PAMPA -- Jerome Stewart, principal of Pampa Middle School, said a student was disciplined this week for carrying a stun-gun to school. Stewart said it was a non-lethal weapon. He said it was in violation of school policy to have the weapon at school.

PAMPA -- The Pampa Chamber of Commerce Legislative Committee will be having an informational meeting on the proposed 16 Texas constitutional amendments at a breakfast meeting at 7 a.m. Thursday.

The meeting will be held in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard. A continental breakfast will be available. Jerry Wilson, committee chairman, said Helen Riepma, immediate past president of the League of Women Voters of Amarillo, will present a community informational meeting on the constitutional amendments to be voted on next Tuesday, Nov. 2.

NEW YORK (AP) — Paramount Communications Inc., the focus of a fierce takeover battle, said it had agreed with Chris-Craft Industries Inc. to launch a fifth broadcast television network in early 1995.

The new network would begin with four hours of original programming over two nights anchored by a new "Star Trek" show but would eventually expand to compete against the four existing networks — ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Army helicopter pilot says he thought he was going to die after his helicopter was shot down in Somalia and he ran out of bullets in a gun battle in Mogadishu.

Chief Warrant Officer Dale Shrader, 29, of Narrows, Va., said Tuesday he was prepared to go to heaven after he and his co-pilot were shot down Sept. 25 by a rocket-propelled grenade. Shrader said he fired his last bullet at a Somali who was firing at them with an automatic weapon.

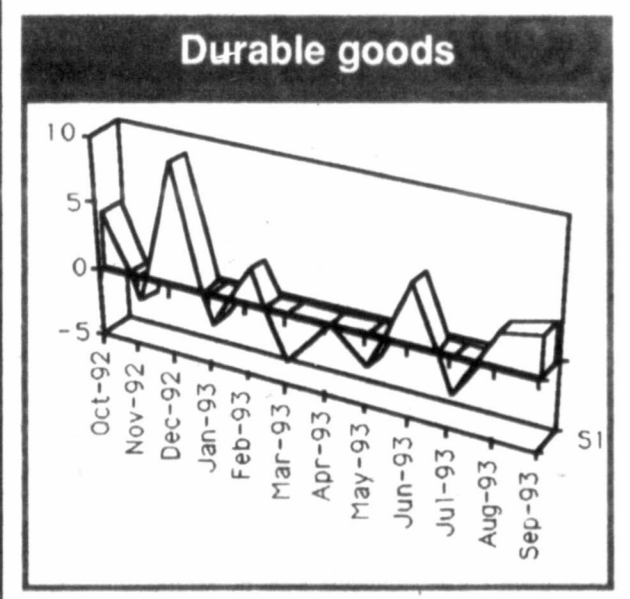

He is being treated for burns to his neck and arm and is listed in satisfactory condition.

PASADENA (AP) — The Pasadena City Council has approved an ordinance that would fine parents up to $500 if their juvenile children are involved in shootings.

Some residents of the Houston suburb had asked council members to postpone action on the measure until a section on gun safety education could be included. Isbell, however, said he thought it was important to pass the ordinance as proposed and that it will be fine-tuned in months to come.

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A federal appeals court spared the life of a former electrician just moments before he could have been put to death early today for fatally stabbing an Arlington woman more than five years ago. Frank McFarland, 30, averted lethal injection for killing Terri Lynn Hokanson, a shoeshine girl at a Fort Worth bar. The woman, 26, suffering from nearly 50 wounds in what authorities described as a stabbing frenzy, was found lying in the driveway of a church in Hurst on Feb. 1, 1988.

AUSTIN (AP) — Bids for a pilot project to use a plastic card system to deliver food stamp benefits were too high, which will delay implementation of the proposal for at least one month, officials say. Now the state plans to buy the pilot project system, which was to be the largest in the nation, through a new procedure called "catalogue purchasing." That is where different components of the project are done by different contractors. The plastic card program had been touted by State Comptroller John Sharp as a way to save money through the elimination of paper, printing, security and hauling costs.

Rodriguez sentenced for sexual assault

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS News Editor

A man convicted of sexual assault on Tuesday was sentenced to 45 years in prison.

District Judge Lee Waters pronounced sentence today on 32-year-old Abram Galaviz Rodriguez. The sentence was based on three factors: the repulsiveness of the offense to society, previous opportunities for rehabilitation while in prison and history of other offenses, the judge said.

The goal of the sentence, Waters said, was separation from society.

District Attorney John Mann asked the court today to sentence Rodriguez to life imprisonment citing the heinous nature of the crime and prior convictions.

Defense attorney David Holt told the court that Rodriguez's previous convictions were for nonviolent offenses and that the victim in this case had not been injured. He recommended the minimum punishment possible, 25 years imprisonment, for his client.

"I don't know that the penitentiary will rehabilitate Mr. Rodriguez," Holt said. "I don't know that the penitentiary ever rehabilitated anybody."

Rodriguez was convicted in 1978 of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and in 1986 for unlawful delivery of marijuana.

Twenty five years to life imprisonment is the range of punishment on a charge of sexual assault on an enhanced indictment. An enhanced indictment reflects previous felony convictions and raises the range of punishment options for the offense.

Rodriguez will remain in Gray County jail until bed space is available in a Texas prison.

Rodriguez was convicted Tuesday for the sexual assault of a 22-year-old retarded man which occurred on July 4, 1992 at a westside motel.

The jury returned a verdict at about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday after about 3 1/2 hours deliberation.

Trick-or-treaters can choose varied Halloween activities

Beginning Thursday evening and continuing through the weekend, there will be a number of Halloween activities by local churches, schools, businesses and the city.

Thursday, Austin Elementary School will have a Fall Festival carnival, bake sale and chili supper from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the school.

Horace Mann Elementary School Fall Festival participants will have a carnival, bake sale and stew supper. The evening's festivities are scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. and last until 9 p.m. and are sponsored by the Horace Mann Booster Club.

Another activity, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, will be the Women of the Moose playing host to a Family Night at the Moose Hall. A Halloween carnival and a meal for members and their guests are planned.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m., Monday's Employees Club will host its fourth annual haunted house at the intersection of Francis and Kingsmill beginning Oct. 28 and continuing through Oct. 30. Doors open at 7 p.m.

Friday, local civic groups as well as the city will get into the act.

The Pampa Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, will host a dance from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. Refreshments will be served and a costume contest will be held.

The city will host a Halloween party at Fire Station #1, across from City Hall, for area children. There will be a parade with participants scheduled to meet at 5:30 p.m. on the south lawn of the Lovett Memorial Library.

The children will be led on foot to the fire station, where refreshments will be served, a costume contest held and two short movies shown.

Children will receive pre-packaged bags of treats at the party, which is scheduled to last approximately an hour, according to Shane Stokes, Pampa's recreation superintendent.

Saturday, even more activities will be scared up as a number of organizations host haunted houses and other festive events.

Beginning at 7 p.m. and lasting until 10 p.m., Pampa's unit of the National Guard will be hosting its annual Spook House at the Texas National Guard Building east of Pampa on U.S. 60. Instant pictures will be available for a fee.

Meanwhile, at Calvary Baptist Church a different sort of celebration will be going on. The church, which is located at 900 E. 23rd Ave., will be hosting a "Hallowed House" which will feature scene depicting accounts from the bible.

There will be ten stations in the tour, which is scheduled to last about 20 minutes.

Tours of the "Hallowed House" be going from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Lefors Independent School District will have its annual Halloween Carnival beginning at 6 p.m. Saturday in the Lefors High School building. There will be games, food, an auction and the annual Halloween coronation. The event is a major fund-raiser for organizations in the school district.

First Assembly of God Church, 521 S. Russell, will have a Fall Festival for area children and parents. It is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. and will feature games, prizes and costume judging contest for children.

At the Pampa Mall, businesses will be giving out treats from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

As for celebrating Halloween and going out to trick-or-treat, the city has not formally designated a specific day, either Saturday or Sunday, for children to go out and trick-or-treat, according to Bill Hildebrandt, Pampa's director of public works.

Two of four abducted family members freed

Compiled from staff and wire reports

A Pampa couple remained concerned for the safety of their granddaughter and great-granddaughter today after the girls were abducted over the weekend and taken to Mexico.

Jesse Mendoza and his wife said today in Pampa that they felt better since their daughter and one of their granddaughters were released by kidnappers near the Mexican border yesterday, but they were still concerned for the two girls who were being held.

"My heart has a nail through it," Mendoza said today. "My wife and I are very sad."

The Mendoza's daughter, Elydia Olivas, 46, and two granddaughters, Angie, 22, and Olga Olivas, 17, were taken from their Fredric Street home at gunpoint early Sunday morning, police said, along with Angie's two-year-old daughter, Ester.

Freed Tuesday were Olga and her mother, Elydia. Olga Olivas said that they were abducted along with her sister Angie and niece, Ester, by Ester's father.

Ms. Olga Olivas identified their captor as 30-year-old Esau Franco, a man she said her sister lived with previously and since has terrorized the family in his fight to gain custody of Ester.

The most recent ordeal, she said, began about 2 a.m. Sunday when a group of men burst into her home in Pampa. They were armed, she said, and three of them had their faces covered by towels. The family had moved to Oklahoma City from their Odessa home and then to Pampa in efforts to hide from Franco.

Santa Ana winds fan blaze across Southern California

By JEFF WILSON Associated Press Writer

Fires fanned by fierce Santa Ana winds torched dozens of homes and thousands of acres throughout Southern California today. One blaze threatened the San Diego Wild Animal Park.

A 2,000-acre fire that began overnight burned near the park in northeastern San Diego County and burned one outbuilding, but the animals were safe. Only about 25 California condors were evacuated from the park, which is affiliated with San Diego Zoo, authorities said.

At least seven major fires were reported burning from Ventura County, northwest of Los Angeles, to the Mexican border. No letup was in sight as early-morning temperatures reached the 80s in some areas.

Hot, dry winds gusting to 60 mph turned brushfires into ember-scattering maelstroms that sent sheets of smoke hundreds of miles, triggering evacuations and stretching firefighting crews to the limit.

"Everything is totally yellow here and it's just terrifying," said Elissa Vecchione, who was east of Pasadena near the San Gabriel Mountains.

"The top of the mountain just got engulfed in flames," she said. "The flames are just huge. The smoke is blocking the top."

Traffic was chaotic, several freeways and schools were closed, and evacuation centers were set up. Choking brown smoke covered the neighborhoods.

At least 100 homes were evacuated around Altadena, just north of Pasadena.

"Evacuate now!" ordered sheriff's deputies by loudspeaker, but some residents kept hosing down roofs in an area where homes can cost as much as $500,000.

Four Los Angeles city firefighters were injured when wind-driven flames rushed through the Santa Susana Pass, in far northwestern Los Angeles near the Ventura County line.

Among the other serious fires: —In Thousand Oaks in Ventura County, a blaze blamed on arson blackened 1,700 acres and destroyed two homes. Some multimillion-dollar celebrity homes, including ones owned by Tom Selleck and Richard Widmark, were threatened, authorities said.

"We left only with the clothes on our back," said Eleanor Rasnow, 65, who helped rush her 101-year-old mother, Helen Herz, out of a house that burned. "My mother was terrified. Everything is burned to the ground."

—A 2,000-acre blaze damaged or destroyed 28 homes and injured at least five residents today in Riverside County east of Los Angeles, said Bob Blatz, a spokesman for the California Department of Forestry.

Submarine report declassified

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The secret of why the USS Thresher sank in 1963 lies at the bottom of the Atlantic with her 129 crewmen.

But declassified Navy documents suggest a frantic scene where a faulty pipe joint gave way, allowing an explosive rush of ocean water to flood the engine room and doom the sub.

A Navy report released this week agreed with long-held suspicions that a hole in a pipe was the culprit in the catastrophe. The report said the hole probably was two to five inches wide.

The flooding on the Thresher shorted electrical circuits, triggering an automatic shutdown of the reactor, the report said. When the captain tried to empty seawater from ballast tanks, that system failed, causing the sub to sink.

The sub was crushed when it reached a depth too great for its hull to withstand the water pressure.

The Navy released the documents along with previously classified information on the Scorpion, the only other U.S. nuclear submarine ever lost at sea. The Scorpion sank in 1968 after a torpedo exploded. The report says the torpedo somehow became armed and the crew jettisoned it, only to have it swing around and blast the sub.

City OKs public employees golf discounts, sets new rules for cable TV basic service

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

During Tuesday's regular session meeting of the Pampa City Commission, the mayor and commissioners unanimously voted to support two ordinances dealing with the way many residents spend their leisure time.

Both ordinances were presented for the first time and need to be formally read and voted on again by the commissioners before they become part of the City Code.

The first ordinance, No. 1237, deals with providing a 10 percent group discount to employees of city, county, state and federal agencies as well as employees of the Pampa Independent School District at the municipal golf course.

Organizations with 50 employees or less will be eligible for a discount of 10 percent if three or more of the employees purchase an annual pass at the golf course. The passes only take the place of green fees and not additional fees incurred by the use of the driving range or golf carts.

