SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The trial for seven alleged members of the so-called Mexican Mafia prison gang almost ended before it began.

But negotiations for a plea bargain stalled and the trial began Tuesday with a prosecutor telling jurors they'll hear recorded telephone conversations about drugs, guns and death.

"A window into the clandestine world" of the alleged gang will be opened for the federal court jury hearing the case, U.S. Attorney Pam Mathy said during yesterday's first day of the trial.

The defendants are charged with racketeering, drug trafficking and illegal weapons possession.

The trial originally was for eight defendants, but Rodolfo Gomez Ybarbo was granted a separate trial because he was charged only in a gun possession case.

DALLAS (AP) — Before Janet Reno became U.S. Attorney General, she was a Dade County, Fla., prosecutor faced with the "terrible phenomenon (of) youth violence."

Visiting Texas on Tuesday, Reno said she sees the same problem here.

"We have all got to join together to let the youth of America know that there is no excuse whatsoever for hurting other people, for putting a gun up beside somebody's head," she said.

Reno and Gov. Ann Richards spoke at the Greater Dallas Crime Commission's awards luncheon. Reno gave the keynote address and Richards was named 1993 Crime Fighter of the Year for her role in increasing the number of prison beds in Texas and rewriting the state penal code.

Reno stressed the need to address such social ills as teen pregnancy and youth gangs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elmerine Allen Whitfield's campaign to obtain the sealed medical records documenting her father's participation in a 1940s radiation test sanctioned by the government has taken her from television and radio studios to Capitol Hill.

Testifying in measured tones Tuesday before the House Energy and Power Subcommittee, the Dallas teacher chronicled point-by-point how the plutonium injection Elmer Allen was given in 1947 ruined his health and disrupted her family's life.

"We are sure that he did not know that he was injected with plutonium," she said. "We are sure that until his death he never fully understood what happened to him."

Allen, a native of Temple, was one of 18 people injected with plutonium in the 1940s in one of the Cold War tests on hundreds of people sanctioned by the government. Other experiments included feeding radioactive cereal to retarded teen-agers, injecting servicemen with isotopes and irradiating the genitals of prisoners.

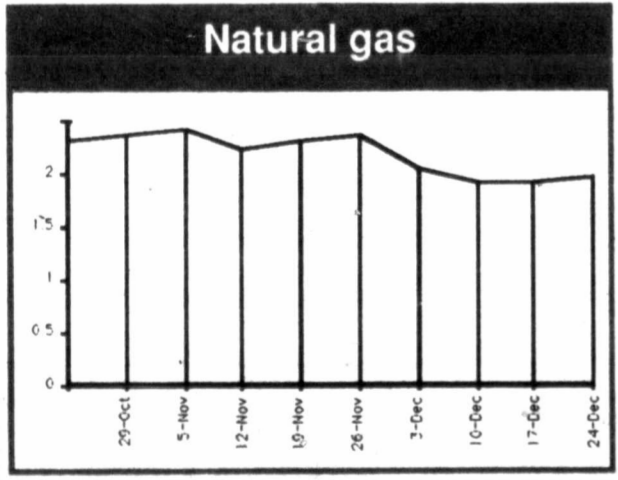

Tuesday's hearing was one of several being convened to discuss the issue of compensation for victims and their families — and to learn how such tests were permitted.

McALLEN (AP) — The three Hidalgo County sheriff's deputies indicted along with Sheriff Brigido Marmolejo Jr. on federal charges of taking bribes from prisoners will lose their jobs, a county official said.

"Any deputy loses deputization at the point of indictment," said Hidalgo County Judge J. Edgar Ruiz. Marmolejo and three assistants were indicted Tuesday in Houston on federal charges accusing them of taking bribes from federal prisoners for visitation privileges.

Also named in the eight-count indictment that includes racketeering, money laundering and bribery charges were chief jailer Mario Salinas; Eloy Zavala, chief deputy for jail administration; and Edelmiro Flores, a detention officer.

Also on Tuesday, county commissioners Juan Rosel and Leonard Camarillo called for Marmolejo, the sheriff since 1976, to step down until his indictment runs its course.

Sales tax up in Pampa for third month in row

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

For the third consecutive month, sales taxes have increased, an indication of better economic times for Pampa, according to one official.

"We're very pleased," said John Horst, Pampa's finance director. "This makes the third month in a row that we are at or above budget on sales taxes, so next month, which is a big collection month, all indications are that it will be above budget and that is going to make our planning a lot easier this year."

Horst said he believes the upswing in the sales tax is a reflection of generally better economic times.

"I've heard some comments from some of our local retailers that think things have picked up sales-wise and it's very encouraging," he said.

For the month of January, Pampa received $150,363.16 in sales tax money from the state Comptroller's Office. The increase is 26.26 percent more than what was budgeted this fiscal year, according to the city.

As it is, the city is $158,676.61 over budget. Nine months still remain, however.

Other cities within Gray

County, Lefors and McLean, didn't do as well.

Lefors received a check for $1,001.35, a decrease of 3.16 percent as compared to January, 1993, when the city received a check for $1,034.03. Lefors has received more than three percent less this year than last year.

McLean reported a decrease in January's check. It received $1,170.76 from the Comptroller's office, a decrease of 34.52 percent compared to last January.

As a county, sales taxes are up this year by 25.04 percent, according to the Comptroller's Office.

In Carson County, the county-wide sales taxes are generally down 5.18 percent. Combined, the cities of Groom, Panhandle, Skellytown and White Deer, the four cities in the county which report sales taxes to the state, collected a total of $10,984.30.

For Hemphill County, where Canadian is the only city reporting sales taxes, revenues have increased 27.15 percent this month as compared to January of 1993. Specifically, Canadian first check for 1994 was for $11,195.21, approximately $2,300 more than last January's check of $8,804.26.

In Roberts County, the city of Miami, reported an increase of 15.23 percent in this month's check of $1,605.54 as compared to last January's check of $1,393.30. Miami, like Canadian, is the only city in the county to report sales tax receipts to the state.

For Wheeler County, county-wide sales tax receipts have increased 14.96 percent. Combined, the cities of Mobeetie, Shamrock and Wheeler, the three cities in the county reporting sales tax receipts, collected $17,008.20, according to the Comptroller's Office. Last January, the three cities collected $14,793.89.

Gray County jail break

Breaking up is hard to do, but Gray County employees including Larry Lee, above, were hard at it today, breaking up the old county jail atop the courthouse. The jail has been vacant since the new jail opened for business in the fall of 1992. (Pampa News photo)

Death toll still rising, temperatures below zero

By MICHAEL WARREN
Associated Press Writer

It was so cold they stopped making beer in Milwaukee. People in Atlanta were asked not to bathe. And a family in New Hampshire opened their refrigerator to chill their food.

Across most of the eastern United States, record low temperatures have closed schools, businesses, roads and airports. Thousands of people have been without electricity or drinking water, and utilities are struggling to keep up with record demands for power.

Power companies in New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and parts of Pennsylvania cut service to thousands of homes for 15 minutes this morning to offset an electricity shortage. Other companies asked customers to voluntarily cut back usage.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, which serves all or parts of seven states, expected an all-time power demand today, eclipsing its record 24,627 megawatts on Dec. 22, 1989.

At least 66 deaths have been blamed on the cold snap that began over the weekend. Most of the victims were killed on icy roads or had heart attacks shoveling snow. Some froze to death, including a baby born Monday in an unheated house in Dayton, Ohio, where it was a record 25 below zero Tuesday.

"It's the wind. It bites right through your face," Jerry Fitzpatrick, a repairman entering Wisconsin's state Capitol.

Letter carriers just bundled up and suffered. "It's colder than a boss' heart," said Ron Macke, who delivered mail in snowy, 8-below St. Louis County on Tuesday. "I wore everything I owned, and it was still cold."

Record lows were recorded in dozens of cities, including minus 40 in St. Cloud, Minn.; minus 22 in Louisville, Ky.; minus 27 in Indianapolis and minus 22 in Pittsburgh.

Schools and universities canceled classes today in much of the Midwest after deadly wind chills and temperatures well below zero were forecast for this morning.

"We usually try to hold out, but the chill factor here is minus 50 degrees," said Marilyn Ristevich, a high school principal in Bedford, Mich. "It's a little too chancy."

Minnesota Gov. Arne Carlson closed schools on Tuesday rather than let children wait for buses in 40-below temperatures. But he relented today after parents complained. It was supposed to be no colder than minus 14 this morning.

In Kentucky, ice-covered interstates and parkways remained off limits to all but vehicles carrying essential food, fuel and medical supplies.

"We're not patrolling," said Lee Haynes, a police officer in Edgewood, Ky. "We can't get help to you. You're going to freeze to death. People don't understand it's a killer cold and wouldn't take long."

The Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island were also closed today. The docks in Manhattan were too icy for tourists to board the ferries.

Dulles International Airport outside Washington was closed briefly Tuesday after a Brazilian airliner slid off an icy runway. Baltimore-Washington International Airport reopened this morning after being closed since Monday.

In Milwaukee this morning, Miller Brewing Co. canceled its evening and morning work shifts because of the weather for the first time in at least 10 years, rather than make employees come to work in the cold. It was 17 below.

"They usually like to make beer, so it takes a lot to shut them down," said Miller spokesman Mike Brophy. "It's nasty out there."

Economy improving, according to the Fed

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve today issued an upbeat assessment of the economy, noting strong holiday sales and new hiring at factories.

"Economic activity continued to expand with signs of acceleration in some sectors," the central bank said in a report on regional economic conditions.

"Consumer spending, especially on household-related items, was strong during the holidays in most districts. Manufacturing activity strengthened, and the manufacturing employment picture improved somewhat," the Fed said in its "beige book" report.

It was the central bank's most positive view of the economy since before the 1990-91 recession.

Despite the increased economic activity, the Fed said it noted "little upward pressure on wages and prices" except for widespread reports of rising lumber costs.

Today's report, compiled from interviews conducted before Jan. 10 by the Fed's 12 regional banks, was prepared for a Feb. 3-4 meeting of central bank monetary policy-makers.

Many economists believe policy-makers could decide at that meeting to increase short-term interest rates sometime during the first quarter, in an effort to keep a lid on incipient inflationary pressures.

However, because price rises generally have been small, other analysts think policy-makers will wait until later this year to boost rates.

A key benchmark rate set by the Fed, the interest charged among banks for overnight loans, has remained at a 30-year low of 3 percent since September 1992.

In the latest beige book, the Fed even had mildly positive words for long-moribund commercial real estate markets. It said conditions still must be described as sluggish, but that construction and leasing had improved in some markets.

However, it said, "residential real estate sales and construction grew robustly in almost all districts."

Loan demand also rose in most areas. In agriculture, some crops sustained weather damage, but prices rose as the farm income prospects improved, it said.

Postal service pulls stamp that family says portrays wrong man

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a million-dollar case of mistaken identity apparently unprecedented in U.S. history, the Postal Service is pulling back and destroying 104 million commemorative stamps of Old West notables.

The move followed complaints by family members and Western history buffs that the stamp portrait of early black rodeo star Bill Pickett was based erroneously on a photograph of a brother and fellow cowboy, Ben Pickett.

Officials at the Pampa post office said today that they had not received any of the stamps.

"Subjects selected for American stamps represent America's culture and heritage. To release a stamp that was less than our best would be a disservice," Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said.

Beyond the demands that the error be corrected, officials said the move was prompted by concerns that the episode challenged the integrity of the Postal Service's procedures to insure accuracy.

The commemorative set of 29-cent stamps, sold in sheet form, honors Pickett and 15 other famous personalities of the Old West — William "Buffalo Bill" Cody, Annie Oakley, Charles Goodnight, and Wyatt Earp among them.

Pampa police record one homicide for fourth quarter

The violent deaths of a Pampa family — Twila Busby and her sons Elwin Caler and Randolph Busby — ended 1993 and began 1994 for Pampa Police Department officers. The attack on the trio chalked up at least one statistic for the year, when officials counted one of the three deaths as a homicide for the fourth quarter of 1993. The other two deaths will be counted in 1994 statistics.

