'That Night' to bring Christmas story to prime time television

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

A Pampa church's Christmas presentation is to make prime time television.

Yes, at 7 p.m. on Christmas night, Dec. 25, Central Baptist Church's production of That Night is to be broadcast on the local NBC affiliate, Channel 4.

It is the third year that the Christmas drama has been presented on a local television channel, according to Zan Walker, minister of youth and music at the church. However, this is the first time a television station has contacted Central Baptist and the first time the play has been given a prime time slot, he said.

"We're really excited about this," Walker said, explaining that having the Christmas drama aired at that time is a dream come true for him. He said he was particularly glad to see the play broadcast to Lubbock, western Oklahoma Panhandle and eastern New Mexico areas.

"The televised part is an extension of what's going to happen in that room," he said.

But for those who wish to see That Night in person, it will be presented at Central Baptist Church, Browning and Starkweather, on Sunday, Dec. 8, and Monday, Dec. 9. Performances will begin on both nights at 7 p.m.

That Night is free to the public; however, because of limited seating, 800 tickets are being given for each night for a total of 1,600 tickets. A few tickets are still available and may be obtained through the church office, Walker said.

If all the tickets have been given out, persons who would still like to see the program may come to the church and wait to see if any seats are still available due to no shows. At 10 minutes before the presentation, the doors will be opened to non-ticket holders to take any available seats, Walker said.

That Night is the combined efforts of approximately 100 Central Baptist Church members. The presentation was the brainchild of Walker, who compiled the script from a number of different sources.

Janis Conner as Mary, left, and Jeff McCormick as Joseph, right, play with Conner's son, Timothy Craig Conner, as Baby Jesus in the manger.

Walker explained.

Although the 50-member sanctuary choir is central to the production, many others add their talents to the hour-long program.

Each year the title remains the same, but the music and other aspects of the drama are changed to keep it fresh, Walker said.

This year, the choir will perform 13 pieces — only four of which are retained from the previous year, he said. Also, a re-enactment of the Lord's Supper and an Ascension of Christ have been included in the 1991 version.

In the Ascension scene, Christ, suspended on wires and lifted by a winch, will appear to rise all the way up into the auditorium as the choir sings "Glory," an arrangement by Bob Krgstad, Walker said.

"I hope it will be nice for visual effect," he said.

Four years ago, That Night was presented to a sparse crowd of 150, Walker recalled. Last year, the church's auditorium was filled to capacity both nights.

"It's become larger than what I anticipated," he said. "There's been a lot of work and a lot of energy on everybody's part."

Because of the extensive dramatic demands in the play, Lou Ann Seabourm, speech communications instructor at West Texas State University, was brought in to help coach the cast members with their parts, he said.

"To keep people coming back, we have to let them know (the play) is not the same," Walker said, adding that he selects different persons for most of the speaking parts each year.

The costumes and scenery are updated year to year, as well, he said. The outstanding scenery is the work of art director Virginia Greer and includes a manger scene, the walls of Jerusalem, and a platform of clouds with special effects for the angel.

One memorable scene calls for the entry of the wise men and their respective courts — approximately 20 people are involved. This year, one of the wise men will be carried into the auditorium on a pole chair. The costumes for this scene are exquisitely ornate and brilliantly colored. Costumes for other scenes are more in keeping of biblical times, basic fabrics in earth-tones stripes and solids.

Pampa woman convicted in drug trafficking case

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

AMARILLO — A Pampa woman has been found guilty by a federal jury of seven felony counts of trafficking and distribution of cocaine and crack.

Gloria Reed, whose address is listed as 1141 Huff Rd., was found guilty during a trial that went on five weeks and involved a drug distribution ring in operation from 1985 until 1991, federal records show.

Only two of the nine counts against Reed were dropped by the jury.

Eight defendants were on trial in the case, with six of them found guilty of at least one count each.

The trafficking all occurred in Pampa and Amarillo, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Sharon Kimbell, with virtually all activity being on Pampa's south side and in areas of Amarillo with large minority populations.

Kimbell said, "They found her guilty of participating in a conspiracy lasting from 1985 to 1991 to bring cocaine into Pampa and Amarillo and convert it to crack. It was in turn sold to mid-level dealers who sold it on the street. She is the one who was bringing in kilo amounts and distributing it to dealers."

Kimbell said in spite of complaints by some members of the black community in Amarillo that the charges against Reed and the other defendants were part of a "racist plot," it was tips and evidence offered by members of the black community that were used to bring Reed to trial.

"Law enforcement had been investigating this for quite some time," Kimbell said. "In the summer of 1990 it came together with two indictments (of prominent, high-level black drug dealers from Amarillo).

"That caused a number of people in the black community to realize this type people could be convicted. The government had nine eyewitnesses who had participated in the dope dealing with the defendants. It's very unusual to have that many in a case."

"It is not your straightforward drug case. It was very intricate and these people are very smart."

Kimbell said the cocaine was transported from Houston to Pampa and Amarillo in a plot orchestrated largely by Reed.

Only one defendant in the case, Herbert D. Johnson Jr., was found guilty of more counts than Reed.

Reed's Houston source was a woman she met while in that city attempting to push her son's career in rap music, Kimbell stated.

The son, Jacque Mario Scott, 23, of Amarillo, was arrested Wednesday in Panhandle on charges of delivery of crack cocaine.

No other details of that arrest were available this morning from Carson County authorities.

Kimbell said of Reed, "She is realistically looking at spending the rest of her life in federal prison."

Sentencing of Reed will take place "in several months," Kimbell said.

Reed was taken into custody by U.S. marshals because she is considered a high risk to flee from authorities, officials said.

Kimbell stated, "In the federal system the presumption is that once a person is convicted, they are a flight risk and a danger to continue dealing dope. They have the burden of proof that neither of those things are true. Unless she proves that, she will remain in custody for several months."

City, Clean Pampa Inc. join forces to open Recycling Buy-Back Center

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The city of Pampa and Clean Pampa Inc. are embarking on a project designed to allow residents the opportunity to help the environment.

The new venture is a Recycling Buy-Back Center which is scheduled for opening at noon on Dec. 19 at 707 Municipal Drive in Hobart Street Park. The center will purchase aluminum cans for the going rate, an estimated 25 cents a pound, and will take donations of plastic (with recycle symbols 1 and 2), glass (food and beverage containers) and tin (steel food cans), said Pamela Locke, executive coordinator of Clean Pampa Inc.

"Opening the recycling center is a cooperative effort of Clean Pampa and the city of Pampa," Locke said.

The first date that such a facility was discussed by the Clean Pampa Inc. board of directors was in May 1989. Those discussions, which joined to include the city of Pampa, are finally reaching fruition.

"Our interest is in landfill avoidance, therefore conserving as much land as we can and getting recycled commodities back into the mainstream," Locke said. "Good products can be made from recyclables."

Locke said the polyester fill in many jackets comes from recycled plastic drink bottles, and that some carpeting is made of recycled items.

The recycling center will consist of two buildings, one to house employees and the scales for weighing goods and the other to house a can crusher. The 10x20 building to hold the can crusher is under construction now by the sanitation department. It was designed by John Thacker of the Clean Pampa board.

Along with the city and the non-profit Clean Pampa organization, the facility is getting a boost from the help of Greg Dankworth, owner of Scrap Processing in Amarillo, said Locke.

Dankworth will take all of the recyclable material collected at the Pampa facility and get it back into the recycling mainstream. Any profits made after the transportation costs will be put into educational materials on recycling for students in Pampa Independent School District. Dankworth is also providing the can crusher and some bins.

'Our interest is in landfill avoidance, therefore conserving as much land as we can and getting recycled commodities back into the mainstream.'

Also, Wal-Mart has agreed to allow the green recycling roll-off container that has been in the Wal-Mart parking lot to be moved to the new center.

Locke pointed out that donations of recycled goods can only be taken while the center is open, which will be from noon to 5 p.m. on Thursdays, and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

"We can only take the donations during our open time. If we need to be open longer, we will work that out. Please do not leave recycled materials if it's not open," Locke said.

Two Green Thumb employees will provide the staffing for the center. Green Thumb is a federally subsidized program aimed at getting older citizens back into the work force.

The recycled materials of tin cans, glass and plastics will be baled in Amarillo and shipped on to be recycled.

"He (Dankworth) has really worked with us and made it all possible," Locke said.

Pampa City Manager Glen Hackler said the city may be a little behind in setting up such a program, but the program planned has been researched and is believed to be one that will survive past the initial flurry of usage.

"A number of citizens have expressed an interest (in recycling) and it's one of the areas that is growing in terms of interest and participation in the state and nation in dealing with the solid waste crisis," Hackler said.

Hackler said the city and Clean Pampa have observed what other communities have been doing with the recycling effort in order to try to get a good grasp on the situation.

Other agencies to get Crime Stoppers tips

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa Crime Stoppers' board of directors has voted to begin sharing tips with not only local police but also the Gray County Sheriff's Department and Texas Department of Public Safety Pampa office.

Chief of Police Jim Laramore said he was notified of the change by letter this week and approves of the measure.

"They elected to start taking tips and giving them to agencies that might be affected and I think it's an excellent idea," Laramore said. "What we've done to assist in that is call the telephone company and put call forwarding on the Crime Stoppers line ... so that callers will have a better chance of speaking to a person instead of a (answering) machine."

The Crime Stoppers board is a group of citizens who assist law enforcement agencies in solving crimes through the paying of rewards for useful tips.

For weeks the board has been meeting behind closed doors with representatives of the city and police department regarding complaints that citizen tips are not being handled in an expedient manner.

