PAMPA -- Texas Department of Health will be giving immunizations at its office, 408 W. Kingsmill, from 1-4:30 p.m. today.

PAMPA -- Flavious J. Smith, candidate for the Republican primary in the 13th Congressional race, had campaign appearances scheduled for Canadian and Miami this morning and Pampa shortly after noon today.

MONTICELLO, Minn. (AP) — Customers at Ernie's Bait Shop are greeted by a hand-lettered sign: "No Smoking." Next door, regulars at the bar known locally as "The Zoo" puff away in a haze.

Monticello is the birthplace of today's Great American Smokeout, the town credited with first persuading American smokers to give up their habit for at least one day each year.

"I've often marveled that not once has a smoker ever taken a drag and blown in my face," said Lynn Smith, the weekly newspaper publisher who organized the first Don't Smoke Day — D-Day for short.

Smith, 73, who quit smoking in 1954, says he had often editorialized against smoking in his newspaper, the Monticello Times, which serves a town of 5,000 people about 34 miles northwest of Minneapolis.

But he wanted to do something more. So he organized D-Day for Jan. 7, 1974. For four weeks in advance, he published the names of people who pledged to quit. On the big day, a Minneapolis radio station broadcast a program from the newspaper office, interviewing people who had quit smoking. In a survey 100 days later, Smith said he found about 30 people had kicked the habit.

KEMPTON PARK, South Africa (AP) — Black and white leaders endorsed a new constitution today that destroys apartheid by guaranteeing equal rights for blacks and ends three centuries of white dominance.

President F.W. de Klerk, African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and other senior political leaders culminated two years by signing the constitutional package, which includes a bill of rights and laws governing the nation's first multiracial election on April 27.

When the white-dominated Parliament approves the package at what will likely be its final session next week, the South Africa that stripped its black majority of basic human rights, sent Mandela to jail for 27 years and murdered the schoolchildren of Soweto will cease to exist.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction of new homes and apartments rose in October to the highest level in nearly four years as builders moved to meet consumer demand fueled by a strengthening economy and low mortgage rates.

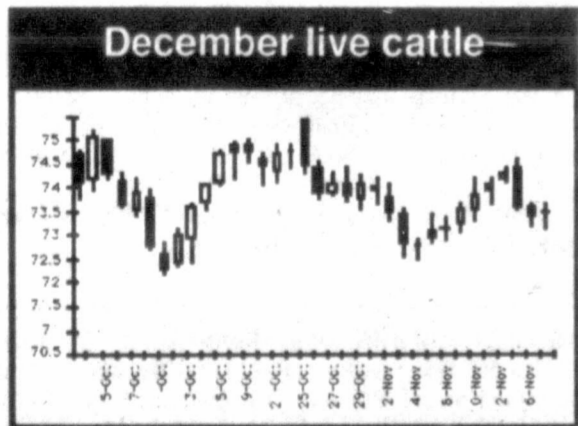

Construction of new homes and apartments rose 2.7 percent to a 1.40 million seasonally adjusted annual rate in October, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday. That was the highest since a 1.44 million rate in February 1990 and well above the 1.37 million rate many analysts had expected.

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Southwest Airlines will order 63 Boeing jetliners, allowing the aerospace manufacturer to launch a new version of its best-selling 737.

At a cost of $36 million to $40 million per plane, the order would be worth $2.27 billion to $2.52 billion. The deal still must be formalized in a signed agreement, the companies said Wednesday.

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said it agreed to sell Italian sports-car maker Lamborghini to SET-DCO, a Bermuda-based holding company.

The price, which wasn't disclosed Wednesday, was believed to be about $40 million in cash. The No. 3 U.S. automaker purchased Automobili Lamborghini S.p.A. and its subsidiaries in April 1987 for a reported $25 million.

Sales tax revenues increase for Pampa

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Revenues from local sales tax are up this month, and Pampa's finance director hopes it is a sign of better things to come for the city's coffers.

"What we are looking at is that we are up a little bit over last year and over budget, so it looks encouraging this month, for the first time in several months," said John Horst, the city's finance director. This month, the city received a check from the state's Comptrollers Office for $193,739.12, which is 12.47 percent more than in the 1992-1993 fiscal year after being restated to reflect doubling the sales tax.

For this fiscal year, which began last month, the city is 3.88 percent over budget, meaning they are ahead $44,781.76.

This month's check from the state includes taxes collected in September and reported in October by businesses filing monthly sales tax returns.

Among other cities in Gray County getting sales tax receipts, Lefors received less from the state while McLean reported a dramatic increase.

Lefors, received a check for $502.85 this month, down 8.5 percent from November, 1992. For its year-to-date total, it was 5.64 percent below the same period last year.

McLean posted a 57.62 percent gain in this month's check for $2,718.18 as opposed to last year's $1,724.41 check.

Skellytown received a check for $1,498.49 from the state this month, an increase compared to last November's check of $1,376.56. Groom received a check for $2,336.39, 6.19 percent less than last November's check of $2,490.63.

Panhandle received 1.97 percent less this month than last year. For September, 1993, it received a check for $9,491.97, about $120 less than last year.

White Deer received a check for $2,718.80, or 6.38 percent less than last November's check of $2,903.13.

Canadian received a check for $12,152.76, a 3.68 percent decrease as compared to last November's check of $12,617.69. Miami had a gain of 1.37 percent, from $1,677.47 to $1,700.53.

Shamrock received a check for $22,828.47 this month, an increase of 24.86 percent from last year when it received $18,282.15. Wheeler received $5,684.10, approximately 19 percent more than last November's check of $4,764.76.

Mobeetic took a hit of 25.02 percent. In September of this year, $275.81 in sales taxes were spent by consumers in the city as compared to $367.88 in September of 1992.

Clinton carrying free trade message to Asia and Pacific conference

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Leaders of the world's fastest-growing economies are gathering to hear President Clinton's appeal for reducing trade barriers across the Pacific, a U.S. overture given "a huge boost" by a crucial House free-trade vote.

The extraordinary summit on trade was bringing together leaders of 15 Asian and Pacific governments. With them came a mixture of enthusiasm and skepticism.

For his part, Clinton hoped to use his House victory on the North American Free Trade Agreement as leverage to press for freer trade with Asia at this week's Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference — and to enhance his stature as a world leader.

"We must continue the fight to lower foreign trade barriers, which slow economic growth here in the United States and around the world," Clinton said at the White House after Wednesday night's 234-200 House vote for the trade pact.

He said that in his talks with Pacific leaders, "I will ask them to work toward more open markets for our products."

Before departing for Seattle, Clinton met with House and Senate leaders to discuss the trip. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the House vote and the expected Senate approval present "the opportunity to keep the momentum toward expanded trade."

The House's approval of the U.S.-Mexico-Canada trade pact gave tense delegates to the Seattle conference cause for a collective sigh of release.

Chau Tak-hay, Hong Kong's secretary for trade and industry, said the House vote means "we will be back in business. Clinton will be able to deliver" in moving toward more liberal trade.

A defeat would have undercut Clinton's authority and put him in a weak bargaining position to seek lower trade barriers in Asia and Europe.

The administration hopes to prod to conclusion by year's end the slow-moving talks among 108 nations meeting in Geneva on a new set of more liberal global trading rules.

Roy MacLaren, Canada's minister for international trade, said the House vote reflected "an outward-looking attitude and the rejection, as it were, of the protectionist tendencies that exhibited themselves over the past two weeks."

He said it would bode well for the trade talks in Seattle and in Geneva.

Myers said Clinton was looking forward to meeting new Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien, although some lingering trade disagreements were expected to come up.

Fax about NAFTA

How busy was it in Washington this past week with the negotiations on Capitol Hill over NAFTA?

It was so busy that some congressmen had trouble keeping up with the facts...er, fax.

In sending out a press release Wednesday concerning Congressman Bill Sarplius' standing on the trade agreement using technology's latest gadget, his press secretary noted, "Due to the inordinate amount of faxes coming in and out of Congressman Sarplius' office yesterday, our fax machine was unable to handle the load and suffered a failure."

Attendants strike American Airlines

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The flight attendants' union went on strike today against American Airlines and said it would stay out until after Thanksgiving. The carrier said it intends to keep flying.

"We are in the process of shutting it down," said spokesman Ray Abernathy of the Association of Professional Flight Attendants.

The airline and the union failed to reach a new contract agreement in two days of federally mediated, last-ditch talks.

Twenty bone-weary negotiators called it quits around 2 a.m. CST today in New Orleans, and the strike began four hours later.

The union, which represents 21,000 flight attendants at American, said its members would be off the job for 11 days, including the Thanksgiving travel period, among the year's busiest.

American spokesman Al Becker predicted that "large numbers of our flight attendants will cross the picket line and come to work." For the ones that do strike, the airline said, they may have no jobs to come back to.

The Allied Pilots Association, representing American's 10,000 pilots, was voting by mail on whether to strike in sympathy with the flight attendants. Results weren't expected until Friday, but it was possible some pilots might not fly before then.

A federal judge granted American's request for a temporary restraining order barring the carrier's 30,300 mechanics and ground workers represented by the Transport Workers Union from waging a sympathy strike.

At Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, Kathy Lord, a local union official, said 300 to 350 flight attendants were picketing.

American spokeswoman Mary Frances Fagan at O'Hare said the airline would try to maintain its flight schedule using managers to fill in, and would try to get customers on other airlines if no American flights were available.

"We are asking our customers to please understand we are in a labor dispute situation," Fagan said.

The airline said it uses about 6,000 flight attendants on any given day, but could fly with fewer and still meet Federal Aviation Administration standards. The company said it did not know exactly how many it needs.

Clan leader makes public appearance

By NEJLA SAMMAKIA
Associated Press Writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Crowds pressed around his van, women danced to the sound of drums and others beat the desert sand with their hands.

Protected by rocket-propelled grenades and automatic rifles, Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, a one-time fugitive with a price on his head, made a triumphant public appearance in Mogadishu today, his first in more than five months.

The appearance came just two days after the Security Council passed a resolution lifting the arrest warrant it had issued in June for Aidid, after his men were blamed for the deaths of 24 Pakistani soldiers. The Security Council also voted to launch a new inquiry into attacks on U.N. peacekeepers in Somalia, and suggested that 35 of Aidid's men in detention would be released soon.

