Construction spending up 12 percent in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending, propelled by a big increase in outlays for highways and other government projects, rose 1.2 percent in June, the largest gain this year, the Commerce Department said today.

The department said that spending on residential, non-residential and government outlays rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $460.1 billion in June, a gain of $5.5 billion.

It was the second big monthly gain, following a 1.1 percent increase in May. The June advance was the largest increase since a rise of 1.3 percent last December.

The Clinton administration is counting on interest rate-sensitive sectors of the economy such as construction to do well in coming months in response to the lowest rates in more than two decades.

Gains in construction and big-ticket purchases by businesses and consumers, the administration hopes, will be enough to offset weakness from its deficit cutting package of tax increases and government spending cuts.

Today's construction report showed public construction up a sharp 3.6 percent in June, the biggest advance since May 1992. The gain, which put public construction at an annual rate of $125.6 billion, was led by a 9.3 percent rise in spending on highways and streets.

Private construction spending was up a more modest 0.3 percent, climbing to $334.5 billion at an annual rate, with a gain in residential outlays offsetting a drop in non-residential spending.

The residential increase reflected a 2.9 percent jump in spending on apartment buildings and a 0.5 percent advance in spending on single-family homes.

Total residential building advanced to an annual rate of $200.6 billion in June.

Non-residential spending, which came in at an annual rate of $89.5 billion, dropped 1.3 percent in June, reflecting widespread weakness.

Spending on industrial projects was down 3.5 percent, office building was off 3.8 percent and hotel and motel construction fell by 6.1 percent.

Fragile majority clings to Clinton's tax package

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration and congressional leaders are predicting they can hold together a fragile Democratic majority to win final approval of a deficit-cutting package of tax increases and spending curbs.

The White House played down a key Democratic senator's defection from the plan Sunday, while working to persuade at least one or two of the six Democrats who voted against it the first time to return to the fold.

President Clinton decided against his usual Sunday golf outing to make phone calls to lawmakers on the bill, key elements of which were adopted by House and Senate negotiators last week.

Negotiators are trying to finish work on a compromise budget today, aiming for final votes before Congress begins its August recess Friday.

"It's all politics now, hard-ball politics," Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said Sunday, promising that no GOP lawmaker will vote for the budget package.

That makes every Democratic vote count just that much more if the package — which negotiators say would cut about $496 billion from the deficit over five years — is to pass.

On Sunday, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who grudgingly went along with the legislation when it passed the Senate by one vote in June, said he would not vote for the compromise reached by House-Senate negotiators.

"I must vote against this plan," Boren said on CBS' Face the Nation, insisting that it needed deeper cuts in social programs such as Medicare.

But Vice President Al Gore and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Sunday they were confident the needed votes will be found.

"We haven't counted on Senator Boren for quite some time," said Gore on "Face the Nation."

He added, "We've been putting together a majority that we're very confident about."

While Gore declined to criticize Boren directly, White House economic adviser Gene Sperling said the Oklahoma senator's approach amounts to "more delay, more talk, more hiding from tough choices when the country and the economy need action."

Mitchell, on ABC's This Week With David Brinkley, predicted a very close vote on the compromise legislation. But he said he was confident the bill will clear both the Senate and House this week.

"We will pass it," agreed Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, adding, also on ABC, that Boren all along had been "doubtful."

Other Democratic lawmakers who voted against the plan in June have indicated they might be swayed.

Sen. Richard Bryan of Nevada may switch if deductions for business lunches — something of considerable interest in Las Vegas — are not cut quite as much. And Sen. Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, who has a lot of elderly constituents, says he may switch if the tax bite on Social Security benefits to upper-income people are eased slightly.

Clinton also has talked with Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, who also was in the minority when the measure passed 50-49 only after Gore voted to break a tie.

No Republican in the House or Senate voted for the original bill. Dole, appearing on ABC as well, said that would again be the case this week when final floor votes are taken. Nevertheless, Dole also said he expects Democrats to garner a majority.

Mitchell and Moynihan said the final compromise would amount to deficit reductions of about $496 billion over five years from a combination of spending cuts and tax increases. The new revenue would come primarily from higher taxes on the wealthy and corporations as well as a 4.3 cent-a-gallon increase — about $30 a year for the average motorist — in the gas tax. Most of the spending cuts are in defense and in controlling future increases in Medicare.

The reductions in Medicare — about $56 billion over five years — as well as curtailed spending on other social programs have raised concerns among some liberal House members, especially members of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Largely to win support among the black lawmakers, negotiators restored earned-income tax credits aimed at the working poor. The credits would increase to $3,300 for families of working poor with children, Moynihan said. Clinton had wanted the increase, but the Senate had deleted it.

Blind sailor wants to try Atlantic crossing

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A leaky boat and bad generator hasn't discouraged blind sailor Hank Dekker from another attempt at crossing the Atlantic Ocean by himself.

"I want to go right now. I just want to put a plug in the hole" on the boat, Dekker said Sunday, a day after the problems halted his journey about 100 miles off New Jersey.

He and Marc Maurer, president of the Baltimore-based National Federation of the Blind, which sponsored the journey, will decide whether to attempt the trip again this year or next, Dekker said.

Dekker — who made it across the Pacific in 1986 — was attempting to become the first blind sailor to solo across the Atlantic.

His 30-foot boat, NFB, was towed to Atlantic City's Coast Guard station and will remain there

PISD trustees award removal of asbestos bid

At a specially called meeting this morning, Pampa Independent School District board of trustees approved a bid from Environmental Contractors of Austin for removal of asbestos in the school district.

Environmental Contractors bid $38,000 on the project; the other bidder, Asbestos Maintenance Services of Borger, bid $47,000.

The project will primarily involve removal of asbestos from Pampa High School, said Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent of Pampa ISD. He added that the project, to begin this week and conclude by Aug. 16, will complete the school district's removal efforts on asbestos at the high school.

Financing of the project will be through an interest-free loan from the federal government, Orr said.

Complete removal of asbestos throughout PISD is expected for completion by the end of the 1994-95 school year, Orr said.

Also today, the Pampa school board accepted the resignations of Paula Muegggenborg, an English teacher/girls' basketball coach at Pampa Middle School; Mike Carroll as a basketball coach/physical education teacher at Pampa High School; Scott Flynn as math teacher/basketball coach at Pampa High School; and Angie Walker, an instructor at Horace Mann Elementary School who is retiring.

All of the resignations are effective immediately.

a week for repairs.

The generator needed to operate the vessel's navigation equipment failed Saturday. The boat also was taking on water from a 3-inch hole apparently made when electricians installed equipment. The problems triggered an alarm, alerting the Coast Guard.

"I paid some expensive, high-tech sonar of a gun a lot of money and he put a hole in my boat," Dekker said.

Dekker had planned to reach England during the third week of August, before the country's stormy season. If he resumes the 3,200-mile crossing this year, he may encounter rough weather.

Dekker, 58, set sail from Cape May on Thursday. The boat is filled with equipment designed especially for blind sailors.

The former car salesman from San Francisco started sailing after losing his sight to glaucoma 16 years ago. In 1983, he survived Hurricane Henrietta as he became the first blind person to sail from San Francisco to Hawaii.

Going west

In this modern age, most people have taken to cars, pickups and other vehicles for travel. But still the old horse-drawn wagons still make their appearances. Above, Jim Harper and his grandsons, Jeremy and Jason, ride in a wagon along Highway 60 west of Pampa Saturday morning as they head to White Deer for the rodeo, parade and other activities held there.

Another levee breaks on Mississippi

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Floodwaters submerged a rural Illinois town today and thousands of St. Louis residents were evacuated out of fears of a propane gas explosion. But forecasters delivered unexpected good news: the area may have already seen its highest river levels.

The Mississippi River was measured at 48.6 feet this morning in St. Louis, below Sunday's high of 49.4 feet and well short of the record 49.7-foot crest previously forecast for today.

"The current thinking may be that the highest point it reached may have been yesterday morning," said National Weather Service forecaster Ted Schroeder. "It may be steadily and slowly falling."

But the relief in St. Louis came at the expense of people downstream. Officials said the Mississippi level dropped because of levee breaks that flooded tens of thousands of acres of Illinois farmland just to the southeast.

The latest levee collapse came early today in Monroe County, Ill.,

Police arrest man in shooting assault

A 30-year-old Pampa man has been charged with aggravated assault in the wake of a reported shooting of a Pampa resident on Sunday.

The arrested man, Johnnie Lee Brookshire, 209 N. Starkweather, is being held at Gray County Jail.

Police allege that Brookshire shot Terry Ragan, 1229 E. Foster, with a 25-caliber pistol at about 5 a.m. Sunday along the 200 block of North Starkweather.

Ragan was taken by private vehicle to Coronado Hospital, where he was treated for a gunshot wound. He remained in stable condition as of press time today.

Pampa Police Department is continuing its investigation into the incident.

Report: Legislature makes information harder to get

DALLAS (AP) — Despite consumer and media efforts to protect state open-government laws, lawmakers and lobbyists in the 73rd Texas Legislature managed to make certain information harder for the public to acquire, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story.

Some of the new restrictions include denying the public information on dangerous health trends, inspections of convalescent homes and financial data on shaky insurance companies, the newspaper reported in Monday's editions.

The rules resulted from amendments that were tacked on to relatively obscure administrative laws.

Open-government experts say passing open government legislation through amendments to non-related matters misleads the public.

Attorney General Dan Morales said if legislators "obscure what you're doing to modify these acts, then you don't get the open discussion that it deserves."

Alex Gonzales, a lawyer who specializes in administrative law, said lawmakers have shifted toward adding open-records limitations to administrative laws because it's easier to get them passed that way.

"Overt attempts to modify the Open Meetings Act or the Open Records Act are usually faced with rather stout opposition from consumer and media associations," Gonzales said.

One example of this amendment pattern happened during the 73rd Legislature, when lawmakers expanded confidentiality to include additional records maintained by the Texas Department of Insurance.

Rather than amend the closely monitored Open Records Act, they changed the administrative statute that governs day-to-day operation of the insurance department. That law is well-known only to insurance industry insiders, The News reported.

Now even though the Open Records Act says nothing about the release of information about the solvency of insurance companies, the public will be denied those records because of the amended obscure law, the paper said.

That seems to violate the spirit of the Texas Open Records and Open Meetings acts, called "sunshine laws" because they force government to conduct its affairs in full public view.

But the very nature of the state's sunshine laws contributed to the administrative law amendments during the session that adjourned in May, Gonzales said.

"The problem is that entire agencies and their enabling acts were under review. ... It was ripe for these kinds of amendments."

"A number of FOI organizations in other states have spotted this trend in their states," said Tom Leatherbury, president of the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas, Inc.

"It's certainly not a trend that's going to go away."

Such new restrictive amendments come at a time when the Texas sunshine laws have been diluted by interpretations by the Texas attorney general's office, the News reported.

According to The News' analysis of the attorney general's rulings on open records issues during the past five years, government has been successful in closing records to the public.

