PAMPA — The seventh annual Joe Dicosimo Music Festival is scheduled Thursday in M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center. The festival honors former band director Joe Dicosimo, who taught 31 years in Pampa schools.

Nine bands will perform their UIL contest shows for a panel of adjudicators. Performance times are as follows: Pampa Middle School, 4:00; Borger Middle School, 4:20; Borger Middle School varsity, 4:40; Pampa Middle School varsity, 5:00; Dumas Middle School, 5:20; Pampa High School, 5:40; Dumas Middle School varsity, 6:00; and Hereford High School 7:00 varsity.

The Pride of Pampa Symphonic Band will conclude the festival Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The festival is open to the public.

WASHINGTON (AP) — AT&T is going to have to satisfy a federal judge that its proposed $12.6 billion purchase of McCaw Cellular Communications would not violate an antitrust ruling that broke up the Bell System.

At issue is the ultimate ownership of some cellular telephone operations that McCaw — the country's biggest cellular-telephone company — co-owns with regional Bell telephone companies. Under a 1982 consent decree that ended the Bell System, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is barred from acquiring assets owned by Bell companies. By purchasing McCaw, AT&T would acquire cellular operations co-owned with other Bells. U.S. District Judge Harold Greene, who wrote and oversees the consent decree, ruled Tuesday that the deal would violate his order, but he left open the door for the two companies to seek a waiver.

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A young woman with a schoolgirl's voice and a page-boy haircut has become the Palestinians' most tangible sign that peace talks with the Israelis have finally begun to bear fruit.

Hanan Wazir Deek, daughter of the slain PLO leader known as Abu Jihad, returned to the occupied lands Tuesday with her husband Ahmed Deek and 47 other exiled leaders of the Palestinian uprising. They will help build an autonomy government in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and try to dispel perceptions among Palestinians that the Israel-PLO peace accord has failed to bring change.

"Brothers, we win the right today for every Palestinian to return," Deek said at a reception at a Jericho garden restaurant for 26 deportees returning to the West Bank. The other 23 returned to Gaza.

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — The warnings to the Roman Catholic bishop appeared mysteriously on churches one morning, shortly after rebel and government negotiators left town.

"This church is closed until Samuel Ruiz Garcia leaves the city, Chiapas and Mexico," read the signs, posted on wooden doors.

As mediator for peace talks between Indian guerrillas and government officials in southern Mexico, Ruiz has been called "Commandante Samuel" and "the red bishop" by conservative detractors.

"We don't like him because he's a guerrilla," said cattleman Jose Villanueva, 59, of Ocosingo.

Manufacturing activity

NAPM index — % change

NEW YORK (AP) — American manufacturing expanded for the seventh straight month in March, although growth slowed from February's levels.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said Monday its index of manufacturing activity rose to 56.7 percent from 56.6 percent in February. The group's price index fell to 64.2 percent from 67 percent, indicating that inflation is under control.

PEDC hires new director

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Beginning on May 2, Pampa's Economic Development Corporation will have a new director to oversee its daily operations and get on with the job of promoting business and industrial growth in the area.

John L. Ippel was hired Tuesday by the PEDC's Board of Directors following a search which lasted almost six months.

"We are delighted to have him on board and look forward to working with him," said Bill Waters, president of the PEDC. "It's been a long time, since mid-September, that we've been without a director of economic development, but we felt like we should be very careful in our selection."

Ippel, who is coming to Pampa from Bloomfield, Iowa, replaces Bill Miller, who resigned from the PEDC last year to return to private business.

One of the things that attracted the board to Ippel was his apparent ability to get things done, Waters said.

Other factors in his being hired included 11 years of economic development and experience in a rural setting, according to Waters.

"Not only does he have considerable experience in the field of economic development, but he has been associated with rural rather than large urban communities," Waters said. "Although he has been working in what has been reputed to be one of the poorest communities or counties in Iowa, he had some success there."

Ippel has been the executive director of the Davis County Economic Development Corporation for the last four years.

He has two bachelor's degrees from Metropolitan State University, one in business and the other in public administration, as well as a number of certifications in courses specifically dealing with economic development, according to Waters.

The vote to hire Ippel was unanimous among the board members in attendance. Wayne Stripling, a board member, was not at the meeting due to an emergency in his family.

Money pledged to aid expansion for prison

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

During Tuesday's meeting of the Pampa Economic Development Corporation's Board of Directors, more than $400,000 was pledged to help make an addition to the Rufe Jordan Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice a reality.

In terms of employment, the addition to the prison is expected to create 120 new jobs for area residents.

While it sounds like a great deal of money, the $404,000 the PEDC promised to TDCJ is far within guidelines established by the corporation to assist in creating jobs, said Bill Waters, president of the PEDC's Board of Directors.

"As I said before, these are inexpensive jobs to the community," Waters said.

Specifically, the PEDC is spending about $3,367 per job the expansion is expected to create. According to the corporation's guidelines, they could spend as much as $16,000 per job to help attract business and industry to the area, according to Waters.

In 1992, when the prison first came to Pampa, four local organizations helped in financing the project. The city, the county, the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce and the Industrial Foundation organized a fund raising effort throughout the city to raise money to help bring the prison to the Pampa area, Waters said.

The PEDC didn't participate in the original prison project because it had not yet been created.

Eighteen months ago, the PEDC was created to help existing businesses and bring in new industry. The corporation is funded with money from sales taxes paid by Pampa residents and governed by a five-member board of directors.

Prior to anything formally taking place, however, the last details of an operating agreement have to be worked out. Currently, the agreement is being drawn up by TDCJ officials in Huntsville and should be ready for signing later this week, according to Waters.

The agreement between the state and the entities representing Pampa formally establishes two phases of the prison expansion.

In the first phase, a building, which formerly belonged to the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group — Pampa Plant, will be moved from its present site to the prison's property, at which time a 10,000 square foot addition will be added.

Following that, the second phase of the expansion project begins when the prison takes over and completes the necessary electrical, plumbing and security work in the building.

Both the city's and county's contributions will come during the first phase of the project.

The city will establish sewer and water lines at the prison while the county will do the site preparation work at the prison which is located east of Pampa, according to Waters.

Currently, workers from Plains Builders are at the prison doing preliminary work prior to dismantling the building and moving it to the prison.

Shamrock woman, nephew convicted of drug charges

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

WHEELER — A pair of Shamrock residents today face punishment for violation of drug laws.

Kerry Lee Wright, 34, and her nephew, Sam Wright, 21, both of Shamrock, were convicted in Wheeler County Court Tuesday for possession of marijuana under two ounces and distribution of marijuana under two ounces, respectively.

Ms. Wright was assessed one year probation, $200 fine and 30 days in county jail, and Mr. Wright was assessed 30 days in Wheeler County jail and a $500 fine. He is assigned to a work release program in which he continues employment during the week and spends the weekends in jail, said Sheriff Jimmy Adams of Wheeler.

An undercover officer purchased the weed from Mr. Wright on Aug. 22, 1993, said Adams. After the buyer, a law enforcement officer now employed in the Texas Panhandle, asked for the drug, Mr. Wright went around to several locations, including his aunt's home where he obtained it, Adams said.

Ms. Wright declined to reveal her source to law enforcement officers, Adams said.

Adams said the drug buy did not cost Wheeler County any money. The $20 used for the buy was recovered the night of Mr. Wright's arrest.

Other drug investigations are planned, Adams said.

Endeavour launch set for Friday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA aimed for a Friday launch of Endeavour after the spaceship's engines were found to be free of a dangerous defect discovered in the shuttle fleet.

The weather may not cooperate, however. The chances of good weather for the 8:06 a.m. liftoff were put at 40 percent because of a cold front headed this way.

Endeavour will lift off with a crew of six and a set of highly sophisticated radar instruments that will survey the world's deserts, mountains, volcanoes, forests, farmland and oceans during the nine-day flight.

NASA had postponed liftoff from Thursday to Friday to inspect Endeavour for a flaw that engine maker Rocketdyne discovered in other shuttle oxidizer pumps. Tuesday's inspection at the launch pad found no defective parts.

"The orbiter's in good shape," shuttle test director Mike Leinbach said today. "We've declared victory on the pumps, and we're ready to fly."

Snow, frigid temperatures bring April freeze

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Forget what the calendar says: Winter is back, at least briefly.

Light snow and frigid temperatures returned to the Texas Panhandle with a cold snap Tuesday that stirred fears of crop damage.

"With the wheat and some other grains being planted now, this weather could definitely hurt," said Brent Bean, a soil and crop specialist in Amarillo. "This is a crucial time for the grain farmers because the plants are in the strongest and most crucial growth stage."

None of the flurries accumulated, however, and temperatures today are expected to climb into the 50s.

But the arctic front postponed Tuesday's baseball game in Canyon between West Texas A&M and Wayland Baptist.

"Twenty-eight degrees — I mean, that's below anything you want to do outside, let alone try to pitch a baseball," said WT coach Mike Marshall. "It's just injurious."

In San Antonio, hard rains pelted through the roof of the Alamodome, causing a 12-minute delay in an NBA game between Golden State and the Spurs.

"It apparently damaged the roof some and got a couple of leaks on the floor," Mayor Nelson Wolff said.

Thunderstorms brewed late in the evening Tuesday in North Texas and East Texas, where the National Weather Service issued a tornado watch for numerous counties and warned of large hail and damaging winds.

Meanwhile, temperatures in South Texas climbed above 90 degrees.

Scott Plischke, an NWS meteorologist, said the cold front first hit Dalhart late Monday and blasted to the southeast at 45 mph.

Plischke described a dramatic lamb-to-lion change: At 11:56 p.m. Monday in Amarillo, winds were blowing at 13 mph from the southwest and the temperature was 54 degrees. Seventeen minutes later, winds gusted from the north at 46 mph and the mercury had plunged 20 degrees.

"It doesn't happen every year, (but) it's not rare," Plischke said.

Juli Rhoden, a communications technician for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station, said the cold snap likely will kill off some pesky insects.

The biggest threat right now for West Texas farmers seems to be drought.

"Midland and Odessa, I know for a fact, are so dry this cold front is going to do them neither harm nor good," Ms. Rhoden said.

Glen Clugy, county executive director of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service in Hartley County, south of Dalhart, said the freeze damage could compound problems for wheat already stunted by lack of rain.

Pampa co-sponsoring science teachers meeting

Pampa's Independent School District will be one of this year's co-sponsors of the Panhandle Area Science Conference which is scheduled to be held at West Texas A&M University in Canyon on Saturday.

The conference, titled "Transforming the Future Through Science Education," begins with a registration session at 8 a.m. at Mary Moody Northern Hall.

Kay Harvey, a Pampa teacher and one of the conference organizers, said the gathering is a good opportunity for area educators wanting to improve their teaching methods and meet other science teachers, some from as far away as Lubbock and Plano.

Dr. Jan Davis, a former U.S. astronaut, will deliver the keynote address beginning at 8:45 a.m.

