

Energy Crisis Could Darken Christmas Shopping

NEW YORK (UPI) — Santa Claus' reindeer don't use gasoline but the fuel crisis still may put a damper on Christmas.

The shortage could hurt Christmas shopping sales if things get worse in the next two or three weeks according to executives in selected department stores queried in UPI's annual shopping outlook survey.

Already it has made a difference. Many Yule lighting displays are out. Some stores will be dimmed after dark, although they will be open.

Instead of the traditional luxuries and frumpieries, Christmas gift purchases are expected to run heavily to sweaters and warm clothing and to games and home entertainment items such as record players and TV sets because many people expect to stay home more than in past winters.

Experts in national merchandising have been predicting Christmas sales this year would exceed last year's by 8 to 10 per cent. Gimbel's president Paul A. Salomone said he would be delighted but surprised if things turned out that well in New York. "I expect a more modest increase," he said.

Two other large New York department stores, Bloomingdale's and Lord & Taylor, took much the same stand.

Some price cutting was noted in New York stores along with special sales for charge customers.

Boston store managers said they haven't yet seen any clear buying trend for this Christmas except for warmer clothing. Charles Colar, manager of Filene's children's department, said parents are stocking up on warm sleepwear for kids.

Merchandise managers in New Hampshire and Maine expected good sales increases. Howland's in Concord, N.H., predicted a 15 per cent rise. The Sears, Roebuck and Mammoth Mart chains in Maine also forecast gains but on a much more modest scale.

In Philadelphia, Mar Fisher, of Strawbridge & Clothier, said, "If business continues as it has been we'll have a very good Christmas. He said color television receivers are selling well. Both Wanamaker's and Gimbel's in Philadelphia said Yule sales will be as successful as last year or more so.

Marjory Windt of the Garfinkel chain in Washington said Christmas prospects are excellent with such odd items as a $500 silver-plated crab and a $350 solid brass teacart already selling well.

Chairman Harold Broeky of Rich's, Atlanta's largest store, said even though November sales have leveled off, Christmas business should exceed last year's by 6 to 7 per cent. Robert Regenstein, head of Atlanta's century-old Regenstein department store, saw a 10 per cent increase over last Christmas. Other Georgia stores, including Kessler's in Atlanta, Cullum's in Augusta and Vick's in Columbus predicted gains of 5 to 10 per cent.

Higbee's in Cleveland said only another international crisis could interfere with good Christmas sales in its area. But the company said deliveries of all except the bulkiest and heaviest merchandise are being discouraged to save gasoline.

The huge Hudson store chain headquartered in Detroit agreed with forecasts that sales this Christmas will be up 8 to 10 per cent. But for the first time Hudson's has no huge Yule tree outside its main store and all lighting is subdued. Crowley's department store in Detroit was less confident, but General Manager Dick Baker said sales would be at least as good as last year.

Louis Goldblatt, head of the moderate-priced Chicago department store chain, expects total sales to be ahead of last year's, although not equal to the 16 per cent gain his store enjoyed in the first half of this year. Sears, Roebuck predicted a 9 per cent gain in Chicago. Marshall Field, the city's biggest store, also said prospects are excellent.

Stix, Baer & Fuller, the St. Louis department store, expects a moderate increase over last year. It also reported a brisk demand for home entertainment merchandise and attributed it to the belief of many people that they may have to stay home more this winter.

Downtown stores in New Orleans said sales will be about the same as last year but the addition of new branch stores may increase total Christmas sales 6 or 7 per cent. The D.H. Holmes store, one of the largest, said it expected "a strong Christmas season."

Joske's in Houston said simply, "We're expecting a larger Christmas than last year," and added "the most noticeable trend is a big demand for fine sweaters. Obviously many are being bought for gifts."

Los Angeles store managers think sales would be close to those of last Christmas. General Manager Philip Egan of Ohrbach's said the only effect of the fuel shortage in southern California probably would be an unprecedented demand for thermal underwear, blankets and heavier clothing.

Chairman H. Vernon of Amfac, a San Francisco conglomerate that operates four large retail chains, said "the general outlook is for an improvement over last year—a doggone good Christmas." He noted that the shopping season is a couple of days longer than last year because Thanksgiving came earlier. He also said he saw no evidence of people shying away from higher priced merchandise.

Macy's in San Francisco also was optimistic and said downtown stores should do better than in recent seasons because the new Bay Area Rapid Transit system provides fast transport from all over the area.

HOUSE SPEAKER SAYS Nixon Tries To Distort Energy Crises History

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has tried to distort history and blame Congress for energy shortages "deeply rooted" in his own policy, House Speaker Carl Albert said Saturday.

In a 22-page statement, Albert said that Congress already had given Nixon most of the emergency powers he requested Nov. 7 or the legislation he wanted already was in the works. The President accused Congress of ignoring persistent warnings — beginning two years ago — about impending energy shortages.

Nixon Plans Address On Energy Shortages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will go on nationwide television Sunday evening to announce "some pretty strong, tough actions" to cope with growing fuel shortages, including a possible ban on Sunday gasoline sales and rationing of home heating oil.

Nixon announced his plan for a brief address to the nation midway through an hour-long meeting Saturday morning with White House energy chief John A. Love and domestic counselor Melvin R. Laird. The speech will begin at 6 p.m. CST.

Reliable sources indicated that among the restrictions Nixon had decided to impose were Sunday closings of gasoline stations to discourage weekend driving, and mandatory rationing of heating oil for homes and businesses.

He was not expected to order rationing or a heavy new tax on gasoline, but sources said he might also act to shorten business hours at shopping centers and to make mandatory the 50 mile-per-hour speed limit he asked motorists to observe voluntarily nearly two weeks ago.

The President said he wanted to forewarn Americans "how everybody must cooperate so they can avoid any suffering — but everybody is going to have to do some sacrificing in order to handle the energy crisis."

Love withheld details until a briefing for reporters Sunday in advance of Nixon's speech. It was learned that the President's advisers had recommended cutting heating oil allocations to home owners by 15 per cent and to commercial businesses by as much as 25 per cent.

Sources said a ban on weekend gasoline sales would extend from 9 p.m. Saturdays to midnight Sundays.

After his conference with Love and Laird, the President met for about 40 minutes with Bryce Harlow, his chief of congressional relations, presumably to review the prospects for quick passage of legislation giving him sweeping energy-conserving authority. An emergency energy bill already has cleared the Senate and could win House approval next week.

AGAINST ISRAEL Arab Speaker Urges Fighting

By United Press International
Foreign ministers from 16 Arab nations opened a conference in Algiers Saturday and the first speakers to address the meeting said chances for a new Middle East war are increasing. One envoy urged the Arabs to return to the battlefield.

The Israeli military command charged that Egyptian troops on the West Bank of the canal committed five cease-fire violations, including light weapons fire and attempts at grabbing more territory. One Israeli soldier was slightly wounded.

On the Cairo-Suez highway, Egyptian and Israeli military officials met for the third consecutive day at Kilometer 101 and failed again to agree on the withdrawal of troops along the Suez Canal—the issue that could make or break the Middle East cease-fire.

The roadside talks, which are showing some signs of progress, will be reconvened Sunday and are expected to be resumed daily. "Apparently many problems have not reached solution," said the Israeli national radio.

At the conference in the Algerian capital, Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad of Egypt warned the Israelis.

"We are meeting here to mobilize Arab efforts for the battle."

"The chances of battle are increasing because the last few days have proved that Israel insists on aggression and expansion and the United States continues to back Israeli aggression."

Algerian Foreign Minister Abdel Aziz Bouteflika, chairman of the conference, said, "we are not approaching a settlement. We think that the battle should continue until the objectives of our nation are realized."

If the Egyptian-Israeli talks on the troop withdrawals are successful, it would make possible a Middle East peace conference in December.

Death Tolls For Holiday

By United Press International
The Thanksgiving holiday weekend traffic death toll mounted steadily Saturday as authorities studied whether shortened supplies of gasoline or slower driving might reduce the rate of accidents.

There were a few indications that fears of the gas shortage kept some people home for the long weekend, but there were no reports of travelers being marooned for lack of fuel.

In Massachusetts and Vermont, officials said the mandatory 50 mile per hour speed limit was being observed "quite well," but there was some speeding, mostly by out-of-state vehicles.

A Massachusetts State police spokesman said "the ones that are involved in serious accidents are going over the limit, but it is generally quiet."

Prior to the start of the 102-hour holiday period, the National Safety Council had predicted between 625 and 725 persons would be killed in traffic accidents during the period. It was predicted another 27,000 to 32,000 would suffer disabling injuries.

A United Press International count at 2 p.m. CST showed 337 persons had been killed in traffic accidents.

Nixon Asked To Support Private Contributions Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon was asked Saturday to counter some of the taunt of Watergate by supporting a measure which would provide the most sweeping reform of election campaign practices in history.

In a letter, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., asked Nixon to endorse a bill coming before the Senate next week which would ban private contributions in presidential and congressional elections and provide tax dollars to fund those campaigns. The sponsors fear Nixon will veto it.

"There are few steps that can better signify to the public our collective determination to reform our electoral processes and to restore faith in government than to enact a comprehensive system of public financing of federal elections," wrote Schweiker, part of a bipartisan coalition which claims the support of 51 senators.

The proposal, sponsored by Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, Pa., and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is to be offered Wednesday as an amendment to a bill to raise the $465 billion ceiling on the national debt. Expiration of the existing ceiling Nov. 30 would hamper government financial operations and make the bill difficult to veto.

The debt ceiling bill has passed the House so the fate of the reforms, if the Senate approves, would rest with a conference committee.

ON DAY OFF Astros Catch Up On Housecleaning

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab 3's astronauts took the day off Saturday, sleeping late and catching up on housecleaning chores so they will be ready for 11 weeks of intensive space research.

Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue slept two hours late Saturday, waking at 8:15 a.m. CST to the song, "Paralyzed," by the Stardust Cowboys, a noisy combination of band and song.

"It's time to get up and enjoy your day off," ground commander Robert Crippen told them. "Our team of flight controllers has been practicing

Vietnam Violations Increase

SAIGON (UPI) — Truce violations rose to the highest total in a month Saturday and nearly 100 persons on both sides died in the fighting, the South Vietnamese military command reported.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, spokesman for the South Vietnamese command, reported 111 cease-fire violations in the 24 hours ending at noon today. It was the highest such total since Oct. 24, when there were 120 in the corresponding period.

Hien listed 53 Communists, 34 government soldiers and 11 civilians killed in the fighting. He said 190 government troops and six civilians were wounded and four government soldiers and 32 civilians were missing. All the battles were small skirmishes.

He announced that 12 soldiers and nine civilians were wounded in Friday's rocket attack against Pleiku Air Base in the western Central Highlands, 230 miles northeast of Saigon. Hien said the 17 rockets also damaged a C-7 Caribou transport plane, three trucks and two buildings. Military sources said the Caribou was destroyed along with two fire trucks.

In neighboring Cambodia, the government drive to recapture strategic Highway 4 stalled Saturday in face of extremely heavy rebel mortar fire and ground fighting, UPI field reporters said.

The reporters said government troops under a constant shower of mortar fire advanced only about 100 yards from the positions they captured Friday about a mile south of Mohasing, 35 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

Highway 4, the truck convoy route connecting Phnom Penh with the deep water port of Kompong Som, 134 miles to the southwest, was blocked by the rebels since Nov. 11.

TO SCREEN APPEALS Bickel Endorses 'Mini-Court' Plan

Hayakawa Dies After Long Illness

TOKYO (UPI) — Seisue Hayakawa, the Japanese-born actor best remembered for his role as the swaggering prison camp commandant in the film "The Bridge on the River Kwai," died Saturday after a lengthy illness. He was 83.

A spokesman at Kyoundo hospital said the cause of death was softening of the brain complicated by pneumonia. In the movie, "The Bridge on the River Kwai," a World War II story of life of a British battalion in a Japanese POW camp in Thailand, Hayakawa played opposite British actor Alec Guinness, the commander of the Allied prisoners.

Hayakawa came to the United States from Japan when he was a young man to study political economy at the University of Chicago. He arrived in Hollywood in 1916 and within a year he was a star.

From 1917 to 1927 he appeared in dozens of silent movies and was ranked in popularity and box office standing with stars as William S. Hart, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, John Barrymore and Pearl White.

He made one talking picture in Hollywood and in 1936 went to France where he lived for 13 years.

In 1949 he returned to the United States and starred in "Tokyo Joe" with Humphrey Bogart. After that he made a picture with Claudette Colbert, "Three Came Home," based on the real life adventures of an American wife and child in prison camps during the Japanese wartime occupation of Borneo.

Lawyers, ACLU Publish Impeachment Information

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four Washington lawyers published a legal study Saturday isolating 28 specific "indictable common crimes" for which they said President Nixon could be impeached. The 169-page volume, entitled "Bribery, and Other High Crimes and Misdemeanors," seeks to link Watergate and related events to violations of law such events may represent and to answer the contention that Nixon cannot be impeached because he has violated no crime.

Pioneer 10 Craft Nears Jupiter's Radiation Belts

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — The Pioneer 10 spacecraft zoomed at 25,000 miles an hour Saturday into the region where it can encounter Jupiter's "bow shock." The event should occur within a six-day period. For the sake of Pioneer's safety, the later the better.

An early bow shock would suggest the worst scientists have guessed about the size and deadliness of the radiation belt Pioneer must traverse before arriving near the giant planet Dec. 3.

If the radiation is the most potent that scientists consider possible, the circuitry of the $100 million spacecraft would be crippled or destroyed. The radiation is thought to be about 1 million times the earth's own Van Allen radiation belt.

The bow shock happens where the solar wind-ionized gas flowing out from the sun at 1 million miles an hour—hits the magnetic field inclosing Jupiter in a vast tear-shaped envelope.

The effect is like that of a bridge buttress in a stream, or the sonic shock at the nose of a jet plane going through the sound barrier. Solar wind directions changes drastically.

Pioneer itself should not feel any kind of shock, but its instruments will measure the bow shock of Jupiter in the solar wind.

When Pioneer discovers the bow shock will reflect the extent and strength of the magnetic field, even though Pioneer probably will have 1.1 million miles to fly before the magnetic field actually is entered.

The spacecraft, now a half billion miles from earth, has 5.8 million miles to travel before Dec. 3 when it hits its target, a point 80,000 miles off the giant planet, which is 1,000 times the volume of earth. Then Pioneer is scheduled eventually to escape the solar system.

LONDON (UPI) — Marjorie Wallace, a 19-year-old blonde from Indianapolis, Ind., began her year-long reign as Miss World 1973 Saturday—the first American girl to win the title in the contest's 23-year history.

Tears glistened in her eyes, but she kept a smile on her face while the former Miss World, Belinda Green of Australia, placed the crown on her head Friday night.

