Clinton woos doctors for health care plan

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton today asked prominent doctors to support his health-care overhaul, promising malpractice reform, less paperwork, fewer hassles with government regulations and no reductions in pay.

Wooring a key health-care interest group, the president told more than 100 doctors in the East Room. "We clearly must preserve what is right with our health care system."

He ticked off a list of what must not suffer in health-care reforms: "The close patient-doctor relationship, the best doctors and nurses, the best academic research, the best advanced technology in the world."

"We can do that and still fix what's wrong," he said. "In fact, we can enhance what's right if we fix what's wrong."

But he insisted that real change is needed. "We can do better than this."

The comments came as Clinton's yet-to-be-released plan was drawing early fire from a key Democratic senator.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, chose the word "fantasy" to describe the $238 billion Clinton wants to save over five years by restricting growth in Medicare and Medicaid spending.

"It's fantasy, but accurate fantasy," Moynihan said on NBC's Meet the Press. "These numbers all come out of their computer in that way. They won't last, they mustn't last."

Clinton later told reporters his plan would make the promised cuts. "I believe that if you give us five years to do it, we can get there, but it will require some substantial changes."

He said the skepticism is based on years of avoiding tough cutbacks. "People in Washington can't imagine that it can be different because of the experience they've had in the last five years," he said.

Among those in the audience today were Clinton's personal doctor, Andrew Kumpuris of Little Rock, Ark., and his daughter's physician, Dr. Betty A. Lowe, also of Arkansas.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who opened the meeting, named former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop to organize a series of forums designed to give doctors input and information about the reform plan. Urging doctors to support health-care reforms, Koop said problems with one or two details in Clinton's plan "cannot give us the excuse to oppose everything."

Koop, who served under Republican presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush, said Clinton has already "accomplished more in health-care reform ... than all of his living predecessors put together."

Mrs. Clinton, the president's point person on health-care reform, said the administration's plan will "give opportunities, again, to physicians and nurses and those on the front line of health care to make the decisions about what needs to be done for the patients in our country."

The meeting opened a frantic week of work as Clinton nails down the final details of his sweeping health-care package. His staff said Sunday that Clinton is contemplating the addition of nursing home insurance to Medicare for the elderly.

Senior health adviser Ira Magaziner and other aides were heading to Capitol Hill today for private briefings for lawmakers that the White House has dubbed "Health Care University."

It is all part of the buildup for Clinton's address to a joint session of Congress and the nation Wednesday night on his far-reaching plan to guarantee health coverage for all Americans while drastically slowing the medical cost spiral.

In advance of today's meeting, the White House prepared a single-page outline of how the health-care overhaul would affect doctors. It promises to trim paperwork, streamline regulations, change malpractice laws and maintain doctors' incomes.

The malpractice reforms would limit attorneys' fees and require patients wishing to file lawsuits to first make their case in an out-of-court setting. The outlines said the gap between incomes of specialists and primary care physicians will be closed as the demand for primary care grows.

"Historically, doctors have been well paid and this will not change under health reform," the outline said.

It promises to focus on performance standards when regulating doctors, not "detail process standards" that rely on too many external checks, forms and process manual.

A White House spokesman, Kevin Anderson, said Sunday that Clinton is contemplating adding to his package new Medicare insurance against nursing home bills.

It would be called Medicare Part C and would be optional for elderly people. They could buy the insurance after they turn 65. In exchange for higher monthly Medicare premiums, they could eventually get a maximum of $30,000 to cover nursing home bills.

The nursing home provision was not in the huge draft summary of the Clinton health plan sent — informally — to Congress 10 days ago, but White House officials subsequently told senior citizens' groups they were considering it.

The $30,000 maximum benefit under consideration would cover about one year in a nursing home at today's prices.

Medicaid now pays nursing home bills for poor people and those driven into poverty by the high cost of custodial care. Medicare only covers limited stays in skilled nursing facilities for patients recovering from an illness or injury.

County commissioners learn deadline is past for any license tag fee increase

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

Gray County taxpayers got a spot of good news this morning when commissioners learned that the deadline had passed to notify the state of intent to collect a license tag fee.

Collecting an optional license tag fee was one avenue commissioners had been considering in their efforts to balance the 1994 Gray County budget. While commissioners can still raise ad valorem taxes, at least the license tag fee is no longer an option, commissioners learned from County Judge Carl Kennedy. The deadline for state notification of intent to collect was Sept. 1, said County Clerk Wanda Carter.

Commissioners struggled through another morning of computations in an attempt to generate a balanced budget, and while the license tag fee won't figure into the equation, two options presented by Kennedy and Commissioner Joe Wheeley may help set the financial pattern for 1994.

Both officeholders reworked the Sheriff's Office budget without considering the added revenue and expenses which may come from taking in out-of-county prisoners because now the contracts for doing so are not signed.

"That's why I say let's take it as it comes," Wheeley said.

The options presented by Kennedy and Wheeley were based on 1993 year-to-date figures, but provided for extra personnel. Kennedy suggested an extra deputy; Wheeley suggested another secretary. Kennedy also provided for a new car if Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield hires another deputy.

By Kennedy's calculations, the total Sheriff's Office budget would be about $1,157,650, or a $116,984 increase over last year.

Commissioners pointed out that if a contract is made to house out-of-county prisoners, revisions to the budget can be made to fund the terms of the contract.

In one set of figures presented by Kennedy, total estimated expenditures for Gray County in 1994 are $5,370,646. Expected revenue is about $1,406,790 with carry-forward funds of $155,000, and ad valorem taxes (assuming an 8 percent increase and 96.5 percent collection rate) of $3,544,509. The result is a $264,347 shortfall. To make that up, it was suggested that extra money from the indigent health care fund be used.

At press time no action had been taken on this scenario. Commissioners plan to meet again on Oct. 1 for further budget consideration. A public hearing is required for any tax rate increase over three percent.

In other 1994 budget discussions, commissioners talked briefly about expenses of a possible capital murder trial.

Commissioners approved the installation of fax machines in the county clerk's and district clerk's offices. They rejected a request by Justice of the Peace Precinct 4 Creed Lamb to increase the office hours of his clerical worker from 15 to 20 hours per week. They took no action on a request by Constable Precinct 2 Chris Lockridge's request for another car since the request was not in the revised budget.

Quail hunt among Country Fair auction items

The Retail Trade Committee of the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce plans on auctioning off a quail hunt at this year's Country Fair.

Scheduled for Oct. 23 at M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center, the Country Fair is an annual chamber of commerce fund raiser.

"There will be an auction of items donated by businesses and professional offices in Pampa," said Nanette Moore, executive director of the Pampa Chamber.

While the list of items to be auctioned off is still being compiled, Ken Rheams, who heads the chamber's Retail Trade Committee, said that Jim Baker of Northcrest Pharmacy had donated a quail hunt valued at about $250.

"Knowing Jim, it will be an excellent hunt," said Richard Paulus, president of the Downtown Merchants Association.

"I'm going to take my dog," said Baker. "We're going to feed them lunch. It's a guided quail hunt. We're going to treat them right. I think there is another fellow who's going to bring his dog, so it ought to be good."

This year's Country Fair features a live auction, silent auction, dinner, bingo and a dance, Moore said. The Citizen of the Year award will also be announced at the banquet.

"Guests will have five food booths to select from," Moore said. She said there would also be a drawing for a $5,000 prize.

"We'll have an early drawing at the chamber luncheon Tuesday," she said. "The night of Country Fair, we'll draw for $500, $1,000, $1,500 and $5,000. After each drawing, the tickets go back into the box, so you have five chances to win."

Tickets for the drawing are $100. Tickets to the Country Fair are $15, she said.

Way cleared for Demjanjuk's return to U.S.

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk, extradited to Israel in 1986 to stand trial as "Ivan the Terrible," will return to the United States after Israel's top court cleared the way for his release.

The Supreme Court on Sunday set aside appeals for a new Nazi war crimes trial, ending the long saga involving the retired Ohio auto worker. His departure from Israel had been delayed five times.

Demjanjuk was acquitted July 29 of being "Ivan the Terrible," a Nazi guard who operated gas chambers at Treblinka death camp in occupied Poland during World War II. With the new ruling, he is free to leave Israel immediately.

In Ohio, Demjanjuk's son-in-law, Ed Nishnic, called the decision "definitely good news." But citing past delays, he added: "We are going to approach this thing very cautiously, very carefully."

Nishnic and U.S. Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, planned to leave today to escort the 73-year-old Demjanjuk, who stayed in protective custody. Traficant said he expected Demjanjuk to be back in the United States before Friday.

In Washington, a State Department official said today that once Demjanjuk is free, the U.S. Embassy would issue him a letter allowing him to board an airplane in Israel and to be admitted into the United States.

The ruling by Justice Theodore Orr was the sixth time the court has dealt with Demjanjuk's case since his acquittal, when a five-member panel said there was reasonable doubt about his identity as Ivan the Terrible but found that he had been present at other Nazi camps.