Between 1988 and 1989, attorney general's opinions required government agencies to release their records to the public in more than 50 percent of the contested cases.

The figure fell to 27 percent in 1990 and 25 percent in 1991 before improving to 33 percent last year.

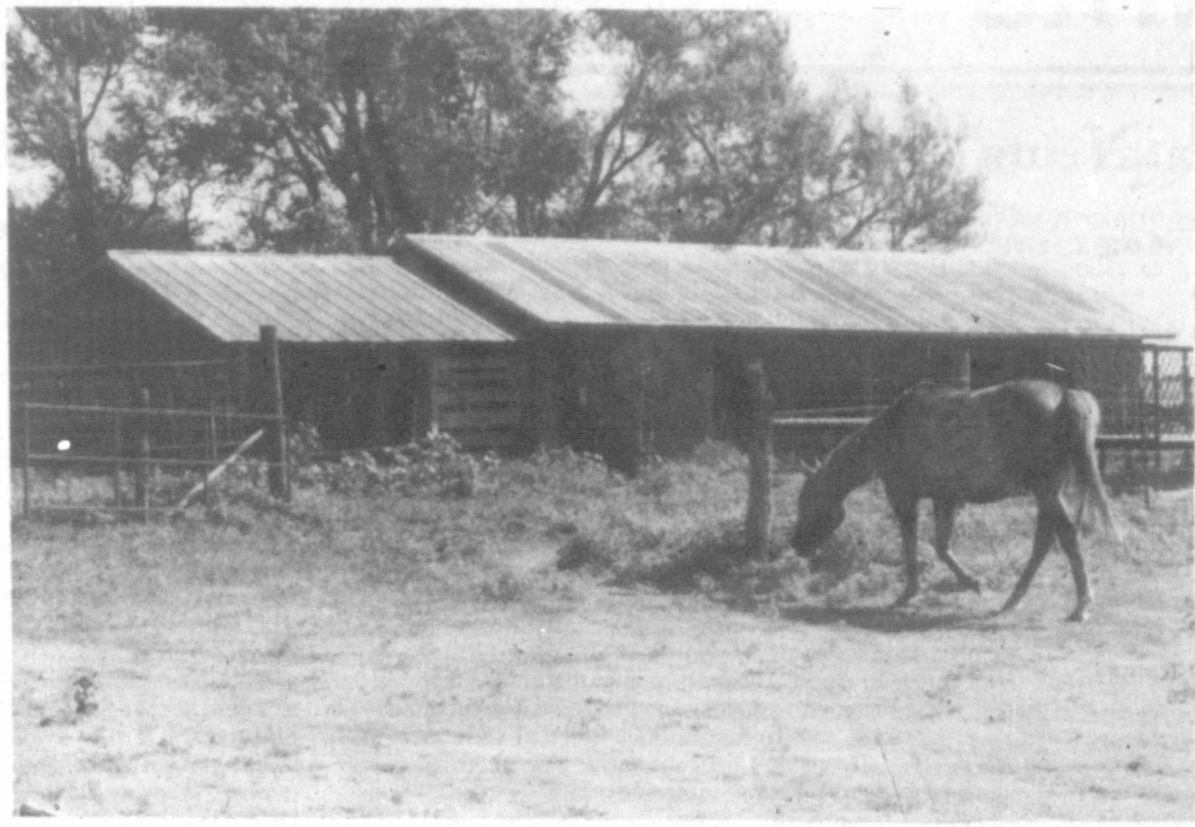

Legislators also added new exemptions to the traditional open-government laws.

The Open Meetings Act was altered to allow municipal hospital boards and authorities to forgo public notice for closed sessions involving financial or pricing information about certain competitive bids. Those meetings may now be held without public notice.

The State Finance Commission and the State Banking Board were also accorded the privilege to hold closed sessions to discuss matters "deemed confidential by law."

The Open Records Act was amended to allow government-funded libraries to withhold identities of people who use certain materials.

JFK's heroism recalled in 50th anniversary of PT-109 sinking

By KATHARINE WEBSTER
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A Japanese destroyer sank Patrol Torpedo boat No. 109 in the Pacific on a moonless night 50 years ago, but the heroism of the boat's captain — Lt. John F. Kennedy — has kept the memory bright for many Americans.

Although Kennedy's reputation has taken some hits in recent years, the story of his role in saving 10 men on PT-109 still shines, especially for Gerard Zinser, the only surviving crew member.

"He had us all behind him 100 percent," said Zinser, 75, from his Naples, Fla., home Thursday. "We thought he was a great leader. He had plenty of guts and charisma ... He just had everything."

Kennedy gathered his crew to the floating remains of the ship, then led them as they swam from island to island. He towed Patrick "Pappy" McMahon, who had been badly burned, by gripping the laces of McMahon's life jacket in his teeth.

Several nights he swam for hours with a lantern, hoping to flag down a passing PT boat. They finally were rescued after Kennedy gave a message carved on a coconut to some native scouts, who took it to their Australian contacts. Zinser and William F. Liebenow, captain of the PT boat that picked up the survivors from PT-109, were to join other PT boat veterans today to mark the 50th anniversary of the sinking.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the former president's brother, and his son, Rep. Patrick Joseph Kennedy, D-R.I., were expected to attend the ceremony on the U.S.S.

More clues come out in unsolved murder

ALICE (AP) — Officials have reopened the 1974 fatal shooting of an Alice police officer after learning a contract was put out on the officer several months earlier, but authorities said they're unsure if they'll be unravel the case.

Officer Matthew Murphy, 33, was shot four times during a routine traffic stop Dec. 1, 1974. He was the first — and still the only — Alice officer to die while on the job. No one was ever arrested in the shooting.

Now, Murphy's then-partner says he's willing to be hypnotized to remember details of a conversation with a suspected drug dealer that may provide clues in the unsolved murder.

Albert "Tito" Bernal was a civilian officer in May 1974 when he was teamed with Murphy on an undercover drug investigation.

Bernal, who later became a uniformed officer in Alice and now works at a Beeville post office, says their investigation ended after a suspect said a contract was out for the lives of the officers.

"(The suspect) said, 'I hope it's not true, but they say you're a narc, you and your friend.' I said, 'Do I look like one of those guys? Get me some teacote (a slang word for heroin)," Bernal recalled.

Bernal said the person refused to sell him anything, and he returned to the car, where Murphy was waiting. Bernal told him they needed to leave immediately and their work was finished.

Seven months later, Murphy was shot and killed.

Police recently reopened their investigation into the murder. Several people, including a suspected gunman who's already in prison, have been interviewed.

Alice Police Chief Jack Compton is encouraged by Bernal's tip.

"It's significant," Compton said. "Obviously, if somebody knew of a contract, they knew where it came from."

Jim Wells County Sheriff Oscar Lopez, who was police chief when Murphy died, said he was not aware of such a threat. He said Murphy's undercover work ended because he was needed on patrol duty.

"I'm pretty sure if someone would have told me that there was someone after them, we would have investigated," Lopez said.

Compton says he can't discount the tip just because Murphy may not have spoken about it or put it in writing.

"It's enough to know that your investigation is compromised and that going on is fruitless, pointless and hazardous," Compton said.

Bernal said he didn't report the incident because he wasn't working for the police department at the time. Nineteen years later, he's willing to be hypnotized to better remember what happened.

Corpus Christi police have used retired Texas Ranger Jim Peters as an investigative hypnotist on the case and plan to continue using him.

Bernal's story is verified by Jim L. Simmons, an undercover investigator with the Texas Department of Public Safety who worked with Murphy in 1974.

"That sounds partially accurate, but I don't know about the dates (of when it occurred). That's basically what did happen," said Simmons, now a deputy with the Montgomery County Sheriff's Department in Conroe.

U.S. says it may go it alone in Bosnia

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States called its NATO allies to an emergency session today, warning it is prepared to go it alone if its partners remain opposed to allowing NATO aircraft to attack Serb positions in Bosnia.

The move would mark a dramatic escalation in the American role in Bosnia, which has been devastated by 16 months of civil war. Officials said military strikes against attacking Serb forces could occur within days.

"The United States is determined to act," State Department spokesman Mike McCurry told an in-flight news briefing Sunday while on his way to the Middle East with Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

"We certainly believe it is possible we will act within the NATO framework," he said. But at the same time, "we have made it clear we are determined to act."

Europeans have reacted coolly to the U.S. proposal. Britain questioned whether air strikes could lift the siege of Sarajevo, and France appears to oppose enlarging NATO's role in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

So far, the only agreement among allies has been for the use of NATO air power to retaliate if U.N. peace-keeping forces in Bosnia are attacked, as has occurred at least twice in the last week.

NATO aircraft also patrol the skies above Bosnia, where they have enforced a no-fly zone that has gone largely unchallenged.

The United States, however, believes that a far more aggressive use of air power would pressure Serbs to lift their siege of the Bosnian capital and permit the free flow of humanitarian aid to it and other besieged cities.

"In the best of all worlds, we would not have to use this force," McCurry said.

The announcement came as Bosnia's Muslim president threatened to leave peace talks in Geneva unless Serbs halt their attacks on government positions overlooking Sarajevo and on the northern Bosnian towns of Brcko and Gradacac.

President Alija Izetbegovic reluctantly agreed Friday to a Serb-Croat proposal to divide the former Yugoslav republic into three ethnic mini-states. The agreement was accompanied by a cease-fire, which U.N. officials said remained largely intact Sunday despite the reports of fighting.

The U.S. proposal for air strikes marked a renewed aggressiveness in the Clinton administration's advocacy of greater military pressure on Serbia as a means to end the war that has killed between 140,000 and 200,000 people.

The administration came under harsh criticism last May when it proposed tough action in Bosnia then quickly backed off when European allies refused to go along.

THERMOGENICS

Can't seem to lose weight no matter how hard you try? The concept of "Thermogenics" is the most exciting news to come out of weight management research in 50 years.

Thermogenics, like digestion, is a normal physiological process that burns calories. It serves two functions:

1. It prevents dietary fats from being stored as white fat, and
2. It converts white fat back into soluble lipids that may be burned off.

IT PREVENTS FAT AND REDUCES FAT IN HUMANS. IT INCREASES ENERGY AND SURPRESSES YOUR APPETITE. 100% SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR RETURN FOR A FULL REFUND.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when one understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The people's right to find spirituality

If today you find yourself exercising your freedom to worship in the church or synagogue or mosque or ashram of your choice (if we've left any out, consider it a sign or the wonderful religious diversity protected here), turn your thoughts for a moment to the uncertain future of such freedom in Russia. There the post-Soviet parliament, still under the control of old-line communists, has enacted a ban on missionary proselytizing in their country.

The ban, which appears as one more challenge to the authority of Boris Yeltsin's reformist presidency, is tantamount to a bill of attainder against the likes of American evangelist Billy Graham and Robert Schuller, who along with countless other Western sects have invested much time and effort — not to mention financial resources — into various missionary projects. These enterprises — Dr. Schuller, for example, has been teaching former collective farmers how to grow potatoes and market them directly to consumers — are taking place in a land, recently under control of the atheist state, that hungers for both faith and practical advice.