In September 1992, Davis along with her husband, Lt. Col. Mark C. Lee, were the first husband-wife team to be launched into space when they were on board the Space Shuttle Endeavor.

Starting in 1979, Davis began working from NASA. In 1986, she became a team leader in the Structural Analysis Division where her team was responsible for the structural analysis and verification of the Hubble Space Telescope, the HST Maintenance Mission and the Advanced X-Ray Astrophysics Facility.

In addition to the keynote address, conference participants will have the chance to attend grade-level workshops on a variety of subjects and will have the opportunity to go on field trips to one of three sites: Palo Duro Canyon, the Agricultural Experiment Station, or the Air Traffic Control Center and Weather Bureau.

Margaret Williams, a science teacher at Pampa Middle School and one of the teachers planning workshops, agreed with Harvey about the conference.

"I've gone to it every year ... I made a presentation a couple of years ago and I'm going to make another one this time ... A lot of teachers go to this," she said. "This is a good one."

In addition to PISD and WTAMU, other educational agencies to sponsor the conference include the Regions XVI and XVII Educational Service Centers and the Amarillo Independent School District.

Clinton ready to threaten Serbs with air strikes

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Depending on a U.N. commander's report, the Clinton administration is prepared to threaten Bosnian Serbs with NATO air strikes to protect peacekeeping troops in eastern Bosnia, administration officials said today.

While the Pentagon this week appeared to rule out using air power to assist besieged civilians in Serb-encircled Gorazde, the officials said that military assessment could be changed after Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose conducts an inspection.

Rose is to decide whether to send in Ukrainian peacekeepers, and then whether to recommend they be protected by threatened air strikes. The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Clinton administration would support the U.N. commander by asking the North Atlantic Council to back him up.

Rose's entry was blocked, however, by the Serbs, though three U.N. military observers and eight of Rose's liaison officers were permitted to proceed amid reports the predominantly Muslim town was about to fall.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said, "We're looking at a number of ways to continue to deal with the situation (in Gorazde) and in other places in the country, including possibly expanding the exclusion-zone concept. ... It's something that's been under discussion since it was successful in Sarajevo."

Meanwhile, Rep. Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., just back from Bosnia, said today the administration is turning away while Serbian forces slaughter innocent civilians.

A longtime advocate of more forceful action by the United States in the former Yugoslavia, McCloskey said he planned to brief White House officials on his trip and urge a shift in administration policy.

Like President Clinton, McCloskey opposes the introduction of U.S. ground troops in Bosnia until a peace settlement between the warring factions is achieved. But McCloskey wants the United States and NATO to expand the threat of air strikes beyond Sarajevo to Gorazde and other besieged communities.

On Tuesday, Gen. John M. Shalikashvili, just back from his own Balkans survey, said the notion NATO air strikes could save Gorazde may be "wishful thinking."

The chairman of the joint chiefs of staff ruled out for now — as Defense Secretary William J. Perry already had on Sunday — the threat of military action to rescue Gorazde.

The situation was on the agenda for the weekly luncheon meeting here of Perry, national security adviser Anthony Lake and Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who is sending U.S. mediator Charles E. Redman back to the region later in the week to seek a negotiated settlement to the war in Bosnia.

Christopher conferred by telephone with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, who is trying to recover for his Muslim-led government at least some of the territory seized by Bosnian Serb forces with Belgrade's backing.

Jailers indicted in beatings of prisoners

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two jailers have been indicted on civil rights charges in connection with beatings inflicted last year on two prisoners, both of which were captured by video cameras.

The indictments, returned on March 29, accuse Todd Hamilton, 32, and Dale Motes, 44, of the third-degree felony of intentionally and unlawfully inflicting bodily injury on a Tarrant County Jail prisoner.

Both Motes and Hamilton were hired in November 1992 as part of a special squad charged with subduing violent inmates.

Motes is accused in a one-count indictment of striking inmate Tony Blacklock in the head with his hand and kicking him in the head during a Nov. 18 scuffle.

Hamilton is accused in a four-count indictment of striking Blacklock in the head with his hand. A jail supervisor said Blacklock, 28, of Houston was beaten beyond recognition, his eyes swollen shut.

Two students shot at high school in Round Rock

ROUND ROCK (AP) — Authorities say three teenage students stole a pistol and then smuggled it into an Austin area high school, where it accidentally fired, injuring two students taking a first aid class.

Travis County Sheriff's Department chief of staff Andy Saenz said charges were filed against two of the students and more likely would be filed against a third student today in connection with a Tuesday morning shooting at McNeil High School in Round Rock, an Austin suburb.

The two shooting victims, an 18-year-old girl and a 17-year-old girl, were in good condition at Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, officials said.

Saenz said one of the suspects, who is 16, took a pistol into the school in a knapsack.

"It looks like he was showing the gun to somebody and in the process of putting back into his backpack, it discharged accidentally," Saenz said.

"Students in the classroom were watching a film and luckily several of them were sitting on the floor because the bullet literally flew over their heads," Saenz said.

The bullet traveled through a wall into an adjoining classroom, struck one student in the shoulder and then lodged in the right leg of another student, Saenz said.

"The class where the bullet went into, the students were being taught first aid," Saenz said. "It became a real-life scenario very quickly until the EMS team could arrive on the scene."

Larry BeSaw, spokesman for Brackenridge Hospital, said the shooting victims, Rashonda Sparkman, 18, and a 17-year-old girl, whose name wasn't released because she is a juvenile, were both in good condition.

BeSaw, who said he couldn't comment on the girls' injuries, expected both to be released from the hospital in the next two days.

Officials said they believe the suspect planned to try to sell the gun on campus.

"We believe all three of them broke into a home and stole the gun (Tuesday) morning," Saenz said. "Our understanding is that they had broken into the same home before."

Two of the students have been charged with burglary of a habitation and with violating a law that bars weapons on school grounds, which is punishable by a sentence of up to 10 years.

Saenz said a third student would be charged with burglary of a habitation. All three — two of whom are 16 and one who is 15 — were being detained at the Gardner House, a juvenile detention center in Austin.

Saenz said about 40 students in the two classrooms where the shooting and injuries occurred were questioned by police and counseled to reduce any shock they may have been suffering.

"The students were emotionally shaken," said Nick Boltz, community relations director for the Round Rock Independent School District. "School counselors and sheriff's department counselors were with the students this afternoon."

"We are very concerned for the safety of our students," said Boltz, adding that this was the first gun-related incident on record at a Round Rock school. "A lot of people have moved to this district because they perceive we have excellent and safe schools."

"It's kind of ironic that at the time this incident occurred, a school representative was appearing at a commissioner's court, seeking to have liaison (police) officers in our high schools," he said.

"This is a situation we constantly warn school officials about, the fact that there are so many weapons available on the street," Saenz said. "This school is no different from other high schools. There are probably weapons at other high schools and some middle schools, too."

Teamsters strike nationwide against freight hauler firms

By MICHAEL WARREN
Associated Press Writer

Thousands of truckers, dock workers and mechanics threw up picket lines today in a nationwide strike by the Teamsters against 22 trucking companies.

The walkout by up to 75,000 union members began at midnight over a plan by the companies to give more work to part-time workers and use trains more often.

"Some things you've got to fight for, and we've got to fight for this," said Les Gregor, picketing outside Yellow Trucking in Spokane, Wash.

But Michael Wickham, president of Roadway Express of Akron, Ohio, said that using part-timers is "absolutely vital" to reduce costs.

In Seekonk, Mass., a picket was charged with disorderly conduct and malicious destruction of property for throwing something at a truck, and another striker was injured, not seriously, when he either walked into or was hit by a truck trying to leave a terminal, said Police Sgt. Richard Bradley.

Many drivers were still on the road after midnight, completing their shifts before heading to picket lines at their home terminals.

Consumers should see little immediate impact. Many of the companies haul raw materials and parts rather than finished products, and most supermarkets and food producers have their own fleets and aren't part of the dispute.

However, some nonunion drivers worried that the strike — the Teamsters' first nationwide walkout since 1979 — could prevent them from delivering their loads.

Borger to have Pancake Day on Saturday

BORGER — The Borger Kiwanis Club will be hosting the 36th annual Pancake Day on Saturday from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Borger Middle School cafeteria.

The annual event will include pancakes, bacon, sausage, coffee and milk, said Marie Venable, club president.

Ed Wheeler is the Pancake Day chairman, while Ray Ooley is responsible for the commemorative booklet. Audrey Klaus is in charge of supplies.

Venable said the Borger Kiwanis Club is celebrating 49 years of service to Borger and Hutchinson County.

"As a service club dedicated to continued growth of our community,

"If they throw a brick through my window or start banging on my truck, I'm backing off," said Cliff Bond of Baltimore, a nonunion driver stopped for a meal this morning on the New Jersey Turnpike. "But intimidation is the only way they can pull this off. There's too few of them now to do anything."

Danny Ball, a former Teamster from West Virginia who now has a nonunion trucking job, said: "If they stop me from making a delivery, I'm shutting down. I wouldn't cross no picket lines."

The Teamsters' contract expired last week. The union agreed to extend its strike deadline until today so negotiations could continue, but the trucking companies said the proposal they put forward last week was their final offer.

No talks are scheduled. "We don't plan to call them and we don't expect them to call," said Robert Young, a spokesman for the companies. "We're prepared for the worst. We hope it doesn't last long."

When talks broke down last week, the companies' chief negotiator, Arthur H. Bunte Jr., said steps were needed to give management more flexibility "in a highly competitive market."

But Teamsters President Ron Carey said that giving in would eventually cost thousands of union jobs.

"They want to shift to using part-time workers with low wages and little or no benefits," Carey said. "This is wrong for workers and their families, it is wrong for our communities and it is wrong for America."

we're involved in various activities that range from programs for our youth, to assistance to the disabled and elderly," Venable said. "We take literally our motto, 'We Build.'"

She said the Pancake Day is the club's largest program for fund raising to benefit various community programs and charities to which the club contributes.

Pancake Day Chairman Wheeler, recently retired chief deputy sheriff, will be assisted by all club members in serving the breakfast.

Tickets are $3 per person and $1.50 for children under 12.

Grab the brooms and shovels — it's donkey basketball time!

Hee-haw!! Hee-haw!! Liniment in large doses will be the call for contenders in Saturday night's Donkey Basketball Show.

The event, sponsored by the Pampa Noon Lions Club, will be held at McNeely Field House at Pampa High School.

Starting time is 7:30 p.m. with Hoechst Celanese tipping off against Mundy Companies in the first game, followed by a game pitting the Pampa Noon Lions Club against the Texas Department of Criminal Justice from the Rufe Jordan Unit.

"I think kicking off would be more descriptive," said Ray Boring, Lions Club president. "You never know what to expect when Bob Crosby brings his real live donkeys to Pampa. One thing we can expect is lots of laughs."

"All four teams have been training extensively for this monumental event," he added. "I heard the team from the TDCJ had been doing some extra training inside the walls at the unit. Supposedly they have been getting tips from an inmate who is a former rodeo rider."

