrect.)

Superficially, the last few months in Somalia have suggested the Hempstone warnings were without warrant. American troops stopped the perpetually feuding war lords from interfering with food supply lines, mobilized the distribution of nourishment, and — within a few months — demobilized and came home, their mission successful. That is when Somalia's darker forces began to regroup and resume attempts to control that pitiable country.

This past month Hempstone apparently, was vindicated. Returning as part of a United Nations force, American warplanes bombarded the Mogadishu neighborhood of Mohammad Farah Aidid, one of the war lords who had made life so miserable before the first appearance of our troops. The raid was a retaliation for what appeared to be the Aidid gang's brutal assault on Pakistani troops left over as part of the U.N. peacekeeping force.

Not that the Pakistanis covered themselves in glory in the incident's aftermath. Enraged, they then halted a peace march of residents; television cameras showed women writhing in pain, slowly expiring as medical assistance never came. That is not the kind of military operation the blue-helmeted peacekeeping force is expected to conduct. Indeed, the Pakistani reaction draws a cloud over the multilateral U.N. troops, which a few years ago even won a Nobel Peace Prize.

As the killing of innocents is investigated, continuing American bombardments have raised doubts about our mission on the Horn of Africa. Surely President Clinton, having accepted the Bush policy in Somalia, authorized this use of force. No doubt he feels doubly reassured that responsibility for the U.N. action can be spread among the allies.

He would do better, as president, to rethink the policy and — even if his advisers consider it retrograde — contemplate the desirability of pulling out unilaterally. Already ordinary Somalis, who last winter considered the United States their great benefactor, increasingly see this nation as disruptive and murderous. Clinton could use one less tar baby.

Don't trust campaign reform

The United States Senate, in one of its periodic attempts to banish public cynicism about campaign financing without banishing any of the fortunate souls now installed in the United States Senate, has approved a bill that Majority Leader George Mitchell says will "reduce the role of money in federal election campaigns" and "make elections more competitive."

Voters can gauge the accuracy of these claims by considering the likelihood that senators — who have access to ample funds and won't gain from greater electoral competition — would welcome either development. In reality, the measure is a conspiracy against freedom of speech that will stifle citizen involvement in elections, foster public ignorance and make incumbents about as vulnerable to removal as the members of the House of Lords.

It is also a complicated mess, which enables politicians to take credit for cleaning up campaigns without fear the average voter will have the faintest idea what has actually been done.

The bill has three main components. It establishes "voluntary" spending limits in each Senate race (the House will set its own). I would punish violators by confiscating about a third of their campaign receipts and giving the funds to the opposing candidate, who would also get help with TV and mailing costs. And it bans donations from political action committees.

The problem with this, like most campaign reforms, is that by trying to reduce election spending, it rations debate about matter of great public concern. In political campaigns, money and speech are synonymous.

We have outgrown the New England town meeting model: These days, you can't get your message to the voters without laying out large amounts of cash — on TV, radio, direct mail and travel. We don't limit the amount CNN spends reporting on political races or the amount the Chicago Tribune spends endorsing candidates. Why should we limit what candidates and other interested parties spend?

The usual excuse is that challengers can't hope to compete against the gigantic sums that can be raised by incumbents. "This bill will end the days when candidates could crush their opponents with unanswerable spending," said President Clinton. But the problem is not that incumbents spend too much: After a certain point, the extra dollars don't yield a significant return anyway. The problem is that challengers spend too little.

The remedy lies in making it easier for challengers to raise money. We could start by allowing larger contributions from individuals — the current $1,000 maximum dates back to 1974 and would have to be set at more than $2,800 just to keep up with inflation. We could also restore tax credits for small campaign donations. Spending restrictions, however, merely hinder public understanding of issues by reducing the information available to voters.

They are also bound to be overturned by the courts. The Supreme Court rejected compulsory spending limits in 1976, and though these are allegedly voluntary, the penalties for candidates who don't volunteer make them coercive in effect. Politicians have a first Amendment right to do as much as they want to communicate their view and may not be punished for exercising that right.

Under this bill, those running for office get charged not only for what they spend but for any independent expenditures on their behalf. This leads to an absurd result: A group which likes Sen. Foghorn can run TV spots praising his challenger for striving to raise taxes — thus not only hurting the opponent but forcing her to subsidize Sen. Foghorn.

The ban on PAC giving runs up against the right of individuals to organize for collective goals. PACs are suspect because they represent "special interests." But what's so awful about large groups of politically committed citizens using their resources to elect candidates who share their views? If I don't like the PACs assisting a candidate, I can always retaliate at the polls.

It hasn't escaped the notice of the Senate that spending limits also favor incumbents, who have plenty of free devices to publicize themselves. University of Virginia government professor Larry Sabato notes that the typical member of Congress spends hundred of thousands of dollars each year in government funds for uses that confer political benefits — staff, travel, mailings, mobile offices and so on. Aside from giving up free mass mailings every election year, the senators didn't over exert themselves straining to eliminate that advantage.

There are changes available that would make campaigns more informative and more competitive. But anyone who expects that kind of reform to come from the people who have prospered under the status quo might hope to get milk from a bull.

Messages from The Beyond

When it comes to spiritual experiences, I try to give people who say they have had one the benefit of every doubt.

There is a woman in Georgia who claims the Virgin Mary visits her the 13th of every month and gives her messages.

It wasn't that long ago, also in the Atlanta area, there were people who claimed to see Jesus in a plate of spaghetti on a billboard. I was talking to a woman once on the telephone who had a spiritual experience even as we spoke.

I had written something about television evangelist Oral Roberts claiming he would die if his supporters didn't send in money to help him build a hospital.

The woman hadn't like what I wrote. She got me on the telephone and said she and her husband would come to Atlanta (they lived in Alabama) and pay my way and then accompany me to Tulsa to see the great works the Rev. Roberts was doing.

I tried to be as nice to the lady as I could and I told her I didn't think there was anything wrong with asking for funds to build a hospital. I said I simply thought the Rev. Roberts' fundraising tactics were somewhat circumspect. (I think I had written he was a crook.)

I didn't win her over, of course, but she suddenly said to me, "Paul has just come in the room and said you are a fine young man and are simply misguided and mean no harm."

"I'll be glad to speak to your husband," I said.

The "Paul" here was not her husband. It was Paul, the apostle.

I asked to speak to him, figuring I had a Pulitzer on my hands if I could get an interview.

By that time, however, Paul had already cleared Alabama air space.

But who am I to doubt any of this?

I will say, however, one must always be at least a little skeptical in the face of such alleged occurrences. I even had one myself recently.

I've already mentioned during my recent brush with death during heart surgery, I saw a bright light and followed it, as others have done, in the midst of near death experiences.

But I also explained it turn out to be a K mart tire sale. The more I think about it, though, it could have been a sale on girl's dresses or even on those socks that come six pair to a bundle.

I've also used this story before but it fits.

My grandfather said a farmer rose and asked to preach in his church one Sunday because he said he had been out in his field and had seen the words "Go preach the Gospel" written across the sky.

The man turned out to be a terrible preacher, however, and admitted later the words could have been, "Go plow your corn."

The lady who says she gets the messages from the Blessed Virgin on the 13th of each month was tested this 13th by a Bolivian neuropsychologist. He reported, "There were changes in her energy concentrations. We can know when Mary begins to talk."