"I can't believe it," she said. "I just came over here to do the best I could and now I've won, it's unbelievable, but it's marvelous."

"It's even better, because it's the first time that the United States has ever taken the Miss World crown," she said.

MORE THAN AUTOMAKERS Strikes Plague Union Leaders

By EDWARDS, LECHTZN UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — The one thing the U.S. automakers didn't want, going into the 1974 model year, was a major strike.

A repeat of the devastating strikes of 1967 and 1970 could have sent already sluggish sales into a nose dive because of the worsening fuel situation.

With only one short strike to mar a near-perfect record, the United Auto Workers and the "Big Three" auto companies have just about insured labor peace until 1976.

Even though the automakers had to give in on a few "management prerogatives" they said they couldn't give up, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler appear to have gotten through the 1973 round of auto contract talks in better shape than the United Auto Workers.

At meeting after meeting during the ratification vote, union officials were shouted down. While skilled tradesmen were voting against the contract, production workers were hardly giving it overwhelming approval as in the past.

For Leonard Woodcock, president of the nation's second largest union since the death of Walter P. Reuther in 1970, this year was his last at the "big table." He will be 65 before the 1976 round of auto contract talks begin and new leadership will be at the helm.

If the union leadership is out of touch with its men in the plants, as some critics charge, some changes can be expected at next year's UAW constitutional convention in Los Angeles.

The Detroit Free Press, in a recent column, asked readers: "Do you think big labor unions are still responsive to the desires of the rank-and-file?"

Hardly pretending to be a scientific poll, the results still showed 85.6 per cent of the respondents saying "No."

There was hardly that kind of criticism from the men Woodcock faced during the long hours of bargaining that began July 16 at General Motors and ended last Monday with a settlement at GM to avoid a repeat of the 67-day strike three years ago.

George B. Morris Jr., the GM vice president who handled the bargaining for the world's largest automaker, said the discussions this year were the "most statesmanlike" since he sat down at the table in 1948.

Add Loving Touch To Those Personal Christmas Pictures

By Aileen Snoddy

A most successful Christmas gift makes the receiver feel it is filled with personal thought. One such item is a home custom-framed photograph — of you, your family, a recent baby, bride or bridegroom, family or friends. It can have very special meaning.

Here are some tips of what may please:
For grandparents — new color portraits of grandchildren, alone or with the family. For Christmas giving frame portraits of children or a family group in bright red or green velvet or a new cotton plaid velvet. That executive portrait of Dad will look well in a cotton suede frame in a solid brown of geometric pattern.

For parents — an 11x14-inch size is a good choice for parents of a recent graduate, bride or bridegroom. Choose a fabric which would look well in den, living room or bedroom. Keep it in the same mood and/or color tone of the area in which it will hang. For a modern den, a tailored fabric in small checks or stripes; for a bedroom a solid pastel; for a living room a floral.

For friends — school photographs, a favorite vacation scene, a restored "antique" portrait. Cotton damask, brocade, velvet are all good choices for framing.

For those who receive such a fabric-covered gift, it's simple to keep cotton-base fabric frames fresh and new looking. Stir a few spoonfuls of detergent in a small dish of water. With an old toothbrush scoop the foam off the top, excluding the water. Brush fabric gently. Do not rinse. In an hour your frame should dry and look like new.

(Suggestions on how to make a fabric frame are from designer Helene Batoff.)

Required materials are: wood frame; piece of fabric at least 1-inch longer and 1-inch wider than frame to be covered (cotton is best) — silk and some synthetics absorb the glue and look messy; all-purpose adhesive glue; ribbon (optional).

How to Cover: Buy a wooden frame without carving, rounded or flat but smooth. Remove backing and glass. Lay frame (right side down) on a piece of fabric (wrong side up). Cut fabric around frame, leaving a 1/2-inch border all the way around. Spread glue along outer rim of frame back. Wrap material around frame, pulling to make sure it's smooth and straight. Press down with fingers until fabric adheres to the frame. Let dry a few minutes. Miter corners, using additional glue. Cut fabric from inside of frame, leaving 1/4-inch border all the way around; snip into corners. Spread glue along inside rim of back of frame; wrap material around frame, again pulling to make sure it's smooth and straight. Press down with fingers until fabric adheres to the frame. Optional: trim inside edge with banding of ribbon, gluing it in place.

Keeping track of sound is no problem with a modular solid state unit that has all the works — AM-FM-Stereo FM radio, record changer and eight-track tape player. (Zenith Corp.)

AT DPS SCHOOL Hill To Give Rundown On New Penal Codes

AUSTIN (UPI)—Attorney General John Hill will give Texas lawmen a rundown on the state's new penal code, which goes into effect Jan. 1, at a Department of Public Safety training school Tuesday through Thursday.

Other featured speakers include Wilson E. Speir, director of the Department of Public Safety; assistant attorney general Joe B. Dibrell, chief of Hill's enforcement division; and Fred Tolar, director of the Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education.

The training school—sponsored by the DPS, the attorney general's office, the Law Enforcement Standards and Education Commission, and the Texas District and County Attorneys' Association—is expected to draw 60 regional DPS training coordinators and certified police training instructors from all over the state.

"Since these officers have to make rapid decisions concerning law enforcement in performing their day-to-day duties, it is essential that they be kept abreast of the latest development in penal law," Hill said.

The speeches will be videotaped and played back in a series of statewide seminars for Texas peace officers on the new penal code, which was revised by the 1973 legislature. The revised sections go into effect Jan. 1.

Wife Wants To Remind Us Of MIA

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—Barbara Fieszel begins each day with an empty feeling, a feeling she has had since the last American prisoner of war came home from North Vietnam.

Each day she sets out to remind the public that Air Force Maj. Clifford Fieszel has not returned, nor have 1,300 others officially listed as missing in action.

Barbara Fieszel is an MIA wife. She last heard of her husband one week after he was shot down over North Vietnam on Sept. 30, 1968, when a North Vietnamese newspaper confirmed a Radio Hanoi report of his capture.

Since then, nothing.

Efforts Are Not Easy

Her efforts to keep public interest in the MIAs alive has not been easy. A display booth she and others built at a Tulsa shopping center was torn apart while she was repairing the booth, someone stole her purse.

The purse contained little of value, except a letter from the Air Force, identifying her as an MIA wife, which she is supposed to carry with her at all times.

Mrs. Fieszel has been described by her colleagues as "just plain cheerful," but the recent events left her depressed and, at one point, crying.

"I don't even know how to describe how upset I was after all that. I was beginning to feel maybe we shouldn't even have tried to have the booth out there. It seems like everything we've tried to do the past few weeks has had something go wrong with it."

It gets very discouraging when you feel you're not getting any support for something like this.

Petitions Handed Out

At the recent Tulsa State Fair, the MIA group handed out petitions to be sent to the nation's elected officials demonstrating support for the MIA cause.

The response disappointed and upset the women.

"Many people who came by told us they thought it was all over, all the MIA's had been accounted for."

She said the MIA families seemed uniformly against the process of "presumptive death" used in the cases of 398 men who were never accounted for in Korea. They want "positive proof."

When her husband, then a captain, was shot down he had been in Indochina only two months and was on his 25th combat mission.

He left behind an 11-year-old daughter and a 7-year-old son.

"They remember him quite vividly. We've tried very hard to keep hope alive in our family and in our children. It's been very hard. The older they get the more they understand what the chances are. But I think that is the only way you can live in a situation like this—with hope."

TV In Review

NEW YORK (UPI)—The third television network shoe has now been dropped, and we can all relax until January.

All, that is, except those actors, writers, directors and so on involved in the programs eliminated by the National Broadcasting Company, the Columbia Broadcasting System and the American Broadcasting Company in their mid-season shakeups. They're already looking for work.

ABC was the last of the networks to reveal its second- and third- season lineups. It knocks out six programs, two of them veterans that have been milked for about all they are worth — "Room 222" and "Love, American Style" — and four introduced last fall with high hopes that never materialized — "Adam's Rib," "Griff," "The New Temperatures Rising" and "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice."

Actually, "Temperatures" was not all new. This comedy hospital series of 1972 retained its essential elements while injecting comedian Paul Lynde as the head man. Apparently, the surgery didn't work in the cold, objective opinion of the ratings.

A Tuesday Replacement

ABC will replace "The New Temperatures Rising" at 8 p.m. Tuesdays with the half-hour "Happy Days," a situation comedy with Tom Bosley about a family of five in the period a decade ago.

"The Cowboys" at 8 Wednesdays—could Westerns be coming back?—is a 30-minute affair starring Moses Gunn, Beverly Garland and Robert Carradine. It replaces "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice," which never got it all together despite all that inter-intra-marital togetherness.

If that "The Cowboys" title sounds familiar, it should, it was a rather recent theater movie starring John Wayne leading a flock of kids pressed into service for a cattle drive that already has been seen on television.

The irregularly scheduled "Doc Elliot," starring James Franciscus, new this season, becomes a weekly attraction at 9 p.m. Wednesday, thus moving the veteran "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" series to 9 Saturdays, replacing "Griff."

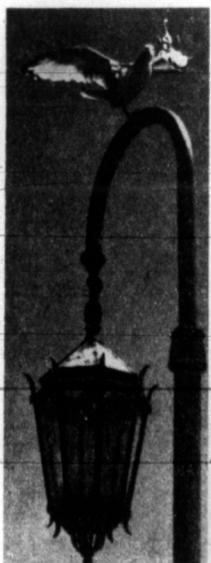

"Chopper One," a police item, and "Firehouse," the title is self-explanatory, take over the 7-8 period Thursday with half-hour shows. They shove "Toma" into the 9 p.m. Friday spot as a replacement for "Love, American Style."

Show is Moved

"The Six Million Dollar Man," with Lee Majors, another occasional one-hour show, Saturdays, is moved to 8:30 Fridays, pushing the veteran "The Odd Couple" back to a 7 start.

All this, and CBS and NBC too, which announced their changes some time ago. NBC drops four series, adds two and changes the time slots of several programs. CBS replaces "Calucci's Dept.," "Roll Out" and "The New Perry Mason," all new last fall. If you are confused, an abacus might help.

ABC has settled its problem with talk-host Dick Cavett by making a new deal that gives him 26 once-a-week, 90-minute programs for the next year as against his present deal for five on consecutive late nights every month. In short, 26 instead of 60 shows.

Social Security Q And A

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 North Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.)

By HOWARD L. WEATHERLY
Q. I am single and in my late thirties. Because of being severely disabled, I have never worked. My father, who was my sole support, died recently. Can I receive social security checks as his dependent?
A. If you were disabled before age 22, you may be eligible for monthly social security benefits on your father's record. Telephone the social security office as soon as possible.

Q. When I apply for social security retirement payments, what evidence will I need?
A. Since your age is an important factor for retirement payments, you must furnish evidence of your date of birth. This would be your birth or baptismal certificate, if you have one.

If your wife and children are applying also, you will need evidence of your marriage and your children's birth certificates. The social security number of all applicants will also be needed.

To Your Good Health 'Reversing' Tubal Ligation

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a tubal ligation two years ago. My husband agreed to this. Now he says he would not have agreed if he had not seen me in labor and in so much pain. We have three girls.

He wants me to have the operation reversed. He thinks there may be hope. I said no, he said yes.

Please write about what to expect, what's new in techniques, and what are my chances of conceiving again? I am 30.

—Mrs. T.

Questions about "reversing" tubal ligations are coming to be almost a daily occurrence, and today I had a double dose of the questions. Another woman said she thought she had agreed only to having the tubes tied, not cut and they could be "untied."

Tubal ligation means cutting the Fallopian tubes and tying the ends, so there is no chance of an ovum passing through either tube to reach the uterus and start a pregnancy.

The inside of these tubes is no bigger than a small pencil lead. After all, the tubes only have to be big enough to permit passage of a microscopic ovum.

Trying to fit the ends back together is a neat problem, obviously. And even if you succeed in doing it, there is bound to be some scarring. It doesn't take very much scar tissue to block the tubes.

Some surgeons have tried using fine plastic tubing, which may sound foolproof but it isn't. The ovum has to travel over artificial rather than natural tissue. Whether the tubes remain open is problematical.

Most recent figures I have seen indicate that reopening the tubes is technically successful only 5 to 10 per cent of the time, but pregnancy has not followed in all of these cases.

(For one thing, by the time a woman has decided to have her tubes tied, then changed her mind, and finally gone through the reversal procedure, she probably has passed the most fertile time in her life, and is less likely under any circumstances to become pregnant again.)

So in answer to these people who now want the tubes "untied," all I can say is: if you want to spend the money on the chance of success, that is your choice. But do so only with the understanding that chances of succeeding are not very good, and no surgeon can guarantee anything more than that.

To those who are contemplating surgical sterilization as a means of birth control, don't have the operation in the first place without expecting it to be permanent.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have had athlete's foot for several years. Now it has gone under my toenails. What advice could you give me?
—B.S.

For the average case of athlete's foot, I recommend any of the ordinary drugstore remedies — but used for some time after the trouble seems to have disappeared, because this ailment has a tendency to recur unless it is completely subdued.

But when it is spreading under the nails, I have to give another answer. There is no home remedy that will help it, and I think the only sound advice is to tell you to see a dermatologist or a podiatrist.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes night sweats and excessive perspiration in everything I do, whether work or play?
—R.N.J.

One possibility is nervousness. Another possibility, especially among older people, is some chronic infection. It may not be an obvious one, and may require some searching on your doctor's part.

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To become more familiar with the subject, write for Dr. Thosteson's

She spoke of the servicemen who were overseas and gave blood while in the service.

She said, "If an overseas serviceman's immediate family is hospitalized and needs blood, all a chapter does is notify our blood center in Wichita Falls or Wichita, Kan., and the blood will be furnished for the patient. The patient will be billed for the administration only."

We need someone to go to Clarendon to hold a MM First Aid class Dec. 1. If any of our instructors can go and teach this class, call 669-7121. Transportation will be paid for by the chapter.

The Red Cross Youth enrollment in our schools is beginning to come in.

Horace Mann Elementary School with Susie Lindsley ordered six magazines and enrolled their students with $40.75. Lamar with Mrs. Nation, teacher sponsor, ordered eight magazines and enrolled their students with $21.30. Baker Elementary School, with David Maher, teacher sponsor, ordered seven magazines and enrolled their school with $29.88. Austin, with Mrs. Lois Marsh, teacher sponsor, ordered 16 magazines and enrolled their students with $73.45. Sam Houston 7th grade, with Mrs. Ray Thompson, teacher sponsor, ordered three magazines and enrolled with $12.64. Pampa Junior High enrolled with $102.50, their teacher sponsor for the year is Gaylene Skaggs.

All other schools must get their Red Cross News order in next week, as Dec. 1 is our deadline.

The Pampa Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Nightmare Time In D.C.