Organizations with 50 employees or more will be eligible for a discount of 10 when eight percent of the employees purchase the annual passes.

Earlier this week both Hidden Hills Public Golf Course Pro David Teichmann and Bill Hildebrandt, Pampa's director of community services, said the proposed ordinance would increase revenues for the city and get more people out on the course.

The second ordinance, No. 1238, establishes the rules by which the city can regulate cable communications basic service.

The ordinance is designed to comply with the Federal Communications Commission's recent policy granting authority to regulate the basic service to local cities.

These rules do not amend or do away with the original franchise agreement with Sammon's Communication, Pampa's cable operator, according to Hildebrandt.

In other business, the city sold two delinquent tax properties, one located at 1117 S. Clark and the other located at 835 E. Albert, for $1,200 and $200, respectively. For both properties, approximately $4,200 was owed to the city.

In another land-related item on the commission's agenda, the mayor and commissioners voted to transfer the property belonging to the city between the PISD vehicle storage area and the Sante Fe railroad tracks south of Foster Avenue to the school district.

Prior to the transfer, the school district mistakenly had the area paved and was using it, thinking it belonged to them.

Appointments to two local boards were also addressed by the mayor and commissioners.

In the first instance, Susan Winborne was appointed to the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium Advisory Board.

Following that, Neil Quattlebaum was appointed to a new term on the Gray County Appraisal District Board of Directors. Previously, Quattlebaum was appointed to fill the unexpired term of another director which was scheduled to expire Dec. 31, 1993.

Finally, the commissioners reviewed the month's lists of disbursements. In addition, they reviewed a list of materials which were designated as surplus and are ready for the city auction to be held Nov. 13.

Following the regular meeting of the commission, the mayor and commissioners went into executive session for 45 minutes to discuss threatened litigation.

No action was taken after the executive session concluded.

Abducted

Ms. Olivas said the intruders burst into their home Sunday morning shouting, identifying themselves as FBI agents, and carried flashlights to find their way in the dark house. The men, six or seven of them, threatened to shoot if anyone moved, she said.

The women and child were herded into pickups for what was the beginning of a two-and-half day, 800-mile trek to the border.

Once across the border, Ms. Olivas said, Franco told all three women they could go, but that he was keeping Ester.

"My sister wouldn't go without Ester," she said. "He said (to Angie), 'I don't need you, but you're not taking Ester. I don't want you to say I took you forcibly.'"

Olga Olivas was allowed to cross back into the United States by driving a pickup into Presidio. She then met her mother, who crossed the river in a boat at Redford, she said.

The two were met by law enforcement officials at a store called Winns in Redford, she said.

Angie and Ester still are believed to be in Mexico, according to the FBI.

Although he has not been charged in Sunday's alleged abduction, Franco has been named by the FBI as the primary suspect in the case.

Ms. Olivas said she has given up hope of ever escaping from Franco. Franco is wanted in connection with the alleged kidnapping of Olivas' brother, Guadalupe, on May 8, 1993, said Tom Kirspeil, supervisor of the Midland office of the FBI.

Guadalupe Olivas was kidnapped in Presidio and held for more than a month in Mexico before being released on July 2, Kirspeil said. Authorities said he was tortured during his captivity.

Ms. Olivas said her sister lived with Franco for about 2 1/2 years in Durango, Mexico.

Olga and Angie were born and reared in Odessa, family members said. Angie apparently met Franco in Andrews.

Law enforcement officers were still searching for Franco today. Officers said there was a federal warrant for his arrest in connection with the abduction of Guadalupe Olivas and officers on both sides of the border wanted to question Franco in connection with drug trafficking and the execution-style slaying of a family near Durango, Mexico.

Olga and her mother, who were on their way back to Pampa today, indicated that Franco had crossed the border several times, apparently without any problem with border guards.

Franco is reported to have a home in Durango and has shaved his beard and mustach. Authorities said he is also reported to be wearing his hair very short.

City commissioners face bad news on landfill, water sale

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK Staff Writer

Pampa's city commissioners were digesting two bits of bad news today after being told during Tuesday afternoon's work session that a water contract would not be renewed and an engineering study would cost more than originally planned.

The first bad news came from the City of Lubbock in the form a letter and appeared to be a surprise to everyone involved.

In the faxed letter dated Oct. 25, Dan A. Hawkins, Lubbock's director of public works, said the city would no longer purchase water from Pampa after Dec. 31, 1993. In financial terms, the loss of the water sales mean Pampa will no longer be collecting approximately $100,000 from the water sale, according to John Horst, Pampa's director of finance.

As for why Lubbock decided to pull out of the agreement, Lubbock officials apparently believe their current water supply will be enough to see them through to immediate future.

"The City of Lubbock, after a careful review of its water supply and projected demands for the foreseeable future, has determined it would not be in the City of Lubbock's best interest to continue to obtain water by this agreement," said Hawkins in the letter.

The agreement between Pampa and Lubbock, both of which get water from the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, was executed on Feb. 21, 1989, and went into effect May 1, 1989.

The second bit of bad news came during the review of the preliminary year-end financial report.

Horst told the mayor and commissioners that a study by the engineering firm of Emcon Baker Shiflett Inc. for the solid waste department's proposed landfill could cost an additional $200,000, bringing the total cost of the study to $500,000 to $600,000.

The commission seemed shocked at the report and unwilling to allow the additional costs.

"We just can't toss around $100,000, $200,000 or $300,000," said Commissioner Ray Hupp.

In addition to going over budget, Horst also told the commission that because of the additional costs, the cash balance of the solid waste department is in dire straits.

"If we continue at the pace we're going with this, I would like to discuss a short-term note to pay for this stuff and see what you gentlemen think," Horst said in reference to allocating additional, unbudgeted funds to the study.

"I don't think that it's even in consideration. I think we need to stretch out the study," said Hupp. "I'm totally against any short term note. If we need to stretch the study out, let's stretch it out."

Another commissioner suggested having a representative of the engineering firm come to Pampa and explain to the commission why the study, which was originally going to cost approximately $250,000, is costing so much more.

"I think if we need to have somebody from Baker Shiflett (here). I think we'd better have that," said Commissioner Gary Sutherland. "Whatever we'd have to do on that situation, we'd better do."

Sutherland later added, "I think they need to be on the seat, I personally think they should be on the hot seat. I don't know what the rest of you think, but if you're putting out that kind of money and they're that far over budget, they need to be on the hot seat. They need to be here."

Emcon Baker Shiflett is in the second phase of the three-phase study of the effect of a proposed landfill for the city, according to Horst. Monitoring wells have been drilled, an alternative landfill liner study has been completed and an archaeological study of the area has been done, all part of new federal mandates local governments are forced to follow.

When completed, the landfill could cost could cost nearly $20 million to construct and maintain, according to figures from the engineering firm.

"Aren't we basically talking about digging a hole in the ground? And spending $600,000 to see if we can?" said Commissioner Jerry Wilson, seemingly dazed by the requirements and the funding.

"You're talking about digging a hole in the ground the way the government wants," Hupp said.

"It's bureaucracy at its ultimate," then said Sutherland.

Pampa Meals on Wheels

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and services funded by Pampa United Way assistance. The information is provided by the United Way from the 16 agencies receiving funding from the organization.

Dear Son,

I enjoyed your letter. Yes, I am fine. For a few moments last night I wasn't so sure. I had a bad dream. I dreamed I was out on my front porch, locking the door, when some faceless person had hold of my arm leading me toward a van that had Meadowbrook Nursing Home printed on the side. I was crying. I knew I would never go back home again.

I suddenly awoke, my pillow was wet and my heart was pounding. It took a few seconds for me to realize it was only a dream, thank God.

Do you remember when I was depressed and losing weight? My doctor suggested I try taking Meals on Wheels. In fact, he called them for me. I have been getting the hot meals every weekday for over a year now. I cannot believe how much better I feel — not like I am 85! I enjoy the meals, but I also think the brief contact with a friendly volunteer means just as much.

Another thing, I have gotten a new insight into what the United Way means to a community. The driver is underway here now, and I have gotten really interested in it. I will contribute what I can. I read that the goal is reached by many small gifts and that makes sense. I know what the United Way means to Meals on Wheels, so just think how important it is to 16 agencies!

Well, that's all for now. Write again soon. Hope to see you Thanksgiving ...

Love,
Dad

Volunteers are currently out seeking contributions for the 1993 Pampa United Way fund-raising campaign. Those not being contacted may call the United Way office at 669-1001 for information on how to make contributions.

New theory: Lack of oxygen, not asteroid, killed dinosaurs

BOSTON (AP) — Dinosaurs weren't done in by a giant asteroid, as one theory holds, but by a change in the atmosphere that meant there wasn't enough oxygen to support their inefficient respiratory systems, a new theory suggests.

A new analysis of air trapped in 120 million-year-old fossils casts doubt on the notion that the dinosaurs starved to death after a giant asteroid hit the planet 65 million years ago, sending up dust that blocked the sun and killed plant life.

Dinosaurs were already on their way out by the time the meteor purportedly hit, says Gary Landis, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist and one of four scientists presenting their theory at the Geological Society of America's annual meeting today.

"The dinosaurs did not keel over with their feet up in the air, but they found it increasingly difficult to compete in their environment."

The theory also carries implications for humans because it presumes that worldwide atmospheric changes can occur 10 to 20 times faster than previously thought, the researchers said.

Landis and his colleagues tested air found trapped in amber in east-central Minnesota. They found that the proportion of oxygen in the atmosphere fell from a high of 35 percent to a low of 28 percent within the relatively short time of between 300,000 and 500,000 years.

"It would be like taking a dinosaur for a stroll from sea level up to 6,000 to 7,000 feet," Landis said.

The oxygen-rich air resulted from volcanic activity that pumped out carbon dioxide, which was converted into oxygen by plants.

Dinosaurs evolved during this time, when oxygen was plentiful, and had a weak respiratory system, according to the theory known as the Pele Hypothesis. Pele is a Polynesian goddess of volcanoes.

"The dinosaurs survived and thrived in that environment because they didn't have to have anything more efficient," Landis said.

An 80-foot-long apatosaurus, also known as a brontosaurus, had a set of nostrils about the same size as a horse's, for example, said Richard A. Hengst, a Purdue University physiologist.

"There were some serious problems with trying to get air into that animal," Hengst said. "Dinosaurs could not have existed without having more oxygen in the air to start with."

The scientists said that smaller cold-blooded animals around at the time, such as snakes, lizards and turtles, were able to survive because of their relatively modest oxygen needs. So did some of the smaller mammals with more efficient respiratory systems, the scientists said.

Charges against Hutchison going to another grand jury

AUSTIN (AP) — Allegations that U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison used her previous office for political and personal gain are being taken to another grand jury, prosecutors said.

On Tuesday, State District Judge Mike Lynch dismissed indictments charging Mrs. Hutchison with official misconduct.

The indictments were dropped after Hutchison's lawyers discovered that the grand jury which handed them up included a juror who was ineligible because of a charge pending against him since 1988 for a $20 hot check.

A second grand jury has resumed the investigation into Hutchison, prosecutors said. A former aide to Hutchison when she was state treasurer was subpoenaed Tuesday.

Hutchison, a Republican, was indicted Sept. 27 on charges of using her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political purposes and then destroying records as part of a coverup.

She has denied any wrongdoing and calls the charges a Democratic plot to discredit her.

Hutchison's attorneys filed motions to have the charges dismissed because of the improperly seated grand juror. Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle had agreed.

But on Monday, Hutchison's defense team surprised State District Judge Mike Lynch by asking that the charges stand so that Hutchison's trial could start as initially scheduled Nov. 29.

Instead of the grand jury charges,

Hutchison's attorney Dick DeGuerin said she could face charges, called an information, issued directly by the district attorney's office.

However, Earle called the move a legal trick to make it appear Hutchison wanted a speedy resolution of the case, while her attorneys delayed proceedings with other motions challenging the way the grand jury gathered evidence.

On Tuesday, Lynch rejected Hutchison's proposal.

"The court understands and appreciates the defendant's request for a prompt trial, but this court is without power or authority to act," Lynch said in a one-page order. "A trial court in Texas has no authority to file an information, nor order the prosecuting attorney to file one."

David Beckwith, a spokesman for Hutchison, said Lynch's decision will "further add to the delay Mr. Earle has consistently sought."

Hutchison's attorneys have filed a motion to allow them to make a presentation to the grand jury, Beckwith said.

The Travis County District Attorney's office denied it was trying to delay the case.

David Halpern, spokesman for the office, said Lynch's decision was expected. "We'll continue to present the case to the grand jury that began hearing evidence yesterday," Halpern said.

The newly issued subpoena was for Leslie Rowl of Austin, who was a former administrative assistant to Hutchison when she was state treasurer.

Baptists end annual convention

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Baptists have ended their 1993 state convention after rejecting an attempt to toughen their stance on abortion.

Voting representatives of the 2.5 million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas on Tuesday defeated an effort to bring the abortion stance in line with a more rigid view of the national Southern Baptist Convention.