I'll need more proof than that. I've had my energy concentrations changed by eating a large bowl of pinto beans.

As far as Jesus in the Spaghetti is concerned, if you really wanted to see Hillary Rodham Clinton in a bowl of pinto beans, you probably could, the power of suggestion being what it is and all the places Hillary is turning up these days anyway to keep her out of Washington.

And if it's messages you're interested in, well, I get them too on the 1st and 15th of ever month.

Unfortunately, they are not from the Virgin Mary.

Berry's World

"I can't grant you three wishes, but I'll promise you whatever you want to hear."

Plant your feet on something, Bill

The Clinton administration is starting to look like an awkward, self-conscious suitor.

It fishes around for the correct group to date, dropping one constituency after another as it sees a better catch just over the fence. So worried about doing all the right things that it can't act naturally, it does all the wrong things. Yet so euphoric in the flush of all things new and first stirrings of an infatuation, it suffers from too much endocrine production for good judgment and common sense.

Who but someone so hormonally directed would keep plane-loads full of voters waiting while he got a fancy haircut? What team but one infatuated with its own new power would fire five employees and put in its own people, without so much as a Job Service hearing?

Who but a team so exhausted from recreating history would think it wouldn't make a press corps guffaw to announce they had "fired" five employees one day, only to say a few days later that they'd only put the employees on "administrative leave" and were still looking into the matter?

But if the Lani Guinier mess doesn't bespeak hormones run amok, nothing does. This is the most bizarre toe-dance I have ever seen in presidential nominations. Based on press accounts of the president's statements, this is a logical reconstruction of the presidential team thinking:

A. "She's absolutely, positively the one for the job. We'll make all kinds of points with the civil rights crowd. We may disagree on some fundamental tenants, but she'll just be carrying out our directives anyway, so it doesn't matter what she thinks."

B. "Uh-oh. It looks like a lot of the Right People really disagree with whatever it is that Lani Guinier thinks, and that could mean we won't win Most Popular Senior Boy. We'll just lay low and see which way the wind's blowing."

C. "Oops, the wind's blowing up a maelstrom. And dagnabit, her writings are so darned obtuse we don't understand them anyway. How can we predict what might happen in a confirmation hearing? Ru-u-u-u-n-n-n-n!"

The president's 11th-hour confession that he'd just read Guinier's writings and had now decided he couldn't in good conscience support them had about as much spin as a Jack Morris breaking ball.

Can the man not pick a staff that can brief him on a nominee and head him off at the pass before he pitches the horse into the canyon? I'll acknowledge that this was, indeed, one troublesome appointment: Members of the Reagan, Bush and Ford staffs said Guinier's philosophies were on par with some adopted by those Republican administrations. Then on the other side, even moderate Democrats called her a radical who would divide us along racial lines.

But is it asking too much that a team headed by honor scholars be able to make a firm decision on a nomination and early? Did they have to come off looking like such favor-seekers? There are roughly a bazillion voters in America who would like to say to President Clinton right now: Get a grip, and get a staff that can hold on to something, too. Quit wandering around like a dog in a meat market, wondering how everyone will react and whatever will you do if they respond badly. Let the chips fall, for heaven's sake.

It doesn't take a Rhodes scholar to see the effect your waffling and backpedaling have among those who voted for the simple precepts with which you wooed them so well: a moderate approach to government, an end to welfare as we know it, deficit reduction, relief for a strapped middle class, help for the disenfranchised ill.

Stand for something, and plant your feet.

Representatives keep abortion-funding ban

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted to retain the government's 16-year ban on federal money for poor women's abortions Wednesday, giving abortion foes a victory in Congress' first big test vote of the year.

In a day of emotional debate, lawmakers trying to repeal the ban said that it discriminated against poor people and that it was time to overturn regressive Republican policies; abortion foes cast that position as on the "radical fringes."

The vote was not close. House members approved, 255-178, an amendment by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., to ban all federal funds for abortion except to save the life of a mother or in cases of rape or incest. The size of the margin was a blow to the hopes of abortion-rights advocates for future battles. Still to come: congressional debate on the Freedom of Choice Act, which would limit restrictions states can impose, and a decision on whether abortion should be covered in the administration's health care package of benefits.

With 114 newcomers in the House this year, both sides eyed the federal-funding vote as a barometer. About one-fourth of the first-term Democrats voted with Hyde; nearly all of the Republicans did.

Since President Clinton favors abortion rights and had backed a repeal of the Hyde amendment, abortion rights supporters had hoped for a different outcome on the ban, which was added to a Medicaid spending bill later sent to the Senate. "Everybody thought this was a much more pro-choice Congress, and this was a kinder, gentler Congress, and this was the year of the woman," said Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo. "We found out we were wrong."

Judge: Government withheld evidence in deportation case

CINCINNATI (AP) — A federal judge upheld the deportation of John Demjanjuk but said Wednesday the government withheld evidence in its case against the retired autoworker, who faces execution in Israel for Nazi war crimes.

U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Wiseman Jr. also said evidence from the former Soviet Union casts "substantial doubt" on whether Demjanjuk was the sadistic Nazi guard "Ivan the Terrible," who put Jews to death in the gas chambers at the Treblinka concentration camp in Poland.

But Wiseman said he found no new evidence to challenge another federal judge's finding that Demjanjuk served in the German SS at the Trawniki camp in Poland, where guards were trained.

"Mr. Demjanjuk's alibi was so incredible as to legitimately raise the suspicions of his prosecutors that he lied about everything — including his denial that he was Ivan the Terrible," Wiseman wrote. "The principal effect of this lie ... was merely to confirm the prosecutors' suspicions that they were on the right trail."

The Justice Ministry in Jerusalem said Wiseman's ruling would have no bearing on the case. Demjanjuk, who was deported in 1986 and convicted of being Ivan in 1988, has appealed the death sentence to the Israeli Supreme Court.

Wiseman, appointed by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to investigate how the government handled the case, recommended that the case be closed and that no action be taken against the prosecutors. The court, which isn't bound by Wiseman's recommendations, scheduled an Aug. 4 hearing.

Wiseman found that Justice Department lawyers hadn't given some evidence or provided misleading evidence to Demjanjuk's attorney and the federal courts. But Wiseman rejected defense claims that government prosecutors deliberately withheld information that could have cleared Demjanjuk, 72, of charges that he was Ivan the Terrible.

Demjanjuk has said he was not Ivan. His family says a Trawniki identification card that contained Demjanjuk's name and photo was a Soviet fraud and that he was a prisoner of war.

Former Treblinka guards and others have identified a man named Ivan Marchenko as the guard at Treblinka, Wiseman said.

Wiseman's 198-page report said that although federal prosecutors "were blinded to what we may now perceive to be the truth, they were not willfully blind."

He said prosecutors believed Demjanjuk was the notorious guard and did not pursue information that could have proved otherwise. Prosecutors have maintained that Demjanjuk, a Ukrainian, lied about his Nazi past to gain entry to the United States in 1952. He said he was a farmer in Sobibor, Poland, from 1936 to 1943. He later admitted he lied to avoid repatriation to the Soviet Union.

Demjanjuk, a retired autoworker from Cleveland, was stripped of his citizenship in 1981.