The patrol division and criminal investigation division also worked other incidents in 1993, from minor offenses where officers issued a warning ticket, to felonies like sexual assault requiring investigation.

Officers worked 129 accidents, made 26 arrests for driving while intoxicated, wrote 321 warning tickets and 487 citations for moving violations.

Sixteen traffic arrests were made and 214 citations were written for nonmoving violations.

The department made 36 felony arrests, served 234 warrants, recorded one homicide, investigated 32 residential burglaries, nine nonresidential burglaries and nine vehicle burglaries.

Two vehicle thefts and one sexual assault were investigated.

Patrol officers drove 44,893 miles over the three-month period to answer 3298 dispatched calls. While doing their police duty, officers also filled out 27 interview cards which record contacts with people in suspicious circumstances.

Researchers: Sunscreen not enough for melanoma

HOUSTON (AP) — Sunscreen may protect people against the more easily cured forms of skin cancer, but it appears to have no effect on the condition that can lead to melanoma, researchers say.

Three scientists from the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center published a study today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute that warns that sunscreens may even promote development of melanoma because people wearing the chemical may feel it's safe to stay out in the sun longer.

Contrary to popular thought, the study indicates, chemical sunscreens provide no protection against melanoma.

Melanoma cases have increased dramatically in recent years, and many had traced that increase to changes in the ozone layer of the Earth's atmosphere that allowed more ultraviolet radiation to reach the Earth's surface.

In the study, three sunscreens were applied to the tails and ears of three groups of mice 20 minutes before the animals were placed under sun lamps. They were exposed to sunlamps 20 to 27 minutes twice a week for three weeks.

A fourth group of mice was treated with oil-and-water mixtures before exposure to the sun lamp, and another group was treated with the same chemical but received no exposure to ultraviolet light.

Two of the sunscreens (2-EHMC and o-PABA) absorb ultraviolet-B radiation and the third (BP-3) absorbs both ultraviolet-B and ultraviolet-A radiation.

On the day before the last exposure to the ultraviolet radiation in the sunlamp, scientists injected melanoma cells into the ears of the all of the mice. The mice were then observed to determine if the injected melanoma cells grew.

The study shows that the sunscreens prevented skin swelling and inflammation as well as sunburn, but they did not prevent development of melanoma tumors.

Researcher Dr. Margaret Kripke said it is difficult to make a prediction about what this means. Studies seem to indicate a relationship between exposure to ultraviolet radiation and melanoma.

But she said it is not clear that the relationship is one of dose.

"The ultraviolet radiation may be involved through effects on the immune system," she said.

Previous studies of melanoma have indicated that the changes leading up to the more common basal and squamous cell cancers of the skin are very different from those that lead to melanoma.

Dr. Kripke and co-authors Dr. Peter Wolf and Cherrie K. Donawho noted in the report that "protection against sunburn does not necessarily imply prevention of other possible UV radiation effects, such as enhanced melanoma growth."

Drs. Howard K. Koh and Robert A. Lew of Boston University School of Medicine and Public Health wrote in an editorial accompanying the published study that, "People should also try to wear hats and protective clothing, seek shade, minimize exposure to UV radiation during peak hours, protect infants and children against too much UV radiation exposure, wear UV opaque sunglasses and avoid tanning parlors."

Three killed in blast when truck and car careen into gas pump

CORRIGAN (AP) — Two Canadian men and a Texas woman were killed when a tractor-trailer truck collided with a car at a highway intersection and careened into the fuel pumps of a convenience store where they exploded.

Officials identified the men in the truck as William R. Smith, 37, and Craig S. Cuffe, 29, both of Oshawa, Ontario. The woman in the car was Andrea Anderson, 26, of Moscow, Texas, about 10 miles west of Corrigan.

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Greg Sanchez said investigators believed the truck struck the car Tuesday about 8:30 a.m. at the main intersection in town, highways U.S. 59 and U.S. 287, and slid out of control before slamming into the gasoline pumps and supporting beams of the canopy over the pumps at the Exxon outlet.

A third vehicle, a van, was parked outside the store and also burned in the blaze.

Motor vehicle registration stickers find a new place

Motor vehicle registration stickers belong in a new place, according to Tax/Assessor Collector Margie Gray.

Stickers are to be affixed inside the front windshield on the driver's side one inch above the inspection sticker. They are no longer on the car tag, she said.

Vehicle owners receive an instruction sheet showing the proper spot for installation, Gray said, but there are occasional goafs.

For those who have windshield stickers in place and the windshield is broken, a replacement sticker costs $5.30.

If patrons mistakenly stick it on upside down, it is better to leave it in place than to try to scrape it off and reposition it, she said. Tampering with the sticker automatically voids it.

"If they don't understand, we'll go out there and put it on," she offered.

For some forms of transportation, the stickers still go on license plates. They include motorcycles, trailers and vehicles without windshields.

Police looking for surprised burglars

Area law enforcement agencies are looking for three burglars today who were surprised in the act of sacking a house Tuesday.

Shortly after 2 p.m., James Stevens of 514 N. Sumner came upon three black men helping themselves to his worldly goods.

The burglars escaped through the back door and made off in a 1975 or 1976 brown Chevrolet four-door.

Stolen were a nickel .38 caliber revolver, 12 gauge shotgun and .22 caliber pump action rifle.

Information about the suspects was sent to surrounding counties and the investigation continues.

Study: Prenatal care may not be racially equal

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors may be less likely to tell black women to quit smoking and drinking during pregnancy than they are to tell white women, according to some of the first research into just what constitutes prenatal care.

Black babies are twice as likely as whites to die before their first birthday, usually because of low birth weight. Doctors have pointed to prenatal care as a solution, saying the nation needs to get black women into their offices earlier and more often.

But do all expectant mothers get the same message during those prenatal examinations? Apparently not, concluded a study published in Tuesday's American Journal of Public Health.

"These are basic things that everybody should get," said Dr. Milton Kotelchuck of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. "It's a very disturbing finding, to imply that all prenatal care isn't equal."

Kotelchuck and Dr. Michael Kogan of the National Center for Health Statistics analyzed a 1989 government survey of 8,310 new mothers, all of whom received some prenatal care. The survey, taken every eight years, is considered the nation's most comprehensive. Thirty percent of the women had babies who weighed too little at birth. Half the women were black.

The black women were 20 percent more likely than whites to report never being told to quit smoking, although the majority of both groups had heard the message. Thirty-six percent of the black mothers said they weren't told to quit smoking, compared with 29 percent of the whites.

The black women were 30 percent more likely to say they weren't told to quit drinking, the study found. Forty percent of the black women said they weren't told, as did 30 percent of the whites.

There was no racial difference in advice on breast feeding or drug use.

The data comes just months after a large study found black mothers were twice as likely as other women of all races to drink, smoke and use drugs during pregnancy. In that study, University of California researchers measured the presence of alcohol and drugs in the urine of 29,000 women when they gave birth, and questioned them about their smoking habits.

Scientists said Tuesday's study was one of the first to examine the content of prenatal care, instead of just the quantity. But they couldn't say why a racial discrepancy would exist. Data on smoking, drinking and taking drugs during pregnancy is clear: They're all potentially harmful.

"Is it because of implicit racism? That's probably too strong," Kotelchuck said. "But it is possible that people treat their clients differently on the basis of their social class."

Also, poor women with numerous problems may overwhelm doctors, who find they don't have enough time with the expectant mother to offer much help, he said. The study didn't measure either theory.

Doctors may not give the advice clearly enough or often enough. Or women simply may forget it — a limitation of a survey that depends on memory, Kogan said.

Russian Cabinet crisis continues; rouble plunges again

By LARRY RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin met with his prime minister again today trying to assemble a new Cabinet that could decide the future of Russia's reforms.

In a dramatic sign of the economic uncertainty, the battered rouble continued its free fall today, tumbling to a record low of 1,607 to the dollar from 1,503 on Tuesday. It has set new lows every day this week.

Many people rushed to exchange their rubles for dollars, forcing some banks and exchange offices to close or limit dollar sales.

One of the main questions to be decided by Yeltsin's meeting with Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin was whether reformist Finance Minister Boris Fyodorov would stay in the Cabinet.

"The future of the reform now largely depends on whether Fyodorov leaves the government," the newspaper Izvestia said.

The Yeltsin-Chernomyrdin talks, originally scheduled for two hours on Tuesday, have stretched into two days. Yeltsin's office said the two might continue their difficult discussions for the rest of the week.

Some analysts portrayed the meeting as a power struggle between Yeltsin and Chernomyrdin, with the president pushing to keep reformers in the government. Chernomyrdin, who has been increasingly assertive in recent weeks, is arguing for a government more sympathetic to Russian industry and agriculture.

On Sunday, the main architect of reforms, First Deputy Prime Minister Yegor Gaidar, resigned from the government, saying its recent decisions threatened the course of reforms. He was followed by Social Welfare Minister Ella Pampfilova on Monday.

Chernomyrdin has rejected the conditions Fyodorov set to remain in the Cabinet, which included the removal of two conservatives and a demand that he remain a deputy prime minister as well as finance minister. But Fyodorov told the Interfax news agency today he had not yet quit.

"I have not submitted my resignation and I'm not going to submit it until the government's program has changed to an extent that this would mean the end of reforms," Fyodorov said.

Two Russian news organization had reported Tuesday that Fyodorov resigned.

Chernomyrdin and Yeltsin have both spoken of the need to soften the impact of reforms, which have been widely blamed for the victories by Communists and ultranationalists in December's parliamentary elections.

Hard-liners, including Vladimir Zhirinovskiy, promised to throw their support behind Yeltsin's government if more reformers leave the Cabinet.

"In a month or two they will leave," Zhirinovskiy predicted. "Then I will gladly say: Long live the president of Russia! Long live the Russian government! Long live the Russian parliament!"

Although Yeltsin assured President Clinton last week that Russia's free-market reforms would continue, many observers believe a shift in government policy is already under way.

"We are about to see a change in the course of reforms," commentator Leonid Lopatnikov wrote in today's newspaper Delovoi Mir. "There is a possibility that reforms will be abandoned and the situation reversed to the deficit quasi-planned economy, lines in stores and scientific and technical stagnation."

Doctors disagree on Lorena Bobbitt

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — Disputing an expert's conclusion that Lorena Bobbitt was "crazy" the night she cut off her husband's penis, a prosecution psychiatrist said she could have resisted the urge as she stood by the bed.

"She did not have an irresistible impulse, but an impulse she did not resist, which is different," Dr. Miller Ryans testified Tuesday in Mrs. Bobbitt's malicious wounding trial.

She faced a choice, Ryans said: "either to complete the act or to back off and leave. She chose to amputate the penis."

The defense has tried to show that years of physical and sexual abuse by her husband left her unable to resist an urge to maim her husband.

Defense psychiatrist Dr. Susan Fiester said Mrs. Bobbitt was a fragile woman pushed over the edge when — as she claims — her husband came home June 23 from a night of drinking and raped her. Bobbitt "psychologically cut off every avenue of escape" for his wife, leaving her at "an impasse, a situation that made her crazy," Ms. Fiester said Tuesday. She said Mrs. Bobbitt suffered "a brief reactive psychosis."

Bobbitt, 26, has denied ever hitting or raping his wife. He was acquitted of marital sexual assault in November.

Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, could get up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

Ryans agreed with Ms. Fiester that Mrs. Bobbitt suffered from severe depression and post-traumatic stress. But he said her action was not that of someone suffering momentary psychosis.

Ryans said Mrs. Bobbitt carried a kitchen knife into the bedroom while Bobbitt lay sleeping "and thought about all the bad things her husband had done to her" before acting.

Mrs. Bobbitt testified last week that she didn't remember maiming her husband, contradicting her testimony at Bobbitt's trial, when she said she pulled back the sheet and cut him.