The vote appeared to be an admission that a political solution in Somalia would require the participation of Aidid and his Somali National Alliance.

That was the message the warlord brought today.

"All Somalis must understand wartime is over. Without outside interference, all Somali factions can solve their problems among themselves," Aidid said as the crowd of more than 4,000 clapped and waved their fists.

JFK assassination papers remain secret

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amateur and professional sleuths may have to wait another five years to get a look at thousands of government documents on President Kennedy's assassination that remain secret.

A House panel examining the implementation of a 1992 law designed to release assassination documents heard testimony Wednesday indicating that, even though a mountain of material already has been made public, much remains under lock and key.

"Are federal agencies cooperating fully, or is there resistance that fosters continued public distrust of the government?" asked House Government Operations Committee Chairman John Conyers, D-Mich.

With the 30th anniversary of the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination days away, witnesses told the panel that the cooperation a year after the passage of the Assassination Records Collection Act of 1992 is mixed.

"Nothing approaching the professed goals of the act has happened," said James Lesar, head of the private Assassination Archive and Research Center. "Disclosure has not been prompt, nor does it even remotely approach complete disclosure."

Police search for suspects in double murder

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police say they are looking for two suspects in the slaying of two Fort Worth college students who were killed in what authorities say was a drug- and sex-related slaying.

Fort Worth Lt. J.P. Foley wouldn't say if police believe the suspects are drug dealers or professional killers.

Channing Freelove, 19, and Michelle Colchert, 18, were found shot to death in a vacant Fort Worth field Saturday morning.

Police say the investigation into the tangled affairs of the women could take a long time.

"We're not ruling anything out," said police spokeswoman Lt. Pat Kneblick. "There was enough activity on both the drug dealing end and the relationships end that we've got plenty of people to talk to still."

Colchert was a student at Tarrant County Junior College, and Freelove, a high school honor student, was attending Texas Christian University.

The women were originally portrayed as wholesome athletes who did well in school, but since have been linked to drug dealing and sometimes-violent lesbian affairs.

On Tuesday, police arrested two women that an affidavit describes them as former lovers of Ms. Freelove's, Sherrie Lynn Sikes, 24, and Brandi Michelle Cirelli, 20, each remained jailed on about $60,000 bail.

They are accused of trying to hire an acquaintance to kill Freelove and of possession of marijuana. The women have not been charged in the slayings.

Witnesses told police that the women planned the contract killing the day after a heated melee involving Freelove, Sikes and Cirelli.

The fight allegedly broke out after Freelove showed up intoxicated at the other women's apartment. It reportedly ended when Freelove threatened to commit suicide.

Witnesses told police that that episode led Cirelli to find someone to "take care of Channing because she was becoming a real problem."

Meanwhile, students, teachers and administrators at the slain women's alma mater, Paschal High School, tried to deal with their loss.

"I've been dragged through it," said Paschal principal Anita Whiteside. The slayings have dominated conversation among students. Some instructors discussed the tragedy with the students in class, urging them to be cautious and to seek counseling if needed.

"Everybody's talking about it, teachers, principals, everybody," said Mike Kelly, an 18-year-old senior. "It's really affected the school, because a lot of people used to know those girls."

Freedom Newspapers changes corporate name

IRVINE, Calif. — Determined to grow beyond its early roots in the newspaper business, Freedom Newspapers Inc. has changed its name to Freedom Communications Inc. to symbolize an ambitious new program of diversification.

Freedom's board of directors approved the name change this month as part of a comprehensive strategic plan that will enable the company to build its core businesses while taking advantage of emerging technologies and partnerships.

"The new name reflects our changing business," said Freedom President/CEO James N. Rossie. "We're more than a newspaper company now and our new name says that while preserving the legacy of our founders."

Freedom Communications is now the nation's 13th largest newspaper chain with just under one million daily subscribers.

The television division — which includes five broadcast affiliates and a 24-hour all news cable channel — serve a combined market of almost 2.2 million households.

The family owned company traces its origins to R.C. Hoiles, who acquired the Bucyrus (Ohio) Telegraph Forum in 1927.

One Lotto winner

By The Associated Press

One ticket purchased in Grand Prairie correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The ticket is worth $3 million.

The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 2, 11, 23, 31, 34 and 46.

In addition to the jackpot winner, there were 123 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,365. There were 6,270 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $96.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $3 million.

By 1950, Hoiles and his sons (Clarence and Harry) and son-in-law Robert Hardie were publishing seven daily newspapers and Freedom Newspapers Inc. was formed as the banner under which they would operate.

When asked why he chose Freedom instead of naming the company after the Hoiles family, R.C. Hoiles said "Because Freedom will live on forever and no one is going to remember the name Hoiles."

The company publishes 26 daily newspapers, including The Pampa (Texas) News, and 30 weeklies in 10 states. The flagship of the newspaper group is the Orange County (Calif.) Register with a Sunday circulation of over 400,000 subscribers.

Although the majority of the company's holdings are in newspapers,

Freedom has diversified in recent years to other venues of providing information and entertainment.

Freedom Communications owns four CBS affiliates, an ABC affiliate and the Orange County (Calif.) NewsChannel.

Freedom is also exploring new ways to deliver information and services to its customers.

The company has a developing magazine division that recently acquired two properties — World Trade and USA Exports.

And in the arena of new technology, Freedom has become an investor/partner in the IT Network, a Dallas, Texas based company that is a leader in the development of interactive television.

Judy Warner named to board for Red River Authority of Texas

A Pampa woman has been named to serve on the Red River Authority of Texas board of directors.

Judy Warner received word Wednesday that she was selected to the board charged with providing for control, conservation and orderly development of the watershed and water of the Red River and its Texas tributaries. The authority was created in 1959 by the 56th Legislature as a conservation and reclamation district.

Her term of office extends to Aug. 11, 1997.

Warner is a homemaker and serves as president of Altrusa International Inc. She is active at First United Methodist Church and with Meals on Wheels. She served on the board of Samaritan Counseling Center and Tralee Crisis Center.

She holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Texas at Austin.

Other Panhandle residents named include Paul F. Engler, Amarillo, and Diane Mashburn, Childress. The appointees must be confirmed by the Senate.

Wednesday's winning numbers are:

Nigerian general seizes power amid army unrest

By FRANK AIGBOGUN
Associated Press Writer

Gen. Sani Abacha

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — In a country buffeted by coups since it gained independence 33 years ago, a powerful general forced out Nigeria's civilian head of state amid signs of dangerous rivalries within the military.

The ouster of Ernest Shonekan on Wednesday was another stunning twist for Africa's most populous country, which has been plagued by unrest since the former military dictator voided the results of the June 12 presidential election that was to return the nation to democracy.

Lagos was quiet after the late-night announcement that Gen. Sani Abacha, the defense minister and the man who was believed to be in charge anyway, had assumed control. The announcement said Shonekan had stepped down.

Shonekan, a former corporate executive, had been appointed by the military on Aug. 26. There was widespread speculation that Abacha named himself head of state in order to better control rival elements in the military.

A split in the military plunged Nigeria into civil war in 1967.

The statement attributed to Shonekan and read on state-run television alluded to the divisions. It said Shonekan met with Abacha and other officers and "they spoke about the restiveness of the rank-and-file in the military."

The statement called Shonekan's short-lived civilian administration, which many Nigerians derided as a puppet of the military, "a child of circumstance."

"It was conceived in crises, and born into crises, but records indicate that we have put in our very best to manage the continuing crisis," the statement said.

The ouster comes in the midst of a general strike by major unions and pro-democracy groups. The strike, the fourth in four months, was called to protest Shonekan's Nov. 8 move to raise fuel prices sevenfold.

Shonekan had tried to win public support by freeing political prisoners, lifting restrictions on the press and dismantling the oil industry bureaucracy accused of siphoning off the nation's vast oil wealth.

Shonekan had promised to hold new presidential elections on Feb. 19. It remains unclear whether Abacha will stick to that timetable, or whether his decision to take power openly will quell forces opposed to him in the military.

Abacha, a 50-year-old general, is no stranger to intrigue.

He was a key figure in the military coup that ended the civilian government in 1983 and the coup that put Gen. Ibrahim Babangida in power two years later. When junior officers tried to topple Babangida in 1990, Abacha told television viewers that the coup had been put down.

Soldiers have ruled Nigeria, a nation of 90 million people, for all but 10 of its 33 years of independence from Britain.

Babangida had promised to usher in democratic government, but continually delayed the process. Although he allowed civilian presidential elections to be held June 12, he abruptly voided the results.

His action led to a series of strikes and protests. Babangida resigned under pressure on Aug. 26 and named Shonekan as his successor after refusing to appoint the man believed to have won the election, tycoon Moshood K.O. Abiola.

Abacha, critical of Babangida's handling of the situation, was widely believed to have forced out Babangida. He then purged several top Babangida allies from the military, leading to fears that another coup was brewing.

Babangida has retired and is no longer considered a factor in the nation's power struggles.

Some of the most prominent critics of the military were stunned and confused by Shonekan's ouster.

Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, the only one of Nigeria's military rulers to voluntarily hand power back to civilians, in 1979, said: "Quite honestly, I don't know what's happening. I really don't know what to say."

Abiola's running mate in the election, Baba Gana Kingibe, refused to comment. "I don't know any more than you," he told a reporter.

Cult member: There was suicide pact among some followers

WACO (AP) — One of David Koresh's followers has testified that members of his cult agreed — during a 51-day standoff with government agents earlier this year — to commit suicide in the event of his death.

The testimony Wednesday by Marjorie Thomas, 30, during a deposition was quickly disputed by other members of the cult.

But it marked the first time anyone in the compound during a 51-day standoff last year agreed with the FBI's contention that a suicide pact existed.

Ms. Thomas, 30, suffered burns over more than 50 percent of her body while escaping from a fire that destroyed the cult compound near Waco on April 19. She talked of the suicide pact during a deposition concerning criminal cases pending against 11 other members of the cult.

Koresh and more than 80 of his followers died in the inferno, and autopsies showed that some of them died from gunshot wounds to the head after the fire started.