A member of the board, who requested anonymity, said, "The board felt like possibly the information had gone stale and got to be too everyday for the police. We wanted a fresher approach to those tips. By putting them into the hands of law enforcement that hadn't seen them, possibly we could get a fresher approach."

The board said when Crime Stoppers gets a tip, it will be dispatched that day to the Gray County Sheriff's Department, Highway Patrol and patrol division of the police force, as well as the Texas Rangers.

"We tried to establish how every agency could utilize all this information," the board member stated. "With the bylaws we have, if Crime Stoppers is having any of this information stifled (before it gets to other agencies), we will have to find out why."

Laramore noted that in Frith the Crime Stoppers organization has begun sharing information with law enforcement agencies throughout Hutchinson County, which has proven very successful.

"We have had some difficulty getting tips worked as they are being called in," Laramore said, "and I want to eliminate that. I want to work with the Crime Stoppers board as much as we can and we're going to be trying several things in the coming weeks."

He added, "We still don't want to know who the caller is, we still don't want to try and find out. We do ask they identify that they are a Crime Stoppers caller and are calling with a tip. Whoever is answering the phone will then begin a series of questions. I would like to see these tips get more immediate attention."

A Crime Stoppers press release this week stated, "Crime Stoppers wants the citizens of Pampa and Gray County to be aware that they may inquire as to why the cases (they gave information on) were placed (by police) into inactive, unfounded and 'cleared by other means' files."

Tips provided for recycling materials

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Recycling of plastic, glass, tin cans and aluminum is growing in the state of Texas and across the nation as people are being educated on the environment. Many communities are taking steps to implement voluntary recycling by residents, and that is the step about to be in place in Pampa with a new recycling center.

Many residents are already recycling some items while others are just beginning to understand the importance of recycling to save valuable landfill space.

The new Recycling Buy-Back Center in Pampa, scheduled for opening at noon Dec. 19 in Hobart Street Park, is the city of Pampa and Clean Pampa Inc.'s effort to provide a facility for residents to help the environment.

In an effort to help provide education on what will be accepted at the new center and tips on how to prepare the recyclable items,

Pamela Locke, executive coordinator of Clean Pampa Inc., provides the following tips and information:

PLASTIC: Type 1 PETE and Type 2 HDPE will be the only types of plastic accepted at the center. Examples of these two types of plastics are milk jugs and two-liter soft drink bottles. Look for the recycling symbol on the bottom of the container with a 1 or a 2 inside the symbol.

The plastic containers need to be rinsed before placing in the recycling bins and all plastic and metal rings and lids need to be removed. Also, the plastic containers need to be compressed before being placed in the recycling bins.

GLASS: Only food and beverage containers will be accepted. The glass needs to be separated by color — white, green or brown. Examples of acceptable glass are soda bottles, beer bottles, juice containers, ketchup bottles, wine and liquor bottles and other food containers, such as pickle jars and baby food jars.

Non-acceptable forms of glass are mirrors, ceramic cups and plates, clay flower pots, crystal, light bulbs, window glass, heat resistant ovenware and drinking glasses.

The glass food and beverage containers need to be rinsed and have any rings or lids removed before placing in the bins.

ALUMINUM: Beverage cans will be accepted.

TIN: All steel food cans will be accepted. The cans need to be rinsed and have the labels removed before placing them in the recycling bins.

The new Recycling Buy-Back Center will pay the going rate for aluminum cans. All other recyclable items will be accepted on a donation basis only. Also, Locke said anyone who wants to donate aluminum cans can do so.

Hours of operation of the new center will be from noon to 5 p.m. on Thursdays, from 8 to 5 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

People can get to the facility by entering Hobart Street Park from Hobart and proceeding down Municipal Drive past the animal shelter and the City Service Center to the bright blue building on the right side of the street, which is the recycling center. Or people can enter from Brown Street by proceeding north on Municipal Drive for about one block, with the recycling center on the left side (behind the Hickory Hut).

For more information on recycling, contact Locke at 665-2514.

setting up a program, it won't be short-lived. It will be a lasting one ... We really feel like the one we're setting up will be able to sustain our needs and grow, rather than be something that is a fleeting moment of a way to help deal with solid waste."

Hackler said he expects heavy usage of the facility and if deemed necessary, the facility could expand at the present location or other locations could be developed.

"The less we can landfill, the better our cost containment is going to be and the better we're going to be for the environment," Hackler said.

The city also has established a used oil repository, which is across from the new recycling center. Used oil can be placed in the repository for recycling.

Anderson reunited with 'incredible sister'

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP) — A jubilant Terry Anderson was reunited today with sister Peggy Say, who had pressed presidents and prime ministers in a dogged campaign to get him freed. Doctors said Anderson was apparently in good health despite his 6 1/2-year captivity.

"What can I say? It's just great. It's been so long," said the 44-year-old journalist, the last American hostage in Lebanon, from the steps of the U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, a way station for many freed hostages.

Doctors examining Anderson said today he has a sinus infection, a minor lung problem and pains in his knee from a pre-captivity injury, but reported no major health problems.

"Mr. Anderson told his doctors he feels good, is enjoying being with his loved ones and is looking to his future," the hospital said in a statement.

In an intermittent pre-dawn rain, more than 200 shouting and whooping people greeted Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was freed Wednesday after 2,455 days in captivity. He responded with waves and large, toothy grins.

He held the hand of his 6-year-old daughter Sulome, born three months after he was captured. Also with him was Madeleine Bassil, Sulome's Lebanese mother.

On the ground in Wiesbaden, the little girl leaned against Anderson, smiling, his big hand on her shoulder.

As Anderson stepped from the helicopter that shuttled him from a nearby U.S. air base, Mrs. Say dashed forward, gave him a huge hug and stroked his face. They held each other tightly and rocked back and forth.

On the hospital steps she stood at his side, wiping tears of joy from her eyes. Asked about the tenacious efforts of Mrs. Say to get him freed, Anderson said: "Fantastic, wasn't it? It's great to have a sister like that."

"You get yourself in trouble and she just comes along and gets you out," he joked, and the crowd laughed.

Mrs. Say's unrelenting quest to free her brother made her arguably the best-known campaigner for the hostages' freedom. She wrote a book, traveled widely to meet world leaders, and even became involved in covert diplomacy, meeting at one point with an associate of notorious terrorist Abu Nidal.

On meeting reporters Wednesday, Anderson referred to her as "my incredible sister Peg."

"Welcome Home!" and "Merry Christmas!" yelled people in the crowd, many of them packed on the balconies of two floors of the hospital.

Bivins concerned about ruling on groundwater control

AMARILLO — State Sen. Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo) this week told managers from West Texas water conservation districts that he is gravely concerned about a recent opinion issued by Attorney General Dan Morales reversing laws that have guaranteed local control of groundwater for 50 years.

Bivins said he is considering filing legislation ensuring that citizens of the High Plains regain local control of groundwater.

Bivins met with water district managers in Amarillo on Monday to discuss the attorney general's recent ruling. The opinion stemmed from a case involving the Edwards Aquifer in Central Texas.

"The Water Commission asserts the ruling affects only the Edwards dispute. But after reading the attorney general's opinion, I would argue that it has much broader implications," Bivins said. "The current commission might not have designs on other aquifers, but what about future commissions?"

The Morales ruling overturned a 50-year precedent that has allowed water conservation districts to manage local groundwater resources, Bivins said.

Water conservation district managers meeting with Bivins were Boyd Vaughn and John Simpson of MacKenzie Municipal Water Authority, Richard Bowers of North Plains Groundwater Conservation District, John Spearman of Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District, Glenn Olson and Kenneth Diller of Dallam County Underwater District, and Johnny Horton of Llano Estacado Water District.

Former Pampa High football coach R.E. (Swede) Lee wanted to be in Texas Tech's Jones Stadium Saturday night when the Harvesters meet Sweetwater in the Class 4A quarterfinals, but he had to pass up the game due to a prior commitment.

Lee, who guided the 1971 Harvesters to the school's first district title in 21 years, is announcing his candidacy Saturday for the U.S. Congress.

Since he can't attend the game, Lee instead phoned a congratulatory message to longtime friend Bill Harris in Pampa. Harris relayed the message to present Harvester coach Dennis Cavalier.

"He sure wanted to be at the game, but he wanted everyone to know he was proud of the Harvesters and would be pulling for them," Harris said.

Harris said Lee now lives in Texarkana, Ark., and has served as the executive vice president for the Chamber of Commerce for the past five or six years.

Lee coached the Harvesters for four years, succeeding Eural Ramsey as head coach in 1968. After going 5-15 his first two years, Lee led the Harvesters to a 6-4 record in 1970, the school's first winning season since 1966. After Pampa won its first district championship since 1950 and posting an 8-2 record in 1971, Lee resigned to become the freshman coach at Texas A&M.

Harris said Lee was a popular coach with both the players and fans.

"He was one of those 'get things done type of guy' besides being a very good football coach," Harris said. "He had a strong, positive influence on the lives of the players. Swede has been very successful at everything he's done and I look for him to be a success in politics as well."

Harris' son, Rick, now a local attorney, was coached by Lee. John Jenkins, the University of Houston head coach and ex-Harvester, also played for Lee.

After leaving A&M, Lee returned to the high school coaching ranks at Texarkana where he led that school to two state titles. Lee went back into college coaching as an assistant at Rice University for two years and again came back to Texarkana, where he won another state championship.

After that 1971 championship season under Lee, Pampa wouldn't advance into the playoffs again until 1990 with Cavalier as head coach.