It ought to be said that in Russia's spiritual vacuum several oddball sects have opportunized on highly vulnerable people whose belief systems have collapsed along with communism. Much of the exploitation runs roughshod over cultural sensibilities — a practice that responsible missionaries have long since eschewed. The backlash in such a climate, ironically, opens the door to political exploitation. The parliament clearly has stepped through.

Moreover, the Russian Orthodox Church, though not as monolithic as it once was, has grown comfortable in its role as an establishment entity, more content to regulate people's lives moralistically than to liberate them spiritually. Much of its structure has lost sight of the truth that when The Carpenter, unlicensed, was plying the shores of Galilee, His sect was the very definition of oddball. The Schuller and Graham ministries, to the credit of all involved, have enjoyed the cooperation of some Orthodox elements; other Orthodox clerics have doubtless sought political assistance in snuffing the new competition.

President Yeltsin ought to understand that the issue really does set up a fight over the soul of his new nation. The right of people to forge spiritual bonds beyond geopolitical boundaries remains a fundamental one, and much of his country's progress rests with its protection. For their part, if the ban stands, America's high-tech evangelists might need to summon the spiritual starch of St. Paul, whose physical suffering established the principal that evangelism was more than business, fund-raising, contributions.

Support for the death penalty

On abortion rights and the death penalty, President Clinton's historic Supreme Court nominee, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, was both judiciously forthright and evasive during her nomination hearing before the Senate Judicial Committee.

"This is something central to a woman's life, to her dignity. It's a decision that she must make for herself," she informed the senators.

But on the death penalty, Judge Ginsburg judiciously tap-danced. "My own view on the death penalty is not relevant to any question that I would be asked to decide as a judge."

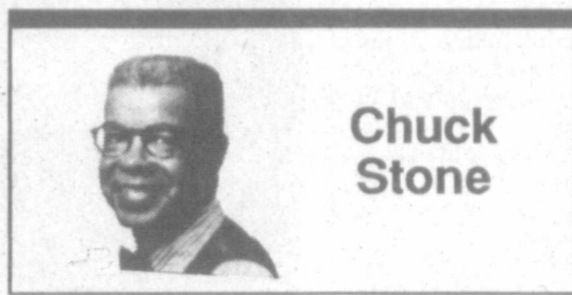

In respectful deference to her wishes, however, I'll answer for her.

I support the death penalty — in some cases, strenuously.

During this past month, there were three murder cases, so horrible, so outrageously contemptuous of the sanctity of human life that they mercifully screamed out for the most severe retributive punishment permissible under law.

In Austin, Texas, a jury brushed aside Ronald Ray Howard's ludicrous defense that hard-core rap music had inspired him to gun down a state trooper during a routine traffic stop, and sentenced Howard to death.

In Fort Bragg, N.C., Army Sgt. 1st Class Ervin Graves has been charged with the killing of 2nd Lt. Lisa N. Bryant because, according to witnesses, she had rebuffed Graves' attempt to dance with her. Later, he followed her down the hall, took out a .357-caliber Magnum pistol and shot the 21-year-old Bryant several times in her face and body. Only months prior to her death, Bryant had graduated from Princeton University with honors.

Chuck Stone

In Chapel Hill, N.C., Anthony Simpson, 18, jumped out of some roadside bushes and attempted to rape Kristen Ann Lodge-Miller during her 6 a.m. jog. When Miller, a highly regarded speech therapist, broke away and began to run, witnesses say Simpson pursued her. Simpson shot her several times, Miller fell and Simpson shot her a fifth time.

At Simpson's hearing, he did not show a shred of remorse or contrition. When a photographer took his picture, he belligerently held up a defiant middle finger.

If Simpson and Graves are convicted, there is absolutely no reason why both of them, like Howard, should not be sentenced to death.

I write that, aware of four cogent reasons against the death penalty:

1. There is no proof that the death penalty deters murder more effectively than a life sentence.
2. It is racist in administration, since almost twice as many blacks are sentenced to death than whites for the same crimes.
3. It is tragically irreversible.
4. It is an inhumane punishment that plunges society to the level of the murderer.

Of those four reasons, the one that has caused me the most distress is the penalty's irreversibility.

Given America's intractably racist criminal justice system, innocent black men are convicted of crimes far more often than white men. I have a thick file titled "Double I's" (Incarcerated Innocents) detailing over 50 cases around the country of men who had been convicted of murder, sentenced to death or life imprisonment and were later set free after exculpatory evidence was dug up.

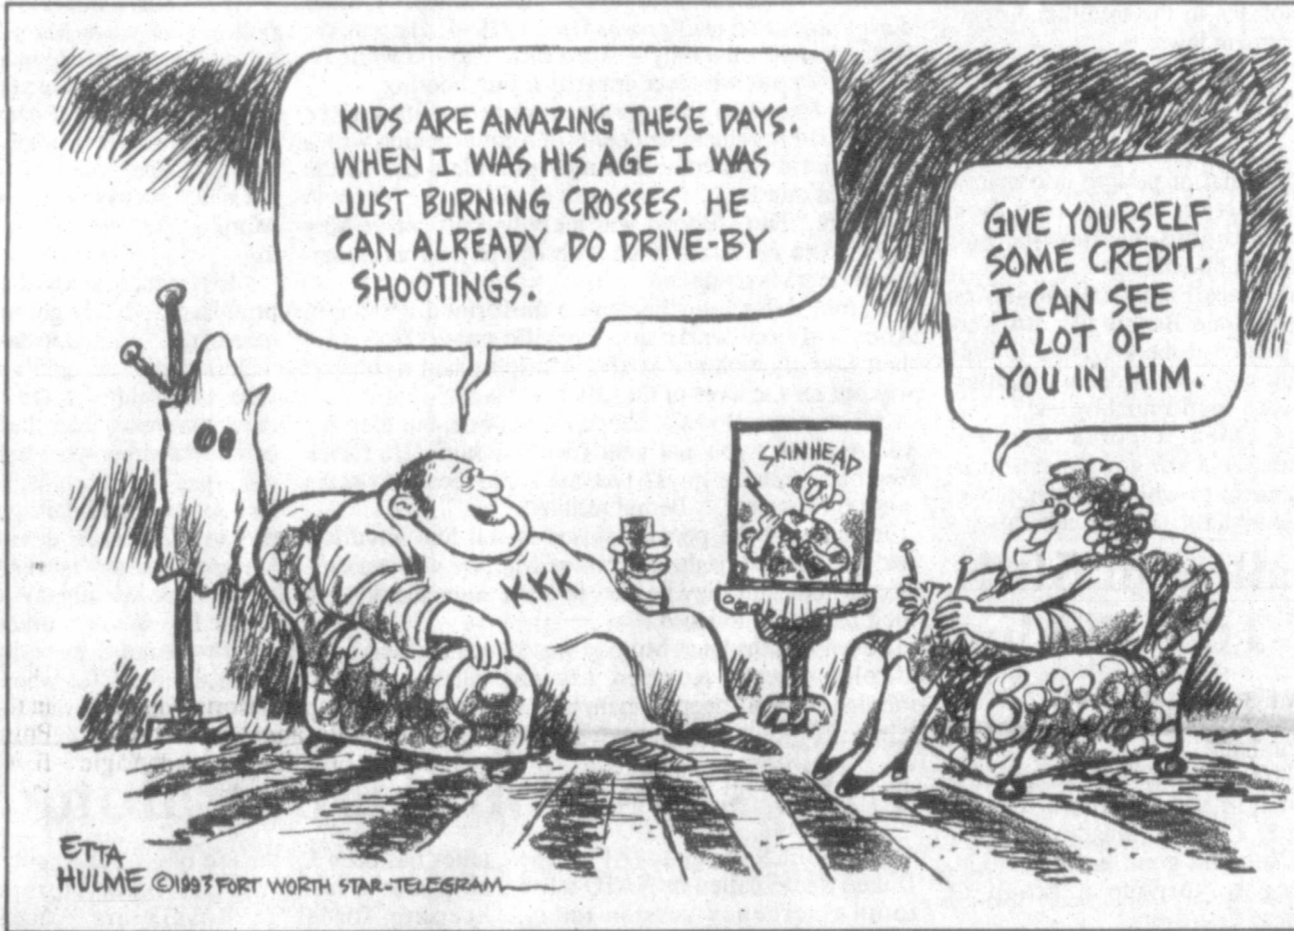

My good friend, the Rev. Jim McCloskey, who runs the Centurions out of Princeton, N.J., has devoted his life to proving that innocent men were convicted and sentenced to death. So far, he has been successful 11 times.

During my 19 years as a Philadelphia Daily News columnist, 75 suspects wanted for murder turned themselves in to me. I negotiated the release of hostages five times, including during a week-long prison takeover.

I know the criminal mindset. I also know that some convicted murderers or rapist-murderers cannot be rehabilitated, nor can they be educated to lead productive lives.

Rather than oppose the death penalty, we need to work more strenuously to make the criminal justice system racially fair, then tougher. There are several ways to do it, but that's another column.

The flame of life is sacred. Those like Howard, Graves and Simpson, who viciously and aggressively extinguish it, must be executed. The death penalty is our ultimate instrument for preserving the social contract.

It's time to free America at last

The United Nations is overrunning its headlights. The U.N. Charter affirms the right of "self-determination" for all nations.

The United Nations used self-determination as an excuse for sending "peacekeepers" into Bosnia when rebel Serbs tried to overthrow the Moslem-led government.

Since our "peacekeepers" moved in, Bosnia's civil war has become a three-way free-for-all, the worst fighting Europe has seen since World War II. It's who are "offshoots" again. Moslem, Serb and Croat factions protest our presence.

Reporters in Sarajevo have been cursed, stoned, threatened — and some killed — by citizens who suspect their private griefs are being paraded for the mere titillation of readers and viewers in Washington and London and Paris.

Other civil wars — Somalia and Cambodia — have created a situation wherein the United Nations is less united than in a long time.

Cambodia was supposed to be the "showcase" on U.N. peacekeeping. After 20 months and $2 billion, the U.N. effort to "promote democracy" there is collapsing.

Paul Harvey

President Clinton blames "key European allies" for rejecting his plan to end the fighting in Bosnia.

And how does the United Nations, pledged to "self-determination," respond to the increasing fragmentation of what used to be the Soviet Union? Is our allegiance to Moscow, or is it to the dozen former Soviet states now wanting "self-determination"?

There was a time when U.N. peacekeeping meant a limited and largely symbolic deployment of troops to isolated areas to separate combatants who had already agreed to a U.N. presence.

Now we have switched our role to that of "Robocop." The goals are fuzzy, and the result is bloody. All the high-sounding rhetoric is not matched by results.

This is the quicksand that President Clinton has backed into.

Forty nations are at war; most all of them are at war with themselves.