Wonder of wonders! The Government of the United States has been without a Vice President for several weeks now and the world has not come to an end. The stars and planets continue their flights through space as they always have. Day and night follow each other as they have for millions of years. People manage to get born, and to die, as if the vacant slot on the Government's organizational chart were filled. Children, who wouldn't know Mr. Agnew if they met him face to face, continue at their play, their shrill eager voices, their zest for life, making a mockery of the recurring political charade. Producers and consumers each seeking to exchange something they value less for something they value more, meet peacefully in the market place and come away satisfied, just as they did before the "crisis" in Government blew into the headlines, and this despite a million bureaucratic obstacles put in their way. It's all enough to make one wonder. And, no matter how often one puts the thought aside, it stubbornly keeps creeping back. If the nation can get along with a Vice President, as obviously it can, does it really need a President? And, to carry the thought a bit

First Mind, Now Belly

Once government, at any level, assumes the function of TAKING from some in order to GIVE to others, there are no limits to absurdity to which such a concept cannot be pushed. This was brought out in no uncertain terms in Denver, when Gov. John Vanderhoof was confronted by a group of minority student representatives from the University of Colorado, a taxpayer-supported institution. Demanding that another $1.4 million of the taxpayers' money be added to the University's funding level, the "representatives" called upon the Governor to convene a special session of the state legislature to allocate "emergency funds." The additional $1.4 million is required, the "representatives" insisted, to pay for minority students' "basic unmet needs." These "basic unmet needs," it turned out, consist of complete financial aid grants, low cost university housing (not only for the students themselves, but for their families, as well), money with which to purchase books, medical care, and food. One of the student "representatives" complained that there are "students who have to go to the welfare office and ask for food stamps in order to feed their families," adding that there were "hungry students in the group who needed immediate action."

Wit and Whimsy

We call the collection agent for the finance company the loan ringer.

Pioneering, '73: style: being forced to use a hand-cranked can opener.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could turn off your worries when you turn off the bedroom light?

Add to your dictionary of collective nouns: A nitpick of critics.

DUNAGIN'S PEOPLE by Dunagin

OUTRIDER The Practice Of Looking For Enemies

By GARRY WILLS

One of the reasons Mr. Nixon got himself into his Watergate troubles was an enemy shortage. All through his first term, Nixon's varsity team hounded at effete and destructive nabobs of various negativisms — rioters, demonstrators, longhairs. But as the campuses cooled down and the demonstrations ended, panic seized the White House. Where was the foreign money supporting domestic rebels? Why was the CIA so happy with events? Where were the FBI spies on campus? Without an enemy to rail at, the Administration seemed restive, disoriented, so the Huston plan was invented, and the White House sent out scouting teams, men committing a variety of ideologically inspired crimes to find someone — anyone — who was indulging in criminal ideology.

Some young people look back on the sixties with a nostalgia for tear gas, but so do some of those professors who were traumatized by the period. Like Nixon, they still look for enemies to keep their indignant juices running. One magazine just printed a long emotional assault on Father Daniel Berrigan for the way he stirred up students back in 1967.

Father Berrigan is now teaching poetry in Canada — stirring up students in new ways, as he had done long before Vietnam was an issue. But Professor Walter Berns, who is teaching political science in Canada, cannot forgive the priest for all the publicity he got when they were both on the Cornell campus.

Professor Berns argues at length — no, assumes at length — that everything Father Berrigan did, in the way of civil disobedience and preaching, was caused by desire to be noticed, no matter what the cost. I can understand men disagreeing with Father Berrigan's principles, but to claim he had no principle at all, except a public relations instinct, is both too easy and too vile a substitute for argument.

Father Berrigan turned down many opportunities for publicity. He was asked, originally, to write the libretto for Leonard Bernstein's "Mass." (The rumor of this connection seems to have prompted Mr. Nixon's refusal of the invitation to attend an opening performance of "Mass.") Berrigan, imprisoned at the time and hardly basking in the limelight, thought this too "show-biz" a way to do his preaching.

After his release from jail, when his publicity was all dying down, a number of people urged him to accept the request for a lengthy interview in "Playboy." He disapproves of the magazine, and would not grant the request. Whether you agree with him on this or other matters, you have to admit he sticks to his principles.

Professor Berns ranges through all the actions of this priest, giving each the most jaundiced interpretation. We are even told that he insulted a hostess once by not eating her pecan pie — but Berrigan has stomach troubles, something that plagued him badly while he was in jail. When Father Berrigan sent a taped message to the Weathermen, during their period of political bombings, he did not appeal to the teachings of Jesus — and Berns takes this as a sign of unprincipled activity. But few of those who were addressed had Christian backgrounds, and the non-violence that Berrigan preaches is the common element in many religions and philosophies.

Priests, Professor Berns implies, should stick to Jesus, stay away from Buddha, and not indulge in what he calls Father Berrigan's "rather frequent spiritual awakenings." But I thought spiritual awakening, if it comes at all, must come as a series of epiphanies — no man is "saved" by one moment of awareness. Light leads to light — or darkness to further darkness.

Ben Franklin had such a long pig-tail that it almost wouldn't fit on a postage stamp.

But nowadays the fad is with the youngsters. Each of them says he must "do his own thing" but most of them end up doing the very same thing!

A generation ago a beard denoted age. Nowadays a man 40 years old is TOO OLD to grow a beard.

WATCH ON WASHINGTON If There's Hitch On Ford Democrats Could Move In

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON — If any hitch should develop in the confirmation of House Minority Leader Gerald Ford (Rep., Mich.) as vice-president, it would be possible, in theory at least, for the Democrats to wrench the presidency from the Republicans.

The possibility of such a Democratic power coup is created by these conditions:

1. There is a vacancy in the vice-presidency that will not be filled until the Democratic Congress confirms President Nixon's nominee.

2. President Nixon is still under fire on the Watergate affair, the rulings of the U.S. District Court and U.S. Court of Appeals have been against him and there are rumbles of impeachment.

3. House Speaker Carl Albert, a Democrat from Oklahoma, is the man in line for the presidency until such time as Ford is confirmed.

4. A simple majority of the House would be sufficient to impeach the President, and the votes are there if it was a straight partisan matter. The Democrats have a 243-192 edge in the House.

In the Senate, the Democrats do not have a two-thirds majority necessary to convict but it is possible that they could pick up enough Republicans if there was a strong enough case of "high crimes and misdemeanors." There are 56 Democratic senators, 42 Republicans, and two listed as independent.

It is safe to assume that President Nixon is aware of the unusual circumstances that exist in which the Democrats, through a solid partisanship in the House and Senate, might be tempted to oust him and take over the executive branch if there is any long bitter fight over his vice-presidential selection.

Undoubtedly, this was a factor in selecting Ford over the others on his list — former Texas Governor John Connally, New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller, California Governor Ronald Reagan and Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson.

Indications were there would be a lengthy struggle over any of the other four with the possibility that the White House tapes issue would come to a head before his nominee was confirmed.

The precarious position Mr. Nixon is in during the period prior to confirmation of his vice-presidential nominee may be one reason that the President exhibited no great interest in pushing for Vice-President Agnew's resignation.

This was despite Mr. Nixon's rather full knowledge of the enormity of Mr. Agnew's many crimes as executive officer in Baltimore County, as governor of Maryland and his continued acceptance of pay-off money in the executive office building even after he was vice-president.

Up to the day before Mr. Agnew resigned, President Nixon, fully aware that the charges against the former vice-president were "serious and not frivolous," maintained that he would not seek to force Agnew's resignation even if he was indicted.

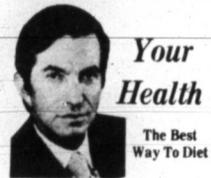

The vice-president, like the president, is elected by all the people," Mr. Nixon said. "He holds that office in his own right, and the decision as to whether he should resign is for him to make."

He has indicated that he will not resign if indicted and, therefore, that decision on his part should be respected.

If there had been public presidential pressure or persuasion, it might have been possible to obtain a "no contest" plea on a felony count and a resignation without granting total amnesty on all federal crimes prior to October 10, 1973.

It is to be assumed that President Nixon's unresolved problems on the White House tapes and the charges of his involvement in the Watergate cover-up were factors in his comments on Mr. Agnew's predicament.

It is also very much on the minds of Democrats in the Senate and House as they approach the job of investigating and confirming Representative Ford. Such an opportunity to engage in a constitutionally legal political coup is unlikely to present itself again in the next 100 years.

Your Health

The Best Way To Diet

By Lawrence Lamb M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have only briefly tried both Dr. Atkins' diet and Dr. Stillman's Quick Loss Diet. I can readily understand how excess fats in Dr. Atkins' diet can be harmful. Having heard both doctors on the same TV talk show at the same time, I still fail to see where Dr. Atkins' diet, which does include two salads (low carbohydrate) per day leaving off all fats would be more harmful than Dr. Stillman's diet which does not contain one gram of carbohydrate.

I have not received satisfactory answers to this question from either my husband's physician or my own. We are both very much overweight and only seem to be able to lose weight on a very low carbohydrate, low fat, high protein diet. My husband has high blood pressure and many related problems. We would very much appreciate an answer from you.

DEAR READER — There's not a dime's worth of difference in the two approaches. The first week of the Atkins diet allows a salad for lunch and dinner, of loosely packed lettuce, or other similar roughage. The amount is "less than one cup." That means the total carbohydrates for the day would be less than four grams. Dr. Atkins refers to this as "biologically zero carbohydrate." And I would agree that you can consider that to be essentially a "no-carbohydrate" diet. That doesn't mean I approve of it.

A properly planned low carbohydrate, low fat, high protein diet to lose weight is all right. Eliminating the fat, however, means it is no longer the Atkins' diet. The principle is to eliminate calories. The two main sources of calories are fats and sweets.

You can plan a diet that includes fresh vegetables, fruits, cereals, lean meats (chicken, fish, beef) that is sufficiently low in calories for safe and sensible weight control. The problem is that many high protein foods also contain a lot of fat. That is why fortified skim milk is good for such diets. It is a source of excellent protein and calcium without overloading the fat intake. Uncreamed cottage cheese is also in this category. Dr. Atkins opposes skim milk and recommends using thick cream, which is not a good source of either calcium or protein.

DEAR DR. LAMB — We have recently moved to an area where the water is extremely hard and has a high alkali content.

So many of our neighbors, young and old, buy bottled spring water for drinking and cooking. Can you tell us if hard water is harmful in any way?

DEAR READER — As a matter of fact, it may be good for your health. Population studies have shown that people who drink "hard water" are less likely to have heart and vascular disease. The difference is slight, though, so I hope no one will think this is the solution to all of his problems.

Water can also be an important source of calcium. A person drinking a reasonable amount of "hard" water each day can get nearly one-fifth of the daily calcium needs that way. Some of the other minerals in the water may also be useful.

THANKSGIVING has been put away and Christmas is just around the corner. Chances are the last left-over turkey sandwich out at your house has been put away, too.

A glance at the calendar will serve as a reminder there are only 25 more shopping days until Christmas.

A couple of days ago The Pampa News received the first 1973 letter to Santa Claus. Because it was the first one received and sparks the Christmas spirit, the letter to St. Nick from little Eddie Morris, 2124 N. Zimmers, is being published in this space today.

Eddie printed and put this note in the mail:

"Dear Santa:
I have been a good boy this year. Please bring me a 9 unit HO-scale diesel locomotive freight set. Also, Evel Knievel set with van and Big Jim rescue rig. Love, Eddie Morris."

Note to Eddie: Your letter has been forwarded to Santa and by the time your mother reads this to you it should be delivered at Santa's workshop at the North Pole. We'll bet a jingle bell Mr. Claus has everything in stock that you asked for. Yes, Eddie, there is a Santa Claus.

THINGS HAVE come to a pretty pass when the President of the United States finds it necessary to reassure the American people that he's not one of the bad guys. That quote of Mr. Nixon's — "I'm no crook" — is bound to be an all-time low in something. Pick your own category.

It would seem to be a sad commentary when the President finds it necessary to keep telling the people he is an honest man. That is supposed to go without saying. Under our rule of law there is the presumption of innocence until proven guilty no matter how strong the circumstantial evidence. It seems fair to suggest that the President and the rest of us should wait until the jury completes deliberations and comes in with the verdict.

That day will come. Somehow or other the truth will rise to the surface as it always does.

THERE HAVE been several telephone calls about Kohoutek's Comet. The callers want to know when you can see it and where to look for it. Best information we can get from the scientists who study things in the sky is that the comet is now visible in the Texas Panhandle, but you have to be in the right place at the right time to get a good look.

Kohoutek will get two show times, they say. These are from right now until Dec. 28 (date of the sun passage) and in January and February.

Currently the comet is best seen before dawn and the best place to see it is out in the country away from city lights. It will be at an angle to the south as the late fall and early winter sunrises move southeast.

January and February views will be after sunset with the tail angled to the left as it streams away from the sun in the southwest.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a speech obviously intended for the ears of Arab oil producers, Undersecretary of State William Porter warned this week about a possible petroleum boycott backlash.

Thus far, the official policy of the United States has been to refrain from any counter-embargo or other retaliatory action against the cutoff of Arab oil.

But Porter seemed to be hinting that some reprisals may be forthcoming if the embargo continues.

I don't know what he had in mind — exactly — but there are a number of things we can do as private citizens to pressure the Arabs into resuming oil exports to America.

The most obvious way to get back at the Arabs for plunging us into an energy crisis would be to switch to Roman numerals in our arithmetical computations.

A Drastic Measure
Admittedly, that is a drastic measure. But the fuel situation clearly calls for extremism. If a sizable majority of the American people stops using Arabic numerals, it will show the Middle East oil nations that we mean business.

Some persons probably will find it difficult to adjust to Roman numerals in bidding at antique auctions and other complicated transactions. Everyone, however, can make at least a symbolic protest by using Roman numerals when buying gasoline.

"Fill 'er up," you can tell the attendant. "It should hold about XIII gallons."

"Sorry," he will reply. "We have a limit today of VII gallons per customer."

Another harsh but appropriate means of retribution would be to refrain from doing any arabesques when you are dancing in ballets.

That manner of revenge would be particularly effective during performances of the ballet "Scheherazade."

Speaking of Scheherazade
And speaking of Scheherazade, we might also consider giving up reading "The Arabian Nights" for the duration of the oil boycott or for 1001 evenings, whichever comes first.

If these pressure tactics fail to bring the Arab states to their knees, we can turn the screw a bit tighter by putting our camel's hair coats in mothballs.

These are just the major areas in which the Arabs are vulnerable to counterstrokes. There are, additionally, numerous little ways of getting under their skin.

You can, for example, refuse to play "The Sheik of Araby" on your trombone. Or the next time that "Lawrence of Arabia" is shown on television, you can watch a rerun of "I Love Lucy" instead.

