PAMPA — Members of the Juvenile Probation board met Thursday to discuss personnel issues and hear a report from District Judge Kent Sims on a recent juvenile justice seminar.

Sims highlighted some issues which captured his attention at the seminar, including truancy and garnishment of parents' wages to support juveniles in detention. The judge told members that seminar attendees said garnishment of wages to support offenders yields better parental cooperation with law enforcement.

Board members discussed organization of the juvenile probation department, including the possibility of combining it with adult probation. Members decided to hold further discussions at 9 a.m. Nov. 30 at Gray County Courthouse to discuss specifics of how to organize and staff the department.

PAMPA — The Pampa City Commission will meet today in executive session at 5 p.m. in the City Commission chamber on the third floor of City Hall, 201 W. Kingsmill.

The only matter to be discussed, according to the agenda, deals with the second interview of Gary D. Greer for the city managers position.

Greer, city manager of Kearney, Neb., is the only one of three applicants to be asked back for second interview.

The city manager's job became vacant when Pampa's former city manager, Glen Hackler, accepted the position of assistant city manager in Midland in July.

PAMPA — Elderly Pampa residents with low incomes will soon be having a wider range of places to live to choose from in the city.

In October, the city issued a building permit to Trinity River Construction Company for the construction of eight units, a total of 32 apartments, of low-income apartments for the elderly, according to a city official.

The new apartment units are currently under construction in the 2700 block of Hobart Street.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation cracking down on violence at abortion clinics cleared the House without being weakened by abortion opponents, and Congress is trying to rush it to President Clinton before Thanksgiving.

Voting 246-182, the House beat back a Republican bid Thursday to send the bill back to committee to delete language opposed by anti-abortion lawmakers. Then it passed the chamber on a voice vote.

Since the House rejected efforts to soften the bill's penalties, the differences with a Senate bill passed earlier this week are relatively minor. The two chambers hope to work out differences within a few days.

Clinton has said he will sign the bill; supporters want it in effect before the December trials of the protesters accused of the fatal shooting of a Florida abortion doctor and a separate shooting of a Kansas doctor who was injured.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration's once-ambitious call to rebuild American cities appears to be changing into a patchwork plan to help all communities — big and small, rural and suburban.

Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros said in an interview Thursday the shift is to a community strategy that includes health care, welfare reform and other programs.

"I'm describing the effect of the combination of Clinton programs," he said. "It amounts to the elements of a strategy. It could just as easily be called a community strategy. They work in communities of all sizes, as well as in urban settings."

Cisneros mentioned low-income tax credits, job training and child immunization as elements of the plan.

PEDC approves firm for financial audit

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

During Thursday's meeting of the Pampa Economic Development Corporation's board of directors, the Pampa accounting firm of Grantham Cory Call & Heare was engaged to audit the books of the corporation.

The fee for the service will be $1,200, according to a letter of engagement from the accounting firm.

The letter of engagement is a standard form sent to organizations which formally estimates the costs associated with an auditing, according to Bill Waters, president of the board of directors.

PEDC board members unanimously voted to hire the firm to audit their financial record after searching for an accounting firm for three months.

Originally, the same Amarillo accounting firm which audits the city of Pampa was approached about auditing the PEDC's books. However, the estimated cost of $2,000 to $2,500 was thought to be too much by the board of directors.

In other business, the board meet in executive session to discuss hiring a new PEDC director. Its former director, Bill Miller, resigned in September to pursue business opportunities in the private sector.

A date by which a new director would be hired was not discussed, according to Waters.

"We just talked about a time at which each of us could appraise these resumes and then be in a position to have another meeting between now and the middle of December," Waters said.

The PEDC received a total of 34 resumes from applicants, mainly from the southwest region of the country, Waters said.

Finally, the PEDC's board of directors discussed the expansion of the Rufe Jordan Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, which is located east of Pampa.

No action was taken as a result of the discussion.

As it is, the PEDC directors are waiting to hear back from the TDCJ's architecture about the specific of dismantling, moving and reconstructing a building on the grounds of the prison. In addition, the PEDC is waiting to get estimates of what it might cost to bring the addition up to standards and who will pay for what.

The city of Pampa, Gray County, the Pampa Industrial Foundation and the TDCJ are expected to be contributing resources to the project, according to Waters.

Salvation Army starts Pampa kettle drive today

Salvation Army Advisory Board members Bob Marx and Sandra Schuneman stand at the Christmas kettle located at Wal-Mart this morning as the Salvation Army opens its annual Christmas Kettle Drive today. The drive, which continues through Dec. 24, raises money to help provide Christmas items for needy Gray County residents. The red kettles have been used in the drive for 102 years as a way for the Salvation Army to raise needed Christmas funds. There are currently six locations in Pampa — Wal-Mart, Homeland, Food King, Alco, Anthony's and the Post Office — with possibly two more to be opened later. All bellringers will have a tag identifying them. (Pampa News photo by Darlene Holmes)

Trafficker, alleged terrorist penetrated CIA, DEA in Venezuela

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The plot elements are all there: spies, lies, drugs and potentially compromising sexual liaisons.

In a mess just starting to surface, CIA and U.S. drug enforcement operations in Venezuela were found to have been infiltrated by a drug-trafficking general and a well-to-do businessman later jailed on terrorism charges.

One CIA agent was forced to resign, a second was disciplined and the careers of two Drug Enforcement Administration officers effectively died in the fallout.

An internal investigation grew more complicated with the discovery that the male CIA agent and the two Venezuelan men had sexual relationships with the two female DEA agents.

The House intelligence committee was briefed earlier this month on the security lapses, and a grand jury in Miami is looking into cocaine trafficking that apparently took place under the noses of the CIA and the DEA.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the House Operations Committee now looking into whether the U.S. drug czar's office should continue, called for a full examination of the scandal.

"It would be no surprise if the CIA once again were doing business with the bad guys," Conyers said. "If it's true that the CIA condoned and knew about drug dealing, but did nothing about it in order to keep sources for other purposes, it shows why drugs continue to flow into our neighborhoods." CIA agent Mark McFarland resigned in 1991 after admitting he had permitted Gen. Ramon Guillen Davila — Venezuela's top anti-narcotics officer — to abuse his position to smuggle cocaine to the United States, according to federal intelligence and law enforcement sources who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

The station chief in Caracas was also disciplined. The CIA would not release his name and will say publicly only that the agency took appropriate action.

"In 1991, we had concerns about a Venezuelan National Guard officer and about illegal shipments of drugs into the United States," said Kent Harrington, CIA public affairs director. "We found a problem, we investigated it, and we fixed it."

He said the CIA had found several instances of "poor judgment" but no evidence of criminal wrongdoing by its officers. There have been no allegations that McFarland took money from Guillen or participated in the trafficking.

The CIA has turned over the results of its investigation to the Justice Department. John Russell, a department spokesman, said Thursday he could not comment on CIA referrals.

The U.S. attorney's office in Miami is investigating Guillen and other Venezuelan officers for alleged cocaine trafficking, according to a law enforcement source. The source said the grand jury subpoenaed Guillen to testify last week, but he failed to appear.

Guillen was appointed Venezuela's top anti-drug crusader in 1987. Working with the CIA and DEA, he intercepted and confiscated drug shipments — but not all of them, according to a subsequent DEA-CIA investigation. See CIA, Page 2

Clinton turns to Pacific rim

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — President Clinton, a self-described rug-merchant, is out to sell Pacific nations on stronger U.S. ties and to use that warming relationship to try to push Europeans into a global free trade agreement by mid-December.

The setting is the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum of 15 mostly booming economies on the Pacific Rim that together comprise the fastest growing area of the world. Clinton, buoyant from a congressional free-trade victory this week, wants to steer the United States into a more profitable share of the Asian market.

"Someone sort of made fun of me the other day," he said Thursday on arriving at Boeing Field in this eastward-looking emerald city. "They said, you know, President Clinton is almost like a rug merchant out there selling American products. Well, I'm not ashamed."

He referred directly to promoting sales by Boeing, the nation's largest exporter, but the message was far broader than that: The United States does 50 percent more trade with Asia than with Europe; more than half of U.S. trade last year was with other Pacific Rim nations.

And the administration came prepared to deal. It has decided to allow the sale to China of an $8 million Cray supercomputer to help in forecasting natural disasters, U.S. officials said Thursday night.

Tentatively approved, as well, was sale of power turbines for nuclear generators, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity. One official said final approval depended on China showing a willingness to respond to U.S. concerns in several areas, including improved treatment of political dissidents, curbs on prison labor and barriers to U.S. imports.

The supercomputer decision surfaced as Clinton prepared to meet today with Chinese President Jiang Zemin. The top item was human rights, along with China's reluctance to accept international restrictions on missile technology exports and its $18 billion trade advantage over the United States.

Preliminary talks between Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Foreign Minister Qian Qichen produced Chinese assurances there would be a Red Cross visit to 3,300 "counterrevolutionaries" held in prison.

Strike forces travelers to scramble for flights

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Passengers holding tickets on strikebound American Airlines scrambled to book flights on other airlines as the busiest travel week of the year approached.

American's 21,000-member flight attendants union began a planned 11-day walkout timed to coincide with the Thanksgiving holidays, launching the biggest U.S. airline strike in nearly five years Thursday morning.

Passengers were delayed or stranded throughout the country, booking and rebooking flights that sometimes never got off the ground.