And now we have opened a United States training facility for warriors in the West African state of Mali.

Maybe we should butt out?

It is so uncomfortable for internationally oriented politicians to concede that they goofed, that in Vietnam we waited to be thrown out.

Some of us are more persuaded by the lighthouse concept — that the United States should lead by example rather than coercion.

President Eisenhower tried to warn us that the military-industrial complex is a vampire living on human blood.

What a noble challenge it would be for a strong leader to extricate us — U.S. — from all the world's quicksands and to enunciate a new emancipation proclamation: "America, free at last! Free at last!"

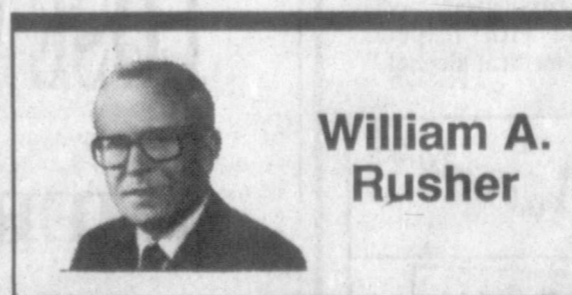

Health care: An obvious solution

Ms. Rodham Clinton and her 500 little elves are still hard at work, secretly devising the health care plan that the Clinton administration intends to impose on the American people.

We are not being allowed to watch the process, presumably for the same reason that Bismarck warned sausage-lovers against watching the manufacture of sausage. But the Presidential Partner and various others in the know have said enough to make it clear that a huge new federal bureaucracy will be required to administer the program, and it will have to be paid for with upwards of $90 billion in new taxes — over and above the quarter of a trillion the Democratic Congress is already preparing to impose on us at Mr. Clinton's behest. In the unimprovable words of P.J. O'Rourke, "If you think health care is expensive now, wait till you see what it costs when it's free."

All this is necessary (allegedly) because of the oft-repeated assertion that "37 million Americans" (out of 250 million) "have no health insurance." When declaimed with a dying fall on the last word, that statement is easy to confuse with the very different — and totally false — proposition that 37 million Americans have no health care.

As Fred Barnes pointed out in The American Spectator recently, "Everybody gets health care in this country — the poor, the uninsured, everyone. ... Those without health insurance are treated free of charge by hospital emergency rooms. Federal law, Barnes goes on, requires "medical screening of everyone requesting care at a hospital emergency room. If treatment is needed, it must be provided." The chief reason the uninsured get less medical care per capita than average is that they are, overwhelmingly, younger than average and therefore need less.

But the socialized medicine fanatics have the bit in their teeth, and the American people are going to get an universal federal health care program whether they need or want one or not. The only question left is what kind.

Fortunately there is one alternative that has been widely and successfully tested, that wouldn't require a huge new bureaucracy to administer it, that wouldn't cost a cent in new taxes, and that would guarantee every American quality health care by physicians of his or her choice.

Proposed by the Heritage Foundation, it is based on the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program, which already covers 9 million federal employees and retirees and their dependents, including Bill, Hillary and Chelsea.

FEHBP allows those covered to choose among different health plans, with different premiums and services tailored to their specific needs. Competition among the providers keeps a downward pressure on costs. Heritage proposed to apply the same principle nationwide, by converting the tax break employers now receive for providing health care benefits into an individual "medical tax credit," which could then be spent by individuals on precisely the quantity and type of medical coverage they need.

The Heritage plan won kind words from some of America's noisiest liberals. Michael Kinsley of The New Republic has called it "the simplest, most promising, and in an important way, most progressive idea for health care reform." Columnist Clarence Page points out that "there's no reason for liberals to feel obligated to shy away from a program just because it encourages poor people to think for themselves."

Morton Kondracke wrote that "Why Washington doesn't adopt the Heritage model is a mystery." But c'mon, Mort, you know Washington better than that! How are the Democrats going to get their vitamins without tens of thousands of new jobs to hand out, and tens of billions of new dollars to spend, in administering a vast new health care bureaucracy? What are you trying to do — spoil the game for everybody?

Wedding congratulations to Klaus and Cory; tournaments enjoyed by others

Pampa had hundreds of welcome guests last weekend for a reunion of the Class of 1973 of Pampa High School, the Senior Golf Tournament at Pampa Country Club and even more. Let's look at the even more first.

Wedding congratulations to the former Jan Klaus and David Cory, who were married two Saturdays ago in the chapel of the First United Methodist Church before an intimate group of family and friends, all of whom were delighted to share the love and joy of the heart warming event.

Family members served as attendants, beginning with David's daughter Kimberly, a bridesmaid, and Jan's two boys, Jason, 12, and Jordan, 9. David's brother, the Rev. Darrel Cory, associate pastor of a Presbyterian church in Cheyenne, Wyo., performed the ceremony. Ruby Moultrie, part of the Cory's extended family and head of the voice department of South Plains College, Levelland, and a native Pampan, too, sang.

The family group, including the groom, accompanied on the guitar by Michael Tyler and Steve Cory, sang the Wedding Song. John Curry videoed it for a keepsake. Other family members attending were Jan's mother, Lacy Eddins, Skellytown, her brother and family Phil and Lynelle Eddins, Houston, and daughter Lisa, Dallas.

David's family included his mother Grace Cory, Steve and Karla Cory, Katie and Patrick of Cypress, and Susan Cory and fiancé Michael Tyler of Austin.

Following a honeymoon in Florida, the family will be busy settling into their new-to-them home, formerly owned by Larry and Dolores Cross. Best wishes to the newly formed and happy family.

David's mom, Grace Cory, moved only days ago to Amarillo, but not until she urged her children to take their selections and keepsakes with them and threatened to mail a bunch more to each one!

Here's the background on Grace's move. For several months, she took a young boy to Amarillo for special training at the Speech and Hearing Center. While she waited all day for him, she spent her time doing volunteer work in three places, the Ronald McDonald House, Discovery Center and the U.C. Sturquell display of carriages and sleighs in the former Blackburn Building in downtown Amarillo. Her volunteer work involved computer work, writing letters and leading occasional tours and was so fulfilling that she decided to relocate and cut out road time. While this would have been a whopping decision for most women, Grace looked at it as the best way to go. Grace leaves behind a world of friends, who will not be too far away at that. Best wishes, Grace, in your new venture.

Peeking at Pampa
By Katie

Emma and Noah DeWitt took four grandchildren to their cabin at Red River for a week of family fun that included lots of cooking out.

The Dennis Godwins and children opted for a vacation of fishing that offered getting away from their daily routine as an added bonus.

Ray and Sue Thornton and daughter Susan, who will be a sophomore at Evangel College in Springfield, Mo., took a family trip to Boston. There they rode the trolley and took in the historic sights that included Bunker Hill, the Market plus a ride to Plymouth on a replica of the Mayflower. And, oh yes! They saw a Red Sox game!

Congratulations to the girls high school softball team for winning second place in the play offs at San Angelo. Benny Horton, coach, was an important factor in the victory. Players and parents consider Benny a wonderful coach, but more that, an ever soooo fair coach, a real compliment from parents. The girls have lots of praise and gratitude to the townspeople, merchants, parents and friends who made the trip possible through their donations of goods and services. Deborah Been organized a huge garage sale and Pat Montoya a successful car wash for fund raisers. While in San Angelo the girls found time for a movie, shopping, meals at good restaurants where Kasey Bowers fell asleep, head on the table variety for a good laugh. Big Spring, who lost to the Pampa girls, displayed their writing talents all over the outside of the bus. A fake spider used as team mascot put several mothers in flight.

Let's not forget a grand slam, over the fence hit by Meredith Horton! Players were Rhonda Been, Meredith Horton, Jill Trollinger, Misty Plunk, Katy Fortin, Serenity King, Veronica Santa Cruz, Kasey Bowers, Jessica Whitney, Danette Hoover, Laura Adams, Julie Montoya and alternate Janice Cisneros.

Family fans were Kerrick Horton, J.D. Sidney and Deborah Been, Susan and Bobby Trollinger and Justin, Dennis and Doris King and Devon, Paula and Don Whitney, Chris and Erin, Danny and Angie Hoover and Jarrod, Carmella and assistant coach Pat Montoya. Billy Lemons, bus driver and son Devon, and Mike Sells, big time moral supporter completed the group.

The expected came true: The Pampa girls were among the best mannered and best behaved of the teams. We expected that! Next year Pampa advances to the VA rating. Good work, girls!

Henry and Mary Gruben, Mary Wilson and Deena Collum report a wonderful time on their Alaskan cruise of two weeks. Mary and Deena are good together travelers with several trips to prove it. Vic Houchins, long time Pampan, who is now a long time Amarilloan, was in town a few days ago. At near 90, Vic is still one spiffy looking up-to-date lady with high heels, pretty clothes and jewelry, all in the latest styles with plenty of enthusiasm to spare and share. She's had a houseful of company and loved every minute of it.

Spied recently was Alma Ash, looking calm as could be and ever so lovely. Lillian Caldwell (you'd never guess she is over 90), was all dolled up and on the go with her family last Sunday. With her were her daughter Doris and husband Foy Guin from Birmingham, Ala., and their daughter and husband, Jessica and Morris Baldrige, of Duncan, Okla. All three ladies were pretty, vivacious and full of pep and energy. While Foy played in the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament, the girls took off for shopping and fun.

The annual luncheon and style show for the wives of the Tri-State Seniors Golfers was one of the big highlights of this years entertainment events. Mary Nelson scored a hole-in-one putting this together. Bobbie J's, VJ's, Image's, Personal Touch, Bettie's, Kid Stuff and Footprints all contributed the latest in fall fashions. Floy Heath, Lillian Esson and Inez Morgan were in charge of the refreshment table prior to the luncheon this afforded everyone to mingle and renew old acquaintances.

Out of towners spotted in the audience were Gaynell Rife from Stratford, Beth Morgan from Arkansas, Virginia Stavenhagen of Shamrock, Sandy Williams with her sister from Houston, Eleanor New hosting a daughter-in-law and granddaughter from out of town. Wednesday night was another treat for the golfers with Mexican food dinner and music by Marie Howard. Good fellowship and good dancing for all to enjoy and renew yearly friendships. How fortunate Pampa is to host this annual event. The husbands golf all day and their wives shop 'til they drop. Some like crafts while some like pawn shops, antiques, any building with a door will be looked into.

Approximately 150 Pampa boys and girls enjoyed a cooking school in the Reddy Room of Southwestern Public Service Co. The children, first through eighth grades, enjoyed learning how to make pizzas, popcorn snack, fruit dip, gooey bars and punch.

Just a few of those who were seen attending were Rodney and Melissa Scobee, Stacie Stephens, Blake Watkins, Sheila Berry, Lindsey Tidwell, Britteny Street, Kristen Stephens, Valerie Valez, Abbie Bradley, Jared and Krista Snelgroodes, Derek and Collin Lewis, Haley and Casey Garrison and A.J. Swope.

