CARSON COUNTY — Jeannie Cunningham faces Linda Orr in the Democratic runoff for Carson County treasurer.

Orr received approximately 45 percent of the vote in the March primary while Cunningham picked up approximately 41 percent.

WHEELER — Kenneth Martindale and Guy Hardin survived the field of five in the March primary to face each other in Democratic runoff for Wheeler County justice of the peace, Precinct 2.

Martindale won approximately 23 percent of the vote and Hardin gained approximately 29-percent in March primary.

PAMPA — One of Pampa/Gray County Crime Stoppers' 10 Most Wanted was arrested Saturday when he was spotted by a local policeman leaving a convenience store.

Rickie Lee Johnson, 20, was picked up about 10:30 p.m. Saturday as he left the Taylor Mart at 1300 N. Hobart by Officer Jimmy Lake of the Pampa Police Department. Johnson is under indictment for delivery of a controlled substance. He is one of 11 men for whom arrest warrants were issued March 31 in an effort to round up alleged drug dealers in the city.

He remains in city jail awaiting a bond hearing.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Police clashed with a band of kidnappers in central Mexico and one officer was killed in the shooting, authorities said Sunday.

Police said officer Rogelio Davalos Juarez was hit by two bullets as officers tried to arrest the hostagetakers Saturday in San Martin de Bolanos, a town 90 miles north of this central Mexican city.

The gunmen had kidnapped an area resident, Ignacio Arellano Martinez, and then released him on orders to return with $5,000 in ransom or risk being killed, according to the Notimex news agency.

But the freed hostage fled instead and police closed in. Shooting ensued, the officer was hit, but the gunman escaped, according to Notimex. It was unclear how many hostage-takers were involved.

TORONTO (AP) — Sadness and anger over the senseless killing of a woman in a trendy cafe was openly displayed this weekend as hundreds paid their last respects to the victim and others demonstrated in favor of harsher justice.

More than 500 people stood in line at a funeral home to pay tribute to Georgina Leimonis, a 23-yearold part-time hairdresser who was killed by a shotgun blast during a robbery at a popular dessert restaurant last Tuesday. More mourners made their way to Leimonis's side Sunday and thousands were expected at her funeral this morning.

There was sadness at the loss, but there was also anger over the crime. "We must have zero tolerance for violent crime," said city counselor John Adams at a rally calling for tougher penalties for criminals. "The system is not tough enough."

WASHINGTON (AP) — State agencies overpaid welfare recipients by $1 billion in 1991 because of fraud and mistakes, according to a federal survey.

At the same time, thousands of other low-income families with children were improperly denied welfare benefits by state and county workers responsible for deciding eligibility for Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The survey by the Department of Health and Human Services measures mistakes by agency employees and fraud and errors by welfare recipients. It found that overpayments accounted for $1 billion of the $20.7 billion paid to low-income families in 1991, an error rate of 4.96 percent and the lowest on record. Conservative welfare experts say the survey fails to measure more sophisticated or hard-to-catch fraud by recipients who work off the books or by using phony IDs, hide assets, claim fictitious children, or double dip and collect benefits in two states or counties

U.S. warns of more military action in Bosnia

By TERENCE HUNT AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration warned today of possible NATO military action to protect other towns in Bosnia following two days of strikes on Bosnian Serb forces near Gorazde. President Clinton called today's renewed strikes

"entirely appropriate."

"What the United Nations resume the negotiations," Clinton said. He talked with reporters ing in the Cabinet Room with senior national security advisers.

Among those present were Defense Secretary William Perry, Clinton said U.S. warplanes Secretary of State Warren carried out the attacks – today Christopher, National Security and Sunday – at the request of Adviser Anthony Lake, Gen. the United Nations to protect its John Shalikashvili, chairman of

Hutchison fund raiser

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison visits with well wishers Saturday in Canadian at a fund raiser along the campaign trail. (Pampa News photo by Chervl Berzanskis)

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS News Editor

A United States senator took her message of economic deregulation and fiscal responsibility to about 100 well-wishers in Canadian Satur-

Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, on the campaign trail seeking her first full term in ton's health care proposal for universal care office, spoke to a group assembled to contribute to her campaign chest.

"People in Congress are living in a tree," she said, "They do not have a clue."