Agent identifies Davidian as man who shot him

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An ATF agent today identified one of 11 Branch Davidians facing federal murder charges as a person who fired shots at him during a deadly raid at the religious compound of David Koresh early last year.

ATF special agent Eric Evers told an eight-woman, four-man jury that Livingston Fagan used a military-style assault rifle to fire shots at him as he and other agents attempted to search the compound and arrest Koresh on weapons charges last Feb. 28.

"There is no doubt in my mind that man (Fagan) shot me," said Evers, who testified that he was shot four times and sustained chest and shoulder injuries.

Defense attorneys say Fagan and the 10 other disciples of Koresh who are on trial were defending themselves against an ill-conceived "government onslaught." They retaliated only after being fired upon by 100 black-clad agents who rushed the compound from two unmarked cattle trailers, the attorneys said.

On cross-examination, attorney Rocket Rosen attempted to show Evers may have been mistaken about who shot him because he didn't give a more detailed description of Fagan to authorities.

Rosen also pointed out that Evers was never asked to identify Fagan in a police lineup. But Evers abruptly interrupted Rosen, saying, "I know that man shot me. Everything is etched in my mind until the day I die because of that incident."

Four ATF agents died and 16 were wounded in a 45-minute gun battle. Six Branch Davidians also are believed to have died. The gunfight touched off a 51-day standoff that culminated April 19 in an inferno that led to the deaths of Koresh and 85 others. At least 13 were found to have been shot.

The Davidian defendants face up to life in prison without parole if convicted of murder and murder conspiracy charges.

In the fifth day of testimony today, Evers said he thought he was going to be killed as he lay injured behind an outside wall of the compound amidst peppering gunfire.

"I knew they were trying to finish me off," Evers said. "They were shooting bullets off the wall so they would ricochet them. Every time I peeked out, they tried to blow my head off."

Evers said he was rescued by ATF agents after a cease fire was reached. Evers said he heard an unidentified Branch Davidian say, "You have four minutes. Get your wounded and your dead out of here. Leave us alone."

On Tuesday, ATF special agent Roland Ballesteros gave a gripping eyewitness account of meeting Koresh at the front door of his city-block-sized compound, of raid supervisors who lied about losing the element of surprise and a conflicting report of who fired first.

Defense attorneys also attempted to show on cross-examination that Ballesteros had either changed or added to police statements on everything from whether he announced he had a search warrant to descriptions of Koresh and his followers during the gun battle.

"You would think that a witness of that magnitude would not vary on specifics once he got into the courtroom," defense lawyer Dan Cogdell said outside of court. "He was confused then and now about what in fact happened."

Ballesteros testified that when he exited a cattle trailer at the compound, he heard gunshots "faintly" and believed the Branch Davidians were shooting at agents.

But that conflicted with an earlier statement that he heard gunshots as he reached a compound gate and that he thought those shots were from fellow agents subduing dogs.

Defense lawyers were eager to prove the inconsistency.

In a methodical interrogation, Cogdell also questioned Ballesteros about other apparently conflicting statements he made to local authorities the day of the raid, to the Texas Rangers on March 10, to U.S. District Judge Walter Smith in a September pre-trial hearing and Tuesday before the jury.

MADD official fired in wake of missing money

FORT WORTH (AP) — A key employee with the Tarrant County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving has been fired after the group learned it was missing $14,000, group officials have told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The missing money led to the firing of Malcolm Chris Barrow, the chapter's victim services coordinator, officials with MADD's national office in Irving said in Wednesday's editions of the Star-Telegram.

"We had talked to him about some financial irregularities, and he was unable to explain those," said Linda Johnson, director of field services in the national office. "It was reason enough for us to terminate him."

Barrow, 23, who took the $24,000-a-year position in March, said a termination letter he received Tuesday suggested he was fired because he received four paychecks — rather than two — in October.

"I deny I received any additional payroll checks as they say I did," said Barrow, who was fired last Friday. "I categorically deny any accusation of stealing money from the chapter."

"They have some paychecks which were written to and endorsed by what looks like me. I will make a supposition that someone else did that. They are not my signatures."

A complete audit of the Tarrant County chapter's books, policies and procedures by the national office is expected to take several weeks, Ms. Johnson said.

The 180-member chapter, meanwhile, is "at a standstill because of this," Ms. Johnson said, adding that the chapter's finances have been frozen during the audit.

The setback makes it more difficult for the group to promote its agenda of tougher penalties for drunk drivers in the wake of a Fort Worth police officer being killed by an allegedly drunk driver. The suspect had 12 drunken driving arrests.

"There are some important things we need to be doing right now," chapter president Paula Watson said.

Barrow was the only paid staff member at the local chapter office in a far east Fort Worth business park.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Government requires its own warning label

The federal radiation scandal keeps exploding like an atomic bomb. The latest revelation: In the 1940s the U.S. government injected railroad porter Elmer Allen's left leg with plutonium. The leg had to be cut off.

Said radiologist Eugene Saenger, one participant in the government experiments, "One can identify eight cases in which there is a possibility of the radiation therapy contributing to mortality."

Commendably, Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary continues shining light on the abuses. She told The New York Times. "Mr. Allen seemed like somebody who had been caught up in a giant machine ... The public, I hope, sees a past which is alarming and appalling. In the long run, if we handle this well, that might help us to establish a reason to be trusted."

This is a century of demented experiments on innocents by government, including even greater radiation exposure of unwitting people by the Soviet Union and the bizarre experiments of "Dr." Mengele and others in Nazi Germany.

The clear message is: No government of any kind, including any U.S. government, is to be trusted with the health and well-being of its people.

Even as more revelations about the government radiation experiments come out, the Clinton administration is advancing a health plan that would extend control by the same culpable government over all health care. Instead of deadly experiments conducted on several hundred people, Clinton would conduct a massive experiment on 260 million Americans.

Under the Clinton socialized medicine scheme, a government National Health Board would oversee care, set price ceilings and establish limits to care. Amazingly, under such a system the government could limit the care given to those still recovering from the radiation injections. The government poisoned those people, and the government could decide to let them die in agony. The Clinton health scheme itself would be the "giant machine" O'Leary warned about.

When will the 20th century experiments on people end? These experiments include not just direct medical experiments on people, but the uprooting of private institutions and free choice for schemes of government control.

The radiation experiments were imposed on a nation unaware. Now, in 1994, the evidence is out in the open, and growing, of how government should have a warning label attached: "Warning, use of government will cause a loss of life, liberty and property."

"Hey, bug off — will ya, Zhirinovskiy!"

Starting again in California

Close your eyes, please, and think back to the situation 30 years ago (if you are over 30; if not, kindly use your imagination). There is a huge fight going on in Congress over a civil rights bill sponsored by Sen. Hubert Humphrey. He wants to declare it a violation of federal law to discriminate against American citizens simply because of their color.

On the other side of the aisle, Sen. Barry Goldwater is protesting the bill. He says very convincingly that he abhors racial discrimination (he did not permit it when he was involved in the Goldwater merchandising enterprise), but that it is nowhere written in the Constitution that if Sam Legree has a fried chicken restaurant, he can be required to take in customers he doesn't want to take in.

The Goldwater opposition was strong: it had all of the solid South, segregationist for 100 years, on his side, and not a few strict constitutional constructionists.

The debate between the Humphrey forces and the Goldwater forces goes on, and Goldwater charges that, as written, the proposed civil rights act might be used prejudicially against non-black citizens. Humphrey insists that nothing of the sort will ever grow out of his act, but he consents slightly to alter the language, so that now it reads:

"Neither the (United States government) nor any of its political subdivisions or agents shall use race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin as a criterion for either discriminating against, or granting preferential treatment to, an individual or group in the operation of the State's system of public employment, public education or public contracting."

Anything wrong with that? Fast-forward to 1994. If Hubert Humphrey were here, he'd say, no, there is nothing at all wrong with that language. But replace "the United States government" above with "the state of California" and you have what two academics have proposed as an amendment to the California Constitution.

When a constitutional initiative is proposed in California, it goes first to the attorney general. He then refers it to a "policy analyst" and issues a "summary of the chief purpose and points of the proposed measure."

Having done this, the attorney general advised that if this measure is passed, it will result in the elimination of affirmative action programs costing "tens of millions of dollars annually," and also student assistant programs based on race, costing "about $50 million annually." He estimates the money that would be freed up to use in non-discriminatory aid to education at $120 million or more.

There are two problems, one of them for civil rights believers of the Humphrey school. Theirs is to raise the money needed to secure the 616,000 signatures to put the initiative on the ballot in November. Conservative resources were greatly depleted by the attempt to promulgate the school voucher system last year, and many activists were demoralized by that initiative's failure.

The problem for today's liberals is that although most of them are formally opposed to discrimination against people even if they are white and male, there is an activist minority to cope with. The polls show that more than 70 percent of the people nationwide oppose discrimination. But there is a heavy vote in California — blacks and Hispanics in particular — who, as we can see from the policy analysis above, have preferential treatment from the act passed in 1964 and its successor acts.

The California liberal legislator faces the quite hideous problem of having either to (a) back the CCRI (the California Civil Rights Initiative), affirming opposition to discrimination; or (b) oppose it — in order to appease ethnic minorities.

Now who would want to force liberal California politicians to speak out of only one side of their mouth? The sponsors of this initiative and, presumably, all the Republicans and the Humphrey Democrats who believe that current practices are a mutation of what was intended 30 years ago when the great civil rights bill was passed.

Experts who have looked at the initiative predict that if the money is raised to plant it before the voters in November, a revolution will have been effected as resonant as Proposition 13, which mobilized the voters against runaway taxation. If the California initiative is passed, meaning will once again be transfused into legislative effort to eliminate discrimination.

Those interested should address the California Civil Rights Initiative, P.O. Box 11795, Berkeley Calif. 94701-2795.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of 1994. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 19, 1807, Robert E. Lee, the commander-in-chief of the Confederate armies, was born in Stratford, Va.

On this date:

In 1736, James Watt, inventor of the steam engine, was born in Scotland.

In 1809, author Edgar Allan Poe was born in Boston.

In 1861, Georgia seceded from the Union.

In 1944, 50 years ago, the federal government relinquished control of the nation's railroads following settlement of a wage dispute.

In 1955, a presidential news conference was filmed for television for the first time, with the permission of President Eisenhower.

In 1966, Indira Gandhi was elected prime minister of India.

In 1970, President Nixon nominated G. Harrold Carswell to the U.S. Supreme Court; however, the nomination was defeated because of controversy over Carswell's past racial views.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

WILL LORENA BOBBITT EVER GET ANOTHER DATE?

Chalk dust and red apples

In the 1950s, when Dr. Clark Kerr was chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley, he conceded that the enormous enrollment, then 15,000, was deleteriously impersonal.

"Students," he complained, "have become 'numbers' rather than 'names.'"

The historic College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., with a campus population of 10,000, today might be considered deleteriously impersonal, though standout students will still stand out.

Gershom Wynn stood out. He was bright, hard-working and into everything.

He was a leader in student government and often addressed college officials in behalf of commuter student issues.

When the off-campus student council needed someone to organize and manage parties, Gershom always pitched in.

He pledged Sigma Mu Sigma fraternity and ultimately became the fraternity's rush chairman.

Much of Gershom's availability for extracurricular activities related to his gift for getting by without studying.

He did hang out a lot in the school library and was ever able to dominate frat rap sessions with his uncanny grasp of a wide spectrum of subjects.

History and economics were his majors, but his interests covered the entire spectrum of learning.

The college-owned house for off-campus students is a gathering place of commuter students to study, fix a meal or just hang out. There, Gershom was personally popular and was elected to represent that house on the Student Government Association.

With other students, he had part-time employment at the Williamsburg Winery and rented a house from the winery president, Patrick Duffeler.

His roommate was fraternity brother Patrick Duffeler II.

Nobody knows how the rumors started last summer that standout student Gershom Wynn had misrepresented his academic credentials from Virginia Military Institute.

When the new school year began, Gershom's fraternity routinely asked college administrators for Gershom's academic records.