The Justice Department said it is "gratified by the special master's recommendation today that the John Demjanjuk case be closed, and his finding that government prosecutors acted in good faith."

"The ultimate issue of whether Demjanjuk was at the Treblinka death camp is one we anticipate will be addressed by the Israeli Supreme Court, which is expected to rule soon."

According to Israeli press reports, the court is to release its verdict in mid-July.

Game board OKs wolf kill in south Alaska

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The state Game Board approved a wolf-kill program Wednesday that was watered down from a plan that had prompted environmental groups to lead tourism boycotts.

But an even more limited wolf-kill proposal that the board approved earlier this week has already caused two groups to revive the boycotts.

The proposal approved by a 5-2 vote Wednesday was aimed at increasing the size of the Delta caribou herd in a 40- by 50-mile area south of Fairbanks in interior Alaska favored by hunters. The state Department of Fish and Game supported the plan.

The plan calls for state agents and private parties to kill up to 150 gray wolves in that area through hunting and trapping on the ground.

A plan approved by the board last fall to use airborne marksmen to shoot up to 300 wolves in three areas of the Alaska interior was canceled by Gov. Walter J. Hickel after demonstrations and boycotts.

Board chairman Dick Burley called the latest proposal reasonable. "I don't think it's bad we manage for human use," he said.

Hunters already typically kill about 1,000 wolves each year. Statewide populations of wolves are estimated at between 5,000 and 7,000. Predators and harsh weather have withered the herd from an estimated 10,700 animals in 1989.

On Monday, the Game Board approved allowing trappers who reach sites by aircraft anywhere in the state to kill wolves the day they land, as long as the trappers are at least 300 feet from their aircraft.

Citing that decision, the California-based group In Defense of Animals and Wolf Haven International, based in Washington state, endorsed a renewed tourism boycott.

House wants limits set on student loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to limit President Clinton's plans to put the government in the business of directly making loans to college students, but the vote may have only symbolic effect.

By a roll call of 397-28, lawmakers voted to limit direct federal education loans to $22 million for the next four years. Clinton wants the government to immediately begin lending the entire $15 billion students currently borrow each year in federally guaranteed loans from banks.

The vote came on an amendment to the $260 billion annual spending bill for the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education. The bill passed 305-124 and sent to the Senate.

The vote was considered symbolic because in a separate deficit-reduction bill, the Senate already has voted to phase in the direct-loan plan much more quickly. And the deficit-reduction bill passed earlier by the House would begin Clinton's plan in full immediately.

Nonetheless, sponsors of the measure approved Wednesday said they hoped the vote would pressure House and Senate negotiators to phase down Clinton's proposal in conference. They said the president's plan would force the government to borrow an extra $52.9 billion over the next five years.

"It simply doesn't make sense to commit taxpayers to $52.9 billion in new debt and hiring hundreds of new federal employees without knowing whether the program works," said sponsor Rep. Bart Gordon, D-Tenn.

Four million to 6 million college and graduate students a year borrow money for school costs.

Administration officials say the government would save $3 billion a year by making the loans directly, because direct government loans would eliminate the profits that banks now earn on the loans. As a result, students could be charged lower interest rates.

George 'Spanky' McFarland

Our Gang's Spanky dies in Grapevine

GRAPEVINE (AP) — George "Spanky" McFarland, the chubby child star who brought smiles to the world as a member of the "Our Gang" and "Little Rascals" comedy troupes, has died. He was 64.

A spokesman for Baylor Grapevine Hospital said McFarland, who remained popular to generations through reruns of the popular television series, died at 2:03 p.m. Wednesday.

"He made four generations of people all over the world laugh," said his son, Verne McFarland of Watauga. "You couldn't ask for a better legacy."

Former "Our Gang" colleague Dick Moore, who played "Dickie," warmly recalled his friend.

"He was a super guy," Moore said. "The thing that I liked so much about Spanky as an adult was he treated everyone the same. He was down home and unpretentious."

Spanky's popularity was enduring long after his acting career ended.

He was a hit at charity appearances and often popped up on cameo roles in movies and television shows, including a spot on Cheers last April. In the episode, he drops by the bar for a drink and is recognized by the character Cliff.

"He was a favorite of the executive producers when they were growing up so they invited him and he accepted," Bob Meyer, NBC manager of media relations, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

McFarland also was revered by another childhood star — Michael Jackson, who visited McFarland's home in 1984 and reportedly dedicated a room of his mansion to Spanky memorabilia.

McFarland unfortunately won't get to see one of the biggest honors bestowed upon his brief but memorable career.

Betsy McFarland said her father was scheduled to soon receive a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, but it was kept a secret from McFarland and was to be unveiled on a surprise trip to California with his wife, Doris.

Hospital spokesman Steve Tatum said McFarland arrived at Baylor's emergency department less than an hour before his death. He had arrived at the hospital in full cardiac-pulmonary arrest, but the cause of death was unknown, Tatum said.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

McFarland became an actor in 1931 at the age of 3 when he modeled baby clothes in his hometown of Dallas and later made a one-minute Wonder Bread commercial that was noticed by director Hal Roach.

In addition to "Our Gang," McFarland made 14 feature-length movies including Trail of the Lonesome Pine with Henry Fonda and Woman in the Window with Edward G. Robinson.

He finished his movie career while still a teenager.

"When I reached 16, and they stopped making the comedies, I made the decision then — I told my parents — I wasn't going to make any more films," he told the Midland Reporter Telegram in October 1988.

After retiring from the movie industry, McFarland began a 29-year sales career. Among others, he worked for Italian Swiss Colony Wine and Philco-Ford. He also owned a barbecue restaurant in Oklahoma City.

He later was a spokesman for the Fort Worth-based Justin Boot Co. and was active in charity work in North Texas.

Survivors include his wife and three children. His mother, Virginia Phillips McFarland, lives in the Dallas area.

O'Leary criticizes collider management, promises changes

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Troubled by accusations of poor management at the super collider, Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary has ordered an in-depth review that could result in a shakeup of the team building the giant atom smasher.

O'Leary, who strongly criticized the performance of the collider's managers during a House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee hearing Wednesday, said the review will be completed in 30 days.

One focus of the probe is whether the Energy Department should terminate its management contract with Universities Research Association, the non-profit consortium of universities now overseeing construction of the collider in Texas.

Other options, O'Leary said, include renegotiating the contract to strengthen Energy Department oversight and dividing the contract into two components: construction and scientific work.

The director of the collider laboratory, Roy Schwitters, had scant comment when asked in an interview about the review, which he said he hadn't heard about until Wednesday's hearing.

Asked if O'Leary's comments suggested that his job and those of other top managers were in jeopardy, Schwitters replied: "I don't know what the details of her 30-day review are. I can't answer it until I understand better."

Announcement of the review comes just six days after the House voted for the second consecutive year to kill the collider, now estimated to cost $10 billion or more.

While O'Leary didn't question URA's handling of the science issues, she took consortium officials to task for not properly overseeing the project and its costs.

"The attitudes of the leadership of the (super collider) laboratory are simply unacceptable to the standards of this Department of Energy, this administration and to me personally," O'Leary told the panel during a daylong hearing.

She wasn't alone in her criticism. Government auditors and committee chairman John Dingell portrayed URA as in over its head building one of the world's biggest construction projects.

"The SSC ranks among the worst projects we have seen in terms of plain contract mismanagement and failed government oversight," said Dingell, D-Mich.