I can hear King Faisal of Saudi Arabia exclaiming "Oh, no, not that!" But we shall not relent until the oil is flowing freely once more.

Rationing looms as alternative

50 m.p.h. speed limit: another Prohibition?

NEW YORK — (NEA) — When the speed limit was reduced to 50 m.p.h. on New Jersey's highways early this month, a policeman stopped a truck driver going a flat-out 75. When the cop reminded the trucker of the energy crisis, the driver snapped: "The hell with the energy crisis, pal, I got a schedule to keep."

So goes the answer to the presidential plea for "some sacrifice by some Americans" during the worsening oil shortage. Authorities in several states report some general slowing down, on a volunteer basis, but, says a highway patrol officer in Pennsylvania, "I wouldn't say the response has been overwhelming."

By all measures, the response to sacrifice must be overwhelming if U.S. drivers are not to be slowed down by something other than speed limit modifications or volunteerism. Dick Rowley of the Federal Highway Administration says that automobiles account for 25 per cent of fuel oil consumption in the nation and stiffer regulations, if they come, will surely be in this oil use area.

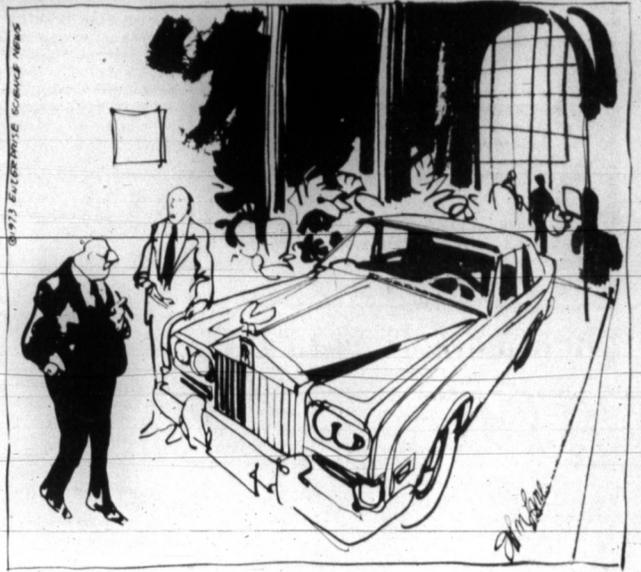

There seems no doubt that significant gasoline savings are possible — and with a minimum of public suffering. Gulf Oil research and development engineers, for instance, say that late model engines traveling at 70 m.p.h. average 13.9 miles per gallon of gas vs. 19.6 miles for speeds of 40.

The Highway Administration is even more optimistic about slowdown savings. Thus Norbert Tiemann, the federal highway administrator, believes 50 m.p.h. speeds could reduce fuel use 5 per cent across the nation — enough to compensate for the current U.S. oil production shortfall.

Yet it's apparent there is opposition abounding to the presidential call for lower speeds. The fact is only too obvious on the roads today. Though auto speed is as risky as it is wasteful (27 per cent of all fatal highway accidents are caused by excessive speed), though the National Safety Council says that a driver's chances of highway death double with each 10 m.p.h. increase in acceleration, Americans zip about with abandon. A recent check of a stretch of the New York Thruway indicated half the cars going in excess of 75, drivers in the rural highways of North Dakota go 90 and 95 without a care.

Some of the opposition to lower speeds, actually, is not real resistance but philosophic criticism. The American Automobile Association, while not objecting to reduced speeds, says that high speeds do not play the major statistical role in the excessive use of highway fuel. Kay Aldus of the AAA says studies indicate 75 per cent of all auto trips are 10 miles or less in distance, therefore "most people don't get up to 70 m.p.h."

The AAA believes that driver skill and mechanical excellence are far better guarantors of fuel economy. A Michigan AAA test indicates that poor driving habits — jackrabbit starts, uneven speeds and needless braking — can be responsible for as much as 44 per cent of vehicle fuel loss. The Minnesota AAA adds that its own studies indicate drivers can cut fuel use 25 per cent (plus save $100 a year in costs) with frequent engine tuneups.

... and when gasoline prices become prohibitive, our deluxe model converts to a horse drawn carriage.

But if the AAA wants mainly to supplement the call for reduced highway speeds, other organizations want only to condemn it. Bus industry spokesmen, as example, say most of their intercity vehicles are engineered for maximum efficiency at 65 m.p.h. Accordingly, says L.H. Warwick, vice president of Trailways: "If our buses run at 50, they'll be in third gear." Warwick's ironic conclusion is that buses use more gas at 50 than 65.

Then there are the truckers. Perhaps the most vocal of the reduced speed opponents. A spokesman for the American Trucking Association says the entire industry has been set up around the 65 m.p.h. speed limit. Terminals are thus far apart, safety regulations (maximum work time for drivers) are so balanced.

"We could live with a 60 m.p.h. limit, but 50 would destroy us," the spokesman says. "It would make one day's trip into two, it would upset everything." And so, adds a driver, angrily, "I don't see the need to slow down and, dammit, I ain't gonna do it."

No one knows for certain, but the belief is the latter opinion dominates the nation. Says a DOT official: "There is no way the American people are going to slow down easily." This official, then, believes the necessary slowdown must come hard.

"You have to hit people in the pocketbook. I believe gas will soon cost 75 cents a gallon, and it will probably be rationed, because that way a man has no choice — he goes slow or he goes broke or he runs out. It's the only way we can get through this period."

Perhaps it is the only way. Then again, the appeal to better judgments, without mandates, is still not dead. The same New Jersey cop who handled the rocketing, recalcitrant truck driver says he's also had to stop an increasing number of people for going too slow! "One lady was doing 25 on the Turnpike. When I told her to go faster she looked at me as if I was unpatriotic."

How to Get Paid for Going "Back to the Land"

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH
While the rest of us are lambasted with rising prices, a tightening economy, fuel shortages, pollution, crime in the streets, an on-again-off-again Middle East war and one political scandal after another...

Mary and Doug Brown are enjoying a life totally devoid of such frustrations and distractions.

"My wife and I live in northern California on a wilderness ranch seven miles from the nearest neighbor," Doug says. "Our home is a huge log cabin which looks over a cold, clear mountain stream. We swim and fish in deep green pools surrounded by tall fir trees and giant granite boulders."

"If you drop by at dinnertime, you may see Mary preparing fresh produce from our garden and orchard as I fire up our wood-burning cookstove. Dinner will proceed in calm, orderly fashion. No phone will ring, and no television or radio will blare. Our thoughts and newspaper ad placed by someone who wanted a caretaker for a remote wilderness lodge.

Hey! This was more like it! The Browns could live in a rural setting for a trial period with no lease or mortgage hanging over their heads. They could use the time to gain experience in gardening, animal husbandry and other country skills.

And they'd get paid to boot!

As might be expected, however, when Doug answered the advertisement... he found the position filled. That only strengthened his resolve, though, and he began a systematic search for other caretaking jobs.

"Generally," Brown says, "I found the positions fell into two categories. Those in the first — house-sitting jobs — were mostly of short duration and located in the suburbs. We weren't particularly interested in such opportunities."

"Offers in the second group — and I was amazed at how many there were — were for vacation landed them the job. The arrangement, they say, suited them exactly... "better than we'd hoped for."

In short, Doug and Mary now live seven miles from civilization and completely surrounded by national forest. They have their choice of staying in their mountain paradise all year round or, if they choose, only from mid-May to September.

For every month they're in the remote lodge they receive $100 and they have a charge account for all the hardware, tools and supplies they need necessary for the cabin's upkeep.

The Browns can garden, loaf, forage wild foods or work on their own projects at any time as they see fit. Their "work" consists of mending fences, gates and barns and whatever other maintenance jobs they feel like doing. They live at their own pace, and fish and swim as the mood strikes them.

Can you do the same thing? Doug says: "Find an area that interests you and look in the local newspapers. Spend a weekend talking to the neighborhood realtors and postmasters. Read the grocery store bulletin boards and leave a card with your name, address and phone number, stating that you'd like a caretaking position."

"I'm sure you'll find one. Because of the low pay — and, sometimes, the isolation — the market is definitely in the employer's favor."

Then again, with more and more folks hankering for the wide and open spaces... maybe you'd better get a move on before someone else latches on to the caretaking job of your dreams.

For more complete details about the Browns, their caretaking job and how they landed it, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, in care of this paper. ## D&D To Hear Program By Area Geologist

Monday night's host of Pampa's Desk and Derrick Club will be George S. Johnson of Amarillo, a geologist for Colorado Interstate Gas Company.

Johnson graduated from West Texas State University with a B.S. degree in geology in 1968 and worked as a logging engineer for Schlumberger Well Services in Brownfield, Tex., from 1969 to 1970. He then moved to Amarillo and worked as a geologist for Groundwater Surveys, Inc. in 1970-71.

In the summer of 1971, Johnson joined Colorado Interstate Gas Company in Amarillo, where he is presently working in the Exploration Department with the responsibility of being in charge of all development drilling in the West Panhandle Field.

Johnson is a member of the Panhandle Geological Society and the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

The topic of Johnson's presentation will be "A Geologist Lost in a Wilderness of Rocks and Mesquite." The meeting will begin with dinner at 7 p.m. at Jim's Steak House. For information or reservations, call Cheryl B. Schaub at Schlumberger Well Services at 665-5791.

discussion will be of the day's chores and accomplishments.

"We'll be looking forward to our bi-weekly mail pickup, for we know it will contain no water bill, electric bill or notice of rent, tax or mortgage due."

"If what I've said isn't enough to convince you that the life we lead is a good one, let me add that we receive $100 a month for enjoying ourselves in this fashion."

Son of a gun. How do the Browns do it?

Doug says it all began a couple of years ago when he and Mary were looking for a way to trade "the nerve-shattering pace of our city life" for an existence "close to the land and in the sun."

It was hard for them to figure out an alternative that would give them just what they wanted, however: Should they run off and homestead in the north woods of Canada or Alaska? Could they be happy on a subsistence farm? Would a commune accept them and, if so, did they want to live on a commune in the first place?

One by one, Doug and Mary checked out these and many other ideas. Nothing seemed "just right" — or even much better than the life they were then leading in town — and the couple was just about to throw in the towel.

Then Doug happened to spot a

Namath & Company Host Atlanta Falcons Today

By United Press International
It was back in January of 1969 that a crusty coach named Norm Van Brocklin predicted, "This Sunday, Joe Namath will play his first pro football game."

when the old-line NFL establishment still looked down on their AFL brethren and claimed they definitely played an inferior brand of ball—even though the two leagues had agreed to a merger.
After all, the Green Bay Packers had taught the AFL teams a few lessons on how the game should be played in the first two Super Bowls and Van Brocklin and many of the other NFL diehards figured Don Shula's Baltimore Colts were going to give Namath and those upstart Jets a few lessons on football NFL-style in Super Bowl III.

Sure, Namath had some fancy stats in the AFL, but the Colts were going to show him a few things about "dee-fense."
Of course, you know the rest.

The Jets beat the Colts, 16-7, on Jan. 12, 1969 in one of the most significant football games of our era.
AFL Established
It established the AFL on a "parity" with the NFL and now the one-line distinctions between the two leagues have been so blurred that you sometimes forget which teams were originally in the AFL.
The intervening five seasons since Namath pulled off that upset haven't been too kind to him. He's been injured as often as he's been in action.

Regardless of what you think about Namath, there's no doubt he remains one of the most electrifying figures in the game. He proved it again Sunday when he came off the bench in the final five minutes against Cincinnati and led the Jets to within a couple of controversial calls and six inches of a victory over the Bengals.

And now Namath gets his chance to give Van Brocklin a first-hand look at his talents. The Jets will host the Falcons today in the first regular season meeting between the two teams.
Atlanta Needs Victory
Atlanta has a 7-3 record and needs just one victory to assure itself of the best record in the eight-year history of the club. Also, Atlanta is just one game behind the Los Angeles Rams in the battle for the NFC West.

Even more important, Atlanta can clinch a playoff spot by winning its final four games. And after this game, the last three are at home against Buffalo, St. Louis and New Orleans.

For the Jets, nothing but pride is at stake. The team is 3-7. But with Namath back at quarterback, the Jets can be a dangerous team.
In the other games today, San Diego is at Oakland, Kansas City is at Denver, Pittsburgh is at Cleveland, Los Angeles is at New Orleans, Chicago is at Minnesota, St. Louis is at Cincinnati, the New York Giants are at Philadelphia, Buffalo is at Baltimore, and New England is at Houston.

The weekend of action started on Thanksgiving Day when Washington beat Detroit, 20-0, and Miami downed Dallas, 14-7.
The Monday night TV special won't attract much attention this week. It points two disappointing teams—Green Bay and San Francisco. They both made the playoffs last year but they've each won only three games this season.

CHILDRESS FUMBLE — Childress fumbled and immediately Dalhart's Matt Simmons (77), Pete Bateman (65) and Mike Slatton (30) go for the ball. Slatton was the man who recovered for the 1-AA Wolves, who lost to the 2-AA Bobcats, 22-21 Friday night in Pampa's Harvester Stadium in bi-district playoff action. Childress will advance to regional competition Friday against Littlefield. Terry Hogue scored the game-tying touchdown late in the fourth quarter and John Howard won it with the conversion kick.

US Captures Golf Lead Behind Nicklaus, Miller

MARBELLA, Spain (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus called his performance "lousy" and Johnny Miller said his was "atrocious," but the two combined for a 145 Saturday to enable the United States to maintain a three-stroke lead over a resurgent South African team after the third round of the World Cup golf competition.
In addition, both Nicklaus and Miller moved into a tie with Lu Lian-Huan of Taiwan for individual honors with totals of 210.
Hugh Baiocchi scored a three-under-par 69 and Gary Player had a 70 to enable South Africa to move up from fourth place into second at 423 with only one round to play on Sunday.
Both Nicklaus and Miller failed to break par for the trikey, 6-905-yard Nueva Andalucia course, shooting a 73 and a 72 respectively to bring their 54-hole total to a 12-under-par 420.
Miller's 72 came just one day after he set a record of 65 for the par-72 course, and neither he nor Nicklaus could give an explanation for their scores.
The South Africans were seven under par and only one stroke behind the United States after nine holes Saturday. But then came what Player called the "drama at the 11th hole," where Baiocchi took a penalty drop for a double bogey and Player, upset after an argument with course officials, bogied the hole.
Player's three-round total was 211 and Baiocchi's 212.
Taiwan's defending champions, Hsieh Min-Nan and Lu, scored a 68 and a 74 respectively to retain third place with a total of 425.
Argentine veterans Roberto de Vicenzo, 50, and Fidel de Luca, 51, who had led the field of 49 teams after the first round,

AA Bobcats Nip Wolves

John Howard killed Dalhart's hopes of a AA bi-district championship with a fourth-quarter conversion boot following a Terry Hogue touchdown as the Childress Bobcats nipped the Wolves, 22-21 Friday night in Pampa's Harvester Stadium.
The win gives Childress of 2-AA the right to meet Littlefield next weekend for the regional championship.
Hogue scored on a three-yard run with 1:22 left in the game to tie the score at 21-21. Howard's kick put the Bobcats in front for the first time since the opening quarter when Childress led 7-0. Dalhart, 1-AA champion, led at the half, 14-7 due to the passing of Jack Mullin, who hit Jason Robertson and Rex McPherson for eight- and 40-yard touchdowns in the second period.
Bobcat fullback Tim Lewellen, an all-state linebacker last year, scored his team's only touchdown in the half on a one-yard plunge.
Dalhart took a 14-point lead as Mullin scored on a 36-yard run and the extra point made the score 21-7. Childress came back in the quarter on a 10-yard pass from Mark Brown to Ivan Johnson and the conversion run by Hogue.
Childress trailed 21-15 before Hogue's scoring run.