Orr rejected appeals by Holocaust survivors and Nazi hunters who sought to have Demjanjuk tried on charges that he was at the Sobibor death camp as well as concentration camps.

They had mounted an international search for Sobibor survivors who could identify him. Demjanjuk has said he spent World War II as a German prisoner of war and claimed he was the victim of mistaken identity.

Israel's Attorney General Yosef Harish already had decided not to prosecute Demjanjuk further, saying the evidence was too weak and there was risk of double jeopardy, or trying him twice on the same charges.

The Supreme Court needed exceptional circumstances to overturn the attorney general's decision. The ruling meant those circumstances did not exist.

Nazi hunters and Jewish organizations criticized the ruling, arguing that Israel was letting a war criminal go on a technicality.

Susan Tripplehorn resigns GOP chairman post

It will probably be next month before a new Gray County Republican chairman is named, according to district party officials.

Gray County Republican chairman Susan Tripplehorn has submitted her resignation after 11 years as party chairman for the county.

The state Republican committee won't act on her resignation until this weekend in Austin, District 31 Republican Committeeman Bonnie Maynard of Amarillo said today.

"I tried to resign in September 1992," Tripplehorn said, "but they wouldn't accept it."

The person who said they would take the job if Tripplehorn would stay through the 1992 elections changed his mind after the election, Tripplehorn said. She said she agreed to stay one more year.

"It's time to bring some fresh people into the party," Tripplehorn said. "It's like a push for term limits. We need to move on and get some fresh ideas. I'll still be very active." Tripplehorn said Maynard would call a meeting of the county executive committee within the next 30 to 45 days in order to name a replacement.

"The secretary of state has a meeting for Republican county chairmen on Oct. 22," Tripplehorn said. "They'll go over changes in election laws and primary instructions. I hope they have somebody by then."

That's a pretty important school." Maynard said today that the county executive committee meeting would meet sometime in October.

Tripplehorn said several people had indicated an interest in the position.

"This time I can't take my resignation back," Tripplehorn said, "because it's already been formally accepted."

Business economists see steady slowdown ahead after rebound

By JOHN D. McCLAIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The improvement in the nation's economy is expected to be short-lived, some of the nation's top economists contend in a forecast that disagrees with Clinton administration 1994 projections.

Although the consensus of 41 forecasters surveyed by the National Association of Business Economists does not suggest another recession soon, it projects a steady slowdown in the economy after the current quarter.

"While our panelists do expect a rebound in real growth to 3 percent in the third quarter, that's as good as it gets," according to a summary of the survey released today.

The survey, which was conducted in late August, was presented to the association's annual meeting in Chicago and made available in Washington.

The survey consensus projects growth in the gross domestic product slowing to 2.9 percent at an annual rate from October through December, 2.4 percent in the first three months of 1994 and 2.1 percent during the following three months. The GDP is the total amount of goods and services produced in the United States.

"Over the four quarters of 1993, GDP is now expected to rise only 2.3 percent," down from the 2.8 percent in the April survey and 3.1 percent last February," the summary said.

"For 1994, GDP is expected to grow 2.7 percent, down from the earlier prediction of 3 percent" in April and 3.2 percent in February, it added.

Actually, the business economists' 1993 growth forecast of 2.3 percent, fourth quarter over fourth quarter, is slightly more optimistic than the administration's 2 percent projection.

But the economists' 2.7 percent consensus for 1994 falls short of the administration's 3 percent forecast.

Both the business economists' and the administration's projections for this year were held back by anemic growth during the first six months.

Government statistics show the economy expanded at a 0.8 percent annual rate from January through March and 1.8 percent during the three months ended last June. That was down sharply from the 5.7 percent pace of the final quarter of 1993.

One reason for the slow economic growth is that weak economies overseas are curbing U.S. trading partners' ability to buy American-made goods.

A separate report from the International Monetary Fund suggests that situation is unlikely to improve significantly any time soon.

The IMF's new economic forecast, set for release Wednesday, will predict growth in the industrial world of just 1.1 percent this year, even worse than the anemic 1.5 percent gain posted in 1992, said an IMF official who briefed reporters late last week on condition of not being identified by name.

The official said the IMF is revising its projection downward to reflect recessions in Germany and Japan and growth in the United States so far this year at less than half the expected pace.

The business economists' outlook for the U.S. economy projects the merchandise trade deficit to jump from $84.50 billion in 1992 to $96 billion this year and to $110 billion in 1994.

But because of this year's budget agreement that included tax increases and spending restraints, the federal budget deficit is projected to fall from $289 billion in 1992 to $275 billion this year and to $251 billion in 1994.

The economists also believe the economy's slack pace will keep inflation in check.

"There will be sufficient slack in labor and product markets to head off any meaningful acceleration of prices," the survey said. It predicted the Consumer Price Index will rise 3.2 percent in 1993 and 3.3 percent in 1994.

After reaching 6.1 percent in 1990, the CPI dipped to 3.1 percent the following year and to 2.9 percent last year.

The consensus projects the unemployment rate, which was as high as 7.7 percent in June and July 1992, to continue declining gradually from an annual average of 6.9 percent this year to 6.6 percent in 1994.

County

Commissioners rejected a request from Tax Assessor/Collector Margie Gray to increase her fees of office from $30 per month to $130 per month, as permitted by the state.

"That's like giving her a raise and nobody else because it affects the part the county receives," said Commissioner Jim Greene.

Commissioners further denied authorization for split payments and discounts for early payment by taxpayers.

A request from District Judges Lee Waters for a pay raise for 223rd District Court coordinator Janice Miner was denied.

Commissioners learned from Carter that giving bonuses to employees is illegal based on an Attorney General's opinion that she recently read.

Commissioner Ted Simmons informed commissioners that he planned to replace a sprung door at the McLean Ag Barn at a cost of about $800. Maintenance budgeted for 1993 at the barn is $2,500, of which none had been spent.

"We've been trying to do all the repairs we can ourselves," he said, "But the door really needs to be replaced."

Greene then told commissioners he would get estimates on replacing the water heater at the county ag barn in Pampa.

"It's old and it's rusty," Wheeley said, "I've had several people complain about it."

Ex-girlfriend shoots minister dead in church

NORTH SALEM, Ind. (AP) — A minister who had just finished delivering his sermon was shot to death as the congregation — including his 13-year-old daughter — looked on in horror.

The Rev. Roland D. Phillips Jr., 36, was wrapping up a Sunday morning service when Elizabeth Mayberry, described as his ex-girlfriend, entered the Methodist church, parishioners said.

"She just walked in. He asked her to wait till he finished. And she did wait. Then she shot him," said Shirley Peters, who attended the service.

Phillips, shot three times in the chest, died on the way to the hospital, said Lt. Terry Brinker, a sheriff's department spokesman.

Worshippers grabbed Mayberry, 36, after the shooting and wrestled her to the ground, Brinker said. She was being held at the Hendricks County Jail and was expected to be charged with murder today.

"You don't ever want to see anything like that," said witness Phyllis Booker. "I hit the floor because I was afraid she was going to start shooting at the congregation."

The congregation included Phillips' daughter, Rachael. "She's of course shocked as you would expect, but she's holding up well," Brinker said.

Phillips' father, Roland Sr., suffered chest pains after hearing of his son's death. He was hospitalized in fair condition Sunday night.

Phillips, originally from Hopkinsville, Ky., had served at the United Methodist Church for a little more than two years, and was nearing completion of his seminary studies at the Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis.

Mayberry and Phillips, who was divorced, had dated at one time, police said. Phillips was believed to be the one who broke off the relationship.

Mayberry had worked as an artist at The Herald-Times in Bloomington for about 10 years, said art director Steve Snyder.

"I know she was upset about her relationship with the guy, but she seemed to be pleasant and kind of low-key recently," Snyder said.

Suspect sought in attempted murder

Gray County law enforcement officers were searching for a man today in connection with the stabbing of a woman late last week.

A Pampa woman was choked and stabbed in the throat Thursday night by a man who offered her a ride home from a Pampa nightspot.

Officers said the man had offered the woman a ride home Thursday night from a local club, but instead of taking her home, the man drove about a mile east of Pampa on a dirt road, assaulted the woman, then stabbed her twice in the throat.

Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield said the woman played dead and the man dragged her blood-drenched body from the car into a patch of tall grass about 60 feet off the road. After the man drove off, the woman walked to a nearby railroad siding, where workers took her to Coronado Hospital.

Hospital officials said she was released Saturday.

New Miss America plans to help homeless people

By DARLENE SUPERVILLE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss America Kimberly Clarice Aiken says she will devote her year-long reign to helping homeless people and raising awareness about their plight.

"My main goal is to get homeless people off the streets and get people who may become homeless not to be in that situation," Aiken said. "I'd like to make the greatest difference."

The 18-year-old Columbia, S.C., resident bested 49 other women to win the 1994 title early Sunday. She is the first Miss America from South Carolina since 1957.