American, the nation's biggest airline, wouldn't say how many flights it was able to operate. Sources at another major airline estimated 30 percent to 50 percent of American's flights were disrupted.

The union — which went on strike over pay and other issues — said that at least 90 percent of its members honored the picket lines; the airline said it was closer to 50 percent.

Meanwhile, the Allied Pilots Association was voting on whether to wage a sympathy strike, a move that would probably ground the airline. Results of the vote were to be announced sometime today.

American warned that the striking flight attendants probably wouldn't have jobs after the strike. The airline said it had started recruiting replacements who could be trained in 10 days.

The airline also filed a $10 million defamation lawsuit Thursday in state district court in Fort Worth, claiming that the union encouraged travel agents to tell customers that the airline's staffing levels and training are unsafe. Also named in the suit is the union's public relations firm, Abernathy & Mitchell of Washington, D.C.

The union did not immediately return a telephone call early today seeking comment on the lawsuit.

American, which has about 2,600 daily flights to more than 200 cities and carries an average of more than 200,000 passengers daily, said it would try to get customers onto other airlines.

But seats will become increasingly scarce as Thanksgiving approaches.

It's not what so much as when

At a meeting this fall with parents and school staff at a Pampa elementary school with a large Hispanic enrollment, the question was asked if there was a problem with children speaking Spanish in the classroom.

After a school administrator finished explaining the school district programs dealing with English as a Second Language and ethnic and cultural issues, a classroom teacher said simply, "The problem is more when they speak, not what language they're speaking."

School board to review facility use fees

By JOHN McMILLAN
 Staff Writer

Pampa schools Superintendent Dawson Orr told the Pampa school board on Thursday that the school district administration — for the first time in several years — plans to resume enforcement of its fee schedule policy for use of PISD facilities.

Orr said the planned enforcement of the school district's fee schedule policy is a practical measure aimed at improving the school district's finances.

Pampa school district received no revenue last school year from usage of its facilities by the general public, Orr said. Orr, who is in his fourth year as superintendent for Pampa Independent School District, said the district has not enforced the fee schedule during his tenure, nor did the school district at the time Orr assumed the superintendency, he said.

Orr said he plans to present the fee-schedule enforcement proposal before the Pampa school board at its December meeting. The superintendent also said he plans to present to the board at that meeting an estimate of how much revenue would be incurred to the district through such a fee-schedule enforcement on use of school district facilities.

Orr said he is not recommending any changes from the fee schedule that the district adopted about 10 years ago. That fee schedule required the payment of a minimum $75 rental fee for use of the auditorium and fieldhouse for three hours, beyond which those renting the auditorium and fieldhouse would have to pay $15 per hour. The rental rates do not include additional fees for custodial services.

The fee schedule also lists rates for rental of classrooms (a $7.50 minimum fee, in addition to $5 per hour after three hours during school hours, for instance) gymnasiums, and cafeterias.

Also on Thursday, the board renewed its three-year contract with radio station KGRO-KOMX of Pampa that makes the radio station the sole agent for broadcasting all varsity football games as well as boys' and girls' basketball games and track meets and district baseball games, in addition to possible broadcasting of other playoffs in other sports.

The three-year contract is expected to begin about Sept 1, 1994, said Darrell Sehorn, general manager for the radio station.

In other news, the board approved bids on cafeteria equipment at various campuses; lockers (involving the payment of $16,500 for varsity football lockers, $4,862 for junior varsity basketball lockers, $2,866 for boys' physical education lockers, and $22,909.79 for elementary school lockers, the last bid coming from Lewis Supply of Pampa and all the other bids being from out of town); and a $8,625 bid from Tarpely Music Co. of Pampa for the sale to the district of three brass sousaphones with cases.

Also, the board approved amendments to the school district budget for the fiscal year raising the amount of the general operating fund from $16,366,556 to $16,372,904.

The board approved the reappointment of Wallace Birkes and the appointment of Dr. Keith Teague, former school board member, to the Gray County Appraisal District Board of Directors for two-year terms beginning Jan. 1, 1994.

Superintendent Orr told the board that the recent Parent University in Pampa, attended by 187 people, including those giving presentations, was "a wonderful service to the community at large, and we certainly are going to give serious consideration (to holding a Parent University again) next year."

Prosecutors: Accused boys knew what they were doing

PRESTON, England (AP) — Two schoolboys acted together and knew what they were doing when they abducted a toddler whom they tortured and battered to death, a prosecutor said today in his final argument to the jury.

"If ever crime was committed jointly and together, then this was that crime," prosecutor Richard Henriques said a day after wrapping up his case against the two 11-year-olds charged with murdering little James Bulger.

Both boys, who by court order can be identified in press reports only as Child A and Child B, have pleaded innocent and tried to blame each other for the Feb. 12 slaying.

Henriques again recounted the events leading up to the 2-year-old's killing: how he was lured away from his mother at a shopping mall, led 2

1/2 miles across the city and beaten to death.

He said the accused acted together from the moment they decided to skip school until they parted 10 hours later, after James' tiny body lay dead beneath bricks on a railway line where a train later sliced it in half.

Defense attorneys said they would not call any witnesses because of their clients' fragile mental states. They plan to argue in their closing statements Monday that the boys did not intend to murder James and did not understand the gravity of their actions.

Because the accused are under 14, the prosecution must prove that they knew their actions could cause serious injury and that they knew their behavior was seriously wrong.

The jury will consider three counts against each boy: the attempted abduction of another 2-year-old earlier on Feb. 12, and the abduction and murder of James.

If convicted, the boys will be held indefinitely in a facility for young, very serious offenders.

The two boys fidgeted as Henriques recounted the 10 hours they spent together the day James was murdered and the lies the boys told to adults they passed while leading James across the city.

Normally composed, Child A rolled a tissue into tiny balls and leaned around a social worker to look at Child B, who glanced uneasily around the courtroom.

Henriques said that the boys knew James' mother was in the shopping mall where they abducted him and that they rejected offers of help from several adults.

GCAD reviews insurance, employs auditing firm

Topics ranging from insurance premium to janitorial services to the hiring of an accounting firm to audit the books of the Gray County Appraisal District were decided upon during Thursday's meeting of the GCAD's board of directors.

Topping the agenda, a motion to correct the amount of the premium the Texas Municipal League charges for general liability insurance passed unanimously.

In addition, a motion to renew the district's depositary contract with Pampa's Citizens Bank and Trust Company was passed. The contract is good for the next two years. Duane Harp, bank representative, was present at the meeting.

In other business, two bids were received from Building Maintenance Company and Hammon's Janitorial for cleaning services. Representatives from both companies were at the meeting.

No action was taken on the bids except to ask both companies to resubmit their bids with some changes to meet specific requirements.

The board also hired the Pampa accounting firm of Grantham Cory Call & Hearse to audit the district for the fiscal year, which ends Dec. 31, 1993.

Prior to being engaged, Grantham Cory Call and Hearse, as well as the accounting firm of Brown Graham and Company presented proposals to the board.

In addition, the board was given a report by Mike Mulcahy, an attorney with the law firm of Calame Lineberger Graham & Pena detailing delinquent tax collection for the city of Pampa and the Pampa Independent School District.

Following the report, Pat Bagley, chief appraiser for the district, recommended the renewal of a contract for legal services in collecting delinquent taxes for the city and school district.

The motion passed unanimously.

Prior to the meeting, a presentation was made to Larry Cross for his service on the board of directors. Cross had been a member of the board from Jan. 1, 1990 to Aug. 1, 1993. From January of this year to the beginning of August, he had served as chairman of the board.

"Guillen worked for Venezuelan drug organizations, and he worked for Colombian drug organizations," the source said. "He would stop some shipments, and others he would let through."

In late 1990, Venezuelan police tipped the DEA that Guillen's men were guarding a cocaine shipment instead of seizing it. The DEA investigated and informed the CIA.

When CIA investigators approached McFarland, he initially denied any knowledge of Guillen's trafficking, intelligence and law enforcement sources said.

But McFarland eventually admitted he had tolerated the cocaine deals to keep information channels with Guillen open, the sources confirmed. McFarland resigned.

Around the same time, the DEA's diplomatic attache and its investigative agent left Venezuela. Their superiors had discovered that Thor Halvorsen, a Guillen associate with his own links to the CIA, was using information from DEA drug cases to smear political and business rivals.

Halvorsen is now in a Venezuelan jail accused of participating in a string of car- and letter-bombings in Caracas in July and August. Prosecutors there say Halvorsen and associates intended to profit by destabilizing Venezuela's financial markets.

Halvorsen, a Venezuelan businessman of Norwegian descent, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and rose to serve as president of Venezuela's government telephone monopoly and the country's biggest charity.

In the mid-1980s, Halvorsen cooperated with the CIA, the source said, reporting to then-division chief director Dewey Clarridge. He was used to funnel money to Nicaraguan Contra leader Eden Pastora, the source said.

In 1989, then-President Carlos Andres Perez appointed Halvorsen to be Venezuela's "anti-drug ambassador," sending letters of introduction to U.S. drug czar William Bennett and others. Using his appointment as "special commissioner of the presidency for international narcotic affairs," Halvorsen began working closely with the DEA in Caracas.

"Thor penetrated the DEA office, controlling five different informants," the source said. "He would brief them and tell them what to say — all of it false. Then Guillen would back it up."