Congressmen exempt themselves from the regulations they enact, and while they are not mean or stupid people, they have no idea of the impact of environmental regulations on businesses and the weakening of private property rights, she said.

Hutchison said she introduced a bill to cut the legislative budget 7.5 percent, which sent several senators into ranting, raving fits saying the Washington Monument and the Library of Congress would have to be closed. She proposed instead to have Congress meet fewer days, enact fewer laws and cut the personal budgets of legislators 20 percent.

She assured the group they would never receive a franked newsletter from her.

"I'm not going to use your money to send you a newsletter that you didn't ask for and probably don't want," Hutchison said.

In other legislation, she and a senator from Maryland have co-sponsored a bill to allow homemakers to open $2,000 IRAs. Now, homemakers are only allowed to shelter $250 for retirement while those who are employed may save up to $2,000 toward retirement. Hutchison expects the legislation to be successful, she said.

Much on the mind of the crowd was Clinadministered through businesses.

She called "appalling" legislation to scrap the world's greatest health care system and replace it with a $1 trillion system forced on all businessess. "I will not support anything like the Clinton plan," Hutchison said. The worst problem is that Clinton says the system is wrong, she said. It is not the system but cost containment and malpractice reform legislation which is needed, Hutchison said.

It would be more appropriate to provide for 100 percent deductibility for people who buy their own plans, she said. Other system improvements might include improved affordability, provisions for pre-existing conditions, malpractice reform and pools for small businesses and individuals.

She spoke briefly about her 1993 indictment and subsequent 1994 acquittal on ethics charges. Hutchison told the group she received more than 10,000 letters of support during what she called "the terrible time."

No winner in Lotto drawing

By The Associated Press

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 8, 22, 26, 30, 35 and 42.

There were 107 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,792. There were 5,907 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $119. And there were 116,822 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $10 million.

New fighting reported in Rwanda as foreigners flee

By TERRY LEONARD Associated Press Writer

fighting was reported today in and around the Rwandan capital of Kigali, where a five-day orgy of violence has left bodies piling up by the thousands.

Hundreds of Westerners have fled the African country by air and in truck convoys, while others hid in fear for their lives.

"Pray for us, there is nothing else you can do," those sheltering an aid worker and her family in the countryside said when reached by telephone by the humanitarian group

The bloodshed is an especially grisly episode in the feud between the Hutu and Tutsi ethnic groups, which has wracked Rwanda and neighboring Burundi for decades. The hatred runs so deep that marauders have attacked hospitals, slaughtering people as they lay on their cots.

Drunken men with machetes, knives and grenades set up roadblocks or barged down the body-lined streets, going house-to-house demanding money, food and alcohol, according to foreigners who fled.

And throughout the city of 300,000 hangs the "strong, penetrating" stench of death, said Patrick Gasser, deputy head of the Red Cross

Fighting between the army and the rebel BUJUMBURA, Burundi (AP) - Fierce Rwandan Patriotic Front broke out after the deaths in a plane crash Wednesday of the presidents of Rwanda and Burundi, who were returning from a summit in Tanzania aimed at finding an end to the Hutu-Tutsi animosity. The Rwandan government said the plane was shot down, but this has not been confirmed.

> In the rampage that followed, people were dragged from their homes and shot to death or hacked to pieces.

> The acting prime minister was slain. Aid workers, priests and nuns were targeted. The army and the rebels began fighting outside the Rwandan capital.

> Augustin Mukama, an Rwandan Patriotic Front official in Kamapala, Uganda, told Africa No. 1 Radio that rebel forces entered Kigali today. Moctar Gueye, spokesman for the United Nations observer mission in Rwanda, said automatic weapons fire was heard throughout Kigali today and shelling was heard at the outskirts.

Collins named head of TDCJ

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - James A. "Andy" Collins, who has directed the state's network of prisons for the past four years, is the new executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

"It's a very humbling experience. I've been with the department for several years, and this is a great honor. There's a lot of hard work ahead," Collins, 43, of Huntsville said Sunday following his unanimous selection by the nine-member Texas Board of Criminal Justice.

"This state is on the verge of making several key decisions concerning criminal corrections. We are seeing a change of focus from adult confinement to issues dealing with kids," he

Problems involving adolescents "have changed dramatically over the past 10 to 15 years," Collins said.