Harvesters Win Third In Tournament

MIDLAND — Guard Robert Young came off the bench late in the fourth quarter and fired in two field goals and scored two more from the foul line to spark Pampa to a 66-60 win over Midland, which gave the Harvesters third place in the Tall City Invitational Basketball Tournament, Saturday night in the Midland Lee gym.
Pampa, tied by the Bulldogs at the end of the third quarter, trailed 47-45 early in the final period, however, the Harvesters battled back and led by five late in the game.
Billy Wilbon led Pampa scorers with 21 points and was followed by Ray Powell with 14 and Randy Warner with 11. Midland also finished with three men in double figures — Doug Mitchell and Willie McCoy with 12 and Alan Buonasa with 11.
Pampa lost to Midland Lee, 79-78 Saturday afternoon which knocked the Harvesters out of a shot at the championship. Warner, Wilbon and Powell scored 25, 19 and 12 points, respectively for Pampa, while Brett Blackwell chipped in 27 to lead the Rebels, who played San Antonio Jefferson in the finals following the Pampa-Midland game.
In Friday's action, Pampa Caprock Falls in Bi-District.

Mistakes Ruin UCLA, Trojans To Rose Bowl

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Underdog University of Southern California recovered four UCLA fumbles and intercepted two passes Saturday to beat the wishbone Bruins 23-13 and earn its sixth trip to the Rose Bowl in eight years.
Pat Haden, the slick junior quarterback from West Covina, Calif., and tailback Anthony Davis each scored a touchdown in the game that gave the No. 9-ranked Trojans the Pacific Eight championship.
Davis, becoming the second Trojan running back in history to gain 1,000 yards in two straight seasons, scored on a four-yard run in the opening quarter and Haden passed 16 yards to his coach's son, Johnny McKay, for a second period score.
But it was mistakes that hurt the eighth-rated Bruins, who went into the game as the nation's No. 1 scoring and rushing team. They committed two turnovers in each of the last three quarters.
Little Chris Limahelu, a 5-foot-5 Indonesian-born soccer style kicker, booted field goals of 35, 32 and 28 yards for the Trojans. His last two 3-pointers were the only Trojan scores in the second half.

Lightning Strikes TCU Twice As Rice Wins
FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Carl Swierc romped 99 yards with a kickoff Saturday to wrap up Rice's third straight victory, a 14-9 decision over Texas Christian in a game halted 15 minutes by a bolt of lightning that struck inside the stadium.
For the third straight week, Rice put together almost no offense, but still won, and for the second straight week the victory came as a result of a Swierc kickoff return.
Rice's other score came on a seven-yard pass from quarterback Fred Feisler to Gary Ferguson after the Owls' had intercepted a pass at the TCU 19.
The Horned Frogs, whose head coach Billy Tohill was fired last Monday, tallied on a 25-yard field goal by Bert Simmons, and on a two-yard run by Mike Luttrell. It was after Simmons' field goal, which made the score 7-3, that Swierc unleashed his kickoff return.

After fielding the ball at the one, just inside the sideline, Swierc dashed straight up the sideline and was untouched during his trip to the goal line.
Last week against Texas A&M Swierc returned a kickoff 95 yards with less than three minutes to play to rally Rice to victory.
"A pouring rain which began at kickoff plagued both teams during the scoreless first half. Two plays deep into the second quarter, a bolt of lightning struck in the lower deck of the south end of Armer Canton Stadium and startled players and fans quickly headed for shelter.

Buffs Blow Lead, Lose To Cardinals

CANYON, Tex. (UPI) — Sophomore Jim Wagoner, starting his second game at quarterback, returned a punt 62 yards to pilot the Louisville Cardinals past West Texas State, 21-9, in a come-from-behind Missouri Valley Conference battle.
Wagoner added a three-yard end scamper and sophomore tailback Walter Peacock scored on a three-yard blast as the Cardinals exploded for three touchdowns in the final period to overcome a 9-0 Buffalo lead.
West Texas State scored on three field goals by Bruce Wyr, including a 58-yarder for a school record. He also hit on boots of 42 and 32 yards.
Wagoner broke open the game on the third play of the final period when he returned a West Texas State punt 62 yards. Three plays later Louisville's Larry Fluellen fell on a West Texas State fumble at the Buffs 34-yard line.
It took Peacock eight more carries for the touchdown. Wagoner also scored on a three-yard run with 75 seconds

Bicentennial Coin Competition

Mrs. Mary Brooks, Director of the Bureau of the Mint has announced the Department of the Treasury will award $5,000 to each of the three winners of a national competition for designs emblematic of the Bicentennial of the American Revolution for the reverse of the dollar, half dollar and quarter dollar.

President Nixon signed the Bicentennial coinage design legislation on Oct. 18, 1973. In addition to providing for the new Bicentennial designs the Act also calls for the mintage of at least 45 million silver-clad Bicentennial coins. It is the first time that designs on circulating coins are being Denver, and San Francisco as well as the Bureau of the Mint, Department of the Treasury, Washington, D.C. 20220. Since all coin designs must be compatible with the coining process, competition entrants should acquire a copy of the instructions before entering designs in the $5,000 contest.

The competition is open to all sculptors who are United States citizens and who are capable of rendering a plaster model compatible with the Mint's coining process. The theme must be emblematic of the Bicentennial of the American Revolution 1776-1976.

Each entrant may submit one design which may be a drawing on black and white media within a 10-inch circle, or photograph of a like diameter of a model. Either must be without any identifying mark mounted on a piece of 11 x 14-inch illustration board. The sculptors name, address and telephone number will be sealed in an opaque envelope affixed to the back of the mounted design. Sketches or photographs must have been delivered (prepaid) to the National Sculpture Society at the address given earlier in this article by Dec. 14, 1973. No payment will be made for expenses incurred in the preparation of these sketches.

Twelve semi-finalists will be asked to submit their designs in the form of plaster models not in excess of 8 1/2 inches in diameter with a depth relief of no more than 5/32 of an inch. Finished models meeting all requirements will be purchased by the Treasury department at $750 each. Six finalists will be selected by a panel of judges and their models submitted to the Treasury for final determination of three winning designs.

The Almanac

By United Press International Today is Sunday, Nov. 25, the 329th day of 1973 with 36 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

Pope John XXIII was born Nov. 25, 1881.

On this day in history:

In 1783, more than 6,000 British troops evacuated New York City after signing the peace treaty ending the Revolutionary War.

In 1920, Radio Station WTAW in College Station, Tex., broadcast the first play-by-play description of a football game, between Texas and Texas A&M.

In 1944, the American War Refugee Board charged Germany with mass murder during World War II.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy, assassinated in Dallas three days earlier, was buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

A thought for the day: American poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow said, "Let him not boast who puts his armor on as he who puts it off; the battle done."

Christmas Tree's Origin Varied

By DAVID NAGY BONN (UPI) — The origins of the Christmas tree seem to be shrouded in the mist of a great historical snowstorm.

In some lands the custom of rallying round a fir tree just seemed to pop up from nowhere, as it did in Switzerland, complete with its own local legend.

Authorities in many European countries point to Germany and say it came from there, although, oddly, some German sources say it did not.

Professor Urges Return Of Prize

VIENNA (UPI) — Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Jewish Documentation Center, has urged Konrad Lorenz to renounce his Nobel Prize because of his support of Nazi ideas during World War II.

Lorenz, an Austrian professor lecturing on the behavior of animals, was awarded the 1973 Nobel Prize for medicine for his scientific research on geese.

Wiesenthal said Lorenz, in an article published in 1940, supported the idea of "extermination of ethnic inferior people."

Wiesenthal said there was only one step from the "extermination of ethnic inferior life" to the murder of millions of innocent victims in the Nazi concentration camps and gas chambers.

"Contrary to popular belief, the use of Christmas trees did not originate in Germany," says one German brochure on National Christmas traditions.

"Traces of this custom have been found in Rome and Greece, where trees and twigs were decorated at festivals occurring about the same time of year as Christmas."

But many other authoritative sources say "It is generally believed the first Christmas tree was of German origin dating from Boniface, English missionary to Germany in the 8th century, who replaced the sacrifices to Odin's sacred oak by a fir tree adorned in tribute to the Christ Child."

If Boniface was an English missionary, how come the custom is said to be of German origin? The implication is Boniface found the first adorning Germany's landscape and liked the look of them. They would also be easier to manage than an oak, but that is editorial speculation offered by this writer.

Introduction to England

The Encyclopedia Britannica says: "It is known that the German Prince Albert, soon after his marriage to Queen Victoria, introduced it into England and that German immigrants brought the custom to America."

Historians and reference works consulted in Sweden and Austria generally agreed the Christmas tree custom was imported from Germany in the late 18th century.

A country that has its own birth-of-the-tree legend is Switzerland.

The Swiss legend says that long ago in the Alpine village of Reckingen a woodcarver said he could hear a magnificent fir tree singing.

After much haggling with local authorities, the legend goes, he got permission to chop the tree down and carve a statue of the Virgin Mary from it. He did so and when everyone gathered to view his work, Mary opened her mouth and sang... just that once.

Since then, the legend concludes, the Swiss chop down fir trees for Christmas.

(But not just their own any longer. The Swiss today import Christmas trees from Finland for lack of enough of their own to go around.)

The difficulty in pinning down the origin of the Christmas tree custom depends upon how far back in history you want to go — into pre-Christian pagan times.

Many reference works give a nod to the Druids, philosophers of ancient religious cuts in France, Britain and Ireland. For the year-end feast of Tyr, God of the Sun, War and Justice, the Druids would pile spruce and fir trees atop the handiest hill and fix chicken entrails and fruit to the boughs. Then they would put a torch to the trees and roll these festive fireballs down the slope, to the glee of the faithful watching for that signal to begin feasting and the drinking of mead.

In the Christian era, though, Germany begins coming on strong in historical records of Christmas tree custom around the 16th or 17th centuries.

Some sources say artisan guilds began setting up small fir trees decked with apples, nuts and paper flowers in the 16th century. Other sources peg the custom to the Alsatian city of Strasbourg, now in France, about 1605.

From that Renaissance Era, at any rate, the custom blossomed into the candle-decked "Tannenbaum" beloved first nationwide, then worldwide, and celebrated in many a carol and poem.

The Merle Haggard Phenomenon

MERLE HAGGARD...human nature's not going to change

By PETER McCABE
"I think it's been bad," Merle Haggard was saying. "I think any time you cause the nation's people to lose confidence in the government, I don't see that it can do any good. But you know, no matter what changes are made to satisfy the people with the outcome of Watergate, it's not really going to change anything."

"You can change personnel, but you've still got human nature to deal with, and human nature's not going to change. Underhanded things are still going to happen whether it's in the White House or anywhere else. We're suddenly becoming aware that those people in office are human."

Merle paused and stared hard out of his Nashville hotel room window. Only a few weeks earlier he had talked about Watergate during an interview with Time magazine. They took up a lot of his time, then finally told him they weren't going to use the story. (Newsweek has suddenly run a cover story on Loretta Lynn.)

"I finally told them," Merle said. "I don't give a... if I'm on the cover of Time or not."

He grew serious again, as the conversation reverted to Watergate.

"You know, I really don't know what has happened yet. I don't think the impact has hit us yet. I think we're only really going to realize the full impact maybe 10 years from now."

I sensed that Watergate has made Merle Haggard deeply unhappy, but he talked about politics with the assurance the awareness of a television news commentator. Like any wise politician he declined to predict the outcome of Watergate while controversies still exist. "To make a prediction at this time I'd be afraid to do that."

Writer Paul Hemphill, who wrote the first major story on the Merle Haggard

"phenomenon" for Atlantic Monthly, always said he thought that Merle was "mildly embarrassed" about having written "Okie From Muskogee."

It was "Okie," of course, which catapulted him to national prominence, brought him fame, riches, a letter from the President and later an invitation to appear at the White House.

But it also trapped him in a cross fire between hard hats and hippies, with liberals accusing him of capitalizing on middle America's frustrations. Hag decided to back off.

"I didn't realize how strong some people felt about those things," he told Hemphill, and he solidly refused to get himself involved in any form of politics, never clearly stating his own views.

Whatever Hag's feelings about hard hats and hippies, he has always made clear his concern for the working man and for his country. It's the latter that particularly concerns him at present.

"I kind of feel sorry for the children growing up now," he says. "I think they're going to miss the greatest period of the United States: I think that's already passed. I don't think we can again become the giant we once were with respect to the rest of the world. Maybe I'm a pessimist, but that's the way it looks to me."

We mutually agree to change the subject, the conversation switches to music.

A few rooms away from Haggard's in the same Nashville hotel is Bob Wills, who in spite of the fact that he's very ill and confined to a wheelchair, is in Music City to receive an award.

Haggard is a staunch admirer of Bob Wills; he recorded an album of Wills' songs as a tribute, and spent six months teaching himself the fiddle first because he considered the record historically important.

A serious student of music, especially when it comes to the origins of country music, Haggard did a lot of research for his most recent record, a Dixieland album.

"I cut it because so many of the great country singers got a lot of their inspiration from the blues of the South, which is certainly Dixieland blues."

Hag has traced a great deal of the musical styles of Rodgers and Wills to one person, a man named Emmet Miller, a black-faced comedian who entertained during the late 20s and early 30s. He even made an early recording of "Lovesick Blues."

"After 1936 though, he just sort of seemed to disappear and I can't find out what happened to him."

It was Wills who first introduced him to Miller. Haggard visited him one day and listened to a tape Wills was playing.

"Who's that?" he inquired.

"Why, that's the guy I used to listen to when I was a kid," Wills told him.

He stared hard out of the window again, looking at the brand new bus he had just bought, which that evening would roll out of Nashville for a two day ride back to Bakersfield, Calif.

"You know, I really do like Dixieland," he said. "It's a freewheeling music, much like country guitar music. That's why I like it."