Abortion might be allowable in case of rape, incest, severe fetal deformity incompatible with life and threats to the life and health of the mother, says the new statement of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

In other matters, Baptists approved a resolution critical of the lottery and other gambling in Texas and urged support of boycotts against TV programs heavy with sex and violence.

The Rev. Jim Poole of Van Alstyne and others argued that the Texas abortion statement should be similar to the national stance, which sanctions abortion only to save the mother's life.

But the Rev. Billy Parmer of Valley Mills said the Texas convention is independently governed and has a right to its own abortion statement.

"We are not a farm club of the Southern Baptist Convention," Parmer said.

The Rev. Ronnie Shackelford of Cisco, favoring a tougher stand, countered, "We're not concerned about being in line with the Southern Baptist Convention, but we are concerned about being in line with the word of God."

Favoring the current statement, Kim Snyder, a member of the First Baptist Church of Arlington, said it shows more sympathy for people caught in extreme situations.

"It is irresponsible and un-Christlike to condemn those caught in extreme circumstances," she said.

During final sessions, hundreds of young people took part in a chastity rally as part of national "True Love Waits" program of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Those involved in the abstinence campaign sign small cards promising not to have sexual intercourse before marriage. About 200 of the cards, encased in 4-inch-high plastic frames, were displayed on the lawn outside the Dallas Convention Center.

"This program has taken off among Baptist young people because it makes sense," said Chris Liebrum, youth consultant for the state Baptist organization.

Fugitive captured

LAREDO (AP) — FBI agents have arrested a fugitive suspected in at least 10 drug-related deaths in Laredo and seven more across the border.

Jaime Gonzalez-Bath, 34, originally from Laredo, made his first appearance Tuesday morning before U.S. Magistrate Marcel Notzon.

He is accused in the AK-47 assault rifle attack that left three people dead at a busy Laredo intersection last year.

Javier George Portes, Nuevo Laredo commander of the Tamaulipas State Judicial Police, said Gonzalez faces four state arrest warrants in Nuevo Laredo for seven drug-related murders and faces three more federal warrants for weapons and drug-trafficking.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

It's time for U.S. to say 'no' to U.N.

At a time when we should be rapidly disengaging from Somalia, the Clinton administration seems bent on engaging U.S. forces in even more strife-torn places in the world.

Instead of getting out of the Somalia trap immediately, President Clinton announced earlier this month that U.S. troops would remain in the east African country for as long as six more months.

Meanwhile, also this month, the U.S. began dispatching troops to the impoverished Caribbean country of Haiti to prepare for the return of its deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. The administration is also weighing the option of sending ground troops to the Balkans.

The U.N.-sponsored military mission to Haiti began ominously. A U.S. warship bringing the first contingent of U.S. troops to Haiti was denied permission to dock while an angry mob chased away U.S. embassy personnel waiting to greet the troops at dockside. Now U.S. ships are waiting in the sea beside the island. But how long will Clinton keep them there before either sending our troops ashore or, more wisely, bringing them back home?

In Haiti, as in Somalia and the former Yugoslavia, the United States is about to involve itself militarily in a deeply rooted conflict in which we have no compelling national interest. Once again, we are about to place U.S. troops in harm's way without giving them a clear military objective.

If American troops are to be dispatched abroad, it should only be for the defense of our most basic national interests. They should be sent to defend our interests and our allies from international aggression, not to prop up the United Nations in its misguided efforts at "peace keeping" in countries where there is no real peace to keep.

It is time for the United States to say "no" to the U.N. and its global peacekeeping missions.

Stationing U.S. troops in Haiti, Somalia, the Balkans and other troubled regions serves neither our own national interests or the original mission of the United Nations.

The United Nations, as originally envisioned, was meant to deter aggression among nations. With the complicity of the United States, that mission has been mutated into imposing peace inside nations, like Somalia and Haiti, that have been torn by civil strife.

Our troops should be brought home from Somalia and kept out of Haiti.

With the Clinton administration and Congress cutting deeply into the military budget, this is not time to be obligating our troops to risk their lives in places where they are not wanted and not needed.

ANOTHER GIANT SUCKING SOUND

Forget democracy in Haiti

It is hard to think back on another international episode in which the U.S. government has got itself so tongue-tied as we now are in the matter of Haiti, and this is so for one reason: It is that we can't get out of the verbal cell we've installed ourselves in, seeking to serve the shrine of democracy.

President Clinton has publicly mentioned the Haiti matter almost every day since the embarrassing afternoon when the American parade tried to dock at Port-au-Prince and was told Yankee Go Home by a mob controlled by a 7,000-member armed force under the command of the current fascist who is running things in that wretched little country.

And every time Clinton speaks, he speaks of bringing, or restoring, democracy to Haiti. And when the Haitian army refuses to abide by the democratic vote that installed Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Clinton imposes an economic ban intending we know not exactly what. That the Haitian people will rise up against Gen. Raoul Cedras and festoon the streets with flowers as Aristide mounts the democratic throne?

Twenty years ago Harold Macmillan was asked to justify his famous statement about how Africa had to submit to the "winds of change." Without intending any explicit condescension toward the African people, he recited some of the ignominies of British history, and spoke of princes buried in the walls of Windsor Castle, or executions and torture and the rest of it. His point was that just as Europe went through what it went through in its ragged way to democracy, so must we expect that something like this should happen in a continent that hadn't undergone the rites of passage.

And of course Macmillan was prophetic, though one finds nowhere in the massive biography of William F. Buckley Jr.

Alistair Horne any suggestion that he anticipated the scale of horrors of post-colonial Africa. Idi Amin and Jean-Bedel Bokassa had their counterparts in medieval Europe, but the point surely is that perspectives change, so that what was routine in the Middle Ages and later isn't thought of as routine today.

The reason is the universalization of standards. It cannot surprise a Haitian that torture is thought despicable and indeed inexcusable in the contemporary world. Accordingly, to engage in such activity as is so widely accepted in so many parts of the world is an act of defiance of an entirely different order from the routine torture back when children were flogged and hanged for stealing sixpence.

What happened, however, is that in our anxiety to purge our colonialist perceptions, we egged on the winds of change. In the case of Africa, mostly by simply ignoring them: We do not bother to record routine violence in Nigeria or Rwanda or Zimbabwe. But closer to home, we set our priorities and subordinate political democracy above all other considerations.

The trouble with this is that democracy is extremely slow to come, and that before you get reliable democracy, you get quite awful oppression of human beings. As recently as 20 years ago there were only two or three democracies in Latin America. And one of these had to be interrupted by a coup, to save Chile from a Castro-style dictatorship aligned with the Soviet Union.

In this generation we have ushered into power Somoza in Nicaragua, Papa Doc in Haiti and Trujillo in the Dominican Republic. Democracy was the briefest experience in those three tormented "republics." Somoza was ousted, Papa Doc died and Trujillo was assassinated. But their heirs brought much suffering; and we clung to the shibboleth: If it's democratic, then it's OK.

Who really doubts that Haiti would enormously profit if we were to turn it over to Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf? This isn't said for rhetorical effect; rather, to stress that what the Haitians need is political order, economic opportunity and a militant regard for their extra-political rights.

Let their political rights gestate for 20 or 30 years, until they are ready to be exercised. But struggle, now, to do something other than the kind of democracy that gave Argentina Peron and Nicaragua, however briefly, the Sandinistas.

"Democratic" elections brought in 99 percent of the vote generation after generation for communists and their satraps. Forget democracy. Pull out of Haiti, and concert world opinion toward the encouragement of elementary human rights. And if it takes another 30 years to implant the seeds of human rights, well, there are those who call this a wind of change.

The alternative is to send over there a civil governor and let him rule by martial law. But none dare call colonialism a blessing - which, however, it very often is.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1993. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 27th, 1787, the first of the Federalist Papers, a series of essays calling for ratification of the United States Constitution, was published in a New York newspaper.

On this date:

In 1795, the United States and Spain signed the Treaty of San Lorenzo, which provided for free navigation of the Mississippi River.

In 1858, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City.

In 1886, the musical fantasy A Night on Bald Mountain, written by Modest Mussorgsky and revised after his death by Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, was performed in St. Petersburg, Russia.

In 1904, the first rapid transit subway, the IRT, opened in New York City.

In 1914, author-poet Dylan Thomas was born in Swansea, Wales.

Facts of life for our youth

When the Soviets scared us witless with their first Sputnik, our nation's educators refocused their emphasis on the sciences.

In our haste to overtake the Soviets, which we did, our schools neglected the humanities.

We were so determined to refine young intellects that we neglected to discipline emotions, just let those run wild.

Today, our deplorable system of public education is suffering the backlash.

We put the spurs to a generation which showed us the way to the moon ...

But intellectual brilliance without emotional stability left our young people "unguided missiles," inevitably destined to self-destruct.

Both schools and churches abdicated their responsibility for moral oversight. The result: lower grades and higher crime.

Who is left to teach us right from wrong?

When Chuck Colson came to the campus of the University of Chicago to accept this year's Templeton Prize, he dared to confront his mostly academic audience with "the facts of life":

"With no higher principles to live by, men and women suffocate under their own expanding pleasures."

In the past 17 years, Chuck Colson's prison ministry has taken him to more prisons than he can count, in more nations than most of us can name. He has seen the wages of sin in real, live human faces.

"The myth of human goodness tells men and women that they are not responsible for their actions, that everyone is a victim. Even a United States attorney general said, 'Poverty is the cause of crime.' A United States president said, 'Looters are not to blame for looting.' Thus, millions excused their own misbehavior - and crime became the great plague of civilized societies."

Colson blames the media and the law for scrubbing the last vestiges of religious absolutes from all public debate.

Seeking freedom without self-discipline, we are consumed by excesses.

Universities reject truth and begot cheaters.

Celebrities mock the traditional family and are appalled by inevitable human tragedies.

The media celebrates sex without responsibility, then proclaims itself horrified by sex-related plagues.

"Western elites," says Colson, "are carefully separating the wheat from the chaff - and keeping the chaff."

Progress does not always mean discovering something new. Progress sometimes means rediscovering wisdom that is ancient and eternal.

It is immutable law: We will behave or be damned.

We can ignore that law, revile it, laugh at it, nail it to a stick ...

But when we have done our worst, it will still be there, haunting us, mocking us, calling out to us ... "Believe."

Good and bad signs of our times

All of us enjoy or are guilty of making decisions on one overriding quality - the economy of thought. After a series of events on two continents, 8,000 miles apart, I found it economically easy to conclude that these are the times that try men's souls, especially if those souls are black.

But if they are suffering the worst of times, it was equally true that some black women, also on two continents 8,000 thousands miles apart, are reveling in the best of times.

In Florida, dozens of black teenagers in a small North Florida community were swept up in a dragnet of Gestapo-like efficiency, as the sheriff's department searched for the killer of a British tourist.

In Mogadishu, Somalia, U.S. Army Rangers led an airborne assault on a compound believed to be hiding the murderous warlord, Mohammed Farrah Adid. Instead, they ended up arresting 39 of Adid's opponents, including a general, all of whom support the U.N. effort in Somalia.

In both exercises, one underlying factor was in control: "They" - black people - all look alike. That economy of thought has solved uncountable crimes, but the resulting effort has also injured 10 times as many innocent people.

The "they-all-look-like" syndrome operated with deadly efficiency in Philadelphia, which has one of the highest conviction rates of innocent persons of any American city.

Several years ago, a tall black professor at one of the universities complained to my office that he was frequently being hassled as a criminal suspect.

Chuck Stone

Whenever he took his evening walks near his downtown apartment, he was invariably stopped and questioned by police as a possible suspect for month-old crimes.

When I conveyed the professor's complaints to a chief inspector who was an old friend, he quipped, "Hey, Chuck, when a call goes out for a suspect described as a tall black man, the only person who is safe is a short, white midget." Eventually, however, the hassling stopped.

As a law-and-order hard-liner, I harbor no intolerance for massive police efforts to apprehend criminals. But I do harbor a profound antagonism to the police mind-set that presumes ab initio that all black men are potential criminal suspects and that the lives of foreign tourists are far more valuable than a state's own citizens.

A North Carolina columnist agrees with my moral dichotomy. Protesting Florida Gov. Chiles' breast-beating distress over the killings of the tourists - as compared with his silence over the killings of 1,191 Floridians - Barry

Saunders still a came down hard on the killers. Also a law-and-order hard-liner he wrote, "I hope they catch the killers and string 'em up or fry 'em or feed 'em to the alligators or whatever they do down there."

While Florida sheriffs and U.S. Army rangers were denigrating an entire group, racial stereotypes were being buried on two continents, 10,000 miles apart. Miss South Carolina, doe-eyed, cafe-au-lait Kimberly Clairese Aiken, was crowned Miss America. On the other side of the world, Jacqui Mofokeng became the first black woman to be crowned Miss South Africa. She will compete in the Miss World Pageant in November.