Collins succeeds James Lynaugh, who resigned last September, and James Riley, who had been serving as interim director. Riley will return to his former job as director of medical services for the prison system.

Collins has been with the Texas prison system the past 24 years. Since January 1990, he had been responsible for the state correctional system housing about 65,000 prisoners and 24,800 staff members in 50 Texas facilities, as well as 2,700 inmates in four private facilities.

He now will oversee additional divisions, including probation, parole and state jails.

The board conducted a six-month nationwide search for a director. Board Chairman Carol S. Vance of Houston said "in excess of 100 peo-

An apple a day is supposed to keep the doctor away, but according to numerous health studies, a glass of orange juice would be an even better choice.

At least since he time scurvy plagued sailors on long voyages, people have been aware of the health benefits of citrus. Today, studies have found that citrus from orange and grapefruit juice can ward off certain forms of cancer, help the body absorb iron and even lessen the risk of birth defects.

Given the health benefits of orange juice, especially for women of childbearing age, the latest threat to boycott Florida orange juice is full of irony.

Those threatening a boycott are irate that the Florida Citrus Commission is paying $1 million to Rush Limbaugh, conservative author, TV host and radio personality, to promote orange juice. Behind the political pressure are some of Limbaugh's most vocal liberal opponents, including the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Organization for Women and gay rights activists.

Before these groups push ahead with their threatened boycott, they should consider what is more important to them: their ideological agenda, or human health.

According to numerous studies, the vitamin "C" we get from orange juice and grapefruit juice is essential to maintaining healthy skin, bones and gums. The folate in orange juice has been found to reduce the risk of a rare but serious type of birth defect, called neural tube defects.

This is why doctors recommend that women of child-bearing age should make an extra-effort to get their daily dose of vitamin "C." Orange juice has even been found to reduce levels of "bad" cholesterol.

So, who really cares the most about the health of women and children, Limbaugh, the promoter of orange juice, or his ideological foes who want us to cut this health-giving drink from our

But, then, this is a free land, and so those who want to boycott Florida orange juice because of Limbaugh can go ahead and do so. That's their right, to choose to boycott a particular product or

But in the interest of their health, let's hope they don't choose to boycott all orange juice. After all, Florida isn't the only orange juice producer. If they don't want the Limbaugh-endorsed product, then they can turn to California orange juice. Even better, they might remember that Texas also grows oranges, and the Texas fruit is not officially endorsed by spokesman Rush Limbaugh.

So go ahead, drink up - and long health.

French youth prefer welfare

David Brooks of The Wall Street Journal, writing from Europe several weeks ago, made a point wonderfully relevant to today's situation in France. It is that the reputation for stratospheric academic work by the French elite is justified, but that none of this work is given over to mastering elementary eco-

The French intellectual is typically a "philosophe." And the philosophical side of young France believes that $1,000 per month is the minimum pay that should be given to a young Frenchman in exchange for his labor.

During the weeks just gone by, the demonstrations by the "students" (not everyone under 25 in France is a student) got so heated, there was talk of a repeat of 1968. That was the great convulsive year, not only in France but elsewhere. The year of the Democratic Convention in Chicago; of students killed in Mexico City; of riots in New Delhi and Rome. And, in France, the year the great Charles de Gaulle had literally to get out of town, make his peace with a few critical alumni of the Algerian war, come back to Paris and stake the Fifth Republic's life on one dramatic television speech, followed by a huge demonstration in Paris.

It is hard at the moment to remember exactly what it was the students of yesteryear were railing against. But that is not the case today: What they are railing against is economic gravity.

Twelve percent of the French are unemployed. Twenty-five percent of those under 25 are unemployed. Seeking to do something about the young people, the government's proposal had been to reduce the minimum wage by about one-third. The reaction by the students was so electric, the government of Prime Minister Edouard Balladur backed off a little bit, specifying that those who had done advanced college work should receive at least 80 percent of the minimum wage. But now Balladur has abandoned this decree.

An instructive story by Dana Milbank of The Wall Street Journal was filed on Monday, March 28. Unemployment in Great Britain has been a depressing constant for several years. Miraculously, it is slightly reducing, down to 9.8 percent. Without anybody particularly noticing, the productivity of Great Britain has risen by an annual average of 4.5 percent since 1979 - the fastest rate of any major industrialized nation.