There were none.

As mercifully as possible, I will synopsize what's happened since.

Gershom Wynn has no academic credentials; none at VMI, and none at William and Mary.

He has been on campus since 1992, "into everything" — except classes. He has attended no classes.

Gershom knows what he did was wrong. His mother died in 1990. He is not close to his father. His ambition to be "a student at William and Mary" and to have friends overwhelmed any inhibitions, so he initiated and perpetuated the charade.

Samuel Sadler, vice president for student affairs, says, "In a campus population of close to 10,000, one must understand how this could happen."

The public also has a right to 'No'

It has already been decreed that 1994 will be the year for grand reinvention — of health care and welfare and government itself. Now it has become imperative to add one more:

It is time for reinventing the news media.

It's a task we in the news business can handle ourselves, for we're not inventing something new and unfamiliar. We just need to return to the news ethic of yesteryear — that time when we still allowed public officials to have private lives. Today even top news execs seem to take pride in journalistic excesses.

We are talking about sex. And the proclivity of today's respectable news organizations to disseminate stories on allegations about the private sex lives of public officials. Even when there is no indication that this private conduct affected public policy (as John F. Kennedy's fling with a Mafia don's dame probably did).

We ought to start by sending a few stories back for rewrite — and rethink. We in the news media need to rethink just what we consider our mission to be in covering, discovering and disseminating news.

Consider the tales of the Arkansas state troopers and the governor who became our president.

Two troopers who hope to make big money on a book contract have come forward to make allegations filled with salacious details about Bill Clinton's sex life outside his marriage during his days as governor. They have done so at the urging of an Arkansas attorney known for spreading dirt on Clinton.

Martin Schram

Rethink: Just what is the news in this? Just what did the public know about Bill Clinton's private sex life and when did the public know it?

We knew back in January 1992 that Bill and Hillary Clinton had been through a rocky marriage that clearly involved infidelity. Our source was Clinton himself, who talked with his wife at his side in a CBS News 60 Minutes interview: "I have acknowledged wrongdoing. I have acknowledged causing pain in my marriage." He denied the allegation of Jennifer Flowers, a state employee and cabaret singer, that they had a 12-year affair. But he didn't deny ever having committed adultery.

So we knew two years ago, and then elected Clinton president. But still some in the media pursued. Last year, the Los Angeles Times invested in a four-month investigation. In December, it printed the troopers' allegations. It also reported that it found 1989-91 telephone records — only old records — that showed Clinton made many calls to a number of women (something which Clinton seemed to have indicated two years ago). The Times reported two bills were for $40.65 and $44.38 — as if that investigative factoid verified all the troopers' tales.

CNN actually broke the story two days earlier than the Times. CNN did no independent investigation of the troopers' past veracity or financial needs. CNN just knew that The American Spectator, a conservative political magazine, was about to publish the troopers' tales. So when Clinton's political enemy Cliff Jackson offered interviews with the troopers, CNN ran with their tales. Sadly, CNN's script was not done in the dispassionate investigative style of the Los Angeles Times; it began in a breathless style more suited to tabloid TV than this usually responsible cable news pioneer.

After CNN broke the so-called news story, the Clintons reacted in anger; and that seemed justification for many news organizations to air it all. There are old Clinton stories that merit media digging — notably, his handling as governor of the failing Madison Savings and Loan, which was run by Clinton's pal and co-investor in a real estate deal called "Whitewater."

But that's boring stuff by the measure of today's tabloidization of the news, an age where Buttafuoco and Bobbitt are household names that just happen to sound like verbs. Too many of my news colleagues are opting to slush through sex gossip, camouflaging their effort as a crusade for "the public's right to know." But they misunderstand. What they've been hearing was the public's right to "No!"

Crews begin demolishing wrecked freeways, race to fix water systems

By DARA TOM
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Commuters venturing back to work this morning jammed alternative routes as road crews ripped down chunks of damaged highway, part of the Herculean task of repairing the nation's business freeway system.

Drivers from the bedroom community of Santa Clarita were forced off severed Interstate 5 and backed up 10 miles on a weaving 20-mile route of surface roads. A white ribbon of headlights marked the detour around the crushed remains of the towering interchange.

The bodies of a man and woman found in the rubble of a Van Nuys house Tuesday night brought the death toll from Monday's quake to 42. People found themselves in ever-longer lines for gas, food, water and transport.

President Clinton was to visit the damaged areas today. The White House said he would avoid the freeways to keep disruptions to a minimum.

Along the crippled Santa Monica Freeway, which normally carries 290,000 cars east-west through central Los Angeles each day, crews used cranes and cutting torches to tear steel and concrete from a crumbled overpass.

For the next five days, crews will work round the clock to take down the collapsed sections of the Santa Monica Freeway, Interstate 5 and state Routes 14 and 118, all vital links in the region's highway network.

The state Transportation Department said it hopes to rebuild the damaged freeways by the end of the year — a program that is expected to cost at least $100 million.

Crews also struggled today to fix the San Fernando Valley's wrecked aqueducts as water in the lone reservoir dwindled.

Broken aqueducts cut off much of the water supply to the San Fernando Valley, the 260-square-mile suburban expanse hit hardest by the quake. That left 2.5 million people largely dependent on a single reservoir whose contents were dwindling fast.

"We're down to the nubs," said Bob Gomperz, a Metropolitan Water District Commission spokesman.

Officials said that unless the aqueducts were fixed by late today, strict conservation measures would probably have to be adopted for a time — although Southern Californians are used to that after six years of drought.

Across the region, people grappled with other quake reverberations:

— About 55,000 homes remained without power and 40,000 were without water today.

— Streets were empty during a second night of 11 p.m.-7 a.m. curfew. National Guard troops patrolled against looting.

— More than 500 aftershocks have rumbled through since Monday's quake, and thousands of jittery people continued camping out in parks and shelters.

— The Federal Emergency Management Agency said it expected to spend at least $1 billion on repairs. The 1989 San Francisco earthquake cost an estimated $5.9 billion.

Daily tasks became a chore.

"I was at least hoping to get some canned meat, but it looks like they're out," said Moises Govea of Mission Hills as she waited in line at a valley grocery store. "I have two grandchildren to take care of."

Eduardo Hernandez stood with his wife and daughters, ages 2 and 4, in a parking lot behind a church in Santa Clarita, feeding the remnants of their furniture to a small bonfire in the 40-degree chill. Their Newhall apartment was wrecked, and Hernandez lost his job in a grocery store flattened by the quake.

"Now there are a lot of people like us," Hernandez said.

Even for those with a roof overhead, big adjustments loomed.

Officials saw an opportunity to persuade Angelenos to embrace a new way of life. Urban planners have long promoted alternatives to the morning commute. And mass transit officials are busy plugging the region's new rail system.

Inman's quitting puts Pentagon leadership in the lurch

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Inman's surprise withdrawal as defense secretary nominee slams the brakes on the leadership transition that had been under way at the Pentagon since Les Aspin announced his resignation just over a month ago.

Senior defense officials whom Inman had asked to stay on after Aspin left, including William Perry as deputy defense secretary, now are back in the lurch at least until President Clinton chooses another nominee to oversee the military.

"That's the most serious part of it," former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said today. "A year into the administration we don't have any civilian leadership at the Pentagon."

In a letter to Clinton explaining his decision, Inman wrote that he was fed up with "rush-to-judgment distortions of my record, my character and my reputation."

Mark Gearan, Clinton's communications director, said a choice of a successor is "not imminent." Clinton has done "preliminary work," Gearan said.

Among those mentioned Tuesday as possible selections were Deputy Defense Secretary William Perry; CIA Director R. James Woolsey; Norman Augustine, chairman of the defense contractor Martin Marietta Corp.; Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee; Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on military installations, and former Republican Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire.

Republican Sen. Trent Lott, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said it would take at least a month to confirm a new nominee.

Cheney, interviewed on ABC, noted that the Defense Department was "the one charged with the very security of the nation itself. And to go this long without having ... strong civilian leadership is a real problem."

In a symbol of renewed uncertainty at the Pentagon, a farewell salute to Aspin by the military services, scheduled to be held today at Fort Myers, Va., was postponed after the White House announced Inman's withdrawal.

Kathleen deLaski, Aspin's press secretary, said Aspin agreed to a White House request that he stay "until a successor is found."

"There's a new anxiety" among Pentagon officials in the wake of Inman's withdrawal, said one official who spoke on condition of anonymity. "People were just starting to get used to the idea that things were settling down, and now this."

Inman's confirmation hearing had been scheduled for next week. It had been widely assumed that the former deputy CIA director would win confirmation easily.

At a news conference in Austin, Texas, where he lives, Inman said he changed his mind about taking the Pentagon post after "vitriolic attacks from columnists" and private indications that the Republican leader in the Senate, Bob Dole of Kansas, intended to "direct a partisan response" to Inman's nomination.

He claimed New York Times columnist William Safire made a deal with Dole that "if Senator Dole would turn up the heat on my nomination that Safire would turn up the heat on Whitewater development," a reference to a Clinton real estate investment now under investigation.

"This is utter nonsense" Dole said today. "The whole thing is a bit bizarre."

Safire was quoted in today's editions of Times as saying the allegations were "nothing short of weird," adding that he never talked to Dole about Inman.

In an interview late Tuesday on ABC-TV's Nightline program, Inman said four reporters had called him Tuesday asking if he was gay.

"If you can't find any other way to destroy a reputation, try that one," Inman said. "I reminded them that these rumors have circulated for years. They go back to my decision to keep a gay employee on the rolls at NSA (National Security Agency). I think it was a fair decision."

Inman also alluded to personal doubts about his commitment to the job.

He noted that he had spent the past 10 years working on issues outside the traditional realm of national security, but over the past month had been studying defense issue papers to prepare for Senate confirmation hearings.

"I've not whipped up a great appetite for those issues as compared to the ones I'm doing," he said.

State proposes health survey in 41 counties around Pantex

AMARILLO (AP) — A study proposed by state health researchers would examine rates of cancer and other medical problems in 41 counties around the Pantex nuclear weapons plant.

The Carson County facility, located about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo, serves as a disassembly site for nuclear bombs and storage for the bombs' plutonium pits.

Officials say the Texas Department of Health wants to monitor possible increases in illnesses and diseases in the Texas Panhandle and South Plains.

They say the study would examine hospital discharge data, problem pregnancies, birth defects, cancer and behavioral risk factors such as smoking.

Philip Huang, chief of the health department's bureau of chronic disease prevention and control, said the researchers would collect data by phone or door to door in the 41 counties.

The survey — which still needs approval by the health department and Department of Energy — could cost more than $1 million, Huang said.

A 1991 state study found the number of cases near Pantex was not abnormally high.

Laser might treat carpal tunnel syndrome

HOUSTON (AP) — A small laser device produced by a Houston firm might eventually prove successful in helping to treat sufferers of carpal tunnel syndrome.

General Motors, which has invested about $300 million in the MicroLight 830 and conducted tests with its workers, expects to release a study on the device's effectiveness this spring.

Carpal tunnel syndrome usually afflicts those who perform repetitive tasks with their hands, such as typing on computer keyboards. Those stricken complain of pain and numbness in their wrists and hands.

The MicroLight, which resembles a small flashlight, is a portable cold laser that uses a specific wavelength to penetrate the skin up an inch without producing heat or damaging tissues.

The laser is designed to thrust a stream of photons, or light energy, to the cells, resulting in increased blood and oxygen flow and reduced swelling. In therapy, a doctor holds the laser against the wrist for a few minutes every other day for five weeks.

The product was developed by doctors and engineers in Denmark and is made by the Houston-area firm LaserMedics.

Tabasco, an American treat known world-wide

By Marialisa Calta

On Avery Island, in southern Louisiana, picking pecks of pickling peppers is not just a business, it's a way of life. Because Avery Island — a salt dome rising out of the bayou — is the birthplace of the country's most venerable hot-sauce, Tabasco.