Aiken is founder and president of the Homeless Education and Resource Organization in her hometown and said she has worked with homeless children who live in shelters and transitional housing.

She has an uncle who was homeless, but Aiken said that was not the reason she adopted the issue for the pageant. He now lives with a friend in New York City, she said.

During Sunday's news conference, Aiken waved occasionally to her mother, father and younger sister sitting in the back row in a hotel ballroom. Her boyfriend of 11 months, Louis Barber, lives in North Carolina.

The two met as students at the University of North Carolina in Charlotte. Asked how he felt when he realized his girlfriend had won, Barber said, "I had to sit down. I felt fainty."

One of the youngest women to win the title, Aiken said she also felt overwhelmed, but was prepared for the 20,000-mile-a-month of travel that comes with the crown. The last 18-year-old to win was Tawny Godin of New York in 1976.

Aiken will receive a $35,000 scholarship, a 1994 Chevrolet Camaro, and an estimated $200,000 in speaking fees.

She is pursuing a degree in music and accounting.

Aiken succeeds Leanza Cornett, 22, of Jacksonville, Fla., who focused on AIDS education during her reign. Cornett, 22, of Jacksonville, Fla., traveled 20,000 miles a month speaking about AIDS awareness during her year as Miss America.

Aiken, a student of both accounting and music, sang a moving rendition of George Gershwin's "Summertime" during the talent portion of the contest's nationally televised finals.

She studied last year at the University of North Carolina and is enrolled this year at the University of South Carolina.

She is the first Miss America from South Carolina since 1957.

Along with the title, Aiken will receive a $35,000 scholarship, a Chevrolet Camaro and an estimated $200,000 in speaking fees.

The field of 50 contestants, one from each state, was narrowed to 10 and then to five semifinalists after two weeks of competition in swimsuit, talent, interview and evening gown competition.

As part of a new format for the 73-year-old pageant, contestants had to do their own hair and make-up and the dress code for the evening wear competition was relaxed.

Aiken wore a black fitted Spandex gown with a sheer bodice and sleeves.

Miss Georgia Kara Kim Martin, 23, of Statesboro was first runnerup; Miss Ohio Titilayo Adedokun, 20, of Cincinnati, second runnerup; Miss Oregon Elizabeth Jeanne Simmons, 23, of Bandon, third runnerup; and Miss Virginia Nancy Glisson, 22, of Williamsburg, fourth runnerup.

Dallas City Council approves Texas-OU weekend changes

DALLAS (AP) — City Council has approved some changes in the traditional downtown Dallas celebrations of Texas-OU weekend that has sometimes turned violent.

A 19-year-old Carrollton man was killed and 11 others were injured last year during the revelry, despite the presence of 500 police officers.

The Council hopes its new plan — which includes nearly doubling the number of police — will eliminate the violence that has plagued the city when alumni and students from both schools meet for the historic matchup.

"The philosophy before was that police were responding to an annual event. This year, the philosophy is that we're changing the nature of the event," said Lt. Kirk Stuart, the Dallas Police Department's operational commander for Texas-OU activities.

Most of the trouble last year occurred at or around the Commerce Street rally. Now, the rally site should be clear on the night of Oct. 8, the day before the Saturday afternoon game at the Cotton Bowl.

Officers will bar pedestrians from entering the section of downtown Dallas bordered by Pacific Avenue and Harwood Street and Jackson and Griffin streets.

Vehicular traffic will be closed on all north-south streets in that section. Eastbound traffic on Commerce and westbound traffic on Elm Street will continue, but officers will monitor passing vehicles. Additionally, the state is expected to give the city authority to arrest people carrying open containers of alcohol.

City Council member Glenn Box said he believes most people won't object to the changes.

"Doing away with the tradition of getting stumbling drunk and walking up and down Commerce Street is not one that anyone is going to miss," he said.

Police believe the displaced partygoers will move to Dallas' West End.

Officers will no longer erect blockades and maintain one-way sidewalk traffic in the West End. But vehicular traffic will be halted, and officers will be posted at the district's access points.

Stuart said police also will increase their presence in Deep Ellum, an arts and nightclub district, where traffic will be blocked on the north-south streets between Good-Latimer Expressway and Oakland Avenue.

In all, 962 officers will be deployed in and around downtown.

A group of volunteers headed by business owner Lucy Billingsley has tried to develop alternative activities for visitors.

"You just can't end the Commerce Street rally," Ms. Billingsley said. "We said to ourselves, 'Let's figure out the best alternative reasons for coming to Dallas.'"

Egypt's Mubarak calls on Arabs to follow Israel-PLO peace move

By SERGEI SHARGORODSKY
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, ending a surprise summit with Israel's prime minister, said Syria was genuinely seeking peace and predicted an Israel-Syria agreement could be reached within months.

During the two-hour meeting Sunday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told Mubarak that Syria must stop encouraging guerrillas fighting Israel in southern Lebanon before talks progress, said an Israeli official who accompanied Rabin.

Mubarak, who is scheduled to meet with Syrian President Hafez Assad soon, pledged to try to move the process forward.

"We will try and reach a solution between Israel and Syria," Mubarak said. "It is not a miracle. I don't think it will take more than a few months" for an agreement.

The Egyptian leader also sought to allay Israel's concerns that Syria was not serious about negotiations because it sheltered 10 hard-line anti-PLO factions in Damascus and did not rein-in the Iran-backed Muslim militants of Hezbollah in Lebanon.

"Why are you so pessimistic that Syria is going to be so late to reach a settlement, or a declaration of principles with Israel, after reaching a final agreement with the Palestinians?" Mubarak told a news conference.

"I don't think that. I think Syria genuinely wants peace, genuinely wants to solve the problem and I heard this from President Assad several times."

Israel wants Syria to agree to a deployment of the Lebanese army in southern Lebanon and to allow it to disarm guerrillas active there, according to the Israeli official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"It is clear Mubarak will raise the things he heard from Rabin in his meetings with Assad," said a spokesman for Rabin, Gad Ben-Ari.

Assad, meanwhile, told Egypt's Al-Akhabar newspaper that Syria and Israel will continue their negotiations. Syria has demanded that Israel withdraw from the Golan Heights, which it captured in 1967.

Rabin's visit came as Arab foreign ministers gathered in Cairo to hear PLO chairman Yasser Arafat speak about the PLO-Israel accord and to decide on the degree of backing Arab states will give to the process.

Arafat, who arrived in Egypt on Sunday, told the ministers the interim accord will lead to an Israeli withdrawal from all occupied land, including Arab east Jerusalem.

Sources said most of the 21 member countries will express support for the Israeli-PLO agreement in a resolution on Tuesday.

The Rabin-Mubarak summit was seen as part of Israeli efforts to win support from moderate Arab nations and make use of the momentum created by the PLO-Israel agreement.

Egypt, the only Arab country to have a peace treaty with Israel, has been instrumental in mediating between Israel and other Arab states. The summit at the Meditteranean port was Rabin's third meeting with Mubarak since the Israeli leader took office in July 1992.

Rabin's visit was also apparently designed to quell critics at home by showing them the fruits of peace. Israel's divided Knesset, or parliament, is due to start a debate on the PLO agreement on Tuesday.

Mubarak, smiling and sometimes joking with journalists, praised the Israeli-PLO agreement as a "courageous ... strong step toward peace" supported by "most, maybe all the Arab world."

Rabin was more cautious, saying success with other Arab nations will depend on the successful implementation of the PLO accord, which grants Palestinians self-rule in the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

He repeated his call to oil-rich Arab countries, the European Community and Japan to provide financial and political support for Palestinian self-rule.

'Misorientation' led to Guardsmen's deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — The commander of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle that fired upon and killed three Texas National Guard soldiers in July thought the soldiers were "personnel targets," according to an investigation.

The investigation into the July 21 incident at Fort Hood, which concluded Saturday, also found that the training scenario used in the early morning exercises wasn't an approved method.

"In this particular case, the engagement of personnel targets by the Bradley vehicle is not a part of the standard scenario," said Lt. Col. Kim Hunt, a Fort Hood spokesman.

The unusual procedure was "a contributing cause, but not primary cause of the accident," officials said in a prepared statement.

The Bradley commander, whose identity has not been released, "observed what he thought was a group of personnel targets and engaged them," the statement said.

The commander also became "misoriented" and turned the turret of his Bradley beyond a safe firing limit during the accident, the investigation concluded.

Sgt. Raul Cardenas, 27, of Westlaco; Spc. Jose Ramos Jr., 42, of Westlaco; and Spc. Daniel Benitez, 27, of Donna were all killed when the Bradley's machine gun shot them in the back. A fourth guardsman, who has not been identified, was wounded.

According to the statement, the guardsmen were engaged in a simulated chemical attack, calling for soldiers to wear protective masks. The equipment could have restricted the tank commander's vision, Hunt said.