To give a very dramatic example of what this means, consider the plight of David Cousins. He is a home-loan officer, working on a three-month tryout for $6.74 per hour. "The pay is 'a nightmare,' " the news story quotes the "bearded 44-year-old, who earned $22.46 an hour before being laid off a couple of years ago by another bank." Cousins is further quoted as saying, "In days gone by, they never would have got away with this."

He means that the all-powerful labor unions would have protected him. That's true - until industries died. And in days gone by, Great Britain's productivity was not rising.

If one-quarter of the youth in France is not working, it is (in most cases) because some people prefer not to work than to work at wages employers can afford to pay'them.

It is no easier in France than in the United States to tote up the cash value of all the benefits that flow to the unemployed, coming as they do from so many quarters, in so many forms - from health care to food stamps to direct relief. Now whatever it is the young French people are getting, the demonstrators are telling the community: Better what they have welfare - than work at 80 percent of the minimum

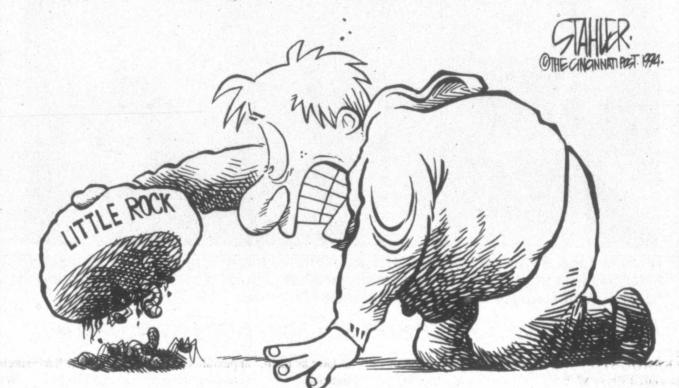

Professor Martin Feldstein of Harvard 15 years ago noted that a married man in Boston earning $20,000 per year stood to lose only 15 percent of his income if he stopped working. To surrender 15 percent of one's income in return for 40 hours of free time is not a bad exchange

Even so, such as David Cousins in England are gradually discovering that work at a lower wage is better than no work at all. And rising productivity holds out the promise, historically, of shared bene-

What the strident young French demonstrators are saying to their elders is: Pay us what the legislators postulate as a minimum wage of $1,000 per month, or else do without our services and pay us a subsidy.

The class in question is demanding unemployment for a living. "What do you do for a living, Jacques?" "I don't work. Exhausting, n'est-ce pas?"

Balladur has earned a reputation as a tergiversator. His specialty has been to give in - to fishermen, farmers, candlestick makers. Somebody should organize a trip for young Frenchmen to visit Great Britain and maybe read a little of the work of the great British economists. But then too, they could stay home and read Jean-Baptiste Say.

Tulsa High is a business building.

The old house at 1014 is in mourning for the Tulsa that isn't there anymore.

It was in that house that a well-meaning mother arranged a surprise birthday party when he was 16 and invited his school friends, including delicate Mary Betty French, without whom he was sure he could not live.

He hated that party for revealing to her and them his house, so much more modest than theirs.

Tulsa is where the true love of his life waves goodbye to the uniform that climbed aboard a troop train. She was there waiting when he got back, but they could not wait to say goodbye to Tulsa. Tulsa was watermelon picnics in the backyard and a small Paul blowing taps on his Boy Scout bugle over the fresh grave of a dead kitten. Tulsa, Okla., used to be the fragrance of honeysuckle on the trellis behind the porch swing. Mowing for a quarter neighbors' lawns that seemed then so enormous.

Only Tulsa's delicious tap water is as it was. That and the schoolteachers ...

Miss Harp and Miss Smith and Isabelle Ronan. These, I am assured, are still there somewhere reincarnated.

In a sleek jet departing Tulsa's vast Spartan Airport Longfellow Elementary School is closed now, at midnight, I closed my eyes and remembered ...

When Spartan was a sod strip ... And a crowd gathered ...

And a great tin goose landed ... And Slim Lindbergh got out ... And the crowd was cheering ... And a boy, age 9, was pressing against the restraining ropes daring to foretaste fame - and falling in love with the sky.