Tabasco sauce — made of special trademarked capsicum — was developed in 1868 by Edmund McIlhenny, who returned from Civil War exile to find his sugar plantation ruined, but a small crop of Mexican peppers — the seeds were received several years before — flourishing. He began working on a sauce of the peppers, combining them with vinegar and Avery Island salt and aging them in oak barrels.

Company lore has it that McIlhenny was only trying to spice up the dull fare of Reconstruction when he packaged his brew in tiny bottles, but he wound up, in sense, spicing up history as well. Bottles of Tabasco were taken on the 1922 excavation of King Tut's tomb, on several Himalayan expeditions and on Skylab. Vietnam vets are familiar with the tiny 2-ounce bottles of Tabasco that accompanied their C-rations, along with the company-sponsored cookbook "The Charley Ration Cookbook: No Food Is Too Good for the Man up Front." And soldiers in Desert Storm lauded the sauce for enhancing their M.R.E.'s (the military's new rations: "Meals, Ready-to-Eat").

I've been a fan of Tabasco since my college days, when my Southern roommate introduced me to me joys of eggs and grits showered in the stuff. I agree with chefs who have said it enhances flavor, and I've added it to everything from lentil soup to popover batter, with excellent results. I'm not alone. In 1990, company earnings were reported to top $50 million a year, and Eating Well magazine puts Tabasco's national market share at one-third. Tabasco bottles are labeled in 15 languages. Yet on a recent visit to Avery Island, I was impressed that the sauce has remained essentially unchanged for 125 years.

"When you buy a bottle of Tabasco, you're not just buying hot sauce," a Tabasco employee told me. "You're buying family pride. You're buying history." He wasn't just whistling Dixie.

Note — "The Tabasco Brand Cookbook," published by Clarkson Potter in 1993 to mark the 125th birthday of the sauce, gives both company history and wonderful recipes. The following are all taken from the book.

FRED'S HOTTEST SHRIMP
1 pound medium shrimp (about 36), shelled and deveined, shells reserved

1/2 cup water
2 teaspoons Tabasco sauce
1 tablespoon ketchup
1 teaspoon salt
Pinch of white pepper
1-1/2 teaspoons sugar
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 small green bell pepper, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
1 small red bell pepper, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
4 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup diced onion
1 tablespoon white wine
In a small saucepan, combine the shrimp shells with the water and boil for 10 minutes. Remove the shells and reserve the stock.
In a small, bowl, combine 1 tablespoon of the shrimp stock with the Tabasco sauce, ketchup, salt, white pepper and sugar. Set aside.
Heat 1-1/2 tablespoons of oil in a large skillet over high heat. When the oil is hot, add the bell peppers and saute for 1 minute, then remove the peppers and set aside.

Wipe the pan clean and add the remaining 2-1/2 tablespoons oil and the garlic and onion. Cook over high heat about 4 minutes, or until the onion is softened and translucent. Stir in the shrimp and cook for 1 minute.

Add the wine and mix well. The shrimp should begin to curl. Add the reserved peppers and stir, for about 30 seconds. Stir the Tabasco mixture thoroughly and pour into skillet, mixing all ingredients well.

Remove the pan from heat and transfer shrimp and sauce to a warming dish. Serve immediately with cooked rice.

Yield: 4 servings.
— Recipe from "The Tabasco Cookbook," by Paul McIlhenny and Barbara Hunter (Clarkson Potter, 1993).

CHEESE GRITS

4 cups chicken broth
1 cup quick-cooking grits
1-1/2 cups shredded sharp cheddar cheese
1 cup milk
2 large eggs, beaten
3/4 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a medium saucepan, bring the broth to a boil. Add the grits and cook according to package directions. Remove from the heat and stir in the cheese. In a bowl, combine the milk, eggs and Tabasco, then stir in the grits. Pour the mixture into a lightly greased casserole and bake 30 minutes.
Yield: 6 to 8 servings.
— Recipe from "The Tabasco Cookbook," by Paul McIlhenny and Barbara Hunter (Clarkson Potter, 1993).

CORN MAQUE CHOUX

1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped green bell pepper
4 cups whole-kernel corn (canned, fresh or frozen, tawed)

(AP Photo) Fred's Hottest Shrimp makes good use of Tabasco in decking out the decapods. But if shrimp aren't your thing, Tabasco on Cheese Grits or the ever popular Red Beans and Rice are guaranteed to hit the spot.

1 tomato, cored, seeded and chopped

1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
In a 2-quart saucepan, melt the butter over medium heat. Add the onion and pepper and, stirring frequently, cook for 5 minutes, or until tender. Stir in the corn, tomato, salt and Tabasco. Reduce the heat and simmer for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the corn is tender.
Note — The name of this Cajun classic is pronounced "mock shoe."
Yield: 4 to 6 servings.
— Recipe from "The Tabasco Cookbook," by Paul McIlhenny and Barbara Hunter (Clarkson Potter, 1993).

RED BEANS AND RICE

1 pound dried red beans, picked over
8 cups cold water
1/2 pound lean salt pork, bacon, or ham, diced
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup chopped onion
1 garlic clove, minced
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoons Tabasco sauce
4 cups hot cooked rice
In a large saucepan, combine the dried beans and water. Cover, and soak overnight. Add the pork (or bacon or ham) and bring to a simmer. Cook, covered, for 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a medium skillet, heat the oil and saute the onion and garlic for 3 minutes, or until golden. Add the mixture to the beans along with the parsley, salt and Tabasco.

Cover and simmer 1-1/2 to 1-3/4 hours longer, or until beans are tender enough to mash one easily with a fork, and most of the liquid has been absorbed. While cooking, add hot water as needed to keep the beans covered, and stir occasionally.

Serve over the hot cooked rice.
Note — This dish is traditionally eaten on Monday in New Orleans.
Yield: 8 servings.

Bread machine sales increase as price drops

By PAUL A. DRISCOLL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The ancient Romans were the first to free cooks from the daily chore of baking bread. Today, it is the Japanese who are the latest to advance the cause.

The Romans did it by creating the first commercial bakeries two centuries before Christ. Now, more than 2,000 years later, the Japanese have given us bread-making machines.

The breadmaker is the latest necessity in millions of kitchens and a star at the International Housewares Show this week.

Sales of breadmakers have about doubled each year after the appliance's modest introduction in 1988, reaching an estimated 2 million units last year. Manufacturers say sales could double again this year, helped by prices that have fallen as low as $100.

"The thing is like the coffee machine, people have to have fresh coffee in the morning," said Tom Lacalamita, spokesman for Welbilt Appliance Inc., of New Hyde Park, N.Y., the nation's dominant maker of bread machines.

"This is the same principle, people have to have fresh bread in the morning," he said.

And there's nothing to it: Dump in all the ingredients, set the timer and step back — or go to bed.

At the appointed time the machine mixes, kneads, shapes and bakes the bread — white, rye, wheat or just about any specialty flavor. The machine can also mix pizza dough, then stop before the baking step.

For people allergic to wheat, there are recipes for bread made with rice flour or tapioca flour.

Some visitors to the show expressed reservations about the flavor of machine-made bread. One said she detected a metallic taste. Others said the bread they tasted was better than that from supermarket bakeries, but not as good as handmade at home or from a neighborhood bakery.

But others were enthusiastic. "The taste is definitely comparable with handmade bread if you use the right ingredients," said Richard Cusick, a baking instructor at the Cooking and Hospitality Institute of Chicago Inc.

For people with a busy schedule and an interest in eating more grain and fiber without additives, the bread machine can be a blessing, Cusick said.

"They appreciate food prepared fresh, as opposed to having chemicals in bread to keep it fresh longer," he said.

One shortcoming of the machines, Cusick said, is achieving a crispy thin crust common on French or Italian bread.

But he said it's difficult to get that kind of crust even on handmade bread baked in a home oven.

Nonetheless, the interest in wholesome food and the ability to control what goes into the bread makes the machine attractive to many people, he said.

Lacalamita was confident the demand for the machine would keep growing.

"We know a majority of the American population is unaware of bread-making machines," he said. "And people like bread. I've never come across anyone who doesn't like bread."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

WIDOW'S DIET 'SECRET' IS SIMPLY MODERATION

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, an item appeared in your column about an elderly lady who lost weight on a diet she composed. She lost weight on it and went, I think, from a size 14 to a size 6. I forgot what eating pattern she followed.

Could you let me have a copy of that program? Thank you!

HELEN MASON,
COSTA MESA, CALIF.

DEAR HELEN: The letter was written by an 85-year-old widow, who was enjoying a new lease on life. Here is it...

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to "Enjoying Life in Florida," who felt comfortable she was heavy. I could have written that letter. When I was a bride, I was 5 feet tall and weighed 105 pounds. After 32 years of marriage, I was widowed, and within a year, my weight had doubled.

Now, here is where we part company. I would like to tell "Enjoying Life" how I took off weight. On my 80th birthday, I was a basket case. Arthritis was racking my knees and other joints, and I ached all over. In addition, I had high blood pressure, indigestion, and all of the other problems that go with obesity. Then I decided to do something about it.

Today, I'm 85; I wear a size 10 dress, and even more important, I am free of pain. I walk a mile in 20 minutes. (I can outwalk most people half my age!) People who know me are astonished that I did this without help from any organized group or special diet foods.

Here's my advice to people who want to do what I did. Remember, you didn't get fat overnight. Ease into your new habits. Never talk about what you are doing, just do it! Let others "discover" that you are losing weight.

First, cut down the size of your portions, then limit your meals to healthy foods such as fruits, vegetables, cereals, lean meat and nonfat milk. Drink at least 10 glasses of liquids a day (most of it should be water). When you cut out the fats and sweets, you will be surprised at how good the other foods taste. Even a baked potato can be a treat.

Start exercising. Begin slowly, then gradually increase the time, but do it so regularly that it becomes a habit.

Moderation is the key to success. Substitute common sense for bad habits. Life for me didn't begin at 40. It began at 80.

HAPPY AT LAST IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR HAPPY: What an inspirational letter! Too bad we'll never know how many men and women over 50 followed your lead. Thanks for the wake-up call.

DEAR ABBY: A young lady in our town is getting married next month. Her shower invitations arrived and on them was this message:

"Please remember to attach the receipt to your gift that you bring."

Abby, we are speechless and wonder if this is a new and acceptable practice. I am enclosing my name, but since this is a fairly small town, please sign me "Stunned in Salem County," and maybe the bridal party will recognize this. Mailed from ...

PENNSVILLE, N.J.

DEAR 'STUNNED': It may be a new practice, but I find it unacceptable. Don't blame the bridal party. Those who organized the bridal shower are responsible for the wording on the invitation.

Twain the divine, human love meet in marital union

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

Can the pleasures of the flesh lead to an outpouring of the spirit? The dominant view of theologians and mystics throughout church history has been that religious and sexual ecstasy are incompatible, says a scholar who has traced the evolution of religious views of sexuality.

Origen said in the third century that reaching sexual heights was a consequence of original sin. In 1188, the Carthusian monk Guigo II declared that when the body is engaged in sex the soul loses all reason, while in contemplation the flesh is unopposed to spirit and becomes wholly spiritual.

And consider the experiences of these famous mystics: Paulinus of Nola, who lived from 353 to 431, had a happy marriage that lasted for 19 years until his wife's death, but early on took a vow of continence.

In the 17th century, Marie Guyart, who became Marie de l'Incarnation, spoke of "patience under the trial of married life," says Mary Anne Oliver of John F. Kennedy University in Orinda, Calif.

But in an America that is no longer puritanical about sex, and where religious groups are trying to present a credible alternative to an "anything goes" approach, theologians have increasingly started to uphold the goodness of sexual expression in marriage, presenting it as an act that can unite body and spirit in love.

"I see it as just a response to the general societal change that's taking place in the United States," Oliver said in an interview. "Theology is simply making one of its paradigm shifts, adjusting to changes in society."

From the creation account in Genesis in which a man is told to leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife "and they become one flesh," many of the warrants for the goodness of sexuality within a monogamous marriage are biblical.