Braun waives hearing in two murder cases

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — A man accused of killing five store clerks in a four-day, multi-state robbery spree that included Texas waived a preliminary hearing Wednesday in the slaying of two Garden City women.

Gregg Francis Braun, 30, of Garden City, who was sentenced to life in prison earlier this year for killing a New Mexico convenience store clerk, appeared in Finney County District Court to waive the hearing. He is scheduled to appear Friday to enter a plea to numerous felony charges.

Braun is charged in the July 1989 slaying of Barbara Kochendorfer and Mary Rains. He allegedly abducted them from the separate convenience stores where they worked and shot them in the head. He is charged in Finney County with two counts of aggravated robbery, two counts of aggravated kidnapping, two counts of felony murder and in the alternative, first-degree premeditated murder.

Braun was sentenced to life in prison in September in New Mexico for killing Geraldine Valdez, the last clerk Braun is accused of killing during the alleged four-day robbery spree in July 1989.

He had pleaded guilty but mentally ill in the shooting death of Mrs. Valdez, a clerk at a Springer, N.M., convenience store. His Santa Fe jury deadlocked over the death penalty, making the life sentence automatic.

Braun also faces murder charges in Texas and Oklahoma, which have the death penalty. He is accused of killing a flower shop employee in Ardmore, Okla., and photo-processing store owner E.P. "Pete" Spurrier in Pampa, Texas.

Kansas does not have the death penalty. Braun appeared Wednesday in Finney County District Court in leg shackles under tight security. Magistrate Judge Russell Jennings ordered an electronic search of courtroom spectators before Braun was brought in from the county jail.

When the issue of the preliminary hearing was resolved, the court took up a prosecution motion to endorse Dwight Jurgens, a reporter for The Garden City Telegram, as a potential witness at Braun's trial. Jurgens interviewed Braun in the Finney County Jail for a newspaper story.

County Attorney Ricklin Pierce said a reporter has no attorney-client privilege that allows him to keep information confidential and that there is no reason he should not be allowed to call Jurgens as a witness.

Dennis Bahr, Braun's court-appointed attorney, argued against endorsing Jurgens as a witness. He said Jurgens' interview did not provide him with any information relevant to the trial.

Bahr said the test of calling a reporter as a witness is whether the reporter has information that is relevant to proving the charges against the defendant or relevant to proving the defense asserted by the defendant.

"What Dwight Jurgens has in his personal knowledge simply doesn't measure up to that," Bahr said.

In his interview with Jurgens, Braun denied killing either Garden City woman.

The judge ruled Jurgens could have relevant information and would be endorsed as a witness.

The newspaper had filed a motion to quash Jurgens' subpoena for the preliminary hearing.

Bill Bolin, a Garden City lawyer representing the newspaper, said Jurgens' responsibilities include covering trials and that being subpoenaed to testify at the trial would interfere with that responsibility. Witnesses generally are not allowed in the courtroom unless they are testifying.

Bolin said Jurgens would agree to testify if he did not have to be sequestered from the courtroom during the trial. But the judge said that is a matter for Bolin to take up with the county attorney, defense attorney and trial judge.

MHMR adopts emergency rules

AUSTIN (AP) — As allegations mount about abuses in private psychiatric hospitals, state mental health officials have adopted emergency rules they say will increase their ability to police the institutions.

"It goes without saying that the rights of patients in private psychiatric hospitals must be closely guarded," Dennis Jones, commissioner of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said Wednesday.

"With these new rules, we are making a major stride toward assuring that end," he said.

MHMR reported receiving 240 complaints since Sept. 1 involving private psychiatric hospitals in Texas. That is nearly 2 1/2 times as many complaints that the agency received for the 12-month period ending in August.

Most of the complaints alleged improper discharges and billings, and inappropriate treatment. Eight people have alleged unlawful emergency detention.

"The volume of complaints and the severity of the alleged offenses require immediate action," Jones said.

The new rules increase the powers of MHMR to inspect the hospitals, prohibit so-called headhunting fees for patient referrals, and forbid coercion of voluntary patients to continue treatment.

In addition, the rules state that no person may be admitted to a private psychiatric hospital unless they are personally evaluated by the physician who authorizes admission.

The rules also require the hospitals to present each patient a four-page "Patient Bill of Rights" that assures patients have the right to communicate with people outside the hospital. The bill of rights offers a toll-free number to file complaints concerning private hospitals.

The emergency rules took effect immediately and will continue for 120 days. After that period, the MHMR board will consider whether to make the rules permanent.

MHMR's action came shortly after Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock called on state health-related agencies to put together a "SWAT" team to handle the solve problems in the private hospitals.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has launched an investigation into private psychiatric hospitals from three of the nation's largest chains.

Many former patients have charged the institutions with improper treatment, misuse of government funds, and overbilling of insurance companies.

The complaints mirror those aired at hearings around the state conducted by a Senate Health and Human Services subcommittee.

Officials from Texas health-related agencies have said that state law has prevented them from policing abuses at the institutions.

State leaders question special session for redistricting

AUSTIN (AP) — State elected leaders have questioned whether the Legislature could legally meet in a special session to redraw state House district boundaries.

"The question is whether constitutionally ... we in a special legislative session have the authority to redistrict," said Gov. Ann Richards, who met for about one hour Wednesday with Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales asked Richards to call a special session to give lawmakers the chance to adopt a House redistricting plan that would comply with federal law protecting minority voting rights.

The U.S. Justice Department has already rejected one House plan adopted by the Legislature, saying it discriminates against Hispanics. House leaders submitted a modified plan, but that was rejected Monday by a three-judge federal panel.

Richards said she hoped a compromise House plan could be reached because she said the state constitution would not allow her to call a special session for redistricting.

The constitution requires that lawmakers tend to legislative redistricting in the first regular session following the census. That has already passed.

Bullock, Lewis, D-Fort Worth, and Richards also warned of devastating consequences if the Texas Supreme Court next week rules against the state over the state Senate redistricting plan.

The state Supreme Court on Tuesday will consider a lawsuit by Republicans, who claim Morales and state leaders acted illegally by reaching a settlement on state Senate districts without a vote of the Legislature.

"It is astounding to me that the Supreme Court of the state of Texas might reach the conclusion that the state's chief attorney cannot represent his clients, elected officials and the Legislature," Richards said.

"The ramifications of such a decision are simply staggering," she said.

"We've got so many courts with their feet in the water, it is unbelievable," she added.

Meanwhile, House leaders and plaintiffs in a lawsuit brought by minorities against the state House plan met into the night to try to reach an agreement, Lewis said.

Juvenile Probation Board to meet Friday

The Juvenile Probation Board of Gray County is scheduled to discuss electronic monitoring and an application for an intensive supervision program during a 1:30 p.m. Friday meeting.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of diversionary funds already received and paid out and a discussion of holding juveniles after the new county jail opens.

A status report from Chief Probation Officer Ed Barker is scheduled to be given.

The meeting will be held in the second floor courtroom of the Gray County Courthouse.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Altered states turn to more tax breaks

One of the best features of America's federal system of government is that state governments compete with one another on how best to operate. Consider how, just in the past year, five of the other biggest states faced their budget crises. Three raised taxes and saw the crisis worsen. Two cut spending and restrained or cut taxes, eliminating their deficits.

• California. Gov. Pete Wilson's $8 billion tax increase was supposed to help close the $14 billion deficit. The deficit remains, and some estimates now figure it could run as high as $3 billion more. The governor's tax increase has sparked a tax revolt among Californians.

• Connecticut. In August, Gov. Lowell Weicker rammed a record tax increase through the state legislature. Last month he announced the tax increase has not, as expected, closed the deficit. Another $175 million in red ink is anticipated out of a $7.6 billion budget. To close the deficit, the kamikaze governor has proposed yet more increases in "fees." The state legislature has balked, and is considering repeal of the new 4.5 percent income tax. Republican Edward Krawiecki, the House minority leader, was blunt: "The governor's economic theories have stunk from day one."

• New York. Between 1983 and 1990, Gov. Mario Cuomo boosted state spending 104 percent and raised taxes to pay for it. Now the bills are due. Last month his office announced the state could run up a budget deficit as high as $3.6 billion. Reported The New York Times: "Mr. Cuomo's presidential aspirations also could hinge on negotiating the budget shoals." Cuomo has said he will not run for president without first solving the state deficit problem. It's doubtful he could squeeze any more out of taxpayers, so one solution might be a multi-year budget flim-flam that would cloak the deficit.

Those are the three Tax-and-Deficit governors. Two governors have been wiser.

• Michigan. The new governor, John Engler, faced a $1.1 billion deficit bequeathed him by his predecessor, James Blanchard. Gov. Engler slashed spending enough to balance the budget and froze property tax assessments. He also tried to cut assessments 30 percent to provide more than $1 billion in tax relief, but was rebuffed by the high-tax Democratic state house. He's putting the issue on the ballot next year, letting Michiganans enact their own tax relief.

• Massachusetts. New governor William Weld faced the bleak economic legacy of former governor Michael Dukakis: an $830 million budget deficit. Gov. Weld balanced his budget with a 5.5 percent cut in spending. "He also took a bold supply-side move," reported Reason magazine writer Rick Henderson, "repealing a new 5-percent tax on professional services."

Two messages are clear for any politician willing to hear them. Raising taxes does not cut deficits; it perpetuates them. And voters across America are sick of high taxes that only pay for government waste.

DEAD HEAT

A deference to women's liberty

Wanda Bruce, a 50-year-old Virginia woman who had silicone breast implants after losing both breasts to cancer last spring, recently had the chance to comment on the risks of implants. "I am a gambler," she said. "I'd rather have quality of life than quantity. Not that I think implants will take my life, but I am almost at that point that I'd have them anyway."