The Tulsa I knew isn't there anymore. But it's all right.

A new Tulsa is. I'll not be afraid to go home again.

I have made friends with the ghosts.

What capitalism is unable to do properly

I yield to no one in my admiration for capitalism - that is, free market economics - as the best route to national prosperity. The market mechanism is vastly superior to any governmental bureaucracy in determining the optimum allocation of resources.

But every so often somebody is tempted to let considerations of "market efficiency" shoulder aside important obligations of a purely moral kind. And that, as moral philosophers have long insisted (Pope Leo XIII, for example, in his 1891 encyclical Rerum Novarum), is a serious mistake.

working conditions, whatever the market might doing so will aid the search for our MIAs. decree in the name of pure "efficiency." It seems equally clear too that American businessmen have no preemptive right to engage in ordinary trade with foreign dictators who savagely oppress their

I don't blame businessmen for leaving it up to the government to decide which nations deserve "most-favored nation" trading status and which ought to be denied it. This is a complex world, and one can readily understand that it may be sometimes essential to extend that important favor to certain countries that fall short of our notion of perfection. During the 40-year Cold War, examples

But it turns my stomach to see President Clinton knuckling under to the pressure of a bunch of greedy businessmen and authorizing U.S. trade it." In the same way, no doubt, that Germany's

Thus, few today would argue that an employer with the obscene communist regime in Vietnam, can properly be indifferent to an employee's age or and then offering as an excuse the flat lie that > Far worse, however, is Mr. Clinton's persistence in extending "most-favored nation" status to communist China, in the teeth of overwhelming evidence that the cheap goods with which it is flooding the American market are largely the products of workers who are slaves in everything but name.

> The excuses for such cynicism are as phony as they are numerous. "If we don't trade with China, we'll just lose that market to other Western nations that will." Sure, and if we don't sell missiles and nuclear weapons to Iran, North Korea will - or would, if we don't bring heavy pressures on North Korea to desist. Do we have less influence on Western nations than we do on North Korea?

> "International trade, and the prosperity it brings, will do far more to liberalize China than isolating flourishing international trade in the 1930s moderated Hitler's behavior. A free economy ultimately undermines a dictatorship, because it gives rise to a middle class that cannot be silenced. But in the short run prosperity often actually strengthens a dictator's hand.

"We desperately need China's help in persuading North Korea to permit monitoring of its nuclear facilities." Here the Greed Lobby has stumbled near an important point. We rightly had no compunction about allying ourselves with the Soviet Union against Hitler when Hitler was the more immediate menace to the survival of the West, and North Korea's ongoing development of a nuclear capability unquestionably threatens the whole Asian region today.

But is China's help really essential in deterring North Korea? It would obviously be very useful, since without it economic sanctions cannot be leakproof. But they can still hurt - and China itself can hardly welcome the specter of a nuclear-armed North Korea on its northeastern border. We can invite China to recognize our mutual interest in deterring North Korea, without paying the huge price of disregarding China's own intolerable

Not long before his death the Chinese Nationalist president on Taiwan, Chiang Ching-kuo, asked me, "If America doesn't stand for freedom, what does it stand for?" It's still a good questions. We will abandon that moral standard at our peril.

DEAR ABBY: I've just seen Schindler's List," a very powerful movie that every American should see. I was reminded of a piece you Speak Up."

Now that "Schindler's List" has won seven Academy Awards, that column merits repeating. NANCY SMITH, PHOENIX

DEAR NANCY: I have run that column several times over the years. It was written by the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, a German Lutheran pastor who was arrested by the Gestapo and was sent to Dachau, a concentration camp, in 1938. He was freed by the Allied Forces in 1945.

Here is his moving piece:

I DIDN"T SPEAK UP

"In Germany, the Nazis first came for the communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, but I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak for

DEAR ABBY: I am a recently divorced woman. I had not been with a man for more than a year until two weeks ago when I met my next-door neighbor and his live-in girlfriend. I knew him slightly in high school. He is very attractive, and I felt an instant magnetism when our eyes met.

Well, his girlfriend went out of town, and he came over. One thing led to another, and he spent the am not easy, but I'm now feeling a lot of mixed emotions like guilt, By KAROL STONGER shame, depression and joy. I don't know how to act around him when his girlfriend is around. I'm on the verge of tears every time I think about it.