Scouting Scoops

By DIANE GROOTERS

Vickie Carter, 16, a Senior Scout, has taken the leadership of a Junior troop Vickie, along with two other senior scouts, Jill Atcheley and Dreka Weatherly meet with 20 Juniors at the Girl Scout Little House.

They are making plans for a trip to Carlsbad, N.M. next spring, while working at several projects to finance their trip. Some of these projects are selling pecans, having a garage sale, and selling calendars. They also plan to be in the Santa Day Parade Nov. 29 and on making a float for that event.

Vickie enjoys Scouting and particularly enjoys working with such an enthusiastic group as this one. Could have something to do with their enthusiastic leader, Vickie!

Junior Troop Nine has been very active the past two months, too. They've taken on many service projects including making popcorn balls for Highland Hospital patients on Halloween, baby-sitting at the Boy Scout Pop Wow, taking nine children from the Panhandle Home trick-or-treating; repainting the Little House furniture; getting together a Thanksgiving basket, and inspecting school rooms for fire safety.

Last week they spent an evening at the bowling alley and then ate pizza. They had a garage sale to raise money they'll need for the ice capades and Palo Duro Canyon. These very responsible scouts do all their own planning, money handling and organizing.

If your troop has done some special activity, call 665-4575.

Opening lead—84

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Take a look at the bidding and the North and East hands. West opens the eight of diamonds and you have to defend as East.

You have no problem at trick one or when South leads a club to his ace at trick two, but when he continues with a second club to dummy's king you have to make a discard. You can't afford a heart. Obviously, declarer holds the king of hearts and you will be making dummy's fourth heart a winner. How about a diamond discard? This should set up a good diamond, or maybe two good diamonds for declarer. So a spade discard appears to be automatic. But declarer surely holds four spades so if you throw a spade he will play ace-queen of spades; lead a heart to his king and squeeze you out of a heart or diamond by playing his fourth spade.

You appear to be squeezed in three suits. Should you concede right off the bat and get on to the next rubber?

The answer is a resounding "NO!"

You simply unguard your jack of hearts. Now, if declarer runs off four hearts right away you can afford to throw a spade because he won't be able to get to his hand except by overtaking dummy's queen of spades with his king. If he cashes the ace and queen of spades first and comes to his hand with the king of hearts you just haven't been squeezed and won't be squeezed since he can't exert the right pressure.

Daughter wants pill, mother is ashamed

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My telephone just rang. It was a doctor telling me that my 16-year-old daughter was just in his office asking him for birth control pills. Abby, what are these young people doing to us mothers?

I knew she had a steady boy friend but I never dreamed they were in need of anything like that. I am heartsick. I tried to raise this girl right. Where have I failed?

ASHAMED TO SIGN MY NAME

DEAR ASHAMED: You haven't failed, and if you tried to raise her right you need not be ashamed. I am NOT in favor of premarital sex, but once a girl has gone all the way, it is unrealistic to think that she will stop simply because she is denied the pill. So then what? She risks becoming pregnant. And if she does, what has the doctor accomplished? He will have been responsible for (a) an unwanted baby, (b) an abortion, or (c) a hasty marriage. Which would you choose for your daughter?

If you are among the mothers who say, "If that's the way she is going to act, then let her suffer the consequences," please consider the baby. Don't you think every child should come into this world wanted by its natural mother? I do.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17, and have no living father. He and my mother were divorced 13 years ago, and he was killed in an automobile accident three years ago. After his death my brother and I were advised that we were to receive Social Security benefits to be used for our education and welfare.

We have been getting these benefits for three years now, and with my portion I have been able to buy a car, all my own clothes, and still manage to put aside some money for college.

My problem is my friends who do not feel that I deserve this money. They say I am "ripping off" the government every month. I think I deserve this money because my father never was able to pay child support when he was alive, and now I am being taken care of.

Answer soon, as I am made to feel guilty about this.

DIRTY MONEY

DEAR DIRTY MONEY: What's "dirty" about it? Your friends could be jealous. And one way to put a stop to that is to keep quiet about what you have and where it came from. It's nobody's business.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man I love very much. My name is Christine and his name is Christopher. We are both called "Chris," which has been quite confusing at times.

I have just given birth to twins—a boy and a girl. My husband wants to name them Christian and Christina, respectively. I think this would be a terrible confusion for the twins and us in this household.

Can you offer a suggestion? Please hurry your answer.

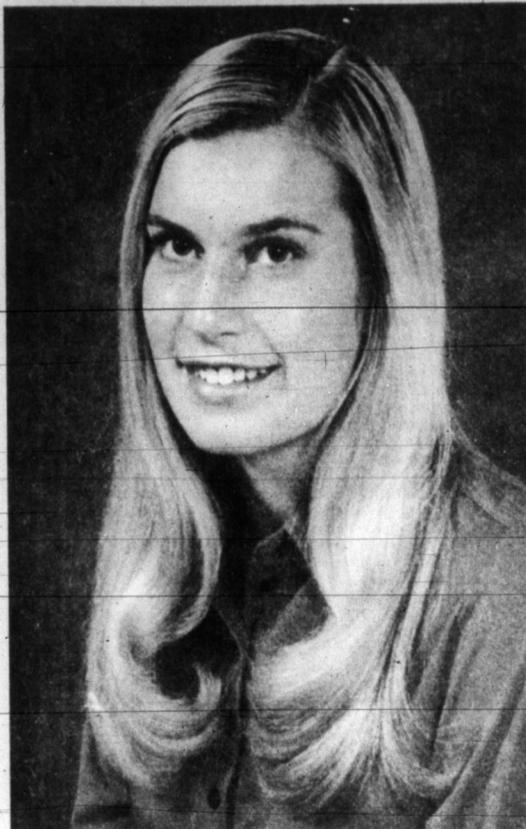

CHRIS

DEAR CHRIS: For Chris's sake and yours, insist upon John and Mary, Jack and Jill, or any other combination of less confusing names.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NOSY IN WAYZATA": The last I heard, Don was in the hospital with knee trouble. (His wife found a blonde on it.)

Today's Treasures Lithophane hooks many

By Jean Barnes

A picture of Gen. Winfield Scott on a horse was the start of a fine collection of lithophanes. "I'm partial to horses, so I bought it," the collector explained.

"When we found a second lithophane we got it because we already had one and pretty soon we had the beginnings of a collection."

Lithophanes are pictures cast in porcelain. When light is passed through the porcelain the picture is seen in detail. The idea for these transparencies was originated in 1827 by M. le Baron Bourgoing in France.

Credit for the invention of these white biscuit plaques is actually given to Berlin in 1828 but manufacture of lithophanes did not take place until some years after their discovery.

The manufacture of lithophanes was a delicate process in which a paste was used to model the original picture. A wax or plaster of Paris master was cast and from this master many copies were produced.

Most lithophanes were made between 1834 and 1858 as their subject matter would indicate. However, lithophanes have been reproduced in recent years. Because of their transparent nature lithophanes were popular items for lampshades, window plaques, night lights, candle shields and food warmers. They often were cast in the bottom of regimental steins (a widely reproduced item) and tea cups.

Nineteenth-century candle holder and shield show detail possible in lithophane art. It reflects romance of mid-1800s.

Subjects chosen ranged from well-known paintings, landscapes and scenes from European cities. Tavern scenes were a favorite for beer steins.

German-made lithophanes were always marked, usually with letters or numerals, the collector said. The mark can be found on either the front or reverse side. You might find the letters BPM (Berlin Porzellan Manufaktur); PPM (Preussische Porzellan Manufaktur); or KPM (Koeniglichen Preussische Manufaktur).

Lithophanes also were made in Meissen, Holland, France, Denmark, England and in the Orient. Most of the French lithophanes were unmarked, but those manufactured at Rubelles usually have letters ADT with a serial number. Many French lithophanes were made in light pastel colors.

Generally, though, it is difficult to trace the markings found on most lithophanes. There is never an artist's signature and the significance of any numbers found on a piece has been lost with the years. It is possible, however, to trace the country of origin for most lithophanes.

If you haven't been exposed to this rather obscure art form, look for an example. Their delicacy and early Victorian charm make them desirable collector's items.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SUNDAY, NOV. 25

Your birthday today: Under the right circumstances, going it alone for a year or two may appeal to you. Whatever your spot, the general feeling is one of being contained and swept along with the tide of events, group decisions. The less bound, the easier it is to survive the pressures. Today's natives are affectionate, home-loving.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: It is all right that you may be alone. Use the opportunity to get a good look at yourself, your current plans, and make changes.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Today gives you a chance to emerge with your new opinion, as if you'd never had any other—or just plain admit you've changed your mind.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Don't push yourself into activity more strenuous than you are in the mood to exert. Younger people pose problems.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Stay home and fix things up to suit yourself. Make minor repairs, clear out unwanted items, plan for new furniture.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Where you drift smoothly into the discussion, it is remarkably easy to prevail today, considering recent rough going.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Once you've complied with what the community expects of you, spend the day with simple nonscheduled home life.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You may be tempted to at least imagine one happening. Okay, if you can keep it straight that this is a game, not the real thing.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Leave all planning tentative. Wishful thinking and day-dreams distort all your detailed plans, budgets, estimates.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Your personal appeal is running high, is actually best applied to social graces rather than any business effort.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: You might as well clean up around the spot you use for hobbies and pastimes; Straighten belongings, tools, supplies, and check inventory.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Now that you are free of social pressures or can divert them readily, it's your turn to let others off the hook.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Try for a mix of rest, prayer, routines, the simple pleasures of close personal discussions, and of joy shared.

Sink soap 'dish' still not right

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I do hope some of the readers have a solution for a laundry problem I have encountered. I had two nylon sweaters stored in a dresser drawer. A deep pink one "croaked off" on a white one leaving pink stains. I have tried a nonchlorine bleach to remove the marks but with no success. Any solutions? — BONNIE

DEAR POLLY — One of my Pet Peeves is that the sink manufacturers always make an indentation for a bar of soap to fit in but never make a place deep enough for the water to drain away. — NANCY

DEAR POLLY — This is for Grace who has trouble cleaning her aluminum porch awnings. We had the same trouble until I discovered bleach used full strength. Wipe over awnings with a sponge, wait a few minutes and then hose them off. Living in Florida we have problems with mildew and bleach takes care of this. It is an economical remedy and I use what remains in my washing machine. — CARRIE

DEAR GIRLS — I was advised that the bleach should be diluted or else one runs the chance of "chalking" the paint on such awnings. A mild soap or detergent or even a solution with an electric dishwasher detergent was recommended. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Grace wanted to know how to clean her painted aluminum awnings. I had this trouble until I tried to remove some paint that had splattered on them. I applied kerosene with a small brush. It loosened the grime and then I washed them with a solution of a well-known liquid household cleaner and water to which I added a little liquid detergent. The cleaner was one containing ammonia. I was amazed at the dirt and grime that washed off. The awnings were rinsed with clear water from the hose and then wiped dry. Now they are clean and shiny as new. — MRS. L.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for those women who sew and have trouble putting in zippers. Baste the seam closed and press open. Place material, wrong side up, on the ironing board and lay zipper, wrong side up, on the seam being careful to match the center of the zipper to the basted seam line. Pin on by placing pins straight down through the zipper material and ironing board cover along the sewing line marked on the zipper tape. When you have pins along the entire length measure transparent tape the length of the zipper and place along the outside of the pins, on both sides of the zipper, thus taping the zipper to the material. Remove pins and sew along the sewing line in the zipper. Do not sew over the tape as it would be difficult to remove. This is easy, has no bulges and no pins to be removed as you stitch. When sewed just remove tape and bastings. — SALLY ANN

Garden Club Speaker Tells Of Attracting Birds To Home Grounds

Tips on attracting birds to the home grounds were given by Mrs. Vera Deason, director of Amarillo Garden Center and author of the garden column in the Amarillo Daily News, at a recent meeting of the Pampa Garden Club.

Water, kept thawed on freezing mornings, is a must, said the speaker. Food should include needed evergreens and shrubs with fruit and berries, including the pyracantha and the Russian Olive. She encouraged gardeners not to be too hasty in clearing their garden for the compost pile and when doing so, not to be thorough as the birds enjoy seed heads. Scattering bird seed on the ground as well as in the feeders is a further enticement, and don't forget the peanuts and sunflower seeds, she reminded.

Mrs. Deason, with the assistance of Mrs. Rena Ross, also of Amarillo, illustrated the talk with a slide presentation of birds, which frequent the area, and the recorded bird sounds. Because the panhandle is on the central flyway, Mrs. Deason stated that we have unusual birds passing through the area in the fall and winter months, and some remain here until winter before returning north in the spring.

Birds pictured during the program which you might just happen to see in your yard include the white crown sparrow, house finch, red-sided towhee, morning dove, blue jay, scrub jay, red-breasted nut hatch, western meadow lark, sparrow hawk, roadrunner, mocking bird, cardinal, brown thrasher, American Goldfinch, crossbill, cedar waxing, chipping sparrow, and the house sparrow, which takes its toll in the grain field and eats harmful insects.

As a proof that an observant bird watcher can find birds in the panhandle and make travel at 50 mph more interesting, Mrs. Deason listed 12 species of birds that they had seen enroute to the meeting from Amarillo. These included the sparrow, rough-legged knarsh, and short-tailed hawk; the house sparrows; the horned and meadow larks; the pin-tailed duck, black birds, starlings, and a burrowing owl at a prairie dog town where they stopped to look for owls.

Delegates reported on the northern zone meeting, District I, held in Hereford. Delegates to the meeting included Mmes. H.H. Boynton, S.T. Holding, Bert Robinson, Ruth Ayers, and James Malone, club president.

Club members voted to assist in dressing dolls for the Salvation Army Christmas boxes. Members were appointed to represent the Pampa Garden Club at a planning session for the beautification project of erecting the letters PAMPA to be seen from the air.

Mrs. Boynton presented horticulture tips for the remainder of November. She stated that a color planting guide should be made before bulbs are planted. She paints double heads and uses a color code for keeping a bulb record of a garden. Cuttings can be made from shrubs or evergreens by cutting six to eight inch pieces of hardwood the width of a finger, tying them together, burying six inches in dirt, and keeping them moist. By spring they will be rooted and can be planted. Indoor blooms during winter can be derived by planting narcissus bulbs in a flat container with sand and pebbles. The water level should be to the bottom but not cover the bulb. This is the time for potting amaryllis and for building compost piles with garden clearings.

Refreshments were served from a table decorated in the Thanksgiving motif and colors, by hostesses Mrs. Holly Gray and Mrs. E.L. Hudson.

LUTHERAN WOMEN
The Lutheran Women's Missionary League of Zion Lutheran Church met Nov. 14 in the Parish Hall.

The program was presented by Miss Frances Schumacher of Amarillo, who is Zone President, and consisted of a filmstrip from the International Lutheran Women's Missionary League Convention which was held in Mobile, Ala.