Lynn Carter, a North Carolina woman, didn't have breast cancer but felt her need for implants also was great. "I'm 5 feet 9, I wear a size 12 and I wore a size A bra," she told the New York Times. "You know, it means so much for a woman not to be small, not to feel disfigured because God didn't make her enormous."

Last month, an advisory panel of experts convened by the federal Food and Drug Administration was asked to decide which of these women should be deprived of the option to have this surgery. Despite clear evidence that silicone implants carry significant risks, the panel made the surprising decision to treat American women as competent grown-ups capable of choosing for themselves what hazards to brave. Even though the panel had voted just the day before that implant manufacturers hadn't demonstrated the safety of these devices, its members voted 10-0 to recommend that they be left on the market.

Federal regulators are well-practiced at saying two things: (1) This is dangerous and therefore will be banned, and (2) this is safe and therefore will be allowed. It is a novel approach for them to say that something can be tolerated even though it is not necessarily safe and not necessarily urgent. It suggests a growing appreciation of the fact that individuals can judge their own well-being better than government agencies.

Stephen Chapman

There is no doubt that implants meet a demand. Two million women have gotten them over the past 35 years. Some 80 percent of these were for cosmetic enlargement; the others were to reconstruct breasts lost to cancer. About 150,000 women have the surgery each year, and the number is rising. Other types of reconstruction and enlargement are available, but silicone implants are by far the most popular.

Though all these women have made their desires plain, there are still plenty of people who think such decisions are too important to leave to ordinary people. The Naderite group Public Citizen has been lobbying since 1988 for a complete ban on silicone implants. Some women who have had serious complications from the surgery agree. The FDA's ostentatious efforts to acquire a reputation for toughness gave every reason to think it would take some kind of stern action.

Most of the complications are annoying but not terribly dangerous. In some cases, the tissue around the implant becomes uncomfortably tight and hard. In others, infections arise.

But the experiences of some women have been truly scary. The implants can rupture, causing silicone to leak into the body and requiring additional surgery. Silicone leakage has been blamed for an immune disorder called scleroderma, which causes severe tightening of the skin. One woman lost her nipples in surgery to remove spilled silicone.

Critics say the implants may raise the risk of cancer or make breast cancer harder to detect. The New York Times said that an examination of manufacturers' data shows that as many as one in three patients has serious complications.

But are these grounds for a ban? Public Citizen disputed a survey sponsored by plastic surgeons which claimed that 92 percent of women with breast implants said they would have the operation again. By Public Citizen's reckoning, just 82 percent felt positive about their implants. Should the 82 percent who are satisfied be penalized to appease the 18 percent who aren't?

Certainly women shouldn't undergo a risky procedure without being fully informed of the dangers. And manufacturers have an obligation to investigate those dangers thoroughly. Assuring that consent is informed, however, is far different from mandating that consent is forbidden.

The FDA panel could have come down in the middle by urging that these implants be allowed after breast cancer but not for simple enlargement. But it courageously refused to compromise on the principle that the individual woman's liberty should take priority over everything else.

"I don't want to be in the position of having to judge a woman's perception of her need," said Nancy Dubler, a New York lawyer who served on the panel. Dubler and her colleagues weren't prepared to assert that they know what's best for every American woman. Theirs is the kind of humility Washington could use more of.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Dec. 5, the 339th day of 1991. There are 26 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Two hundred years ago, on Dec. 5, 1791, composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart died in Vienna, Austria, at the age of 35.

On this date:

In 1776, the first scholastic fraternity in America, Phi Beta Kappa, was organized at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va.

In 1782, the first president who was a native citizen of the United States, Martin Van Buren, was born in Kinderhook, N.Y.

In 1932, German physicist Albert Einstein was granted a visa making it possible for him to travel to the United States.

In 1933, at 4:32 p.m. CST, national Prohibition came to an end as Utah became the 36th state to ratify the 21st Amendment to the Constitution, thereby repealing the 18th Amendment.

Auburn walks a lonely road

ATHENS, Ga. — You could see it in the faces of the Auburn faithful who came here to see their team lose in football to Georgia last month, 37-27.

Their once-mighty world is crumbling. Who remembers the last time Auburn had a losing season? Today, as I write this, it is one loss away from its first in nearly a decade.

The name Eric Ramsey pierces the heart of each Auburn fan.

Eric Ramsey is the former Auburn football player who says, and has tapes that allegedly back him up, that Auburn cheats.

Eric Ramsey says Auburn coaches and alumni pay players. The rules say you can't do that.

Eric Ramsey has already ruined this season for Auburn and he isn't likely finished. Harsh penalties from the National Collegiate Athletic Association may follow. And the smart money says Auburn's head coach, Pay Dye, won't survive the scandal with his job.

The joke is a cruel one: "What does NCAA stand for now? 'Need Cash, Attend Auburn.'"

Jan Kemp was Georgia's Eric Ramsey. You don't think one person can bring a powerful, big-time collegiate football program to its knees?

Jan Kemp, the former Georgia professor, claimed Bulldog athletes were being given preferential treatment in the classroom. She won a lawsuit, got her name in all the papers and brought a seven-year famine to Georgia that may just now be ending.

Georgia went ballistic after Jan Kemp and made its academic regulations for athletes harsher than, in some cases, for regular students.

Since Jugular Jan, Georgia must have led the nation each year in athletes who flunked out. From the top of the Southeastern Conference, the Bulldogs sunk to lower middle.

With the victory over Auburn, their second since 1982, Georgia showed signs of ending their slide while Auburn's is just beginning.

But at least Jan Kemp, I think, was sincere. A little goofy at times, but sincere, and she did have a part in pioneering what seems to be a trend towards stricter academic regulations for athletes in most schools. (Some still offer majors designed for athletes so they can hide their dummies.)

But Eric Ramsey. He's no crusader. If he, indeed, was given money by coaches and alumni and thought it so wrong, why didn't he blow the whistle back then?

I've got a feeling Eric Ramsey thinks he's going to get something out of this. His name has been in all the papers, too. Big deal. What else does he expect? A book? A movie?

It has been a great run for Auburn as it was for Georgia in the early '80s. But one voice is pushing the Tigers down as it did at Georgia.

You win and you start. Florida cheerleaders were chanting after Florida beat Georgia: "We're Going to the Sugar Bowl and You Can't Go."

Steve Spurrier, the Florida coach, took a verbal poke at Georgia's Ray Goff after the game. The feeling you can't be knocked down makes you do things like that.

But nobody is safe. Georgia knows it and now so does Auburn. The Jan Kemps and the Eric Ramseys are out there in the dark, just waiting to spring forth.

Georgia's sympathies, or at least mine, to you, Auburn.

We've walked down that lonely road too.

To cut taxes, trim military budget

By CHUCK STONE

Like Mark Twain's weather, everybody talks about tax cuts, but nobody does anything about them — at least, anything that will satisfy everybody.

As late as the latter part of October, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said that he did not expect a tax bill to be enacted this year.

What about some kind of jobs creation bill? Probably not. Republicans have always had a blind spot when it comes to the federal government's active intervention to solve economic problems: Cutting taxes is preferable to creating jobs. Producing tanks is more important than saving babies.

And neither one will help a stressed-out economy.

But some kind of pump priming is necessary to pull the economy out of its recession.

• Middle-income families are being dangerously squeezed. Industries are laying off people faster than a shooting star's trajectory. And things will get worse, George Bush's "what-me-worry" serenity notwithstanding.

He knows this. Otherwise, he would not have taken off his Gen. Custer uniform and agreed to sign the Democrat-sponsored extra benefits bill for 1.7 million unemployed workers.

If George Bush were to really have his patrician way, the only tax cut he would implement would be for capital gains. If he is forced to make budget cuts, he will "dis" those groups who need government intervention the most by proposing cuts that decimate social welfare programs.

Perhaps he did not hear the one message that managed to stagger out of the recent elections — a burgeoning awareness in America for embracing the Wofford Doctrine.

In case you have already forgotten the name, Harris Wofford, D-Pa., won re-election to the U.S. Senate by defeating former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, a man so close to Bush that the president admitted he was "depressed" by the decisive humiliation. (Wags quipped that it wasn't clear whether Bush was lamenting Thornburgh's defeat, or the defeat of the Bush administration to which Thornburgh was tied tighter than straps on an electric chair.)

The Wofford Doctrine placed Americans as No. 1 on the list of priorities. "We've got to start taking care of our own first," Wofford said in his message about affordable health care for all Americans.

Carried to its logical conclusion, the Wofford Doctrine means first taking care of Americans who are in dire need of some form of economic relief. A capital gains tax cut is like helping wealthy people to save money on gasoline for their yachts.

Recently, the Heritage Foundation, a respectable repository of conservative cogitation, offered a 29-page proposal, "The Tax Cut Budget that America Needs."

Erudite and thoughtfully put together, Heritage's tax strategies claim that the elimination of several programs — such as the Agriculture Department's Conservation Reserve Farm Subsidy program, federal water subsidies and honey and dairy subsidies — can save $262 billion over five years.

Typical of conservative myopia, the Heritage proposals don't touch a still bloated defense budget. Even George Bush conceded on Sept. 27 that the defense budget must be pruned. Democrats agreed. But they plan to substitute an ax for scissors.

Some kind of tax relief must be passed, however, if families are going to help resuscitate the economy. But tax relief unaccompanied by severe defense budget cuts will only worsen the budget deficit.