"Bull," said Jack Gindorf, Noon

Lions Club member. "Nobody knows more about how to get a bunch of donkeys to work together as a team than the Pampa Noon Lions Club. We will win 'hooves' down," he predicted.

Winners of the two games will meet head-on in an eight-minute championship bout immediately following the second game. Each of the first rounds will consist of two eight-minute halves with a 15-minute intermission between the games.

Adding to the fun are special rules such as not holding the ball for more than 15 seconds, no out-of-bounds, time-outs for emergency only, the wearing of padding and football helmets, and the fact that each player will be responsible for his own donkey while it is on the floor. A broom and shovel will be handy at all times.

Tickets are $5 for adults and high school students and $3 for grade school students if purchased in advance from Noon Lions Club members. They will be $1 more at the door.

For tickets or more information, contact Boring at 665-2323.

Stock market roller coaster taking many Americans for a ride

By DAVID E. KALISH
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Wall Street roller coaster is taking millions of ordinary Americans along for the ride — particularly those who need cash now for such things as homes, cars, college or rent.

Many are former savers who eschewed 3 percent annual interest rates on certificates of deposit, and instead bought mutual funds that until recently were earning double-digit returns. Others are soon-to-be retirees who depend on hefty lump-sum payouts from pension funds invested heavily in stocks and bonds.

While financial strategists have long warned that the market is no place for short-term investors, the hazards didn't become fully clear until stocks dropped sharply in recent months.

"The real trick is not having to have your money," said William Griggs of Griggs & Santow Inc., a financial strategy firm. "It's a good lesson to learn, that these things do fluctuate according to asset value. Hopefully it wasn't an expensive lesson."

Unlike bank deposits and money-market funds, mutual funds can cost you some of your principal. Indeed, mutual funds invested in stocks sank an average of 3.21 percent in the January-March period, according to Lipper Analytical Services Inc.

The decline reflected a nearly 10 percent plunge in the Dow Jones average from its Jan. 31 all-time high. The market staged a dramatic rebound Tuesday, but analysts said the slide may not be over.

Many investors may not have the luxury of waiting out the decline.

"Most stock- and bond-market money is long-term investment funds, where people tend to ride out these corrections. But if some people were sticking short-term cash savings into bonds and the stock market, then they are in trouble," said David McLaughlin, a financial adviser with Chase Investment Counsel Corp. in Charlottesville, Va. "On the average, they'd have 10 percent less money to spend."

For example, prospective homeowners intending to close on a new house this month may find themselves unable to make the down payment if they're relying on cash from a mutual fund.

In some rare instances, buyers may no longer qualify for a mortgage if the drop in their stock portfolio pushes them below the minimum net worth required by the lender.

Retirees may have particular reason to worry.

While some retirees reinvest their dividends, others cash in their mutual funds to meet their living expenses. For them, the drop in the market "may not be life and death," Griggs said, "but it will have been a bit of a problem."

Employees or retirees who belong to defined-benefit pension plans invested in stocks can probably relax, according to Mike Clowes, editor of Pensions & Investments magazine.

In such plans, the employer promises the retiree a regular income, usually based on length of employment and salary. If a market decline drags down the principal value of the pension fund, it's up to the employer to add more money to the fund.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

U.S. can fare best by outwaiting Kim

The prospect that the ruthless North Korean dictator Kim Il-sung might have nuclear weapons is hardly welcome. But it is so frightening that we want an administration that has become the stand-tall hero of Somalia and the unrelenting and utterly capable liberator of Bosnia to try to handle the situation? That's not an easy question to face.

It seems reasonably clear that Kim Il-sung is spoiling for a confrontation with what is conventionally referred to as the "international community." After seeming to allow U.N. nuclear inspectors in, he kept them away from a site they consider a likely candidate for bomb building. Then he raised the rhetorical temperature, speaking of his ability to turn South Korean capital Seoul into a "sea of fire."

Either Kim has begun to assemble a rudimentary arsenal or he wants to keep the inspectors away so they won't discover and publicize the emptiness of his nuclear threat. Whatever the truth, it's nuclear blackmail. The Clinton administration so far has relied on intensified diplomacy with the North, combined with a restatement of a longstanding U.S. promise to defend South Korea, backed up by sending Seoul some Patriot missiles.

As unsatisfying as it might be in light of Kim's intransigence, it might be just as well if the administration didn't go much beyond that. This is hardly a group that has shown a deft touch in foreign affairs. It is all too possible that the Clintonites could stumble into a war with little clue about objectives or how to attain them.

For starters, if economic sanctions - the apparent next step against North Korea - are so have a prayer of working, they will require the full cooperation of Japan and mainland China. But the administration has been conducting an unnecessary and damaging war of words with Japan over trade issues. It has upbraided China (probably correctly but perhaps not prudently) over human-rights issues, and tied improved trade relations to political improvement on the mainland.

Thus the leaders of both counties have little incentive to enforce a trade embargo with full vigor. If they judge that the nuclear threat from North Korea is trivial or overblown, they might even get a certain pleasure out of seeing the United States fail or look foolish in East Asia. Sensing this, perhaps, China has been lukewarm toward any harsh resolution against North Korea from the United Nations.

Once a diplomatic stand-off has begun, it's easy for it to escalate, almost independently of the desires of the participants. For many reasons, the U.S. diplomats assigned to this imbroglio should resist that tendency, even if it means outwaiting Kim Il-sung and being criticized as wishy-washy. A mismanaged confrontation or war would be more disastrous than a frustrating stand-off.

In the meantime, the Clinton administration needs to stand firm and find some realistic policy of strength against North Korea. It might want to rethink its knee-jerk opposition to anything resembling a strategic missile defense system.

A Jewish professor at Howard

For 25 years, Professor Vera Katz has taught acting and directing in Howard University Department of Theater Arts. Among her students have been Debbie Allen, Phylicia Rashad, Charles Brown and Lynn Whitfield, among other durably successful professionals.

Recently, the virus of anti-Semitism has demonstrably infected a number of students at Howard. Khalid Abdul Muhammad's characterization of Jews as "bloodsuckers" despoiling black communities has had some currency on campus. Most dismaying was a chorus of vicious charges against Jews led by law student Malik Zulu Shabazz that would have delighted Joseph Goebbels. It has to be emphasized that far from all Howard students share this bigotry.

During these attacks on Jews, Vera Katz came into Howard one morning "totally upset and in a rage." She said to some of her colleagues, "Well, here I am, Miss Bloodsucker!" They asked what she was so upset about. The student leading that call and response of hate was a fanatic, they said. "It wasn't just him," she answered. "A lot of people were cheering."

As a teacher with deep roots at Howard, Professor Katz immediately decided to teach about stereotypes. "With all my classes that day," she told me, "I made sure they had to look at me, they had to see me, as a human being. They had to realize that they were being taught by a Jewish lady who had been devoted to teaching students at Howard for a quarter of a century."

Vera Katz spoke to her students about how hurt she was that her heritage was being maligned. "I told them I understood how much they respected their own heritage and their own ancestors. And I noted that I, having studied their history and culture, also have great reverence for their ancestors. And I hoped that they could see that there are Jews who have fought in the civil rights movement and Jews who teach in inner cities now. I mean Jews who are not just helping but are interacting with African-Americans."

I asked what the students' reactions were. "Most of them said, as one put it, 'It's terrible when you indict a whole group of people. Like we African-Americans often get indicted on the news by what some African-American does. Our whole race is judged by that.'"

A student said: "I know, Professor Katz, there are many different kinds of Jews."

Sean Wingate, an 18-year-old freshman, had told the New York Times he was disturbed that some students, as a test of solidarity, felt they had to agree with the anti-Semitism. "They say African-Americans shouldn't think independently, because that leads to divisions in the black community. I feel," said Wingate, "how else can we think at all."

"God bless him," Professor Katz said. "He said something like that in my class. And he was heard."

Some of the students spoke in strong support of the Nation of Islam. "A very bright young lady in my directing class," said Professor Katz, "told of the positive things the Nation of Islam has done. I told her I certainly agree. In the last 1960s, when I first came to Howard, I had students who had been into drugs and were straightened out by the Nation of Islam. I respected that. I said I wasn't going to indict the entire Nation of Islam because of a particular strain in it."

Professor Katz looked at the young woman. "You catch my drift?" The supporter of the Nation of Islam nodded.

I asked the professor if she had seen any effects of her attack on stereo-types.

"Some of the students who didn't know me well," she said, "seem to be working harder in class now. They seem to be more open and honest. Because, I think, I was."

Howard students did not, of course, have to be in Vera Katz's class to think straight. The Chronicle of Higher Education quotes Maurice Dolberry, a junior majoring in biology: "One of the things the Nation of Islam says is that a white person wouldn't be mistreated by blacks because it's not in a black person's nature to mistreat someone. In the next breath, they'll be calling white people 'crackers' and 'devils.' I know Jewish people I like, and Jewish people I don't like. I let people's actions speak for them."

Michelle Mordica, a student of Professor Katz's, told Washington Jewish Week: "She comes from a very honest place. She cares about me as a person ... so I am more susceptible to her criticism."

If more professors and administrators came from a very honest place, more students would learn how to find their own.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, April 6, the 96th day of 1994. There are 269 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 6, 1909, explorers Robert Peary and Matthew Henson became the first men to reach the North Pole. (The claim, disputed by skeptics, was upheld in 1989 by the Navigation Foundation.)

On this date:
In 1830, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints was organized by Joseph Smith in Fayette, N.Y.

In 1862, the Civil War Battle of Shiloh began when the Confederates attacked Union forces in Tennessee.

In 1892, author, journalist and world traveler Lowell Thomas was born in Woodington, Ohio.

In 1896, the first modern Olympic games formally opened in Athens, Greece.

In 1917, Congress approved a declaration of war against Germany.

In 1963, the United States and Britain signed an agreement under which the Americans would sell Polaris A-3 missiles to the British.

Championship for Hot Dog Frank

Every campus should have one. Lebanon Valley College in Annville, Pa., has had Frank Aftosomes for 45 years. Generations of students knew him as Hot Dog Frank.

On the square just a block from campus, the Greek immigrant had his little hot dog shop.

Hot Dog Frank loved Lebanon Valley.

Any basketball season the Flying Dutchmen beat their arch rival, Albright, the hot dogs were on him.

Hot Dog Frank.

Any Lebanon Valley student needing counsel knew where to go.

Or money.

"Hot Dog, I need some money to go home this weekend."

"Hot Dog, I can't pay this week, but I sure need something to eat."

And Hot Dog Frank never said no.

And in 45 years, not one student ever failed to repay.

Hot Dog Frank.

He was honored at half time at a basketball game in February, was made an honorary alumnus and learned the school planned a life-size statue of him on campus.

Paul Harvey

Frank, with little education but much learning, said his thanks through tears.