"He was in a relatively high-stress environment," Hunt said. "He was inside the vehicle. He felt like he had to perform in a short amount of time."

Hunt said the soldier's supervisors within the National Guard will decide if he is to be held responsible in any way for the deaths, and whether he will continue to serve in the guard.

Lt. Col. Ed Komandosky, spokesman at the Guard's state headquarters in Austin, added: "It's not contemplated that any criminal action will be taken against (the Bradley commander)."

Hunt said he did not know if the Bradley commander had been tested for drug or alcohol use after the accident. Toxicology reports released last week showed that one of the slain guardsmen, Benitez, tested positive for tetrahydrocannabinol acid or THC, the active ingredient most commonly found in marijuana. The report did not indicate how much was found.

Family members of the slain guards met Saturday with officials to review the investigation's conclusions. Maria Ramos, Jose Ramos' widow, said she has some concerns. "I do think it was an accident, but I still have some questions," she said.

Mrs. Ramos said she did not understand why the soldiers were training under a scenario that wasn't standard, and she said the Guard and Army may have been negligent.

"That is one of the questions I have, why they were firing," Mrs. Ramos told the Austin American-Statesman.

Officials said they don't know why the nonstandard training procedure was used or if it had been approved. Ponciano Martinez, Benitez's brother-in-law, said he questions whether an equipment error may have contributed to the accident. He said family members will continue to seek answers.

He added that no decision has yet been made as to whether they will pursue legal action against the Army or National Guard.

Health care tax sparks war among lobbyists

WASHINGTON (AP) — With billions of dollars at stake, the beer, wine and hard liquor industries have erupted into open war over who should be taxed to help pay for President Clinton's health care plans.

Tensions among the three sectors of the alcoholic beverage business have been heightened by reports that Clinton may be scaling back the tax increase he will propose for cigarettes and shift some of the burden to other so-called "sin taxes."

Last week, the president of the National Beer Wholesalers Association wrote a letter accusing his counterpart in the liquor industry of mounting "an all-out attack" on beer that "has placed the common interests of the licensed beverage industries in great jeopardy."

Beer Wholesalers President Ronald A. Sarasin told Fred A. Meister, president of the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States (DISCUS), that Meister "has done more to damage the licensed beverage industries than all the activities of our most avowed critics."

Sarasin added: "The long-held goal of the spirits industry to force up the taxes on beer and wine is now clearly exposed, and DISCUS has stooped to astonishingly low levels to accomplish its purpose."

The White House still has not decided the precise mix of new taxes it will seek to finance the health care plan. A late draft called for $105 billion through the year 2000, and there are clear indications a major part will come from a hike in cigarette taxes.

But under heavy lobbying from tobacco interests, the contemplated cigarette tax increase proposal apparently has been dropped from $1-a-pack to 75 cents, raising the likelihood that other revenue would be needed — most likely from a hit on alcoholic beverages.

Clinton is to unveil the plan in a speech to Congress on Wednesday night.

Sarasin's Sept. 15 letter, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, was written in response to an appeal by Meister to Clinton not to focus any new taxes on hard liquor.

Some administration officials are known to favor exempting beer from taxes because it is seen as the favored drink of working people. Wine benefits from its roots in California, the state with the largest voting strength in Congress.

Meister told the president in a letter Oct. 3 that "beer, not liquor, is the beverage of choice of the young and drivers." And he said a rumored proposal to single out distilled spirits for new taxation "would perpetuate a 'beer subsidy' that is not rational and that sends the wrong message to young people."

The liquor industry followed Meister's letter with a heavy campaign of advertising and media appearances calling a liquor tax unfair and pointing out that 42 percent of the price of a typical bottle of liquor now goes for taxes.

The beer, wine and liquor industries, like many relatively narrow special interests, have banded together over the years with cigarette makers to lobby against new excise levies — so-called "sin taxes" — on their products.

But such groups also live in constant fear and suspicion that their goals will be sold out when the time comes for the coalition to cut final deals.

The alcohol-tobacco alliance, the Coalition Against Regressive Taxation, already had been fractured this year by Clinton's signal that cigarettes would bear the brunt of new taxes to pay for health care reform.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

You can't buy health

Perhaps someday the Clinton administration will learn that it can't buy our health. If only that day could come before the White House begins its imminent blitz to ambush the economy with untold billions of dollars more in public funding and coerced mandates for national health care.

The truth that eludes the Clinton camp is of course intuitive: No amount of government largess for the poor and uninsured can force people to take care of themselves. This is also supported by hard data, which suggest spending more won't make people live longer, have stronger babies or generally lead healthier lives.

What could be the tip of an iceberg is a years-long study recently published in the Journal of the American Medical Association. It found that poor, pregnant women covered by a Massachusetts state health-care program showed little improvement in key health variables that the program should have bolstered.

The state program covered poor, uninsured, pregnant women who didn't qualify for federal Medicaid coverage. The new study compared such women before the state program was enacted, in 1985, with women who participated in the program. For both groups, researchers looked for childbearing complications like high blood pressure, premature detachment of the placenta and cases in which a mother's hospital stay lasted at least one day beyond her baby's birth.

The study then compared the incidence of those complications for both groups with the same data for privately insured women. It found that while the poor uninsured women, not surprisingly, trailed the privately insured women on these key pregnancy indicators — so did the poor women covered by the new state program.

Why did the Massachusetts experiment fail? Researchers say they aren't sure, but their findings strongly suggest something other than a low income was at root. Here were women given coverage that entitled them to first-rate care (some of the nation's more distinguished physicians and hospitals are in Boston), yet they were in no measurable way better off than other women without such coverage. The study's authors speculated on a variety of explanations, including the low-income mothers' distance from physicians and access to transportation.

For cultural reasons that have little to do with poverty and much to do with social decay — like family breakdown and poor education — many Americans neglect themselves and their unborn even when they do have access to care. Broad-based ignorance as well as indifference, among other cultural quirks, play roles here. And this syndrome extends beyond pregnancy, of course.

The impolite bottom line in this debate is that lower infant mortality or higher birth weights or longer life expectancy simply don't hinge on a government's generosity with its taxpayers' money. As with so many other flash points in public funding, such as education, the amount of tax dollars force-fed into health care cannot but marginally improve our vital statistics overall. There are people too poor to afford adequate health care, to be sure, but among them are many who would not avail themselves of it anyway.

This of course is not to say that access to health care isn't vital in improving the quality of life; rather, it is to say that no amount of even cutting-edge medical science can offset a lack of personal responsibility. If our president doesn't already sense these truths intuitively, the data are just waiting for him.

Improvement of government

Two months after President Clinton promised a dozen individual congressmen and senators the kitchen sink, his grandmother's false teeth and a series ticket to state dinners at the White House if they would vote for his budget reconciliation bill, he tells us that he is going to reinvent government. That is an enterprise Moses did not take on.

There are better governments and worse governments, more corrupt and less corrupt governments, but in the end, government is the organization of force behind the will, however mediated, of the majority.

Two constants stand out at this state of American politics. The first is that there is near-universal dissatisfaction with government among the voters. The second is that they intend to do nothing serious about it, as witness the relative disorganization of the movement to effect term-limitation.

Granted, in all 14 of the states in which term limitation was voted on in 1992, it was approved. But judging from past performances testing the general will (on taxes, deficits, subsidies, crime), it is an instrument that quickly detumesces while government goes on and on — the enemy, in J.L. Mencken's words, of decent, well-disposed and industrious men.

There was, however, no mistaking the Eagle Scout enthusiasm of Clinton and Vice President Gore. Gore said that henceforward the government would "treat taxpayers like customers" (Comment: that isn't possible, because customers can return merchandise they don't want); and Clinton said that this was one report that "will not gather dust in a warehouse" (Comment: Warehouse stocks rose on the Big Board the following day).

Several points were made in the general commentary on the National Performance Review. One was that it tends to be politically possible for the party not associated with a particular position to effect reforms. The example of Richard Nixon going to China is repeatedly cited. It's true: President/General Eisenhower could reform the Defense Department and curb the military, where President Adlai Stevenson might not have succeeded.

And it is true that technology has given us certain tools regularly used in the private sector that could usefully be put to work in the public sector. For instance, why can't you use credit cards to pay your taxes? (Why not?)

And yes, Clinton and Gore conceded, there have been more than 500 efforts to streamline government, and most of these have gathered dust in warehouses. But things are different today (they tell us). Moreover, said the president, one-half of the proposed reforms can be effected by merely wielding his pen. "This president" will wield his pen, he promised.

Under relentless questioning by Robert MacNeil, Gore conceded that his performance review concentrated on "how" government could operate more smoothly, not on "what" government should take on. Another commission would have to address that theme.

We were several times reminded that the Grace Commission had done work for President Reagan, and came up with almost four times as many reductions in expense as are now proposed, but the Grace Commission report is nothing much more than a curio in the stacks of legislative history, even as the old Hoover Commission lived so briefly in the annals of government reform.