Miami DEA spokesman Jim Shedd refused to discuss details but confirmed that his agency had problems with Halvorsen in Caracas.

"All connections with him were severed three years ago because his information proved to be unreliable, manipulative and planted," Shedd said.

The two DEA officials — attache Anabell Grimm and agent Hilda Serna — apparently had no knowledge of Guillen and Halvorsen's illegal activities, the source said.

But the internal investigations of the infiltration were complicated by the romantic relationships between the women and McFarland, Halvorsen and Guillen.

Both McFarland and Halvorsen had slept with one of the women, and the other woman had a relationship at least with Guillen, the federal sources said. That raised the CIA's concern that McFarland could have been compromised.

Two suspects arrested for double killing of students

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police say the two men charged in the slayings of two Fort Worth college freshmen are members of the street gang and have long criminal records.

Fort Worth police say they arrested Darron DeShone Curl, 22, and Melvin J. White, 19, Thursday and charged them with the killings of Channing Freelove, 19, and Melanie Golchert, 18.

The bodies of the women, who were shot to death, were found in a vacant Fort Worth field Saturday morning.

Sgt. Paul Kratz said that both men are "known gang members." When the arrests were made, the younger man was out on bail after being charged with attempted capital murder, police said, and the older suspect was out on bail on a weapons charge, police said.

Curl and White were being held at the Tarrant County Jail today on $500,000 bond each.

Early in the investigation of the slayings, an informant told police that on the night Ms. Freelove was killed, she was planning to sell a pound of marijuana to a gang member called "Boot," according to documents.

White is nicknamed "Boot," police said.

Kratz said police made the arrests almost by accident.

"This was totally unplanned," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Officers responded to a call at a Fort Worth Sack 'N Save grocery store, which had complained about two men harassing store clerks, police said.

At the store, an arresting officer, Don Hanlon, recognized one of the men as a suspect in the slayings of Ms. Freelove and Ms. Golchert, police said.

Hanlon called detectives, who were busy writing capital murder arrest warrants on two of the men, and was told to take them to the detectives' office, Sgt. Tim Ellis said.

On Tuesday, police arrested two women accused of trying to hire the killers of Freelove and Golchert. Sherrie Lynn Sikes, 24, and Brandi Michelle Cirelli, 20, were accused of trying to hire an acquaintance to kill Ms. Freelove, and of possession of marijuana.

A police affidavit said Ms. Sikes and Ms. Cirelli were former lovers of Ms. Freelove's.

Police said witnesses reported that the women planned the contract killings the day after an emotional brawl involving Freelove, Sikes and Cirelli.

Sikes and Cirelli remained jailed on about $60,000 bail. No formal charges had been filed against Sikes or Cirelli as of Thursday night.

Golchert was a student at Tarrant County Junior College, and Freelove, a high school honor student, was studying pre-med at Texas Christian University.

The women were originally portrayed as wholesome athletes who did well in school, but since have been linked to drug dealing.

Kratz would not comment Thursday night on any possible motives for the killings.

"We have a lot more information than a few days ago but I'm not going to talk about motive right now," Kratz said.

Upon hearing of the arrests, Golchert's mother, Fran Golchert, raised her right arm above her head in a gesture of victory and said, "Yes! Yes!"

She praised the police, saying they had been helpful and cooperative.

Earlier Thursday, Fran Golchert, in her first public comments since her daughter's body was found, said Melanie Golchert was an innocent victim.

"She had an undying loyalty to her friends, which was a strength, but it was also a weakness," Fran Golchert said.

Fran Golchert and the teen's sister, former coach, high school teachers and friends gathered at a Fort Worth church Thursday night to rebut allegations that the 18-year-old junior college student was involved in drug dealing and other questionable activities.

Golchert, according to police, relatives and friends of the women, was not a drug dealer and was not involved in any lesbian relationships.

Flavious Smith brings congressional campaign candidacy to Gray County

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Political hopeful Flavious Smith of Amarillo traveled through Pampa Thursday on a 30-stop tour of the Panhandle.

Smith, a Republican, has announced his candidacy for the U.S. House of Representatives seat held by Bill Sarpalius (D-Amarillo). Smith will face Republican Mac Thornberry in the March primary.

The 35-year old candidate greeted employees, visitors and supporters at Gray County Courthouse. He spoke on topics from abortion to Somalia.

His campaign focus is on congressional reform. The Founding Fathers, he said, never foresaw the advent of the professional politician.

He said that the thing that bothers him most about the state of American affairs is that Congress is not subject to the laws they enact, including Occupational Safety and Health Administration laws, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and Social Security requirements.

"That's the goofiest thing I've ever seen," Smith said.

Throughout the district, he said, Democrats and Republicans are telling him that Congress doesn't believe in what they believe in, he said.

"That's why I'm running — it's time common working people stepped up to the table," Smith said.

Nationally, he said, the hot issue for 1994 is going to be health care reform due to the amount of money spent on it, which he pegs at 14 to 18 percent of the gross national product.

"If the government is so good in health care, why doesn't everybody go to the VA hospital?" Smith asked.

Cost shift from the paying patient to the nonpaying patient has become overly burdensome, stifling the ability of one to earn a living, he said.

Smith expects the issue to be divisive and upsetting to the American public before it is resolved.

Locally, the hot issue will be Pantex and its proposed expansion.

"While I support the current mission of Pantex and support expansion of the mission (assembly and decommissioning of nuclear weapons), I have deep concerns about the possibility of a national lab coming to the Panhandle if the purpose is to process or handle raw plutonium," he said.

He is concerned for the fear that surrounds the subject of plutonium and its effect on agriculture. Agriculture in the 13th District is a $4 billion business while Pantex is a $300 million business. Smith said that he had lived near Oak Ridge, Tenn., and in Denver, Colo., and knows first-hand the panic associated with the threat of a nuclear accident.

The first-time candidate came out swinging on the subject of the incumbent Sarpalius.

"One thing you can be assured of, we know where Bill Sarpalius stands on tax and spend," Smith said, citing Sarpalius' support of the Clinton budget.

The candidate alleges that Sarpalius is a member of the "good ol' boys of Washington," is not conservative and has voted twice to cover up the House Post Office scandal.

On crime, he believes that inmates need to serve more of their sentences.

"The parole board, I believe, doesn't serve a functional purpose any more because of the type of offenders we have," he said.

Prisons are not worth building if they have revolving doors, he said.

"I am absolutely opposed to gun control," Smith said.

He explained that there are few absolute rights granted in the Constitution, and one of those is the right to own and bear arms.

"We need to be vigilant when people in the name of a good cause, threaten to take away our fundamental freedoms," Smith said.

The ban on assault weapons being considered by the Senate, he said, is the first step to total gun control.

On foreign affairs, Smith prefers goal-oriented missions.

"I believe the initial goal in Somalia, to keep people from starving, was just and humanitarian. There are times, with the power and compassion we have, it's time to step up and make a difference in the world," he said.

Problems arise when the humanitarian venture become military and the goals are nebulous.

Bosnia is a no-win situation for the U.S., he said.

With both sides committing atrocities, he asked, who will the U.S. stand for?

Smith says that he does not favor abortion.

"I am pro life and I am against abortion," he said.

While he believes in individual freedom, he believes more in the sanctity of life.

"To argue that choice is the issue is specious to me," he said. "(Abortion) may be legal, but people need to stand up for what's right."

And in a roundabout way, that brought him to another issue: It was not right, however legal, for Republican primary opponent Mac Thornberry to live in Amarillo, in Rep. Larry Combest's district, yet run in the 13th District based on ownership of land in Donley County, he said.

Smith told courthouse visitors that he favored the North American Free Trade Agreement because it made common sense for the most powerful economic force in the world.

"If we're afraid of Mexico, we're in big trouble," he said.

His natural constituency, he said, is "regular, old working class people of the 13th District." If elected, he hopes to return government to the working class.

"They have to pay bills for every deficit that comes along," he said.

Insurance abortion policy debated

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials will adopt policy guidelines next month for a new program requiring insurers to cover abortion costs in cases where the mother's life was endangered, the pregnancy was caused by rape or incest, or the fetus was not viable.

Guidelines are aimed at making health insurance more affordable for small businesses. But during a public hearing Thursday before the State Board of Insurance, the proposed guidelines became the backdrop for a battle over abortion.

Anti-abortion activists claimed the guidelines were too broad and could be used to fund most abortions.

"Each employer will have to decide whether to offer a plan that includes abortion as a benefit or to seek inferior coverage for his or her employees," said Lisa Salcedo, a spokeswoman for the Texas Right to Life Committee.

She said the guideline would provide coverage for most abortions because it would cover the cost if the fetus is not viable, which means it cannot live outside the mother.

But abortion rights activists said the guidelines were too narrow.

Peggy Romberg, executive director of the Texas Family Planning Association, said the policies should have no restrictions to abortion coverage.

"To exclude abortion services from the plan ... would result in imposing one belief on all the employees of small businesses and their families; denying them the choice," she said.

Ms. Romberg said most insurance policies provide coverage for elective abortions.

State Rep. Mike Martin, D-Galveston, the House sponsor of the health insurance bill, and Amy Johnson, chief of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel, said the abortion guidelines should be left to insurers to decide what coverage to offer.