Abby, normally I can solve my own problems, but I've never been in a situation like this before.

Please don't use my location they have a newspaper on their doorstep every morning, too.

By the way, I made him use a condom — that's one less thing to worry about. We were both sober; he's in AA, and drinking is against my religion. Please tell me what to do. I fee like a schoolgirl again. SEEING STARS

DEAR SEEING STARS: A person who is living with someone of the opposite sex should definitely be considered off-limits. I advise you not to see him again as long as he and his live-in lady are roommates. If you do, you will surely end up with a broken heart. Or worse.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a disagreement between a work associate and me. Is it proper to apply lipstick at the table after lunch or dinner in a restaurant? T.L.R., CHULA VISTA, CALIF.

DEAR T.L.R.: A 10-second dab of lipstick is permissible. However, any procedure that lasts longer than half a minute and might cause dandruff to fly, or powder to settle on the tablecloth, is a no-no.

April books blessed with scruples and diplomacy

By RON BERTHEL Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Judith Krantz's concluding novel in her "Scruples" trilogy, and Henry Kissinger's "Diplomacy" are among the "virtuous" new titles appearing in bookstores this month.

Krantz's readers saw Gigi Orsini grow to maturity in "Scruples Two"; in the sequel, 'Lovers" (Crown), Krantz picks up the story during the economic boom of the early 1980s, as Gigi begins working in an ad agency where her wit, intelligence and red-haired beauty attract a number of men, while her professionhad in your column titled "I Didn't | al success incurs the wrath of a female col-

Killeen tragedy turned Texas woman into staunch gun-rights advocate

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - As Suzanna Gratia crisscrosses the country, intent on convincing citizens and lawmakers that gun control is wrong, she believes she's detecting a new mood.

Despite the recent enactment of the Brady law and the likelihood Congress soon will impose an assault weapons ban, the Texan doesn't feel she's fighting a losing battle.

"I think I'm working against the legislative tide, but I don't believe I am working any more against the tide of the public en masse and the media," she said in a recent interview.

A hail of bullets in a crowded Killeen cafeteria transformed Ms. Gratia from a Copperas Cove chiropractor into one of the gun-rights lobby's most visible advo-

She was having lunch with her parents on Oct. 16, 1991, when George Hennard crashed his pickup truck through a Luby's cafeteria window, jumped out and opened fire with two semiautomatic pistols.

Al and Ursula Gratia were among the 23 people Hennard massacred before killing himself. Suzanna fled the gunfire, thinking her mother was following. She later learned that Ursula Gratia remained behind to tend her husband of 48 years, who was shot in the chest after he lunged at Hennard.

A gun owner since the age of 21, Suzanna Gratia emerged from the tragedy with one certainty in her mind - that lives would have been saved had her gun been with her instead of in her parked car.

'The only reason my gun was not in my purse was because I wimped out and I was worried about losing my license to practice (as a chiropractor). So I began leaving my gun in my car a couple of months before the incident," she said.

"Stupid, stupid, stupid." Her anger isn't directed at Hennard. "How can you be mad at a rabid dog?" she asked. "This guy just simply went nuts."

Her wrath is for others. "I was very angry and I'm still very angry ... at my legislators for legislating me out of the right to protect myself and my family," she Spurred by the tragedy, she quickly hooked up with the National Rifle Association. In the 2 1/2 years since then, she has testified before legislative committees in Texas, Colorado, Hawaii and Missouri and has traveled extensively to other states. Her appearances number well into the "three figures by now," she said.

Last month, she appeared on Capitol Hill before a Senate judiciary subcommittee to oppose gun control legislation drafted by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-"I think she's a very courageous lady and am grateful her willingness to speak out," said Tanya Metaksa, the NRA's chief lobbyist.

Ms. Gratia is among "three or four dozen" people whose lives were marked by violent crime who speak out on behalf of the NRA, Ms. Metaksa said.

While Ms. Gratia isn't an NRA member, the organization or other gun-rights groups pay for many of her

She deliberately chose not to join the NRA, saying she doesn't want to be labeled.

"I am speaking for everyone out there who has a strong belief in the 2nd Amendment and in our right and ability to protect ourselves both from the criminal element and our own government if need be," she said.