This year, the big climactic game of the basketball season brought tiny Lebanon Valley, enrollment 950, up against giant New York University, enrollment 49,000, for the national NCAA Division Championship.

The game's in Buffalo.

The score has been back and forth, and now with 2.9 seconds remaining, NYU is leading, but Lebanon Valley has the ball.

A desperation shot went wide, a following shot was missed - a second rebound was tipped in, but just as the buzzer sounded.

NYU fans rushed onto the court, thinking they had won. But the referee said the buzzer came AFTER the ball cleared the basket; the score was good, the game was tied.

It was the slow buzzer that sent the game into overtime.

And in overtime, tiny Lebanon Valley went on to win over big New York University 66 to 59.

Lebanon Valley has never won a national championship before.

Hot Dog Frank?

He was not there.

Nor did he see that climactic game on TV. Just before game time, at the age of 92, Frank Aftosomes had died.

But the president and students of Lebanon Valley have no doubt that there were six players for the Flying Dutchmen that final game.

They are proceeding with the statue on campus with one change.

The bronze likeness of Hot Dog Frank will wear a signet ring - the same ring worn by the 1994 NCAA Division Three National Champions - the Flying Dutchmen of Lebanon Valley.

For everybody in the Lebanon Valley knows whose finger was on the buzzer Saturday night.

Berry's World

Republicans hope for 'something rotten'

For one shining moment, there was Camelot. Tonya Harding, Dan Rostenkowski and Yitzhak Rabin had driven Whitewater off the front pages.

And David Gergen - whose White House days are numbered anyway - didn't have a darn thing to do with it.

It is amazing - and unconscionably absurd - how much space newspapers and how much air time television and radio stations have devoted to an invisible scandal whose name sounds like a place where nature lovers go rafting.

So far, the best thing that the media and the Republican party have going for it is Marcellus' famous speculation from Hamlet.

After Hamlet follows a beckoning ghost out of the room, Marcellus tells Horatio that he thinks they should go after their homeboy. When Horatio asks why, Marcellus darkly hints, "Something is rotten in the state of Denmark."

That "something rotten" turns out to be a ghost who tells Hamlet that his uncle did his father in.

But neither the Republicans nor the media have a Caspar the Friendly Ghost. That's because they don't have a crime - not even a misdemeanor!

Never mind. The Republicans have a Mighty Mouse with a Pinocchio nose. In a press conference, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato defended his fellow Republicans: "We don't want to destroy the president." But that, of course, is exactly what he wants to do.

Chuck Stone

Even the more respectable media has reported this manufactured "big story" with straight faces. In a sense, you can't blame them. Having dropped the investigative balls on the HUD and S&L scandals, they're now afraid that maybe - just maybe - there may be "something rotten" in Arkansas, after all.

"See, see, we told you readers and viewers the sky was falling."

So far, the sky hasn't even shrugged. And the public - is about as interested in Whitewater as it is in the sex life of the Alaskan snow owl.

Is there a probable-cause scandal here? Sure, if you're into Plato's "beholding beauty with the eye of the mind." So far, any Whitewater scandal is only in the eyes of the Republicans and the media who think that Bill and Hillary Clinton are guilty of "something."

Hillary Rodham Clinton is indeed guilty - guilty of poor investment judgment, guilty of stonewalling, guilty of not understanding the full dimensions of her role as the president's wife.

But she has not been proven guilty, so far, of any improper conduct.

How can the American people be sure that nothing is rotten in the state of Arkansas? By laying this nonsensical rest until the real information comes in - that is, special counsel Fiske's findings, the Senate hearings and the House hearings.

Nothing is more therapeutic to a member of Congress - especially one running for re-election - than a television-lights-flooded hearing in prime time.

For those passionate Democrats who contend that Whitewater happened long before Clinton was elected to the White House, so did Spiro Agnew's transgressions. The two cases are not comparable in seriousness. They are only similar in the time differentials between occurrences.

We return to Hamlet. Once all of the hearings and the investigations have been completed, "tis a consummation devoutly to be wish'd" that this issue will be buried once and for all.

We can then wish that the Republicans and the media will permit Bill Clinton to do what the American people elected him to do - serve them, help solve their pressing health care, job, crime and education problems, and lead this nation into the 21st century.

Car bomb explodes in Israel next to bus; 8 killed, 30 hurt

By KARIN LAUB
Associated Press Writer

AFULA, Israel (AP) — A car packed with explosives exploded next to a bus picking up passengers in northern Israel today, killing at least eight people and wounding 30.

Many of the injured appeared to be teenagers near a school that was letting out students, a witness said. The explosion hurled pieces of bus through the air.

A caller to Israel radio, speaking in Arabic, said the militant Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, claimed responsibility for the attack in Afula, 40 miles northwest of Jerusalem. It had issued leaflets threatening to attack Israeli targets after a Feb. 25 massacre in Hebron left 30 Muslims dead.

Police said the driver of the car was killed. The explosion occurred at a bus stop.

"I saw a burned-up bus. People were charred, lacking limbs, lacking heads," said Shlomo Ohayon, an ambulance driver. "It was a terrifying mess, a slaughterhouse."

The bus windows were all shattered and the interior a blackened hull.

Army radio quoted police as saying the attackers likely were Palestinians from the northern occupied West Bank or an Arab village in northern Israel.

There has been widespread concern in Israel since the mosque massacre by a Jewish settler that Palestinians would seek revenge.

Security officials had predicted the reprisal might come in the form of a car bomb, because several attacks carried out by Arab opponents of the Israel-PLO peace accord were suicide car-bomb attacks.

The bombing comes as Israeli and PLO negotiators meet in Cairo for talks on Palestinian autonomy. Both say the negotiations are in their final stages.

Passengers were just boarding the bus at the time of the blast, said Yaacov Ganot, the chief of police in northern Israel.

Ganot said 30 people were wounded. Dr. Avishai Burstein, director of emergency services at Haemek Hospital, said 52 people were injured, most of them teenagers. Some of the wounded were Arabs.

The spokesman for the Egged bus company, Dedi Golan, said the car parked next to the bus and then blew up. Radio reports said the car was three yards away. He said the exact number of passengers had not been determined, but the bus was not full.

Ambulances raced to the scene and helicopters landed to evacuate the seriously wounded to a hospital in the coastal city of Haifa.

"We heard and felt a great explosion," said Haim Volvovitch, superintendent of a cultural center near the bus stop. "We saw the shell of a bus, all burnt through. In front of it was the burning lump of a car."

"There were kids running all over the place in shock," he said. "People were bleeding on the ground. Most of the injured were high school kids."

Uri Dromi, director of the government press office, said police did not know yet if it was a suicide attack.

"But we will not let it affect the peace process. Our policy is that acts of terrorism will not stop the peace-making because that would play into the hands of the enemies of peace," Dromi said.

Demonstrations erupted in Afula, with Israel radio quoting participants shouting "Death to Arabs!" and denouncing the government.

Forces were sent into nearby Arab villages to protect residents from reprisal attacks.

Before today's attack, 148 Palestinians and 27 Israelis have died in violence since the Israel-PLO autonomy accord was signed at the White House in September.

Millions of imported crayons tainted by lead

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents, check your kids' crayon boxes. Millions of crayons imported from China contain enough lead to be harmful to children and should be thrown away or returned for refunds, the government said Tuesday.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said three brands, including one sold by the chain Toys R Us, present "a lead poisoning hazard to young children who might eat or chew on these crayons."

Eight other brands, it said, have lead, but not at levels to produce lead poisoning, "assuming a typical scenario of a child chewing on small pieces of lead-containing crayons over a span of time."

"No children's product, especially crayons, should contain lead," said CPSC Chairman Ann Brown. "Throw these crayons in the trash or take them to the store for a refund."

Ken Giles, a commission spokesman, said the recalled brands represent "a relatively small percentage of the market." The largest selling brand in the United States, the American-made Crayola, he said, contained no detectable lead.

Crayola makes two billion crayons a year and is the world's leader in crayons. It holds more than half of the $130 million-a-year market.

Crayons consist of paraffin, a tasteless, colorless substance obtained from petroleum, and pigment. Pigment, which comes from earth, can contain trace elements of lead.

"We go to extreme effort to ensure our products are safe for kids to use," said Brad Drexler, a Crayola spokesman. He said that imported crayons hold only three to five percent of the market share.

Lead has long been recognized as a hazardous substance, especially to young children, infants and fetuses, because it can cause irreversible brain damage and can impair mental functioning. The most common source of lead ingested by children is paint.

Under federal law, all art materials must be reviewed by a toxicologist for chronic hazards and products that pass are labeled "Conforms to ASTM D-4236."

"Parents should not buy old non-ASTM-labeled art materials still on store shelves," the commission said.

The three Chinese-import crayons deemed most hazardous are "12 Jumbo Crayons," distributed by Concord Enterprises of Los Angeles, with 430 cases sold; "Safe 48 Non-Toxic I'm a Toys R Us Kid! Crayons," with 100,000 packages distributed by that firm in 1990-91 and 2,000 last year; and "12 Crayons, glory" and "18 Crayons That Paint," distributed by Glory Stationery Manufacturing Co. Ltd.,

Austin ordinance restricts smoking in public places

AUSTIN (AP) — Dancing and dining out will be less smoky under a new city ordinance.

"We're recognizing a national trend in Austin," said city councilwoman Brigid Shea. "People can make adjustments."

Under the ordinance, smoking is banned in any restaurant or bar dining room between 6 a.m. and 2 p.m.

After 2 p.m., smoking is allowed in enclosed areas with separate ventilation systems in new buildings. Older buildings have until March 1996 to comply with the rule or become non-smoking.

After 10 p.m., smoking is allowed in restaurants and bars in certain areas.

A violation is punishable by a fine of up to $500.

The ordinance represented a compromise between restaurateurs, club owners and tavern keepers who objected to a total smoking ban that was proposed by Mayor Bruce Todd and councilman Gus Garcia.

The first business day of the ordinance received mixed reviews.

"Non-smoking sections haven't really worked in the past," Greg Tingle, a computer programmer who ate at a downtown restaurant, said Monday. "One little no smoking sign doesn't keep smoke from drifting over and bothering those of us who don't smoke."

But a customer in a South Austin restaurant said the new ordinance was idiotic.

"A private business has a right to decide what they will allow in their business," said Barry Stambaugh. "This is just another example of government intrusion."

Under other provisions of the ordinance, smoking is banned in all city buildings, and within 15 feet of an entrance to a public facility.

Smoking is allowed in outdoor areas of restaurants, bars, taverns and lounges if at least 25 percent of the outdoor seating is reserved for non-smokers.

The new ordinance apparently has caught on at some dance halls.

Under the new policy, at least 25 percent of the performances at live music venues must be non-smoking.

Southwestern Bell calls off cable deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southwestern Bell Corp. is blaming tougher federal regulation of the cable television industry for its decision to abandon plans for a $4.9 billion partnership with Cox Cable Communications.