"When we place it in regulation or in law then we invite discussion permanently from a political standpoint," said Martin who supports abortion rights.

"Considering how complex these issues are already, I don't know if that's a productive thing to do."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenant commandment.

The Dallas Morning News on campaign finance reform:

At week's end, the U.S. House of Representatives is slated to consider a campaign finance bill that will sneak into the well of the House under the guise of reform. In truth, thanks to House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and other members whose feet drag slowly toward the idea of controlling special interest money, the House will consider yet another, watered-down campaign finance bill.

Oh, yes, a wavering representative could think that this effort is as good as it gets. ...

Yet that tempting line of reasoning should not satisfy an undecided legislator's mind. ...

The House bill would allow a member who adopts a voluntary spending limit of $600,000 per election cycle to accept a third of his or her contributions from political action committees. Moreover, a political action committee could contribute up to $10,000 per candidate per election. ...

Do these numbers really represent reform? Perhaps the good news is that the House bill does create a mechanism for candidates to use public dollars to help campaigns purchase commercial advertising. But some mischief could be at work here, too.

The "reform" bill calls for a $250 million public financing pool but does not put money into the pool. It stipulates that partial public financing could not go into effect until Congress passes a separate tax bill.

Of course, after this year's earlier pitched battle in Congress over tax policy, it's unlikely that a new revenue bill will be considered soon. So the separate financing clause allows a legislator to go home, say he voted for a reform bill, but know that there is no money in the bill to help make reform possible.

Consider that maneuvering another example of how the political fire hose is watering down this year's campaign finance reform bill. Until the House can come up with a more serious effort, a wavering legislator should not consider this soggy effort real reform.

El Paso Times on misuse of public information:

One of this country's most basic rights is the public's access to information kept on file by the government and its agencies at taxpayers' expense.

That right is embodied in the open records laws of many states, including Texas, that guarantee the easy access to documents and information.

But that freedom is being abused too often these days. Some examples:

— Right-to-life groups using license plate numbers to obtain the names and addresses of doctors and staff members of abortion clinics and then harassing them at home.

— Stalkers using license plate numbers to obtain the addresses of prospective victims.

— Lawyers and medical practitioners using traffic-accident records to contact potential clients and patients. ...

In most cases, the only requirement for access to these records is signing an affidavit swearing that the information will not be used for unlawful purposes. That affidavit, however, provides the basis for prosecution.

But if harassing telephone calls and improper solicitations are not reported by victims and then investigated by authorities, limitations on the public access to important information are inevitable.

Debating Perot a problem

William F. Buckley Jr.

Vice President Al Gore had a problem on Nov. 8 that he could not disclose. He had taken the right preliminary precautions, which were to conduct the exchange so to speak in camera — no audience in the room, no aides, only Larry King. This shielded Gore from the predictable effects of yahoos' enthusiasm, which is the kind of thing Ross Perot mostly arouses.

But Gore could not afford to treat Perot in the way he deserved. The reason for this is that the White House doesn't want to antagonize all those people who are, vaguely, pro-Perot — either because they have taken a fancy to him, or, more generally, because they think of him as a useful iconoclast where the government is concerned. Gore had to try to win his points without alienating the followers of the person he bested. That is very difficult.

I am experienced in debate, and I can think of a dozen occasions in which I have scored triumphantly on the motion being debated — and thoroughly antagonized the audience. Even in the extra-political world, that can be a problem. When a college debating team opposes another, and the contest is won or lost by voice vote of the audience, you run into such situations: Don't make the audience members sorry for the person you are about to crucify, or they'll express their compassion by voting against you.

What Gore couldn't risk was mobilizing the Perot people to a high pitch of retaliatory passion. But the result was an emasculated performance, in which Gore never summoned the authority that inheres in the position he takes. He was, instead, the nice guy who pleads the simple idealism of his cause.

That kind of thing doesn't work with Perot, though in the course of the 90 minutes, the wounds inflicted on Perot were mostly his own doing. A two- or three-minute twangy sequence of exhortations by Perot can attract both sympathy and amusement. Ninety minutes of it tends to make an audience yawn for the next act.

The closest that Gore came to being personal in his arguments was on the strangest ground. It had to do with the Fort Worth airport, and the viewer walked away from the prolonged jawing on this point with the vague impression that Gore was telling us that Perot stands to gain commercially from the defeat of the North American Free Trade Agreement, to the extent that such a defeat would heighten the value of the airport in which he has a major interest.

Perot was strangely awkward in his handling of the question. He kept insisting that the equity in the airport was his son's, not his. But audiences don't generally distinguish between the property of the father and of the son.

But the major error was psychological. It is simply not convincing that someone worth a few billion dollars is going to take a political position based on his personal commercial interests in a tiny spare room of his empire. If Perot were primarily interested in enhancing a fortune already redundant, he would not be spending as much money as he is advertising his views and himself.

Gore should have no difficulty at all in understanding this. After all, the prize he himself lusted for in 1988 was the presidency. Who can put a cash value on the singular satisfactions of holding that office? And if Bill Clinton was willing for all those years to serve as governor in exchange for $35,000 per year, a small fraction of what his talented wife was making as a lawyer-for-hire, why should one be surprised if Ross Perot is seeking satisfactions other than commercial?

Gore seemed fixed on the matter of the cost of the anti-NAFTA campaign. We do not need to doubt that an enormous amount of money has been spent to try to defeat NAFTA. But the point is not particularly relevant. In the first place, money is also being spent in favor of NAFTA. And NAFTA isn't the kind of thing that gets decided by the number of dollars spent opposing or defending it.

Perot's brightest moment came when he was coping with Gore's forecasts of what NAFTA would do to the job market. He had a very easy time of it, by citing the loony forecasts of the costs of Medicare and Medicaid. The triumphant smile on Perot's face, and the incandescence in his eyes, spoke his gratitude that the Lord had here delivered Gore into his hands.

Gore should not have positioned himself for that brief triumph by Perot. The best arguments for free trade are made on the basis of what we can establish as economic history. Yes, we are privately entitled to project what then will happen, based on historical experience. But that's different from asking people to believe that forecasters are dependable.

Later in the hour, Gore talked about what has actually happened in Mexico in the years since it lowered its tariff walls. But his line was damaged by the reliance on forecasts.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Nov. 19, the 323rd day of 1993. There are 42 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Nov. 19, 1863, President Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address as he dedicated a national cemetery at the site of a Civil War battle in Pennsylvania.

On this date:
In 1794, the United States and Britain signed the Jay Treaty, which resolved some of the issues left over from the Revolutionary War.

In 1831, the 20th president of the United States, James Garfield, was born in Orange, Ohio.

In 1887, American poet Emma Lazarus — who'd written "The New Colossus" to help raise money for the Statue of Liberty's pedestal — died in New York at age 38.

In 1919, the U.S. Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles 55-39, short of the two-thirds majority needed for ratification.

America can be rediscovered

Paul Harvey

World travel is alluring only to the untraveled. You thinking about Naples, Italy? Think again.

The Naples, Italy, of right now is garbage piled in alleys, street robberies anywhere and all the time, tap water coming out brown and most traffic lights out of order for months.

Naples, once memorable for its vistas of hills and seas, is now chaos, with chronic shortages of everything except crime. The Naples City Council has been dissolved by public disorder. Unemployment is 27 percent.

How about Paris? The songwriter made Paris in springtime sound irresistible. Generations of romantics visualized themselves strolling the banks of the River Seine with a loaf of fragrant bread in one hand and a bottle of wine in the other and an ultrasweet mademoiselle alongside. The Paris of today is dirt, disease, rude manners and high prices.

Is there no place to run to? How about Mexico?

There are tourist havens in Mexico, if you have the price, but don't drink the water. And don't eat the leafy vegetables. And don't move there without recognizing that corruption is a way of life — in politics, in law enforcement and in business. Or in getting a telephone installed or in paying a traffic fine.

At a Chamber of Commerce meeting in Monterey, a naive American speaker asked the 400 businessmen present, "Have you ever paid a bribe?" The response was laughter, uproarious and unanimous.

There is one oasis on planet Earth of relative stability and freedom and where most natives are friendly and you can drink the water.

You are there. We Americans are more likely to preoccupy ourselves with imperfections than to count our blessings, yet Americans spend $2.5 million a day just getting our cars washed! In the United States, people eat on time and take their dogs to a barber.

No other people on Earth could even begin to comprehend that.

Much of what recommends the United States is the fact that in all major developing and Third World countries, civilization has gone into reverse; there is chronic socioeconomic and political decline.

Civil wars in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union will spread. Sectarian violence will continue to ravage India. Japan has been destabilized by corruption.

The politically stable United States is unique in the world. With our wide open spaces and lower concentrations of population and a less codified way of life, the United States to the rest of the tormented world looks like "The Promised Land."

That makes us vulnerable to invasion and to corruption by invaders. We are a hospitable people but let none come here who does not leave his old world ways behind.

Clinton & Co. — an unlikely coalition

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

Gore said Thursday on NBC.

In addition, Clinton began accentuating the foreign policy and world trade concerns he said were at stake in the NAFTA decision, telling arguments for any president. As a candidate, Clinton had hedged his support of NAFTA until side deals on labor and environmental questions were set, which took until August.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, a Senate veteran, said he couldn't recall a trade bill that began with skimpier support than when Clinton began his NAFTA drive.