Neither triumph of ebony pulchritude announces that the new millennium has arrived. South Africa's townships are still being savaged by the same black-on-black crime waves that are decimating American ghettos. In the South, a subliminal racial superiority is still the pivotal criterion on which most decisions are made.

But racism can no longer hold the South hostage. One hundred and thirty-two years later, the emancipation of the south has followed the emancipation of its slaves.

Kimberly Aiken's historic achievement from the state where the Civil War began is another joyous sign of our coming together as a nation.

As that elderly black man told Martin Luther King Jr. when King asked if he had benefited from the civil-rights movement: "I may not be what I wanna be, and I may not be what I oughta be. But thank God, I ain't what I useta be."

Panel seeks more entries from senator's diaries

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee chairman wants to move immediately to enforce a subpoena for Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries. The entries include a potential new area of ethical wrongdoing, two senators have disclosed.

Senate factions headed for a collision over the diaries, possibly today, as Republicans outside the committee said they feared a fishing expedition that would range far beyond the current probe of possible sexual misconduct. They called for a negotiated compromise.

Sens. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., and Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, revealed Tuesday why the committee subpoena seeks far more entries from Packwood's writings than he has been willing to turn over.

"The committee has come across something that leads, may lead or has led ... to some other possible charges" of ethical misconduct, Harkin said after the panel's chairman, Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., addressed the weekly luncheon of Senate Democrats.

Kerrey, recalling Bryan's explanation, said Democrats were told "there was a particular incident" in the diaries that led to the subpoena — something that "did not deal with" and "fell outside" the scope of the investigation so far.

Both senators said Bryan did not provide any details of the discovery. The committee was unanimous in its stance on the subpoena, and Bryan appeared in no mood to compromise.

"We feel our position is defensible. My preference is to move forward now," he told reporters Tuesday.

More than two dozen women — former Packwood aides, lobbyists and acquaintances — have accused the Oregon Republican of making unwanted sexual advances, in some cases grabbing and kissing them against their will.

Some of the women said there were attempts to intimidate them from speaking out, by threats to reveal aspects of their personal lives.

Until Kerrey and Harkin commented, it had been unclear why the committee demanded portions of the diary that apparently were unrelated to the sexual misconduct and intimidation allegations. Packwood has agreed to provide diary entries dealing with those issues but argues that anything more violates his constitutional right of privacy.

The committee of three Democrats and three Republicans has asked for Packwood's diary entries from Jan. 1, 1989, to the present, excluding references to attorney-client or physician-patient material and private family matters.

The panel's resolution would authorize a civil lawsuit, seeking an order to force Packwood to release his personal writings.

Packwood's lawyer, James F. Fitzpatrick, said the committee had identified passages that "have nothing to do with the original investigation."

"I don't have any idea what their goal is in selecting material that isn't within the scope of the original inquiry," he said. "I don't think it's appropriate to use our cooperation as a justification for a fishing expedition."

Packwood has said his 8,000-plus pages of entries, which began in 1969, include a conversation about a senator's "extended affair" with a staff member and his divorce and the description of an affair by a Senate aide with a member of the House leadership.

Other entries concerned private consensual personal relationships with people who were aides, references to former female staffers not involved in the case, campaign fund-raising activities and dealings with lobbyists.

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the panel and Packwood "need to work out some agreement. It should not be voted on in the Senate. I think it should be resolved at the committee level. ... They should ... not make this a dragnet."

Kerrey said it was explained at the Democratic luncheon that "once the discovery (of new potential misconduct) was made," the committee felt obligated to pursue the additional diary entries.

Harkin commented, "What was said was, it's serious and it should warrant the ethics committee to look at it. The impression was it was very serious."

Clinton's grazing fee hike plan sidetracked in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's plan to raise the price for cattle grazing on federal lands remains stuck, with the Senate refusing to choke off a filibuster.

The Senate voted 51-45 to end the filibuster Tuesday, but 60 votes were needed to limit debate. A similar vote last Thursday had failed, 53-45.

Senators seeking to end the filibuster scheduled another vote this Thursday.

The grazing fee impasse is holding up congressional action on $13.4 billion in appropriations for the Interior Department.

"Let us finish our work on this bill," Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, pleaded just before the Senate voted. "We cannot let an approriations bill die." "This is the abuse and misuse of the filibuster," Byrd said. "I respect those who feel this will be injurious to their constituents. But let us vote. Let us vote."

But Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and other opponents of grazing fee increases asserted that the use of water, pipelines, reservoirs and property rights also are at stake as is "the future of the West."

Domenici said that all he and the others want is a year's delay in implementing the increases while hearings into the impact of the move are held.

Over three years, the legislation would increase the current monthly fee of $1.86 to $3.45 for the amount of forage needed to feed a cow and a calf for a month.

Frightened lawmakers stay away from key vote in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Parliament failed once again to bring Haiti closer to the return of its elected leader, as fear kept most supporters of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide away from the Legislative Palace.

A U.S. Coast Guard cutter, meanwhile, began returning Haitian boat people today to a country reeling from shortages wrought by an embargo and from heightened tension in anticipation of Aristide's scheduled return on Saturday.

The 15 Haitians were intercepted on a 20-foot sailboat off northwest Haiti, the first to be picked up since the United Nations imposed an oil and weapons embargo on Oct. 18.

Thousands sailed for the United States after Aristide was overthrown in a September 1991 coup. A decision to immediately return them led to charges that the United States was shunning refugees fleeing political oppression.

Under a plan brokered by the United Nations in July, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the army commander, was to have resigned before the return of Aristide, the country's first freely elected leader.

The plan, to which both Aristide and Cedras agreed, also stipulated that Parliament was to pass a key law separating the army from its police division. All sides agreed as well to consider an amnesty for soldiers who have ruled since Aristide's ouster.

But many legislators are in hiding at home or abroad, afraid they will be killed if they appear in public. A State Department spokesman said eight lawmakers are in the United States.

"We were ready to work today," said Antoine Joseph, president of Haiti's lower house, after waiting five hours to gather a quorum. Forty deputies of the 83-member Chamber of Deputies showed up. But only 10 of the 27 members of Aristide's political coalition were there.

U.N. envoy Dante Caputo has asked international statesmen to fly here to help protect the lawmakers.

The army, in a statement Tuesday, said it was "astonished" at the proposal and accused Caputo of bias against it.

The United Nations imposed the embargo after Cedras showed unwillingness to step down and military-backed workers turned back an American ship carrying U.N. advisers who were to help implement the agreement.

A draft resolution to expand the sanctions into a full trade embargo was circulated Tuesday at the United Nations, sources said.

The resolution would ban all trade with Haiti except for humanitarian goods, including food, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The measure was apparently designed to step up the pressure on the recalcitrant military. A U.S. Embassy spokesman, Stanley Schrage, on Tuesday characterized as "stymied" the political efforts to return Aristide, who is popular with Haiti's poor majority but despised by the military.

Indeed, few believe Aristide can return on schedule without foreign military intervention to push aside the Haitian army.

Frantz Voltaire, a spokesman for the transition government, which was appointed by Aristide, said he was "skeptical" that a scheduled meeting today between Cedras and Premier Robert Malval would occur, particularly after Parliament's inaction.

"I don't know what we can talk about," Voltaire said Tuesday night of a meeting with Cedras.

While politicians debate, the oil embargo has sunk its teeth into the Americas' most impoverished country, and a score of international warships and Coast Guard cutters cruise offshore to enforce it.

Because of insufficient fuel, deliveries of drinkable water to the capital's huge Cite Soleil slum were cut by two-thirds on Tuesday. The director of CARE, Haiti's biggest provider of food aid, said he may have to curtail food shipments to northern Haiti.

Blindman's bluff — astronaut style above the earth

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — It was a high-flying version of blindman's bluff.

Five of Columbia's astronauts took turns Tuesday pointing a flashlight at targets on a large white chart, first with their eyes open and then with their eyes closed.

The experiment is intended to measure changes in astronauts' awareness of body position. The five-man, two-woman crew has been conducting this test, and numerous others, since the 14-day medical research mission began nine days ago.

Veterinarian Martin Fettman didn't do so well.

"I guess this means that nobody should ask me for directions up here," Fettman said.

"Nobody asks you for directions in Houston," joked ground controller Laurence Young.

In another experiment, astronaut William McArthur Jr. endured another hourlong session Tuesday in a vacuum sack that forced blood and other body fluids from his chest into his legs, where the fluids accumulate on Earth.

Researchers want to see if the treatment keeps him from becoming dizzy once he's back on Earth, a common complaint of returning astronauts.

McArthur, an Army officer, covered his chest and the waist-high bag with an Army pennant, patches and small signs, including one that read "Go Clear Lake CC" for his older daughter's cross country team.

"We just wanted to wish them well" in an upcoming meet, McArthur explained.

Halloween treats provide fiendish fun for holiday tricksters

By The Associated Press

When the spotlight shines on ghosts, goblins and all that's scary, there's no trick to making great-tasting party treats. Whether your home is the scene of a family pumpkin-carving extravaganza or the neighborhood Halloween gathering, the following recipes will please the palates of the little tricksters who come to your door.

Critters in the Hay is a snack mix, complete with creepy black licorice spiders. Use the mix to fill a bright orange Halloween pumpkin. Pecan Pumpkin Pleasers are bar cookies, flavored with popcorn, pumpkin pie spice and chopped pecans.

- Critters in the Hay
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
 - 1 cup light corn syrup
 - 2 tablespoons butter
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon green food color (optional)
 - 3 1/2 quarts popped popcorn, unpopped kernels discarded
 - 1 cup candy corn
 - Black licorice ropes
 - Wooden picks
 - Small black gumdrops or other small, soft black candies
 - Red decorating icing
 - Tiny red jawbreaker candies
 - Worm-shaped candies
- In Dutch oven, bring sugar, corn syrup and butter to a boil; boil 2 1/2 minutes. Stir in pumpkin pie spice, vanilla, salt and food color; mix until evenly colored. Add popcorn; toss until evenly coated.
- Spread popcorn mixture in a single layer on greased sheets of foil and allow to cool and harden. Break into bite-size pieces and mix with candy corn in a wide shallow bowl; set aside.

To make spiders, cut licorice into 2-inch lengths. To make legs, starting at one end, make three 1/2-inch to 3/4-inch cuts to make four legs. Repeat cuts at opposite end. Leave about 1/2-inch in center uncut. Gently pull legs apart and curl down. Push wooden pick through center of body, leaving about 1/4-inch exposed on top. Push one gumdrop onto exposed pick to make the body. Using writing tip of decorating icing, squeeze two small dots of icing into gumdrops. Press jawbreakers into icing to make eyes.

Pecan Pumpkin Pleasers

Nonstick cooking spray
3/4 cup chopped pecans
1 cup packed light brown sugar
3/4 cup light corn syrup
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 cups popped popcorn

Spray bottom of 9- by 13-inch baking pan heavily with nonstick cooking spray. Sprinkle bottom evenly with pecans; set aside. In large Dutch oven, bring brown sugar, corn syrup, butter and pumpkin pie spice to a boil; stir in vanilla. Add popcorn, toss until well coated. Press popcorn firmly into prepared pan. Let stand 15 minutes to cool slightly. Place serving platter or baking sheet upside down over top of pan. Invert, allowing mixture to fall onto platter. Cut into bars. Makes 24 bars.

Place "spiders" and worm-shaped candies in popcorn. Remove wooden picks before eating. Makes 4 quarts.

Dinosaur Nests

1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter
20 large marshmallows (from a 10-ounce bag)
1 cup milk chocolate chips
5-ounce can chow mein noodles
2-3rds cup candy-coated chocolate peanut candies

Place butter in a large microwave-safe bowl. Cook on high (100 percent power) until butter is melted, about 1 minute.

Add marshmallows; cook on high until marshmallows are puffy and melt when stirred, about 45 seconds to 1 minute.

Stir in chocolate chips until melted and smooth. Stir in 1 1/2 cups of the chow mein noodles.

On baking sheets, drop chocolate mixture in small mounds (about 2 tablespoons each), flattening to make nests. Press three peanut candies into each nest.

Stick remaining noodles into sides and tops of nests. Cover and refrigerate until firm, about 30 minutes. Makes 1 1/2 dozen cookies.

For an elegant appetizer, serve Brie Quesadilla with Pear Fig Salsa at your next celebration. Cheesy snacks just right for parties

By The Associated Press

Quesadillas are great casual party fare. But if you want to add elegance to your festive menu, try quesadillas made with brie and served with pear fig salsa.

To prepare, spread a layer of brie, softened to room temperature, over a tortilla. Spoon fresh salsa over the cheese and top with a second tortilla. Place the quesadilla in a greased skillet. Cook until the brie is melted and the tortilla is cooked to a golden color on both sides. Cut into wedges and serve on a pretty platter with a dish of salsa on the side.

Brie Quesadilla with Pear Fig Salsa

- 2 red pears, diced
- 2 ripe figs, diced
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped mint
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 3 tablespoons toasted pine nuts

12-ounce brie wheel
Eight 9-inch flour tortillas

For the salsa, combine the pears, figs, lime juice, chopped mint, black pepper and toasted pine nuts. Spread about 3 ounces of the brie on each of four tortillas.