He and other witnesses also criticized URA for not meeting longstanding demands by Congress and the Energy Department for an adequate cost-accounting system to track the hundreds of millions of dollars already spent on the project.

"They don't have the cost systems in place to effectively manage the project," said Victor Rezendes, who is in charge of the General Accounting Office's audits of collider contracts.

The GAO, DOE inspector general and others chronicled the difficulties they have had auditing records, saying that collider managers sought to thwart outside scrutiny.

Dingell repeatedly scolded collider officials throughout the hearing, at one point lecturing Schwitters after being displeased by an answer.

"As of this minute I must inform you, Dr. Schwitters, your performance is not up to the standards of this committee," Dingell said.

URA President John S. Toll and other collider managers offered little defense against the onslaught by Dingell and other lawmakers, but did say their consortium has done its best to manage a hugely complicated project.

"I do believe the URA overall is well qualified," he said.

"I believe if you look at it, the management of this laboratory by the URA is one of the best bargains the federal government has."

Saying that he was disturbed by reports that URA officials were uncooperative with outside investigators, Toll promised that his agency would cooperate in the future.

Toll conceded that the DOE inspector general's findings that $203 million in contracts had not been properly documented were probably correct. "We are criticized for not documenting that enough and that may be an appropriate criticism," he said.

After the hearing, Schwitters defended the case made by collider officials. "We agree with putting all the possible management improvements in we can find because we want to do the project in the best way."

"We are trying to understand ... where the real beef is," he added. "There were no allegations of wrongdoing. There were allegations having to do with detailed accounting systems and the like — but not about mismanagement or wrongdoing."

Law official says girls suffered 'animal-like' attack in rape, strangulations

HOUSTON (AP) — Two teenage girls were subjected to "one of the most vicious, sadistic, animal-like attacks I've ever seen" after they stumbled across a gang initiation rite and were raped and strangled, a law enforcement source says.

The source was not identified by the Houston Chronicle.

Six members of the Black N White gang were gathered at a railroad trestle last week for the initiation of two new members when the two girls walked past them, police said.

The initiation, which required that the two "wannabes" fight the existing gang members, was accompanied by a lot of drinking, police said.

Officers said Elizabeth Pena, 16, and Jennifer Ertman, 14, left a friend's apartment to walk to Miss Pena's house and took a shortcut through the woods.

"I think it was purely a crime of opportunity ... these girls happened along, and they were in the wrong place at the wrong time," said Houston Police Department

Lt. John Silva.

When the attack on the girls began, Silva said, the two would-be gang members left, but none of the six gang members attempted to stop the assaults.

"They all participated in the rapes and the strangulations," prosecutor Ted Wilson said.

Charged with capital murder and held without bond are Peter Anthony Cantu, 18, Derrick Sean O'Brien, 18, Efrain Perez, 17, Raul Omar Villarreal, 17, and Jose Ernesto Medellin, 18.

One suspect's 14-year-old brother is being held by juvenile authorities.

A source told the Houston Chronicle that the girls were forced to submit to "just about every sex act you can imagine, and a few you just couldn't imagine."

Some of the men arrested told police that after the girls stopped moving, the six took turns jumping up and down on their bodies, to make sure both were dead.

When the five adult suspects made court appearances Wednesday, they had various epithets written on the back on their jail uniforms.

It was unclear whether the slurs were written by other inmates or by sheriff's deputies, one of whom called the five "not real popular" with inmates and guards.

Perez was late in court because of a trip to the jail clinic one bailiff said was the result of a beating from other prisoners.

Medellin had no writing on his uniform, but a deputy said other prisoners had harassed and intimidated him and threatened him with sexual assault.

Judge blocks free trade pact with Canada, Mexico

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge blocked the North American Free Trade Agreement with Mexico and Canada on Wednesday until the Clinton administration analyzes in detail its likely effects on the environment.

The administration said the decision was "not in the public interest" and pledged an expedited appeal.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey ordered the administration to prepare a formal statement on the accord's environmental impact "forthwith," triggering a process that may take months or years to complete. He said he would resolve any disputes over a timetable.

The judge said the document "is essential for providing ... the information needed to assess the present and future environmental consequences of ... NAFTA when it is submitted to Congress for approval."

The agreement, already ratified by Canada, is scheduled to take effect on Jan. 1 pending approval by the United States and Mexico. It provides for steadily declining tariffs among the three nations over a 15-year period, culminating in a virtual elimination in trade barriers.

J. Michael McCloskey of the Sierra Club, one of three environmental groups involved in the suit, said the ruling was a "critical decision" that would elevate the importance of environmental considerations in such actions.

But within hours of Richey's ruling, U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor told reporters at the White House, "We believe that court's decision is not in the public interest."

He said that the administration planned to go ahead and send the accord to Congress.

Kantor told reporters the administration is concerned about the environmental consequences of the proposed treaty, but the court's ruling "interferes with the president's ability to negotiate international trade agreements." He added it also impedes Clinton's ability to work out a strong side agreement designed to protect the environment.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said Richey's ruling, if allowed to stand, "could result in an inordinate delay of NAFTA, and we don't want to see that."

Clinton has insisted that Congress approve the agreement before January. But he admitted four weeks ago "it is going to be a very tough fight" with lawmakers who are convinced that the accord would export thousands of U.S. jobs to Mexico.

In a suit brought by three environmental groups, Richey ruled that the agreement negotiated last year by former President Bush and the president of Mexico and prime minister of Canada violates the National Environmental Policy Act.

"NAFTA will have significant environmental effects and ... may worsen the environmental problems already existing in the United States-Mexico border area," the judge said in his 23-page decision.

Both opponents and proponents of the accord said the court's action could have a devastating impact on the agreement's already fragile prospects in Congress.

"My fear is that NAFTA is finished unless this ruling is overturned," said Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. "The President must appeal this ruling immediately. Hesitation or ambiguity ... will further encourage the protectionist opponents of NAFTA to cloak their arguments in environmental rhetoric."

Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., an opponent of the trade accord, said the ruling "slows NAFTA down to a wagon train pace just when the White House was fixing to gun the engine and try to run this thing through the Capitol."

Clinton has promised to negotiate side agreements with Mexico and Canada dealing with environmental and workers' rights issues as well as possible import surges before sending the agreement to Congress.

The Bush administration had contended those measures were unnecessary. Meanwhile, several unions and environmental groups have complained that negotiations on the side letters have been behind closed doors.

Richey ruled that former U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Bush violated the Administrative Procedures Act in negotiating and approving the agreement last October without first formally assessing its environmental impact.

"Such an impact statement is essential for providing the Congress and the public the information needed to assess the present and future environmental consequences of, as well as the alternative to, the NAFTA when it is submitted to the Congress for approval," the judge said.

Both the Clinton and Bush administrations had contended that the National Environmental Policy Act requiring impact statements on significant government actions affecting the environment did not apply to the free-trade accord.

They also claimed that subjecting the pact to environmental and administrative procedures laws unconstitutionally infringes on the president's right and ability to conduct foreign policy.

"The defendant conveniently ignores the fact that the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations is given to the Congress under the Constitution," Richey said, dismissing the White House arguments.

Public Citizen, the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth filed the suit after Bush signed the accord last October.