Bentsen said Clinton "could have cut out on the deal" when the odds were against him. "But he stayed in there and fought the issue and fought it passionately and well." Cabinet members are supposed to talk that way about their presidents. Still, Clinton defied the odds, took the risks and won.

That commitment was crucial in lining up the support of Republicans, like the cantankerous Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a short-term ally who said the NAFTA vote was one of historic bipartisanship. The next minority leader, Gingrich showed he can help pass legislation as surely as he can snarl or block it.

Republicans were wary at first, insisting on an all-out push by Clinton so they couldn't be isolated as political targets by opponents like Perot and big labor.

That also led them to seek and get Clinton's promise in writing that he would defend House members who voted for NAFTA should it be raised as an issue against them by Democratic challengers in the 1994 campaign.

Clinton said a vote for the agreement "should not be the basis for defeating any member of Congress, without regard to party." But union leaders said they mean to make it an issue next year, leaning hard on the Democratic incumbents who usually get labor money and campaign volunteers.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Monday that Clinton's pledge to the Republicans amounted to campaign help for the opposition. "The president has clearly abdicated his role as leader of the Democratic Party," he said.

Clinton wasn't the first president to offer such political shelter. Ronald Reagan did it in 1983 to gain Democratic votes on an international lending bill; both parties tried it to avoid the hot-button congressional pay raise as an issue in 1990.

But Clinton probably was the first to win on a difficult issue like NAFTA, against traditional allies, with two of his party's top three House leaders lined up against him, as were Rep. Richard Gephardt, the majority leader, and Rep. David Bonior, the whip. They said Democrats would reunite, notably on health care; indeed, Bonior said his big frustration was that NAFTA diverted Democrats from that concern.

There was no hint of rebuke. Clinton made a point of saluting "the passionate defenders of the working people" who had opposed him, in the House and from the labor movement. He said he hoped labor now would join him "in going on to the health care battle" and other issues.

When the White House pointedly snubbed a southern Democrat for opposing Clinton's budget in the Senate, it served only to make him a hero back home. This time, the emphasis is on making up.

DEAR ABBY: Last year, on the night before Thanksgiving, after cleaning my house, putting a turkey in the oven and making some pies, I sat down to relax and read Dear Abby. In your column, you had suggested that people invite others to share Thanksgiving, particularly those who families were far away and those who don't have family anymore.

Abby, the time to run that column is well before Thanksgiving, so the people who receive the invitations will feel they are truly wanted and not just an afterthought.

My husband teaches a Sunday school class for single adults. The last two years we have invited anyone who wants to come for Thanksgiving to our house. Each guest signs up to bring a specific dish, or drinks or paper goods. Last year we had 18 friends (including one couple whose family lives out of state, nine single adults and seven children). We had a wonderful time visiting, watching television and playing games.

Others in our church also extend invitations to out-of-state transplants and singles at Thanksgiving and Christmas. It's always a blessing — a wonderful opportunity to get to know them better. I encourage your readers to make room at their tables for Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner. God will richly reward you.

BECKI SIMMONS,
METROPOLITAN CHURCH OF GOD, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR BECKI: I recall this biblical injunction: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20-35)

DEAR ABBY: Twenty-five years ago, I became chief baby sitter, chauffeur, nurse, counselor and caretaker of my husband's three children. I had three of my own, so suddenly we were a family with four teens and two preteen children. We weren't exactly "The Brady Bunch," and it was the most difficult job I've ever had.

At that time, there was very little written about stepfamilies, so we had to fly by the seat of our pants. I didn't know what to expect, and I had a lot of misconceptions about being a "Super Stepmom." I learned by trial and error, and miraculously raised six children of whom I am very proud.

Fortunately, today there is a lot of help for stepparents. I know that you often refer your readers to places that can help them, so please mention me organization called The Stepfamily Association of America; its toll-free number is (800) 735-0329. There are chapters and support groups all over the country, as well as professional workshops and conferences for the whole family. There are books available to help people who are in marriages with children from former relationships.

I am co-founder of one of the Pittsburgh chapters. You may use my name.

GLORIA CLARK

DEAR GLORIA: Thanks for writing. I just telephoned your toll-free number to be sure it was current. It was, and I had the pleasure of speaking with a most charming gentleman named Bill. Thanks for all the good you do.

Museums turn to licensing products to offset sagging incomes

By NELSON WANG
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — About the only history most people associate with beer and potato chips is one of indigestion and regrettable overindulgence.

But two museums, Mystic Seaport in Connecticut and Plimoth Plantation in Massachusetts, are out to show otherwise — and to make some money.

Mystic, a recreation of a 19th century seacoast community, recently began marketing a line of potato chips harking back to the first chips invented in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., in 1853.

And Plimoth Plantation, a preservation of a 1627 Pilgrim settlement, has unveiled Plimoth Rock Ale, a beer brewed from corn, malts similar to what the Pilgrims used soon after they arrived in America.

Blame a weak economy for the marketing ploys.

"We're seeing a lot more aggressive strategies ... that are all designed to get income from more than just people coming in the door," said Laura Roberts, executive director of the New England Museum Association, which represents about 200 museums and historical attractions.

Nationally, museum attendance has remained stable. But many museums are being squeezed by shrinking state and federal budgets, according to Patricia Williams, deputy director of the American Association of Museums.

So while museums have always run gift stores to supplement income, licensing products is seen as an important revenue generator.

At the Henry Ford Museum in Michigan, for example, which chronicles the country's industrial revolution, visitors can buy reproductions of any of the more than a hundred 18th- and 19th-century artifacts, including lamps, furniture, clocks and pottery.

At Conner Prairie in Indiana, a recreation of an 1836 rural Indiana town, salt-glazed and spongeware pottery popular during this era have been big sellers.

Sturbridge Village in central Massachusetts, which recreates an 1830s rural community, recently began selling 19th century plants and trees from seeds saved by gardeners over the years. One of the biggest sellers has been apple trees that once dotted the Sturbridge landscape.

The village's horticultural program, which includes garden tools and accessories as well as plant material, is expected to bring in about $50,000 next year, according to Sturbridge's president, Alberta Sebolt George.

And the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., which already has an extensive licensing program, recently entered a licensing agreement for an educational computer software program called "Mystery at the Museums."

At Plimoth Plantation, attendance has declined 25 percent since 1988. In response, the plantation recently undertook a campaign to intensify its fundraising and license products such as Plimoth Rock Ale.

Jim Baker, the plantation's historian, pointed out that beer was a major part of the Pilgrim diet. The initial offering of 250 cases was sold in Plymouth County and Cape Cod, and more is expected by Thanksgiving.

Mystic Seaport licensed its Mystic potato chips for sale in New England last year after selling them at the museum for two years. The seaport is expected to net about $12,000 this year on sales of more than $1 million.

"Like all other museums, costs seem to be going up and attendance has been flat if not declining, so you have to find ways to supplement that," said Tom Aageson, who helped develop the chips and is looking into a whole line of historic foods.

With all the products being introduced, some in the museum business recognize the potential for diluting their historical mission.

"There's a danger that you begin to get an image of these places as not museums, but bookshops and stores and cafes," Roberts said.

But Mystic's Aageson sees no harm in selling products that help people to learn more about their institutions.

"If the products are done to good standards ... then you're letting people have a piece of that history, you're making it more accessible to them," he said.

Girl Scouts

Officials of the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council are stressing that the council is not closing its Pampa office, the former Quivira Girl Scout Council headquarters at 836 W. Foster.

The Pampa office is now a field office for the newly expanded council. Staff will also operate field offices in Dumas and Borger and will continue to sell retail Girl Scout items at the Program Center in Amarillo.

The three field offices are manned at specific times for walk-in business and by appointment at other times. The council provides free materials by mail.

The council operates one retail outlet in Amarillo. Purchases may be made by mail or through a staff member who can deliver purchased items. Credit card orders are accepted by FAX at 1-806-356-0099.

The three field offices are used for training and information. The offices in Borger and Pampa have telephone answering machines which are checked often so volunteers can leave questions 24 hours a day.

For more information, contact Texas Plains Girl Scout Council at 1-800-687-4475.

Boy Scouts

The annual Boy Scout District Recognition Dinner will be at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 20.

The cost is $5 and your favorite covered dish. This dinner is when Boy Scout leaders and volunteers gather to recognize some of the outstanding leaders.

Don't forget the popcorn sales are still going on, but not for long. Get your order in SOON!

There is a "Uniform Recycling Center" set up to help those who don't mind wearing an "experienced" uniform. This center is in great need of all sizes of uniforms, especially the leaders uniforms. If you can help, please contact Gina Albus at 665-4774.

Here is a listing of most of the Packs and Troops and who to call if interested in joining:

- Pack 401 — Roger Roundy, 669-1704. Troop 401 — James Kane, 665-5352.
- Pack 404 — Jim Shelton, 669-3677. Troop 404 — Bill Schroeder, 669-6917.

- Pack 480 — Ron Juett, 665-7643. Troop 480 — Don Huddleston, 669-9310.

There are other Packs and Troops in the making. For more information, call John McDougald at 665-4230.

Dumas girl competing in AQHA championship

Paula Jeffus Everett of Dumas, daughter of Gene Ann Jeffus of Skellytown, will be among 52 contenders for the All-Around Amateur Award at the AQHA World Championship Show slated for Nov. 7-20 in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Everett will be competing with her 1981 American Quarter Horse brown gelding Jimmers Lil Joe.