Ann McCarley's annual vacation with daughters Melba Ward of Fort Stockton and Peggy Parker of Canyon was another fantastic experience. They shopped in Oklahoma

City and the visit to Precious Moments was a highlight of the trip. They went on to visit Ann's sister and brother-in-law, Addie Lou and Gene Skaggs at Warsaw, Mo., where their home is on Lake of the Ozarks. The girls had an unhurried sightseeing trip where they stopped when and where they chose and had a marvelous trip. Last year's fabulous vacation was to Nashville and surrounding beauty spots.

Isaac and Leona Line recently attended the black tie opening of the Oklahoma Fixture Co. in Tulsa which is managed by their son, Ronny. They spent some time at Branson, Mo., prior to the opening. They saw Box Car Willie and Ray Stevens Shows. They had an enjoyable time even though there was constant rain.

Weekend guests of Ell Hesse were her daughter and husband, JoAnn and Morris Chambless of Ardmore, Okla., and her granddaughter and husband, Melissa and Miles Waltham of Lubbock.

Norma McBee has been a busy traveler the last week or two. She visited her sister Bobby Frazier and family at Mason. They ate at the Olive Garden and spent two days at the Pederanles State Park in Bobbie's motor home. In Dallas, Norma visited Roy and Nell Cheatham, cousins, Nancy Jeff, Holly and David Cheatham. They went for dinner then stopped at Dr. David and Barbara Cheatham's for dessert. In Houston, Norma visited husband Bill's sister and husband, Pat and Noel Smart, accompanied by niece, Dava Ann and great-niece Rachel. They all went to see Barnum and Bailey Circus. Pat, Noel, Rachel and Norma went to Galveston to see the rain forest.

Next weekend, members and spouses of the Class of 1943 will celebrate their 50 with a class reunion. Do give them a warm Pampa "Welcome!!!"

Dorothy Buzzard welcomed family this week from Santa Fe, daughter Andrea Buzzard, also from Colorado and Minnesota, her brother Rex Buzzard.

Visiting from Eagle Mountain Lake are Sabrina and McKinsie East.

The beauty of San Francisco, Calif., is the topic of conversation as Edwin, Sandy and Cara East spent the fourth of July with Beth and Mike Chase.

Happy birthday Coronado Nursing Center residents, Thomas Jones, Albert Deinkin, Gladys Nash and Juanita Williams.

The center is pleased to welcome Willine Fox as their ombudsman, representing the Texas Department of Health. The residents enjoy her sunny, cheerful attitude, and love her great looking hats.

Ted Mastin was having on of his favorite meals, pizza. Pretty wife, Babe Mastin, thinks it is great to take Ted out for Sunday pizza lunch.

See you next week, Katie.

Thanks for your work

Rusty Neef, at left, and Warren Smith, right, are congratulated by Bill Arrington, president of the Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art. Neef provided over 450 hours and several thousand dollars toward the construction of the musical note sculpture "This Land is Your Land." Smith and the metal trades class at Pampa High School contributed 600 hours toward creating "Loch Ness" using recycled materials donated by Titan Specialties.

Lie can be kindness when love life at stake

DEAR ABBY: With all due respect, I think you should reconsider your advice to "No Name or Town," whose husband insisted on knowing how he compared with his wife's former lovers.

You said, "Tell him that he's the greatest — he'll believe you and God will forgive you." In other words, tell a lie in order to keep the peace. (She said she had no intention of telling him the truth — indicating that her husband wasn't the greatest.)

What should she do next? Fake orgasms? Deception is injurious to any state of health — be it mental, emotional, or the health of a marriage.

Abby, consider a different scenario. She turns the tables and starts asking hubby about his past lovers. (She had said that neither of them was a virgin when they married.) She should let him know how it feels to be quizzed. Perhaps the worst that could happen is that they would both open up, and together they would enrich their marriage by knowing what truly pleases the other.

QUESTIONING

DEAR QUESTIONING: A couple, in order to "open up" and learn what truly pleases the other, would be better served if they consulted a sex therapist and/or a marriage counselor.

Hubby's ego needs constant reassuring or he would not keep nagging his wife to tell him how his lovemaking compares with her former lovers. (To tell him the truth would emasculate him.)

There are times when a kind lie is better than a cruel truth.

DEAR ABBY: That letter from "No Name or Town" really hit home with me. While dating my second — and definitely last — husband, I made what could have been a horrible mistake by telling him in vague terms about some premarital experiences I had. He seemed amused and intrigued.

After we were married, he would occasionally "tease" me about my former lovers, but I noticed a bitter edge creeping into his tone. After a number of these little zingers, I realized that he was concerned about his own performance. Then I told him with absolute honesty, "I wish I'd been a virgin for you, but no one has ever satisfied me as often or fully as you do; you must not realize how much it hurts me to be reminded of my past mistakes."

Dear Abby

But I believe what really clinched it was the baldest truth (I swear) of all: "Darling," I said, "don't you understand that all the time I was looking for you?"

Once I said that, with tears in his eyes, he smothered me with kisses — and the subject never came up again.

ALSO NAMELESS IN SOME OTHER TOWN

P.S. My husband is a minister; please do not reveal my identity.

DEAR NAMELESS: Your letter is in the shredder. Trust me.

DEAR READERS: I recently published a lovely poem about surviving the loss of a spouse. It was titled "One or the Other." The person who submitted it did not know the name of the author.

I just received a letter from Philip Guest advising me that the author is his uncle, Edgar A. Guest, who wrote the poem in 1945 shortly after the death of his beloved wife, Nellie.

DEAR ABBY: What is it with people who cannot close a car door, refrigerator door, cabinet door, or any other kind of door without slamming it?

Two of my close friends are door slammers. I don't know if they are aware of their noisy, obnoxious habit, but when they are in my home, I jump a foot when they close doors.

I would like to ask them to close the doors more gently, but I don't want to offend them.

Any advice would be appreciated.

GEORGE IN SHELTON, WASH.

DEAR GEORGE: Asking a close friend to please close doors more gently should not offend a habitual door slammer — but you know your friends better than I, so, simply show them this column and say, "I cannot tell a lie. I am the George who wrote that letter."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Turn about is fair play. Today you might have an opportunity to do something nice for a friend who has frequently assisted you. Make an effort to even the score. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might get what you want today, but it could carry a rather hefty price tag. Don't fulfill your ambitious expectations at the cost of another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Put your best foot forward today if you have an opportunity to make new social contacts within a rather influential group. These will be people who can do what they say they can do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conditions are favorable today for resolving an old, serious family problem. Get everyone together and keep at it until matters are cleared up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Think carefully before speaking today. There is a possibility you might express yourself in a manner others will find offensive and then not be able to convince them it wasn't intended.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Use your common sense regarding the management of your resources today. If you hope to acquire something big, base your ability to do so upon what you have, not what you hope to get.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be discouraged today if something important isn't achieved on the first try. Fire and fall back to regroup your forces and try again. Repeat this procedure until victorious.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Upon occasion you sometimes get emotional and worry over things that may never happen. Don't let these thought patterns dominate your life today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Until a misunderstanding with a friend is totally resolved, it might be best not to confide in him/her at this time. Ammunition to use against you could be an irresistible temptation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your ability to achieve your objectives could be impaired today owing to both self-created obstacles and opposition from others. Don't be too demanding of yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might have a touchy situation with which to contend today similar to one that caused you discomfort in the past. Don't make the same mistakes twice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Business or financial matters should not be treated indifferently today. Be cautious and prudent, and make sure all of your moves are founded upon logical assumptions.

Cowboys stumble in pre-season opener; Johnson alarmed

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Jimmy Johnson is already worried about the Super Bowl victory turning the heads of his Dallas Cowboys.

"We need a sense of urgency and we don't have one," said the Cowboys coach after a 13-7 exhibition loss to the Minnesota Vikings. "Right now there are 27 teams ready to take our Super Bowl rings and stick 'em. It's alarming the way we played. We have some serious problems."

The Cowboys had five turnovers in the loss.

"It's as ugly a game as we have had in some time," Johnson said. "It was very uninspired. It's dangerous to say we will be fine when the season starts. It would take all night for me to list our problems."

Johnson lost his starting strong safety, Darren Woodson, for six weeks with a broken arm.

"I'm having an operation in the morning and the doctors are saying six weeks but I'll be back before that," said Woodson. "I'll just have to win the starting job back again." James Washington, who had been demoted to second team, will get his old job back.

Minnesota coach Dennis Green said it was a typical exhibition game. "We brought 75 players and played every one of them," Green said. "We played five different quarterbacks and couldn't get any consistent offense."

"It's a tough situation to play in preseason games like this. The weather was hot and nobody could get the offense to click. But we won and that's good."

Green said he still has no clue to his starting quarterback.

"The job is just wide open," he said. "No one clicked. Hopefully by the time we start the regular season against the Los Angeles Raiders we will have an offense that works well."

Roger Craig's 1-yard touchdown run and two field goals by Fuad Reveiz carried the Vikings to the victory.

Cornerback Carl Lee intercepted a Hugh Millen pass and Reveiz kicked a 43-yard field goal to put the Vikings on top 3-0.

Quarterback Sean Salisbury orchestrated a 45-yard drive capped by Roger Craig's 1-yard run to give Minnesota a 10-0 lead early in the second period.

Millen, who is playing for the world champion Cowboys while Super Bowl MVP Troy Aikman heals from back surgery, suffered two interceptions and three sacks.

He took the Cowboys on a 64-yard drive late in the second period and capped it with a 1-yard scoring toss to fullback Daryl Johnston to trim the Dallas deficit to 10-7 at halftime.

A fumble by Clayton Holmes on a punt return was recovered by the Vikings Ron Carpenter to setup a 31-yard field goal by Reveiz in the third period.

Millen completed 19 of 29 passes for 137 yards before giving way to Jason Garrett late in the third quarter. The Cowboys also lost rookie safety Mike Middleton with a sprained knee and it's not determined how long he will be out.

Minnesota lost starting wide receiver Ronnie West with a sprained knee.

Jim McMahon made his debut with his fourth NFL team and hit two of six passes for 22 yards.

"Jim is still learning the system," Green said. "We need someone with experience."

