PAMPA — Beginning Monday, June 13, the city will begin the second year of its composting program. More than 3,000 of Pampa's homes are expected to participate in the program that allows residents to bag their grass clippings and set them out for curbside pick-up by city employees.

Section I includes the area located between Hobart Street and Davis Street in the east and west and between Kentucky Avenue and 23rd Avenue on the north and south. Pick-up will be on Mondays.

Section II is the area located between Harvester Avenue, east of Hobart Street, and bounded by Louisiana Avenue, Yeager Street and Browning Avenue. Pick-up will be on Tuesday.

Section III of the composting program includes the area between the railroad tracks and McCullough Avenue in the north and south and Hobart Street and Tignor Street on the east and west. Pick-up will be on Thursday.

Due to less than expected funding for the program, free bags will not be distributed as they were last year, according to Rick Stone, Pampa's sanitation superintendent.

Anyone interested in participating in the program but who is not in the pick-up areas is encouraged to drop any grass clippings off at the landfill, Stone said. The gate fee at the landfill has been waived for Pampa residents.

PAMPA — Burglars apparently seeking relief from the week's earlier heat wave helped themselves to an evaporative cooler from the annex of New Hope Baptist Church, 901 S. Gray. Theft of the cooler, valued at $500, was reported Thursday. It vanished sometime between Sunday and Wednesday, said Sgt. Charlie Love of the Pampa Police Department.

Thieves attempted to make off with another cooler, valued at $500, from Macedonia Baptist Church, 441 Elm. A sharp-eyed witness caused them to drop their booty and flee, Love said.

Two other coolers have been reported stolen from vacant houses, he said.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Offering Moscow a "special relationship" befitting a nuclear power, NATO hoped to draw Russia into its cooperation accord with former Warsaw Pact countries today.

But the alliance stopped short of granting its former enemy any say in policy making, and Moscow's reaction was not immediately known.

Foreign ministers of the 16 Western allies are sitting down with counterparts from 18 countries from Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union that have already signed on to Partnership for Peace. The accord calls for broad political and military cooperation, including joint maneuvers, and holds out the possibility of eventual NATO membership.

NATO officials said they may not get an immediate response from Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev of Russia before he is able to consult with his government.

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who was convicted of driving while intoxicated in a case stemming from a fatal traffic accident has been ordered by a judge to hang a photograph of his victims in his prison cell.

State District Judge Ted Poe Thursday sentenced Manuel Lopez, 22, to 10 years in prison, the maximum allowed in Texas for drunken drivers who kill.

Poe said Lopez "eliminated a family" when he collided head-on with a car whose occupants were on their way to church March 26.

Julian Luviano, 31, and his wife Gloria, 25, were killed. Their 5-year-old daughter, Amy, suffered a broken arm and pelvis, and their son, Julian Jr. 4, still in Hermann Hospital, is paralyzed and cannot breathe on his own.

Prosecutor Kelly Siegler said Lopez had been drinking all night and into the morning of March 26 when, after only one hour of sleep, he got behind the wheel to take a friend to work.

BAYVIEW (AP) — An ambitious program in South Texas could send the aplomado falcon — one of the rarest birds in the United States — on the same flight to abundance as the peregrine falcon, an expert says.

"I'm confident that within the next few years we'll see nesting pairs, and within five to 10 years it will be on the road to recovery through much of its range," said Bill Heinrich, manager of the Peregrine Fund Inc.'s falcon release program.

Four captive-bred aplomado falcon chicks were given new homes in the wild Thursday at Laguna Atascosa National Wildlife Refuge, the latest step to reintroduce the raptors into a habitat in which their numbers once soared.

No breeding pairs of aplomado falcons have been seen in the United States since 1941.

U.S. to seek sanctions against North Korea

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The United States will ask the United Nations next week to level economic sanctions against North Korea for denying international inspectors access to critical evidence about its nuclear weapons capability.

"It's time to move forward with the resolution," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said today after discussing the move here with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev.

Concurring in the objective, Kozyrev said at a joint news conference: "We cannot tolerate violations by North Korea or anyone else."

Christopher, meanwhile, endorsed a proposal by Russian President Boris Yeltsin to hold an international conference on North Korea's program and its refusal to cooperate with the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The timing depends on how quickly the U.N. Security Council acts on the resolution. The Clinton administration endorsed Russia's proposal in order to ensure Russian support for sanctions, a U.S. official said.

A conference could provide a forum for considering ways to gain North Korea's cooperation with international inspectors and for offering diplomatic and other incentives, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Christopher said the administration had been working closely with Japan to get its support for sanctions. He also reiterated his view that China, while opposed to sanctions in principle, nevertheless was likely to abstain and not veto to a resolution.

"The time has come for a sanctions resolution and we will be pursuing that," Christopher said. "That is one of the things I'll be working on when I get back."

He decided to cut short his visit to Istanbul, where he attended a one-day meeting of NATO foreign ministers on Thursday, to return quickly to Washington to work on the North Korean problem.