They contended that the lowering of trade barriers in the accord would reduce prices for domestic agriculture and meat products, creating pressure to intensify production measures that could have a detrimental impact on the environment.

Mexico's Commerce Secretary Jaime Serra Puche predicted that the agreement will go into effect Jan. 1 as scheduled despite the court order. He told a Mexico City news conference that the order will not affect talks on side agreements on the environment and labor conditions, which he said are on-schedule.

Canadian Trade Minister Thomas Hockin also was not concerned about the court decision. "I wouldn't say that this is a huge problem," Hockin said during a visit to Mexico City.

Business goes on in Mexico with or without agreement

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — In this industrial capital that's been thriving on trade for decades, business leaders decried a ruling blocking the North American Free Trade Agreement.

But they said Mexico's economic opening will continue with or without a formal agreement.

This northern capital of 2.5 million 140 miles south of the Texas border has more than half of Mexico's giant industries, many of them Fortune 500 companies. They produce steel, cement, glass, beer and have a long history of trade and joint-ventures with the U.S. companies. It is a major banking center.

"Mexico has an open economy and we are convinced this is the right path to continue," said Jose Luis Mastretta, director of business planning for the Monterrey Chamber of Commerce. "We are not going to anguish just because a judge has made an exaggerated decision. Trade will go on."

On Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey ruled that the agreement negotiated last year by former President Bush, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari of Mexico and then Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney violates the National Environmental Policy Act.

He blocked President Clinton from presenting the agreement to Congress until the three nations prepare an environmental impact statement. This could take months or years.

Richey ruled that former U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Bush violated the Administrative Procedures Act in negotiating and approving the treaty last October without assessing its environmental impact.

The Mexican stock market dropped 30.84 points, down 1.81 percent from its opening of 1,701.13.

Clinton wanted Congress to approve the agreement by January and negotiators were working on supplemental environmental agreements. But those negotiations apparently hit sovereignty snags. For example, Mexico didn't want any foreign country being its environmental police.

Since the Salinas administration took power in 1988, trade tariffs have tumbled, inefficient state-owned companies have been privatized and foreign investment welcomed.

Business leaders say this trend is unlikely to change because of the ruling.

"Investors have not been coming to Mexico because of the possible trade agreement," said Omar Cruz, director of Proexport, an agency that promotes investment in this state of Nuevo Leon.

"They're coming because they can be competitive, and if investors perceive they can still be competitive, they will still come — Mexico has succeeded with its economic opening," he said.

But it's this very competitive edge that has made U.S. environmentalists and labor leaders opposed to the agreement.

Ecologists on both sides of the border have been lobbying Washington to work out the supplemental agreement to deal with deterioration of the border.

Lured by cheap labor, more than 2,000 foreign companies, mostly American, have established in the past 10 years assembly operations in Mexico, most along the 2,000-mile border.

Study finds new evidence that steroids alter moods

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — New evidence that anabolic steroids can affect the mind comes from an unprecedented experiment on people who took them.

The drugs that many athletes take illegally as muscle-building aids seemed to trigger reactions ranging from euphoria to aggression, said an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Earlier researchers who had questioned steroid abusers had also reported such mood changes. But this is the first time the drug was tested under controlled conditions in people who had never used steroids before, researchers said.

Twenty men, ages 18-42, spent two weeks in a National Institutes of Health research ward. The men, who were not trained athletes and who previously were found clear of drug use and psychiatric problems, spent two days getting used to the place.

Over the next 12 days, they received doses of 40 and 240 milligrams of steroids as well as doses of an enert fake drug. While in the ward, they completed several questionnaires on their moods, and were evaluated by nurses.

The researchers found greater energy, confusion, distractibility, euphoria and sexual arousal associated with steroid use. The changes were not strongly marked, but were common enough to be meaningful, said Dr. David R. Rubinow, clinical director of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Researchers also found a rise in violent feelings, but these were not quite common enough to meet strict scientific standards for a clear association, so they were labeled a trend, said Rubinow, who did the study with Dr. Tung-Ping Su and colleagues.

However, one subject did demonstrate the symptoms called "roid rage" — a feeling of uncontrollable anger, Rubinow said. This person was put, at his own request, in a virtually bare room, Rubinow said: "He realized he needed to be away, but he wasn't a risk to anyone as long as he was off by himself."

The man was observed through an open door pounding the walls on a couple of occasions, but the symptoms were gone within a few days, Rubinow said. This was the most extreme case studied, but the overall study demonstrates the existence of mood changes among steroid users, Rubinow said.

"The fact that we found anything at all is rather amazing in a study in which we used such low doses at such a short period of time," Rubinow said. However, there was too much variability among participants to let researchers predict who may be affected and how strongly, he said.

Other researchers consider the clinical study an advance over the previous data from steroid abusers, but contend its value is limited by several factors.

The constant psychological assessments may have had their own effects on the subjects' moods, said Dr. Gary I. Wadler of Cornell University Medical College in Manhasset, N.Y.

And because the testing ran for only about two weeks, it's impossible to tell whether the reported mood changes would have gotten stronger or less severe, or remained unchanged over the longer periods in which abusers normally take steroids, Wadler said. Steroid users have been reported to cycle through dosages in 8-12 week periods.

For instance, heightened sexual arousal was reported in these subjects. But long-term steroid use is said to make sexual interest flag, Wadler said.

The type of steroid given, methyltestosterone, may have made the effect more dramatic, said steroid researcher Charles E. Yesalis of Penn State.

"For several decades, athletes knew there was something special about methyltestosterone — that it'll really get to you from a behavioral standpoint," Yesalis said. "In my opinion, it's not a commonly used anabolic steroid because it has this reputation."

Also, the limited variability of dosages may affect the value of the results, Yesalis said. Endurance athletes may take less than the 40-milligram low dose while weight trainers may take far more than the 240-milligram high dose, he said. Abusers commonly also "stack" — use multiple dosages.

And the drug was given orally as capsules, in contrast with the common injection method — a difference that may affect the results, Yesalis said.

However, the research does help to answer one question about steroids — whether they affect the nervous system directly or through the athlete's perception that he is gaining muscle, Yesalis said.

"You get bigger in a society that values bigness," Yesalis said. The thought was that the change in body type may account for the mood changes.

This study "adds to my suspicion" that steroids affect the nervous system, Yesalis said. But they don't rule out an indirect effect, he said.

Route 66 stops at Square House Museum

"Return to Route 66: Photographs from the Mother Road" is an exhibit of 66 photographs by Missouri photographer Shellee Graham.

Michael Wallis, in his book "Route 66: The Mother Road," describes the facts and the fantasies of this "more than just a highway": "It began in the 1920's with a vision of a paved highway that would connect Chicago to Los Angeles and the west. By the time of its completion, the road would cover over 2,400 miles, three time zones, and eight states. It would like the windy shores of Lake Michigan with the waters of the Pacific Ocean—a two-lane road rolling through the great American Southwest, tying together the vestiges of America's pioneer passages into one meandering and magnificent highway."

Says photographer Graham: "Like many thousands before, I have a deep feeling of nostalgia for this road. Now after three years of driving and photographing Route 66, I have organized an exhibition of my color and black/white photographs with accompanying text. It is a pictorial journey that details the highway's history, forgotten towns, roadside diners, motels, and people."