Top each with 3 to 4 tablespoons salsa and remaining tortillas. Brown in a greased skillet on both sides until cheese is melted. Cool slightly, cut into wedges.

Makes 10 appetizer servings.

Microwaved dish proves tasty

Radishes, like onions, have a milder flavor when cooked. Cook radishes and peas in your microwave oven, then keep them warm in a covered casserole while you cook the dill sauce.

Peas and Radishes

- 1 cup radishes, sliced
- 1 cup frozen peas
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
- 1/4 teaspoon dried dillweed
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon lemon-pepper seasoning

In a 20-ounce microwave-safe casserole, combine radishes, peas and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring once. Drain. Cover to keep warm.

In a 2-cup glass measure, stir together milk, flour, dillweed, salt and lemon-pepper seasoning. Cook, covered, on high, for 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every 30 seconds; stir into hot vegetables. Makes 3 side-dish servings.

More is better when it comes to pork

By The Associated Press

Lean, fresh pork marries well with a myriad of ingredients. Pork chops, for example, can be marinated in teriyaki sauce, simmered in salsa, rubbed with Cajun spices, broiled with mustard or glazed with marmalade. In the following recipe for Coriander-Pepper Chops, a low-fat marinade is used to flavor the dish. Serve with fresh fruits and vegetables.

Coriander-Pepper Chops

- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 1 tablespoon crushed coriander seeds
- 1 tablespoon coarsely ground black pepper

1 tablespoon brown sugar
3 tablespoons soy sauce
4 boneless pork chops, about 1-inch thick

Combine all ingredients except pork chops. Place chops in a shallow dish and pour marinade over; let marinate 30 minutes.

Prepare medium-hot coals, banked, in grill bed. Remove pork from marinade, discarding marinade, and grill chops over indirect heat for 12 to 15 minutes, turning once. Or, remove from marinade and broil or panbroil for 10 minutes, turning occasionally. Juices should run clear and chops should be tender and juicy.

Museum in Panhandle mounts Houston exhibit

The Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle will have a series of photographs of Sam Houston and his son, Temple, on display through the end of the year in celebration of the elder Houston's bicentennial birthday.

Sam Houston, 1793-1863, led the Texas army against Mexican forces at San Jacinto in 1836 to win Texas' independence. He went on to serve as President of the Republic and later Governor when Texas joined the Union.

Sam Houston served as a general in two armies, the Tennessee State Militia and the Republic of Texas. He was a U.S. Congressman from Tennessee and a U.S. Senator from Texas. He was governor of Tennessee as well as Texas, although he did not complete either of the terms.

As part of the year-long Sam Houston bicentennial birthday party, the Square House Museum will have an exhibit chronicling his life along with his son, Temple, who lived and practiced law in the Texas Panhandle.

Sam Houston

"Houston's life was so full and varied that trying to capture it in pictures is very difficult," Dr. Katz said. "We have chosen to look at the face of the man instead."

The earliest depiction shows Houston at age 21 fighting Creek Indians. He was an ensign in the U.S. Army under Andrew Jackson. The last, entitled "Old Sam," is a photograph taken in the 1860s just before his death.

The exhibit also includes several pictures of Houston's youngest child, Temple, who lived and practiced law in Canadian, Mobeetie, and Panhandle City. Temple also represented the region in the State Senate from 1885-1889, and had ranching interests in Carson County.

"Like Father, Like Son: Images of Sam and Temple Houston" will be in the Opal Weatherly Purvins gallery in the Square House Museum through the end of the year.

Bank of Spain houses hidden art trove

By MICHAEL M. PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two hundred years ago the founding fathers of the new Banco Nacional de San Carlos, perhaps hoping to stare down their own mortality, commissioned portraits of themselves for the bank's walls.

To their great good fortune, one of their stockholders was the painter Francisco de Goya. The portraits that resulted are at the heart of one of Madrid's great art secrets: the collection of Spain's central bank.

The astonishing Prado, Thyssen-Bornemisza and Reina Sofia collections beckon from down the street. But only a few art aficionados have discovered that what is now the Bank of Spain owns 525 paintings and 2,000 prints, ranging from the 17th-century still lifes by Juan van der Hamen to the abstract works of the post-war Spanish avant-garde.

The Goya paintings and other early works are housed in the bank's headquarters, a turn-of-the-century gem a peseta's throw from the historic center of Madrid.

But the collection isn't a museum, and accessibility is limited. There are few tours, and the armed guards at the building's magnificent doors have a way of discouraging the accidental art tourist.

Until recently, in fact, even the bankers themselves had only a sketchy idea of what hung on their walls.

"When I got here there was no catalog," says curator Jose Maria Vinuela, who has been working with the bank's collection for 15 years.

A catalog now lists seven Goya paintings. Like many of the bank's oldest works, the Goya paintings were of people influential in the development of the 211-year-old Banco Nacional de San Carlos, the semi-private precursor to the Bank of Spain.

The collection also boasts a complete first-edition set of Goya's bullfighting engravings, a pair of Picassos and works by Joaquin Sorolla and Jose Maria Sert.

During this century, the bank began acquiring more than just finance-related art. A 1985 Spanish law requires public enterprises to spend 1 percent of their annual capital budgets on art and culture, and the bank now pays closer attention to esthetic concerns.

Vinuela has been the inspiration behind the bank's most recent acquisitions, an outstanding collection of post-war Spanish paintings, prints and photographs. These line the halls and lean against the walls of the bank's new annex on the outskirts of Madrid.

Here, a lucky staffer in the research or computer department might find an Antoni Tapies or a Miguel Barcelo hanging in the office.

Vinuela's purchases include Antonio Saura's classic black-on-white strokes from the 1950s, and Jorge Galindo's maroon, red and black abstractions, painted five years ago when the Madrid artist was 19.

"It seems to me it's an example to follow — an institution as conservative as the Bank of Spain buying art from the avant-garde," commented Rosa Olivares, managing editor of the art magazine Lapiz.

But Vinuela can't entirely avoid the fact he's not stocking a museum, he's decorating a government bank.

For years he's been hoping to buy a painting by contemporary Madrid painter-sculptor Antonio

Lopez, the subject of the recent film, "El Sol del Membrillo" (The Quince Sun) and a retrospective at the Reina Sofia art center.

The first Lopez that came up was too pricey, the second, well, too macabre.

"You can't put a painting with such a strong theme — a woman half-dead in the bathtub — in the halls of a bank," says Vinuela. "For decorative reasons, that obviously wouldn't fit."

Security is strict in the new building, where phenomenal quantities of money pass through the vaults, and no public tours are available. But visitors can tour the old building three days a week between October and June.

The bank also makes occasional art loans to other museums — such as the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York — and has sponsored a handful of exhibitions around Spain.

Pastor on a Harley; nearer my God to Thee

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

The Rev. Lyndon Glaesman is eternally hoping that his next ride on the street motorcycle he recently acquired will not prove to be his last.

Glaesman, who stores a New International version of the Bible on his motorcycle when he rides it, says he has been more appreciative of his own mortality after acquiring a 1983-model Harley-Davidson 1,000-c.c.-engine Sportster as a present from his wife, Penny, about three months ago.

"It reminds me that I am still flesh and blood, and that I can get hurt," reflected Glaesman, 36, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church and president of the Pampa Ministerial Alliance. "It keeps my priorities straight. I don't ever get on that thing without thinking, 'What's important in my life?'"

The Oklahoma native spoke candidly about his motorcycling "addiction," as he calls it — an addiction that can allow him to feel closer to God, he said. Glaesman has been full-time pastor of the Southern Baptist church since 1989.

In the 28 years that Glaesman has owned motorbikes, the majority of them dirt bikes, he said he has been in about 30 accidents in which he was knocked off a motorbike and dazed. He also estimates that a motorbike he was driving tipped over on 100 to 200 occasions.

Glaesman, who a few months ago obtained his first driver's license for street motorcycling, estimates that during non-winter months he averages 40 miles per day, five days a week, on his motorcycle. He routinely drives the Harley-Davidson to church and in paying home visits to members of his congregation; when attending or presiding over funerals, however, Glaesman makes a point of driving his car to avoid offending relatives of the deceased.

Glaesman has thus far managed to maintain an accident-free record on his new street motorcycle, but the injuries he has suffered from previous motorbike accidents — which through the years have included a broken left side of his face and two broken ribs — serve as a continuing warning to him, he said.

"It's 1,000 times different (from driving a car)," the clergyman said. "You've got the wind, you have to watch out for everything. You have to really contend with the elements. All of a sudden, wind or rain becomes a big concern. ... if you hit something that someone dropped from his truck onto the road, you're in deep dirt."

Waxing philosophical, Glaesman pointed out that risking his health by driving a motorcycle offsets any tendency toward excessive loftiness in a ministerial career.

"We ministers lead basically sheltered lives," Glaesman observed. "An oilfield worker lives every day around danger, and I honestly think that he thinks (about the) afterlife more than the average minister. (Driving a motorcycle) puts me up there with the oilfield worker who knows that he could get hurt that day also."

Gary Jameson, minister of music and education for the Calvary Baptist Church, said Glaesman's love for motorcycle-riding enhances his rapport with the congregation.

"The fact that he enjoys riding motorcycles probably demonstrates to the general public that he is very much like everybody else, and not somebody who should be placed on a pedestal," said Jameson. "It shows that he has the same interests and needs as other people."

Apparent support for Glaesman's motorcycling is so widespread among the members of his congregation that Glaesman says he has given rides on his Harley-Davidson to about 20 church members — ranging in age from 8 to 55. The Baptist pastor said that he, the three other members of his family, and some of his congregation have a tradition of taking trips to Lake McClellan as well as other parks and riding dirt bikes on the bike trails.

"We (at Calvary Baptist) understand that there's more to life than just church, that a person can be a Christian and still enjoy the things of this world," Glaesman observed.

Reaction from other clergymen in town has been mixed, however. Several ministers responded with laughter upon discovering that Glaesman had driven a motorcycle to last month's meeting of the Pampa Ministerial Alliance, the Calvary Baptist pastor recalled. But one pastor, the Rev. Charles Shugart of First Assembly of God Church, expressed concern for Glaesman's safety.

"Every time I see him, he always says, 'You be careful on that bike now,'" Glaesman said.

"If that's what he (Glaesman) wants to do, that's fine with me," Shugart said. "It doesn't bother me at all."

Shugart said he's not any more concerned about Glaesman's safety than he is about anyone else who rides a motorcycle.

Glaesman said he has no tendency toward self-destruction in his love of motorcycling.

"I know there's not, for me," he said. "I can't speak for others, (though). I wonder sometimes when I see a kid jump on a (motorbike) without a helmet and shoot up to 130 mph. I wonder if he's not bent on self-destruction."

Glaesman suggested, however, that he has identified an element of self-destructiveness in his own past conduct on a motorcycle. After one of his more serious injuries from a motorcycle accident, which occurred on Labor Day, 1990, in Oklahoma, Glaesman reached the conclusion that he had done something "stupid" and had "tempted God (to send angels and rescue me)."

In fact, Glaesman pointed out, Jesus Christ warned in the Bible against asking God to send angels to save oneself.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Nervous in New York," who was concerned because condoms were being handed out to schoolchildren. She said it was the same as giving kids permission to have sex.

Well, the truth is, the kids are having sex anyway, and if they aren't educated by their parents (most are not), they will get the information from the kids at school. I've heard many things from my friends about sex that aren't true — like you can't get pregnant the first time.

I am all for sex education in the school, including handing out condoms with the proper instructions on how to use them. Kids are having sex much earlier than their parents did, so we might as well be realistic and educate them. That way, they will be much safer. This is not encouraging sex — it's protecting children.

If this were taught in more schools, we would have fewer pregnancies. Sign me ...

17 AND WELL-INFORMED

DEAR 17: Congratulations. You are better informed than most kids your age. However, everyone — regardless of age — should be aware that no form of birth control is 100 percent foolproof, and no form of protection from sexually transmitted diseases is foolproof either. Abstinence is the only foolproof solution. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I am sure you will get many hostile letters regarding your response to "Nervous in New York" and your strong defense of school condom distribution. I, or one, say, "Thank you, Abby!"

As you pointed out, this is a life-and-death issue. Informing or young people of the very real dangers of unprotected sex does not promote promiscuity — it stresses the importance of education over emphasizes the responsibilities and consequences of sexual activity.

In this day and age, it is unfortunate that the same caring parents who would give their lives to protect their children and keep them out of harm's way, stick their heads in the sand when it comes to sex. If we truly care about our children's well-being, we have a moral obligation to do all we can to make sure they have the facts they need to make informed, intelligent decisions.

Again, thank you, Abby. I am hopeful your words will help simplify this issue for many concerned parents.

ERIC C. LARSON,
LOS ANGELES

DEAR ERIC: Thanks. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: I was so happy to read the letter in your column from the lady who objected to the hotel clerk announcing her room number loudly enough for everyone in the lobby to hear it.