In calling off the deal Tuesday, Southwestern Bell cited a voluminous set of regulations the Federal Communications Commission released last week in an attempt to cut cable rates.

"After careful analysis of the FCC's more than 700 pages of detailed rules, we concluded that it's unlikely the cable industry can generate the cash flow we expected," Jim Kahan, Southwestern Bell's senior vice for strategic planning and corporate development, said in a statement.

The regulations are designed to cut cable television rates an average of 7 percent. The price cut, announced in February, comes on top of 10 percent rate reductions the FCC ordered last year.

Last month, Bell Atlantic Corp. and Tele-Communications Inc. called off their plans to merge, days after the FCC announced the second rate cut but before the agency announced details.

FCC Chairman Reed Hundt, who took a lot of heat from cable industry supporters when the Bell Atlantic-TCI deal collapsed, defended the FCC's second set of rate regulations again Tuesday.

"The FCC's unanimous adoption of modifications to its cable rate regulations has in no way put an end to new ventures in the telecommunications area," Hundt said.

But Wall Street analysts said the FCC's second set of rate regulations make alliances between cable and phone companies unattractive.

"If there had only been one rollback, you would have seen a lot of marriages between the two industries," said Jessica Reif, an analyst with Oppenheimer & Co. "But then there was a second rollback and then there was a price cap (on cable rates) going forward. You can't cut earnings and expect companies to increase spending."

Analysts said they see parallels in the collapse of the two deals, such as disagreements over the price and value of the cable properties and how long it will take cable cash flows to rebound in light of the new price cuts.

"Southwestern Bell and Cox people were all love and kisses a couple of weeks ago at an analysts meeting," said John Reidy, managing director at Smith, Barney Shearson.

"They said there might be some jiggling around but basically said that they looked forward to doing the deal. Well, obviously they tried to run through the numbers and they couldn't agree on values."

Dunkers of the world unite, let your vote be known

Are there more "twisters" in Pampa? Do they "nibble" in Mesquite? Are Magnolians chronic "dunkers"? Nabisco Biscuit Company, the maker of Oreo, wants to know how Texas residents eat their Oreo cookies.

Since its introduction in 1912 as The Oreo Biscuit, the chocolate sandwich cookie with the white creme filling, has been America's number-one cookie. In fact, Oreo cookies continue to be purchased by 9 out of 10 households over the course of a year.

Today, approximately 150 million packages are sold annually, the equivalent of 16 billion cookies. That means a lot of Oreo twisting, dunking, and nibbling has been going on throughout America. And it seems everyone has his or her own eating style.

Over the past 82 years, hundreds of stories have been written about the quintessential cookie and its proper consumption techniques. So Nabisco thought it was high time that America's twisters, dunkers, and nibblers stand up and be counted (or call in and be heard: 1-800-EAT-OREO). Nabisco believes the cookie's real appeal is that it brings out each person's individuality - the freedom to be "me" - even if only briefly.

The cookie's celebrity status has been boosted over the years by such luminaries as Don Meredith, Dinah Shore, Lou Gossett, Chubby Checker and a young Urkel (Jaleel White) from the ABC-TV sitcom "Family Matters," all of whom have twisted and dunked their way through Oreo commercials during the early 1980's.

Recently, the famous chocolate sandwich cookie appeared on "Live with Regis & Kathie Lee," an episode of "Seinfeld" and "60 minutes." It's also been reported that Rosanne Arnold's favorite Planet Hollywood dessert is its Ebony & Ivory Pie made with Oreo cookies.

So whether Oreo lovers dunk, nibble, twist, or enjoy another creative way to snack on America's favorite cookie, they can dial 1-800-EAT-

OREO between March 14 and May 15, 1994, and let Nabisco know their favorite way to eat an Oreo.

Each 100th caller will win an Oreo Gift Pack complete with an Unlock the Magic T-shirt, Oreo bendable toy characters, and a supply of their favorite cookies which they can eat any way they choose.

From Los Angeles to New York, Miami to Anchorage, the survey will pinpoint where "dunkers," "twisters," and "nibblers" are most likely to be encountered throughout the United States.

The results of the survey will be analyzed and available in early June, 1994.

Nabisco Biscuit Company, an operating unit of the Nabisco Foods Group, makes and markets a wide variety of cookies, crackers and snacks.

Among its leading brands are Oreo, Chips Ahoy! and Newtons cookies, Stella D'oro baked goods and Ritz, Premium, Triscuit and Wheat Thins crackers.

With milk or all alone, people eat billions of Oreo cookies every year.

Despite look-a-like food chains, fare often varies

By BEVERLY BUNDY
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The scenario is a common one. Cities grow, suburbs emerge and chain restaurants move in. Ah, the cloning of America, wail the Casandras, we're all eating from one homogenized menu. America is losing the individuality of its neighborhoods.

The Pizzeria Unos, the Olive Gardens, the International Houses of Pancakes are serving the same food from coast to coast — or are they? Come to find out, they aren't. Regional preferences are alive and well in America's dining habits.

"Not only do customers demand certain things in certain markets," says Sonia Borges, customer relations representative for the Olive Garden Restaurants, "they get quite irate if they aren't available. In the north central states, for instance, we have to offer a fish fry on our menus on Friday nights. Sure, it's not very Italian, but it's what the customer wants."

"You can't have a restaurant in Wisconsin if you don't offer a fish fry on Friday," agrees Lynn Schulte, director of marketing for Bennigan's, "so we offer a fish fry on Friday."

Bennigan's sister restaurant chain, Steak & Ale, also sees regional favorites.

"We eliminated cheesecake on the menu and people in the Northeast complained," Schulte says, so the chain brought it back.

Not so stuck on cheesecake, Texans make their own mark on the Steak & Ale menu.

"The ribeye is a huge seller in Texas, but it isn't that big a deal in the rest of the country," Schulte says. "I think it's because the ribeye is a very marbled cut and the mouth feel can be almost gristly. It's a strong cut, stronger than a filet, and I think it's a true beef-lover's steak. That's why it does well in Texas."

John Mariani, author of the newly revised "The Dictionary of American Food and Drink," and restaurant writer for Esquire magazine, sees the regional ties to food as both an evolution and a tradition.

"People are much more savvy about food now than they were 10 years ago — and that goes for American classics as well as European and ethnic foods," he says.

"Tie that in with the nostalgia wave and reaction against the nutritional terrorists, and people are seeing food as part of their heritage. I don't think Americans are letting these chains steamroll them into becoming one big dining public that will eat the same thing."

Ethnic background certainly accounts for a lot of taste preferences.

Olive Garden, for instance, must include gnocchi (an Italian dumpling) on its menus in the Philadelphia area, a city with a large Italian population. 7-Eleven Stores sell a grilled roast pork sandwich called a Cubano only in the Miami area.

Regionally grown produce figures into the mix as well. Harrigan's, a 12-store chain in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, has found that New Mexicans want to see green chiles on their menus.

"Chiles are grown there," said food director David Mitchell, "and they want to see them on the menu. So we adapted some of our items and serve chiles on burgers, on sandwiches, on the steaks."

One of the Pizzeria Uno franchise owners in San Francisco serves a product unique to the chain — a clam pesto pizza.

Uno handles its menus much the way that most of the chains are heading.

"Outside of the Northeast corridor, most of our stores are owned by franchisees," says Bill Gallucci, senior vice president for operations for Pizzeria Uno. "If they want to introduce a special item, they send us a recipe, we test it, run it by a taste panel and let them introduce it. Some items, like our crust and our sauce, are never allowed to be modified, but other items can vary."

"In the Northeast, for example, our nachos don't include guacamole," he says. "In some parts of the country our tortilla chips are made from wheat, in some they are made with corn."

Standard signature items, called "core" items by the industry, are offered everywhere in the same format. Olive Garden's popular salad is one such item, as are IHOP's pancakes. But to regionalize, IHOP offers grits in the South and scrapple in the Northeast.

And while a lot of regional preferences can be put down to immigrants and some can be put down to ingredients native to the area, others are just unexplainable.

Karen Raskopf, spokeswoman for 7-Elevens, finds the regional differences fascinating, a good thing since the convenience store chain went to the "neighborhood" store concept a couple of years ago to target Americans' differences.

"Some of the things make sense," Raskopf says, "like the fact that Texans like chili and melt-ed cheese on their hot dogs. And Texans prefer pina colada Slurpees."

But how to explain the No. 1 market for Slurpees is Detroit, where there's so popular 7-Eleven has introduced a 44-ounce size.

That low-fat cookies do well with body-conscious, skimpily dressed Californians is no surprise, but why, then, does 7-Eleven sell more hot dogs on the West Coast than anywhere else?

The food mysteries abound.

"I was at a franchise store on Long Island not long ago," Raskopf says, and they were selling these hot buttered rolls. Not biscuits, not Danish, not bagels, but these hot buttered rolls. They were flying out the door, they were selling so fast. I commented on what an odd item it was and the store personnel looked at me like I was from the planet Mars."

Which only points up the difficulty of making assumptions about regional tastes.

"We're going to be introducing a new product for Valentine's Day, a red-hot cinnamon-flavor Slurpee," she says. "We're expecting it to do well in the South, but it's really anybody's guess where it will end up a hit."

State pride at steak in cook-off

Texas' amateur cooks have until June 1 to enter the National Beef Cook-off and be selected as one of 15 finalists who will compete for $45,000 in cash prizes and title of the nation's top beef cook. Each of the 15 finalist also will receive an all-expense paid trip to the national competition Sept. 22-23 at Little Rock, Ark.

Entries must be postmarked by June 1, 1994, and received by June 7, 1994. Anyone except food professionals is eligible to enter. For more specific rules, contact the National Beef Cook-Off at P.O. Box 3240, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

No one from Texas has ever won the National Beef Cook-Off even though it is the nation's largest beef producing state. It's time for that to change, says one member of the Texas CattleWomen, one of the contest's sponsoring organizations.

"We came close to winning it all with a third place finish in the indoor competition at the 1993 national competition," said TCW President Anita Brown of Wheeler. "As thrilling as that was, it is now time to go for the top award. The home kitchens of this state have more original beef recipes than any other state in the nation."

A recipe must be original. It must use no more than eight ingredients (excluding salt, black pepper and water). Garnishes must be made from those ingredients. Preparation and cooking times, including marinating time, must be less than 60 minutes. The beef cut selected must be appropriate for the recipe. It must use at least 1 pound and no more than 2 pounds of beef.

Robin Bonifay Hill of Arlington met all those qualifications in 1993

CALYPSO STEAK

1 1/2 pounds of boneless beef top sirloin or top round steak; cut 1-inch thick
Edible flowers (optional)

Marinade:
1/2 medium onion, cut into quarters
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup fresh lime juice
1/4 cup soy sauce
10 to 20 quarter-size slices of peeled, fresh ginger (cut from 1" wide x 1 1/2 to 3" long pieces)
1 or 2 jalapeño peppers, stems removed, cut in half
3 cloves of garlic, peeled
1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
1/2 teaspoon ground paprika
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves

Place marinade ingredients in blender or food processor, fitted with a steel blade; process until blended. Place beef steak and marinade in plastic bag, turning to coat. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 20 minutes to 2 hours, turning once.