Graham continues, "I hope the viewers enjoy this final product, perhaps spark the interest of those younger in the history of this road and make a contribution to the record of its impact on the many lives that travelled it, all in hope of a different life if not a better one. This is my effort to record as much history and personal anecdotes as possible—and all this only scratches the surface. So go on—get off the interstate and catch a piece of America."

All eight states are represented in the exhibit, although Kansas has only one picture since there is only one town in this state on the route. Missouri is the best represented, being Graham's home state; but the Texas section has pictures of Shamrock, McLean, Amarillo, and Glenrio.

Each photograph is accompanied by a detailed caption. Some are personal experiences of the photographer, and others are quotes about the scene from books by various authors or articles from Route 66 Association newsletters.

The photographic portion of the exhibit is augmented by original Route 66 road signs and modern souvenirs loaned by Route 66 Antiques, a fascinating shop on 6th Street in Amarillo owned by George Rook, a sign collector and Route 66 aficionado himself.

The Route 66 exhibit will be on display in the M.K. Brown Auditorium of the Square House Museum's Hazlewood Arts and Education Building all summer, from June 19 through Aug. 29.

The exhibit can be viewed Monday-Friday from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and on Saturday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m. The Square House Museum is located on Texas Highway 207 in Panhandle. Admission to the Museum is free.

Man stays by wife's side through tough times

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, I dated a married man I'll call "Jim." I was newly divorced and he was my landlord. We lost track of each other for many years, but last September he phoned, asking to see me. He had been divorced for 14 years and was not on speaking terms with any of his seven children. He said they didn't pay enough attention to their mother, who was in a nursing home, and besides, they contributed to her breakdown with their bad behavior.

Abby, she divorced him, and it was a very bitter divorce, but because of problems with their children and her ill health, he became more and more concerned with her, visiting her at the nursing home twice a day, seven days a week. Have you ever heard of a bitterly divorced man going to a nursing home to see his ex-wife 14 times a week? He said he was trying to keep her "focused" and distract her from her illness.

Well, last week she died in his arms, and he's taking it very hard — much worse than he thought he would. He continues to call me once in a while.

She is buried only a hop, skip and jump away from his home. My guess is he will probably visit her each day at the mausoleum where she now resides. You have my permission to publish this letter — and please comment.

S.W. IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR S.W.: Whatever fueled his emotions, whether it was guilt over the failure of the marriage, compassion or residual love, Jim has suffered a loss, and will need some time to work it through.

If you are patient and able to control any feelings of jealousy, you might find a future with this man — provided you want

Dear Abby

one with someone who has alienated all seven of his children.

DEAR ABBY: Please warn your readers that the man wearing a sign around his neck that says, "I am hungry, will work for food" could be a scam. It was proved to be in our city. There is no law against wearing these signs, so con artists go from city to city working this scam. Most people either have no work to offer or they are afraid to take a stranger home to do odd jobs, so they impulsively give them a dollar or two.

I personally gave money to such a man who was loitering outside the post office as I entered. When I came out, I saw this man take a wad of dollar bills out of his pocket and hand it to a woman who drove by in a nice-looking new car. I felt like a fool. After the local paper mentioned these people, this particular man moved in front of a neighborhood church, and a week or so later, I saw him near a shopping mall.

My suggestion would be to refer these beggars to a mission, or offer them some real work — and see what happens.

MRS. F.E. ALTARAS,
FORT WORTH, TEXAS

DEAR MRS. ALTARAS: Yours is an excellent suggestion. A word to the (street) wise should be sufficient.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old unmarried man. I know I sometimes make those around me uncomfortable because I am very fussy about order, perfection and cleanliness. For instance, the money in my wallet must be arranged with the larger bills on one side, progressing to the smaller ones. The suits in my closet must all be facing in the same direction, and my shoes have to line up perfectly. I will spend half an hour crawling around on my bathroom floor looking for lint and hair you would need a magnifying glass to find.

I would like to get married, but I always seem to find something wrong with the girl. Do you think perhaps the reason no girl can qualify is because deep down I am afraid a wife and family may clutter up my otherwise orderly life? It was suggested I seek professional help. What do you think?
NEAT AND ORDERLY

DEAR NEAT: If anyone asks if he should get professional help, I always vote yes. Better to seek it and not need it than to need it and not seek it.

Want your phone to ring? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular"—for people of all ages. To order, send a 10¢ business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Magic move

Orlando sends Webber to Golden State for Hardaway, three first-round picks

NBA draft

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Orlando helped Golden State get taller and tougher. In return, the Magic received the perfect complement to Shaquille O'Neal and a chance to be one of the superteams of the future.

Orlando made Chris Webber, Michigan's 6-foot-9 forward, the first player chosen in the NBA draft Wednesday night. And after the Warriors took do-it-all Memphis State guard Anfernee Hardaway two picks later, the teams swapped the players.

In between those choices, Philadelphia filled its tall order with 7-6 Shawn Bradley.

Golden State, desperate to add rebounding and defensive help to a small, potent lineup, sweetened the trade considerably by throwing in three first-round draft choices, with the first to be exercised no earlier than 1996.

It was the first draft-day deal ever involving the league's No. 1 pick and the first time the top choice had been dealt at all since Cleveland acquired the pick from Philadelphia in 1986.

"These are both great players. We would be happy with either one," said Dick DeVos, Orlando's director of player personnel. "But when you put one together with three other players, that's a fantastic value. We just insured our future."

Orlando, which improved from 21 victories in 1991-92 to 41 in O'Neal's rookie season and then lucked out in the draft lottery for the second straight year, has 11 first-round choices over the next seven years.

Webber and Hardaway both wanted to be part of that future. "Nothing against Golden State, but I'm looking forward to playing with Shaq," said Hardaway, a fine passer and outside shooter who can play point guard, shooting guard and small forward. "I think we're going to be a dominating team. Me and Shaq will play well together. We really complement each other."

Webber turned philosophical after learning of the trade. "Maybe I wasn't the right thing for them," he said. "This is still a great thrill, to be the number one player in the draft."

Asked if he was upset, Webber said: "Don't take away my dream come true."

As costly as the deal was for Golden State, coach Don Nelson was thrilled.

"The beauty of the trade was that we didn't have to lose any players," he said. "We did have to give a lot. Three first-round picks is a lot to give for anybody, but we think it was well worth it."

"This has been in the works off and on for well over a month. We continued to communicate on a daily basis and it was culminated a few minutes before the draft began."

The move also had financial repercussions, especially for the Magic. Orlando is going to struggle signing its draft picks as it is. Adding the No. 1 choice for the second successive season might have been impossible.

O'Neal signed a seven-year, $40 million contract after Orlando drafted him first last year. Christian Laettner, picked third, by Minnesota a year ago, signed a six-year, $21.6 million deal.

Said DeVos: "We'll make this happen."

Nelson also had been interested in Bradley before deciding he'd rather have the more polished Webber. Bradley hasn't played basketball competitively since he was a Brigham Young freshman in 1990-91, having spent the last two years as a Mormon missionary in Australia.

Had Philadelphia ruined the proposed trade by taking Hardaway,

Orlando would have kept the three picks — as well as Webber — and the Warriors would have selected Bradley.

The 76ers are counting on Bradley to block tons of shots and, eventually, to develop into a fine all-around center. Bradley has good coordination for his size. He was a .400 hitter as a high school baseball player and enjoys water skiing and horseback riding.