Thomas was told to return to court today so defense attorneys could question her.

Government prosecutors questioned Thomas Wednesday about the Feb. 28 raid on Mount Carmel, 10 miles east of Waco, by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The agency was trying to arrest Koresh on charges of possession of automatic weapons.

Four ATF agents and six cult members died in a shootout that led to a siege that lasted more than seven weeks.

Thomas, who was in a wheelchair Wednesday, testified that she did not see any Branch Davidians fire weapons at ATF agents, but did see two cult members with weapons on the day of the raid. She identified them as Jaime Castillo and Brad Branch.

She also said that the cult never planned to attack anyone in the Waco community.

ATF officials suggested after their failed Feb. 28 raid that Koresh planned an action that he claimed would make people forget the Los Angeles riots. But the agency never provided details regarding the allegation.

Thomas testified she didn't know how the April 19 fire started. She said she was upstairs at the compound when the fire started. She said it became smoky and the walls began collapsing, and she was quickly trapped by the heat and fire.

She survived, she said, by walking "to the light."

She had on a gas mask, but it melted and her clothes caught on fire, she testified. Seeing light shining through a curtain, she walked toward it, making her way to the roof, she said.

An FBI agent escorted her to safety.

She was released last week from Parkland Memorial Hospital, where she was treated with burns over more than half of her body, mainly her face, neck and legs.

Pampa police officials in Kentucky on accreditation visit

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Members of the Pampa Police Department are in Lexington, Ky., today through Sunday for the final review of the police department by the Commission of Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies.

Pampa Police Chief Charles Flemings, Lt. Steve Chance, the accreditation manager for the department, and Connie Brainard, the police department's records manager and assistant accreditation manager, left Pampa Wednesday and are expected to testify Saturday at 11:20 a.m. before the commission in hopes of being re-accredited.

Col. John Ellen, the recently appointed deputy police chief, said he expects the department will receive the much coveted re-accreditation.

"We are very confident," he said about the re-accreditation. "Lt. Chance as well as everyone else that worked on the (re-accredita-

As part of the accreditation process, the police department had to document every aspect of the police department from their arrest procedure to their investigations to inter-departmental policies for the past five years.

The work necessary to comply with the accreditation standards and on-site inspection, which was held Sept. 18 through Sept. 23, began in February.

The current review the police department is going through is held in a public forum.

In addition to members of the Pampa Police Department, the leader of the on-site inspection team will also be addressing the commission.

Parents invited to participate in Tots-n-Training program

In the spring of 1992, Pampa Independent School District began to consider ways to serve parents and pre-school children and thereby accomplish the first goal set forth in Education 2000: "By the year 2000, all children in America will start school ready to learn."

ed by a Chapter 1 Fund Innovative program grant.

The distribution sites and times are as follows:

All children in America will start school ready to learn."

A parent is a child's first teacher during the critical pre-school years. Some experts believe a child has developed 75 percent of his language skills by three years of age and nearly all of his intelligence by age five.

To provide services that will support parents as they prepare their children for formal instruction at elementary school, the Pampa school district is sponsoring a new program, "Tots-n-Training."

The program is for children from three to five years of age who live in the areas served by Horace Mann, Baker, Wilson and Lamar elementary schools.

Among the features of the Tots-n-Training program:

Distributors will be stationed in eight cooperating businesses on Tuesdays each week at an assigned time to distribute materials.

Parents will become teachers as they use the materials (including story books, painting books, crayons, etc.) distributed to them for their children.

A newsletter will be distributed that provides guidance to the parents in the use of materials as well as other suggestions for relating to their pre-schooler.

Parents will give reports to distributors each week on how the lessons went with the parents' child or children.

The program is completely fund-

The parents will receive a newsletter each week that offers ideas for activities the parents can pursue at home with their children. The newsletter also gives the children ideas that they can use as they perform their regular activities — ideas that will help the children build language skills, thinking skills, motor skills, and social skills.

Children will be given a book each week as well as occasional supplies to use at home on behalf of their activities. Included in the program will be prizes for the child who is read to at least four days a week. Daily attention from adults is important for children to gain positive pre-school skills and attitudes, school officials said.

More information about the Tots-n-Training program may be obtained by calling Bama Coward at 669-4700.

Appeal of being out of touch

The Pampa News
 EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
 TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Term limits should be Congress' future

With a resounding victory in New York City earlier this month, the term-limits movement has proved its almost universal appeal among Americans.

From coast to coast, across party lines, up and down the social-economic spectrum, from the smallest towns to our greatest metropolises, Americans want career politicians out.

With a 60 percent majority that drew from all segments of the electorate, New York City voters approved a two-term, eight-year limit on all municipal officeholders — including Mayor-elect Rudolph Giuliani.

This lopsided victory for term limits in the heart of political liberalism, where Democrats outnumber Republicans 5-1, proves conclusively that the movement is not a conservative conspiracy. It is a necessary political reform whose time has come.

Along with New Yorkers, voters in Maine also approved term limits by a 2-1 margin for state officeholders. Their vote brings to 16 the total number of states that limit terms of either state or federal elected officials. [Our Texas legislators, however, have resisted the temptation to prove they are really public servants. Despite polls and surveys showing a vast majority of Texas residents favor term limits for our state officeholders, the legislators have refused to enact any such provision in Austin. And they also quite readily resist providing for any type of public referendum that might allow voters to enact term limits over the wishes of the legislators.]

A third of the members of Congress are already serving under term limits, with more states expected to put the issue to a vote in 1994 or 1996. Again, barring some unlikely change of will among our legislators, such an issue will not be presented to voters in Texas.

Given the broad appeal of term limits, Congress should act now to refer a constitutional amendment to the states that would limit the tenure of every senator and congressman.

If congressional leaders will not allow a vote, then rank-and-file members should do an end run through the discharge-process, which allows bills to bypass the committee system.

If Congress members — and our state legislators — continue to resist the term limits movement, it will only highlight how out of touch the career politicians in Washington and Austin have become.

Like every other one of the 3,764,812 deep thinkers in this country who make their living purveying opinions in newspaper columns, I was recently presented with the chance to offer my insights on the TV show Beavis and Butt-head, which made it onto the front pages thanks to an incident in which a child set fire to his home after watching one of these cartoon characters do likewise.

This is the sort of opportunity that a pundit hates to pass up. One reason is that the topic requires no research, the time for which is always grossly insufficient. Another is that it promises to attract readers who may be put off by 800-word essays about federal entitlement growth or the Uruguay round of the GATT negotiations.

It also allows the scribe to show solidarity with the average person by displaying intimate familiarity with mass culture, thus dispelling any aura of ivory-tower elitism.

Last, and not least important, it disposes of the onerous need to think, since the only choice is which of two obvious positions to take, those being (1) Here is a matter of grave concern warranting prompt action, and (2) Lighten up, geeks, it's only TV. Not to mention that elegant syllogisms would probably be out of place when juxtaposed with a character who answers to the name "Butt-head."

But there were problems for me. One is that you never know which column you write may be remembered years later, and I would hate for my obituary to begin, "Stephen Chapman, a perennial commentator on Beavis and Butt-head and other weighty issues..." Better one that starts, "Stephen Chapman, whose only claim to fame was that he never wrote about Beavis and Butt-head..." But I guess now I've spoiled that.

Stephen Chapman

The real obstacle, though, is that until this news item appeared, I didn't know who Beavis and Butt-head were. In fact, their mere existence was a complete revelation to me.

Weeks after they burst into the section of the newspaper that I read, I still have no idea what they look like, what their show is about, what channel it runs on, when it airs or why it has attracted enough of a following to be instantly recognizable to everyone in America except one hopelessly out-of-touch columnist.

But if you have the misfortune to be out of touch, you might as well make the most of it. So my policy toward Beavis and Butt-head is the same as it is toward most of the momentarily famous products of mass culture: I have resolved to remain as ignorant of them as humanly possible until they go away, thus conserving my limited mental capacity for topics that will not become defunct as soon as I find out about them — like, say, the Uruguay round, which commenced in 1986 and whose end is not yet in sight.

The beauty of dull and complicated but important subjects is that while they may take a bit longer to learn about, an overworked opinion-monger like myself has to learn about them only once, and thereafter they provide column fodder for years or even decades. You can say what you want about nuclear proliferation or agricultural subsidies, but you can't say they're going to vanish anytime soon.

By contrast, a pundit could waste a whole day boning up on two TV characters and soon find that his knowledge of the subject is about as useful as a eight-track tape. The cost-benefit calculus argues in favor of preserving my near-perfect ignorance of Messrs. B and B.

I have confidence that I can stick to this resolution. For a while, I felt a little uneasy whenever the subject of The Simpsons arose, owing to my unfamiliarity with this particular family, but now the fact apparently has passed without my so much as ever seeing a Simpson cross my TV screen.

Madonna has been making records for longer than I care to remember. Thanks to my persistent belief that she is a transient curiosity, though, there is not one song she has ever recorded that I could hum if my life depended on it.

The list of celebrities whom I could not pick out of a lineup is long — Shaquille O'Neal, Johnny Depp, Susan Lucci, Howard Stern, Sally Jessy Raphael, Dennis Miller and dozens more whose names have not yet bounced off my ears quite enough times to penetrate to my brain.

It's not that I have anything against mass culture. It's just that it's so — well, massive, and keeping up with it all looks like it would take about 36 hours a day for the rest of your life.

And then there would be no time to learn about, say, Article 714 of the North American Free Trade Agreement. And if my epitaph should read, "He never neglected NAFTA" — well, I could do worse.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Nov. 18, the 322nd day of 1993. There are 43 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 18, 1928, the first successful sound-synchronized animated cartoon, Walt Disney's Steamboat Willie, starring Mickey Mouse, premiered at the Colony Theater in New York.

On this date:

In 1865, Samuel L. Clemens published his story "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" under the pen name Mark Twain in the New York Saturday Press.

In 1883, the United States and Canada adopted a system of Standard Time zones.

In 1886, the 21st president of the United States, Chester A. Arthur, died in New York at age 56.

In 1942, The Skin of Our Teeth, Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy, opened on Broadway.

THE THREE LITTLE PIGS (REVISED VERSION)

Another precedent: 'Time out!