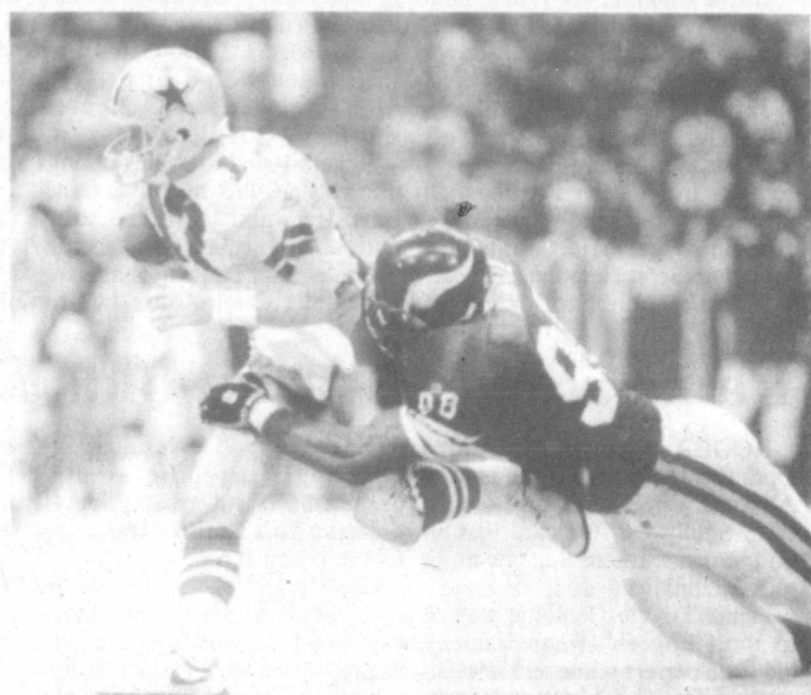

Minnesota now has a 4-2 record over Dallas in preseason games. It was the first exhibition meeting between the two teams since 1975 when the Vikings won 16-13.

"Coach Johnson was pretty mad after the game," said rookie wide receiver Kevin Williams. "He wasn't a level three in madness but he was a strong two."

Dallas guard John Geseck said "Jimmy was upset about our overall effort and he might be right. There was no level of urgency."

Johnson said there will be when the Cowboys return from London after Sunday's game with the Detroit Lions.

"We can't fix it until we get back to Austin, but we will then," he said.

Dallas Cowboys quarterback Jason Garrett is pulled down by a Minnesota Vikings defender during the fourth quarter of Sunday's pre-season game.

Moon: Season is 'urgent' for Oilers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Warren Moon says his teammates want him to be a more vocal leader.

He just wishes all of the Houston Oilers would come to camp so he could address the entire group.

"If the players are coming to you telling you they want you to be more vocal, then you know they'll accept it," Moon said. "I've tried different things each year and this is just something else I'm going to try for us."

Three starters, wide receiver Ernest Givins, right tackle David Williams and running back Lorenzo White, remained off the field Sunday in contract disputes.

No. 1 draft pick Brad Hopkins, a candidate to start at left tackle, has agreed to terms on a four-year deal but it must first be approved by the NFL under terms of the collective bargaining agreement.

Left tackle is especially worrisome because that position must protect Moon's blind side from the rush.

"It's a vital position," Moon said. "He's usually lined up against a team's best pass rusher. I'm not as concerned right now as I might be three games into the preseason."

Moon has mostly led by example. Despite missing part of last season with a broken bone in his upper left arm, the Oilers led the NFL in passing yards for the third straight year and Moon led the AFC in passing efficiency.

But the Oilers have embarrassing losses in each of the last two playoff seasons and they're looking for a rallying point.

Moon says he'll turn up the volume on his leadership role if it will help bring the team closer.

"I do say what I need to say at the right time and place," Moon said. "I'm just going to say it a little more in an overall team sense. They see that I'm not overlooking what's happening out there."

Moon admits to being caught up in the urgency of this season because so many players are in the final year of their contracts. Moon, 36, is part of the core of the team that is aging.

There is a now or never feeling. "It's an urgency because it's this year," Moon said. "We can't control anything that happens next year. We can't do anything about what happened last year. All we have right now is a good group."

"We have to take advantage of that group you have. We don't know what will happen after the season as far as salary cap, free agency, how many players we might lose."

"We need to concentrate on this season because this is the season that's here."

But not all of the players are in camp. Offensive line problems have forced the Oilers to consider shifting

The run-and-shoot offense still cranks out the yards. It led the NFL with 251.8 passing yards per game and was No. 3 in total offense, averaging 353.4 yards per game.

But Moon knows what the Oilers must do to erase memories of their 41-38 loss to Buffalo in last season's playoffs.

"We have a chance to do something special," Moon said. "It's just a matter of us stepping up to bat and getting it done."

Pampa 9-10 All Stars win in Fort Smith

FORT SMITH, Ark. — The Pampa 9-10 Year Old Bambino National League All Stars will play Jonesboro, Ark. at 2:30 p.m. today in the 1993 Southwest Regional Bambino 9-10 Baseball Tournament here after a narrow 5-4 victory over Broken Bow, Okla. Sunday.

Adam Jones was the winning pitcher allowing only two runs in five innings pitched. Marcus Ross was credited with a save pitching the sixth inning.

Shaky fielding allowed Pampa a run in the top of the first. Josh Larkin led off by tapping a pitch back to the pitcher who could not find the handle. Casey Brookshire was safe on another Broken Bow error moving Larkin to second. Larkin scored when Ross was safe on still another error. A bunt single, a passed ball and a double for Broken Bow tied it up at the end of the first.

Pampa took the lead for good in the second inning. Bryce Jordan singled. Jones was awarded first base for catcher interference. Larkin singled to drive in Jordan. Tanner Hucks also reached base on catcher interference loading the bases. Brookshire singled home Jones for a 3-1 Pampa lead.

Broken Bow threatened to blow the game open in the bottom of the second. Two walks and an attempted sacrifice where all hands were safe loaded the bases with nobody out. Hucks grabbed a short passed ball and hustled back to the plate for an out on an attempted steal of home for the first. Jones' control problems continued as he hit the next batter to load the bases and walked the next to force in a run. Jordan then grabbed a ball slowed down by the mound, stepped on second and fired to Chris Jewett at first for an inning ending double play.

Pampa upped its lead to 4-1 in the fourth inning. With one out Hucks hit a routine fly ball to right field which the fielder dropped. He went to second on a wild pitch, to third on an infield out and scored on a single by Ross.

In the sixth inning Ross walked. Travis Lancaster followed by a ground rule double to left which rolled under the fence. Jewett grounded out but was credited with an RBI as Ross scored the winning run.

Ross relieved Jones in the sixth inning with Pampa leading 5-2. A single and a walk got him in trouble immediately. An attempted sacrifice backfired as Hucks threw quickly to Lancaster at third to nip the lead runner. Another walk loaded the bases. The next batter hit a slow roller to Jewett at first base who recorded the out while a run scored. A wild pitch made the score 5-4 with the tying run on third. Ross issued his third walk of the inning to put the winning run on first.

This set the scene for a dramatic throw from Hucks to Jordan to catch the first base runner stealing to end the game and keep Pampa's dream of a world series berth alive.

Pampa was not so fortunate Saturday losing 9-0 to Denham Springs All Stars. The Louisiana team scored six runs in the top of the second inning and then coasted to a 9-0 win over Pampa National in the opening round of the tournament.

The six runs came on only four hits off starting pitcher Ross. Pampa contributed three errors, a walk, two wild pitches and two passed balls.

Pampa threatened in the bottom of the fourth. Hucks and Brookshire opened the inning with consecutive singles and moved up on a passed ball. Ross walked to load the bases with none out. A double play followed by a fly out to center field ended the threat.

Antonio Estrada came on to pitch for Pampa in the fifth inning. An error, a wild pitch and a passed ball in the fifth upped Denham Springs' lead 7-0. Pampa stranded two runners in the bottom of the inning.

Denham Springs added two insurance runs in the sixth on one hit, three walks, two wild pitches and a passed ball.

Broken Bow lost to host Fort Smith 15-12 in first round action after holding a 10 run lead earlier.

Jonesboro beat Boerne, Texas, 13-3, in the first round and lost 13-11 to New Orleans Lake Shore in the second round.

Price takes St. Jude, fourth tournament win in '93

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Nick Price has an explanation for his outstanding year on the PGA Tour.

"Someone is looking down favorably on me," Price said Sunday after winning his fourth tournament of the season.

There's more to it than that as the South Africa native, who now lives in Orlando, Fla., is cruising atop the money list and has a chance for the best year on tour since 1980.

His final-round 66 gave him a three-stroke victory in the $1.1 million Federal Express-St. Jude Classic, his third tour win in as many stops.

"I go along for 10 years or eight years over here and I've been making a nice living coming in second every now and then or third or fourth, and suddenly 1993 comes along and I win four times in five months," he said.

Jackson reflective in speech at Hall of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Thousands of baseball fans and 38 members of the Hall of Fame came to see Reggie Jackson have another great moment.

In his induction speech Sunday on a packed school field about 1 1/2 miles from the Hall of Fame complex, Jackson tried to link all eras of baseball.

He eloquently pointed out the good and bad things about baseball. He told each current player how they must carry on the great traditions of the game.

But more than anything, Reggie gave the players of the old Negro Leagues a say they were so often denied and a rightful place in baseball history with him in the Hall of Fame.

"My dad struggled with being treated as a second-class citizen, but did his best to climb the ladder of equality," Jackson said. "He had the ability to express himself at a time when it was not always acceptable. He was a good father who became a great friend."

In a low-key, reflective speech, Jackson spent a lot of time showing his appreciation to players who were denied a chance at the major leagues because of the color of their skin. He also praised the civil rights movement led by Martin Luther King.

"Jackie Robinson opened the door for me," Jackson said. "The players of the Negro Leagues knocked on the door but no one would let them in."

"I'm just playing well. I'm hitting the ball in the fairway. I'm hitting the ball on the green and I'm making putts. There's not much more to say than that."

No other golfer has more than two victories this year.

Price won the Greater Hartford Open and Western Open on consecutive weekends in late June and early July. He also won the Tournament Players Championship in March.

The last player to win four tournaments in one year was Wayne Levi in 1990. The last to win five was Tom Watson when his six victories in 1980 capped a run of three straight years with at least five wins.

Price, who entered this year with four career victories, still has 14 events left on this year's schedule, including the PGA and Texas Open, both of which he will start as defending champion.

He earned his eighth career title with an 18-under-par 266 total after four trips around the 7,006-yard TPC course at Southwind.

Jeff Maggert and Rich Fehr finished at 269, one shot ahead of Fuzzy Zoeller, who began the final round tied for the lead with Price but faded to a 70.

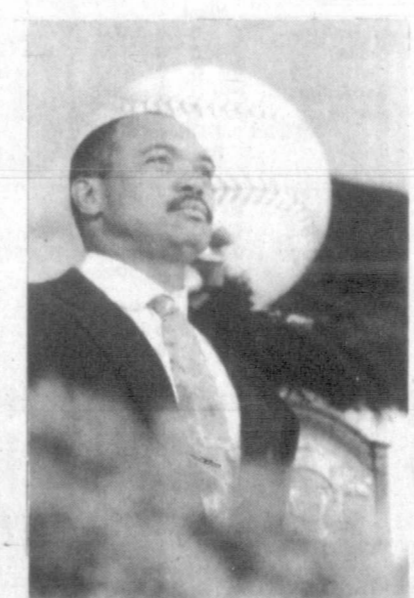

"But we kept it close for a while there," Zoeller said. "We kept the excitement in the game."

Price managed to win — and take the winner's check of $198,000 — despite being on edge throughout the tournament. His wife Sue is home about to deliver their second child.