Remove steak from marinade; reserve marinade. Place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil top sirloin 16 to 21 minutes (top round 15 to 18 minutes) for rare to medium doneness, turning once.

Meanwhile in a small saucepan, bring reserved marinade to a rolling boil over high heat. Boil 2 minutes; strain and set aside for sauce.

Trim fat from steak. Carve steak crosswise into thin slices; arrange on a serving platter. Garnish with edible flower, if desired; serve with sauce.
Makes 6 servings.

with a sirloin recipe called Calypso Steak. Her recipe received high marks from judges for its simple preparation, appealing ingredients and convenient cooking method. As a result, Hill won third place — the highest finish for a Texan in the history of the national indoor cook-off competition.

Judges choose recipes that are adapted for contemporary lifestyles, according to Brown. Other characteristics that judges appreciate are healthful ingredients, convenient preparation times and balanced flavors.

"As one judge says, the key to success is to test the recipe over and over," Brown said. "Get other persons' opinions too, and then send the recipe to BIC. While you're waiting on the national competition, work on the food's presentation. Judges see the food both as individual portions and on a large platter, so make sure it looks good."

The grand prize "Best of Beef" award winner will receive $25,000, second place, $10,000, and third place, $5,000. Two honorable mention contestants will receive $2,500 each.

"... the idea has to be original," said Brown. "But don't overlook sources of ideas for your recipe like cookbooks, magazines and restaurants. Then develop them into recipes with award-winning potential and send to the National Beef Cook-Off. It's time to bring the championship to Texas."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "What is the world's tallest building?" needs some clarification:

There is a free-standing concrete structure in Toronto, Canada, as your reader suggests. It is called the CN Tower. It is 1,821 feet tall - 367 feet taller than the Sears Tower in Chicago, which is only 1,454 feet tall.

There are other communication towers in the world that are even taller, but to the best of my knowledge, the CN Tower is the tallest self-support one (no guy wires), and it is the only one in which there is an elevator to a public restaurant and viewing platform near the top.

Although it is not an office building, it is a building, albeit a very narrow one.

DREW VACTOR, TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR DREW: Many readers have written to point out my "error," and inform me about the CN Tower - which stands 1,821 feet tall, according to The World Almanac, or 1,815 feet, 5 inches tall, according to the Guinness Book of Records.

However, my reader asked for the tallest building. Towers are in a class by themselves. But read on for a view like your own:

DEAR ABBY: "A Daily Reader in Downey, Calif." inquired about the world's tallest building.

Toronto may not be in the United States, but it is part of the world, and certainly qualifies.

The Sears Tower may be the tallest "office building" in the U.S.A., but it is 361 feet, 5 inches short of being the tallest "building" in the world.

ARTHUR SEIDENSCHWARTZ ARCHITECT, WAUWATOSA, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: My husband started working for his father recently, which has taken a lot of his time away from me and our three kids. He usually works six days (sometimes seven) a week, eight to 10 hours a day.

He also think he shouldn't have to call me when he decides to stay at his mom's for the night, and if I call him, he thinks I'm checking up on him. (Not true. I trust him.)

He has canceled plans with me and taken his mother in my place. Once, he asked his mom to go to a concert with him. He said he didn't ask me because he knew I wouldn't like it.

I would like your opinion about a husband who treats his wife this way.

SECOND CHOICE.

DEAR SECOND CHOICE: It is thoughtful and generous for a man to be so considerate of his mother, but she should not replace his wife. (Where's Papa?)

Family counseling (here we go again!) is essential in your marriage. Your husband needs to realize that he is being unfair to you.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is going to have twins in June. Her girlfriends are giving her a shower and they were talking about gifts for the babies. Some of them are wondering whether they should bring one gift or two.

They asked me for my opinion, and I said, "She's having two babies, so I think two gifts are required - a gift for each child."

Was I right or not?
SOUTH PHILLY FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: You were right.

Remnants of war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eddie Slovik's confession and a register of an Austrian death camp are part of "The Face of War," an exhibition featuring the human side of World War II.

The exhibition, through Sept. 18, 1995, is in the National Archives Rotunda in marble cases flanking the permanent display of the Charters of Freedom.

Slovik was the only American deserter put to death during the war. His statement confessing to being AWOL from the U.S. Army describes his overwhelming fear of battle. He was executed on Jan. 31, 1945.

Mind over matter: OM teams prepare for state

Focusing on the creative and hands-on side of the student mind, teams from six Pampa ISD gifted and talented classes are competing in the Odyssey of the Mind state competition beginning Friday in San Antonio.

The teams, two fifth grade, three middle school, and one high school, compete in two events, the "long term" and the "spontaneous."

The long term event involves a project chosen from a specified list that the students prepare in advance of the competition day.

Since there is the possibility of sponsor encouragement on the long term project, teams must also complete a "spontaneous" event the day of the competition.

In this event, team members must name as many items or uses for something as fast as possible in a certain category in an allotted time.

The teams practice for the spontaneous event by actually conducting a "game-like" situation. A sponsor gives them a topic or situation and the team completes the assignment in the allotted time.

The Pampa Middle School "Iliad" team chose Book 24 of the Homeric epic to produce in the long term competition for its parallels to the lingering MIA issue from the Vietnam War.

In the passage that the team bases its play on, families want to secure the recovery of their fallen soldiers' bodies, but are prevented from doing so by hostilities between the two sides.

Members of the PMS Iliad team said they have become more interested in history after producing their play, and have improved their mental agility from the spontaneous event.

Teamwork, another of the focuses of OM competition, is one of the things the Iliad and other teams said they have improved upon in preparing their events.

Members of the sixth grade "Furs, Feathers and Fins" team chose the long term project where students conduct a humorous performance depicting human emotions from a animals point of view.

The "Furs" team researched animals like the yellow jacket bee before setting down to writing the play.

"A lot of experience in teamwork," is what Troy Ann Dennis said she had gotten out of the OM experience.

A different kind of hands-on experience was the benefit for two other OM teams.

The PMS Mini Terrain Vehicles team built several types of electric vehicles that had to perform functions ranging from inverting at a specified distance to driving towards a target and breaking a balloon across a specified distance.

Some members of the "MTV" team said they have gained confidence after building their motorized projects.

The Pampa High School team, among other things for competition, built a basal wood structure that has to support different weights. Kyle Sparkman said his interest in engineering has heightened after working on the project.

Another team to chose a long term project based on the Iliad was the Travis Elementary team. They paralleled the invention of the compact disc to the technological advances of antiquity.

The other elementary team from Pampa advancing to San Antonio is from Wilson Elementary. The team incorporated musical instruments they constructed themselves into a play about children in a foster home.

Teams are scored on a 350-point scale — 200 points for the long term event, 100 points for the spontaneous event and 50 points for overall style.

Retired reverend is speaker at Planned Parenthood lunch

The Friends of Planned Parenthood, Planned Parenthood's Religious Advisory Committee, will host their annual community education luncheon beginning at noon, April 20th in the Red Room of the Sunset Convention Center, Amarillo.

Guest speaker, Rev. George Ricker, will discuss "The Impact of the Religious Right on American Culture," and will add insight to the workings of the fundamental religious movement.

Ricker is retired from the Campus Christian Community in San Marcos, where he was minister of practical theology and ethical concerns. He was educated at Cornell University, Southern Methodist University and graduated with a masters degree from Union Theological in New York City. He holds and honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Southwestern University.

Ricker has published sermons, articles and a curriculum, "Guide for Leaders on New Creation." He authored the book The Faith Once Given. Presently, Ricker is a guest professor at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary and a lecturer.

Friends of Planned Parenthood is a support auxiliary with over 180 members who work to enhance awareness and promote education throughout the community. The Religious Advisory Committee includes members of the clergy and religious leaders from Amarillo and Canyon. Its purpose is to form a partnership between Planned Parenthood and church educators on issues and information surrounding human sexuality education.

Relating to the topic of the Luncheon, Dr. Mike Oden, President of the Religious Advisory Committee said, "For too long the radical Religious Right has claimed to speak for all Christians regarding what is moral and what is not, however, the right does not speak for everyone. Often they insist that their agenda is the only solution to complex issues. Dr. Ricker is well qualified to challenge this narrow assumption and will offer a fresh perspective from the religious mainstream."

Reservations may be made by calling Joan Douthit at (806) 372-8731.

CattleWomen offer scholarships

The Top of Texas CattleWomen will offer three scholarships this year.

One $300 and two $100 scholarships will be awarded to three Texas Panhandle area seniors, with the check being made to the college of their choice.

The applicants must have an agriculture or nutrition related major in their college plans. These fields of study could include such areas as ranch management, veterinary medicine, restaurant and institutional management, communications, foods and nutrition, or home economics.

For a copy of the scholarship application, along with the rules and regulations, contact a local vocational counselor or call Bonnie Abraham at 669-0176.

Deadline for the scholarship application is May 5.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions are unusual today. Generally speaking, you'll feel comfortable being the play caller, yet you could be much luckier with situations that aren't directly under your control. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone with whom you're closely associated might take it upon him/herself to make a decision for you today. Fortunately, this person has excellent judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something extremely beneficial might develop for you at this time from an involvement which seldom generates rewards or attention. What transpires could be quite substantial.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An opportunity similar to one you recently ignored might present itself today. Instead of being timid, it may be worth a calculated risk.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you look out for the persons with whom you're involved today and they, in turn, look out for you, it will greatly enhance everyone's probabilities for success. Don't be the weak link.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take into account all of the suggestions of associates today, but reserve the right to make the final decision yourself. Your evaluations could be superior to theirs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The harder you work today, the luckier you are likely to be, especially in situations that pertain to your career or earning capacity. Productivity is the companion of profit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It looks like you might be destined to reorganize something in which you're involve that others have botched up rather severely. Begin unwinding it today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, if you're aware of the fact that the end results are of far greater significance than the beginning, it will help you overcome setbacks on your course to success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Whether you like it or not, you're apt to function as the role model for others today. Enthusiasm or issues about which you're enthusiastic will appeal to them as well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you could be much luckier where big issues are concerned than you will be where the stakes are small. Don't let size intimidate you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Strive to maintain a philosophical outlook in all of your endeavors today. If you are able to envision yourself as lucky, it will have a strong influence on the outcome of events.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

AMARILLO — Justin Collingsworth of Pampa, Wes Hall of Groom and Mindy Magee of McLean have been selected to play in the 24th annual Golden Spread High School All-Star basketball games.

The games are scheduled for Thursday through Friday at Cal Farley Coliseum in Amarillo.

Both Collingsworth and Hall will suit up for the East boys team, which meets the West at 8 p.m. Thursday. The North boys play the South boys at 6 p.m. Friday.