Surely, Republicans do not want to still be guilty of what they spent the last century accusing Democrats of doing.

Haitian refugees say they prefer death to going back to Haiti

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP) — Haitian refugees have only life's necessities at an emergency shelter run by the U.S. military. Yet many are so desperate they say they would rather die than return to their impoverished homeland.

"I will not go back," said Marie Zette Joseph, 36, one of more than 5,000 refugees shepherded to the U.S. naval base here. "They'd have to shoot me here."

Frantz Joseph, who risked his life by taking to the sea in a cramped, rickety sailboat, said he would consider returning only if ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide were restored to power and the military coup overturned.

"I will never go back to Haiti. I'd rather be dead than go back," he said through an interpreter. "I pray to the Lord I can stay. I want to come to the United States."

He ventured across shark-infested waters because, he said, his family was killed and his house was burned after Aristide's overthrow on Sept. 30.

Nudged by the wind on a 600-mile journey, the boat people sought freedom in the United States only to find themselves at the center of a legal wrangle few of them understand.

More than 500 of them were returned to their homeland by the U.S. government, which feared that granting them asylum would only encourage more to risk the perilous trip. The U.S. government contends the Haitians are fleeing poverty, not persecution, and are thus ineligible for asylum.

U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins halted the forced returns on Nov. 19, and on Tuesday gave the government a week to come up with better procedures for screening the Haitians and weighing their pleas for asylum. The government appealed the ban on Wednesday.

In the meantime, Coast Guard cutters are plucking the Haitians from shoddy vessels that sailors call floating coffins. Most of the refugees have been brought to Guantanamo Bay, a 45-square-mile haven leased from the only communist government in the Western Hemisphere.

Marines, soldiers, sailors and airmen have erected tent cities on the asphalt and grass of the military base. The refugees receive medicine, food, clothing, shelter and toilets. Their gripes about the stomachaches they get from the military rations have gotten promises

(AP Laserphoto)

Haitian refugees are lined up on cots in the McCalla Hangar on Guantanamo Bay Naval Air Station Wednesday. The Haitians will be moved outside into tents as they become available. About 5,000 refugees are living on the base after the Coast Guard intercepted their ships fleeing Haiti.

they'll be eating chicken, rice and beans as soon as mess kitchens start operating in a few days.

As of Wednesday, 4,876 migrants were in tent shelters at Guantanamo. Hundreds of others are on ships, and an average of 335 a day are being picked up by the Coast Guard, officials said. The base has enough troops, supplies and space to handle 10,000 Haitians.

The tent camps are surrounded by concertina and razor wire, the only thing the military had for marking boundaries.

"If I had some white picket fence, I would have put that up," said Marine Brig. Gen. George Walls, commander of a task force overseeing the camps. "We know the wire isn't pretty, but it's what we got. These people aren't prisoners. I think you'll find they're happy to be here."

Indeed, one of the rare complaints was that migrants have little opportunity to call relatives in Miami to let them know they are safe. Otherwise, the new arrivals wash laundry, play cards and kick soccer balls on free soil.

Aboard the Navy's USS Tortuga anchored in the bay, Haitians waiting to be transferred to the drab tents rested on foam rubber mats while sailors piped in reggae music.

"What we're trying to do is provide the greatest degree of health and comfort we can under the circumstances," said the Tortuga's captain, Cmdr. Allan Wall.

Almost anything would be better than what the refugees left behind in the poorest country in the hemisphere. And conditions at home are getting worse because of a U.S.-backed embargo by the Organization of American States aimed at restoring Haiti's elected leaders.

Charlie Charles, at 76 the oldest refugee in camp, said he gladly risked his life in a rickety sailboat. "I didn't want to die in my own country. I'd rather die elsewhere. Anywhere else," he said through an interpreter.

Many refugees told horror stories of Haitian troops killing family members or burning down homes.

"Life had gotten too hard," said

Micheline Celestin, 35, who left four children behind because she feared they wouldn't survive the boat trip.

"We were all resigned we were going to die. We thought we would either die at sea or we would be saved," Lamage Guerline, 20, said outside her tent. "We will not go back. We will go kicking and fighting."

A gas light does more than provide warm glowing light for the exterior of your home. It makes your house less attractive to burglars.

Both of these lamps feature heavy gauge steel posts and cast aluminum lamp heads, heat-tempered glass lenses, easy-access lens frames and corrosion-resistant acrylic enamel black finishes.

ADD AN AUTOMATIC DIMMER - $49!

Automatically dims your light during daytime and returns it to full brightness at night for convenient, economical operation.

Installation - If required, normal unobstructed installation of up to 65 feet of gas line is $90 additional, and may be financed along with your lamp purchase.

*No down payment, 10.5% APR, 36 months term, with approved credit plus applicable sales tax.

Sudden shutdown of Pan Am leaves passengers and workers stranded

MIAMI (AP) — Pan Am passengers scrambled to re-book flights during the heaviest travel time of the season and 7,500 employees found themselves out of work three weeks before Christmas when the once-glorious airline went under.

The airline, which pioneered commercial aviation, abruptly shut down Wednesday after losing its battle to erase years of losses.

Chanda Sharan of Jonesboro, Ga., sat in a baggage area at Miami International Airport with her two young daughters on their interrupted flight from Atlanta to Mexico City. But she seemed more concerned about Pan Am workers than her own predicament.

"I feel bad. I really feel bad," she said. "I'm originally from India, and we always flew Pan Am. It's been in this country for so long. It's like history."

The shutdown stranded thousands of passengers around the country, including 100 people removed from a flight to the Dominican Republic just before takeoff from New York's Kennedy Airport.

Several airlines said they would honor Pan Am tickets. But finding comparable flights during the busy holiday season is going to be difficult for many, said John Lindsey, a Pan Am vice president.

"Obviously," he said, "it's going to be tight."

"We're all in shock," he added. "It's very, very tough for a 64-year-old airline and all the people who have gone through this."

Many employees left jobless were transferring to Miami from other cities as part of an plan to transform the carrier into a smaller airline focusing on Latin America. That plan that fell apart on Tuesday.

Pilot Terry Barnes got the news when he radioed from the air for the gate numbers of connecting flights. He was told there wouldn't be any connecting flights.

Harry Tomisaka, a 23-year fleet service veteran from San Francisco, walked into work Wednesday — payday — and found he no longer had a job.

"We came up to work and they just told us we couldn't go in," he said.

Pan Am became the third U.S. airline to die this year, after Eastern and Midway, amid deep industrywide troubles brought on by the Gulf War and the recession. Pan Am bookings also were crippled by the 1988 terrorist bombing of Flight 103 over Scotland.

The death blow came on Tuesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court when Delta Air Lines cut off financing to keep Pan Am in the air. Delta said it did not believe Pan Am's business plan would work at a time when losses were about $2 million a day and bookings were plunging.

Luz Rodriguez of Puerto Rico, a retired Pan Am office worker, had taken a break from chemotherapy treatment for a trip to Orlando when the end came for Pan Am.

"I said, 'I'm going to go for a ride before I die.' And look what happened," she said. She and her husband arrived at Miami Airport on one of the airline's last flights. The couple continued their trip on American Airlines and got there less than three hours late.

Pan Am was founded in 1927 and inaugurated the first scheduled international flight — a mail run between Key West, Fla., and Havana, Cuba — the first scheduled trans-Pacific service (1935), and the first scheduled trans-Atlantic service (1939).

Mother of bride is fed up with no-shows

DEAR ABBY: I can certainly sympathize with "Pressured in Pennsylvania" who wanted a "no-child" wedding. All of the invitations to my daughter's wedding last month were worded in the correct way and addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." We assumed that by not including "and family," we would have no trouble. Wrong!

Friends whom we had not seen in a number of years, and would have welcomed with open arms, announced that they were coming 500 miles to the wedding and bringing their married daughter (who was invited) and her three small children (who were definitely not invited!). It fell to me to telephone long-distance and tell them that the children were not included in the invitation. They said they had never heard of such a thing, and if the children weren't welcome, they wouldn't be coming either. I stood my ground and said I was sorry, but that's the way it was. They never came.

Also, my daughter and I spent an entire weekend calling people who had failed to RSVP. A number of them told us they thought that if they were not planning to attend, they did not need to respond. (What did they think the stamp on the return envelope was for?) Several accepted but never showed up.

Abby, I think it's time to change the rules. Tacky or not, if I ever have to do this again, I will state on the invitations:

"Sorry, adults only.
Please respond with a yes or no."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

A stamped envelope is included for your convenience.

And finally, the ultimate in tacky: "No-shows will be billed for the amount charged per person, by the caterer." (In our case, it was $30 per head, and we were out several hundred dollars and a lot of food went to waste because of those thoughtless people.)

Thank you for listening because I really needed to get this off my chest! If you print this, please do not use my name.

OUTRAGED IN OREGON

DEAR OUTRAGED: My mail over the years indicates that many people do not understand what RSVP means. Perhaps the following would be preferable: "Please respond with a 'YES, we will be there' or, 'NO, we will not attend.' A stamped envelope is enclosed for your convenience."

P.S. Many people have written to say, "We thought it wasn't necessary to respond because we cannot attend." Others in equal numbers wrote to say, "We didn't respond because we will be there."

DEAR ABBY: We would like to pass along a family tradition we started some years ago. A few days after each Christmas and birthday, we go through our daughter Kristin's toys. With her help, we decide which toys she doesn't play with — or has outgrown — and would like to give to less fortunate children.

In addition to the obvious benefit of children getting toys they might not otherwise receive, it teaches our own child the joy of sharing.