All of the above said, one concedes that there is apparent sincerity emanating from the White House. It will very quickly be established whether in fact Clinton is going to sign those reforms that can be activated by executive order. Beyond that, we are told that government personnel themselves initiated many of the recommendations in the performance review, notwithstanding that they call for a 12 percent reduction in government personnel.

And, finally, it is observed that Congress does really think of itself as under the gun and is therefore likelier to cooperate than normally it would.

The Wall Street Journal has almost single-handedly been pressing for a critical reform that would take away the cloak of anonymity from members of the House of Representatives who connive to keep popular legislation bottled up in committee. Will the new spirit of Congress bring this reform to life? Once again, we will know this soon, before the October adjournment of Congress.

But even acknowledging current restiveness, students of democratic government will understand that government and the marketplace are different institutions. When Henry Ford said that his customers could have any color car "so long as it's black," he caught in a single phrase the nature of the problem.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Sept. 20, the 263rd day of 1993. There are 102 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Sept. 20, 1519, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan set out from Spain on a voyage to find a western passage to the Spice Islands in Indonesia. Magellan was killed enroute, but one of his ships eventually circumnavigated the world.

On this date: In 1870, Italian troops took control of the Papal States, leading to the unification of Italy.

In 1873, panic swept the floor of the New York Stock Exchange in the wake of railroad bond defaults and bank failures.

In 1881, Chester A. Arthur was sworn in as the 21st president of the United States, succeeding James A. Garfield, who was assassinated.

In 1947, former New York City Mayor Fiorello La Guardia died.

In 1958, civil rights activist Martin Luther King Jr. was seriously wounded during an appearance at a New York City department store when an apparently deranged black woman stabbed him in the chest.

Fuss-fight over health foods

The Food and Drug Administration has outgrown its britches.

The FDA is now daring to warn the American Medical Association and the American Heart Association and the American College of Nutrition that the government will not tolerate those organizations daring to tell you what vitamins are good for you.

Many experts agree that Vitamin E helps reduce the risk of heart disease, but the FDA wants to categorize Vitamin E in some cases as an "illegal drug" which should be taken off the market.

The FDA has been trying for years to get control over dietary supplements, but under the administration of Commissioner David Kessler, the health food stores which make health claims for some food supplements are deemed "snake-oil salesmen."

Unfortunately, there are enough exaggerated claims to justify criticism.

But fortunately, Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch and Democrat Rep. Bill Richardson have teamed up to checkmate Commissioner Kessler.

Together, they are sponsoring the Dietary Supplement and Health Education Act which would permit supplements to be considered safe unless the FDA can prove otherwise.

Paul Harvey

Our bureaucracy is at war with itself over this issue.

The federal Centers for Disease Control has concluded that folic acid can help prevent birth defects. But when a manufacturer of folic acid gave a copy of this report to a customer, the FDA wanted the manufacturer prosecuted!

There are some liars in the health food business.

It would be very simple for the FDA to prosecute the liars and put a stop to such exaggerated claims, but the bureaucrats appear determined instead to punish the entire health food industry.

The FDA, jealously defending its prerogatives and seeking to expand them, is out of step with the new era of preventive medicine.

And for the FDA to dictate to responsible medical journals what they may and may not print is unconscionable.

Kenneth Scott owns Highland Laboratories in Mount Angel, Ore.

An assortment of newsstand publications have mentioned taking capsules of coenzyme Q-10 as a potential heart benefit.

Kenneth Scott made reprints of one such article (from the February 1987 issue of OMNI magazine) for his customers.

FDA agents and an armed U.S. marshal entered his home, seized the OMNI reprints and other newspaper and magazine articles.

This is Nazi-like book-burning!

What's worrisome to all of us who take supplemental vitamins and minerals with demonstrable health benefits is that the FDA under Kessler wants to be a dictator — unless Hatch and Richardson and you somehow manage to de-fang him.

Will liberals be able to hush Rush?

The Limbaugh Phenomenon roars on, and worried liberals are screwing up their courage to do something about it. Unfortunately the wretch refuses to give them any valid reason to attack. He isn't any brand of bigot, and hasn't molested any children. Even his economic policies, far from being wacky or simplistic, are distressingly orthodox. All he does is beat liberals and liberalism over the head, hour by hour and day after day, with a quicksilver mixture of facts, fun and fury.

But this man's three-hour radio talk show, broadcast five days a week, is heard in the course of a week by 20 million Americans. Indeed, at any given moment there are 4.5 million people listening to him. Add to that a 30-minute late-night TV talk show with 300,000 viewers and a hard-cover book that has sold over 2 million copies and is rounding out its first year on The New York Times best-seller list, and you begin to see the liberal's problem.

It was thus almost predictable that congressional Democrats would try to make a run at Limbaugh under the banner of the Fairness Doctrine. And sure enough, bills have now been introduced in both the house and the Senate that would make the Fairness Doctrine the law of the land.

The Fairness Doctrine has been around for over 40 years. Noting that the number of radio and TV channels were limited, and therefore had to be parceled out by the federal government, the Federal Communications Commission decreed in 1949 that electronic media (unlike print media) must not only "devote a reasonable amount of time to the coverage of controversial issues of public importance" but "do so fairly by affording a reasonable opportunity for contrasting viewpoints to be voiced on these issues." The implicit threat was loss of a license to broadcast.

At that time, and for decades thereafter, extreme leftists and ordinary conservatives — both largely ignored by the regnant liberal TV networks — found the Fairness Doctrine useful. Phyllis Schlafly, for one, acknowledged that she could never have won her long battle against the Equal Rights Amendment without the access to the airwaves that it afforded her. Opposition to the doctrine came from libertarians (opposed, as always, to any governmental restrictions) and the liberals (who thought the electronic media were doing just fine).

In 1987 Congress passed a law codifying the Fairness Doctrine — only to have it vetoed by President Reagan, who sided with its libertarian critics. The recent proliferation of cable TV channels, he pointed out, had rendered any such law unnecessary — and besides it was probably unconstitutional.

There the matter rested until Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and Congressman John Dingell, D-Mich., recently introduced new bills to write the Fairness Doctrine into law. The legal effect of such a law would be to require radio stations that now carry Rush Limbaugh to make equal time available to liberals to counter him. Of course, such programs would exist already if there were enough willing listeners (and thus commercial sponsors) to support them. But, since there aren't, many stations would be forced to drop Limbaugh rather than run three hours a day of liberal bushwah that nobody wants to listen to or sponsor. Neat, eh?

All this, mind you, is justified in the name of "fairness," on the ludicrous theory that the American people are being denied a chance to hear the liberal point of view! Imagine — the vast barrage of liberal propaganda that blares out at us from our TV sets every morning and every night, from every network, is somehow not being heard by the American people, so Rush Limbaugh must be muscled off the air lest his counter-barrage prove too persuasive.

Dear Abby:

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "In the Dark in Canada" could have been written by my mother. She and Dad were married for 40 years when they found out that Dad had cancer. The doctors said he had about a year left. Chemotherapy was started immediately, but after 11 months, he took a turn for the worse and died.

Before his illness, my mother had never paid a bill or balanced a checkbook. She had never put gas in the car or checked the oil. Dad did everything for her. All Mother knew how to do was cook, keep house and raise children.

When Dad died, Mama got a crash course in reality. Abby, please print this. There are many women out there who need to wake up.

THEIR DAUGHTER

DEAR ABBY: Re "In the Dark in Canada": When I'd ask my husband where we stood financially, he'd say, "Don't worry, honey, you will always be well taken care of."

We lived very well — actually, too well for what we could afford. We had nothing in the bank, and my husband had debts I knew nothing about.

You can probably guess the rest of the story. My husband died suddenly, and I had to sell our home and go back to work in order to survive — at age 44.

CONNECTICUT SURVIVOR

DEAR DAUGHTER AND SURVIVOR: For year I have urged my female readers to make themselves fully aware of their financial situation should anything happen to their spouses. Specifically, their husbands should share with them information about assets and debts, insurance and policies, contents of their will, etc.

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter from the woman trying to justify taking things from hotels, stating that she thought guests were expected to take things as souvenirs since they bear the hotel's name:

Abby, I place monogrammed towels in the guest bathroom. That does not mean I expect guests to take them home as "souvenirs" of their visit to my home.

The reader states that the cost of "souvenirs" is built into the price of the hotel room. That does not justify stripping the hotel room of everything that isn't bolted down.

Customers pay higher prices when they shop at retail stores because of the cost of shoplifting, which is passed on indirectly to the customers.

I am sure your reader is an honest person who has just not thought the matter through. She did state that she took "some" ashtrays and water glasses.

I can readily understand how a person might assume it is all right to take "one" ashtray, or even "one" water glass, but taking "some" indicates that the guest is very likely collecting these articles for home use rather than souvenirs.

Thank you for printing this letter, since it seems to be an ongoing problem for hotel owners everywhere.