Two exciting new precedents have been set recently. I mentioned the setting of one of them in an earlier offering.

It's that, according to the Reginald Denny jury in California, the old "Everybody else was doing it" defense is now viable.

The jury had a defendant smashing truck driver Reginald Denny in the head with a brick during the South Central L.A. riots on videotape. I repeat, on videotape.

But the crafty defense pointed out that the act took place while a lot of other people were also committing similar violent, anti-social acts, so the defendant should basically walk. Believe it or not, the jury agreed.

From now on, you might be able to say, "But, Mom, everybody else was doing it," and not get belted.

Now this: On Oct. 30, the University of Georgia's football team scored a touchdown in front of 80,000 people in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl, not to mention a huge television audience, on the very last playoff game against the University of Florida.

The touchdown, on a passing play, made the score 33-32, Florida. Georgia would be able to go for a two-point conversion and have a chance to win the game in a stunning upset.

It was thrilling stuff. But, wait. Florida said, "The touchdown didn't count. We had called a time-out." And a referee agreed. The fact that nobody had blown a whistle or had stopped the play before it began didn't matter.

"Sorry, Georgia," said the officials, "your thrilling, last-play-of-the-game touchdown doesn't count. Florida had called time-out."

Florida held on another last play, on which there was a penalty against the Gators, and then on yet another final play, and won the game 33-26.

Think of the precedent that sets. In any unpleasant situation, simply say you had called time-out. Somebody might agree.

We used to try that on the playground. A kid from the other team would score the winning ring toss, horseshoe pitch or marble shot.

"Doesn't count," the losers would cry.

"Why not?" would ask the incredulous winners.

"Cause we had called time-out."

But after that fight that would inevitably break out, the winners would always still be the winners.

But no more. An opponent sinks a 30-foot birdie putt on 18 to get deep into your wallet, and you simply say, "Sorry, Warren, but you'll have to putt that over. My partner and I called time-out."

Bob Packwood could say, "You'll have to vote again on those diaries. I had called a time-out."

The results might still be the same, but you never know.

Think how history might have been changed if the time-out precedent had been set earlier.

"Sorry, Gen. Eisenhower, but you'll have to get your men back in the landing craft. The Germans had called time out just before you hit the beaches at Normandy."

Such could have changed my own life.

"You can just stop screaming at me."

"Why, you low-life! I caught you red-handed."

"I know that, darling, but just before you walked in and caught me, I'd called time-out."

A lot of people think life is getting harder in the '90's. It might be getting easier.

There seem to be more opportunities these days to get out of bad situations. Now, we've got (1) Everybody else was doing it, along with (2) I had called time-out.

Will "I was just following orders" be next? The Nazis at Nuremberg may simply have come along at the wrong time.

Fact finding on the old NAFTA trail

We are tracking, today, one liberal's independent odyssey to judgment along the old NAFTA trail.

It's my trip — and it starts with those dueling television ads chocked full of statistics that alternately shriek "Apocalypse Manana!" or promise that prosperity is just around our southernmost corner. They focus on what will happen once we enact the North American Free Trade Agreement, which will basically eliminate tariffs between the participants. America now charges an average tariff on imports of 4 percent; Mexico's is more than two and a half times higher.

Click: "Economists who've studied job loss say we'll lose up to 500,000 jobs to NAFTA... NAFTA: It's a bad deal for America and Americans know it." That's the doomsday scenario served up by the AFL-CIO.

Click: "What would you think if the United States made an agreement that saved 700,000 American jobs and created 200,000 new jobs? ... NAFTA: Good for jobs, good for us." So claims the TV ad paid for by a group of U.S. corporations that call themselves USA-NAFTA.

The numbers in both ads contain only a touch of truth. They draw upon the worst- and best-cast scenarios that the ad makers could find. They should be labeled "GDP" — Gross Distortion Pleading. It is the new way ad makers lie to us without lying.

Check it out: The AFL-CIO ad's claim of 500,000 jobs lost was based upon a predicament made by the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal think tank that gets large funds from organized labor. It assumes American companies will invest a whopping $44 billion to shift jobs to Mexico — an assumption shared by few other economists. Check it out: The corporate ad makers' claim of saving 700,000 jobs is based upon a government figure of U.S. jobs "supported by" the $40.6 billion in U.S. exports to Mexico last year — as if those exports would disappear if NAFTA were to be defeated.

Some 300 economists, both liberals and conservatives, have signed a letter to President Clinton supporting NAFTA. They reviewed dozens of analyses and wrote: The effects on the U.S. economy — both good and bad — would be small for many years.

Here is what we know:

• We have this increasing problem: Thousands of jobs have already gone south, from the United States to Mexico — without NAFTA. U.S. companies are finding it advantageous to move production to Mexico, where minimum wages are so much lower and companies are required to spend little or nothing on environmental cleanup — without NAFTA.

• We have this potential: Exports worldwide have generated nearly all of America's new manufacturing jobs, writes Paula Stern of the Progressive Policy Institute, a Democratic-oriented think tank that supports NAFTA. And since Mexico began to open its trade policies in 1987, U.S. exports there have tripled. In 1992, Mexico became the third largest market for U.S. exports and "surpasses Japan to become the second largest for U.S. manufactured goods."

• We have this chance at leverage: Under side agreements that Clinton negotiated, NAFTA will require Mexican industries to make modest increases in environmental cleanup. And it led Mexico's President Carlos Salinas to promise (albeit, it's not mandatory) to increase Mexico's minimum wage.

We need to enact NAFTA as a best hope for America's working men and women in this era of global economy. And we need a new generation of progressive labor leaders who can forcefully pressure the president and Congress to meet tomorrow's test. That test: When the macro-economists total their numbers and report NAFTA indeed produced a net positive impact — a net gain of jobs — we must remember the thousands whose jobs will indeed be lost to Mexico, as thousands have been before NAFTA.

For them, NAFTA's negative impact will be 100 percent. And the president, Congress, the corporate leaders and labor leaders, need to sign on — now! — to a compact to retrain and reemploy those who lose their jobs to secure America's net gain.

Eyes now turning toward Canada as free trade pact saga continues

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — President Clinton may have won a magnificent battle in Congress over the North American Free Trade Agreement, but he now must face an unhappy Canadian prime minister who is threatening to back out of it.

New Prime Minister Jean Chretien's election platform this fall included a plank obliging him to seek a better NAFTA deal. He says he wants to negotiate new codes defining subsidies and dumping and protecting Canada's energy.

"Our position is still the same,"

Chretien said early today after flying into Vancouver, from where he was going to the two-day Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit in Seattle. "I expected them (U.S. lawmakers) to vote for it so our position was based on the assumption it would pass."

Chretien, whose Liberals put an end to nine years of Conservative rule last month, is to meet the American president face-to-face for the first time Friday.

Though Parliament ratified NAFTA in May, Chretien is withholding official proclamation, the final step, until he gets what he wants from Washington.

Other Canadian reaction to the vote was predictable — labor was dismayed and business leaders were generally happy.

"Naturally we are just delighted," said Thomas d'Aquino, president of the Business Council on National Issues, an organization representing 150 of Canada's largest corporations. The Council backs Chretien's demand for further negotiations, but says a commitment from Washington to negotiate is enough.

"I think this is not a very good day for Canadian workers," said Bob White, head of the Canadian Labor Congress, Canada's largest union federation and a vociferous opponent both of NAFTA and the earlier bilateral Free Trade Agreement between Canada and the United States.

The union claims hundreds of thousands of Canadian jobs were lost because of the earlier free trade deal, which went into effect in 1989.

"We have to see what Chretien's agenda is," White said on CBC television. "As of now, it's very fuzzy what the Canadian government's position is on renegotiation."

Tony Clarke, chairman of the Action Canada Network, another opponent of free trade, said Chretien will have to make good on his election promises.

"He's going to have to really distinguish himself and become quite clear and strong in terms of the position they took for renegotiation if they're going to avoid betraying the Canadian people on this issue."

Gordon Ritchie, who was one of Canada's principal negotiators of the original Free Trade Agreement, which would be superseded by NAFTA, says Chretien probably will get what he wants.

"The Americans either come across with what he needs or he doesn't proclaim NAFTA, it's that simple," said Ritchie. "I think he's going to win."

"We are urging the government to proceed with NAFTA," said d'Aquino. "I think it is important to get a commitment from the Americans as quickly as possible so outstanding issues ... can be addressed in serious negotiation once NAFTA is implemented."

D'Aquino said he thought passage of the trade agreement would be a confidence booster for Canadian business. One of the few bright spots in an otherwise dreary economy has been trade with the United States, which accounts for 85 percent of Canada's exports.

"NAFTA is a lot more important than a lot of people perhaps realize," said d'Aquino. "Our trade with Mexico is relatively small, but reports show Canadian business is better prepared than American business overall for getting into the Mexican market."

Search teams discover more MIA remains

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — U.S. search teams have recovered what are believed to be the remains of Americans missing in action in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia and plan even bigger missions in the three countries in December and January.

President Clinton has made the recovery of MIAs a condition for lifting a U.S. trade embargo and establishing normal relations with Vietnam. The ban was eased earlier this year, but not lifted.

U.S. officials said cooperation was good in the just-completed efforts.

"We were once again encouraged by the cooperation team members encountered," a spokesman, Lt. Col. David L. Fredrikson, said today in summing up the 27-day search mission in Vietnam.

"What has been steadily increasing is the number of Americans we devote to the effort and the number of cases we're able to investigate because we've gotten better at it and the Vietnamese have gotten better at it and the cooperation has been so good," Fredrikson said.

For the first time, the United States will launch an investigation next month with Vietnamese and Laotian search teams, concentrating along the Vietnamese-Laotian border where many American pilots were shot down.

The next joint search in Vietnam, which will be the 27th since September 1988, when the Americans were given access, is scheduled for January.

"We anticipate it will be the most ambitious that we have attempted," said Fredrikson.

The Vietnamese have agreed to allow the Americans to increase the number of teams in the field from seven to eight.

POW-MIA and veterans groups in the United States have said that they support Clinton's position that any further improvement in relations with Vietnam depends on progress in resolving the MIA issue, including 62 so-called discrepancy cases involving 80 Americans.