Biblical scholars have found the poetry of the two lovers in the Song of Songs particularly rich in celebrating human sexuality.

When you consider the experiences of reaching mystical and spiritual heights, there are remarkable similarities, Oliver said in a recent talk before the American Academy of Religion on "Religious and Sexual Ecstasy."

For example, she said both are extreme and irresistible experiences that transcend time and space and surrender to an overwhelming power.

"The sexual like the mystical sets aside a special time and space, transforms the ordinary consciousness, and leads to an increase in freedom to act in love," she said.

In their book "The Freedom of Sexual Love," Catholic marriage counselors Joseph and Lois Bird view the marital union as a channel of grace through which husband and wife grow toward mutual sanctity.

Any ascetic exercises that enhance that union are welcomed. "The couple's twofold obligation is to give sexual fulfillment and to strive to achieve it," according to the Birds.

Oliver says part of the reason the theology of the goodness of sexuality in marriage has not been further developed is practical.

"Spiritual counseling for couples has been at such a problem-solving and therapeutic level so far (that) there has really been very little reflection with the ties of the tradition," she said.

But there also have been voices lifted throughout history warning of seeking a false sense of omnipotence in sexual relations.

In the more traditional view, Oliver says, ecstasy can occur only within the mental realm, and is fostered by silencing the physical senses to open oneself up to the spirit.

In an essay "Four Mischievous Theories of Sex" in the new book "Perspectives on Marriage," William F. May takes somewhat of a middle view in saying the "sex-mystics" are correct in maintaining that sexual intercourse provides a privileged contact with ecstasy.

But he says biblical realism also warns against overestimating sex and then getting frustrated or retaliating when it fails to transcend "the merely human."

"As a sexologist, St. Augustine had his faults, but he recognized that people tend to engage in a double standard when they elevate the human into the divine — whether it be sex, marriage, children or any other creaturely good," May writes.

Most days find Sandy Crosswhite at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church although she is a member of Calvary Baptist, but evenings more often than not will find her working with Pampa's ACT I theatre group at The Pampa Mall. (Pampa News photo)

Taking the time to listen

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

The past seems like yesterday at this point in life, said Sandy Crosswhite.

The past must be filled with fun, because Crosswhite smiles when she talks about her life's adventures - many of them on Pampa stages.

Crosswhite is known to much of the town because of her work with Area Community Theatre Inc. She and her husband Rick are also involved with drama at Calvary Baptist Church although she's employed as church secretary at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

"Rick (Crosswhite, her husband) is the one that got the rest of the family interested in acting," she said.

The family moved to Pampa about the time ACT I opened. The couple took turns participating in productions so that one was always free to stay home with their children. As her children, Erich and Amber, got older they began to spend their evenings at the theatre while their parents rehearsed.

In "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" Crosswhite, Mr. Crosswhite and Erich were all cast members. "We really made it a family affair," she said.

The children napped on old stage curtains and watched the family television which took up residence in the theatre during play season.

"Our children have truly been theatre babies. They love it," she said.

High risk theatre differs from television and movies because it requires mental work on the part of the audience to make the scenes and characters come together, Crosswhite explained. The actor has one shot to get it right and unlike the cinema, there is no reshoot or editing.

"Driving Miss Daisy" was personally appealing because Crosswhite recalls growing up during the time of the action. It never occurred to her that blacks lived in a society where even public restrooms were not available to them.

"I was alive at the time this was going on and I didn't do anything to help," Crosswhite said.

The story of Miss Daisy and her driver Hoke is so beautiful, she said.

"I wanted to be able to contribute that in some way," she said.

Crosswhite has been employed at St. Matthew's for nine and a half years. She's lived through two periods without a priest where she was alone in the office much of the time and parishioners depended on her to get out the information.

"There've been many times I've been frustrated and wanted to quit but God would tap me on the shoulder and say, 'Not yet,'" she said.

Her job, while not in her home church, is a ministry just the same, Crosswhite said. Attending another congregation is freeing for both the parishioners of St. Matthew's and herself - no one has to look at her and think she knows too much, she said.

She counts it fortunate to have two church families.

"I've got a double benefit. To me that's kinda neat," she said.

At Calvary Baptist, she shares her dramatic skills, usually through Christmas and Easter plays for adults and Christmas and spring plays for youth.

She and her husband developed the Crossways, an imaginary family around which skits are developed for Sundays services.

Crosswhite said she gets the general direction of the upcoming sermon. "And God just throws things in my face."

Drama reaches one group and music another, she said. Dramatic presentations need not be overly elaborate; sometimes pantomime is sufficient, she explained.

"I think we need to be open enough to explore these areas," Crosswhite explained.

Because different people are touched spiritually by different approaches, Crosswhite values her experience with ACT I.

"I've often wondered why God put me in a theatre group that has nothing to do with the church. God was just training me," she said.

In Pampa, she said, the actor has about 10 minutes to go from being one's self to the character in a script, she said.

"To me that's the quality of being able to act - to get (the audience) to believe you are Truzy (of "Steel Magnolias") or Mother Superior (of "Nunsense")," she explained.

The director, Crosswhite explained, looks at each scene through the eyes of the audience. She considers the words on paper to visualize the set and vocal inflection.

"In your mind's eye, all this can be created. To me that's fun," she said.

The Oklahoma native enjoys working with church youth, as well as her own. Her job at St. Matthew's provides flexibility that mother's cherish.

"I found out early on, the more time you can spend with your kids, the better. You can't do it again," she said.

Crosswhite said that she starts every day with quiet time before the rest of the household awakens.

"Still thinking and listening to the still small voice. It's amazing how many creative things God gives me in that time. A lot of things are revealed if you just take the time to listen," she said.

Sesame Street cast member works from wheelchair

By SALLY WILLIAMS COOK
For AP Special Features

NEW YORK (AP) — "Sesame Street" is celebrating its 25th anniversary with new characters — among them, 9-year-old Tarah Lynne Schaeffer, the first regularly appearing character in a wheelchair.

Tarah was born with osteogenesis imperfecta, or O.T., which means her bones are extremely fragile and can break easily. She has had 80 to 90 fractures in her life and was once in a body cast. "I was neon orange," Tarah said in recent interview.

"We're trying to help remove the fear and mystique of being different," said Michael Loman, "Sesame Street" executive producer. "It's really no different than what we've been doing by including children from all different racial and ethnic groups."

Loman says he hopes Tarah will be a role model for other children with disabilities.

"Kids will look at her and feel positive about who they are and they'll feel included. When kids see her, they will get to know her and they'll understand that just because she looks different on the outside, her emotions and feelings are the same as other children's."

Because of their fragility, her bones don't grow as much, so Tarah is small for her age, and always will be. Although she is 9 years old, she wears clothing that a 3-year-old would wear.

"When I go out with my Mom to the supermarket or to the mall, people come up to me and say, 'how old are you?' When I tell them my age, they say, 'Oh, we thought you were 2 or 3 years old.' That makes me so mad and embarrassed. But, I feel much better when I explain my disability and talk about it," she said.

One of Tarah's best friends on the set is Big Bird. "He's so funny, and so so nice," she said. Caroll Spinney, who plays Big Bird, is equally enthusiastic about Tarah.

Loman said that although many children were auditioned, it was Tarah's sense of humor and enormous joy that got her the job.

In a special episode to air today on Public Broadcasting Service stations (check local listings), Tarah demonstrates how she trains for wheelchair sports.

Tarah appears totally at ease as she tells the cast of "Sesame Street" all about herself and demonstrates what kinds of exercises she needs to do to perform the complicated race with her wheelchair through an intricate course.

Tarah says she doesn't mind the two hour commute from her home in Connecticut to the studio in Astoria, Queens, N.Y., where the show is taped. Nor do the long rehearsals and memorization of lines bother her. "The producers think I'm doing very well," she says proudly. "In fact, they're even going to give me more and more dialogue."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In a competitive development today, don't be overly assertive where you have to depend upon back-up. The ranks behind your banner might collapse under fire. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be doubly attentive today if someone is providing you with critical information. In fact, it might be wise to make notes instead of committing it to your memory.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends who have complicated their affairs might look to you today to help them sort things out. Regrettably their problems may pertain to things with which you're unfamiliar.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't bring outsiders into domestic disagreements today between you and your mate. The contribution they'll be able to make may not be helpful to anyone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Malingerers might be looking to palm off their duties and responsibilities on you today if they think they can get away with it. There is a chance they may be able to.

KERRIGAN ATTACK

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding's interrogation by the FBI and district attorney dragged on 10 1/2 hours, during which she reluctantly broke again from Jeff Gillooly — her ex-husband implicated in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

Harding, seeking to clear her name and preserve a berth on U.S. Olympic figure skating team, looked calm and answered only a few questions after emerging from her first questioning by authorities.

Her attorney, Robert C. Weaver, said they answered all questions by the FBI and district attorney, adding it would not be appropriate to discuss details of the investigation.

Eight hours through the questioning, Harding announced she is separating again from Gillooly, whom she married in 1990, divorced last August and reconciled with in September. They had been living together. Harding maintained Gillooly's innocence and her own.

Shane Minoaka Stant, accused of striking Kerrigan's leg, was booked in Portland after appearing before a judge in Phoenix and agreeing not to fight extradition to Oregon.

OLYMPICS

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Maya Usova and Aleksandr Zhulin of Russia led pairs after two compulsory dances of the European Figure Skating Championships. Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean were tied for second with Russia's Oksana Gritschuk and Evgeni Platov.

It is the first time Torvill and Dean, who won gold at 1984 Olympics, have been behind in an ice dance competition since 1980, the year before they won the first of four consecutive world titles. The compulsory dances count 20 percent towards total score.

FOOTBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Joe Montana of Kansas City, running back Ricky Watters of San Francisco, and Bills defensive end Bruce Smith and special teams player Steve Tasker were selected NFL players of the week for divisional playoffs.

Montana and Watters were co-offensive players. Montana threw for 299 yards and three touchdowns in the Chiefs' 28-20 victory over Houston, and Watters ran for five touchdowns in the 49ers' 44-3 victory over the Giants.

Smith was defensive player with two sacks among eight tackles in a 29-23 Buffalo victory over the Los Angeles Raiders, while Tasker had a 67-yard kickoff return to set up another touchdown.

BOXING

CANASTOTA, N.Y. (AP) — Michael Spinks, the only light heavyweight champion to win a world heavyweight title, and 13 others were selected to the International Boxing Hall of Fame.

The 1994 inductees also include Jack Sharkey, oldest living former heavyweight champion; promoter Chris Dundee, joining brother Angelo in the Hall; and trainer Eddie Futch, who worked with a number of boxers already enshrined in the boxing museum.

Also voted in were Joey Maxim, light heavyweight champion from 1950-52 who beat Jersey Joe Walcott, Sugar Ray Robinson and Floyd Patterson during his 17-year career; and Mexican-born Carlos Zarate, bantamweight champion in the late 1970s who successfully defended his title nine times, all by knockouts.

Spinks and Zarate were elected their first year of eligibility, the third and fourth boxers to do so. Boxers must be retired five years to be eligible.

SKIING

CRANS-MONTANA, Switzerland (AP) — Norway won its third ski race in a week as Jan Einar Thorsen captured his first World Cup giant slalom.

Thorsen moved from second to overtake first-run leader Rainer Salzgeber of Austria and win with a total time of two minutes, 32.83 seconds.

Mitja Kunc of Slovenia was runnerup, .10 behind, for a career best. Salzgeber finished third.

Kjetil Andre Aamodt of Norway, reigning giant slalom world champion, finished fifth and widened his lead both in World Cup overall points race and giant slalom standings.

Aamodt now has 832 World Cup points, for a 180-point lead over runnerup Guenther Mader of Austria. Aamodt has 362 giant slalom points, 26 more than Austrian Christian Mayer.

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK (AP) — Ice and slush on the track and on roads leading to the facility wiped out thoroughbred racing at Aqueduct, the seventh cancellation since Jan. 1.