Ms. Gratia acknowledged that the grim credentials she brings to the debate give her an edge. "It is very hard for someone to go up against someone who has been there," she said. "You want emotion, you want blood and guts and the horrible human end of it, and Susan Whitmore, a spokeswoman for the gun-control group that championed the Brady law, agreed that victims are among the most persuasive advocates.

"Obviously victims, no matter what side of the issue they are on, they can be very compelling and very powas an NRA member and as a law-abiding gun owner for erful speakers," said Ms. Whitmore, who is with Handgun Control Inc.

'I think, on the other side of the coin, there are probably very many more people that have come away from similar tragedies with a different point of view," Ms. Whitmore added. "Certainly, there are a lot of victims who have decided to speak out for tighter gun control, not weaker gun control.'

For Suzanna Gratia, the issue comes down to one of personal rights. Her belief is anyone eligible to vote should be able to own a gun - and the burden of proofshould be on the state to show why a person should be denied that right.

Her one-woman crusade may end some day. "I'm out of town now constantly. That gets a littlerough," she said, adding the absences are hurting both her business and personal life. "I don't know how much longer I can afford to do it; that's what it comes down to."

But the memory of her parents keeps her pressing on. "I would much rather be sitting in jail with a felony offense on my head and have my parents alive."

International observers tour Hebron

By NICOLAS B. TATRO Associated Press Writer

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank (AP) - International observers made their first visit to Hebron today in a step toward calming the city where 30 Palestinians were killed in while praying at a mosque.

But the 17-member advance team cut short its visit when the army fired tear gas to stop Islamic militants protesting the mosque's continued closure.

The first of a force of 160 observers would arrive next week, Hebron Mayor Mustafa Natche said today.

"They will not be armed, but they will help to create an atmosphere of security in the town" by trying to break up clashes between Palestinians and Israeli troops or Jewish settlers, he said.

Israel agreed to allow the observers to spend three months in Hebron after

The PLO demanded some form of protection for Palestinian residents in Hebron after a Jewish settler opened fire Feb. 25 on worshippers at the Tomb of the Patriarchs, holy to both Muslims and Jews. Israel agreed to allow the observers to spend three months in Hebron.

Israel today allowed Palestinians to circulate freely in the center of town for six hours, during the first normal business day downtown since the massacre. The mosque, also downtown, was still closed.

The advance team - mostly diplomats from Norway, Denmark and Italy, all countries expected to contribute observers - was briefed by Palestinian officials and Israeli military commanders.

"The military commander of Hebron has opened the city and this is a good sign," Natche said after meeting with the delegation. "We consider it a gift of the guests who came to Hebron.'

The delegation members said they requested the city be open during their visit.

"We feel the mandate of the group is to further the restoration of normalcy," said Knut Vollboak, the Norwegian head of the advance team. "We hope this is a good omen for the work we are going to do."

Islamic militants, especially strong in Hebron, are opposed to the foreign force.

"The whole thing is designed to circumvent the Palestinian demand for evacuating the trigger-happy Jewish settlers from downtown Hebron," said Khaled Suleiman, a supporter of the Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas. The observers "will not be able to protect us. I will be surprised if they can protect themselves."

Palestinians on all sides have said the city of 80,000 Palestinians will not return to normal until Israel removes the 450 Jewish settlers scattered in six enclaves.

Elsewhere today, army radio reported scuffles with soldiers and one settler arrested.

About 20 Palestinian doctors protested after they were not allowed through the main checkpoint stopping Palestinians entering Jerusalem from the northern West Bank. Israel said it would try not to interrupt medical services.

On Sunday, the Israeli Cabinet announced the 1.8 million Palestinians in the occupied lands would be barred from entering Israel until further notice. The step came after attacks last week that left eight Israelis dead and more than 50 wounded.

The attacks were claimed by Islamic militants opposed to the Israel-PLO peace process. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, in an interview on Israel radio, criticized PLO leader Yasser Arafat for not speaking out against a suicide car bombing near Afula that killed seven Israelis. The attack near a bus stop was claimed by Islamic militants.