Mrs. Altha Smith of Amarillo was a guest.

Members present were: Mmes. Carol Heinritz, Vera Clark, Wilma Kitterman, Jo Emerson, Edna Richter, Mary Alice Stroebel, Kathy Hammer, Vesta Thomas, Sue Clark, Angie Walker, Meta Klaerner, Jan Lyle, Jimmie Koch, Esther McAdoo.

Hostesses for the meeting were Ruth Jones and Arlene Bruntington.

The words for spring are pretty, feminine, romantic Paris favors the soft touch

By Rosette Hargrove

PARIS — (NEA) — Spring is just around the corner so far as the ready-to-wear industry is concerned. And the message for the 1974 spring is a continuation of the romantic look. Designers are hoping to get the girls out of blue jeans and into more feminine clothes. The look is droopy, soft, fluttery and skirts swirl. The girl who is going to be fashion's darling next spring is pretty—feminine, likes muted, delicate colors and doesn't care all that much for trousers.

Pants are certainly still there. But they have lost their mannish cut and are long and baggy. The shirt is soft and loose, has big sleeves and tucks into the waistband.

Skirts are the big news. Most are pleated, some are gored and the peasant skirt style is in the news, too. Dresses are body clinging. Sleeves are short and wide. The cardigan continues on its winter momentum, usually stopping between the thigh and knees.

The long-abandoned twin set is chic again. And for evening the cardigan replaces the stole. Fabrics in long dresses are soft crepes, plain and printed crepes de chine, jersey, shantung, flannel, wool and silk voile, cotton and velvet terry cloth.

The designers have dipped back unhesitatingly from the Roaring Twenties to World War II for inspiration.

One thing is sure. Gone is the unisex appeal. Everything is loose, fluid. The architectural look has stepped aside for the soft touch.

Lanvin led the way to an uninhibited summer with wide baggy pants, skirts in striped cotton with pochotype tops for resort wear.

Patou's boutique offered long, slinky, biased cut silk dresses, vampy and chic in striped or dotted tie silks in conservative colors. His shirtwaist had wide batwing sleeves and umbrella skirts.

Yves Saint Laurent featured more trousers than any other Paris designer but also confirmed the 1930 look. His trousers are a new cut copied from the American sailor's with square buttoned yoke teamed to a long, loose midy. The nautical ensembles are accompanied by duffle bags in white leather or blue denim.

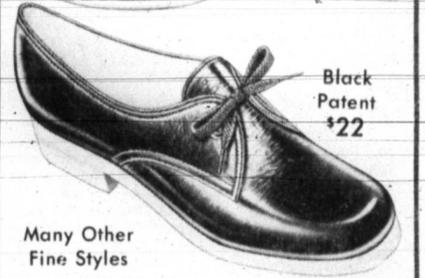

The Porte de Versailles giant exhibition hall showed the designs of some 800 exhibitors (200 from other countries). And Mexico was represented for the first time. Hong Kong made its third appearance at the event and their fashion promotion was organized by the Trade Development Council. Their high-quality garments were shown to the international trade buyers. Seven exhibitors participated and over 300 garments were shown.

Mrs. Ledbetter Gives Forum Club Program

The Twentieth Century Forum Study Club met recently at the home of Mrs. McHenry Lane. Mrs. Robert Finney opened the meeting by reading the Club Collect, and Mrs. Larry Cross, president, presided over the business session.

Mrs. Louise Franklin introduced the program, "Women's Achievements in Science and Research." The guest speaker, Mrs. Elaine Ledbetter, President of the National Science Teachers Association for 1972-73, spoke concerning women in science.

The Nobel Prize, stated Mrs. Ledbetter, has been awarded annually since 1901 without regard for race, creed or nationality. This prize is regarded as the world's highest award. If contributions in a given field do not warrant the honor, no prize is given. Five years women have received the award: 1903, Pierre and Marie Curie for the discovery of radioactivity and the study of Uranium; 1911, Marie Curie for the discovery of radium and polonium; 1947, Carl and Gerty Cori, shared the prize in physiology and medicine for the conversion of glycogen; 1963, Maria Geopfert Mayer shared with J. Hans Jensen of Germany, working individually, prepared almost identical papers on the shell structure of atomic nuclei; 1964, Dorothy C. Hodgkin, for the X-ray studies of vitamin B-12 and penicillin.

None of the before mentioned are native born Americans, although all but Marie Curie were living and working here at the time of their awards. Only five women were elected to the National Academy of Sciences between 1934 and 1959. Of these, four were born and educated through their first college degree in foreign countries: Austria, Russia, Germany and China, the speaker told.

Dr. Evelyn Anderson, Ames Research Center, California, studied effects of glands on controlling man's reaction to new and/or frightening experiences in meeting space problems. She was recognized by the President and granted a Federal Woman's Award in 1964.

Women played a vital role in different fields as well as those already mentioned says Mrs. Ledbetter. Beatrice Finkelstein, nutrition, Margaret Jackson, the medical aspect in space flights, Lee Curry Rock and Alice Chatham, clothing development, Edith Olson, Electronic Systems, Barbara Short, the project mercury capsule.

A noted biographer says that in talking with scientists, both men and women from all over the world, many are outspoken in their conviction that found women possessing scientific talents in the countries other than ours, had one great advantage over similarly gifted American women. They had the good fortune to grow up in an environment where there are psychological freedoms for recognizing scientific talent in both sexes.

Many have felt it was not natural for a girl to take science, to be able in mathematics. The blame for much of this falls on the parents, guidance counselors and society in general. One biographer said that of 11 women scientists she interviewed, eight were born in America, five had no intention of majoring in science when they entered college, three of these five had omitted chemistry, physics and math completely from their high school curricula.

Of the five women elected to the National Academy of Science in 25 years, only one was American born.

In her final minutes, Mrs. Ledbetter urged to take heed and help encourage and prepare our female to excel in the field of science.

Those responding to roll call were Mmes. Larry Cross, Holt Barber, Robert Finney, Joe Franklin, David Holt, McHenry Lane, Homer Johnson, Glen Larsen, Ellis Locke, M. McDaniel, Aubrey Steele, Jack Ward, John Warner and Richard Van Kluyve.

Holiday Decorations Program Highlights Preceptor Meet

Members of Preceptor Chi of Beta Sigma Phi met recently in the home of Mrs. Gerry Grayson. The business meeting was conducted by the vice president, Mrs. Ray Jordan.

Plans for a dinner party, with husband of members as guests, were discussed. The dinner will be in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Esson at 7 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 26.

Other upcoming events discussed were plans for our High School Scholarship New Years' Eve Dance. Plans were made for the buffet to be served at the dance. Tickets for this dance and buffet are available from any Beta Sigma Phi members.

The Dec. 3 meeting of the chapter will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Citizens Bank Hospitality Room. Following the business meeting members will meet with the Upsilon Chapter and attend their bazaar.

The program speaker for the evening, Mrs. James Malone, was introduced by Mrs. James Trusty. Mrs. Malone's subject was holiday arrangements and decorations. Numerous centerpieces were displayed which had been made from live material. Mrs. Malone pointed out to the group that Pampa has been most fortunate this fall to have a plentiful supply of live plants to work with in arrangements.

Special emphasis was given to Thanksgiving and Christmas decorations. Mrs. Malone gave the members various ideas for making Thanksgiving centerpieces, as well as explaining how to make Christmas wreaths and other door pieces.

Mrs. Malone concluded her program by giving the members two holiday recipes, as good food goes along with pretty decorations.

75,000 Strong... Cotton Crop Estimate Up Again... Sheep Feeding Below A Month Ago.

From now through early December, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service will be expecting to hear from 75,000 agricultural producers in the state.

It's time for the annual crop and livestock surveys for Texas. If you happen to be one of the 75,000 who will receive either a crop or livestock survey card, you are requested to fill it out as carefully and as accurately as possible. Then return it as soon as possible.

In cooperating in this survey, you will be helping to give everyone in Texas a true picture of the state's most basic industry—agriculture.

Your individual answers will be kept strictly confidential. The only people who will see your report are those officially designated to compile the individual reports into county, district and state totals. No other government agency will have access to the reports you send.

In past years, Texas has led the nation in getting returns on a voluntary basis from farmers. Texas agriculture producers have cooperated better and more fully than any other state.

Agricultural statisticians in other states are always amazed when they see the response from Texas farmers and ranchers. Anyone who lives in Texas knows the reason for the cooperation. Farmers and ranchers in Texas are just naturally more cooperative than are farmers in other states.

The final reports on Texas agriculture provide basic information for use by government and private industry.

COTTON estimates for Texas are up again. The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service now estimates cotton in Texas for the 1973 season at 4,800,000 bales, an increase of 50,000 bales over the Oct. 1 forecast.

This year's production forecast for Texas is the largest since the record 6,040,000 bales produced in 1949. Yield, based on Nov. 1 conditions, is expected to average a record 419 pounds of lint per acre compared with 408 pounds last year and the previous record yield of 410 pounds per acre reached in 1968.

Acres for harvest are set at 5,500,000 compared with 5,000,000 in 1972.

As of Nov. 1, harvest statewide was estimated at 27 per cent complete. This compares with 33 per cent a year ago.

Production of American-Pima cotton in Texas for 1973 is estimated at 29,200 bales compared with 31,400 bales in 1972. Yield is expected to average 449 pounds per acre compared with 437 pounds last year.

Harvested acres are estimated at 31,200, down 3,300 from the 34,500 acre harvest in 1972.

Cotton producers throughout the state are urged to destroy cotton stalks as soon after harvest as possible. Cotton stalk destruction is perhaps the best method in controlling cotton insects for next year's crop.

DRYLOT sheep feeders in Texas with a lot capacity of 2,000 head or more had 93,000 sheep and lambs on feed for slaughter Nov. 1. This is 13 per cent below the number on feed a month ago and 27 per cent below the number on feed of last year.

Placements during October totaled 31,000 head with a total of 10 feeders reporting 1,000 or more head on feed as of Nov. 1.

Marketings during October totaled 45,000 head. Intentions to market are: November 33,000; December 28,000; and January 32,000. These are incomplete at this time for December and January, however.

Both in Texas and throughout the nation, stocks of the four feed grains—corn, oats, barley and sorghum—show declines as of Oct. 1.

In Texas, the stocks of the four feed grains are set at 52,000,000 bushels, down 40,000,000 bushels from a year ago. Grain sorghum was responsible for most of the decrease. Corn stocks are below a year ago, but stocks of oats and barley are above a year ago.

Wheat stocks in all positions in Texas is estimated to be 18 per cent below a year ago.

Old Crop grain sorghum stocks are 67 per cent under a year ago, the lowest level since 1954. Corn stocks of old crop grain is 49 per cent below a year ago.

Oat stocks are up 11,300,000 bushels from a year ago; barley stocks are 1,200,000 higher than a year ago, and rye stocks are 84,000 bushels more than a year ago.

Nationwide, stocks of all grains are down 26 per cent.

SALES of cattle, calves, sheep, goats and hogs in Texas are below year ago totals, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service notes.

Cattle and calves marketed through auctions in Texas during September numbered 602,000 head, 15 per cent below a year ago and 33 per cent below the previous month.

Sheep sales during September totaled 75,000 head; this is 41 per cent below a year ago and 54 per cent below a month ago. Goat sales during September totaled 33,000 head; this is 28 per cent below last year and 13 per cent below a month ago.

Hog sales totaled 37,000 head, this is both 18 per cent below a month ago and a year ago.

EGG production statewide during September is four per cent below a year ago and two per cent under last month. Nationwide, egg production was down four per cent from the past year and three per cent less than August.

Texas layers totaled 11,100,000 during September, two per cent below a year ago but one per cent above August. The number of layers throughout the nation declined four per cent from last year, but showed a one per cent increase from last month.

PRODUCTION of egg-type chicks, broilers, chicks, and turkey poults in Texas is up from a year ago. Nationwide, the trend is also true.

The September hatch of egg-type chicks in Texas is up two per cent from a year ago and 10 per cent from a month earlier. The match of broiler chicks increased two per cent from a year ago but was three per cent less than the preceding month.

The total poult hatch was more than double that of a year ago, but was four per cent below a month ago.

THE 1972 county statistics for Texas Agriculture production are now available. Single county sheets are available on request.

The entire book contains agricultural production information for all 254 counties in Texas—from Anderson through Zapata.

Information includes total gross income for each county, production and value of each commodity in individual counties, and totals for livestock and poultry production as well.

Panhandle Water

By FELIX W. RYALS
The Sun-Oil Company vs. Whitaker case, over who had the exclusive right to the water beneath the land, went to the Texas Supreme Court two times. Each time the Supreme Court ruled that the landowner owned the water and that Sun Oil did not have a free right to as much of the underground fresh water as it needed for water flooding purposes. One year after the second ruling, the Supreme Court reversed itself.

Another case has now reached the Texas Supreme Court from Wood County. Austin American - Statesmen carried the story by the Associated Press on Thursday of last week. Because of its importance to West Texas irrigation farmers we are carrying a portion of it in our column today.

The Texas Supreme Court agreed with a northeast Texas landowner Wednesday that an oil operator had no right to take salt water from beneath his 80 acres to attempt to recover oil throughout a 2,000-acre secondary unit.

In so ruling, the Texas court disagreed with a 1955 decision in Oklahoma which allowed wider use of such water in secondary operations. The trial court entered a judgment in favor of the operator and mineral interests owners, but the Supreme Court reversed those rulings.

The high court noted that R.O. Robinson has owned only the surface estate of 80 acres in Wood County since it was deeded him in 1964. His land was one of several tracts totaling 221 acres lead in 1943 to Robbins Petroleum Corp. by D.V. Wagoner and others.

Secondary recovery units were formed after Robinson acquired his land, and three waterflood units are being operated, and each includes all or part of the 221 acres. Robinson, the operator, uses a former oil well on the Robinson land to produce salt water to be injected and drive the three waterflood units.

Robinson complained that three million barrels of his salt water had been used.

It was decided by the Supreme Court in 1972, the court

County, State To Join Hands

By EVELYN MASON
County Executive Director Gray County ASCS

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and the Texas Railroad Commission have joined hands in an effort to increase efficiency in the handling of the mandatory allocation of middle distillate fuels. An agreement between the state and federal agencies should speed up the program.

Beginning immediately, ASCS County Office personnel will verify fuel needs for handling hardship cases on Form 00G-PAP-20 for all applications prior to their submission to the State Allocation Officer (Texas Railroad Commission).

Previously, it was planned that needed verification would be obtained after the form was submitted to the Austin office. Form 00G-PAP-20 is to be used by wholesale purchasers to request emergency allocations for immediate use. The form has been shipped to ASCS County Offices throughout the State and was made available to County Clerks' offices.

Also available is Form 00G-PAP-17 which is for the use of purchasers of middle distillate fuels in bulk supply to adjust their monthly allocation for the year or for obtaining a new allocation.