So instead of selling those old but good-as-new toys your children have outgrown — or boxing them up to store in the back of your closet or attic — give them to your local charity. After all, isn't the joy of giving worth far more than a couple of bucks made from a garage sale?

THE MC ALEENEN FAMILY,
CHARLESTON AFB, S.C.

DEAR MC ALEENEN FAMILY: Hooray for you. May each successive holiday season be happier than the previous one. You deserve it.

Shootin' the Breeze

By J. Alan Brzyz

PHS is odd-team out; NFR stars hit Vegas

I was always pretty good in school with simple arithmetic. However, my problems started and were quickly compounded when I was introduced to algebra.

Folks, I need help solving this latest equation.

The Harris Rating System, which I find is followed religiously by many area high school football enthusiasts, each week lists the top 10 teams in each class statewide. It also gives the point spread.

HRS (Harris Rating System), for the week of Nov. 28, listed the Pampa Harvesters as 13-point favorites against Boswell. It was an exceptionally fine HRS prognostication.

PHS beat BHS, 28-13.

HRS was not as close on its choice of Sweetwater by 14 over Everman, but they were correct in picking the winner, and kudos are in order.

SWS defeated EHS, 35-7.

HRS, for the week of Dec. 5, chooses Sweetwater by six points over Pampa.

That's within the realm of believability, but open to conjecture. Sweetwater, with the Saturday win over Everman, jumped into a No. 9 ranking in the HRS top 10.

Pampa remains outside the top 10.

Here is the equation I can't follow:

If there are but eight teams remaining in the Class 4A playoffs, and both Sweetwater and Pampa are two of the eight remaining teams, why is Sweetwater ranked No. 9 and why isn't Pampa anywhere in the top 10?

It seems to me that 10 minus 2 should equal or include SHS plus PHS.

The school blackboard probably should read: (HRS10-2) = (SHS+PHS+6 other teams). But it doesn't.

I suspect it's modern math where they try to prove one plus one can equal three.

Nope. I'm not buying it.

When Pampa beats Sweetwater by 3 points Saturday - that's by my calculations - can the Harvesters be ranked any lower than No. 4? Tune in and we'll all find out.

Remember the dynamite competition in July at Pampa's PRCA-approved Top O' Texas Rodeo?

Many of the top cowboys and cowgirls who delighted the local crowd are competing this week and next in the rodeo season finale - the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas. The top 15 contestants in each event at year's end are eligible for the NFR.

Here are some of the NFR competitors Pampa rodeo-goers watched in July.

Robert Etbauer, who pleased the Pampa crowd with a 74-point ride in saddle broncs, currently is ranked fifth in the world standings. Robert Etbauer has racked up more than $50,000 in saddle bronc winnings this year and, with brothers Dan and Billy, is expected to win big bucks at the NFR.

Bob Logue, who rode in the Top O' Texas for 73 points in barebacks, has banked nearly $40,000 in the event and ranks eighth worldwide in the event.

Phil Smith, ranked 11th in barebacks, also has cashed in rides for nearly $40,000 this year.

World champion steer wrestler Ote Berry is ranked No. 2 in the world standings going into the NFR and has bankrolled more than $60,000.

Doug McMillen is ranked 11th in the same event and is NFR-bound.

And in barrel racing, Deb Mohon is ranked No. 2 with earnings of more than $66,000, Donna Kennedy is No. 5 with nearly $40,000, and Kim West is eighth with more than $30,000 in winnings.

Wrangler bullfighter and rodeo clown Jerry Norton, who thrilled Pampanos in July, also is headed for the Vegas showdown.

This is just a partial list of the outstanding talent drawn this year to the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

Organizers report plans for the 1992 Top O' Texas Rodeo are going so well, it could be even more exciting than in the past.

BITS and SPURS ... Anyone witnessing the Pampa-Boswell contest had to admire the athleticism of Boswell's outstanding running back Trey Woods. He is able to do more with one arm than many can do with two.

Pampa is home team Saturday and seating is on the west side.

After reading story after story about Magic's sexual exploits and the sad results of his casual adventures, I'm tempted to say, "Magic, you made your bed, now sleep in it!"

They keep going and going

Fan dubs Harvesters 'Energizers'

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Along the route to the Class 4A quarterfinals, Pampa's football team has picked up another nickname to go with "Green Team," "Mean Green" and "Hustlin' Harvesters."

Pampa resident John McGuire, who has followed the Harvesters all the way in the playoffs, came up with the new nickname after watching that battery-powered rabbit do the drum dance on television commercials.

"I was thinking about calling them the 'Fun Bunch,' but after seeing that rabbit I thought 'Pampa Energizers' would be more appropriate," McGuire said. "You know, they just keep going, going, going."

McGuire just may have something. The Harvesters have been beating their playoff opponents like the rabbit beats the drum, defeating Snyder, 31-15, in bi-district; Andrews, 27-16, in the area round and Boswell, 28-13, in regionals.

Next in line for the Harvesters, who have won 11 of 13 games this season, are the Sweetwater Mustangs (11-1), who whipped Everman, 35-7, in last weekend's regional playoffs. The two teams tangle at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Class 4A quarterfinals at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

Sweetwater is favored by six points over Pampa in this week's Harris Rating System, but Mustangs coach Tom Ritchey believes that prediction could easily be reversed.

"We got beat by Andrews (13-10) during the regular season and look what Pampa did to them," Ritchey said. "Pampa is going to be far and away the best team we've played this season. They're a very well-coached and well-disciplined team. I just hope we can make it a good competitive game."

Ritchey, who says the Mustangs are "a team with no super stars," has every right to be worried.

Pampa quarterback Andy Cavalier (4) runs the keeper for one yard and the Harvesters' first touchdown against Boswell Saturday at Wichita Falls. Opening holes for the sneak play are Pampa linemen Garrett Scribner (67), Chad Augustine (54), Kurt West (62) and Chris Whitney (70).

junior), and Garrett Scribner (186-pound senior) and center Chad Augustine (198-pound senior) - is averaging 318 yards and almost five touchdowns per game.

"Our offensive line has been doing a tremendous job all season long and Ernie Manning (line coach) does a tremendous job of getting them prepared for each game," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier.

The beneficiaries of that power-packed line are running back Sammy Laury, who has rushed for 1,834 yards and 18 touchdowns; fullback Zach Thomas, 781 yards rushing, nine touchdowns, and quarterback Andy Cavalier, 560 yards passing and seven TD passes.

Cavalier does wish there were more days in the week to get ready for Sweetwater.

"I'm glad we've got two more days of practice because we've got lots to do," Cavalier said Wednesday. "They run some plays that we haven't seen much of before and we've got to figure out a way to stop them. It's running, toss and sweep type of plays that Boswell (last week) ran and Sweetwater does a much better job of it."

Sweetwater carbon copies Pampa in ability on the offensive line, although the Mustangs will have a slightly smaller lineup.

"Their offensive line is just outstanding. They compare favorably with ours and we're very proud of our offensive line," Cavalier said. "They utilize two tailbacks (Chris Hines and James Moore) that have great speed."

Hines, a 180-pound junior, leads the Mustangs in rushing with over 1,500 yards.

Not only do the two offensive lines perform much alike, there's also a similarity between Sweetwater quarterback David Ritchey and Pampa signal-caller Andy Cavalier other than their dads being the head coaches.

"Their quarterback reminds me a lot of Andy. He's not spectacular, but he gets the job done. He knows how to direct a team and get them in the right formation," Cavalier said.

Cavalier says Sweetwater fullback Phil Ortega (155-pound senior) is an outstanding blocker, much like Pampa's Thomas, a 216-pound senior.

"Ortega's blocking ability is close to Zach's," Cavalier said.

"Both offenses match up pretty well."

Defensively, the Mustangs' frontline is shored up by tackle Jimmy Norman (230-pound senior) and end Lee Maddox (185-pound senior).

"Norman is one of the best defensive linemen, if not the best, we've seen all season. He'll be lined up against Whitney (second-team all-district player last season) and that should be a heck of a contest," Cavalier said. "Maddox is a good one and he'll be going against Sexton (first-team all-district player both offense and defense last season and three-year starter). That will be one of the confrontations that will be telling as the game goes on."

Linebacker Toby Stephens (190-pound junior) and strong safety Shannon Warren (175-pound senior) are also dangerous defenders.

"Stephens is a great hitter and Warren has been one of their key players," Cavalier added.

Pampa has never been this far in the playoffs before. Previously, the Harvesters had won one playoff game in 1924 and one in 1933.

Sweetwater won the state championship in 1985.

Aikman plans rapid return

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) - Troy Aikman doesn't plan to be on the bench during the Dallas Cowboys' playoff run.

He's pushing himself and his bum knee to be ready to take over as the starting quarterback in two weeks.

Aikman vows to be in uniform for emergency duty on Sunday when the Cowboys meet the New Orleans Saints.

Aikman worked out Wednesday and said the thought of missing out on all the fun is driving him.

"It would kill me," to miss the playoffs, Aikman said. "I feel like I played a big part in getting the team to where it's headed. For me not to be in there would be very frustrating."

Aikman, who suffered a partial tear in a lateral collateral knee ligament against the Washington Redskins, said, "I'm going to suit up Sunday. I'd be ready to play on an emergency basis. I don't expect to start."

Steve Beuerlein, who rescued the Cowboys against Washington and led them to victory again on Thanksgiving Day against Pittsburgh, will start Sunday against the Saints.

"My knee is still sore in some spots but it's getting better every day," Aikman said. "I just want to be there in case the team needs me. I'm frustrated. This is two seasons in a row this has happened. I'm doing everything I can to get back."