He said when the tournament began Thursday and then again when he moved into a first-place tie that he would leave if his wife went into labor.

Nick Price celebrates on the 18th green after winning the St. Jude Classic.

Reggie Jackson listens to his introduction during ceremonies at the Baseball Hall of Fame.

"Jackie was the kind of man who people talked about as a role model. He was the role model we needed for all people — black or white."

Jackson also said that former major league manager John McNamara often protected black players in areas where they were denied a hotel or a place to eat.

"John McNamara stood up at time when few others did," he said.

Just like one of his home runs, Jackson seemed to save these words for just the right moment, too. A time when all of baseball was watching and members of the old Negro leagues were listening. On this day, he was their hero.

Even the veteran Hall of Famers seem to be in just a little awe when the achievements on Reggie's plaque were read aloud. Maybe some were just a little envious of his postseason success.

In 21 years, Jackson played with 11 division winners, six AL champions and five World Series winners, missing the 1972 Series for Oakland with an injury. He was selected to 14 All-Star games and played in 12.

Reggie hit .357 with 10 home runs and 24 RBIs in 27 World Series games. For all this, he was given the nickname "Mr. October."

Jackson helped the A's win three straight World Series titles, was traded to Baltimore and then signed as a free agent with the Yankees in 1977 for $2.96 million over five years.

He wanted Yankee Stadium as his stage and New York for his playground.

"Some came to see him and some came to boo him," former Yankees second baseman Willie Randolph said, "but he left an impression on all of them in some way."

Reggie realized a long time ago, however, what made him so special.

"When fans think about Reggie Jackson, they think about the playoffs and World Series," he said. "They think about three home runs in the World Series and the home run off the light transformer during the 1971 All-Star game in Detroit."

In Game 6 of the 1977 World Series, Reggie hit three home runs on three consecutive pitches. Only Babe Ruth had ever hit three homers in a Series game.

The third home run came off knuckleballer Charlie Hough and landed in the black area that serves as a batter's background deep beyond the center field wall at Yankee Stadium. Reggie stood and looked before breaking into his familiar home-run trot.

"I was running around the bases, a foot above the ground," Jackson said. "When I got back, everybody was cheering. My teammates were hugging me. Billy Martin was hugging me!"

There are members of the Hall of Fame who could hit, run and throw better than Jackson. But none had his dramatic flair.

No doubt Reggie would have been elected without some of his greatest moments. He hit 563 home runs with 1,702 RBIs for Oakland, Baltimore, the Yankees and California from 1967-1987. But his career average was .262, lowest among Hall of Fame outfielders, and he struck out a record 2,597 times.

"I think all the great moments I had put me over the top," Jackson said of his election to the Hall with 93.6 percent of the vote on his first try.

Reggie added one more moment to the list on Sunday.

Rangers allow five run fifth in loss to A's

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics proved they could survive without Ricky Henderson as Ruben Sierra hit a three-run homer in a five-run fifth inning to lead a 9-5 victory Sunday over the Texas Rangers.

Sierra's homer, his 17th overall and his eighth three-run shot this season, came off Texas reliever Mike Schooler.

Jeff Paquette led off the A's fifth with a homer, his sixth, off Texas starter Kenny Rogers (8-7) to make it 5-3. Jerry Browne then singled, took second on Mike Bordick's sacrifice bunt, and scored on Scott Hemond's double.

Sierra's homer, following an out and a walk to Lance Blankenship, boosted the Oakland lead to 9-3.

Left fielder Ricky Henderson, who was batting .327 for the A's, was traded Saturday night to Toronto.

Blankenship tied the score at 2-2 in the fourth with an RBI base hit off Rogers. Brent Gates drove in Hemond with a single. Then Sierra's single scored Blankenship for a 4-2 A's lead.

Rogers lasted four-plus innings, allowing 10 hits and five earned runs. He walked two and struck out one before being replaced by Schooler after Paquette's homer.

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run homer in the fourth off A's starter Todd Van Poppel, then added a solo homer in the eighth. It was the fourth time this season that he has had a two-homer game and the eighth time in his career. The homers gave him 26 for the season.

Juan Gonzalez followed Palmeiro's blast with one of his own, his 31st, to make it 9-5. It was the third time that the two had hit back-to-back homers this season.

The home runs extended Palmeiro's hitting streak to 10 games.

Van Poppel (1-3), a 21-year-old rookie righthander making his fifth major league appearance, went five innings, allowing three runs on four hits for his first major league win. He struck out two and walked three.

The A's got another solo home run from Terry Steinbach, his ninth, in the third inning.

Henderson, who holds baseball's career stolen base record with 1,073, had 47 RBIs and 31 stolen bases when his trade to Toronto was struck Saturday night. The A's get minor league pitcher Steve Karsay and a player to be named later.

Note: Texas finished July at 17-11, which tied the club record for most July wins.

Pampa 11-12-year-olds fall in Bambino regionals

ROGERS, Ark. — The Pampa Optimist 11-12-year-old Bambino All Stars were eliminated from the 1993 Southwest Regional Bambino tournament here Sunday, but it took 16 innings to do it.

Pampa's Kyle Gamblen walked to spoil Rogers' Adam Gamet's bid for a perfect game and left him settling for a no hitter as Rogers West beat Pampa 9-0. In their second game of the day, Pampa fell 8-7 to Fort Smith Boys' Club in 10 innings.

Pampa lead.

A single, an infield out, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly brought Fort Smith even in the fourth inning at 6-6.

Greer came on to pitch in the fifth inning, hitting the first batter. One out later a double play got Pampa out of trouble. Lozano fielded a group ball and flipped to Kaleb Snelgrooves, who relayed to Hill for a 4-6-3 double play.

Hill walked to lead off Pampa's half of the inning. He was thrown out at third as Greer singled off the wall. Miller was safe on a fielder's choice as Greer beat the shortstop's throw to third. Fort Smith gambled walking Waggoner to load the bases with one out. The next two batters struck out to leave the score tied.

Fort Smith took what Pampa gave them in the sixth inning. The first batter walked. The next was safe on an error. Both runners moved up on a passed ball as the next batter struck out. The ahead run scored on another passed ball.

In the bottom of the sixth, Gamblen walked. He was forced at second by Lozano on an attempted sacrifice for the second out of the inning. Lozano stole second, went to third when the catcher's throw got passed the second baseman and scored when the centerfielder made an errant throw trying to nab Lozano at third.

Fort Smith opened the ninth with an infield single off Hill, who relieved Miller. Two walks loaded the bases with one out. The next batter struck out to bring up Hill's opposing pitcher, who bounced into a forced play to Francis at third base.

In the bottom of the ninth, Miller stroked a ground rule double. Waggoner was walked for the second time. The next two batters struck out and bounced out to leave the runners stranded.

Fort Smith started the tenth with an infield single. The runner went on a passed ball, to third on an infield out and scored the winning run on a wild pitch.

Pampa was out in order in the bottom of the tenth completing 16 innings of baseball for the day.

Earlier in the day during the first game of the tournament for Pampa, Rogers jumped into the lead in the bottom of the first inning without benefit of a base hit.

The first batter drew a walk on a full count. He advanced to second and third on wild pitches and a passed ball and scored on an infield out.

In the third inning, Rogers scored twice on three consecutive hits. Pampa's Jessie Francis plucked a low line drive inches off the grass and threw to Hill at first for a double play to thwart any further threat.

In the fourth inning Greer walked the first batter. Snelgrooves then turned a sure hit up the middle into double play by stopping the ball while sitting on second and throwing to first on his knees. Two more Rogers runners crossed the plate in the fourth inning as the next three batters hammered out hits. Rogers made it 7-0 in the fifth inning on two walks off reliever Hill and a double.

In the sixth inning Rogers continued its scoring off Lozano who relieved Hill in the fifth. Rogers opened the inning with three hits which scored one run. The other scored on a wild pitch.

Rogers West will play Abbeville, La., in the winners' bracket today as the host team continues its quest for a World Series berth in Lebanon, Mo. The two losses ended the season for the Pampa team.

Teaff leaves Baylor for association

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

WACO, Texas (AP) — Grant Teaff announced his retirement as Baylor University athletic director, effective Aug. 31, and said today he will become executive director of the American College Football Association.

"This decision was very difficult because of my longtime investment in Baylor University, Baylor football, and Baylor athletics, said Teaff, who came to Baylor as head football coach in 1972.

He spent 21 years with the Bears program before becoming athletic director last year.

"Baylor University has given my family and me outstanding support for many years and we will leave with the greatest of memories," Teaff, who said he would consider moving the ACFA headquarters from Orlando, Fla. to Waco. The organization has about 6,500 members.

The university did not immediately name Teaff's successor, but it was expected to be associate athletic director Dick Ellis.

"I'm excited about the challenge of serving the ACFA membership and leading our association through the challenges of the future. I look forward to the support of the American football coaches and others who love the game."

Baylor President Herbert Reynolds said in a taped message: "On behalf of 85,000 living alumni, I want to thank you for serving as a role model for this university. I appreciate your loyalty to Baylor and your strong desire to win."

Teaff will replace Charley

McClendon, who will step down on Jan. 1, 1994.

Teaff, the winningest football coach in Baylor history, handed over the head coaching job at the end of last season to assistant Chuck Reedy.

He has been chairman of the ACFA ethics and rules committees.

Teaff, 59, had a record of 128-105-6 and his teams were 4-4 in bowl appearances. Teaff took Baylor to the Cotton Bowl twice, losing both.

Only three other coaches, Darrell Royal, Frank Broyles, and Jess Neely have won more games in the Southwest Conference than Teaff, who became Baylor's head coach on Dec. 23, 1971.

He recently finished a pictorial history of his career at Baylor called "Seasons of Glory" and is giving all proceeds to the school's women's athletic department.

Explorers find four previously unknown ancient Mayan towns

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ruins of four towns built by the Mayans have been found in a tropical rain forest in Belize in Central America and at least two appear to have been untouched by looters since they were abandoned more than 1,000 years ago.

Peter S. Dunham, a Cleveland State University archeologist, said the Mayan centers were found during a survey expedition in the mountainous rain forest along the Monkey River in Belize, an area previously believed to contain few such ruins. A report on the expedition is being published today by National Geographic.

Dunham said he and his party arrived at one of the ancient towns shortly after looters had been there. "After passing more than a millennium undisturbed in the rain forest, it was looted only four days before we arrived," he said.

Dunham said the four ruins appeared to have been towns of 1,000 to 2,500 in population that probably were last used in 700 to 900 A.D.

One site, built on an island in the Monkey River, includes a plaza the size of a football field, built around a pyramid-shaped stone structure. Nearby is a large flat building that could have been a sort of "city hall" for the community, he said.

Another site included five stone monuments that may be 1,000 years old, while another ruin had four monuments, a causeway and two reservoirs that still hold water.

Dunham said the looters dug pits into a fourth site and excavated bits of pyrite, a shiny mineral that is commonly called "fool's gold."