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — Sub-zero weather and highways blocked by record snowfall forced Turfway Park to cancel thoroughbred cards. Racing was expected to resume Friday night if temperatures rose.

The track, about 10 miles south of Cincinnati, has canceled nine dates since Dec. 25 because of weather.

SKIING

CRANS-MONTANA, Switzerland (AP) — A mistake five weeks ago put Jan Einar Thorsen on the slope to victory.

Thorsen, 27, captured his first World Cup giant slalom Tuesday, boosting Norway's medal hopes for the Winter Olympics it is staging at Lillehammer next month.

It was the fourth win for Norwegian men this season, all in a 10-day period. Before Thorsen, Finn Christian Jagge took a slalom, Lasse Kjus won the combined at Kitzbuehel, Austria, and World Cup leader Kjetil Andre Aamodt triumphed in a giant slalom.

Thorsen began as a technical skier, then specialized in speed events after becoming national downhill champion in 1985.

"But I always hoped to return to the giant slalom," he said.

Fourth-quarter surge lifts Pampa past Caprock

PAMPA — For three quarters, the Pampa-Caprock boys' District 1-4A clash was anybody's game. But in the final quarter, the McNeely Fieldhouse roof fell in on a stubborn Caprock club as the Harvesters stormed to an 84-65 win Tuesday night.

Pampa trailed at halftime, 34-32, and gained a 55-50 lead after three quarters. Sparked by Rayford Young, who scored 11 of his 36 points in the fourth quarter, Pampa outscored the visitors, 29-16, to go 2-0 in district play and 15-8 overall. Caprock dropped to 7-16 and 0-2.

The Harvesters started out like they were going to make the contest a rout from beginning to end, quickly taking a 7-0 lead. But Caprock couldn't be shaken. After tying the score twice, the Longhorns jumped on top for the first time, 26-24, on Jason Contreras' 3-point goal with 5:18 to go in the second half. From that point, the score was deadlocked three times before Caprock went into halftime with a two-point edge.

"Caprock is very deceiving. They're not real big, but they're real quick. They're quicker than they actually look," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "I'm real proud of the way our guys played. We kept trying to get our press going, but when we'd steal it, they'd get it right back. We went back to our man to man defense and the basics and we were able to get control of the game."

Caprock claimed its biggest lead of the night at 8 points in the third quarter, but the Harvesters rallied behind Young and Robert Bremerman to jump back on top. Young hit three straight baskets, including a 3-pointer, and Bremerman connected on a foul shot and a 14-foot jumper to give Pampa a 53-50 advantage with less than a minute remaining in the third quarter.

The fourth quarter belonged entirely to the Harvesters, who hit 9 of 14 field goal attempts while running off 11 consecutive points before Caprock got on the board.

Young, a 5-10 sophomore, hit 12 of 17 field goal attempts and was 10 of 12 from the foul line for the game. Seivern Wallace followed Young in Pampa's scoring attack with 11 points. Coy Laury and Duane Nickelberry added 10 points each.

Contreras topped Caprock with 25 points.

The Harvesters travel to Hereford Friday night for their next district outing.

Smith ready for 49ers

IRVING (AP) — Emmitt Smith has no choice. His coach expects the running back to play all day with one arm if he has to in the Dallas Cowboys' NFC championship game Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers.

"Emmitt will play and he won't have shoulder problems," coach Jimmy Johnson said Tuesday. "I have pronounced him healthy."

The NFL's leading rusher re-injured his right shoulder in Sunday's 27-17 divisional victory over the Green Bay Packers. Smith is receiving around-the-clock care to reduce the soreness in the shoulder he originally separated in the last game of the season against the New York Giants.

"I don't think Emmitt will be hesitant at all," Johnson said. "He'll be raring to go."

The Cowboys aren't the same team without Smith. They lost their first two games without him during a contract hold out.

"We rely heavily on Emmitt," Johnson said.

Smith hurt his shoulder against the Packers trying to block and Johnson held him out most of the second half.

"If I thought we needed him, he would have been back in there," Johnson said. "His big problem is pass protection."

Smith said he won't hold back against the 49ers.

"I did feel a little out of synch against the Packers," Smith said. "I had some problems holding the ball."

"I won't take any painkillers. I have the fear of hurting my shoulder and not realizing it's hurt," he said. "It's getting better every day. I'll be ready on Sunday."

The Cowboys are 5 1/2-point favorites, and Johnson is acting as though Sunday's game will decide the eventual Super Bowl champion.

"The most significant game we had last year was the win at Candlestick," Johnson said. "Nothing against Buffalo, but we felt if we won that game we would have success in the Super Bowl."

"San Francisco is on par with last year. The 49ers showed against the Giants they can play with anybody."

Lady Harvesters capture first district win

PAMPA — A second-quarter scoring outburst helped Pampa's Lady Harvesters turn the corner against Caprock in a District 1-4A girls' basketball tilt Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

The final score was 58-49, Pampa's favor.

It was Pampa's first district win after three setbacks. Caprock falls to 0-3.

The Lady Harvesters trailed by two, 15-13, at the end of the first quarter, but outscored the Lady Longhorns, 17-5, in the second quarter.

Elisha Calloway and Jayme Davis paced Pampa's scoring attack with 19 and 17 points respectively.

Misty Scribner added 8 points for Pampa, followed by Jennifer Jones with 6, Jane Brown 5 and Katy Green 3. Liberty Vibbard was high scorer for Caprock with 11 points. Tammy Castellano and Jessica Teague added 10 points each.

Pampa led by 10 (30-20) at halftime and by eight (37-29) after three quarters.

The Lady Harvesters play at Hereford on Friday night with the game tipping off at 6.

Fort Elliott downs Higgins in basketball twinbill

By SUSAN ADELETTI
Sports Writer

Fort Elliott came out on the high end of two close contests last night, beating Higgins, 46-41 and 65-58 in the girls' and boys' games respectively. With a starter missing from each Cougar lineup, Fort Elliott had to do battle with two sub-500 teams.

"We didn't play very good; we seemed to step real slow," Fort Elliott coach Curtis Smith said. "Higgins did a good job. Both boys and girls played real hard."

The girls' game was highlighted solely by the play of Lindsey Fillingim, who racked up 18 points and 13 rebounds. In a game that was riddled with fouls, Fillingim's consistent free throw shooting made the difference.

After a first quarter during which no one led for more than a minute, both Higgins and Fort Elliott turned on their offenses. With strong rebounding on both ends of the court, the aggressive play of Andrea Dukes (15 points) and good free throws, the Cougars built a steady lead in the second quarter.

It seemed as if Higgins trailed by three points all during the second half, until Coyote Carla Barbee nailed a three-pointer to tie the game at 41 with three minutes left in the game. Once again, however, it was Fillingim's free throws which gave the Cougars back their lead.

In the boys' game, Justin Westbrook notched 25 points and Jake Swigart scored 11 of his 17 points in the first quarter, contributing to Fort Elliott's solid lead.

Although the game was clearly in the hands of Fort Elliott, Higgins managed to shake up the Cougars when a steady 10-point lead slowly disintegrated before their eyes. Rusty Slavin's timely three-pointer pulled Higgins ahead, 35-34, in the final seconds of the second quarter.

Although Fort Elliott quickly ended the threat, things heated up again after halftime when Higgins' Jared Booker's three-pointer knotted the score at 38. Westbrook countered with a trey of his own to regain the lead, which was allowed to build again.

The Coyotes took over once more, 55-54, for a moment in the fourth, but fine ballhandling from Westbrook and rebounding from Jimmy Nelson enabled Fort Elliott to dominate the rest of the time. The game's final minute saw two Higgins offensive fouls translate into free throw opportunities for the Cougars.

With Caron Laverty out of the starting lineup, freshman Dana Trimble was given the go-ahead in the girls' game, while John Moffett filled in for an injured David Hale. "You take one of your starters out and that kind of throws you out of synch," Smith said. "It seemed like it hurt us more than I think it should."

Bills' Kelly compares favorably with Montana

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — There is one Joe Montana, a quarterback on the verge of a fifth trip to the Super Bowl — and perhaps his fifth title.

There are many Joe Montana wannabes, including a quarterback on the verge of his fourth successive appearance in the Super Bowl — and perhaps his first title.

Mary Levy thinks he has someone as close to the real thing as you can get in Jim Kelly. Of course, Kelly won't get anything near the acclaim sent Montana's way until he leads Buffalo to an NFL championship.

"I think both have a lot of mental toughness and self-assurance and inspire belief from their teammates," Levy said as his Bills prepared for Sunday's AFC Championship game against Montana and the Kansas City Chiefs. "They're both guys from Pennsylvania who had some success early. They both think they're never out of it and a bad play doesn't affect them.

"A long time ago, when I was still coaching in college, Bart Starr once told me that he became a good quarterback when he was completely able to forget about the previous bad play and wipe it from his mind. It's not that you don't feel bad for 30 seconds, but then you put it behind you."

Montana has four Super Bowl crowns behind him in San Francisco and is anxious for another one with Kansas City, which traded for him last year. Whether he gets it or not, the Bills are ready to praise him.

"We're playing against the best ever, a great quarterback and competitor," linebacker Darryl Talley said. "Joe does everything that is conducive to being a winner."

He did just that the last two weeks against defenses more formidable than Buffalo's. Despite some poor throws and early mistakes, he responded late in victories over Pittsburgh and Houston, just as he always does.

"He knows that the game is not over if he has the ball in his hands and there's time on the clock," Bills safety Henry Jones said of Montana. "Jim is the same way. He knows he can make something happen.

"Joe knows if there's a chance to move the ball downfield, there's a good opportunity to put his team ahead. He's been doing it for so long."

He's also been doing it in the same 49ers-style offense. The Chiefs brought in Paul Hackett, who used to work in San Francisco, to revamp their attack. Then they traded for Montana, who didn't want to be Steve Young's caddy with the Niners.

"How many looks can you give him that he hasn't seen?" Talley asked. "He's the only person I know who has played in one system for 16 years. He knows where

Fernandez posts overtime upset in Australian Open

By ROB GLOSTER
AP Sports Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Mary Joe Fernandez needed overtime Wednesday to move into the third round of the Australian Open, while 17-year-old Chanda Rubin advanced by upsetting the 12th seed.

Fernandez, seeded sixth, beat Ines Gorrochategui 6-3, 2-6, 9-7, rallying from a 4-2 deficit in the final set.

Gorrochategui, an Argentinean ranked 55th in the world, was the aggressor throughout the 2-hour, 15-minute match. Most points ended either with a winner or an error by Gorrochategui.

Fernandez, the only American among the top 10 women's seeds, is a two-time Australian Open finalist.

"From the beginning of the second set she started firing away," Fernandez said. "I was having trouble playing aggressively because she was taking it away from me."

No. 13 Helena Sukova also advanced Wednesday, but No. 12 Amanda Coetzer was defeated 6-1, 2-6, 6-3 by Rubin, a Louisiana teen-ager who mixed up her attack, using looping lobs at her to keep the South African off balance.

"It actually kind of inspired me, because I wasn't going to let the two-set-to-love lead get away like it did back in '91," he said. "It didn't get me nervous or play a negative role."

Pierce, who plays for France but lives in Florida, is starting her first full year away from her overbearing father and the controversy his abuse generated in women's tennis. Jim Pierce has been banned by the Women's Tennis Association from attending her matches until the end of 1994.

After beating Baudone 6-2, 6-1, Pierce said it was good to concentrate on tennis. But she said the travails of 1993 have helped her mature.

"It helped me a lot to learn things more in life and off the court," said Pierce, who turned 19 Saturday. "It made me a better person and I learned a lot. It made me mentally tougher also."

Men's fourth seed Stefan Edberg, No. 6 Thomas Muster, No. 9 Todd Martin, No. 10 Magnus Gustafsson, No. 12 Alexander Volkov, No. 13 Wayne Ferreira and No. 16 Arnaud Boetsch all won first-round matches Tuesday.