Magee will play for the East girls, which meets the West at 6 p.m. Thursday while the North and South girls play at 8 p.m. Friday.

The girls' championship tips off at 6 p.m. Saturday, followed by the boys' at 8 p.m.

There will also be a slam dunk and a 3-point shooting contest, for which any senior boy or girl is eligible.

State champions Amarillo High girls, Clayton N.M. girls, Sudan girls and Plainview boys will also be honored during the games.

TENNIS

LUBBOCK — Tim Siegel, Texas Tech men's head tennis coach, two-time All-American and third-round U.S. Open competitor, will be hosting the Tim Siegel Texas Tech Tennis Camps this summer for boys and girls of all levels ages 9-17.

Day camp will be run from June 6-10, while overnight camp is scheduled for July 3-8. The limited enrollment camps will feature five to seven hours of daily instruction and supervised play, as well as t-shirts and additional camp giveaways.

For sign-up information please call 794-1137 or 742-3355.

NEW YORK (AP) — Darryl Strawberry, whose season was halted because of drugs, reportedly is in New York to be evaluated by two doctors.

The New York Daily News said the Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder met with Dr. Robert Millman, medical examiner for major league baseball, and Joel Solomon, who represents the players' union.

Dodgers general manager Fred Claire said the team suspected a year ago that Strawberry was involved with drugs, according to the New York Times.

Strawberry, who missed the Dodgers' final exhibition game Sunday and was located 11 hours later, admitted to a drug problem Monday and agreed to undergo rehabilitation.

Strawberry last season was late many times for back treatments, and on June 22 showed up in the fourth inning of a day game, saying he thought it was a night game.

NEW YORK (AP) — The average salary rose 6.1 percent this year to $1,188,679 on opening day, according to a survey by The Associated Press, and the New York Yankees are the top-paid team.

New York Mets third baseman Bobby Bonilla is the highest-paid player at $6.3 million, according to an examination of contracts for 746 players on opening-day rosters and disabled lists.

The Yankees' average was $1,760,974, up slightly from Aug. 31, 1993, the last day before rosters expanded. Toronto, first last year at $1,765,582, dropped to fifth at $1,498,667.

The Detroit Tigers, with a major league-leading 15 million-dollar players, rose to second at $1,594,700.

San Diego was last again, but rose to $515,231 from $378,471. The Cleveland Indians, who opened their new Jacobs Field ballpark, experienced the most dramatic rise, a 105 percent increase to $1,099,481 from $537,106.

While the number of million-dollar players rose slightly, to 265 from 262, $2 million players rose to 192 from 182 and $3 million players to 119 from 99.

NEW YORK (AP) — The average ticket price for a major-league game broke the $10 barrier, following an 8.9 percent increase, quadruple the rise between the 1992 and 1993 seasons.

The average ticket price is $10.45, up from $9.60 last season, the Chicago-based Team Marketing Report said.

New stadiums in Cleveland and Texas played a large part in the increase, baseball's steepest since a 12.8 percent rise in 1992.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Reliever Rob Dibble will have surgery next week on his right rotator cuff and be sidelined about three months.

Dibble was expected to be the club's primary closer. He was put on the 15-day disabled list to start the season when he had control problems in spring training and was diagnosed with tendonitis.

Injuries last year limited him to a career-low 45 appearances in five seasons with the Reds, with a career-high 6.48 ERA.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A hydraulic lift platform toppled onto a tent where a radio station held a tailgate party for the Milwaukee Brewers opening game, injuring four people.

Investigators suspected that wind gusts or reels caused the platform to fall over. The incident occurred in the parking lot of Milwaukee County Stadium about an hour before the Brewers played the Oakland Athletics.

One woman was hospitalized in satisfactory condition and three others were treated at the scene.

The injured were among about 50 people attending a tailgate party in the tent sponsored by Milwaukee radio station WQFM, Sgt. David Iushewitz said.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Cliff Ellis, who left Clemson in January as the school's winningest basketball coach, took the coaching job at Auburn.

Ellis was introduced as the Tigers' new coach three weeks after Tommy Joe Eagles resigned following his fourth losing season in five years.

Ellis, 48, Clemson coach for 10 years, was 177-132, with one ACC title, three trips to the NCAA tournament and four to the NIT. He was ACC coach of the year in 1987 and 1990.

NEW YORK (AP) — The NCAA championship game between Arkansas and Duke was the second most watched basketball game ever, according to CBS.

The network estimated 51.4 million people watched all or part of Arkansas' 76-72 victory over Duke, 200,000 less than the audience CBS estimated for last year's North Carolina-Michigan championship game, the most watched in history.

Chemistry was just right for NCAA champs resides at the summit of college basketball.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Arkansas basketball fans, savor the moment. It was some kind of finish to some kind of year:

—a first NCAA championship.

—a No. 1 seed in the Midwest Regional.

—a No. 1 ranking for nine weeks.

No matter what coach Nolan Richardson has told his players about no respect, this team now

Then thoughts turned to Day, Mayberry and Miller as seniors in 1992. By that time, they were probably all ready for the NBA and Arkansas lost to Memphis State in the second round of the tournament.

This 1994 group was special — they genuinely enjoyed playing the game. Outside of the Kentucky game in the South-eastern Conference tournament, they played hard every game.

There was no jealousy. Not when Al Dillard was getting all kinds of notice for his long-range shooting. Not when a TV technician used an electronic illustrator to expound on Collis Williamson's shaved head.

Guys on the bench swooned at their teammate's dunks and 3s. Everybody swooned at Scotty Thurman's killer 3-pointer with 50 seconds left Monday night in the 76-72 victory over Duke.

The only two seniors are Roger Crawford, who broke his ankle in the second round of the NCAA tournament, and Ken Biley.

Crawford started four games and averaged more than seven points per game. His biggest contribution came when he relieved Corey Beck or Clint McDaniel in the pressure defense.

Biley played in only 18 games and averaged less than three points per game.

Also back will be Dwight Stewart, Darrell Robinson, Lee Wilson, Davor Rimac and Elmer Martin.

Chemistry might be corny, but it's the right word for these Hogs. Who knows what will happen when they start over again?

Pampa High wrestlers honored

Seniors Tadd Alfonsi and Michael Foote received the highest honors at this year's Pampa High wrestling banquet.

Alfonsi was named the Most Outstanding Wrestler and Foote received the Most Inspirational Award.

"Michael has wrestled all four years of high school and we've always been able to put him at whatever weight slot we needed him. He's been a great support and encouragement to the rest of the wrestlers. Tadd came out as a sophomore and gained experience at the state level, which paid off for him this year. It's been a privilege to have him on the team. He was good leader for the underclassmen," said Pampa coach Steve Kuhn.

"Both of them will be missed greatly, but I wish them well in the future."

Alfonsi qualified for the state meet his senior and sophomore years. He was fourth in district and second at regionals as a sophomore, and third in district and second in regionals as a senior. He finished seventh in this year's state meet. As a junior, Alfonsi was a state alternate after placing third at regionals.

Foote competed in district and regional tournament throughout his high school career.

Both wrestlers have also been on the honor roll.

Foreign players dominate Masters

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The Masters, that most American of golf championships, no longer belongs to the homebreds.

The trend is well-established. It began with Seve Ballesteros in 1980 and '83, was confirmed by Nick Faldo in 1989 and '90, and enhanced by Bernhard Langer in '85 and '93.

There is no reason to believe that foreign domination — victories in nine of the last 16 Masters, including five of the last six — will end in the 1994 Masters.

"The odds look pretty good for a foreign win," Langer, the defending title-holder from Germany, said before a practice round for the tournament that begins Thursday at the Augusta National Golf Club.

Those odds are strengthened, English ace Nick Faldo said, by the absence of "your top two players," Fred Couples and Paul Azinger.

Azinger, the PGA champion, is undergoing cancer treatment and Couples, a two-time PGA Tour Player of the Year, is out with a herniated disc in his lower back.

Even Johnny Miller, the 47-year-old player turned-TV announcer-turned-player, pointed to a non-American as the likely winner of the first of the year's Big Four events.

"Anybody in his right mind has to think this is Greg Norman's year," Miller said. "All systems are go. He has it in his mind that this tournament is his. You can just sense that he's in a position, for the first time, to dominate golf like everyone always thought he would."

Norman, the British Open champion, scored a runaway, record-setting victory in the prestigious Players Championship in his last outing. It was impressive enough to catch Langer's attention.

"He's got it all," said Langer, who would not separate Norman from Nick Price of Zimbabwe, who owns the best worldwide record in the last 18 months.

"One, or both of them, should win," Langer said. "If not this year, then in the future. The only surprise is that neither of them has won the Masters before."

Langer and Faldo, who has spent five months preparing for this event and now pronounces himself satisfied, are the other leading contenders. Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain is coming off a strong performance last week in New Orleans.

With Azinger and Couples out, American hopes might turn to a quartet of 40-something veterans: Fuzzy Zoeller, Tom Watson, Tom Kite and Ben Crenshaw.

Crenshaw, 42, the 1984 Masters winner, last week displayed the touch that made him the most envied putter in the world. With Augusta's fast, treacherous greens a major factor in this tournament, Crenshaw's putting exhibition at New Orleans made him a threat.

The easy-going Zoeller, also 42 and another former winner here, said he is playing some of the best golf of his life and finished second in his last three starts.

Watson, 44, twice a Masters winner, promised an end this season to a non-winning string that goes back to 1987.

He's been close, chasing Miller to the title in the Pebble Beach Pro-Am, but has battled a serious case of the yips on short putts.

Kite, 44, has played only two rounds at Augusta National since 1991. He did not qualify for the exclusive event in 1992 then, suffering from back problems, missed the cut last year.

"I feel like I haven't played in the Masters in a long time," Kite said.

John Daly, golf's longest hitter and a third-place finisher in this event a year ago, was nominated by Faldo as "a good longshot. He has the game for this course."

Other leading Americans include Corey Pavin, Davis Love III, Payne Stewart and Curtis Strange.

The purse, $1.7 million a year ago, will not be announced until the weekend.

Expos' Hill tough against Astros

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Ken Hill finds his comfort zone every time he faces the Houston Astros.

Hill beat Houston for the third straight time over two seasons with the help of a two-run homer by Larry Walker, leading the Expos to a 5-1 victory over Doug Drabek and the Astros on Tuesday night.

"It's just one of those things, they're just one of the teams I have success against," Hill said. "I feel real comfortable when I go out there. They're a lot of first-ball swingers. The main thing, I just have to remember to keep them off-balance."

Hill (1-0) gave up six hits in six innings. Three Montreal pitchers finished with shutout relief.

"He's very tough," Expos manager Felipe Alou said. "He's always tough here in the Astrodome, we knew that going in. His fastball was live and he had a really good slider."

Hill was more than tough to Astros manager Terry Collins.

"Ken Hill is nasty," Collins said. "He threw that 94 miles per hour fastball and he's got a good forkball. He's a good major league pitcher. If you get him on the ropes, you'd better finish him because if he gets up he'll get you."