These are cases where downed Americans were last known alive and in imminent danger of being captured.

In the search just completed in Vietnam, 74 U.S. specialists participated, finding both human remains and physical evidence that will help resolve some of the cases of the 2,248 Americans still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

Naked apes banned

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas grocery store wasn't monkeying around when it yanked the November issue of Discover magazine from 77 stores' shelves.

Discover's cover, which features an artist's rendering of two 3.2 million-year-old apes, prompted the Dallas-based Minyard grocery chain to pull the magazine.

Minyard pulled Discover last week after a store manager thought the illustration — a hairy couple walking side by side with exposed genitals — might offend customers.

"When it shows the genitals or the breasts, we're going to pull it," said Jay L. Williams, president of the chain.

The apes were sculpted to represent Australopithecus afarensis, what many scientists believe is the earliest ancestor to human beings. They're modeled after a display at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City. They're on the cover of the magazine to promote an article called "10 Great Science Museums."

Paul Hoffman, editor in chief of Discover, said he was shocked and amused by the Minyard ban. He said sales at Minyard account for a tiny fraction of the 150,000 rack sales of Discover, which has a circulation of 1 million.

"These are animals," he said. "Don't people have pets in Texas? (Are there) no nude dogs in magazines? What about those longhorns and those cows, do you have to cover them up, too?"

Hoffman said he couldn't believe the apes were being placed in the same category as actresses Sharon Stone and Demi Moore, who scantily graced the covers of other magazines that also were banned by Minyard.

Most Mexicans cheer vote on NAFTA

By BILL CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican businessmen cheered U.S. lawmakers' vote for free trade like it was a football game, a mariachi band member hoped it would bring him a better guitar, but others feared Mexico got a bum deal.

The North American Free Trade Agreement won approval in the House late Wednesday in an event closely followed by those Mexicans whose livelihoods will likely change with creation of the world's largest trade zone.

Enrique Zambrano, president of the Monterrey Chamber of Industry and Manufacturing, was happy, saying: "We think reason prevailed over fear."

There also was gloating. "Where is that sucking sound now? It's just the empty wind in Ross Perot's head," said Roberto Madrigal, a Mexican businessman who watched the vote on a large-screen TV at the U.S. Trade Center here. Perot claimed that passage would mean a giant "sucking noise" from jobs leaving America for Mexico.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari hailed the vote in a televised address: "This action was a rejection of the protectionist vision," calling the treaty a "good instrument, one more instrument for building a better future for Mexico."

The president reassured Mexicans that they would have time to prepare for competition with the economic powerhouses north of the border by suggesting the treaty's full impact would not be felt for years.

But it wasn't just politicians and businessmen talking. Here's a sampling of Mexican voices from other walks of life:

Reynaldo Estrada, a musician in a gray sombrero who can be found most nights in the mariachi hang-out of Garibaldi Plaza, said he hoped NAFTA would land him a new guitar.

"I think the treaty will bring down prices and maybe even help me get a good guitar from the United States," he said as he plucked a well-worn guitar loaned from a partner.

He couldn't afford the $125 price to buy his own. Mariachi trumpeter Enrique Gutierrez, 74, said he was too old to follow such news. "I don't know anything about that trade treaty. But I'm here every night, just 20 pesos (about $6.50) a song," said Gutierrez, in black cowboy outfit with silver buckles.

Alejandra Lozada, owner of a 72-year-old ice cream parlor in Mexico City, said NAFTA would mean more American ice cream heading here. But that doesn't worry her. She still has the edge.

"We make our own ice cream fresh every day, no artificial ingredients," said Lozada, who churns out vanilla walnut ice cream each day in a tub turned by an old-fashioned hand crank.

"No, I'm not afraid of competition at all, my customers are loyal," Lozada said.

Novelist Homero Aridjis said the treaty promises to modernize Mexico, but may help erode its uniquely Latin culture.

"I guess we will have to put up a sign all along our 2,000-mile border saying 'Welcome to USA-Mexico,'" he said.

"We are entering into a new relationship with a great superpower, and it's going to be a very harsh transition for many Mexican businesses that simply will not be able to compete," said Aridjis.

He warned of a rise of "Spanglish," a mix of English and Spanish, and a collision of the hamburger culture with the taco culture.

"The Americanization of the Mexican world is inevitable. But on the other hand, we are entering into a new era for Mexico: We are at the start of an economic revolution," he said.

Raul Figueroa, 70, a retired bureaucrat with the state electric monopoly, said the treaty was a bum deal for Mexico.

"Canada and the United States have the better technology and are going to eat our lunch. The United States is also much stronger politically and economically and will take advantage of us," he said as he relaxed on a street corner with friends.

Isaiah Garduno, 58, said he was also fearful: "A lot of foreign investors and a lot of big corporations are going to benefit from this, but not your average guy."

Scientists find new jaw from ancient human ancestor

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have unearthed the most complete jaw yet discovered from a predecessor of humans that lived more than 3 million years ago.

The jaw, almost totally preserved, was assembled from 109 fragments after being found at Maka, Ethiopia.

It and other remains from Australopithecus afarensis found in 1990 at Maka are about 3.4 million years old, anthropologist Tim White reports with colleagues in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

The findings strengthen the argument that previously discovered remains from Hadar in Ethiopia and Laetoli in Tanzania represent just afarensis, rather than multiple species, said White, of the University of California, Berkeley.

The jaw from Maka is virtually identical in size and shape to an afarensis jaw from Tanzania, giving strong evidence that the same species lived in Tanzania and Ethiopia, he said.

Perhaps the most famous remains of afarensis is a partial female skeleton, dubbed "Lucy," found at Hadar in 1974. Comparison of an arm bone from Maka to Lucy's strengthens the argument that she was a small afarensis, rather than a member of a separate species, White said.

Dear Abby Follow the Winter Olympic trails

Dear Abby

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Norway invented skiing. Its claim is based on a 4,000-year-old petroglyph near the town of Rodoy. The ancient rock drawing is the first known record of the sport that promises to dominate Lillehammer's 1994 Olympic Winter Games Feb. 12-27.

But Lillehammer's Olympic-class slopes aren't for world-class skiers only. You, too, can ski during the Games — for a price. The area features eight ski and chair lifts at a base elevation of 628 feet, a vertical drop of 2,670 feet, the Hafjell Olympic Alpine Center, plus flood-lit cross-country ski trails.

During the games, Ski-See Norway Tours of McAfee, N.J., offers seven-night packages departing Newark Airport on Feb. 8, 15 and 21. The tours are run by Asbjorn Ostevoll, a certified ski instructor formerly of the Stein Eriksen School at Sugar Bush and Aspen.

Prices start at $2,495 per person, double occupancy, including six nights in Lillehammer, one night in Oslo, roundtrip airfare and transfers from Oslo to Lillehammer, about two hours by train. For accommodations near, not in, Lillehammer, packages start at $1,695. Lift tickets — $18 per day — and meals are extra. Tickets to Olympic events are also available at extra cost.

Ski-See Norway also offers six-night packages between Jan. 1 and April 30, excluding the Olympics dates, priced from $895 per person double occupancy. Packages cover roundtrip airfare; five nights in Lillehammer and one night in Oslo, or three nights in each city; breakfast and lunch or dinner daily (breakfast only in Oslo); ground transfer from Oslo to Lillehammer and to hotels.

If you want to avoid the Lillehammer spotlight, consider affordable package tours to two other European Olympic-class ski destinations: Innsbruck, site of the 1964 and 1976 Winter Games, and Meribel, near Albertville, host in 1992.

Innsbruck, a charming 800-year-old city in the Austrian Alps—with arcaded medieval houses, grand palaces and monumental churches, is a gateway to great skiing. Buses circulate among five ski areas, including the 20 miles of Olympics competition slopes at Azamer Lizum. Beginners should head for cable car, chair lift and T-bars serving the slopes at Mutters, on a plateau overlooking the valley leading to the Brenner Pass. Tulfes and Igls offer slopes with various degrees of difficulty and are served by cable cars that ascend to 7,000 feet.

SAS Viking Vacations' eight-night packages to Innsbruck start at $895 per person double occupancy. The price covers seven nights in Innsbruck, one night in Copenhagen with breakfasts, roundtrip airfare from Newark and ground transfers. Optional dinner plans cost $75 to $200, depending on the hotel.

Meribel in Trois Vallee, France, near Albertville, Lake Geneva, Mont Blanc and Lausanne in the French Alps, offers 65,000 acres of skiable terrain with a vertical rise of 6,300 feet. There are 375 miles of marked alpine ski runs and 200 lifts plus 15 miles of cross-country trails. The Ski Company operates six private ski chalets in Meribel, Chamoni, Val d'Isere and Portes de Soleil, sites of Winter Olympics or World Cup events. Each chalet, with room for eight to 12 guests, is equipped with fireplace, TV and VCR, billiard room, hair dryer, sauna, fax machine and outdoor swimming pool.

A seven-night stay starts at $1,250 per person or from $9,900 for the entire chalet. The price covers housing; meals; services of housekeeper, chef and manager, and use of the chalet's private vehicle and airport transfers. Airfare from New York to Geneva is from $518 per person. A Ski Pack, covering lift tickets for seven days, a private ski guide or ski school for six days and lunches, costs $92.85 per person per week. Bookable exclusively through Abercrombie & Kent, Oak Brook, Ill.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest your advice to aunts and uncles to stop sending gifts to unappreciative nieces and nephews who never acknowledge them. Am I alone in feeling that the same should apply to one's children and grandchildren?

In my present marriage, we share six adult children and grandchildren, and after years of sending them gifts for birthdays, graduations, weddings, etc., and wondering if they had ever been received, I decided to quit sending gifts to people who never acknowledge them.

Have you heard from others who feel as we do about gift-giving?

SPEAKING OUT IN FLORIDA

DEAR SPEAKING: Have I ever! Read on for a sample:

DEAR ABBY: I have given a lot of thought to the question that was raised in your column concerning gift-giving when the recipients never seem to get around to acknowledging them.

I have concluded that I don't really mean anything to these people who take, take, take, and never say thank you.

I have been giving for two generations, but starting in 1994, I am going to send only cards for all weddings, bar mitzvahs and new babies, and the recipients can spend the rest of the day looking for the check.