PATRICIA SETZER, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR PATRICIA: I recommend that guests ask hotel management if they may take an ashtray as a souvenir — the chances are, it will be offered as a gift.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband to whom I was married for 34 years died recently. A year before he died, he called me up and asked, "Was I the best lover you ever had?" I replied, "I don't know; I never had anyone to compare you with."

Do you think he died happy?

ELSIE IN GREEN VALLEY, ARIZ.

DEAR ELSIE: Without a doubt.

White Deer native casts his future with helium

By DAVID BOWSER
Managing Editor

The 19 acres that Stephen Urbanczyk manages in Moore County isn't as large a spread as his family farm near White Deer, but in many ways it is more productive. It provides a key ingredient for the country's space program and for such high-tech products as lasers and silicon chips and returns about $12 million a year for the people who employ him — the U.S. taxpayer. It's also about to become a political football at the national level.

Daily, Urbanczyk commutes from his farm between White Deer and Skellytown the 60 miles to the Excell Helium Plant south of Dumas where he is the plant manager.

"The mail box says Masterson," Urbanczyk laughed, "but it goes to Channing and then here."

Afloat in a sea of short, wirey buffalo grass on the Moore County prairie, the Excell Plant is part of the Department of Interior's Bureau of Mines helium operation with offices and another plant in Amarillo some 20 miles to the south. For years, it was the sole source of helium in the free world.

The helium is produced from natural gas gathered from plants along a pipeline stretching north over 400 miles into Kansas. It's separated out and purified. Part of it is compressed into liquid form for shipping or storage while the rest is stored or shipped in a gaseous state.

A White Deer native, Urbanczyk has been at the plant for 14 years.

"I started at the bottom," he said. "I never thought I'd end up in management. I always thought I'd die in a pair of jeans."

Urbanczyk came to the plant by a circuitous route. He joined the military at age 19 and served in Alaska at age 19 after graduating from White Deer High School in 1969.

"I was on the 1965 football team that went all the way to state," he said. "We got beat in state but at least we made it that far."

After his military service, Urbanczyk attended Amarillo College where he earned a degree in electronics before going to work at the helium plant. Almost a decade and a half of hard work found him in charge of the plant where he started as a laborer.

"It takes about six years to really learn how to operate the plant," he said.

The operation is constantly being upgraded and improved, he said. Although some of the equipment is older than he is, the maintenance schedules and upgrading have made it more efficient. Most of the compressors, for instance, were installed in 1943, but improvements made on them have kept the cost of operation down and made them more efficient, Urbanczyk claimed.

"We used to overhaul them every year," he said. "With the new bearings we've installed and other improved parts, now we do it every three years."

The plant has already begun making the switch to electric compressors.

"Over time, we'll move to electric drivers," he said. "We'll have to increase our ability to produce electricity."

The plant installed new generators in 1986.

"I understand that it saved us $300,000 a year by putting them in," Urbanczyk said. "They paid for themselves in six months."

The generators and older gas compressors run on the natural gas that's left after the helium is extracted.

The Excell Plant goes through some seven million cubic feet of natural gas a day, enough to heat a home for 500 years, to produce 2.6 million cubic feet of helium. The inert gas is used in such diverse areas as preserving the Constitution of the United States and other important papers in the National Archives in Washington, D.C. to the space program to blowing up balloons for kids' birthday parties. It's also used in lasers, making transistors, magnetic resonance imaging in the medical field.

The Fermi Lab in Illinois uses helium in its particle beam accelerator. The proposed supercollider south of Dallas would also need the gas.

"Right now, we're shipping 49 tank cars every four days to NASA," Urbanczyk said. "That's over two million cubic feet."

He said they have been shipping

2,500 litres each week to Martin Marietta for use in the nation's space shuttle program.

Each of the railway tank cars in the fleet of 137 the helium operation has weighs 233,900 pounds.

"It takes 70 pounds of steel to ship one pound of helium," Urbanczyk said looking west from the plant at the line of railway cars waiting on the siding.

Established in the 1920s, the Bureau of Mines helium operation grew to a high of 700 employees and five plants in the 1960s. Since then, technology and efficiency of operation, Urbanczyk said, has slimmed the program to two plants and 220 employees.

"I have 82 here," he said. "They're from Stinnett; Keyes, Okla.; Boise City, Okla.; Canyon, all over the area. The Amarillo Plant has 25. The rest are in the office downtown."

Cowboys win one; Smith plays

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — With everyone focusing on the return of Emmitt Smith, not a lot of attention was directed toward the big guys playing in front of him.

There's no question the Cowboys need Smith, the NFL's top ground-gainer two straight years. The same can be said of Troy Aikman, last year's Super Bowl MVP.

But where would they be without the great offensive line which dominated Phoenix's defense in a 17-10 victory Sunday night?

"We knew we had to have a great pass rush," said Cardinals coach Joe Bugel, whose team had no sacks. "If you give a quarterback of that caliber that much time, he'll pick you apart."

"I didn't think anybody could push our defense around, but they did," Bugel added.

Aikman hit his first nine passes, and Dallas had a 10-0 lead three minutes into the second quarter. Aikman finished 21-of-27 for 281 yards to lead the Cowboys to their first win in three games.

Smith's presence gave the Cowboys an obvious boost even though he didn't get into the game until 6:31 remained in the third quarter.

"Once Emmitt gets in there, then we know we can run the ball," said Alvin Harper, who had a career-high game with six catches for 136 yards. "They have to respect us more and use more eight-man fronts, which makes them play us more man-to-man."

Derrick Lassic scored on runs of 8 and 2 yards and the Cowboys had a 17-7 lead before Smith got into the field.

Smith, who had his career high with 182 yards against Phoenix two years ago, was held out by coach Jimmy Johnson until Steve Beuerlein swung the momentum toward Phoenix with a 12-yard scoring throw to Ricky Proehl.

"I didn't want to put him in there for just a short while and then let him sit and stiffen up at halftime with a hamstring or something," Johnson explained.

Smith said he was trying to be patient.

"Once the kickoff came, I got antsy to get in there. I have to admit I was nervous," Smith said.

He had 23 yards on three carries during a 12-play drive which produced no points but ran down the clock. Eddie Murray, who earlier kicked a 23-yard field goal, missed a 50-yard attempt when the march stalled.

In the fourth period, after the Cardinals pulled within a touchdown on a 20-yard Greg Davis field goal, Dallas held the ball for the last 15 plays and ate up 6:37.

Smith gained 16 yards on the first snap of the drive and finished with 45 yards in eight carries.

"I was pretty impressed," said Lassic. "He has great balance, incredible quickness, and he knows where the holes are. I'm not there yet, but God willing, I'll get there someday."

He said he didn't mind turning over the No. 1 spot.

"If my starting career is over, I'm going out on top. I just felt much more comfortable this week knowing Emmitt was here and that everything wasn't on my shoulders," Lassic said.

It was Aikman's precision, however, that set the tone for the cool, efficient Cowboys throughout the game.

The fifth-year quarterback used six different receivers, throwing a combined 11 completions to Harper and Michael Irvin, dumping off six more passes to fullback Daryl Johnson and a handful to three others.

On third-and-3 at the Phoenix 36-yard line, Aikman took the Cowboys to the two-minute warning and picked up a first down with a 5-yard throw to Jay Novacek.

Phoenix moved the ball well behind Beuerlein; but Russell Maryland's sack killed one first-half drive, a holding call against left tackle Luis Sharpe ended another, and a third stalled when Gary Clark and Derek Ware dropped passes on back-to-back plays.

In the third quarter, Ware hung onto a 27-yard throw that put the Cardinals into Dallas territory, but Kevin Smith intercepted a tipped pass four plays later.

John Roper sacked Beuerlein just before halftime, and Darren Woodson added to the big-play Dallas defense's laurels when he kept Phoenix out of the end zone in the fourth quarter. Just before Davis' field goal, Woodson batted down a pass for Proehl in the end zone.

Rangers drop game to Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Texas Rangers left town hoping the California Angels will treat their next visitors just as rudely.

Doomed to a fifth-place finish in the AL West, the Angels beat the Rangers 9-8 Sunday to drop Texas 4 1/2 games behind the Chicago White Sox.

Rene Gonzales' three-run homer in the eighth inning lifted the Angels to victory, the second in three games against the Rangers this weekend.

"I hope the Angels play Chicago as tough as they did us," Dean Palmer said after his two homers were wasted when California fought back from a 7-3 deficit.

"This was just a tough day," Palmer said. "After we gained so much ground and were feeling we had a legitimate shot, this was a big blow."

The Rangers were ahead 8-6 when Tom Henke entered the game with one out and a man on in the eighth. After walking Chili Davis, Henke threw a hanging forkball that Gonzales turned into his second homer of the season.

"I'd like to say we deserved to win this one but, really, we didn't," Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said. "We couldn't put it away when we had the chance, and — I don't know why — everyone out there pitched defensively. I didn't think any lead was safe."