"The All-Around Amateur Award is the most prestigious title an amateur exhibitor can win at the World Show and one of the most significant awarded by the American Quarter Horse Association," said AQHA Executive Vice President Bill Brewer.

The All-Around Amateur Award is presented to the amateur exhibitor earning the greatest number of points in three or more classes on the same horse. The winner will receive a three-horse Dynasty trailer from Sooner Trailer Manufacturing, while the Reserve All-Around will receive a $2,500 cash award.

A record 3,128 entries are vying for 89 World Championships and $1.2 million in cash and awards at the show, the largest, richest, invitation-only world championship horse show. Invitations were extended only to exhibitors earning a predetermined number of points in AQHA-approved shows.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

HOW THE BIBLE NAMED A DOG!

THE FIRST SCHOOL FOR TRAINING DOGS TO GUIDE THOSE WHO ARE BLIND WAS FOUNDED IN 1929 BY ITS FIRST PRESIDENT, DOROTHY HARRISON EUSTICE, AND MORRIS FRANK WHO HAD BEEN BLIND SINCE AGE 16.

THE PHRASE WHICH GAVE THE SCHOOL, AND THE DOGS, ITS NAME WAS TAKEN FROM THE BIBLE... THE SEEING EYE THE LORD HATH MADE... (PROVERBS 20:12)

FOR MORE THAN HALF A CENTURY THESE PATIENT, INTELLIGENT "SEEING EYE" DOGS HAVE GIVEN GREATER FREEDOM TO BLIND PEOPLE IN EVERY STATE AND MANY COUNTRIES! MR. FRANK CALLS THE DOGS "GOD'S GIFT OF NEW EYES."

Church of God in Christ: 'God is real in this church'

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord" means something real to the Church of God in Christ, and that exuberance is spreading at a rapid pace.

The predominantly black, Pentecostal church was born in the rural South but began expanding north and west with the black migration begun in the early part of the century.

Now, the National Council of Churches lists it as the fastest growing religious denomination in the country with a membership that increased by more than 48 percent between 1982 and 1991.

The church's annual convocation was held in Memphis last week, where a visit from President Clinton underlined what members see as the church's growing status. Clinton, a former governor of Arkansas, also spoke at the church's 1991 convocation while campaigning for president.

"This signifies that the Church of God in Christ is a meaningful entity. We are very proud of this," said Elder Al Westbrooks, an aide to Henry L. Ford of Chicago, the church's presiding bishop.

Ford counts the president as a personal friend and carries in his wallet a picture of himself with Clinton, Westbrooks said.

The church's growth, its leaders say, is due largely to an unswerving faith that God is a living, personal presence in a follower's life.

"We believe God is a healer. He heals in all areas of life. And if He doesn't, so what. He's God," said David A. Hall Jr., pastor of Temple Church of God in Christ of Memphis. "God is real in this church."

Though its origins were rural, the church with 5.5 million members nationwide has its primary influence in the inner cities of the Northeast, South and Far West.

Its focus is on strengthening the family while opposing crime and drugs.

"Our families are being decimated ... and we have nobody to blame but ourselves," Hall said. "We're not crying victimization. We're crying liberation."

The denomination is headquartered in Memphis where it was formed in 1907 by Charles H. Mason, a Mississippi preacher and son of former slaves.

Its mother church, the Mason Temple, was the site of Martin Luther King Jr.'s last public address. He gave his "mountain top" speech there the night before he was assassinated in 1968.

Clinton stood in that same pulpit Saturday and praised church members for their efforts to shore up the American family and rebuild the spiritual foundations of inner-city neighborhoods.

"We have to make our people whole again, and this church has stood for that," the president said. "Why do you think you have 5 million members in this country, because people know you are filled with the spirit of God."

While pleased with the president's visit, the church refrains from endorsing political candidates and generally stays clear of secular politics. Ford urged his followers, however, to pray for Clinton during the presidential campaign.

At hometown services and the annual convocation, which draws up to 40,000 delegates or "saints," church members concentrate on one thing, religion.

Worship services are soul-cleansing celebrations of gospel music, laying on of hands and talking in tongues.

"When (the Bible) says 'make a joyful noise unto the Lord' they take that seriously," said Sherry DuPree, a researcher and church member who gathered membership figures for the National Council of Churches.

That report, published in the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, puts the Church of God in Christ as the fifth-largest denomination in the country. It is the second-largest predominantly black church, behind the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. with 8 million members.

First, is the Roman Catholic Church with 58 million members, followed by the Southern Baptist Convention with 15 million and the United Methodist Church with 8.8 million.

The Church of God in Christ is also expanding overseas and recently picked up some 350 affiliate churches in Africa, said Elder Westbrooks.

Local congregations are encouraged by the central church to set up community outreach programs. These also have helped the denomination's growth.

Many churches have day care centers, feeding kitchens for the poor and recreational and spiritual programs for the young.

In his annual message to the convocation, Bishop Hall urged his followers to remember those less fortunate than themselves.

"You've got to reach out and help the poor," he said. "God will reject you if you don't."

Hall of Memphis said the church has long drawn criticism from outsiders as being overly strict in its demands for clean living by its members.

But he said many people, faced with what they see as a breakdown of social rules, are longing for such clear boundaries.

"The Church of God in Christ draws a line in the dirt and says that's it," he said. "It's Bible-based and Spirit-driven."

Bishops to discuss military policy

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

In a period of growing isolationism, America must not forget its moral responsibility as the remaining superpower in the post-Cold War era, say Catholic bishops who helped draft a new statement on U.S. foreign policy.

"The Harvest of Justice is Sown in Peace," a proposed follow-up statement to the bishops' historic peace pastoral of a decade ago, declares the U.S. retains a moral responsibility to intervene in regional conflicts and to increase its humanitarian aid to countries where it once fought proxy wars against communism.

"In a world where 40,000 children die every day from hunger, where whole populations in places like Bosnia are threatened by ethnic cleansing, where basic human rights are routinely violated, we are calling for creative, engaged and responsible U.S. leadership that rejects the illusion of isolationism," said Bishop Daniel P. Reilly, chairman of a bishops' subcommittee that drew up the statement.

It is one thing to argue the United States should leave Somalia and the Balkans because it would advance the peace process in those nations, another to say the United States should get out because it is not our problem, said Archbishop John R. Roach, chairman of the bishops' International Policy Committee.

"If that indicates any lack of concern of our responsibility as world citizens, then that's a problem," he said.

The committee's proposal will go before the full National Conference of Catholic Bishops at its meeting beginning Monday in Washington.

Also on the agenda for the four-day meeting is a proposed statement on marriage and the family that calls on men and women to reject sexual stereotypes and share household and parenting duties.

A decade ago, the bishops' pastoral letter "The Challenge of Peace" drew a firestorm of protest from critics both inside the church and in the Reagan administration for its calls to reduce military spending and the nation's nuclear arsenal.

Critics said the bishops should stick to advising its 59 million-member flock on ecclesiastical matters, but the public attention that greeted the bishops' foray into U.S. military policy proved a watershed event in propelling religious bodies into the forefront of public policy debates.

In the proposed new statement, the bishops say the challenge for peace today is different than at the end of the Cold War, but no less urgent in a world where massive starvation, regional wars and an undying conventional arms trade are reminders of continuing violence to human dignity.

"After the Cold War, there has emerged an understandable but dangerous temptation to turn inward, to focus only on domestic needs and to ignore global responsibilities. This is not an option for believers in a universal church or for citizens in the world's most powerful nation," the bishops said.

Reilly said the bishops do not see a resurgence of the strong isolationist movement that developed in the United States prior to World War II, but they are concerned about a tendency to focus only on domestic concerns, and to look at the problems in places like Bosnia and Somalia as "somebody else's concerns."

In the proposed statement on marriage and the family, the bishops encourage married couples to seek not only pastoral but other professional counseling at the first sign of trouble.

They also stress the importance of friends, family and the parish community in helping married couples work through difficult times when possible.

But some of the document's most striking language comes in a separate section on "mutuality" that encourages men and women to move beyond gender stereotypes.

In language sometimes reminiscent of the nascent men's movement, the bishops encourage men to be nurturing parents and sensitive spouses.

Men are often saddled with limited expectations in today's society, said Bishop Carlos Sevilla of San Francisco.

"The bishops are saying, 'Hey, there's a total individual here, and no one part of the individual should be neglected,'" Sevilla said.

If the statement is approved, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago is scheduled to formally present it to the United Nations Dec. 7 as the bishops' contribution to the U.N.'s 1994 International Year of the Family.

St. Mark CME to host anniversary celebration

St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 406 Elm, will celebrate their 61st anniversary with two special services. The first is set for 7:30 p.m. Friday with the Rev. V.C. Martin of New Hope Baptist Church as speaker. The second is at 3 p.m. Sunday with the Rev. Theodore Rogers of Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Amarillo, to bring the message.

Choirs from the respective churches will sing at the services.

The theme for the weekend is "Upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," from Matthew 16:18.

The public is invited to the services.

Lineup changes put Mustangs into playoffs

By SUSAN ADELETTI Sports Writer

After finishing last season with a pitiable 1-9 record that was winless in the district, Wheeler turned 180 degrees.

This season, the Mustangs pulled out a winning 5-4-1 record, going 3-2 in the district. But the real triumph came with a playoff bid.