No. 8 Petr Korda joined Stich as an upset victim, losing in straight sets to Thomas Enqvist.

Women's second seed Arantxa Sanchez Vicario dropped only four games while winning her first-round match Tuesday and No. 10 Kimiko Date, the first Japanese player ranked in the top 10, lost just two games in advancing.

No. 3 Conchita Martinez, No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 5 Jana Novotna and No. 14 Magdalena Maleeva also won.

The Australian Open, played on Rebound Ace hard courts, is sponsored by Ford.

Washington took advantage of repeated mistakes by Stich, a semifinalist at Melbourne last year. Stich sprayed shots off the court in all directions and was forced into errors at the net by Washington's low returns.

Washington, ranked 26th in the world, lost his serve only in the third set. Though Stich is one of the best serve-and-volleyers in tennis, Washington had a better winning percentage at the net.

"It's not like he won the match," Stich said. "I gave it to him."

Stich appeared distracted at times, grumbling at line calls and fretting over several missed opportunities. His wife, Jessica, a German actress, rubbed her eyes

CBS sports is finally a winner

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Sports is finally a winner.

The network, which last month lost its part of the NFL contract to the Fox television network, has won exclusive U.S. television rights to the 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan.

Sources close to the negotiations told The Associated Press Tuesday that the winning bid was about $375 million, a Winter Olympics record.

The New York Times, in today's editions, reported CBS as having won the rights, quoting Richard Pound of Canada, an International Olympic Committee vice president.

It was not known immediately whether CBS actually outbid Fox for the Winter Games or whether the International Olympic Committee decided to accept a lower bid from the more established U.S. network.

A news conference is scheduled today in New York, but CBS would not confirm it was to announce the bid.

This would be the third straight Winter Olympics for CBS. The network paid $300 million for the next month's Games in Lillehammer, Norway, and $243 million for the 1992 Games in Albertville, France.

The previous Winter Games record was $309 million by ABC for the 1988 Calgary Games.

In December, CBS lost the NFC portion of the NFL contract for the next four years to Fox, which bid $1.58 billion, or about $100 million per year more than CBS.

The Associated Press reported last month that Fox owner Rupert Murdoch had decided to bid for the

Mavs fall again

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Suns are an NBA glamour team; the Dallas Mavericks the losingest in league history to this point of a season.

But Dan Majerle and A.C. Green of Phoenix were in a take-no-prisoners mood when the clubs met for the second time this season.

"A loss to Dallas on our home court would be devastating," said Majerle, who scored 13 of his 27 points in the first period, when the Suns set the tempo for a 113-103 victory Tuesday night.

Green was the closer, scoring nine of his 19 points in a 5 1/2-minute span, including a three-point play with 1:38 left, that sealed the win. Green made it 110-98 with his layup and free throw, sending the Mavericks to their 10th straight defeat and 33rd in 35 games this season.

"We've had so many games when we didn't get it done down the stretch," said Green, a 104-99 loss to Golden State on Monday the most recent. "I had to go to sleep last night thinking about how we lost but could have won."

"I'm glad that game is out of the way," coach Paul Westphal said. "It figured to be a tough one as far as I was concerned because of the way we played last night, how banged-up we are, and how hungry they are for a win."

Record-high figures offered in baseball arbitration

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — No matter whether Jack McDowell wins or loses in salary arbitration — and he's done both — he'll get a great raise in 1994.

The Cy Young Award winner asked for $6.5 million and the Chicago White Sox offered $5.3 million when the sides traded figures Tuesday. Both numbers are record highs in the arbitration system that started before the 1974 season.

In all, 80 players exchanged figures with clubs, and 59 sought at least $1 million and 14 asked for $4 million or more. Last year, 76 of the 100 players asked for $1 million or more and six sought at least $4 million.

Atlanta outfielder Ron Gant asked for $6 million, Texas outfielder Juan Gonzalez asked for $4.9 million, Seattle outfielder Jay Buhner wanted $4.7 million and St. Louis infielder Gregg Jefferies wanted $4.6 million. Two teams proposed salary cuts — Cincinnati for reliever Rob Dibble and Montreal for infielder Randy Milligan.

In a couple of weeks, players and teams that have not reached agreement will hold hearings before an arbitrator, who will pick one figure or the other. Settlements can be worked out until the arbitrator's decision.

Few cases, though, are decided by an arbitrator. Last year, only 18 went that far, and teams won 12 of them. Since the system started 20 years ago, teams have won 198 cases and players have won 160.

Win or lose, however, the players tend to do well. The 118 players eligible for salary arbitration last year wound up with an average salary increase of 110 percent, and the year before the average increase was 100 percent.

Gonzalez, who made $525,000 last season, and the Rangers had the biggest disparity in contract figures this year. Gonzalez, who led the AL with 46 home runs and also hit .310 with 118 RBIs, was offered $3 million by the Rangers, $1.9 million less than he asked.

AL batting champion John Olerud of Toronto asked for $4.8 million and the Blue Jays offered $3.45 million. He made $1,562,500 last season.

Philadelphia pitcher Curt Schilling, MVP of the NL playoffs, asked for $3.2 million and was offered $2 million. He made $1,025,000 last season.

The smallest difference was between the New York Yankees and first baseman Kevin Maas. He asked for $490,000 and was offered $425,000. Yankees pitcher Jim Abbott, who made $2.35 million last year, sought $2.9 million and was offered $2,650,000.

McDowell won a $4 million salary in arbitration last season, then went 22-10 with 3.37 ERA for Chicago and won the AL Cy Young Award. The $6.5 million he is seeking topped the $5.4 million that Cecil Fielder wanted from Detroit two years ago.

The White Sox, who beat McDowell in arbitration in 1992, topped the previous offered in arbitration of $4.25 million by Texas to Rafael Palmeiro last year.

The Atlanta Braves have five players in arbitration, all seeking big money. Along with Gant's request for $6 million (Atlanta offered $5.2 million), there are outfielder David Justic (asking $4.4 million, offered $3.5 million), infielder Jeff Blauser ($4.2 million-$3.3 million) and pitchers Steve Avery ($2.8 million-$2.1 million) and Kent Mercker ($1,475,000-$1,050,000).

Earlier in the day, the Braves and reliever Mike Stanton agreed on a one-year contract for $1.4 million, a raise of $550,000.

Dibble, who made $2.5 million last season and struggled for Cincinnati, was offered $2.3 million and asked for $2.7 million. Milligan, who made $635,000 with Cleveland last season, was offered $600,000 by the Expos and sought $1 million.

Montreal and Kansas City each had eight players in arbitration. Infielder David Howard and the Royals, though, settled at $220,000 after exchanging figures; he wanted $240,000 and was offered $210,000.

Boston infielder Tim Lincecum reached agreement at $300,000 after he asked for $365,000 and the Red Sox offered $275,000.

The New York Mets, California and Pittsburgh have no players left in arbitration.

Other players who reached agreement shortly before the exchange of figures included second baseman Luis Allos of St. Louis, catcher-third baseman Jim Leyritz and pitcher Xavier Hernandez of the Yankees, and infielder Jose Vizcaino and pitcher Jose Bautista of the Chicago Cubs.

In another deal, the Phillies agreed with reliever Larry Andersen on a one-year, minor-league contract.

Andersen, 40, will receive $350,000 guaranteed and another $200,000 if he makes the big league club. He was 3-2 with a 2.92 ERA in 64 games.

Serbs, Croats agree to normalize relations

By JULIJANA MOJSILOVIC
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — Croatia and Serbia agreed today to begin normalizing relations, a move apparently aimed at pressuring the Muslim-led Bosnian government to accept the division of Bosnia into three ethnic states.

The accord, signed on the second day of the latest round of talks aimed at ending Bosnia's 21-month civil war, stopped short of mutual diplomatic recognition. The two governments agreed to open offices in each other's capitals on Feb. 15.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and Croatian President Franjo Tudjman shook hands after their foreign ministers signed the agreement, pledging to work for "a just and lasting solution of the crisis" in former Yugoslavia.

After Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia, Serbia and Croatia fought a six-month war that ended with a U.N.-mediated truce in January 1992.

The two countries are accused of supporting ethnic Serbs and Croats against the Muslim-led government in Bosnia's civil war. More than 200,000 people have died in the fighting.

The Serbs and Croats already have made a peace proposal that has been rejected by the Bosnian government. The proposal would leave Muslims with about 30 percent of Bosnia's prewar territory, more than twice as much as they control now, with the rest becoming Serb and Croat states.

The Bosnian government says the proposed Muslim state would not survive because it would have no guaranteed access to the sea and would be split into isolated enclaves.

Bosnian Croats originally fought against the Serbs in a loose alliance with government forces. But in recent months, the Croats have turned against the Bosnian army.

As the peace talks in Geneva moved into a second day today, international mediators held out little if any hope of a settlement and warned of even worse fighting in Bosnia.

"Certainly I have no reason to be more optimistic," U.N. envoy Thorvald Stoltenberg told reporters before today's talks. "I don't even think I should use the word."

European Union mediator Lord Owen said more bloodshed is inevitable if the latest round of talks fails. He said earlier that fighting between the Bosnian government and Serbs on some fronts and Croats on others was at its worst in months.

"There's no possibility of avoiding, in certain parts of Bosnia anyhow, a very considerable increase in fighting," Owen said.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said the government would continue to press the Serbs to give back land they conquered in eastern Bosnia and around the northeastern city of Banja Luka.

Government forces have made recent battlefield gains, especially against the Croats in central Bosnia, and are apparently prepared to carry on fighting rather than settle for what they consider a bad deal.

AIDS drama 'Philadelphia' is No. 1 at box office

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Philadelphia, Hollywood's first big-budget movie about AIDS, was No. 1 at the box office in its first weekend of wide release, proving that a film about the disease can reach a national audience.

The movie, directed by Jonathan Demme of Silence of the Lambs, stars Tom Hanks as a gay lawyer with AIDS who sues after his firm fires him. Denzel Washington plays his attorney. The movie made $13.7 million over the weekend.

Many of the weekend figures were rough estimates because communications and studio operations were disrupted by Monday's earthquake.

"Despite the earthquake, the L.A. curfew, abnormally cold weather and TV watching, total estimated weekend (grosses) will come close to equaling the comparative week of last year," John Krier, president of Exhibitor Relations Co., said Tuesday.

Among new movies, the hip-hop comedy House Party 3 debuted in third place with $7.3 million. Iron Will, a Walt Disney movie about dogsledding, was sixth with $5.6 million, and Death Wish V: The Face of Death, starring Charles Bronson, opened in 19th place.

The weekend's top 10 films, according to Exhibitor Relations, with weekend gross, number of North American theater locations, average per location, total gross and number of weeks in release:

1. Philadelphia, TriStar, $13.7 million, 1,245 locations, $11,004 per location, $14.7 million, four weeks.

2. Mrs. Doubtfire, 20th Century Fox, $10.8 million, 2,355 locations, $4,586 per location, $152.3 million, eight weeks.

3. House Party 3, New Line, $7.3 million, 848 locations, $8,550 per location, $9 million, 1 1/2 weeks.

4. Grumpy Old Men, Warner Bros., $6.3 million, 1,606 locations, $3,923 per location, $34.1 million, four weeks.

5. The Pelican Brief, Warner Bros., $5.9 million, 1,934 locations, $3,051 per location, $81.8 million, five weeks.

6. Iron Will, Disney, $5.6 million, 1,901 locations, $2,930 per location, $5.6 million, one week.

7. Tombstone, Disney, $5.5 million, 1,849 locations, $2,975 per location, $39.9 million, four weeks.

8. The Air Up There, Disney, $4.8 million, 1,721 locations, $2,789 per location, $11.2 million, two weeks.

9. Shadowlands, Savoy, $3.7 million, 734 locations, $5,007 per location, $9.4 million, three weeks.

10. Schindler's List, Universal, $3.5 million, 252 locations, $13,690 per location, $14.6 million, five weeks.