Kennedy sighed deeply and considered the loss of not only the game and a game in the standings, but also the loss of Juan Gonzalez and Mario Diaz.

Gonzalez, the major league home run leader with 44, aggravated a lower-back injury and had to leave the game in the third inning. Two innings later, Diaz came out with a sore right elbow. Veteran outfielders Gary Redus and Butch Davis already are on the shelf with hamstring injuries.

"The last week to 10 days, we've had so many injuries, I don't know what to think," Kennedy said. "We've had enough tests of character, but we won't quit fighting. I'll take a Double-A team on the field if I have to."

Gonzalez will begin treatment for the strained muscle on the right side of his lower back and is not likely to play until the Rangers open a series in Chicago on Friday.

"This is the worst it has felt," said Gonzalez, who sat out Wednesday's game with the same injury. "I felt really bad pain while I was running."

The Rangers won't have to wait for this weekend to find out whether they have the tenacity to remain in the race.

"How we play (Monday) in Seattle will be the real key," said Palmer, whose 30th and 31st homers gave the Rangers a trio with 30-plus for the first time in club history. Rafael Palmeiro is second on the team with 36.

"I'm not immune to getting hit, but this is the wrong time of the year for it," said Henke (5-5) after his seventh blown save.

Henke and four other Texas relievers allowed eight hits and six runs in three innings after a shaky five-inning outing by Kenny Rogers.

California left-hander Joe Magrane was equally ineffective, allowing 11 hits and six runs in six innings.

Lefors enjoying early success

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

The Lefors Pirates have emerged as District 1A's (6-man) only unbeaten team three weeks into the season, creating some football excitement this small town hasn't seen in several years.

"We've got a lot of people showing up for the games," said Lefors head coach Ronny Miller. "The fans and the kids are all excited."

Lefors rolled past Follett, 44-0, Friday night to go 3-0 for the season. Eighth-ranked Groom suffered its first setback last week, losing to fourth-ranked Meadow, 35-22, leaving Lefors as the district's only unbeaten team.

Lefors previous wins came over Silverton, 40-12, and Higgins, 8-0.

The Pirates are winning without much depth or experience.

"We've only got 11 on the team, but they can all play. They're all getting into the games, so everybody is getting a lot of experience," Miller said. "And we're really pretty young. We've got two sophomores starting on offense and defense."

One of those sophomores is Tommy Green, who has rushed for five touchdowns and 327 yards. The other is quarterback Keith Franks. Green starts at middle linebacker and Franks at safety on defense.

Dusty Helfer, a junior who has rushed for four touchdowns and 399 yards, and Green give the Pirates an explosive backfield, but it's the defense Miller is most proud of.

"I'm just real pleased with our defense. Last year we scored a lot, but we also gave up a lot of points. While our offense is improving, the defense has been shutting people down," Miller said.

Tommy Wyatt, Jason Winegeart, Dusty Helfer and Dennis Williams join Franks and Green on a defensive unit that has allowed just two touchdowns.

Lefors finished fourth in the district last season with a 2-3 record. Overall, the Pirates were 5-5.

This season, the Pirates are shooting for a higher finish in the district standings and a better record.

"I feel like we can make a run at the playoffs if we keep improving," Miller said. "If we can improve some every week, we'll be competing for a playoff spot."

Lefors faces a tough test this Friday night against Samnorwood, also unbeaten at 3-0.

"Samnorwood has some big kids who go out and try to run over you. We just need to go out and play our type of game," Miller said.

Lefors opens the district season Oct. 8 against Follett.

Freshman Tenille Franks was crowned the Lefors Football Homecoming Queen last Friday night. Queen candidates were senior Ginger Hannon, junior Shawna Locke and sophomore Heather Maples.

Blue Jays, White Sox close in on division championships

By The Associated Press

Maybe there won't be any close races in the American League this year.

The Toronto Blue Jays and Chicago White Sox took big steps toward division titles with victories Sunday as their closest pursuers lost. The New York Yankees dropped four games behind Toronto with an 8-3 loss to the Boston Red Sox, and the Texas Rangers fell 4 1/2 games behind the White Sox with a 9-8 loss at California.

AL roundup

"I've seen close races change and turn around very quickly," said a hopeful Frank Tanana, who lost in his first start for the Yankees. "In 1987 with Detroit, we came back in the last week to win the division when Toronto went on a losing streak."

New York, which hasn't been this far out since June 18, trails by five games in the loss column with 12 games left. Toronto has won eight straight, its longest winning streak this season.

"They're all pressure games now. That's not going to change," said Don Mattingly, the hero of the Yankees' dramatic 4-3 victory Saturday. "None of us are willing to let this get away."

Toronto, which beat Minnesota 10-0, has its largest lead of the season.

"We're going home after with a great road trip behind us and with momentum on our side," Joe Carter said.

Texas, which has 13 games left, was an inning away from beating California, but Rene Gonzales hit a three-run homer in the eighth off Tom Henke (5-5), who had converted 37 of his previous 43 save chances.

"This is one of the toughest of the year to take," said Dean Palmer, who homered twice for Texas. "From here on out, every game means a lot and this is a big blow."

In other games, Chicago beat Oakland 3-1,

Baltimore beat Milwaukee 8-4, Cleveland beat Detroit 12-2 and Seattle beat Kansas City 4-1.

Tanana, 7-16 overall this season, allowed eight hits and four runs in seven innings. New York made three errors in the first two innings.

Danny Darwin (15-11) gave up three hits and one run in six innings. John Valentin had three hits and drove in four runs for Boston with an RBI double in the second, a two-run homer in the fifth that put the Red Sox ahead 4-1 and a run-scoring single in a four-run eighth.

Blue Jays 10, Twins 0

Juan Guzman scattered eight hits over eight innings, and visiting Toronto hit a team-record nine doubles by eight players.

Guzman (13-3) walked four and struck out four before Duane Ward relieved to start the ninth. Mike Trombley (5-5) allowed nine hits in 6 2/3 innings, including five of the Blue Jays' doubles.

White Sox 3, Athletics 1

At Oakland, Calif., Robin Ventura's two-run homer off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth gave the AL West leaders their 14th victory in 21 games. Frank Thomas opened the ninth with a single off Eckersley (2-4) and Ventura followed with his 22nd home run.

Scott Radinsky (7-2) won in relief of Tim Belcher, and Roberto Hernandez got three outs for his 35th save.

Orioles 8, Brewers 4

Harold Baines drove in four runs and visiting Baltimore ended a 25-inning scoreless streak to remain five games behind Toronto.

Arthur Rhodes (5-4) allowed six hits in 6 1/3 innings and Alan Mills finished for his third save. Jamie Navarro (10-11) gave up five runs and nine hits in four-plus innings.

Indians 12, Tigers 2

Mark Clark took a no-hit bid into the seventh at Detroit and Sam Horn, playing only his second game this season, homered twice and drove in four runs.

Clark (6-4) allowed six hits, struck out six and walked one in 8 1/3 innings. Bill Gullikson (12-9) gave up seven runs in three-plus innings.

Mariners 4, Royals 1

Erik Hanson (11-12) scattered five hits over 8 1/3 innings at the Kingdome to break his four-game losing streak. Mike Magnante (1-2) gave up four runs and five hits in five innings, struck out three and walked none.

Fan fallout

NEW YORK (AP) — The Yankees called it destiny. The Red Sox said it was a damned shame. What it was, was one of the most incredible finishes to a baseball game ever.

Players, fans and security guards were still buzzing about it Sunday, one day after a 13-year-old boy ran onto the field and saved the Yankees' pennant hopes.

Pinch-hitter Mike Stanley had just hit what appeared to be an easy, game-ending fly ball to left field, giving Boston a 3-1 victory.

But third base umpire Tim Welke was waving his arms wildly, indicating a timeout just as pitcher Greg Harris was making his delivery. After a brief argument with manager Butch Hobson, the game resumed, and the Yankees scored three runs for a 4-3 victory, keeping them three games back of Toronto on the AL East.

"A lot has happened this year to make me feel we might win it all," Stanley said. "It seems to be some sort of destiny that we win this division."

Police wouldn't identify the fan because of his age, but they said he was part of a church group from upstate New York and that he cried before he was released.

Expos narrow gap to four games in East race

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Montreal Expos were down to their last chance of the game, and maybe their last chance of the season.

Down, but not out.

Instead, Wil Cordero kept Montreal in the middle of the NL East race, hitting a two-run single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning that beat first-place Philadelphia 6-5.

NL roundup

Rather than slipping six games behind the Phillies with only 13 left to play, the Expos closed to four games back. Montreal won twice in the three-game set, their last games of the year against Philadelphia.

"This was the hardest series I've ever played in my life," said Montreal's Larry Walker, who reached base in the ninth on a key error. "The young kids on this team never give up. We just keep plugging along, never say die."

"We have to look at the positive side," Phillies catcher Darren Daulton said. "This series was a good experience, good to be involved in even if we lost two of three."