I have a similar complaint: Why must so many bank clerks loudly count the money the customer receives in a transaction as though they were announcing a train schedule?

I am not hard-of-hearing and would appreciate a little privacy. When I leave the teller's window, I feel as though everyone in the bank knows exactly how much I have in my purse. After all, the person standing behind me in line — or at the next window — could very well be the friendly neighborhood robber.

If you could mention this in your column, perhaps some of these well-meaning bank personnel would see it and remember to modulate their voices.

F.S. IN WEST HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR F.S.: Consider it mentioned, although most bank tellers know better. A thought: People who are hard-of-hearing are inclined to raise their voices. Perhaps the bank teller who speaks louder than is necessary should have his/her hearing tested.

Are movies on CDs a breakthrough in home entertainment?

By VIDEO MAGAZINE
For AP Special Features

Later this fall consumers will be able to buy full-length movies on 5-inch CDs which look identical to audio CDs.

Paramount Pictures is set to release 10 movies on CD videodiscs. The list includes "White Christmas," "The Hunt For Red October," "Top Gun," "Apocalypse Now," "Patriot Games" and "Fatal Attraction." Another 40 films are expected to follow, including "The Godfather" trilogy.

The new format raises the following question, according to Video Magazine: Are movies on CD videodiscs a breakthrough in home entertainment?

Proponents of the new small videodiscs cite the convenient size, making the new CD-size discs easier to transport and store. Pressing the new videodiscs also costs about one third of what it does to put a film on VHS videotape. This will give manufacturers a price advantage in promoting "sell through" transactions. The latter is where a movie is sold over the counter rather than rented.

Those not impressed with the CD videodiscs point to the fact that they require a separate player, an added expense for consumers. Also, they explain that because most films will consist of two videodiscs, viewers will have to get up in the middle of a production to change discs, an inconvenience they rarely have with videotape. The CD boosters' answer to this complaint is that CD videodisc players will be made which will include automatic changers.

Unlike the larger laserdiscs, which offer distinctly better picture quality than videotape, the smaller CDs will offer picture quality which is only marginally better than VHS videotape. In fact, say the critics, some early videodiscs have exhibited picture and audio quality which is inferior to that of VHS videotape.

The manufacturers, however, say that the CD videodiscs will show as well or better than videotape.

Will CD videodiscs be successful? The question will be answered at sales counters.

Books

Not many first mystery novels are truly excellent, but here's one that is: "Until Proven Guilty" by Christine McGuire.

The story itself is not unlike others of the past — about a serial murderer who does horrifying things to his young women victims. But the difference here is the writing, marked by a compelling combination of wit, verve, characterization and realism.

The story focuses on Kathryn MacKay, an assistant district attorney in a Northern California coastal town. She is put in charge of the growing murder investigation. She and her police aides grow increasingly frantic because no one can turn up a single clue to the killer.

* Everything blends into an immensely intriguing tale, with a climax no one could possibly anticipate.

Author McGuire is well-qualified professionally to write such a story. She, like her chief character, is an assistant district attorney in Santa Cruz, Calif.

Administration appeals ruling lifting ban on gays in military

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration asked a Supreme Court justice on Tuesday to delay a lower court order banning discrimination against homosexuals in the military.

The emergency order, if granted, would enable the Defense Department to implement its new policy on homosexuals, which states that recruits will not be asked their sexual orientation but that openly declared homosexuals will not be permitted to serve.

The Justice Department filed its request to Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, requesting a partial stay of a U.S. District judge's order while the administration appeals it. The aim is to limit the judge's ruling to Navy Petty Officer Keith Meinhold, a gay sailor discharged from the military in August 1992 after he disclosed he was homosexual.

The department contended in its application that U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter Jr. "clearly erred with respect to issues of great importance" when he ruled Sept. 30 that the Pentagon could not deny enlistment or promotion, or change enlistment status or duty assignment because of someone's sexual orientation.

The Pentagon has instructed units to suspend the ban on homosexuals in the military while it pursues the case.

"The entry of a nationwide injunction in this non-class action conflicts with decisions of this court and numerous courts of appeals holding that an injunction may not be broader than necessary to provide relief to the party before the court," the Justice Department said.

The Human Rights Campaign Fund, an 80,000-member gay rights lobbying organization, criticized the government's application as unnecessary.

"This is not an emergency," said spokesman Gregory King in Washington. "Judge Hatter's ruling has been in effect for three weeks with no decline in morale or unit cohesion."

Hatter, who earlier declared that the ban on homosexuals in the military is unconstitutional, also prohibited the military from creating or keeping records of a service member's sexual orientation.

The judge, of Los Angeles, threatened to impose fines of at least $10,000 a day if the Pentagon fails to comply.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused on Oct. 8 to suspend the decision while it considers the Pentagon's appeal. The appellate court is scheduled to hear the appeal in December.

O'Connor handles emergency requests on 9th Circuit cases. Meinhold filed a lawsuit challenging the ban on homosexuals, and Hatter ordered him reinstated last November.

The Clinton administration had planned to implement a new "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy on Oct. 1, but that policy has been placed on hold.

The administration's initial appeal of Hatter's ruling defended the old policy that banned homosexuals outright.

The Justice Department's application for a stay contended that Hatter's injunction would cause irreparable harm unless stayed pending appeal, in part because it prevents the implementation of Clinton's new policy.

In addition, the department said the injunction interferes with the administration of the military and "creates grave uncertainty for military commanders" by preventing them from taking measures in response to homosexual conduct that would be prohibited under Clinton's new policy.

Bishops: U.S. should be peacemaker in post-Cold War era

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

The United States is the world's keeper, say Catholic leaders calling upon the nation to combat a groundswell of isolationism.

A decade after its pastoral letter on nuclear arms propelled the bishops into U.S. public policy debates, leaders of the nation's largest church are calling in a follow-up statement for the country to remain active in international affairs.

"The Harvest of Justice is Sown in Peace" — perhaps the first comprehensive religious blueprint for U.S. military policy in the post-Cold War era — says the nation retains a moral responsibility to intervene in regional conflicts throughout the world and to increase its humanitarian aid to countries where it once fought proxy wars against communism.

The policy statement also recommends that the United States keep its ban on nuclear testing, stop peddling its arms around the world and turn its swords into plowshares in Central America, Africa and the Middle East.

"After the Cold War, there has emerged an understandable but dangerous temptation to turn inward, to focus only on domestic needs and to ignore global responsibilities. This is not an option for believers in a universal church or for citizens in the world's most powerful nation," the bishops said.

The statement was written by some of the nation's most influential bishops, including Cardinals Joseph Bernardin of Chicago and Roger Mahony of Los Angeles; Archbishop John R. Roach of Minneapolis, chairman of the bishops' International Policy Committee; and Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, a former president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was among those to appear before the committee.

The statement will be presented by the International Policy Committee to the full conference at its meeting Nov. 15-18 in Washington.

'The eventual elimination of nuclear weapons is more than a moral ideal; it should be a policy goal.'

A decade ago, the bishops' pastoral letter "The Challenge of Peace" drew a firestorm of protest from critics inside the church and in the Reagan administration for its calls to reduce military spending and the nation's nuclear arsenal.

Critics said the bishops should stick to advising its 58 million-member flock on ecclesiastical matters. But the public attention that greeted the bishops' foray into U.S. military policy proved a watershed event in propelling religious bodies into the forefront of public policy debates.

In the new statement, the bishops resist calls for unilateral disarmament, but say nuclear deterrence is morally acceptable only if it is a step toward progressive disarmament.

The United States would set a moral example by retaining its moratorium on nuclear testing while pursuing a global test ban, the bishops said. Hours after China detonated a nuclear bomb earlier this month, President Clinton ordered preparations for a possible resumption of U.S. nuclear testing.

"The eventual elimination of nuclear weapons is more than a moral ideal; it should be a policy goal," the bishops said.

The bishops also called for deeper cuts in military spending, and said they were especially discouraged by the way U.S. arms merchants are increasingly looking abroad to make up for lost business.

The United States is among "the major participants — some would say profiteers — in this lethal trade," the statement said.

The prelates also said the focus of foreign aid in such regions as Central America should be to serve the poor instead of protecting security interests.

"Sadly, the United States, which invested so much in the armed conflict in the region, seems almost indifferent now to the need for significant investment in its development and reconstruction," the bishops said.

Economic aid is also necessary to help build on the Middle East peace accord, they said.

"As the U.S. has been generous in supporting Israel's security, so now it should be unstinting in helping to build peace for the region," the bishops said.

But the bishops also said there are times when military force may be necessary, such as ensuring "that starving children can be fed or that whole populations will not be slaughtered."

The United States should not shrink from its responsibility even as voices are increasingly raised at home against the nation becoming the world's policeman, they said.

"Pope John Paul II reminds us that a turn to 'selfish isolation' would not only be a betrayal of humanity's legitimate expectations ... but also a real desertion of a moral obligation," the bishops said.

Warning: Watch your wallet when you pick up the phone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buy $800 worth of vitamins and you may win a Cadillac. Wire $1,900, collect a $100,000 prize. Guaranteed job overseas.

If those offers sound too good to be true, that's because they are, prosecutors said Tuesday in announcing legal action by 10 states against 70 firms and individuals in a nationwide crackdown on telemarketing fraud.

"In the hands of a con artist, a phone is an assault weapon," said Minnesota Attorney General Hubert H. Humphrey III, president of the National Association of Attorneys General. He urged people to "learn how to hang up, to tear up the offer" that promises too much for too little.

"Nobody is giving anything away these days," Humphrey said, cautioning that if it's really a free "prize," it shouldn't cost a dime. "If it sounds like a steal, it probably is, right out of your own pocket."

Fraudulent telemarketers prey on the gullible, but they also victimize the desperate — those seeking cures for terminal diseases like AIDS — the unemployed and the elderly, who are often home to receive the phone calls.

A Las Vegas telemarketer, Manuel Maurice Swift, is accused of trying to persuade a 92-year-old Kansas man — declared the winner of a $100,000 prize — to send $1,900 via Western Union in advance to collect his winnings, according to Nevada Attorney General Frankie Sue Del Papa.

Swift, who was released Monday for a later court appearance, was not listed in the telephone book and could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

For creativity, Wisconsin Attorney General James Doyle cited a telemarketer in Maine called Consumer Advocate Group.

For $250, the firm allegedly offered to help people recover money lost to fraudulent telemarketers, but it provided no services. Doyle sued the Maine firm and four similar firms posing as consumer groups. Officials of Consumer Advocate Group did not respond to a request for comment.

Patricia Faley, acting director of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, estimated that all kinds of fraud, including telemarketing, costs consumers at least $100 billion per year, meaning "the average American consumer is losing $400 a year to fraud, and maybe a lot more."

"The scam artists are good at what they do," she said. "They are very plausible. They prey upon all consumers. No one is exempt."

Other examples cited Tuesday: Humphrey accused two Nevada telemarketers of making bogus prize offers, including Cadillacs, if consumers bought $800 worth of vitamins or $1,500 worth of skin-care products. The most common prize, when delivered, was a cheap Norman Rockwell lithograph, the suits contend. Two telemarketers in Arizona were accused of a similar scam.

Two telemarketing companies in Florida promised jobs overseas in exchange for a fee paid in advance. The firms had no contacts with employers and never placed anyone in a job, according to a civil suit.

The Ohio, Oregon and Washington attorneys general filed lawsuits against 13 telemarketers who allegedly required a fee from people who were informed they had won, or were eligible to receive, valuable prizes. In most cases, authorities said, prizes that were sent were worth less than fees.

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — The NFL expanded into new territory, adding a team in Charlotte, N.C., that will begin play in 1995 as the Carolina Panthers. NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue announced the addition at the league's expansion meeting. Another club will join the league, after a decision Nov. 30.

The four other cities in contention are St. Louis, Baltimore, Memphis, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla. Charlotte, a unanimous choice of 28 owners, is the first to join the NFL since Tampa Bay and Seattle in 1976.

The Panthers will be run by Jerry Richardson, an ex-Baltimore Colts wide receiver and restaurant owner. The general manager will be Mike McCormack, former general manager of Seattle.

Of four cities left, St. Louis is considered front-runner. Owners deferred naming a second club because St. Louis ownership group led by Stan Kroenke was not named until Monday. The owners wanted more time to investigate his background and finances.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dusty Baker, a rookie manager who led the San Francisco Giants to their most victories since 1962 and a second-place finish in the NL West, was voted National League Manager of the Year.

Baker received 15 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association, four more than Jim Fregosi of NL champion Philadelphia Phillies, who got 11 first-place votes and finished second.

Baker got nine second-place votes and three thirds for 105 points. Felipe Alou of Montreal and Bobby Cox of the NL West champion Atlanta Braves tied for third with 27 points each.

Baker, 44, who spent five seasons as a coach, was hired by new Giants owners Dec. 16 to replace Roger Craig.