"Big horse," he said.

The Dallas Mavericks, selecting fourth, took 6-8 Kentucky forward Jamal Mashburn. Like the three players selected before him, Mashburn left college early to join the NBA, the first time underclassmen were chosen with the first four picks.

Mashburn, a fantastic offensive player, will be joining last season's worst team.

"This is a great situation for me," he said. "I'll take some bumps and bruises but I don't want to sit on the bench. When I went to Dallas (for a visit), I fell in love with the place. They had a down year, but this is a new year."

The first senior chosen was J.R. Rider, a 6-5 guard from UNLV, who went to the Minnesota Timberwolves at No. 5. Rider, the nation's second leading scorer at 29.1 points per game, felt he was the best player available.

"If I touch the ball enough," he said, "good things will happen."

The Timberwolves, who earlier in the day sent center Felton Spencer to Utah for center-forward Mike Brown, already have a good off-guard in Doug West. They might move West to small forward and trade unhappy Chuck Person.

Washington used the sixth choice for Indiana forward Calbert Cheaney. Sacramento took Duke point guard Bobby Hurley and Milwaukee went with little-known Hartford forward Vin Baker.

Navratilova upset in women's semifinals

By STEPHEN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jana Novotna spoiled Martina Navratilova's bid for a 10th Wimbledon title today, upsetting her 6-4, 6-4 to reach the final for the first time.

Novotna will play the winner of the semifinal between two-time defending champion Steffi Graf and Conchita Martinez.

The 36-year-old Navratilova had not lost a set the entire tournament, but she was completely outplayed by Novotna. The eighth-seeded Czech dictated the play with her sharp serves, including six aces, and precise chip returns and passing shots.

Novotna covered the court with ease, running down Navratilova's best shots at the baseline and volleying with power and placement. Navratilova, meanwhile, couldn't seem to do anything right.

It was Novotna's first victory over Navratilova in eight matches. It marked a major breakthrough for the 24-year-old Czech, who has long been noted for her talent but rarely produced against the top stars.

Every service game was a struggle for Navratilova. She faced a break point in all but two of her service games, while breaking Novotna only once.

Novotna broke Navratilova three times in the first set. Navratilova, down 1-5, closed to 4-5, but Novotna served out the set in the next game with an ace down the middle.

Novotna took the advantage in the second set when she broke for a 2-1 lead, as Navratilova netted a low backhand volley. Navratilova saved three break points at 3-1, two with netcords, and another at 4-2. But Novotna served out the match at 30, with Navratilova hitting a weak backhand return into the net.

Novotna dropped to her knees and let out a scream, then covered her mouth in disbelief.

In Friday's men's semifinals, top-seeded Pete Sampras plays No. 4 Boris Becker and No. 2 Stefan Edberg faces No. 3 Jim Courier.

It's the first time since 1927, the year seedings were introduced, that the top four men have reached the Wimbledon semifinals. It's the eighth time in the Open era that it's happened at a Grand Slam tournament.

Written off before the tournament, Andre Agassi had something to prove. He lost his title but made his point.

Agassi came in as the No. 8 seed, the lowest of any defending Wimbledon champion. Having played only one match in two months because of a wrist injury, he was given little chance of making a big impact this year.

Yet, Agassi advanced as far as the quarterfinals, where he gave Sampras a battle before succumbing in five sets Wednesday. Along the way, he charmed the crowds and provided plenty of copy for the tabloids.

"I think I proved a lot to the people and to myself," Agassi said after a 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4 loss to Sampras. "Things could have gone a lot differently. I could have gone out early. I proved to myself that I could take a couple of months off from an injury, practice for a week, and just with my sheer ability and mental discipline give myself a chance to win the tournament. And I felt like I had a chance to win it."

Agassi made his breakthrough here last year, defying his reputation for losing big matches and becoming the first baseliner to win at Wimbledon since Bjorn Borg.

"I believe this year has given me more reason to believe in myself than even last year, knowing that I beat a lot of great players," Agassi said. "That to me means a lot because I think a lot of people were in question if I could come off a setback like that and answer it with good tennis."

Agassi played anything but good tennis in dropping the first two sets against Sampras. "I was borderline embarrassed," he said. "I thought, 'What's going on? It's not going to end this way.'"

Glo-Valve shuts down Dean's Pharmacy in Major Bambino City Tournament

Glo-Valve Service avenged a regular-season loss to Dean's Pharmacy by slamming 15 hits enroute to a 21-5 victory in the Optimist Major Bambino League City Tournament Wednesday.

Brian Doss won his third game of the year, allowing three earned runs on five hits. He struck out three and did not walk a batter. Cody Shepard faced just seven batters in relief of Doss. He struck out six and walked one. Matt Heasley and Joel Bolz pitched for Dean's Pharmacy.

The Glo-Valve hitting barrage began in the top of the first inning as nine batters in a row reached base. Amos Valmore opened the game with a single and scored on a triple by Leo Ramirez. Ramirez came home on a single by Heath Cowan. Cowan moved to third on a single by Shepard. Glo-Valve's leading hitter for the game, and scored on a throwing error. Brent Phelps tripled home Shepard. Doss was hit by a pitch and took second on a fielder's choice. Heath Keaton brought both runners home with a single. He moved to second on the throw to the plate and scored the seventh run of the inning on a single by Roy Don Devoll.

Dean's Pharmacy scored four times in the bottom of the first to narrow the lead to 7-4. Matt Heasley singled with one out and Blake Stewart brought him home with a double. He moved to third on a single by Bolz. Kyle Gambelin chased both runners home with a triple. He scored when Randall Ellis was safe on an error.

Glo-Valve picked up in the second inning where they left off in the first. Five errors and singles by Doss and Devoll, a double by Shepard and a two-run home run by Phelps produced eight runs.

Kody Franks was safe on an error to start the bottom of the second for Dean's Pharmacy. He moved to second on a single by Wes Warren and came home on two wild pitches.

Glo-Valve picked up a run in the third. Kyle McCullough singled and went to second when Brooke Chronister was hit by a pitched ball. A passed ball moved McCullough to third and he scored on an infield out by Valmore.

In the fourth inning for Glo-

Valve, Shepard singled for this third hit of the evening. Jonathan Brockington walked and both moved along the bases and scored on wild pitches. Doss walked and barely made it to second on an infield single by Josue' Silva. McCullough's double scored Doss and moved Silva to third. Silva came sliding home on a wild pitch while McCullough took third base. McCullough scored the final run of the game on an infield out by Chronister.

Dunlap Industrial tamed Cabot Corporation, 8-2, in the late game. Josh Rodrigues was the winning pitcher with help from Kory Nickell and Greg Lindsey. Rodrigues and Lindsey had home runs for Dunlap. Tre Stokes and Josh Franklin pitched for Cabot.

Glo-Valve plays Duncan Insurance for the second time in City Tournament play at 6 p.m. tonight. Rotary Club and Hoechst Celanese, both 2-0 in tournament play, clash in a winner's bracket game at 8 p.m.

The Major Bambino City Tournament is scheduled to conclude Saturday.

"I have enjoyed my time here at OPSU," Valerius said in a news release. "We have met a lot of good people and I feel I have learned a great deal. I know I am a better coach for having coached at OPSU, and I would like to thank the university for giving me that chance."