Asked if he was rushing things, Aikman said:

"I'm not foolish to the point where I would go out there if I wasn't ready. Coach (Jimmy) Johnson has indicated he will let me decide when I'm ready to play. Sure, it might be a little risky."

"But it's risky every time you go out there. You might separate a shoulder or something. I'm not worrying about hurting the knee worse."

"If I suit up, then that means I'm ready to play."

Aikman is targeting the Philadelphia game Dec. 15 as his first start.

"I need some practice time and I haven't been getting any of that," he said. "That's why I'm not expecting to start on Sunday."

Beuerlein, who has said he understands his role as a backup with the Cowboys, said he hoped Aikman didn't rush things, but added, "He knows how he feels. When he feels mobile, he'll be out there. He's a tough guy. All I know is I'll get the job done on Sunday."

Aikman actually has had bad injury luck all three years of his professional career.

In his rookie season, he broke a finger and missed three games. He suffered a concussion when he returned from the injured.

"Frustrated? You bet I'm frustrated," Aikman said. "I'm anxious and ready to get back in there. I want to be on the field with these guys when we get into the playoffs."

Hornets sting Lakers; Celtics burn Miami Heat

By The Associated Press

The Chicago Bulls were going for their 13th consecutive victory, and Michael Jordan was lucky they are no longer a one-man team.

Jordan scored a season-low 16 points on 7-for-20 shooting and committed seven turnovers. But his teammates - particularly Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant - played well enough to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-102 Wednesday night.

The Bulls' 13th consecutive victory bettered the club record of 12 set in November 1973.

"Four or five years ago we would have lost this game," Jordan said. "But Scottie and Horace really stepped up. In fact, everybody stepped up tonight, and that's what this team is all about."

Pippen had 28 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists, while Grant scored 22 points. Reserves B.J. Armstrong and Stacey King scored in double figures.

"It was not a stellar performance, but we were able to win despite that," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "It's nice for the guys to be part of a team that set the record. It's easier to go game to game when you're riding a streak like this."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 124, Miami 97; Portland 124, Orlando 115; Charlotte 124, the Los Angeles Lakers 106; Phoenix 114, Indiana 108; Chicago 108, Cleveland 102; Utah 101, Washington 74; and the Los Angeles Clippers 92, San Antonio 81.

NBA Roundup

Jordan sprained his lower back last week, but Wednesday was the first time his performance has suffered significantly.

"The back is stiff, I couldn't get it loose," Jordan said.

The Bulls snapped the Cavaliers' five-game winning streak and have won 11 straight over Cleveland since April 23, 1989. It also gave the Bulls their best start ever at 14-2.

A 3-pointer by Armstrong started a 12-2 run that put the Bulls in front 100-88, but the Cavaliers chipped away at the margin behind the shooting of Brad Daugherty and John Williams, who scored 26 and 22 points, respectively.

Hornets 124, Lakers 106
Dell Curry scored 27 points, including 4-for-4 from 3-point range, as Charlotte beat Los Angeles for the first time in nine tries.

The Hornets took advantage of the Lakers' road weariness - they've played six games away from home since Nov. 24 - to outscore Los Angeles 41-29 in the fourth quarter after the two teams took a 77-77 tie into the final period.

Charlotte, now 5-14 for the season, was 0-8 against the Lakers in its first three NBA seasons.

Curry was 11-for-15 from the field overall and his 4-for-4 performance from 3-point range keyed the Hornets' 7-for-8 shooting at that distance.

James Worthy scored 28 points and Sam Perkins 26 for the Lakers, who have lost three of four since a nine-game winning streak. Rookie Larry Johnson scored 22 points for the Hornets.

Celtics 124, Heat 97

Robert Parish scored 31 points and Larry Bird 28 as Boston extended its home record to 20-0 against the NBA's four expansion entries.

Parish, inadvertently playing with his paycheck stuffed in his jersey, scored 23 points in the first half in leading Boston to a 58-54 lead. Bird had 18 in the second half before leaving the game with 4:32 remaining and the Celtics ahead 114-90.

Miami, losers of six of seven games, was led by Glen Rice with 27 points.

Trail Blazers 124, Magic 115
Clyde Drexler scored 34 points and Portland stayed hot in Florida with a victory at Orlando.

The Trail Blazers, shooting 45 percent for the season before arriving in Florida, have made 55 percent in victories at Miami on Tuesday night and Orlando. They also have scored 124 points in each game.

Portland stretched a 94-86 lead after three quarters to 114-97 in the first seven minutes of the fourth period by outscoring the Magic 20-11.

Scott Skiles led Orlando with 24 points, while Terry Porter had 21 for the Trail Blazers.

Suns 114, Pacers 108

Jeff Hornacek scored 11 of his 27 points in the final period and Phoenix used a 14-4 spurt in the final 2:36 to win at Indiana.

The Suns, behind 65-49 in the third quarter, still trailed 104-101 when Hornacek made one of two free throws with 2:36 remaining. Kevin Johnson's layup and Hornacek's outside jumper put the Suns ahead to stay, 105-104, with 1:43 left.

Rik Smits led Indiana with 26 points and 10 rebounds, while Reggie Miller scored 21 points and Micheal Williams had 17 points and 12 assists.

Jazz 101, Bullets 74

At Salt Lake City, Jeff Malone scored 22 points and Karl Malone had 20 points and 14 rebounds against Washington.

The Jazz outscored the Bullets 54-35 in the middle two quarters and led by as many as 29 points in the second half.

Jeff Malone made 10 of 15 field-goal attempts while playing just 30 minutes. Utah held Washington to 35.5 percent shooting from the field.

Playing without injured starters Pervis Ellison and Michael Adams, the Bullets were led by Harvey Grant's 22 points.

Clippers 92, Spurs 81

Olden Polynice keyed a fourth-quarter rally by scoring 13 of his 15 points, and Los Angeles survived a 12-point second period to win at home against San Antonio.

Polynice and Doc Rivers, who scored eight of his 17 points in the final quarter, led the Clippers on a 20-8 spurt that turned a six-point deficit into an 81-75 lead with 4 1/2 minutes left.

Sean Elliott closed the Spurs within four, but Rivers set up a three-point play by Polynice with a behind-the-back pass and followed with a 16-footer to widen the margin to 86-77 with 2:55 left.

Elliott scored 24 points and David Robinson had 23 points, 15 rebounds and eight blocked shots for the Spurs. Ron Harper scored 18 points and Charles Smith, playing for the first time since undergoing arthroscopic surgery on his right knee on Nov. 19, had 15 points and six blocks for the Clippers, who led 41-36 at halftime despite being outscored 19-12 in the second quarter.

Tar Heels whip Seton Hall, 83-54; ACC leads Big East in Challenge

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — North Carolina played its usual game. Seton Hall's Terry Dehere certainly didn't play his.

That translated into an 83-54 victory for the fifth-ranked Tar Heels Wednesday night and gave the Atlantic Coast Conference a 4-2 lead in its challenge series with the Big East with two games remaining.

Dehere, the sixth-ranked Pirates' leading scorer last season and this, went 3-for-22 from the field and finished with just seven points, 14 below his average. The 6-foot-4 junior guard had set Seton Hall's season 3-point shooting mark last year at 42 percent and he was 9-for-10 from beyond 19-9 in the first two games this year. On Wednesday, he was 1-for-11 on 3-pointers.

"Hubert Davis' defense on Dehere had a lot to do with his poor shooting. He only had four or five good looks at the basket," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "We certainly didn't expect this and it really wasn't as bad as the score indicated."

North Carolina (5-0) was its usual consistent self. The Tar Heels played a number of different people on Dehere and they ran the break and halfcourt offense with usual efficiency, shooting 54 percent (37-for-68). "We really didn't get going until we got the break going," Smith said.

The Tar Heels led 37-26 at halftime as Seton Hall (2-1) shot 29 percent in the first half (9-for-31) and Dehere was responsible for most of that as he was 1-for-13, 1-for-6 on 3s.

Dehere missed his first four shots of the second half and the Tar Heels finally broke things wide open with a 15-2 run that started the crowd of 15,176 on its way home from the Meadowlands Arena.

The points that most reflected the game and ended things for most matters came when Dehere fired an air-ball jumper and Davis came down and nailed a 3-pointer to give North Carolina a 59-43 lead with 7:25 to play.

"I just tried to stay in his face," said Davis, a senior who had 23 points, including the 1,000th of his career. "I tried to shadow him. When he did get good looks and was wide open fortunately he missed."

Dehere never thought about not shooting.

"That's my mentality," a subdued Dehere said. "I feel if I miss one, I'll make the next. That's the way I keep shooting. I'm real confident."

"I don't see I'm missing four or five shots. I feel if I miss one the next one will go in."

His coach never thought of telling him to stop, either.

"I'm not concerned Terry didn't shoot well," P.J. Carlesimo said. "He's played in enough games around here to know he's going to shoot well. We lost this game not because of Terry's shooting but for another 100 reasons."

The loss was Seton Hall's worst since an 84-55 loss to Arizona in the second round of the 1988 NCAA tournament and its worst at home since a 91-60 loss to Providence in 1970.

George Lynch had 13 points and 14 rebounds for North Carolina and 7-0 sophomore center Eric Montross had 13 points on 6-for-7 shooting in his first game back after missing two with a strained tendon in his right foot.

Jerry Walker led Seton Hall with 19 points.

North Carolina's win gave the ACC a sweep Wednesday night as Maryland beat Providence 76-66.