"After last year, we felt like if we won two games, we doubled our record," Wheeler head coach Ronnie Karcher joked. "We were real pleased with the way we ended up."

One of the season's highlights for Wheeler was the Clarendon victory on Oct. 29. It was an upset for sure, as Clarendon was picked to win the district. But the Broncos and the Mustangs had identical district records at the time of their fateful meeting, and the 'Stangs won simply because they felt they could.

High school football review

The 14-7 win knocked Clarendon clear off the playoff roost, never to return. At the same time, it won Wheeler a chance at a postseason.

Although, some would argue that the playoff award went to the luckiest guesser, Karcher won the coin toss which broke up a three-way tie for the district's second-placed seed, thus giving new life to an eager team.

Wheeler's late-season success can be attributed to changes within the lineup. Karcher moved Chad Dunnam from running back to quarterback and 6'1" 225-pound Ashlee Brownfield from fullback to running back. Both players sparked wins in their new positions, with Brownfield scoring the large majority of Wheeler's points in the season's final games. He was the hero against Clarendon, pulling out both Mustang touchdowns and both extra points.

Brownfield's emergence as a ball-carrier and Dunnam's fine quarterbacking was reinforced by a defense to be reckoned with.

Next year the "Stangs" will lose five starters on both sides of the ball, including Dunnam and Brownfield. The six returnees will have this success of a season to remember and build upon, but there is a possibility they may face a new challenge.

Last year, the team was extremely young and was struggling to regroup in a higher class. Now that they finally achieved enviable status in Class 2A, they are threatening to move down again.

"Right now we're in limbo," Karcher said. "We feel like we might drop down to Class A."

Hovering between classes on a year-to-year basis is frustrating, to say the least. An inconsistent record and different district teams are just a couple of the drawbacks. But such is the fate of a school that crosses and recrosses the designated Class A enrollment level.

Last season was an effective building season, however. Karcher felt that the team returned a determined bunch.

"The experience coming back had to help us this year," he noted. "We gained confidence. The confidence won us a couple of games."

Red Raiders have 1-2 punch planned for Cougars

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

Texas Tech has a 1-2 punch planned for the University of Houston in San Antonio's Alamodome on Saturday.

The Red Raiders' top priority is a fifth straight victory that would qualify Texas Tech for a bowl game after a 1-5 stumble to start the season.

Secondly, coach Spike Dykes would like Bam Morris to take aim at Earl Campbell's single season Southwest Conference rushing record of 1,744 yards. Morris has 1,529 yards.

Morris, a 6-2, 240-pound junior, got within reach of Campbell's record by gaining 222 yards on a career-high 38 carries in last weekend's 41-24 victory over SMU.

"I think he's one of the best in the country and he's still getting better," Dykes said. "The best is yet to come. He does things that really amaze me."

Morris needs 216 rushing yards to break Campbell's single season record. Dykes thinks Morris deserves a chance to go for it.

"Earl said he'd give me some sausage if I wouldn't do that," Dykes joked. "Most coaches are the same. Anytime somebody has a chance to break a record, and it doesn't take anything away from the team, you'd try to do that."

Houston (1-7-1, 1-3-1) was vulnerable to the run last week. David Small rushed for 206 yards on 31 carries, leading Cincinnati to a 41-17 victory over the Cougars.

No. 10 Texas A&M (8-1, 5-0) also is seeking a place in the record books against Texas Christian Saturday.

A victory would be the Aggies' 21st consecutive SWC triumph, tying the all-time SWC record for most consecutive league victories set by Texas in 1968-71.

TCU (4-6, 2-4) beat the Texas Longhorns for the first time in 25 years last season. Now the Frogs have a chance to erase a 20-year drought against the Aggies.

"This is a championship game for us," Slocum said. "We win this game and we have a share of the title. That's motivation enough."

What would it be like for TCU coach Pat Sullivan to beat the Aggies?

"What did it mean when David beat Goliath?" Sullivan asked. "They talked about that for 2,000 years. It would be the same thing."

In other games, Baylor (5-5, 3-3) plays at Texas (4-4-1, 4-1) and Southern Methodist (1-7-2, 1-5-1) is at Navy (4-5).

After Saturday, only two regular season games remain on the SWC slate. The Aggies and Texas play Thanksgiving night at Kyle Field and the following morning, Rice, its bowl hopes dashed, is host to Houston at Rice Stadium at 10 a.m.

Baylor and Texas are in a bowl elimination game in Austin and the Bears are on a series role with four victories in the last five games. Amazingly, the Longhorns, despite their worst start in more than 50 years, can still play in the Cotton Bowl with victories over Baylor and the Aggies.

Second-round winner could be 5A state champion

By JAIME ARON Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — To Dallas Carter coach Freddie James, this weekend's game against DeSoto reminds him of his programs on-field glory days of 1988.

To DeSoto coach Ben Dial, playing the state's best team in the playoffs evokes memories of his high school playing days in 1960 as a junior at Fallwell.

To fans, the Cowboys-Eagles matchup is just plain big.

Many observers say Saturday's Class 5A Division II game is the equivalent of playing the title game in the second round. Go ahead and crown that game's winner as the champ, some suggest.

"A lot of people are looking at it that way and they have cause to if you read the stats, ratings and stuff like that," said DeSoto coach Ben Dial. "But we have to be cautious of thinking this is THE game."

No coach will admit that any game before the championship is a be-all, win-all to end-all. At least James and Dial will say it has greater connotations than most second-round games.

"This is probably one of our biggest games in years," James said.

James said his team may not have played a game this anticipated since 1988 playoff victories over Odessa Permian and Marshall. The Cowboys went on to defeat Converse Judson in the title game, but had to give the Rockets the crown after losing a prolonged legal battle.

The state avoided a the potential of a similarly scarred post-season Wednesday when a federal judge upheld the University Interscholastic League's order to kick Odessa Permian out of the playoffs.

Lubbock Coronado, which lost 34-17 to Permian last weekend, replaces the Panthers and will play host Saturday to El Paso Coronado.

With Permian out of Division I, defending champion Judson, which ended the season No. 2, becomes the favorite. The team to beat for the Division II title will be either Carter or DeSoto.

James said it'll take at least three touchdowns for a Carter victory, prompting Dial to proclaim the Eagles will need four TDs.

The big matchup is DeSoto's offensive machine against Carter's state-best defense. The Eagles are led by the trio of quarterback Larry Oliver, receiver Stacy Mitchell and running back Byron Hanspard.

"The defense needs to give the offense a cushion," James said. "We need to make them fumble, get an interception or force them to punt in a crucial situation. Then we can operate our offense."

Carter's offense is no slouch, either.

"I think best way to beat Carter is to keep their offense off the field," Dial said.

The game will be the marquee event Saturday night at Texas Stadium. The 8 p.m. kickoff was chosen by Dial when he received the second choice.

"That was by design," Dial said. "We chose that time so everyone who wanted to be there, could."

Dial is trying to keep the players focused on the game as simply the next step to get into the third round.

But he knows how hard that can be, remembering what big games were like when he was playing.

"We played the Stinnett Rattlers. I don't remember the records, but that was the big game for us," he said.

Another big game is in Class 3A where defending champion Southlake Carroll takes on Reagan County in another battle of 11-0 teams.

The same teams also were undefeated when they met in the second round last season. Carroll won 50-14.

Awaiting that winner will be the survivor of Amarillo River Road (10-1) and Vernon (9-2). Vernon and Carroll fought a memorable third-round game last season.

The entire Region II in 4A bears watching this weekend as four good teams will be sent home.

Defending champion Waxahachie (11-0) leads the pack. The Indians face Henderson (10-1), with that winner advancing to play the winner of Highland Park (11-0) and Dallas Hillcrest (9-2).

Whoever advances out of that region could eventually meet 1991 champ and 1992 runner-up A&M Consolidated — that is, if the 10-1 Tigers can get past Bay City (10-1) on Friday.

Then, that winner must get by the winner of La Marque (10-0) and West Orange-Stark (10-1) to remain in the title chase.

The most interesting 2A game could be yet another battle of 11-0 squads, this one between Honey Grove and Scurry-Rosser.

Lindsay (10-1) plays top-ranked Gunter (10-0) in Class 1A's biggest battle of the weekend.

NFC West title may be on the line in 49ers-Saints clash

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Football Writer

Pro picks

It only seems like the Saints and 49ers play each other four times a season with an NFC West title at stake. That's pretty much what's on the line Monday night when the Saints go to Candlestick for their second — yes, second — meeting of the year.

The Lions are coming off a bye week, which isn't necessarily good. The Saints were coming off a bye last week when the Packers beat them and bye teams are 7-14 against non-bye teams this year.

Houston (minus 4) at Cleveland OILERS, 22-5 Indianapolis (plus 13) at Buffalo BILLS, 12-3 Raiders (plus 3) at San Diego CHARGERS, 21-17 Cincinnati (plus 13) at New York Jets The Bengals are so bad they're laughing at themselves. JETS, 34-10

Portland State faces Texas team in Division II playoffs

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portland State enters the NCAA Division II playoffs for the sixth time in seven years Saturday, facing Texas A&M-Kingsville. The visiting Javelinas, formerly Texas A&I, have won five in a row after losing their first five games — including a 22-17 loss to Portland State on Sept. 18 at Kingsville.