AUNT/GRANDMA IN SANCA MONICA

DEAR AUNT/GRANDMA: You would make your point more clearly if you tell the offenders why the gifts have dried up.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "Auntie J. in L.A.":

Two years ago, I married a wonderful man whose family had never sent a thank-you card in their lives. After our wedding, I sent 250 thank-you notes for the gifts we received.

Later, I was shocked when my mother-in-law said that by sending all those thank-yous, I made her two other daughters-in-law look ungrateful.

LISA IN ARIZONA

DEAR ABBY: A great big "thank you" to "Auntie J. in L.A." who had no children of her own, but sent gifts to all her nieces and nephews on every gift-giving occasion — and usually had to telephone them to find out if the gifts were ever received.

I never gave it much thought, but that's exactly what I have been doing.

No more gifts for relatives who always have their hands out but seem unable to pick up a pen.

WISED UP IN KITTANNING, PA.

DEAR ABBY: Lydia Palmer recently wrote that she felt a thank-you note was not necessary if the giver has already been thanked verbally, because one just throws away all those thank-you notes.

Not me. I've always saved the cards, letters and notes I received from my grandchildren. Now that I am retired, one of my pet projects is sorting out all their thank-you notes, and making a scrapbook for each grandchild, niece and nephew. I know they will get a big kick out of reading the very touching — and sometimes hilarious — notes they wrote while they were growing up.

Jamboree scheduled

The Plainview Musical Jamboree for this month is scheduled for 7 p.m. Nov. 27, at the Ollie Liner Center, south on the Lubbock-Amarillo highway, U.S. 87.

The jamboree is a nonprofit organization that hosts a concert of area talent normally on the fourth Saturday of each month. It is held on the third Saturday in December and February.

Admission is free, but donations are encouraged. Each month funds raised from the concerts goes to a different service organization. This month it is Pregnancy Crisis Center.

Joshua M. Seabourn
Joshua M. Seabourn of Pampa has been named an Oklahoma Academic Scholar by the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education. Seabourn is a student at the University of Oklahoma.

In 1993-94, a total of 1,122 outstanding students have received scholarships to attend 19 Oklahoma public and private colleges and universities through the Academic Scholars Program, which is supported by state funds.

Introduced in 1988 by the State Regents, the Academic Scholars Program awards scholarships to cover college costs, including room and board, tuition, books and incidental fees for up to five years of full-time undergraduate study or a combination of full-time undergraduate and graduate study.

Bobby Powell
Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Bobby R. Powell, son of Feleise and Bobby R. Powell Sr. of Pampa, is currently deployed with Helicopter Anti-Submarine Squadron 11, Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Fla., embarked aboard USS America, the lead ship of its joint task group.

USS America has been operating in the Adriatic enforcing the "no-fly zone" over Bosnia-Herzegovina and recently visited Trieste, Italy, and Corfu, Greece.

Powell is one of more than 12,000 sailors and Marines assigned to the joint task group. Powell's squadron flies the SH-60 Seahawk helicopter, which extends the capabilities of ships for anti-submarine warfare, anti-ship surveillance and targeting. The 1983 graduate of Pampa High School joined the Navy in October 1983.

Charles Killebrew
Charles Killebrew was officially selected by the Austin Chapter of the American Institute of Architecture Students (AIAS) to serve as the 1994 Student Liaison to the Texas Society of Architects (TSA).

This is the only TSA appointment held by a student. Primary duties will include serving on the 1994 Student Design Competition Committee.

Killebrew is a 1990 honors graduate of Pampa High School. He is a senior architecture student at the University of Texas at Austin. He sits on the School of Architecture's Scholarship Committee and is a former secretary to the Architecture and Planning Student Government/Austin AIAS.

Terry Walker
Terry Walker, a delivery driver for United Parcel Service, was recently recognized by the company for completing 15 years of safe driving without an accident.

Walker works out of the Pampa UPS facility located at 2015 Alcock, Pampa.

"Safe driving is a way of life," commented Safety Manager Scott Barker. "In my experience a safe driver at work for UPS is also a safe driver at home. It is an attitude that cannot be turned on and off at will, rather it is an integral part of the character of a UPS driver."

The U.S. Department of Transportation has issued the following statement: "A corporate commitment to safety backed up with a comprehensive safety program has helped United Parcel Service achieve a high-way safety record considerably above the industry average."

Walker was presented the 15-year safe driving award at a ceremony honoring his achievement.

Jean Franklin
In recognition of outstanding scholastic achievement at West Texas A&M University, Jean Franklin, daughter of Ruth Franklin and the late Perry Franklin, was inducted into the Texas Zeta Chapter of Alpha Chi, the national honor society, Nov. 14, at Northern Hall on the WTAMU campus.

Membership in Alpha Chi is limited to students with a grade point average of at least 3.50 who rank in the top ten percent of the Junior and Senior classes. Membership in Alpha Chi is the highest academic honor a student may receive.

Franklin is a senior at West Texas A&M University majoring in criminal justice and has completed all courses offered in the legal assistant program and is now completing work for her bachelor's degree. After receiving her degree Franklin plans to work toward her certification by the State Bar of Texas as a legal assistant.

Franklin graduated from Pampa High School in 1964, attended Amarillo College where she maintained a 4.0 grade point average.

Cellist to perform with Amarillo Symphony

AMARILLO — Noted cellist Steven Doane makes his Amarillo debut with the Amarillo Symphony on Saturday, at 8 p.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center.

The orchestra will perform Johannes Brahms "Tragic Overture," Johann Strauss, Jr., "Emperor Waltzes," and Richard Strauss, "Don Quixote."

James Setapen, music director and conductor of the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra, heard Doane in concert at a music camp in Pebble Beach, Calif., where Setapen was the conductor.

"His playing has justifiably been acclaimed by critics throughout the United States and Europe," Setapen said.

Doane has played "Don Quixote" to critical acclaim. According to the Newark Star Ledger, "Everything was subtle (in "Don Quixote") and technically immaculate — a towering achievement in every respect."

In "Don Quixote," the cello represents the character of Don Quixote, and the viola, played by Amy Brandfonbrener, represents Quixote's sidekick, Sancho Panza. "There are 10 episodes of the very famous story depicted in this piece," Setapen said. "This is one of Strauss' masterpieces, and is very challenging for the orchestra."

Doane has won honors that include the Tanglewood Piatigorsky prize, First Prize in the Washington String Competition, the Naumburg Award, and selection as a finalist in the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. He is a professor of cello at the Eastman School of Music, where he has been a faculty member since 1981. He is a frequent guest artist with chamber ensembles and at music festivals in North America and Europe. He has appeared as soloist with the San Francisco, Baltimore, and Milwaukee Symphonies and the Moscow Radio Orchestra. His 1982 debuts at Carnegie Hall and the Kennedy Center with the Rochester Philharmonic were hailed as "absolutely magnificent."

Tickets for the concert may be purchased by calling the Amarillo Symphony office, 376-8782.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to advance your personal interests today, you might cozy up to persons who could help you and treat rather coolly those who can't. Unfortunately, your behavior will be noted and remembered. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N. Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Pleasant involvements could be turned into something less enchanting if you take yourself too seriously today. If someone kids you, kid them back instead of getting angry.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) No matter how much we have there is usually someone who has a great deal more. If you permit this to bother you today, it could turn out to be a total waste of time and emotions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something might occur today that will lead you to believe an associate is trying to deprive you of recognition and acknowledgment. Keep your feelings to yourself because the truth will out.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think before you speak today, because if you fail to do so, there is a chance you may say something unintentionally that could be misunderstood by others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Circumstances may have brought you into close involvement with someone you didn't know too well previously. This person has been telling you what you want to hear, but not necessarily the truth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A companion might do something today others find distasteful. Unfortunately, you might be tarred by the same brush just because this individual is identified as your pal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today if you use flattery to achieve your purposes, it will only be temporarily effective. Once the buzz wears off, the recipients may resent your plays.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In competitive social sports today the quality of your character might be determined by how graciously you win or lose. Control your emotions and feelings at all times.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone you like very much might not react the same way you would regarding something special you do for him/her today. Don't make a big deal out of your disappointment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make it a point today to finish assignments as enthusiastically and thoroughly as when you first enter into them. Your interest could wane when the end comes in sight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be doubly prudent in the management of your resources today so that you don't do something impulsively foolish and extravagant. If you are indifferent, this might happen.

GOLF

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — British Open champion Greg Norman shot a 1-over-par 37 on the final nine holes for a two-stroke victory over PGA champion Paul Azinger in the Grand Slam of Golf.

Norman, who earned $400,000, finished with a 36-hole total of 1-over 145 on PGA West's Jack Nicklaus resort course. The format was changed to 27 holes the first day and nine the second to allow Norman to play an afternoon pro-am round in his Shark Shootout, 150 miles away in Thousand Oaks.

Azinger closed with a 36 to earn $250,000. U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen and Masters champion Bernhard Langer tied at 148 to earn $175,000 each.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — LPGA tour player Heather Farr's condition was still critical early today as treatment for a brain hemorrhage continued.

Pegge Ackerman of Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-North said Farr's condition was downgraded Tuesday night to critical from fair. Farr, 28, who has battled breast cancer and related ailments, underwent surgery Nov. 11 to relieve a brain hemorrhage.

BASEBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — Terry Collins, a successful minor league manager for 11 seasons and Pittsburgh's bullpen coach the past two seasons, is the new manager of the Houston Astros.

Collins, 44, replaces Art Howe, who was fired Oct. 5 after leading the Astros to an 85-77 record. Collins survived a selection process in which at least three former major league managers were in contention for the job.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Brian Hunter, the Atlanta Braves first baseman who beat Pittsburgh with a three-run homer in Game 7 of the 1991 NL playoffs, was traded to the Pirates for a player to be named. Hunter, 25, hit .138 with eight RBIs in 80 at-bats last season.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins president Jerry Bell said that the 40 percent of the team owned by Robert Wooley is on the market. Bell also told WCCO-TV that Carl Pohlad's future as owner of the team depends on upcoming negotiations involving revenue sharing and a salary cap.