The Giants led the NL West May 11-Sept. 11, when overtaken by the Braves. The Giants lost on the final day of the season, when the Dodgers routed them 12-1. San Francisco became the first team to win 103 games and not finish first since the 1954 Yankees.

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox agreed to a four-year contract extension through 1998 worth about $28 million. The team gets two option years that could make the deal worth $42 million for six seasons.

Seven players filed for free agency, headed by Robby Thompson, who hit .312 with 19 homers and 65 RBIs for San Francisco.

Cincinnati second baseman Bip Roberts, Mets third baseman Howard Johnson, White Sox pitcher Tim Lincecum, Oakland second baseman Jerry Browne, Seattle catcher Dave Valle and Colorado pitcher Bruce Hurst also filed.

Hurst filed after Rockies gave him a $400,000 buyout rather than a $3 million option. The Yankees gave Mike Witt a $500,000 buyout rather than his $3 million option.

Toronto wouldn't offer salary arbitration to three players covered by the restriction against repeat free agency within a five-year period: outfielder Rickey Henderson, reliever Mark Eichhorn and shortstop Dick Schofield.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ratings for the World Series dropped below the NBA Finals for the first time and were second-lowest ever.

Toronto's six-game victory over the Philadelphia Phillies got a 17.3 rating and 30 share, according to figures released by A.C. Nielsen Co. The rating was down 14 percent from the 20.2 rating for the Blue Jays' six-game victory over Atlanta last year.

The only lower-rated World Series was Oakland's earthquake-interrupted sweep of San Francisco in 1989, which got a 16.4 rating.

The Bulls' six-game victory over Phoenix in June got a 17.9 rating, the league's record high. Dallas' 52-17 rout of Buffalo in the Super Bowl on Jan. 31 got a 40.3 rating.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, upset Louisville will be shut out of New Year's Day bowl games, asked U.S. Justice Department to investigate whether a college football bowl coalition violates antitrust laws.

McConnell, a Kentucky Republican who graduated from Louisville, didn't bring up the issue to improve the Cardinals' chances to get invited to a prestigious bowl. The 17th-ranked Cardinals are 7-1.

Louisville coach Howard Schnellenberger shares McConnell's "concern about the fairness of the current bowl setup."

McConnell said his request to have the bowl coalition repealed does not mean government is overstepping bounds by intervening in collegiate athletics.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Jim Courier, second-seed, defeated friend David Wheaton 7-5, 5-7, 6-3 in the second round of the $1.65 million Stockholm Open.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Jaime Yzaga of Peru beat Cúslac Dosedel of Czech Republic 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 in the first round of the $200,000 Hellman's Cup.

ESSEN, Germany (AP) — Sixth-seeded Mary Pierce swept past Nicole Arendt 6-3, 6-0, and second-seeded Conchita Martínez of Spain beat Anne Mall 6-2, 6-4 in the opening round of the Nokia Grand Prix.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida fired women's swim coach Mitch Ivey after an investigation of his relationships with swimmers.

The investigation began after ESPN reporters showed up on campus three weeks ago to work on a story about Ivey's interaction with former and current athletes.

Ivey denied charges of misconduct after his firing, saying the university would rather avoid bad publicity than stand behind its coach. ESPN's host, Bob Ley, told AP the show will contain allegations of sexual misconduct against a "world-class coach who has a history of marrying his athletes and also of having sexual relationships with them."

Ivey, who married three times, married his second wife while she was at Stanford. As a member of the 1968 and 1972 U.S. Olympic teams, Ivey came to Florida in 1990. He led the team to Southeastern Conference titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993.

Hype has started for Cowboys, Eagles clash

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — The hype has started for Sunday's Dallas-Philadelphia NFC family feud.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson says Veterans Stadium is the toughest place he's ever had to take a team.

Philadelphia coach Rich Kotite says the Cowboys are better than they were last year in a world championship season.

"This year, they're better than they were last year," said Kotite. "They are playing with a lot of confidence. They are as capable a team as there is in the NFL."

"We're going to a place that hasn't been real friendly to us through the years," Johnson counters. "I expect we'll see Philadelphia at its best. They've moved the game from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. I expect the fans will be worked into a frenzy by then."

Johnson knows about "frenzy" in Philly. He's had to dodge snowballs filled with batteries.

Success has always been hard to come by for him at the Eagles home perch.

The Eagles blew out the defending world champions 31-7 last year in a Monday night game at Veterans Stadium. The Cowboys have won just one of their last six games in Philadelphia, a 23-15 victory in 1991.

Troy Aikman has never defeated the Eagles in the Vet, but this time the Cowboys are 11-point favorites to do so.

"I guess that's one more ghost I have to put to bed," said Aikman, who once suffered a separated shoulder at the Vet. "It's a hard place to play."

Johnson has played in some tough places, including as a college coach at Miami, but he rates Veterans Stadium as the hardest place to win.

"Going to Philadelphia is as difficult a task as we have," Johnson said. "They get up for us and there's no bones about it. They seem to play better against Dallas. The intensity level is up."

The Cowboys had no trouble last year with Philadelphia in Texas Stadium, winning 20-10 in a regular season game and knocking the Eagles out 34-10 in an NFC divisional playoff.

The Cowboys and Eagles are 4-2 but appeared headed in different directions. Dallas lost its first two games without holdout Emmitt Smith. The Eagles, who have lost two quarterbacks including Randall Cunningham to injury, have lost their last two games after winning their first four.

"The Eagles aren't as dominating a team without Randall Cunningham," Johnson said. "They had the most dangerous two-minute offense in the league with Cunningham in there."

The Cowboys are injury-free except for defensive end Charles Haley, who has back problems that were incurred in a 26-17 victory over the San Francisco 49ers. Haley was listed as questionable.

"I fully expect Haley to play," Johnson said. "He will get some tests on Wednesday, and we'll make a decision at that time. If Haley can't go, then Jim Jeffcoat will start."

The Cowboys are also expected to activate linebacker Godfrey Myles, who has missed all of the season so far because of an injury suffered in the Super Bowl. Myles will be a backup linebacker and play on the special teams.

Myles takes over the roster spot opened when linebacker John Roper was cut after he was caught dozing during a film session.

High school basketball practice tips off

Monday marked the beginning of basketball for high school teams across the state. The Pampa boys' team celebrated by taking its No. 10 preseason ranking to the practice courts after school.

Head coach Robert Hale led his team through a series of drills at the Pampa Youth Center Monday, and said that in addition to being ranked tenth in the TABC poll, other preseason polls had the Harvesters ranked anywhere from the sixth spot to the tenth.

"We're excited about that because there are some great, great teams out there," Hale said.

"This is an exciting time of the year for us," he added. "We're trying to break in our shoes as we break in our legs and break in our stamina."

The varsity lineup this season is filled with familiar names like Seivern Wallace, Coy Laury and Duane Nickleberry.

"We're going to have a real young team again this year," Hale said, noting that only four seniors are going out for the team.

The Harvesters are coming off a winning 26-6 season which saw them win the district championship. They won three playoff games, going all the way to the regional finals where their season was ended by a loss to Plainview.

Pampa has been a consistently successful team, winning regionals and advancing to the state playoffs in '91 and '92.

This season, the Harvesters face their first opponent, a scrimmage with Elk City, on Nov. 9 at home. Hale finds that the date of the preseason's inaugural matchup is earlier than in previous years.

"We have very limited time this year," eight-year coach Hale said.

Hale noted that he's also working his junior high team hard this preseason.

"One of the things that's very important to us is our junior high school program," he said. "They're the ones that grow up to be our future Harvesters."

The Harvesters open the season Nov. 16 on the home-court against Amarillo Palo Duro.

Harvesters didn't push panic button against Herd

Two quick touchdowns by Hereford caught Pampa off-guard, but the advantage didn't last long in last week's District 1-4A contest.

"There was no sense of panic," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier after Hereford had jumped out to 12-0 lead in the first quarter. "We came back, performed well both offensively and defensively, and got back into the game."

Hereford's first TD came on the third play of the game when Marquise Brown found an opening and sped 65 yards for the score.

"He did a good job of getting into the crease and their line did a good job of blocking. That was a play our defense had worked on in practice for most of the week. They executed and we didn't," added Cavalier.

Hereford's second and final TD was set up on a Harvester fumble on the Whitefaces' 45. Eight plays later the Whitefaces were in the end zone again.

"J.J. (Mathis) made a great return on the kickoff, but lo and behold, we fumbled the ball and Hereford got the turnover," Cavalier said. "Getting behind 12-0 was a great concern for us, but our guys did an outstanding job of coming back and putting the game away."

Pampa's comeback could be pinpointed on Greg McDaniel's 17-yard reverse run which gave the Harvesters a first down at midfield near the halfway mark of the second quarter.

"That was the play which ignited us offensively," Cavalier said.

Although the Harvesters didn't score on that drive due to a turnover, the stage was set for the romp.

Pampa scored three touchdowns before halftime and ended up collecting 538 yards in total offense in routing Hereford, 42-12. The win left Pampa in sole possession of first place in the district standings with a 3-0 record. Overall, the Harvesters are 7-1.

Randall downed Borger, 27-6, last week leaving the two teams tied for second at 2-1. Pampa hosts Borger at 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Harvester Stadium.

Unique style puts Garden City running back in limelight

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — When Garden City coach Dennis Bryant calls his new star running back Stuart Wilde a spider, he means it as a compliment.

"When he runs, it's all arms and legs," Bryant said, explaining the moniker.

Wilde's unique style is needed to propel his 5-8, 128-pound frame into and through opposing defenses. He's blossomed the last two weeks, gaining 550 yards and scoring four touchdowns on 69 carries.

His 343-yard, two-TD effort in a 20-0 victory over Sanderson last weekend has earned Wilde top honors in this week's Associated Press high school honor roll.

"He's like a ping pong ball," Bryant said. "If he doesn't take a straight hit, he bounces off people and he keeps moving his legs. That's his biggest asset."

Bryant said Wilde also has an amazing ability to slip tackles, a burst of acceleration that puts him at top speed within about two steps and excellent strength for someone his size.

Another trick is how an opponents' first glance at Wilde may lead them to think he's not much of a player.

"I guess if I was on the other side of the ball looking at him, I'd chuckle myself. His legs aren't even bigger than pencils," Bryant said.

Wilde is having the last laugh these days. He's overcome a slow start, battled through injuries and become the Class 1A Bearkats' featured ball carrier.

Wilde, who also plays cornerback, has been a late bloomer, waiting until midway through his senior year to really break out. He played wide receiver last season.

He began this season with 53 yards rushing in two games, missed the third with a broken left thumb, rushed for 116 yards in game 4 and had 98 the next week.

Early this season, Wilde and Bryan Harp split time at tailback. Wilde has since claimed the spot for himself and earned the full share of carries, getting 69 over the last two games.

He has 817 yards on 136 carries for the season. Garden City is 2-5, but 2-0 in District 8A. This weekend, the Bearkats face district foe Wink, which is coached by their former coach Sam Scott.

In other outstanding Week 8 performances: — Coleman Bates rushed for 214 yards on 27 carries, leading Houston Davis to its first victory in eight years, a 19-18 triumph over Houston Wheatley. Bates' 78-yard TD run on the first play from scrimmage was the beginning of the end of the nation's longest-ever losing streak of 80 games.

— Chris Pierson ran for 271 yards, two TDs and a two-point conversion as Garland Lakeview, considered a playoff contender in the preseason, won its first game of the season 41-0 over North Garland. His 76-yard TD came two plays after a holding call wiped out a 62-yard scoring run.

— Converse Judson's Jerod Douglas is back on the honor roll after a long, mostly injury-delayed absence. The all-state senior had four TDs and 193 yards in the Rockets' important 35-14 victory over SA Churchhill. He now has rushed for 970 yards and scored 14 times this season.

— Another highly touted back also lived up to his billing as Odessa Permian's John Williams ran for 171 yards on 29 and all three TDs in a 21-21 tie with Midland Lee that dropped the Panthers from first to fourth in 5A.

8th grade wraps up VB crown

Pampa won over Hereford, 14-16, 15-13, 15-11, in an 8th grade volleyball match Monday.

The Pampa 8th graders have clinched the district title with a 9-0 record. For the season their record is 12-1. They have one match left to play.

Brooke Petty and Erin Cobb played outstanding defensive games to help lead Pampa to the win.

"We were very consistent with our serves," said Pampa coach Sandra Thornton. "Brooke and Erin probably played their best defense of the season. It was just an outstanding job by everyone."

Earlier, the Pampa 8th grade defeated Borger, Valleyview and Hereford to win the Pampa Middle School Tournament.

The Pampa 8th grade B team won in three matches against Hereford.

In 7th grade action, Pampa defeated Hereford, 15-4, 15-5.

The Pampa 7th grade is tied for first place in district with an 8-1 record. The Pampa B team lost its match.

The Pampa teams close out the season next Monday at Borger.

'Bama back is 60-minute man

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's David Palmer should have been born about 50 years ago. He wasn't meant to play football in this era of short-yardage runners, third-down receivers and nickel defensive backs.