Soccer champs

Cooper Energies won the U-10 boys fall soccer championship this year with a 5-0-1 record. The team will represent the Pampa Soccer Association in a Dallas tournament Dec. 4-5.

Odessa Permian fans in mourning after team is banned from state playoffs

By JEAN PAGEL Associated Press Writer ODESSA (AP) — A somber puzzle is nagging Jack Kimbrow and other Odessa Permian boosters who expected they'd be cheering from the football bleachers well into December.

UIL rules state that students must sit out a year after they switch schools. But the Ector County ISD since 1982 has used a majority-to-minority policy allowing transfers to immediately join in extracurricular activities.

For something. We're known for great football," sophomore Kelley Thomas explained. "Without that, nobody knows us."

Two years after independence, Ukraine faces economic crisis

By MARTA KOLOMAYETS
Associated Press Writer

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — Less than two years after the euphoria of independence, Ukraine has a hang-over of crisis proportions.

Back when Ukraine was called the breadbasket of the Soviet Union, many Ukrainians imagined they would thrive if given independence. Soviet leaders worried that Ukraine was the one republic too valuable to let go.

But hyperinflation, severe fuel shortages, political paralysis and a dangerous nuclear legacy are crushing the former Soviet republic this winter.

Economists see little hope of improvement in the country's economy.

"Ukraine is in a pit — a deeper hole doesn't exist. People here make less than $2 a month," said lawmaker Serhiy Holovaty, an opposition leader. "There is no worse place to live in the world."

President Leonid Kravchuk, a former Communist leader, has shoveled out subsidies to ailing state industries, causing the budget deficit to soar, and printed money with nothing to back it up. Privatization has barely begun, and corruption is widespread.

Worried that his opponents will accuse the government of selling the country to foreigners, Kravchuk has given a hostile reception to investment from overseas.

Instead, Ukraine has asked the West for aid to dismantle its nuclear arsenal — weapons it has been reluctant to give up as called for in international agreements.

"Ukraine is on the verge of economic collapse," warned former Deputy Prime Minister Viktor Pynzenyk, who quit earlier this year in protest of Kravchuk's policies.

So far, Ukrainians have reacted with stoicism to the crisis.

"They are apathetic and depressed. All that was sacred to them has been destroyed," Pynzenyk said. "Everyone here sees there is no progress in Ukraine, they look at Russia and see progress."

Ukraine's transitional currency, the karbovanets, better known as the "coupon," is so weak Ukrainians are eager to trade it for dollars, other foreign currencies and even Russian rubles, which Ukraine outlawed last year.

Few people can afford the Western goods stocked in kiosks around the city. State stores have empty shelves. When a shipment of sausages arrives, long lines form. Bread and milk must be bought early, before they run out.

"We haven't seen meat on the table since the summer," said Tanya Serhiyenko, 30, who stays home to care for her 2-year-old child and depends on her husband's salary of 230,000 coupons, less than $10 a month.

Good cuts of beef cost about 18,000 coupons a pound. The minimum monthly wage in Ukraine is 40,000 coupons.

Ukrainians are already shivering this fall, the coldest in the last 10 years, and the fuel shortage has curtailed most public transportation.

Most bus routes to rural areas have been cut. Public transportation in Kiev, the capital, has been cut in half. To conserve energy, electricity is cut off for an hour a day everywhere except large cities.

Many cars have been put away for the winter because of soaring gas prices.

About 90 percent of Ukraine's gas and oil supplies come from Russia, but is no longer highly subsidized as it was in Soviet times.

Citing fuel shortages, Ukraine has decided to increase its use of nuclear energy, despite international concern that its plants are unsafe. The country relies on nuclear power for 40 percent of its energy in winter.

This fall, lawmakers decided not to phase out the reactors at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, where the world's worst nuclear disaster occurred in 1986.

"The situation at our nuclear plants is catastrophic. ... Our experts are not qualified, our nuclear stations perhaps the most dangerous in the world," said Volodymyr Usatenko, chairman of a parliamentary committee on use of atomic energy.

Russian officials say Ukraine's nuclear weapons, too, are in disrepair and pose serious safety threats.

Better nutrition, later marriages linked to rise in teen pregnancies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Better nutrition and later marriages are leading to more adolescent sexual activity and more unwanted pregnancies in most countries, a new study concludes.

"Improved nutrition and health care mean that puberty now begins earlier," said the International Planned Parenthood Federation in a report for the family planning group's annual meeting this weekend.

The report said more youths in developing countries are going to school, staying in school longer and getting married later.

These are all positive developments, but the longer period between maturity and marriage leads to more unwanted pregnancies, the report said.

The report praised the Netherlands for having the world's lowest teenage pregnancy rate — about one for every 100 teenagers — because confidential information and services are readily available to all teenagers.

It said the rate in the United States is the highest in the West: more than 11 pregnant teenagers out of every 100.

In Latin America, it found teenage girls accounting for nearly one birth in five. In some parts of Africa the figure is almost one in four.

"A study in rural Uganda found that the mean age for first sex was 15 years for both boys and girls," it said, meaning the same number of Ugandan youngsters reported having sex the first time before their 15th birthday as after it.

"In Algeria and Morocco, 2,000 unwanted babies are abandoned every year by young unmarried women," the study reported. "In Tunisia, on the other hand, the only Arab country where abortion is legal, abandoned children and the suicide of pregnant young women are now virtually unknown."

The report advocated more widespread sex education.

"Admonishments to 'join a football club' or 'take up sewing' do not help adolescents understand their sexuality," it said. "They merely reinforce the idea that sex is uncontrollable and not to be discussed."

Information only helps if contraceptives are available, it added.

It called for confidential advice about use of contraceptives and choices of methods, affordable services and involvement of local young people so that others can learn from their peers.

"Many young people think they cannot become pregnant the first time they have intercourse, or if they only have sex occasionally, or unless both parties have an orgasm," it said.

Court upholds lesbian law student's claim against military recruitment

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A state university law school cannot bring military recruiters on campus because the Pentagon discriminates against homosexuals, a judge has ruled. A lawyer in the case says the ruling should be applied to all the state's universities.

Military recruiting at the State University of New York at Buffalo's law school violates an anti-discrimination order issued by Gov. Mario Cuomo, State Supreme Court Justice Diane Lebedeff ruled Thursday in New York City.

"There is no dispute the military currently engages in sexual orientation discrimination in its employment practices, not welcoming within its active ranks gay men, lesbians and bisexuals," Lebedeff wrote.

Evan Wolfson, an attorney for Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, the gay-rights legal group that filed the lawsuit, said the ruling named only the Buffalo school.

But he said it should legally be applicable to the entire state university system, which has 400,000 students on 64 campuses.

Ken Goldfarb, a spokesman for the university system, and Ronald Stein, a spokesman for the university in Buffalo, said they could not comment until their attorneys reviewed Lebedeff's ruling.

Stein said the university had not decided if it will follow the ruling and bar visits from military recruiters.

The case stems from a complaint filed with the New York Division of Human Rights in 1990 by Terri Mayo, a lesbian who said she was refused a job interview with the military because of her sexual orientation.

At the time, the Pentagon had an outright ban against homosexuals. That has since been modified by President Clinton's "don't ask, don't tell" policy, which allows gays and lesbians to serve as long as they remain celibate and keep quiet about their sexual orientation.

The Division of Human Rights' Office of Lesbian and Gay Concerns ruled in Mayo's favor, but Human Rights Commissioner Margarita Rosa overturned that decision last year after the university appealed.

Rosa said state and federal law required the university to allow military recruitment.

Mayo, now a prosecutor with the Linn County district attorney's office in Albany, Ore., referred calls for comment to Lambda.

The university had claimed it might lose Pentagon research grants if it barred military recruiters. The school received $2.9 million in Pentagon funds last year.

Federal law prohibits such grants for schools that forbid military recruitment.

But Lebedeff said the risk of losing Pentagon funds was irrelevant, and noted that other law schools in New York state, including the University of Albany, Columbia University and Syracuse University, prohibit or limit military recruitment.

11 children, teacher die in crash

WARWICK, England (AP) — A van carrying students home from an orchestra performance in London smashed into the back of a truck and burst into flames Thursday, killing 11 children and their music teacher.

Ten of the children, aged 12 and 13, and their 35-year-old teacher died in the blazing wreck. An 11th child, whom motorists pulled from the van before it caught fire, died of injuries Thursday night at Birmingham Hospital.

Three other children who also were pulled from the wreckage remained hospitalized Friday in serious condition with head and internal injuries.

Firefighters had to cut away the roof of the burned-out van to remove the victims' charred bodies. The van's bench seats were not equipped with seat belts, emergency personnel said.

The crash occurred before dawn

Thursday on the M40 highway in central England.

The teacher was driving when the van ran into the back of a road repair truck parked at the edge of the highway with its lights on, Warwickshire police said. The cause was under investigation.

The children were on their way back to Hagley High School, a Roman Catholic school 25 miles northwest of Warwick.

They had taken part Wednesday night in the School's Promenade Concert at London's Royal Albert Hall before an audience that included Queen Elizabeth II's youngest son, Prince Edward. Schools from all over Britain take part in the annual orchestra concert.

On Nov. 10, nine Americans on a tourist bus and its British driver died when the bus ran into the back of a moving van and plunged down an embankment near Canterbury in southeast England.