Drabek, who led the NL in losses with a 9-18 record last season, walked Marquis Grissom and Mike Lansing in the sixth. After an RBI grounder by Rondell White put the Expos ahead 2-1, Walker homered over the center-field fence.

"Walking two batters is never good unless you get out of it," Drabek said. "I had trouble with the strike zone in that inning. With Walker, we tried to get him out the same way we did the previous time."

But Drabek's changeup was a little up in the strike zone, and Walker made the Astros pay.

"The at-bat before, he threw me the same changeup and I popped it up," Walker said. "I didn't try to pull it the next time. It's one I know Doug did not want to throw. He looked upset with himself."

White had an RBI double in the fourth after a single by Lansing. Grissom had a sacrifice fly in the third.

Hill, 2-0 with a 1.84 ERA against Houston last year, gave up two hits in the third inning, then retired 13 of the next 15 batters.

Hill started the seventh by hitting Andujar Cedeno with a pitch and giving up a single to Eddie Taubensee. Jeff Shaw relieved and retired the next three batters to end the threat.

"The weather's comfortable and it's a good mound," Alou said, describing Hill's success in the Astrodome. "It's a pitcher's park. You know always when you start and finish you have the same temperature and the winds not going to change."

Notes: The Astros scored 30 runs in Drabek's 18 losses last season. ... was 0-3 against the Expos last year. ... Hill has been the Expos' player of the month in April for the past two seasons.

Dallas hotel industry says World Cup may not be all they hoped DALLAS (AP) — The World Cup may be the biggest international spectacle, but it's apparently not going to be as big of a deal in Dallas as city officials and hotel operators had hoped.

Game officials have cut their estimate of room nights they'll need from 300,000 to 120,000, and tickets that were supposed to go to some foreign countries will soon be sold domestically, officials said.

The biggest impact will be on the hotels, which had hoped to cash in on foreigners flocking to follow their national teams.

"There are people coming, but it's not the numbers that we hoped would come," said Michael French, president of the Hotel Motel Association of Greater Dallas.

For example, an official with the Hyatt Regency Dallas at Reunion said he set aside 10,000 room nights, then cut it to 5,000 in December and recently dropped it to 3,000.

The overall 180,000 drop in room nights, which is the number of rooms multiplied by the number of nights booked, could cost hotels more than half the revenue they expected.

"We are deeply concerned that the income to the hotels will not be what was previously anticipated," said Chris Luna, head of the city council's business and commerce committee.

"As a result, the city's share of the hotel-motel tax will not be as high as expected, and we were going to use that income to pay for the Cotton Bowl renovations."

Tickets initially reserved for Bulgarians and Nigerians will go on sale in the United States May 1, World Cup officials said.

Games begin in Dallas, the media headquarters for the event, on June 17 with Spain playing Korea. Nigeria and Bulgaria also will play their first-stage games at the Cotton Bowl.

The final round of games here will be the quarterfinals on July 9.

All games at the 62,000-seat stadium, which was converted from artificial turf to grass for the games, are expected to sell out, said Jim Graham, who co-chairs the World Cup Host Committee.

Palermo returns to baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Palermo, whose career as an American League umpire was shortened when he was shot in the back while aiding a robbery victim three years ago, is returning to baseball.

The commissioner's office said Wednesday that Palermo will be an assistant to the chairman of the Major League Executive Council.

Palermo, 44, will handle special projects for the Executive Council, the first of which will be a study of the length of games.

"I'm excited to have an active role in helping to maintain and hopefully increase baseball's popularity," Palermo said.

Palermo joined the AL umpiring staff in 1977. He worked the 1983 World Series, the 1986 All-Star game and the 1980, 1982, 1984 and 1989 league championship series.

"I am delighted that Steve is joining our staff," Bud Selig, chairman of the Executive Council, said. "He is devoted to the game and greatly respected by the clubs, the players, his fellow umpires and members of the media."

Heat burns Knicks, Mavericks end skid

By The Associated Press

It was beginning to look like the New York Knicks wouldn't lose again and the Dallas Mavericks wouldn't win again this season.

Then on Tuesday night, the Knicks took a 15-game winning streak to Miami and lost 100-86, while the Mavs took a 17-game losing skid to Sacramento and won 88-80.

"We all played like garbage," Knicks center Patrick Ewing said.

New York consistently outperformed the opposition during its winning streak, but was outbounded 52-43 by the Heat, shot 36 percent from the field and allowed 100 points for just the second time in 16 games.

"Just across-the-board ineptness defensively," coach Pat Riley said. "We can't accept the way we played because we can pick up bad habits quick, even after winning 15 in a row."

Dallas improved its record to 9-63, the same number of victories as the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers, the worst team in NBA history.

Doug Smith scored 10 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter as the Mavericks, who trailed by six, pulled ahead with a 10-0 run against the Kings, who lost for the seventh time in eight games.

NBA roundup

"Doug played great, not just for the fourth quarter, but for the last six weeks," teammate Fat Lever said.

Smith has scored in double figures in nine consecutive games, a first in his career.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was New Jersey 120, Boston 94; Orlando 104, Milwaukee 97; Cleveland 105, Charlotte 99; Indiana 105, Detroit 89; Chicago 114, Washington 88; Golden State 106, San Antonio 101; the Los Angeles Clippers 92, Denver 91; Seattle 86, Utah 79; and Portland 135, Phoenix 113.

The win marked the first time Dallas has beaten a Pacific Division opponent this season in 11 tries.

The defeat stung Sacramento coach Garry St. Jean.

"It's embarrassing to us and hurts us deeply for everyone in the locker room. We did not execute at the offensive end," he said.

Mitch Richmond scored 22 points for the Kings.

In Miami, Harold Miner scored 22 points and Steve Smith 20 for the Heat, who lost seven of their previous eight games, including a 110-87 blowout at New York on Saturday. Miami broke the franchise record with its 39th victory, one more than 1992, the Heat's only playoff year.

Miner came off the bench to score 16 points in the second quarter, rallying Miami from a four-point deficit into a 56-45 halftime lead. New York closed to 63-58 midway through the third period before Miner hit six free throws during an 11-0 run that gave Miami an 86-68 lead.

"We didn't let them push us around," said John Salley, who had 15 points in relief of Ronny Seikaly, out with an ankle injury.

SuperSonics 86, Jazz 79

Seattle beat Utah for its ninth straight victory and came within one win of the club record with 10 games remaining.

Detlef Schrempf led the Sonics with 17 points, Shawn Kemp and Sam Perkins each scored 15 and Vincent Askew had 11 of his 14 points in the fourth quarter.

The Jazz, who lost their seventh in a row on the road, were led by Karl Malone's 16 points. John Stockton had 13 points and 12 assists.

Trail Blazers 135, Suns 113

Clifford Robinson scored 23 points and Rod Strickland had a team-record 20 assists; and breaking the visiting Suns' five-game winning streak.

The Suns, who trailed by 22 after three quarters, closed within 10 in the fourth period before a 12-2 run gave Portland a 125-105 lead.

Charles Barkley, who had 21 first-quarter points, led the Suns with 27, and Cedric Ceballos scored 20.

Strickland, who also had 18 points, eclipsed Terry Porter's previous club mark of 19 assists.

Clippers 92, Nuggets 91

Denver continued to slip in its postseason race as Elmore Spencer's three-point play with 42 seconds left gave Los Angeles the lead for good.

The Nuggets battled back from a 20-point deficit, but lost their fourth straight. The visiting Clippers snapped a five-game losing streak.

Denver, 6 1/2 games ahead of the Los Angeles Lakers when Magic Johnson took over as their coach on March 27, now is just three games in front for the Western Conference's last playoff spot.

Reserve guard Gary Grant had 26 points for the Clippers and Dikembe Mutombo had 11 points, 16 rebounds and 11 blocked shots for the Nuggets.

Bulls 114, Bullets 88

Scottie Pippen had 22 points, 10 assists, nine rebounds and five steals as Chicago beat Washington for its fifth consecutive victory.

The victory was the Bulls' 15th straight over the Bullets, whose last win in Chicago was exactly six years ago.

Pippen had 11 points in the third period, when the Bulls extended a five-point halftime lead to 87-69. Chicago outshot Washington 58 percent to 39 percent in the quarter.

Calbert Cheaney scored 19 points for the Bullets.

Warriors 106, Spurs 101

Golden State snapped San Antonio's six-game winning streak as Latrell Sprewell scored 26 points and had two key steals in the final two minutes.

Sprewell tied the game 100-100 after a steal with 1:53 left and scored again to give the Warriors the lead for good. Sprewell's second steal set up a layup by Avery Johnson that iced the victory.

David Robinson scored 29 points for the Spurs, who fell out of first place in the Midwest Division with their seventh loss in 37 home games.

Pacers 105, Pistons 89

Antonio Davis scored 15 of his 18 points as Indiana opened a 15-point half-time lead and coasted over Detroit.

Dale Davis had 19 points and 14 rebounds for the Pacers, who stayed a half-game ahead of Miami and one game ahead of New Jersey in the Eastern Conference.

Terry Mills topped visiting Detroit with 20 points.

Magic 104, Bucks 97

Orlando, playing without ailing center Shaquille O'Neal, got 22 points and 10 rebounds from Jeff Turner against Milwaukee.

O'Neal sat out the game with a stomach virus, the first game he's missed in his two-year career because of injury or illness.

Turner scored 14 points in the first half when the Magic opened a 20-point lead. Penny Hardaway scored 21 points for Orlando, which needs one more victory or another Charlotte loss to qualify for the playoffs for the first time.

Reserve forward Derek Strong and Eric Murdock had 22 points apiece for the visiting Bucks, who have lost 13 of 15 games.

Cavaliers 105, Hornets 99

John Williams scored 23 points and Rod Higgins had a season-high 20 as Cleveland beat Charlotte, now 0-13 at Richfield Coliseum.

The Cavaliers closed the game with an 18-9 run, starting with Gerald Wilkins' tying 3-pointer with 4:51 left, and won for the fifth time in six games.

Dell Curry scored 22 points for the Hornets, including five 3-pointers.

Nets 120, Celtics 94

Boston's 14-year playoff run came to an end as reserves scored all of New Jersey's points in a 23-6 second-quarter spurt.

Reserve forward Jayson Williams scored 13 of his career-high 19 points in the second quarter for the Nets, including a go-ahead jumper that started a 12-0 run. New Jersey, which got 17 assists from Kenny Anderson, stretched its margin to 26 in the third quarter.

Kevin Gamble scored 20 points for the Celtics, who last missed the playoffs in 1978-79, the year before Larry Bird arrived.

Cowboys' Casillas signs four-year deal with Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys chose offense over defense, so defensive tackle Tony Casillas chose the Kansas City Chiefs.

The 30-year-old free agent signed a four-year, $6 million deal Tuesday with the Chiefs after spending three solid seasons in Dallas. But the Cowboys made only token