Further information may be obtained from the County ASCS offices.

said, that water is part of the surface estate, and Associate Justice Tom Reavley wrote Wednesday that it makes no difference whether it is fresh or salt water.

"In that same 1972 decision, Reavley said, the use of water for secondary recovery operations was upheld as the right of the mineral lessee. But he noted that there is no proof in the Robinson case that the waterflood operation was necessary to obtain oil from the Wagoner lease.

Reavley also wrote that the lower courts erred in allowing Robbins Petroleum to take salt water from Robinson's land to drive the 2,000 recovery unit without his consent and without compensating him.

Of Early Contracts

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—It's difficult for Anson R. Bertrand to see why any contract should not be honored, but he finds factors in the current farmer-merchant dispute over cotton contracts, which raise serious questions for both sides.

Dr. Bertrand is dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Texas Tech University, and the newly elected president of the Soil Science Society of America.

"The unusually high price of cotton is the focal point of the issues involved," he said. "The price of cotton has zoomed upward this year to the place where it is possible for some merchants who hold contracts to gain a real windfall."

The merchants claim, Bertrand said, that they are not making windfall profits because they bought the cotton on contract but also sold to the mill on contract.

Seek Ways To Refuse

"Farmers are asking for a share of the unusually high profits they see," he said. "Some farmers are seeking legal ways to refuse delivery on their contracts. But the merchants claim they, too, have already contracted the cotton at a lower-than-present market price, and must deliver at the price sold several months ago."

Although there has been some cotton contracting for years, the practice has become more generally accepted only in the past three to five years. This year it is estimated that 65-70 per cent of the Texas High Plains cotton acreage is under contract.

Bertrand said that the big jump in price might be attributed to inflation in general or possibly to a psychology of shortages, to the idea that if there are other shortages there may also be a cotton shortage.

Cotton estimates for the 29-county area surrounding Lubbock project a current ginning of 2,707,000 bales valued at $776.4 million. Farmers who contracted to sell their cotton at approximately 28 cents a pound subsequently saw the price more than double.

Some Merchants Default

There are some merchants who have defaulted on contracts held in past years. When prices fell, the merchants refused to buy the crop and told farmers any law suit would only bring on bankruptcy.

The majority of the merchants stand by their contracts, industry officials say. However, acquainted with Dr. Loyd Watkins, the new President of West Texas State University. He is an out-going person and readily becomes one of us. Everyone spoke highly of him and predicts great progress for West Texas State University under his leadership.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe spoke during the afternoon and was applauded wildly by an overflow crowd for his strong support of the irrigated economy of the Panhandle. He promised relief to the fuel and fertilizer needs of the farmers of Texas and especially West Texas.

Sen. Max Sherman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Water Resources for Texas, spoke strongly of continued support to solve the "watershort" problems of Texas.

R. C. Cline of Amarillo, chairman of the Panhandle Economic Program for the past year, is to be complimented, he, the excellent job he has done in leading the PEP area to greater economic heights.

Agriculturally Speaking

By FOSTER WHALEY
SWINE TOUR

Sam Thomas, agriculture specialist with Southwestern Public Service, advises me "A trip is being planned for Dec. 3 to see a number of Cargill-type buildings in use in the Wichita-McPherson - St. John-Coldwater areas of Kansas. Seven or eight units will be visited. These will include birth to market units, farrowing only and finishing only. Some of them will have central and other facilities, as well as the Cargill system.

"Cargill is furnishing their company an executive bus for the trip at their expense. The cost to individual tour members will be for motel room for two nights and meals for three days."

I have other information on the tour should anyone be interested.

WHEAT SYMPOSIUM

The Texas Wheat Producers are holding their annual meeting at Amarillo's Holiday Inn West Nov. 28. The following day they are sponsoring a symposium on wheat. The speakers list includes Roy Davis, Potter, Neb., president of National Wheat Producers Association; Herman Schmitz, Williston, N.D., president of Great Plains Wheat, Inc.; Glenn Wier, associate administrator, ASCS, Washington, D.C. and a host of other well-recognized speakers. The speakers list of the symposium looks equally impressive. We urge every wheat producer to take advantage of these two days that will be packed with fine information.

STATE FARMERS UNION MEETING

The Texas Farmers Union is holding their 70th annual convention at the Ko Ko Palace Convention Hall in Lubbock Dec. 7 and 8.

They, too, have a most impressive program.

Their speakers look like a Who's Who list. They include the Honorable Loyd Bentsen, U.S. Senator; Honorable

George Mahon, U.S. Congressman, Lubbock; and John C. White, State Commissioner of Agriculture. They also have many other informative speakers. Everyone is invited regardless of whether you are a member or not.

SNOW AND RAIN

The snow contained a lot of moisture. Unfortunately, most of it wound up in the bar ditch. Some rain fell prior to the snow. Some reports exceeded one-half inch, which will be helpful. The freeze will also condition all the late planted milo for harvest. There is still a rather large acreage of milo to be harvested. The Nov. 20 freeze date is twenty days later than the average first freeze or frost. October and early November weather was ideal for the late-planted milo. Every farmer was ready for the frost and freeze. Delay in harvesting the milo had held cattle out of both stalk fields and wheat fields. Now the milo can be harvested and the cattle turned loose on the entire field.

Many farmers are returning their milo ground to wheat. I know of some that already have the land worked, fertilized, and planted to wheat. Several things have caused this—including the price of wheat. Other factors include cleaning up land that has been in irrigated milo for three or more years, scattering out work because of fertilizer and fuel shortages.

Earlier we suggested that farmers start early and not all concentrate their work at the same time. We feel farmers in this area are doing just this. Fertilizer dealers really like the idea. Fertilizer companies should be pleased with a more even distribution pattern throughout the year, rather than two peak late winter and late summer runs.

Now that everyone is tired of turkey, let's all eat more beef and start the fat cattle market up. We believe you will soon see a nice trend upward in the fat market.

Bill Wedemeyer, Texas Farm

Bureau information specialist, State Farm Bureau, had some very pertinent information with regard to the Mid-East oil shutoff.

Bill says the Middle East Exports about one million barrels of crude oil a day to America. This makes up about 5.7 per cent of our total U.S. demand. Bill says the oil cutoff will hurt the Arab, European, and Japanese economy a great deal more than that of the United States.

He backs this up by pointing out that we exported 159 per cent more products to the nine Arab States than they imported to us. For instance, in 1972 we sold Egypt about 73 million dollars of material and purchased only 18 million dollars of material from them.

Kuwait purchased over $100 million in material from the U.S. and sold us less than $50 million. Syria purchased $24 million from U.S. and sold us slightly over $2 million. Libya was the only country that sold us more material than we purchased from them.

A glance at some of the items sold to these countries included oil and gas field equipment and supplies, engines, tractors, trucks, equipment tires, automotive diesel and marine engine lubrication oil. Kuwait imported 9,659 barrels of such oil at a cost of nearly one-half million. Saudi Arabia imported over a million dollars worth of some oil.

A most important item is the fact we export large quantities of agricultural products to these countries. In the months of July, August and September 1973, we sold Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Arabian Peninsula States, and Egypt almost $58 million worth of agricultural products. In 1972 the export-import bank of U.S. extended well over $100 million worth of credit to these countries.

Now I have a suggestion—with this kind of lever, let's send Rip Barrett and Rex McAnelly over there to do a little hess trading. Rex and Rip could have those Arabs doubling their oil quota every 30 days.

Harvest Is Progressing

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI)—Open weather across the state this week allowed harvest operations to make good progress, and freezing temperatures in the Texas High Plains should increase cotton harvesting.

Cotton harvesting has been active in the plains and western areas of the state although many farmers are still waiting on a killing frost to defoliate the crop—one of the best in years, reported the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton harvesting also made good progress in the Blacklands and South Central and South-east Texas and should be completed soon with continued open weather. Quality of the crop has declined in southern areas due to the prolonged wet weather.

Peanut harvesting was active in Central and South Central Texas and yields have generally been good, according to the extension service.

Soybeans have produced good yields in the High Plains and in North Central Texas, but prolonged wet conditions have damaged the crop in the Coastal Plains.

Broilers Down But Eggs Remain High

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rising production will hold broiler chicken prices down for the next few months but egg output is rising more slowly and prices will remain relatively high for the rest of the year. Agriculture Department economists predict.

"They added that turkey prices also will be comparatively high through the Thanksgiving-Christmas holiday season because—although production is up—a reduced storage supply will hold overall available poultage about 2-3 per cent below a year ago.

The poultry and egg situation summary issued by Agriculture Department experts said egg production, after sagging 5 per cent below a year earlier from January through October, is now "back on an expansion path." By early 1974 monthly egg production figures should match year-earlier levels and there probably will be a "significant increase" in production by mid-1974, the report said.

Experts noted the number of before judgments are made. It's important to understand, Bertrand said, that the farmers contracted the cotton at a given price which reduced their risks and allowed them to make production plans.

During 1970 fires destroyed 555,831 acres of Forest Service-protected lands, the highest in 36 years.

Nov. 1 was up 15 per cent from a year earlier, which means a probable 14 per cent increase in the number of young chickens available for expanding egg-laying flocks later in winter and early next spring.

Egg prices, after peaking in August, declined into October and then rose again this month as mid-month wholesale prices averaged 69 cents a dozen, up 7 cents from October. The report said prices will remain high through the end of the year but will decline seasonally later in the winter and next spring.

Broiler chicken production, recovering faster than eggs, will top year-ago rates in November and December although total 1973 output will be about 2 per cent below 1972, the report added. Experts predicted November-December supplies will be 2-3 per cent above a year ago. They said production may dip temporarily in early 1974 but then may resume its uptrend in the spring.

Yakov Malik: Stalinist throwback Soviets' U.N. envoy still a cold warrior

By Tom Tiede
UNITED NATIONS — (NEA) — When Soviet Ambassador Yakov Malik interrupted a Security Council meeting here the other week with one of his energetic points of order, a Chinese representative stood up, arms waving, and said to the Russian:

"You should wait. What does it matter if you wait a few minutes? You should do things with style. I've known you for decades and you've never changed your habits."

That said it, probably, for many of the diplomats at the meeting that day. And no doubt for thousands of others who have observed Malik during a quarter century of U.N. activity. Governments change. Government attitudes change also. But the Malik of the '70s is much like the Malik of the '40s — a thorn in this great body's side.

Yet if he's a pain to progressive diplomacy, Jacob Aleksandrovich Malik must be joy for his employers. In two terms as chief U.N. delegate for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (1948 to 1952 and 1968 to present) the 67-year-old "Ambassador Extraordinary" apparently has gotten from the United Nations just about what Moscow wants: world attention, apprehension and occasionally, respect.

The other day Malik got all three at one time. During debates over the Middle East peace-keeping force, he engaged in a finger-pointing shouting match with U.S. Ambassador John Scali. While reporters recorded the scene for the newsreading globe and other delegates stood by in shock and fear for their Middle East resolution, Malik made his point: He wanted a single word change in the document for truce force authority. He wanted it to read that the peacekeepers would act with "approval" rather than just the "consent" of the Security Council.

Nitpicking? Not at all, say observers. The word approval is a stronger one than consent, thus safeguarding Malik's veto right over any U.N. force action to which Moscow might object.

Nitpicking? Not at all, say observers. The word approval is a stronger one than consent, thus safeguarding Malik's veto right over any U.N. force action to which Moscow might object.

Perhaps it wasn't necessary for him to threaten the entire Middle East peace, observes a U.S. official here. "But you have to hand it to him. For him Moscow comes before everything." Other Russian delegates, adds the official, such as Andrei Vishinsky, did not always appear to have their heart in the Russian style of brinkmanship diplomacy, but "Malik is a true believer — he worries the U.N. so much at times it will do anything to calm him."

The bully label, to be sure, has long been attached to the Soviet representative. And if it is fair it is also true that, early in his U.N. career, he may have been provoked into the role of the troll. In his first stint here, during the beginnings of the Korean War, he was treated by many Western nations as something out of a warm hole. Sir Eric Cadogan said Malik was stuffed with "vulgarity."

YAKOV MALIK

Cold warriors in the U.S. delegation passed around jokes about his nation. When Stalin died he met God, who marveled, "You've done wonders, Joseph. I gave your people one day of fasting, you've given them seven." After one Soviet address in the General Assembly, an Australian passed around a note reading: the speech would be fine "if it didn't come from the most outlandish dictatorship in the world."

No doubt Malik deserved some of the scorn. He moved about the United Nations surrounded by an Iron Curtain of oafish aides and security personnel. He heaped abuse on many nations during self-serving floor addresses. And when, in 1950, he took his turn as Security Council president during the Korean conflict, he insisted on putting that agonizing matter well down the agenda.

Even so, the treatment accorded Malik at times was uncivilized. And so, says a U.S. authority today: "I believe he learned two things in those days. One that the bourgeois were indeed his enemies. And two, that he had to shout at us to get our real attention. It's somewhat anachronistic today, but I think he still believes it."

Indeed, Malik seldom forgets the past. A still-a-bit-rough product of the Bolshevik Revolution, hardened even more by the experience of World War II (three million of his Ukrainian people died during Nazi occupation) he is a man, says a British official here, "who is exceptionally protective of Russian interests." In sum, he's hard nosed — and even during detente a cold warrior.

It is this latter trait, perhaps, that most distinguishes and affects Malik's U.N. performance. Some say that even after nine years U.N. experience (the most for a Russian), he is because of continued hatred for the West, a flawed diplomat. When he began service here he was so resentful of non-Communists that he committed the biggest diplomatic gaffe in U.N. history — he boycotted the Security Council, because of a petty disappointment, thus ironically allowing that body to send a U.N. force to Korea.

Today, though more polished, he remains unpredictably clumsy. Says a critic here: "It would be better for the Soviets to get someone else."

But would it be better for the rest of the world? Perhaps not. Someone else might be smoother, even more conciliatory on small issues, but U.S. authorities believe the West is better off with Malik. "He reminds us that Russia is still Russia," explains one U.N. veteran. "Detente may be blooming. East-West relations warming up, but when Malik stands in the U.N., like a big stubborn bear, it's a healthy reminder of some unchanging truths."

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The sudden realization that the energy crisis is real prompted a psychological reaction among both investors and speculators that is likely to affect the stock market for some time. W. E. Hutton & Co. said.

"The psychology of the emergency is perhaps the most important intermediate-term stock market factor," the company said in a market analysis.

The Timings newsletter predicts that major growth companies, the favorites of institutional investors, will "plunge precipitously" and carry the rest of the stock market with them.

"We continue to feel that a crucial point concerning probable price behavior of the stock market, as a whole, in the month ahead will rest on the performance of the great growth companies which reflect the 'core holdings' of major financial institutions," Timings said. "We expect the great ones to plunge precipitously."