TENNIS

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Top-ranked Pete Sampras beat Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 in the second round of the season-ending ATP Tour World Championships. In other second-round matches, Andrei Medvedev of Ukraine upset second-ranked Jim Courier 6-3, 1-6, 7-7 (7-4) and Michael Stich of Germany beat Michael Chang 4-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2.

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded Steffi Graf of Germany beat Natalia Zvereva of Belarus 6-2, 6-4 and fourth-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain defeated Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere of Switzerland 7-5, 6-2 in the first-round of the season-ending Virginia Slims Championships. Eighth-seeded Anke Huber of Germany beat Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-4, 1-6, 7-6 (7-5).

FOOTBALL

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — New York Jets linebacker Marvin Jones is expected to recover from a hip fracture after tests showed he's unlikely to develop avascular necrosis, the condition that ended Bo Jackson's football career.

Dr. Elliott Hershman said Jones, selected fourth overall in the 1993 draft, had a special bone scan called a SPECT on Tuesday that "showed that during this early period, the circulation of his femoral head appears intact." Jones was injured in Sunday's victory at Indianapolis.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman, who missed last week's game against Phoenix with a pulled hamstring, threw a few passes in practice and remains questionable for the Cowboys' game in Atlanta on Sunday. Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said Bernie Kosar would start if Aikman can't play.

BASKETBALL

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Larry Martin Demery, one of the men accused of killing Michael Jordan's father, denies involvement in the slaying, but admits he helped dispose of the body.

Demery told the High Point Enterprise that James Jordan was dead when his co-defendant Daniel Andre Green, drove up in Jordan's car and asked him to help hide the body. Demery said he helped Green dump the body into a South Carolina creek after Jordan's death on July 23. Prosecutors have said they may seek the death penalty against Demery and Green.

AUTO RACING

NEW YORK (AP) — Nigel Mansell of England, who won five races and the IndyCar PPG Cup championship a year after taking the Formula One title, won the 1993 Driver of the Year Award in voting by writers and broadcasters.

Mansell received six of 12 first-place votes and 86 points. Rusty Wallace, whose late-season charge nearly kept Dale Earnhardt from winning his sixth NASCAR Winston Cup title, was second with five first-place votes and 77 points.

SOCCER

After nearly two years and 497 qualifying matches, Argentina and eight European teams completed the 24-nation field for the 1994 World Cup.

Argentina claimed the ninth and final spot by beating Australia 1-0 at Buenos Aires. Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Ireland, Switzerland, Belgium, Romania and Bulgaria also qualified, while England, France and European champion Denmark were eliminated.

BOXING

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Al Cole stopped Vincent Boulware at 1:05 of the fifth round to retain his IBF cruiserweight title. Cole improved to 24-1 with his 12th knockout. Boulware dropped to 27-6-1.

Injuries starting to mount up for Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — At one point in the physical game against the Phoenix Cardinals middle linebacker Ken Norton's damaged right arm was hanging limp at his side. He was in obvious pain but played on.

Then there was the picture of Emmitt Smith in the dressing room at halftime getting intravenous feedings for the fluids he lost when he got sick with the flu.

Michael Irvin had to have a sprained ankle wrapped and kick return ace Kevin Williams got treatment for a painful hip pointer.

Special teams player Joe Fishback was on the training table with an injured right knee and will be lost for the season.

Defensive end Charles Haley was kneeling on the sidelines not far from injured quarterback Troy Aikman with a bad back.

And defensive tackle Leon Lett had a swollen right foot courtesy of an operation that hasn't totally healed.

"We're as banged up as we've been at any time during the season," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Wednesday. "But there's one thing about the players on the Dallas Cowboys. They'll play hurt if they have to."

Norton, who has a torn right bicep, gave the most courageous performance. He was tackling runners and taking on blocks with his damaged arm.

"It's that time of year when every team has injuries," Norton said. "The good teams get through it."

Smith played with a good old case of the flu.

"I got weaker with every step," Smith said. "But you just have to keep plugging."

Norton's injury requires surgery but Norton won't let doctors operate until the end of the season.

"I'll just have to hang in there," Norton said. "I don't want to miss this season."

Haley has played with a bad back for weeks and Johnson said it may have finally caught up with the Cowboys' pass rushing star.

"Charles wasn't a big factor because of his injury," Johnson said. "This could be something Charles will have the rest of the year. And we need pass rushers against Atlanta Sunday."

Haley also has been slowed with a groin pull.

"I'm not sure the two aren't related," Johnson said. "Charles said they are both worse now than they have been so it's a big concern."

Jim Jeffcoat started for Haley last week against the Cardinals.

Williams likely won't play against Atlanta and Johnson will use cornerback Kevin Smith, who returned punts at Texas A&M, as his fill-in. Tyrone Williams would replace Williams as a third-down receiver and on kickoffs.

Canadian surprised pollsters to reach 2A football playoffs

By SUSAN ADELETTI Sports Writer

Friday night Canadian will take to the field against 9-1-1 Idalou at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium. Given their sparkling 10-1 record and 10-game winning streak, it's very difficult to believe that the Wildcats are not supposed to be in the playoffs right now.

By all charts and measures, the 'Cats should have been eliminated last week at the very latest. But, defying the pollsters, they captured the district crown, slid right on through the bi-districts and landed at the door of playoff game number two.

Canadian's preseason ranking can be scoffed at now, from the Wildcats' post high upon the playoff ladder, but head coach Paul Wilson is still not putting any stock in the opinions of others. Even if they, the Harris Rating System, for instance, pick his team to win by five points.

"I pay no attention to that," he attested. "We've been predicted to lose in 70 percent of our games this year."

Numbers notwithstanding, the Wildcats have a huge chance of advancing to the regional playoff game. Their defense has grown more eyeballs and muscles over the course of the season, and last week held Spearman to only 97 yards in the postseason opener. In fact, Spearman's two touchdowns were more the fault of the Canadian offense fumbling, rather than any hole in the defensive line.

Tomorrow night the 'Cats will have to be as ornery as ever in their backfield.

"Defensively, we have to shut down the quarterback," Wilson said. "He's an awfully good runner and he options the ball well."

"They're basically a running ball team," he added, noting that when they're forced to throw, they can do that, too.

In addition to a strong defense, the Wildcats will be looking to quarterback Steven Flowers this week. Against Spearman he carried the ball 12 times for 108 yards and a touchdown. But Flowers will be generating a different kind of attack against the powerful Idalou defense.

"We've got to throw the football," Wilson said. "We've got to have a lot of yardage in the air. They've got tremendous down-linemen and linebackers."

"We'd like to be further along in preparation than we are," he admitted.

But Wilson added that such is the case every week. And since every Friday the 'Cats manage to pull out a win, this week they seem right on track for yet another one.

"Execution is probably the key," Wilson said. "And, of course, in any big game, turnovers are a key."

Groom won overdue title in '93

By SUSAN ADELETTI Sports Writer

The Tigers won't be playing football this weekend, but they wrapped up their season with a tidy 8-1 record and an undefeated district mark. They overcame a cursed history to claim the district crown for the first time in 17 years.

The overdue championship gave them a berth in the bi-district playoffs, but they were not able to stretch their postseason past that fateful game last Friday.

"I was quite surprised," Groom head coach Terry O'Dell said. "But at the same time there's no excuses. We were pleased with the season and displeased with the final game."

In the ultimate ironic twist, Groom's loss may strangely be due to the fact that they won the crown.

"Winning district for the first time in 17 years may have taken some of the intensity out of us," O'Dell offered.

While the victory was a definite drain on the team psyche, the Tigers expected to be able to refocus and live up to their eighth-in-the-state ranking.

Earlier in the season, the Tigers were shaping up to go far. They took a 3-1 record into the district schedule, where they continued winning. A huge triumph over Lefors, a team which tied them for undefeated district leader at the time, iced their bid for a championship. The following week, a beautiful 50-0 homecoming victory over McLean made it clear that Groom was going to the playoffs.

Several Tigers had a strong hand in Groom's success. In the season's ten games, quarterback Bo Burgin threw for 697 yards, completing 38 throws for an average of 18.3 yards per pass. He also scored a team-high 22 touchdowns, either running or passing, and carried the ball 29 times for 250 yards. Defensively, Burgin led the Tigers with 47 solo tackles and notched five interceptions.

Burgin was backed by strongmen Bart Britten, Harold Cave and Seth Ritter, who totalled nearly 2,000 yards between them.

Also indicative of a great season, Groom dominated the All-district selections. Named to the offensive first team were Burgin (QB), Britten (RB) and Wes Hall (E). Defensively, the Tigers offered Burgin (LB), Robby Evenson (L), Hall (DE) and Britten (S). Bronte Britten (DE) was named to the second team and Tom Lambert became a first-team kicker.

"We couldn't ask for a better season," O'Dell said. "I thought it was very successful."

Oilers' Moon hops aboard Bernie backers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon is about to play in a city where a great debate is raging, and he has hopped aboard with the Bernie Backers.

The Oilers play the Cleveland Browns on Sunday, the first Browns home game since Nov. 8, when owner Art Modell and coach Bill Belichick released quarterback Bernie Kosar, perhaps the team's most popular player.

Ever since, Cleveland fans have been debating whether the owner and coach were right in their assessment that Kosar has diminished skills.

Kosar became the Cleveland starting quarterback in 1985, his rookie season. Two days after the Browns cut him, the Dallas Cowboys signed him.

"I just never thought he would get released like he was," said Moon, who considers himself a Kosar friend.

Moon spoke during a conference call Wednesday with reporters who cover the Browns.

The Browns were 5-3 and tied for first in the AFC Central Division when Kosar was let go in favor of inexperienced Todd Philcox. Seattle beat Philcox and the Browns 22-5 Sunday, while Kosar helped the Cowboys beat Phoenix 20-15.

Moon said he thought the Browns could have contended in the division with Kosar.

"That really shocked me. To release your starting quarterback when you are in first place in your division, I just really can't understand that one," Moon said.

Harvesters face tough Tascosa

Palo Duro is good, Tascosa may be even better, says Pampa boys' coach Robert Hale.

"I would say Tascosa is a bunch better than Palo Duro in my estimation. They are one tough team. They have tremendous size and they have a well-disciplined team," Hale said.