Campanella remembered as man who inspired millions

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As the boy watched the Brooklyn Dodgers step off the bus, one powerfully built player paused, looked him in the eye and patted him on the head.

"It was in Tampa when I was 7. It was the first time I had ever seen the 'Boys of Summer.' Campy stopped, patted my head and asked my dad, 'Joe, is this your son? He looks like he's going to be a baseball player.'"

Roy Campanella, who always seemed to take time to encourage young ball players, was right. The youngster was Steve Garvey, whose father, Joe, drove the team bus during the spring.

"Young players got to know and appreciate Campy," Garvey, the former Dodgers' All-Star first baseman, said Wednesday at a Memorial service for Campanella. "He was a man who set a great example."

Dodgers broadcaster Vin Scully echoed that sentiment when he spoke of Campanella, the Hall of Fame catcher who died Saturday at age 71 of a heart attack.

"The noblest contribution any man can make for the benefit of posterity is that of character and Roy did that," Scully said. "The richest bequest which any man can leave to the youth of his native land is that of a shining spotless example, and Roy gave that."

Former Dodgers pitcher Joe Black said: "Campy was a warm human being whose mere presence brightened everyone's lives. In 1944, when I first met Campy, he said, 'Junior, Campy will take you by the hand and show you the ropes.' That's when my worries about being in the Negro League faded away."

"Campy made the best part of the game helping the other guy."

Campanella was remembered as a great player who perhaps made even more significant contributions to his fellow man after a 1958 auto accident cut his career short and left him a quadriplegic.

"He was an inspiration to me and to millions of other people," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "When that auto accident ended his career, he didn't give up, he didn't get bitter. He was filled with happiness and love and he spread that to the nation."

Tom Bradley, whose eulogy at the service was part of his final day as mayor of Los Angeles, said: "I believe the greatest tribute ever paid to anybody might have been the night 93,000 people filled the Coliseum to pay tribute to him."

"Most of those people had never seen him play a game ... but he had the force of personality to influence us all. Each of us will be bigger, stand taller, reach a little higher because we knew Roy Campanella."

In 1959, a year after his auto accident, the Dodgers and New York Yankees drew 93,103 to the Los Angeles Coliseum for a Campanella benefit exhibition.

Thousands more were turned away from what still ranks as the largest crowd ever for a baseball game.

Despite being in a wheelchair, Campanella remained cheerful and active, spending the last 17 years in various capacities with the Dodgers in Los Angeles. He tutored the team's young catchers, which over the years included Steve Yeager, Joe Ferguson, Mike Scioscia and current starter Mike Piazza.

About 250 people, including many of Campanella's teammates in the Negro Leagues, teammates with the Brooklyn Dodgers and club officials attended the private services at Forest Lawn, a few miles from Dodger Stadium.

During a 10-year major-league career with the Dodgers in Brooklyn, Campanella set major league records for catchers with 41 homers and 142 RBIs in 1953.

He joined the Dodgers in 1948, a year after Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier.

In 1969, Campanella followed Robinson as the second black player elected to the Hall of Fame.

Ismail's agent denies deal with Raiders

TORONTO (AP) — The agent for Rocket Ismail today contradicted a report that said the former Notre Dame star had signed with the Los Angeles Raiders.

"There is absolutely no agreement," attorney Bob Woolf said today from his Boston office. "Negotiations are ongoing, so I don't know where rumors like this start."

The Toronto Sun, quoting an unidentified source, reported in Wednesday's edition that Ismail signed a deal with the Raiders worth $3 million, with two years guaranteed and the team holding the option on the next two years. Ismail spent the past two seasons with the CFL's Toronto Argonauts.

Woolf said he spoke with Raiders director of football operations Steve Ortmyer on Tuesday and no agreement was reached.

"And he's on vacation until July 6," Woolf said. The Raiders open training camp July 11 and Woolf said he'd like to finalize a deal by then.

The Sun quoted the source as saying, "It's a done deal. Ismail got $800,000 to sign, with a million a year for two years."

"I know nothing about this," Woolf said.

The 23-year-old Ismail, who returns kicks and plays wide receiver, made $8 million in two seasons on a $18.2 million, four-year deal with the Argonauts before owner Bruce McNeill presented him with the option of going to the NFL.

Southwest Outdoors

By Mel Phillips

Safety first on the 4th

The Fourth of July is the most popular weekend for heading to the lake and enjoying the great outdoors. BUT, be careful. The recent drowning at Lake Meredith provides some important lessons that could save your life.

1. WEARING A LIFE JACKET IS LIKE WEARING A SEAT BELT — WHEN YOU NEED ONE, IT'S TOO LATE TO START LOOKING FOR IT.

Survivors of boating accidents lament that everything occurs so fast, there is not time to open storage bins and search for the life jackets. Wear a PFD (Personal Floatation Device) any time the big motor is running. Professional anglers and skiers all wear PFD's and so should each member of your family.

2. THE WIND IS THE ENEMY.

When you see whitecaps, even routine tasks can become dangerous. Running jug-lines is normally an easy job, but stopping and allowing even one wave to wash over the back of a boat can add hundreds of pounds in extra weight. Older boats can sink like a rock and although many newer rigs have some floatation, don't bet your life on it.

3. WEAR THE CORRECT SIZE PFD.

A child's size preserver will not support an adult and an adult life jacket can easily slip off a youngster during an emergency. The price of a PFD varies from $20 up to $75. Remember A PFD is better than life insurance because it will save a life.

LOOKING for a good fishing lake that is not over-crowded with waterskiers and jetskis? Lake Baylor and Lake Childress both located just off highway #287 north of Childress, offer a fishing oasis for anglers tired of weekend harassment by adolescents using daddy's boat.

Lake Childress has extremely clear water and offers plenty of hungry smaller black bass. Take a spinning rod and try out those new finesse lures. The bass are fewer but usually much bigger at nearby Lake Baylor. Waterdogs, Rat-L-Traps, and Berkley PowerWorms are just the ticket for catching and releasing trophy bass. These two lakes are my favorite spots on holidays. For some reason, the crowds of rowdies that flock to other area lakes bypass these two jewels. Camping, hookups, and kids play-ground are available.

Alcohol and water don't mix. Drinking and driving a car is dangerous. Toss in some wave action on a hot day and a drunk, driving a boat, is a disaster waiting to happen. A new state law allows game wardens to arrest drunks who drive boats.

Bad news for college playoff proponents

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — For football fans longing to see a college playoff, the news is not good.

"It's fair to say there's no great enthusiasm for it," UCLA Chancellor Charles Young said Wednesday at the end of the summer meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission. "There is no plan to put an action item on the agenda."

Many observers had speculated the Presidents Commission would put a question on the ballot at next January's NCAA convention asking schools if they wanted to explore playoff possibilities. In turn, that could have led to a bonafide plan for consideration by the 107 Division I-A schools at the 1995 convention.

But apparently the presidents were not swayed by a slickly produced 70-minute presentation by representatives of Nike, Inc., and the highly influential Creative Artists Agency of Hollywood, who said $100 million could be netted by a playoff.

"On the other hand, there was no feeling that it's not something we ought to continue to examine," Young added at a news conference. "It is a matter we are hoping to continue to look at. It's an issue that has always been before us."