In other games, Atlanta defeated New York 11-2, San Francisco beat Cincinnati

7-3, Colorado defeated Los Angeles 8-5, St. Louis rallied past Pittsburgh 7-6, Florida beat Chicago 2-1 and San Diego downed Houston 6-3.

The Expos, who lost 5-4 Saturday night when they left a runner on third base in the ninth inning against Mitch Williams, also trailed 5-4 this time going into the ninth.

With one out, Delino DeShields singled off Williams (3-6) and stole second. After rookie Rondell White walked, Walker rounded to first baseman John Kruk. The ball caromed off Kruk's chest and Walker slid head-first to beat Kruk's throw to Williams.

Williams, however, insisted first base umpire Charlie Williams missed the call.

"Impact umpiring takes its toll again," the pitcher said. "There's no way in the world he's safe. You can't give a team like them four outs. But he did, and game over."

With the bases loaded, Sean Berry popped up to Kruk. Cordero followed with a grounder between third baseman Dave Hollins and the bag for the win.

Tim Scott (7-2) was the winning pitcher.

Braves 11, Mets 2

Tom Glavine became the first NL pitcher in more than 20 years to win 20 games in three consecutive seasons as the Braves battered the Mets to maintain their NL West lead at three games over San Francisco.

Glavine (20-5), the NL's first 20-game winner this season, went six innings, allowing nine hits, two runs, walking one and striking out four.

Otis Nixon had three hits in the Braves' 14-hit attack off Pete Schourek (3-12) and three Mets relievers.

Giants 7, Reds 3

Matt Williams hit two home runs and San Francisco left Riverfront Stadium headed in the right direction in the NL West race.

Scott Sanderson (4-2) pitched five innings and gave up four hits, including home runs by Keith Kessinger and Thomas Howard. Bobby Ayala (6-9) was the loser.

Rockies 8, Dodgers 5

Nelson Liriano tripled and drove in three runs as Colorado beat Los Angeles at Mile High Stadium.

Liriano's two-run triple put Colorado ahead for good at 2-1 in the second. His hit came after two walks by Pedro Martinez (10-4), who made his first start after 61 relief appearances.

Armando Reynoso (11-10) was the winner and Darren Holmes got his 24th save.

Marlins 2, Cubs 1

Chris Hammond ended his seven-game losing streak, pitching Florida past Chicago at Wrigley Field.

Hammond (11-11) won for the first time since July 2, and helped himself with a squeeze bunt. Bryan Harvey struck out the side in the ninth for his 45th save in 48 chances.

Steve Trachsel lost his major league debut, giving two runs and four hits in seven innings. He struck out five and walked one. Jeff Cone hit his 11th homer in the first inning for the Marlins.

Cardinals 7, Pirates 6

Mark Whiten hit a two-out, two-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning that lifted St. Louis over Pittsburgh.

Whiten's double off Mark Dewey (1-2) gave him 96 RBIs. A pair of walks set up the winning hit.

The Pirates took the lead in the top of the ninth on pinch-hitter Dave Clark's two-out, two-run homer off Mike Perez (7-2).

Padres 6, Astros 3

Phil Plantier hit his 32nd home run and San Diego won at Houston.

Plantier hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning. Kevin Higgins drove in three runs for the Padres.

Andy Ashby (3-9) pitched seven innings for the win and Mark Davis closed for his fourth save. Darryl Kile (15-7) was the loser.

'Seinfeld,' 'Picket Fences' take best series; cable TV, HBO shine at Emmys

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Six years ago, when the Emmy Awards first opened the door for cable television, Home Box Office acted the part of the polite newcomer and claimed just three statuettes.

At Sunday's 45th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards, an emboldened HBO reflected the growing strength and broad creative reach of cable TV, winning more trophies than any of the traditional networks: CBS, ABC or NBC.

"I don't think the generation growing up now is going to say broadcast and cable," HBO Chairman Michael Fuchs said afterward, predicting that all TV will be seen as a seamless unit. "We broke the barrier."

The cable channel won 17 Emmys, including 11 creative arts awards given in a Saturday ceremony. NBC came in second with 16 awards, followed by CBS with 14 and ABC with 12.

Broadcast networks have been nervously watching their dominance ebb as viewers gain more choices through cable. Sunday's Emmy Awards bolstered critics' arguments that network quality is fading as well.

The ceremony, hosted by Angela Lansbury, was broadcast by ABC from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

Big series winners with three trophies each were NBC's Seinfeld, named outstanding comedy series, and CBS' Picket Fences, which won the best drama series Emmy.

"We started off so small it's going to be easy to thank people because there's like two people to thank here that even knew we were on," said series star Jerry Seinfeld as he accepted the award.

Seinfeld costar Michael Richards was named best supporting actor in a comedy for his role as the eccentric Kramer. Writer Larry David took home an Emmy for a notorious Seinfeld episode about masturbation.

Roseanne Arnold, who has sounded off about her top-rated series' lack of Emmys, was named outstanding lead actress in a comedy series for Roseanne. But she wasn't even there.

Co-star Laurie Metcalf won her second consecutive Emmy for supporting actress in a comedy, giving the ABC show a total of three awards in its five-year history.

A trio of honors also went to HBO's send-up of reality-based TV movies, The Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas-Cheerleader Murdering Mom. Holly Hunter was named best actress in a miniseries or special for the movie. Picket Fences stars Tom Skerritt and Kathy Baker, who play husband and wife Jimmy and Jill Brock, were honored as best actor and actress in a drama.

Ted Danson's win as best actor in a comedy series for Cheers wasn't enough to push the NBC series past The Mary Tyler Moore Show to become the most-honored program in Emmy history.

Cheers ended up with a total 28 awards in its 11 year run; Mary Tyler Moore has 29.

Moore won set a record herself Sunday, winning her seventh career trophy for the Lifetime cable network movie Stolen Babies to tie former costar Ed Asner's top Emmy acting tally.

When HBO claimed its awards in 1988, two of the three were for the documentary Dear America: Letters Home From Vietnam.

History proved a gold mine this year as well, with the HBO movies Stalin, about the murderous Soviet dictator, and Barbarians at the Gate, a comedic look at the R.J.R. Nabisco takeover, tying for the best made-for-TV movie award.

The networks, much lambasted for their instant, ripped-from-the-headlines movies, didn't have a single entry in the category.

PBS also gave the networks grief. It picked up nine trophies, including a best actor in a miniseries or special award for Robert Morse's portrayal of writer Truman Capote in Tru.

CBS' Northern Exposure — with a leading 16 nominations — was shut out. It was last year's big winner with six awards.

Lansbury, star of Murder, She Wrote, lost her 13th bid for an award when Baker took the drama actress trophy.

The Emmy Awards program came in slightly under its allotted three hours, but its conciseness left little room for spontaneity or memorable moments.

The show appeared unaffected by a boycott launched by competing networks angered over an exclusive four-year deal signed by ABC and the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences.

CBS, NBC and Fox Broadcasting Co. executives and publicists were missing, but plenty of their stars were on hand.

Astronauts nab satellite, get ready for return

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Discovery's astronauts wrapped up on-board experiments today while enjoying the success of their last major job — the retrieval of an orbiting telescope.

"We've finished the primary objectives on our mission ... so I guess we're ready to come home," commander Frank Culbertson Jr. said during a space-to-ground news conference this morning.

On Sunday, astronaut Daniel Bursch reached out with the shuttle robot arm and snagged a 7,000-pound reusable platform on which the telescope and a spectrograph were mounted.

He set the ultraviolet telescope free last Monday so it could study stars and interstellar gas. After Discovery returns to Kennedy Space Center in Florida, scientists will get back the telescope, along with data on dozens of objects up to 6 billion light years away.

Discovery is scheduled to land at 4:28 a.m. CDT Tuesday.

Culbertson said he's not apprehensive about making the first shuttle landing in darkness at Kennedy.

"We're well trained for it," Culbertson told reporters. "All you have to do is just decide what's different and fly the airplane appropriately. We can see all the landing aids that we need to, and I'm sure it will work out just fine."

Before ending their eighth day in orbit Sunday, astronauts turned off one of Discovery's three electricity-generating fuel cells for 24 hours. NASA wants to see how easily it restarts after being shut down, a process that would be necessary during a space docking. The fuel cell was to be restarted this morning.

Mission Control awakened the five-man crew today to a bluesy rendition of "Heartbreak Hotel" by the Houston-area astronaut band Max Q. Discovery astronaut Carl Walz, nicknamed "Elvis," sang lead vocals.

"That's pretty unique to get woken up by yourself," Walz said.

Discovery's astronauts have accomplished everything they set out to do on their nine-day flight despite last-minute snags.

Communications problems forced 1 1/2-hour delays in last week's releases of the telescope and an experimental communications satellite, now in a 22,300-mile-high orbit.

And Walz and James Newman had to contend with a jammed toolbox door at the end of their seven-hour spacewalk Thursday to test Hubble Space Telescope repair equipment.
