The Nation's Fress

has put a mental straight-jacket on all criticism of our Government's foreign policy

Whatever has been done in the name of "the Government" has been immune from questioning because of the mystical belief that great evils would befall us if we were not bipartisan. The few venturesome souls who dared raise public questions were assailed not for the quality of their misgivings but simply because they violated a taboo.

Thus the current makers of for-

Thus the current makers of for-eign policy have had carte blanche to do as they chose without fear of being called to public answer. And with what consequences, we are just beginning to see.

The Government made certain decisions—some of them in secret —as to the political division of Europe. Their wisdom could not be debated; for to debate is to ques-tion and to question is not to be bi-partisan.

The Government made certain decisions on Palestine. Somewhat still later reverted to its original ones. Each of these mutations—at least one of which obviously must have been wrong were shielded against criticism.

The Government decided to underwrite the economy of half the continent of Europe. There was debate on how much we could af-ford to give away—this was a dom-estic question—but anyone who suggested we should not undertake it at all was charged with rocking the boat, undermining the full faith and credence of the "Govern-

/ We were required to stifle all doubts in the name of bi-partisanship.

To what absurdities this carried us was illustrated in the last poli-tical campaign. Here was a field of Government activity of surpassing importance to the people, yet the actions of their servants in this field could not be examined. The spokesman for some 20 million voters was rendered speechless by the musticing of a word. the mysticism of a word.

Nor are the absurdities over, A decade ago there was some mal-feasance in our foreign policy de-partment; some documents of state were stolen, photographed and eventually hidden in a pumpkin. Yet we are told we cannot have a close look at this malfeasance because it might prove embarrassing to a former Government or to some of the servants still left in

So long has this situation pre-vailed that our custodians of for-eign policy have begun to accept their immunity as a matter of mor-al right. They show righteous in-dignation not only against criti-cisms of major policy, but now seem to think the public most ac-cept even the details withous mescept even the details without ques-tioning.

Fortunately there are now some signs that responsible men in public life are beginning to question this talisman of bi-partisanship, Alfred M. Landon, former presidential candidate and still a lead-er in the Republican Party, has had the courage to say where worship of bi-partisanship is the press. It has concealed from the people the cruel, hard fact that Senator Vandenberg, himself one of the organizers of the bi-parti-san approach for the Republicans, seems to be having faint misglv-ings, At least he has called for an "exhaustive survey" of the record fore Congress decides on further appropriation. He also believes the program will face a "critical showdown early in the next ses-

The European nations have carried through none of the fiscal and trade reforms on which the pro-gram was predicated. Yet Con-gress will be asked for another $1.2 billion just for the remainder of this year, not counting the new year's appropriation. Questions are certainly in order.

But this showdown ought not to be limited to ECA. Our foreign policy can spell the difference between peace and war; today it have been holding secret opinions about all year long.

By now they begin to feel they know each other a little—and they like the feeling.

At least we figure that Quality ought to come ahead of Price-though we're well aware of the latter's importance.

So you find us always trying to strike the proper balance between doing a good job and doing an economical one. We try to give you the parts and materials you really need, the time it takes to do things right—and still not waste any of your hard-earned money.

That may not make us the cheapest place in town to buy good service—but we think it makes us the most satisfactory in the long run. Maybe somebody else can shade our costs but we'll guarantee you'll get no better value anywhere, or spend your money more wisely.

The reason we are interested in both Quality and economical Price is because we intend to do our best to grow with this community as your Buick Dealer. We must depend on you being highly satisfied with our service to make that come true-not merely satisfied for today or tomorrow but satisfied as a continuing Buick owner.

We believe you will agree with us that Q comes before P in the service alphabet-come on in and let's talk it over.