He's a 60-minute man, the kind who used to line up in the single wing on offense so he could run or throw, move over to the secondary when the other team had the ball, and return kickoffs and punts.

"I would say that David Palmer is as good as any I've ever seen," said Alabama coach Gene Stallings.

Palmer probably won't win the Heisman Trophy, an honor that seems reserved for Florida State quarterback Charlie Ward. But who could argue that Palmer is not the best all-around player in college football?

Not Mississippi coach Billy Brewer. Last week, he saw Palmer account for 265 yards in just about every way imaginable: seven rushes for 60 yards, a 54-yard pass completion, eight receptions for 76 yards, three punt returns for 41 yards and two kickoff returns for 34 yards.

"We couldn't do anything against him," Brewer said after his team fell to the fifth-ranked Crimson Tide 19-14. "Without his play, we might be tearing down the goalpost."

Palmer doesn't dazzle with blazing speed — Alabama's other receiver, Kevin Lee, is faster — but he's got more moves than you'll see in a singles' bar.

"I grew up playing sandlot football with no pads on," Palmer told reporters after the Mississippi game. "There were a lot of rocks on that field. You didn't want anybody to hit you and put you down on those rocks."

"This is just like playing on the sandlot. You don't want anybody to hit you, so you try to make them miss you."

Lee said Palmer's skills go beyond the sandlot.

Valor farm has that Kentucky look

Midland couple turns rundown ranch into showplace

By GARY WEST
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH (AP) — The quickest way to get to Kentucky from here is to drive north on Interstate 35 for about an hour and then east on highway 455 for about 15 minutes, and you're there.

Reason and road signs might deny it, but all your senses and impressions will insist it's Kentucky, or a piece of it, a wide swath of bluegrass land and bluegrass style, transported but not transmuted, sitting inconspicuously and quietly right down the road there in Pilot Point, a cup of coffee away, at Valor Farm.

Gabled barns, stone bridge, spacious paddocks, about 15 miles of fencing that meanders and roves over 393 acres — neat as a handbox, it sure looks as if it belongs among the celebrated racehorse farms of Lexington and Versailles.

Even has photographs of a champion in the office. Valor residents might also add to the bluegrass impression: a few sons and daughters of the great Alysheba, vernal yearlings, as well as several proven broodmares and three notable stallions, including Rare Brick, formerly of Pin Oak Stud in, of course, Kentucky.

But Valor Farm is all the more important because of its presence here, in Texas, for here it represents vast potential; here it awakens glorious possibilities and urges their realization; here it's special, for there's probably no other horse farm in Texas quite like. Not yet anyway.

Valor Farm offers more than a look at a semblance of Kentucky horse farms; it offers a look into the possible future of the horse-racing industry in Texas. Dorothy and Clarence Scharbauer of Midland, who raced Alysheba and still own the sport's all-time money winner, built Valor Farm. They bought what was a run-down cattle ranch in 1991, began construction in April 1992 and now have a showplace, but also a practical and functional state-of-the-art horse farm, ready for the advent of first-class racing in Texas.

Except for Alysheba, who stands at Lane's End Farm in Kentucky, and their racehorses, which are scattered around at various racetracks, the Scharbauers will stable all their horses at Valor.

For decades, Texans such as the Scharbauers have been prominent in horse racing as owners and breeders, but circumstances have forced them to pursue their interests elsewhere.

For example: — Will Farish of Houston owns and operates Lane's End Farm in Lexington. — Johnny T.L. Jones, a native of Quannah, is a member of the Kentucky Racing Commission and owns and operates Walmac International in Lexington.

— Mike Rutherford of Houston races a large stable that has won graded stakes in New York, California, Arkansas and Louisiana, and he owns Manchester Farm in Lexington. — Josephine Abercrombie of Houston maintains racing stables in both Europe and America and owns Pin Oak Stud in Versailles, Ky.

— The Preston brothers — Art, Jack and J.R. — maintain a large racing stable and own Preston-Wood Farm in Versailles. — and Cloyce Box of Dallas, who campaigned the New York stakes winner Conveyor this year, owned the CB Farm and training center in Ocala, Fla. Box died in his sleep Sunday in his home.

"Texans made the breeding industry in Kentucky," said Barry Wood, general manager and veterinarian of Valor, "and if Texans would put just 20 percent of their effort into the Texas industry, it'll be an instant success."

And Texans appear ready for such an effort, now that Class 1 racing looms as an imminent reality. With Sam Houston Race Park scheduled to open April 29, and Retama Park in San Antonio scheduled to open in early 1995 followed a few months later by Lone Star in Grand Prairie, some of our horses here (in Texas). It'd be a lot easier just to jump in the car to go see them run."

Before Texas can become one of the leaders in the horse industry, it must improve the quality of its broodmares, said Jeff Hooper of the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders' Association.

Economics won't permit highly valuable stallions with demanding stud fees to come to Texas until there's a bevy of highborn mares to greet them.

"But first we have to have that Class 1 racetrack," he said, "and when we get quality racing, I think these people who want to be affiliated with quality will want to race here and be here."

Farish recently announced that Line in the Sand, winner of the 1992 Louisiana Derby and a son of Mr. Prospector, will stand as a stallion not at Lane's End or elsewhere in Kentucky but in Texas, at his Huisache Farm in Hempstead.

Rutherford, recently elected to the Retama Park board of directors, will stand the stakes performer Kerose at his Lexington Farm but at his farm in Buda.

Box, a former all-pro wide receiver with the Detroit Lions, had jumped into the Texas breeding industry. Wayne's Crane, the fifth-leading juvenile sire in the country, will take up residence at Box's CB Farm in Frisco.

And Abercrombie, who this year stood the European winner Cool at Fair Weather Farm near Austin, moved Rare Brick, already a successful stallion with five stakes winners, from her farm in Kentucky to Valor.

"Obviously moving a horse like Rare Brick to Texas is a vote of confidence," said Joe Osborne, manager of Pin Oak. "We expect racing to be very successful there. We've talked about having a string of racehorses there as well."

The Preston brothers have plans for a training center in Central Texas and intend to race at least half of their 30-plus stable in their home state.

"It depends on the quality of the racing and the purses," said Art Preston. "If the purses are large enough, we'd like to have all our horses here (in Texas). It'd be a lot easier just to jump in the car to go see them run."

"Everywhere we went we got ideas," Wood said, "and we just put the best ideas together. We developed the farm first to function and then for aesthetics. We just want to do it right."

In addition to Rare Brick, multiple stakes winners Hadif and Exclusive Enough will stand at Valor next year, and the farm is large to accommodate three more stallions.

"As Texas moves closer to Class 1 racing, I think you're going to see more of this," Wood said, looking around at the sienna brick and the polished oak and then up into the depth of the high ceiling and the gable.

"Details make the difference at Valor — laboratories in both the stallion barn and the broodmare barn; the barns themselves, built with convection ceilings to create a constant breeze in the hot summer months; and the one-way window that allows someone in an apartment to maintain constant vigil over horses that might need help or care."

"We've talked about having a string of racehorses there as well."

Longhorns favored to win basketball crown

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Longhorns have been put on the preseason hot seat as the favorite to win the Southwest Conference basketball championship, according to a poll of the eight conference coaches.

Senior Longhorns center Albert Burditt was chosen as preseason Player of the Year by the coaches.

Texas returns four starters and welcomes two heralded transfers, Rich McIver from Michigan and Tremaine Wingfield from Louisville, to a squad which finished 11-17 overall last season and was seventh in the SWC with a 4-10 mark.

Four players sat out part of the season for Texas last year, including Burditt, who missed the final 19 games due to academic suspension.

Guard B.J. Tyler missed most of the SWC season with a stress fracture in his foot. Coach Tom Penders' Longhorns received seven of the possible eight first-place votes for 63 points, edging second-place Texas A&M by 16.5 total points.

Rounding out the SWC's upper division is upstart Baylor at third with 46.5 points, including one first-place vote. Houston was selected fourth with 41 points. Texas A&M is a surprise selection after finishing 10-17 a year ago and in sixth in the SWC race. Coach Tony Barone welcomes back all five starters and a heralded class of newcomers.

Baylor coach Darrel Johnson is also expected to make an impact with four starters returning and a wealth of incoming talent.

Burditt was selected the preseason Player of the Year after being ranked among the nation's leaders in rebounding and blocked shots during the first part of last season. At the time of his January suspension last season, Burditt was averaging 14.1 rebounds and 4.2 blocks.

The preseason SWC Newcomer of the Year is Texas Tech junior Mark Davis. A heralded junior college transfer from Howard (Texas) Junior College, Davis was one of the top juco players in the nation.

Baylor's Jerode Banks from Temple is the coaches' selection as the league's preseason Freshman of the Year.

McElroy, a redshirt freshman, has to make an impression wherever he can because he's the No. 3 tailback behind Rodney Thomas and Greg Hill. His feat on Saturday made him only the sixth player in NCAA Division I-A to return two kickoffs for touchdowns in one game.

Notre Dame's Rocket Ismail did it twice and the Owls were one of his victims in 1988.

"They were important to the game," McElroy said. "We were down when I returned the second one and the first one. It helped the team out a lot."

"The defense was just pursuing the ball and having a good time out there," Ellis said. "We needed this win."

With Texas Tech and its high-octane offense looming this week, Ellis said, "We need all the confidence we can get."

"We had a double linebacker blitz on the snap of the ball," Ellis said. "I disguised my coverage and rushed in. He never saw me."

The deflated Mustangs settled for a 38-yard field goal and never threatened the rest of the first half. By intermission, Texas had put the game out of reach, 27-3.

Texas (2-3-1 overall, 2-0 in the SWC) had been giving up nearly 500 yards a game during its first five games, which marked the Longhorns' worst start since 1938.

But the Longhorns held SMU to just 271 yards, including a mere 53 yards on the ground.

Texas's smallest starter named SWC's top defender

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — No one would mistake Joey Ellis for a defensive lineman.

At 5-9 and 186 pounds, he is the smallest starter on the Texas Longhorns' defense.

But Ellis, a junior cornerback who goes by the nickname Silk-E-Smooth, got a taste of being lineman Saturday, recording two sacks, one of which caused a crucial fumble, in a 37-10 victory over Southern Methodist.

For his play, Ellis has been named The Associated Press Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week.

"Sacks are defensive line stats and interceptions are defensive back stats," Ellis said. "So when we get a sack, we let the defensive linemen know, and it makes them mad. Getting two sacks, well..."

Texas A&M's Leeland McElroy returned Rice's first two kickoffs 93 and 88 yards for touchdowns, tying an NCAA record, to set the tone for the No. 11 Aggies' 38-10 victory on Saturday. He is the AP's SWC Offensive Player of the Week.

"The defense was just pursuing the ball and having a good time out there. We needed this win."

— Joey Ellis

Ellis, who had five solo tackles and a pass breakup to go with his sacks, said he had not been called on to blitz all season until the SMU game. He made the most of his opportunities.

His first sack was the most critical. With the Mustangs facing third-and-goal at the Texas 2 late in the first quarter, Ellis came flying in from the right side while SMU quarterback Mark Eldred was looking left into the end zone.

Ellis hit Eldred with such force, the ball was sent flying back upfield, where it went out of bounds at the 21.

"We had a double linebacker blitz on the snap of the ball," Ellis said. "I disguised my coverage and rushed in. He never saw me."

The deflated Mustangs settled for a 38-yard field goal and never threatened the rest of the first half. By intermission, Texas had put the game out of reach, 27-3.

Saints still have potent offense despite losses

New Orleans (AP) —

After two weeks of slipping and sliding, the New Orleans Saints hope to get their legs back under them for the second half of the season.

New Orleans (5-2) had cranked up its running game early in the season — basically on the legs of rookie Derek Brown. The Saints ran to five straight victories to open the campaign.

Now, after horrendous showings in back-to-back losses, the Saints still boast the No. 4 offense in the NFC. Through seven games, the Saints have averaged 338.4 yards a game total offense and 127.7 yards running the ball.

In Sunday's 26-15 loss to the Atlanta Falcons, the Saints ran only 12 times for 47 yards — and 20 of those came on a scramble by quarterback Wade Wilson.

"I'm not happy with the way we're running the football or the way we're stopping the run," coach Jim Mora said.

Brown has dropped to fifth in the conference with 431 yards on 109 rushes. Against Atlanta, Brown carried nine times for 22 yards, an average of 2.2 yards a carry.

"I don't know what's wrong," Brown said. "We're working just as hard. We're just not getting the same results."

With four preseason games and seven regular season games behind him, the equivalent of an entire college season, Brown admits he's feeling the strain.

"I'm more banged up than I ever was," he said. "Nothing big; a sore ankle, bumps and bruises. I'll get over them, but I guess they're taking some kind of toll right now."

The bumps and bruises have added up during the past two games. The holes that Brown found to run through early on just aren't there these days.

"It's really frustrating," said offensive lineman Derek Kennard. "It's nothing you can put your finger on, nothing you can really look at as the reason."

The losses cut New Orleans' lead over San Francisco in the NFC West to one game.