Pampa plays at Tascosa Friday night with the non-district tilt starting at 7:30 p.m. The Harvesters lost their season opener to Palo Duro, 57-54, Tuesday night. This will be the Rebels first game.

The Pampa-Palo Duro clash was expected to be one of those down to the wire type matchups. That certainly was the case. Pampa is favored to win the District 1-4A race for the sixth straight season. Palo Duro is expected to repeat as District 3-5A champions.

"That was some game, wasn't it? I just didn't think we could beat Pampa at their place," said PD coach Gerald Tucker. "I guess we made some history."

The history Tucker was talking about was Pampa's long winning streak at McNeely Fieldhouse. The Harvesters hadn't lost since the 1988-89 season when Berger beat them.

Basketball notes

"It was an exciting game, but we were pretty disappointed," Hale said. "We had our opportunities, but we just weren't mentally ready to play. We just didn't maintain the effort needed to keep our long win streak going."

Palo Duro had not beaten Pampa on the home floor since the 1986-87 season.

"Sometimes lessons are hard to learn and you have to give up a lot of valuable things, but we have a great group of young men. They're going to keep working hard," Hale said.

The Pampa Lady Harvesters will also try to rebound against Tascosa after narrowly losing the season opener to Palo Duro, 45-44, Tuesday night.

It was Mike Jones debut as a head girls' basketball coach after being the top assistant for PHS boys' coach Robert Hale for the past six years.

"I was a little nervous, just like I am before every game," Jones said about coaching his first girls' game. "But I felt comfortable and I felt like the girls did a very good job. Anytime you can stay close you've got an opportunity to win."

One was a nip and tucker and the other one was a rout. That's an accurate description of Miami's doubleheader wins over Hedley Tuesday in the season opener for both teams.

The Miami girls held off Hedley for a 42-40 win. "It was a close game all the way to the end," said Miami coach Dwight Rice. "Near the end of the game we were up by six, but they came back and missed a shot at the basket that would have tied it."

Janet Byrum was Miami's leading scorer with 13 points, followed by Kay Lynn Bailey with 11.

Andrew Neighbors poured in 26 points to lead Miami to an easy 62-45 win over Hedley in the boys' game. Teammate Brock Mayberry chipped in 18 points.

Culberson-Stowers and Dos Caballeros played the game of the week in the Optimist Girls' Basketball Major League with Culberson pulling out a 30-23 win.

Culberson — leading 8-7 at the end of the first quarter — increased its lead to 14-9 at halftime behind the shooting of Chelsea McCullough, who finished with 6 points.

Dos closed to within one point (18-17) due to a strong rebounding and scoring third period by Tandi Morton, who finished with a game-high 13 points. Dos pulled ahead at the start of the fourth quarter when Emily Curtis hit a 10-footer and Morton sank two free throws.

Culberson's roared back with fullcourt pressure as Lindsey Donnell converted two steals into four points in the closing minutes.

Donnell and Emily Waters led Culberson's with 10 and 8 points respectively. Other results are as follows:

Coronado Inn 29, Culberson-Stowers 19
Cl - Jordana Young 12, Lindsey Hampton 3; CS - Emily Waters 10, Lindsey Donnell 5.

Standings table with columns for Team, Won, Lost

Pampa Red downed Perryton A, 42-32, in an 8th grade boys' basketball opener Monday.

Tyson Alexander was high scorer for Pampa with 14 points, followed by Gab Willbon with 10.

Pampa Blue defeated Perryton B, 54-11, in the other 8th grade game.

Preston Reed led Pampa in scoring with 9 points. Jason Williams added 7.

Small-town newspaper's obits include a slice of life in death

By JAY REEVES
Associated Press Writer

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Not many newspapers would begin an obituary by recalling that the dear departed once shoved a piece of fruit up his nose.

But The Advertiser-Glean isn't like most newspapers. In fact, it might not be like any other newspaper when it comes to death notices.

The family-owned, twice-weekly paper puts a lot more than funeral arrangements and survivors in its obituaries. The back-page blurbs include the kind of gossip you'd hear in hushed tones on the porch of a small-town funeral home.

Take the opening paragraph of a December obituary for Homer "Frenchie" McSherry, 68:

"He pushed a little green peach up his nose when he was 2 years old. They put him to sleep to try to get it out, but couldn't. It stayed there until it popped out a long time later."

And there are more, all printed in the past year:

"Two days before what would have been her 100th birthday, Mrs. Jim Griffith was cleaning a box where she kept her pet chicken when she had a stroke, fell down the back steps of her home in Browns Valley and died almost immediately."

— Simon Lang, 78, fell on hard times after his father died. Lang was only 9 at the time, the paper explained, but he was determined: "Simon had done farm work almost ever since he could remember and he felt sure he could make a crop on his own, but he had a hard time finding anybody who would rent him a farm. He finally did, and after he made his first crop, he didn't have any more trouble finding a place to rent."

— The Glean recounted how Doris Lucille McCollum, 61, was taken ill for the last time: "She got sick Christmas night with what they thought was inner ear trouble. It turned out to be leukemia."

The slice-of-life obits are the work of 90-year-old Porter Harvey, who came to northeastern Alabama on a bus in 1941 and founded The Glean. Harvey bought out The Guntersville Advertiser in 1944 and combined the papers, but many locals continue to refer to it as the Glean.

As in the early days, Harvey bangs out his stories on an old manual typewriter. The staff of nine includes his son, editor Sam Harvey, who is president of the Alabama Press Association, and son-in-law Don Woodward, who is general manager of the paper.

The Advertiser-Glean has a circulation of 12,300, the largest for any non-daily paper in Alabama. That's not bad considering Guntersville has only 7,000 residents and is on a leaf-shaped peninsula in the middle of the Tennessee River.

Jim Oakley, a journalism instructor at the University of Alabama, said the Harveys' paper is a throwback to the old days of journalism, with its letter-from-home style. A 1993 issue is virtually identical to one from the 1950s.

"Some people would say we ought to hold it up and say, 'This is the way you shouldn't do it,'" Oakley said. "But I would never do that because you can't argue with their success."

Porter Harvey is something of a piece of work himself. He gets around the office with a cane these days and works only part time. But that didn't deter him from going bungee jumping in August to celebrate his 90th birthday.

"It was a big thrill," he said with a wide, toothy smile.

After that it was back to work at the glass-front building on Taylor Street, where the paper has been since 1955.

Decades ago, Harvey noticed newspapers had a double standard when it came to deaths, and The Advertiser-Glean was no different: A prominent person would get a long obituary, a regular person a listing of funeral arrangements and survivors.

That didn't seem fair to the "little shots," so Harvey began treating everyone pretty much the same. The death of a civic leader got about the same coverage as the demise of a timber cutter or homemaker.

Harvey contacted relatives for tidbits about the deceased: hobbies, interests, medical problems, whatever people wanted to talk about.

"They like telling you about the last illness," he said. "It's like they want some recognition for the suffering they went through."

In 1967, the task fell to Harvey's son when he became editor.

"At first I was wondering if people would want to talk about a relative's death so soon," the younger Harvey said. "But by the time we get to them, they've been to the funeral home, they've already told all their friends about it, and don't mind talking."

Not everyone is enamored with the Glean's tell-all policy. Woodward recalled the time a woman got mad over a story about a suicide victim. "She stormed in, picked up the bookkeeper's desk, turned it over and stormed out," he said.

Police say Bronx fried-chicken stand had special on guns to go

NEW YORK (AP) — A fried-chicken stand in the Bronx also sold guns to go, police say.

Fareedullah "Mohammed" Nawabi, a 23-year-old from Afghanistan, pleaded innocent Tuesday to illegally selling weapons from Mama's Fried Chicken and was held without bail. Authorities said he bragged he had sold "a million guns."

An undercover officer first bought a gun at Mama's take-out window over the summer, Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly said. "Obviously some deadly side dishes were being served in the Bronx," Kelly said.

Police said the fast-food business served as little more than a front for dealing in weapons and sold practically no fried chicken.

Agents seized 64 guns from the restaurant, including an assault rifle with a bayonet, and ammunition worth $26,000 on the street. Most of the guns were bought in Ohio.

Court bolsters Demjanjuk's fight

CINCINNATI (AP) — The government withheld evidence that could have helped John Demjanjuk fight extradition to Israel, an appeals court ruled Wednesday in a decision that bolstered his fight to regain his U.S. citizenship.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned its own order authorizing Demjanjuk's extradition to Israel in 1986, saying the order was tainted because of prosecutorial misconduct that amounted to fraud.

Government lawyers "acted with reckless disregard for the truth" in arguing that Demjanjuk was the guard "Ivan the Terrible" at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland.

Wednesday's ruling clears the way for Demjanjuk to fight a 1981 ruling by U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti in Cleveland that stripped him of his U.S. citizenship.

The Justice Department declined comment until its lawyers had read the opinion, but department spokesman John Russell said the government remains convinced that Demjanjuk committed war crimes during World War II.

The retired Cleveland autoworker returned to the United States in September after the Israeli Supreme Court overturned his 1988 conviction and death sentence, based on evidence that someone else was "Ivan the Terrible." He had been extradited in 1986 and spent more than seven years in an Israeli prison.

"Justice has been done and God bless America," said Ed Nishnic, Demjanjuk's son-in-law.

Demjanjuk insisted he was a victim of mistaken identity and said he spent most of the war as a prisoner of war of the Germans. A native of Ukraine, he was drafted into the Soviet army.

He has admitted lying about his whereabouts during the war on his application to enter the United States, but said he did so because he feared being sent back to the Soviet Union.

The appeals court said it would not rule on allegations that Demjanjuk might have been involved in other war crimes.

After Demjanjuk's return to this country, Attorney General Janet Reno said the Justice Department would seek his deportation as a Nazi war criminal. Before his extradition, he had been ordered deported from the U.S.

"We will continue our resolve that Mr. Demjanjuk committed crimes during World War II," Russell said.

A federal judge appointed by the appeals court to review the case had concluded in June that the Justice Department unintentionally withheld evidence from Demjanjuk's lawyers.

Wednesday's ruling found the Justice Department's Nazi-hunting office of Special Investigations failed to give Demjanjuk and the court documents that could have supported Demjanjuk's claim he was wrongly identified as Ivan.