Honey Bunny receives oxygen after the cat spent 16 1/2 hours trapped in an air duct Sunday in owner Judith Keane's Bowie, Md., home. With Keane watching breathlessly, tears streaming down her face, three Bowie firefighters and two doctors attempted a complicated rescue that was finally successful - thanks to a jar of Vaseline. SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - A radar device fixed after an initial kink beamed down sepia-tinted images of the Sahara Desert and southern Italy today as the shuttle lion square miles will be mapped Endeavour soared 138 miles over- before the mission ends April 19.

Six astronauts are working in teams around the clock, taking thousands of photographs and changing data-collecting tapes while ground controllers manipulate two radar systems scanning the Earth.

NASA says the radar is the most sophisticated ever sent into space for environmental monitoring, able dimensional map of mountains, volcanoes, forests, deserts, oceans and Early today, the radars recorded images of the Sahara Desert in Algeria and the area around Matera, Italy. Mountains and salt flats in the desert showed up as bright spots in grayish-brown images beamed to the ground, while dark lines indicated rivers in Italy.

Scientists feared they might have to conduct their work with one less amplifier for one of the instruments. That would have resulted in only two-dimensional images.

The primary purpose of the mission is to see how the new radar works. Any knowledge gained about soil erosion, deforestation, flooding and other environmental problems will be a bonus.

Endeavour also flew over Western Europe and the radars were pointed toward Oberpfaffenhofen, Germany. The Bavarian town is one of 19 "supersites" where studies are being concentrated.

While the shuttle passed, up to to create an unprecedented three- radar frequency because of Satur- 150 researchers in Germany helped day's problem with a high-power verify the radar's accuracy by recording such environmental data as soil moisture. British troops prepare to leave Hong Kong By JOHN LEICESTER

Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) - Boots, jeeps, spent shells and assault craft it's all got to go. China recovers Hong Kong soon, and the departing British army is holding garage sales of historic proportions.

Chinese troops will march into Hong Kong in July 1997, so the British are packing, mothballing weapons, clearing barracks and preparing to leave. What they can't take with them is coming under the auctioneer's gavel.

Unlike many other colonies Britain has left, Hong Kong is being ceded without a shot. Britain and China agreed on the transfer of sovereignty

"It's the first time, I believe, that we have handed over our property to a foreign power - and a communist one at that - and that makes Hong Kong unique," army spokesman Paddy Hartigan said in an interview.

For famed units like the Nepalese 10th Gurkhas and the Black Watch regimental brass band, Hong Kong will be the last stop in long, distinguished service. They are going out of existence, victims of the Cold War's end.

"It's not just our unit. It's happening to armies all over the world," said Ian Peaple, leader of the band.

"Scotland the Brave" and "Highland Laddie" filled the humid Hong Kong air when the 200-year-old band performed publicly for the last time at a rugby tournament in March. Band members, nicknamed "kilted foreigners" by locals for their resplendent skirts, feathered black hats and sporrans, will board planes for home May 2 and

"fly into history," Peaple said.

Britain plans to reduce its total forces by 40,000, or 20 percent, by 1995. Withdrawal from Hong Kong will end Britain's military commitments east of Suez and reduce its once-mighty empire to 13 colonies.

"It's like the last days of the Raj," said Maj. Mike Edwards, who is returned to China. supervising the sale of surplus equipment. "When you think that there are fewer and fewer places to be posted to equipment from quarterly to bi-monthas interesting as this, it's quite sad,

Hong Kong, with its vibrancy and night life, was a plum posting for British soldiers, especially compared to tours of Northern Ireland or Ger-

"There's a lot of vestiges of the empire still around here, and if you go to Germany you don't get any of that," Edwards said.

papers have mentioned 10,000.

The Black Watch, which saw action from Guadaloupe in 1759 to Korea in 1952, hands over in September to a reduced contigent of Gurkhas and local soldiers. They will handle things until a British regiment returns for the last six months before Hong Kong is

As barracks are cleared, the army has increased auctions of surplus ly. At the most recent sale in March, about 50 scrap merchants, bargain hunters and traders, mostly local Chinese, packed a small auctioneer's office in central Hong Kong to buy everything from old staff cars to ammunition boxes.

Lot B6, consisting of 2,650 uniforms, went for $850. Lot A8, a 1989 Austin Metro in working order, fetched $320. In an earlier sale, a British businessman bought six helicopters for $148,000.