The mineral had obviously been worked by ancient Mayans at the site, he said. Pyrite was used by the Mayans to make mirrors and for decorating their teeth, said Dunham.

There also were deposits of two minerals, hematite and lemontite, that were used by the Mayans to stain houses and pottery. Hematite makes a red color and lemontite is a yellow stain, he said.

The expedition, sponsored by the National Geographic Society, will return to the area during the dry season next year to complete a three-year survey of the Monkey River area.

Dunham said the area, a rugged complex of mountains and canyons, receives up to 200 inches of rainfall annually and can be explored only during the dry season because of the danger of flash flooding.

After the area survey is completed, Dunham said he and his group plan to select sites for excavation and detailed study of artifacts that can be recovered from the ruins.

He said his group has now found seven civilization centers in the Monkey River area that have not previously been studied.

Mayan civilization began in Central America about 1000 B.C. and continued until the arrival of Europeans in the 1500s.

At one point in their history, the Mayans built large cities and crafted art work that rivaled that of the ancient eras in Asia and Africa. They developed mathematics and studied astronomy and developed extensive trade throughout Central America and Mexico.

Dunham said that by the time Europeans arrived in the 16th century, however, the Mayan civilization was past its peak of sophistication.

"There were still several million Mayan people when the Spaniards arrived," said Dunham. "They were just not engaging in the same activities that their ancestors had, or at least not on the same scale."

The Mayans had evolved into a series of city-states, without central authority, and there were signs that their civilization suffered from the effects of environmental degradation, intense warfare and disease, said Dunham.

Belgium's King Baudouin dies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — King Baudouin I has died. Long live King Albert II.

If Baudouin's sudden death stunned his countrymen, so did the announcement his younger brother would be the new monarch. Most Belgians thought the crown would go to Albert's son Philippe, who had been groomed for the role for years.

But the day after Baudouin died of heart failure while vacationing in Spain, Prime Minister Jean-Luc Dehaene announced Sunday that Albert would guide the nation of 10 million through tough economic and political times.

Albert, 59, was the rightful heir to the throne, as Baudouin and Queen Fabiola were childless. But the Prince of Liege had always indicated he preferred to let son Philippe, 33, have the job.

Pressure from political leaders who preferred experience over youth apparently changed his mind.

"We have to regroup around the constitutional successor, the prince Albert, who has been called to pursue Baudouin's work in a spirit of continuity," Dehaene said in a televised address to the nation.

Though only ceremonial, the monarchy still carries clout. During his 42-year reign, Baudouin helped hold together a country sharply divided between speakers of Flemish and French.

Belgium's constitution was revised early this summer to turn the unitary state into a federation of Dutch and French-speakers.

King Baudouin I

Belgium also suffers from an economy in recession and a currency under pressure from speculators. As honorary president of the foreign trade office, Albert, 59, has extensive experience in leading Belgian trade delegations.

Like Baudouin, Albert has shied away from the limelight for most of his life.

Albert will be Belgium's sixth king since independence from Dutch rule in 1830. He must be confirmed as king by parliament within 10 days. He is expected to take the oath August 9 or 10, two days after the burial next Saturday.

European nations ease rules in currency crisis

By ELIZABETH D. WISE
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Trading was calm today on foreign exchange markets despite a decision hours earlier by European Community finance ministers to temporarily allow their currencies greater room to fluctuate.

The finance ministers' move is aimed at fighting off speculators who have been battering the trading bloc's monetary system.

At a news conference, German Finance Minister Theo Waigel called it "a liberating attack" that "pulls the floor out from under the speculation."

He said it would give Germany's central bank, the Bundesbank, more flexibility in its monetary policy and allow it to continue cautious interest cuts.

But Dutch and Danish officials criticized the decision as a setback to the EC nations' efforts to forge closer economic and monetary links.

"It's a huge step backward from what we wanted in the Maastricht treaty," said Dutch Finance Minister Wim Kok.

The Maastricht treaty on European unity sets out a framework for a powerful monetary union, with a joint central bank and single money by 1999. The recent currency turmoil, has dashed hopes of a quick merger among the dozen EC nations.

Trading was calm at midday as the foreign exchange markets digested the finance ministers' decision.

But in Tokyo, the dollar plunged to a record low against the Japanese yen today as traders continued to put their money in yen for safety amid the European currency turmoil. The dollar closed at 104.61 yen. The previous lowest close was 105.03 yen on June 15.

After 20 hours of negotiations, the EC officials agreed early today to expand to 15 percent the range within which the currencies in the European Monetary System can fluctuate. The changes are effective immediately.

None of the currencies in the system was officially devalued under the agreement, although some will likely slip in trading in the coming days.

With the added flexibility, the countries may be able to cut interest rates, which would boost their recession-plagued economies.

The EC currencies, except for the Spanish peseta and the Portuguese escudo, had been able to move only 2.25 percent up or down against a central rate. The peseta and the escudo had a 6 percent fluctuation range.

"It's an anti-speculative measure," said Luxembourg's Finance Minister Jean-Claude Juncker. The new fluctuation margins are meant to be temporary, but no time limit was given. Belgian Finance Minister Philippe Maystadt said the caps would be gradually narrowed.

Currency traders were skeptical that the officials had succeeded in ending the attacks that recently have weakened the system.

"I don't think any widening of the bands is going to do the job," said Keith Skeoch, chief economist at James Capel in London.

"All that's doing is delaying the inevitable. The markets have got their way, and I think within a very short space of time, there would be a test of those new wider bands," he said.

The move was a temporary escape route for several currencies threatened with expulsion from the system, which links eight EC currencies.

If a currency drops too far, it can be thrown out of the system. The British pound and the Italian lira were forced out by heavy speculative trading last September.

Several EC currencies, including the French franc, plunged last week as traders sold them off in huge quantities, expecting that they would soon be devalued.

The currencies will now be able to swing in a broad range before the central banks have to intervene in the money markets by buying and selling currencies. Intervention can fuel inflation by increasing the money supply.

Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Kenneth Clarke, said the new bands would free EC governments from the grip of the Bundesbank's tight monetary policy, which has led to high interest rates.

Recent assaults on most currencies have dimmed hopes that EC economies will be strong enough to join an economic and monetary union by 1999.

"If the European Monetary System disappears, it would be a serious blow to European unity," Jacques Delors, the EC's chief executive and architect of the union plans, warned late Sunday.

Remaining in the system are the German, Dutch, French, Belgian, Danish, Irish, Spanish and Portuguese currencies. All but the German mark, the Dutch guilder and Irish pound have been the target of recent speculative attacks.

On Thursday, the Bundesbank decided to leave its key interest rate unchanged. It had been expected to lower the discount rate to relieve pressure on the French franc and other currencies.

Traders then began selling off weak monies, betting that the currencies would be devalued.

Toddler in custody battle moves back with parents

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Jessica's new suitcase was packed and her new traveling companion, a doll named Brie, also was ready. The day had come for her to go back to Iowa with the biological parents she doesn't really know.

The 2 1/2-year-old girl, subject of a long, bitter custody fight, was to leave the couple who raised her, Jan and Roberta DeBoer of Ann Arbor.

A court ordered them to turn Jessica over to her biological parents, Cara and Daniel Schmidt, by today. Both couples — under a court order not to speak to reporters — were keeping details of the transfer secret.

The Schmidts spent about two hours Sunday with Jessica at the DeBoers' home. They paid a similar visit Saturday.

Jessica knows she is going to move to Iowa but didn't learn until Sunday she would leave today, said attorney Suellyn Scarnecchia, who represents the DeBoers.

Scarnecchia said Jessica was prepared for the trip with a new suitcase, new doll and a cartoon videotape of Winnie the Pooh's The Blustery Night.

"It's what she likes to see when she's settling down," Scarnecchia said.

After the Schmidts left, the DeBoers took Jessica and the family dog to the park to play. Mrs. DeBoer then began crying.

"Mom, you OK? You OK?" Jessica asked her. "Why are you so sad?"

The Schmidts plan to go into seclusion, rather than return immediately to Blairstown, Iowa, said their attorney, Marian Faupel. They've arranged for a therapist to help in the transition if necessary.

The DeBoers fought for more than two years to keep the child they once tried to adopt, but first Iowa and then Michigan and federal courts ordered them to turn Jessica over to the Schmidts.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Friday refused to block the transfer.

Meetings over the past three weeks between the Schmidts and their daughter were intended to ease her move.

The visits marked the first time Schmidt saw his daughter. Mrs. Schmidt hadn't seen her since shortly after giving birth Feb. 8, 1991.

Mrs. Schmidt, then unmarried, gave the baby up for adoption and named the wrong man as father. Shortly afterward she changed her mind and informed Schmidt of his paternity. They then began trying to get the baby back.

The Schmidts were married in April 1992. They have since had another daughter, Chloe.

The DeBoers, who have no children, wanted to adopt Jessica, but the plan fell apart when Mrs. Schmidt changed her mind about giving up the child.

Cambodian villagers criticize U.N. forces for withdrawing

THMAR PUOK, Cambodia (AP) — As the United Nations prepares to end its largest peacekeeping operation ever, battle-weary Cambodians say the world body has failed in its main aim here — to completely end 15 years of civil war.

During a five-day trip across the country's two tensest provinces, villagers expressed dismay that U.N. forces are to begin withdrawing this month while the clatter of rifle fire and the thump of exploding rockets, grenades, and mines can be heard in some areas.

The Khmer Rouge guerrilla group fought the former Vietnamese-installed government for more than a decade. Now it is fighting the armed forces of the newly elected government.

Villagers are angry that the Khmer Rouge is still around.

"I don't think the U.N. did a good job here because they never dealt with the Khmer Rouge," said Kousum Sarin, a 40-year-old driver in Siem Reap province. "They did not bring peace."

The last U.N. peacekeepers are to leave the country by mid-November.

The 17-month U.N. mission was to monitor a 1991 cease-fire called by the country's four factions, and to disarm and demobilize the factions' almost 200,000 troops. It was then to guide the country through democratic elections last May, to end two decades of conflict.

But one of the factions, the Khmer Rouge, refused to lay down its weapons. The other three factions followed suit and skirmishes continued.

By May, the U.N. had spent much of its $2 billion budget — the biggest ever for a peacekeeping operation. Having committed 22,000 personnel and tons of equipment to Cambodia, it pushed ahead with the poll.

About 90 percent of the electorate turned out to vote, and by most measures the elections proved a resounding success.

But continued Khmer Rouge attacks have villagers in some areas questioning the success of the mission and hoping for more U.N. protection. But compared to the pre-election period, the overall level of violence has decreased.

The Khmer Rouge still controls 20 percent of Cambodia with a fighting force of 10,000 men. The guerrilla group killed hundreds of thousands of Cambodians during a brutal reign in the mid-1970s.

While the new government's flag flaps above the capital, the different flags of the four factions dot some provinces.

In the northwestern province of Banteay Meanchey, checkpoints remain on roads between villages controlled by the Khmer Rouge and the three other factions. The latter are technically united under the newly elected government.