The Challenge concludes tonight with a doubleheader at Greensboro, N.C. The Big East leads the overall series 12-10 so the ACC will have a chance to finish with a tie as the 3-year matchups come to an end.

"I thought this was a great idea because I like to play tough teams early in the season especially on the road," Smith said. "I know we'll keep playing the tough December games."

North Carolina's Eric Montross (00), tries to shoot over Seton Hall's Jerry Walker (21) as Walker blocks the shot Wednesday night at the Meadowlands.

Denver's Wade Phillips shows interest in Longhorns head coaching position

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos defensive coordinator Wade Phillips admits that if the University of Texas calls about its head coaching job, he will listen.

"It would be one of the only college jobs I might be interested in," Phillips said Wednesday. "It's a premiere job, one of the top jobs in the country. And Texas is home for me and my family."

"But it would be a career change for me. And right now my goal is still to be a head coach in the NFL, which I feel like I'm close to being," he said.

David McWilliams resigned Monday as the Longhorns football coach.

Phillips said if Texas pursued an NFL assistant, he would be "disappointed if it wasn't me because I think I'm a legitimate candidate because of my experience and background and I'm from Texas."

"And there's not many guys from Texas that have had successful coaching careers like I have," he added.

Phillips was an assistant coach for the University of Houston, Oklahoma

State and Kansas, and after several assistant jobs in the NFL posted a 1-3 record as interim head coach of the New Orleans Saints at the end of the 1985 season. He won one preseason game for the Broncos last year while Dan Reeves was out with heart surgery.

Spokesmen for the Texas athletic department declined to confirm or deny if Phillips was on the list of candidates.

"It's just speculation that someone might be interested, that's all it is," Phillips said.

Female reporter denied access

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Coach Bob Knight barred a female Associated Press sports writer from Indiana University's basketball locker room Tuesday night, even though she had conducted interviews there during three previous seasons.

Beth Harris of the AP's Indianapolis bureau said she never had been denied access to the locker room until after Indiana's game against Notre Dame.

However, Kit Klingelhoffer, sports information director for IU, said Knight was following an existing school policy that applies to all sports.

Knight "probably was not aware" that Harris previously had been in the locker room, Klingelhoffer said.

NCAA policy encourages equal access for men and women but leaves the matter up to each school. The Big Ten has no policy on women in men's locker rooms.

Klingelhoffer said IU's policy does not affect men's basketball alone.

"We do it in football, too, and in women's basketball," Klingelhoffer said. "It's our policy to deny access to members of the opposite sex to all locker room areas."

Harris retires as Bucks coach

MILWAUKEE (AP) — After four years of struggling under the dual demands of coaching and running basketball operations for the Milwaukee Bucks, Del Harris knew something had to give.

And he didn't want to give up the top management job to stay as head coach.

"I think it's best for the franchise that they have a full-time person in charge of operations," Harris said as he announced his retirement as coach Wednesday. "It had to be somebody else or me. I wanted it to be me."

Harris said he wanted to concentrate on his front office duties as vice president of basketball operations and leave the coaching to his top assistant, 22-year NBA veteran Frank Hamblen.

"In the end, I haven't lost 12 players, I've just gained a head coach and an assistant coach. I'm still in charge of what happens," said Harris, whose contract provided for the move.

The surprise announcement came a day after the Bucks, 8-9 this season, cruised to a 126-94 home victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I'm not dying. I'm not dead," Harris said after the Bucks' Wednesday afternoon practice session. "I'm still working and I know you're still going to blame me if we lose."

Harris, 54, who compiled a 191-154 regular season record in four winning seasons since taking over as coach in 1987, said changes in the National Basketball Association over the past decade — rising player salaries, higher franchise values and intense media coverage — made it difficult for one person to fulfill the two roles.

"I have been functioning in those capacities for four-plus years and realize more fully now the tremendous demands on the man in each role," Harris said in a statement. "I'm burned out at two jobs."

The Bucks reached the playoffs each of the four seasons under Harris, but advanced past the first round just once, in 1989.

Harris was named head coach of the Bucks on June 4, 1987. Hamblen, 44, his assistant for the last four years, has been either an assistant coach or scout in the NBA or American Basketball Association for 22 seasons.

"It's a tremendous opportunity for me. I couldn't be in a better situation — knowing the system, knowing the players, knowing the organization, knowing the fans," Hamblen said.

"It's conducive for success."

Hamblen said Tuesday night's win against the Lakers could be a springboard toward an improved season.

"It'd be great if all games were like last night," he said. "This team is a good team. I thought it was good from the opening day of camp."

Harris described the new staff as "very diversified in terms of experience and personality and rich with basketball seasoning."

Lee Rose, 55, a former assistant coach for the New Jersey Nets and San Antonio Spurs, will replace Hamblen. Rose, who joined the Bucks in 1989, will retain his position as director of player personnel.

Convicted nurse slayer dies at age 49

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Richard Speck, the drifter who was convicted of methodically slaying eight student nurses in their south side Chicago apartment in 1966, died today, the corrections department said. He was 49.

Speck, who a prosecutor said showed the nation "what evil is capable of," died of an apparent heart attack at a hospital this morning after being stricken Wednesday evening at Stateville Correctional Center, said Nic Howell, corrections spokesman.

On July 14, 1966, Speck broke into a townhouse where nine seniors from the South Chicago Community Hospital School of Nursing were staying. He left only one alive.

The 24-year-old itinerant seaman bound all nine women with strips of bed sheets. He led eight of them one by one to other rooms in the townhouse. He raped one. He killed all eight by strangling them, or stabbing them, or both.

Corazon Amurao, a visiting exchange nurse from the Philippines, survived by wriggling under a bed while Speck was out of the room. She alerted authorities to the crime by climbing onto a ledge outside her room and screaming: "They are all dead!

Richard Speck

My friends are all dead! Oh, God, I'm the only one alive!"

"This case in a sense defined an era," said Bill Martin, who was chief prosecutor for the Cook County state attorney's office and, at 29, led Speck's prosecution. He spoke in an interview last summer as the 25th anniversary of the crime approached.

"Before July 14th of 1966, who ever would have thought that one man, ostensibly an intruder who only wanted money to go to New Orleans, and smiled, and said repeatedly he wasn't going to hurt anyone, was capable of stabbing and strangling one by one over 4 1/2 hours these eight young women?" said Martin, a Chicago criminal defense attorney.

"It ended the sense of security, even naive, of the American public about the presence of evil and what evil was capable of."

Speck attempted suicide two days after the murders and was taken to Cook County Hospital. He was arrested after a physician recognized an arm tattoo that read "Born to Raise Hell," which Amurao had described to police.

Speck, who was 24 at the time of the slayings, was convicted of murder in 1967 after a jury deliberated less than an hour.

Speck was first sentenced to death. But when the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the death penalty, he was resented to serve eight consecutive terms of 50 to 150 years each.

Howell said Speck died at Silver Cross Hospital in Joliet about 6 a.m. today. He was taken there Wednesday evening after suffering chest pains.

Tax-cut hearings may turn 'raucous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans were ready to blame each other for the moribund economy as Congress prepared to begin three weeks of hearings on how to cure the recession.

"I think it's going to be raucous," predicted Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., a member of the House Ways and Means panel that planned its opening session for today. "I don't think anybody will hold back."

Leaders on both sides said there would be calls for a bipartisan attack on the economic slowdown that has bedeviled the country since the summer of 1990.

"I'd like to conclude tomorrow night with an atmosphere of working together with" the Bush administration, the committee's chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said in an interview Wednesday.

But with the 1992 elections on the horizon, Democrats were ready to use the hearings to criticize President Bush's handling of the economy and to promote their proposals for cutting taxes on the middle class while boosting levies on the well-to-do.

White House officials were expected to renew their call for steps they say would spur economic growth, such as slicing the capital gains tax rate for property sales and extending other breaks to businesses. Bush embraced such a plan last month when it was offered by conservative House Republicans.

But administration witnesses — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, White House budget director Richard Darman and chief White House economic adviser Michael Boskin — were expected to withhold any new proposals until Bush's State of the Union address next month.

Despite his call for cooperation, Rostenkowski said he would challenge claims by Republicans that their economic growth package would pay for itself. He said his figures indicate it would drive up the deficit by at least $23 billion over the next five years.

"When you start talking about growth, you're talking about increasing the deficit," Rostenkowski said. "And the deficit is what got us into the problems we have right now."

Nonetheless, Rostenkowski said, "I wouldn't have my ears covered, my eyes closed" if the administration offered to support his middle-income tax cuts in exchange for his support of some of their proposals.

Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, the Ways and Means panel's top Republican, said the administration officials would "talk about their willingness to cooperate and work toward constructive answers to put the economy into a better position."

But he added, "My guess is they'll be attacked on a very partisan basis, which is unfortunate. Now is the time for us to create new jobs and work together."

Bush went on the offensive Wednesday, telling the conservative American Enterprise Institute in Washington that Congress has ignored previous economic growth packages he has offered three times.

"Three sessions of Congress have come and gone and everyone knows the result — precious little action," he said.

Meanwhile, Democrats argue that they have advanced a slew of tax break plans they say would help revive the economy.

Rostenkowski's would extend cuts of up to $200 to individuals, and up to $400 for couples, to be paid for by increasing taxes on the rich. A similar plan by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, would be financed with defense cuts.

The latest GOP plan would reduce the capital gains rate on sales of property held more than a year and extend tax breaks for Individual Retirement Accounts and many types of business investments. It would also eliminate the year-old tax on many luxury items and let middle-income people avoid taxes on up to $225 in interest income, $450 for couples.