Christopher said he would make telephone calls from his Air Force jet while homeward back.

"There are no grounds for portraying U.S. and Japanese views as diverging on this issue," Assistant Secretary of State Robert L. Gallucci told the House Thursday in an unusual statement that he said had Japan's endorsement.

"Japan believes it is time to show an appropriate response to North Korean actions, including sanctions, at the U.N. Security Council," Gallucci said.

The statement, he told the Foreign Affairs Committee, was prompted by a New York Times report that Japan was reluctant to go along with President Clinton's plan to punish North Korea for refusing to allow complete international inspection of its nuclear facilities.

Special quilt

Mrs. Reba Phillips works on an all silk bow tie quilt pattern, pieced together by hand. Starting on the quilt Monday, Mrs. Phillips, who helped her mother quilt as a child, hopes to have the quilt completed today. The quilt pattern was pieced by her mother, Alice Smith, in 1957 in Amarillo. Mrs. Phillips is quilting the final product as a special gift to present to her youngest brother, J.G. Smith, at a family reunion later this month. Her brother, who lives in Alice, Texas, is president of their family reunion group, which has been meeting for 40 years. Mrs. Phillips is one of 10 siblings in her family; she had two other brothers and is the oldest girl. She helped deliver two of her sisters. She is the oldest one living of her family. White House 'stands behind' ag secretary

By ROBERT GREENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is expressing support for Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy, who is under Justice Department scrutiny for his relationship with an Arkansas poultry company.

"The president stands behind him," Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Thursday. "He has done good work on tightening inspections for meat and poultry and has agreed to cooperate fully with the investigation."

Justice Department lawyers, meanwhile, were inclined to close the investigation without filing charges, federal officials said Thursday.

Investigators were trying to determine whether Espy received anything of value from Tyson Foods Inc., a giant in the poultry industry that Espy's department regulates.

A federal law enforcement official who declined to be identified by name said Justice Department lawyers wanted to close the case without prosecution because they believe the only questionable items had a very small dollar value.

This official said the lawyers were likely to overrule the FBI, which wanted to pursue reports that some documents might have been shredded. There was a remote possibility that a new flurry of stories might extend the life of the case, the official added.

The investigation has delved into whether internal documents were destroyed in early 1993.

The Associated Press reported in March that Espy's aides insisted on getting all records in early 1993 from the Food Safety and Inspection Service concerning its proposal to enforce tighter inspection standards for poultry.

Espy declined to discuss the investigation, telling the AP: "There are a lot of things I would like to say, but most of them are unprintable."

His department released a statement saying that he had "cooperated fully and believes there will be a positive outcome."

Critics have complained that the poultry industry has gotten favorable treatment from an administration that has clamped down on sanitary conditions in beef slaughterhouses.

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern acknowledged the investigation on Thursday but refused to provide details. Asked if the department was nearing a decision to wrap up the investigation without filing charges, Stern said, "It's nearing a decision on whether to close."

One of the trips being looked at was a May 1993 visit to Mississippi, where Espy gave two commencement addresses, and to Arkansas, where he spent the night as a guest of the Arkansas Poultry Federation and spoke to farm groups at a conference center owned by Tyson.

Travel records obtained by the AP show that Espy took private charters on several legs of that trip, including the flight back to Washington. There were no expense reports to reimburse the charter flight operators.

But a spokesman for the University of Mississippi in Oxford said Thursday that the university flew Espy from Jackson, Miss., to Oxford for the commencement address, then to Russellville. The government later reimbursed the university for $1,582 to cover the charter expense.

Tyson would not respond to specific questions on Thursday, but issued a general statement saying, "To the best of our knowledge, Tyson Foods and the Arkansas Poultry Federation have been reimbursed appropriately by either the secretary or the USDA."

Tyson, based in Springdale, is the nation's top poultry company and a linchpin of the economy in Arkansas, where President Clinton was governor.

Tyson Chairman Don Tyson is a longtime backer of Clinton. James Blair, Tyson's general counsel, and his wife, Diane, are close friends of the Clintons. Blair once helped Hillary Rodham Clinton make a $100,000 profit in cattle futures.

GOP gathers in Fort Worth

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) — While pro-choice advocates are criticizing Republican Party opposition to abortion rights, GOP Chairman Fred Meyer says the party is growing because of its conservative philosophies.

"We are following the democratic process, and we're winning," said Meyer, who's stepping down after three terms as party leader during the GOP convention that opens today.

Controversy over a platform is to be expected, Meyer added, especially when a political party is growing.

"There's only one person who agrees with every word of the platform — and that's the chairman, whoever he or she may be."

"This (abortion) happens to be an issue on which people feel very strongly. As our Republican coalition grows and we become bigger and bigger in the state, there's going to be more differences of opinion. That's the price of becoming a majority party," he said.

On the eve of the convention, pro-choice leaders and delegates said the GOP's opposition to abortion rights threatens the party's ballot box prospects.

"I have long felt that the word 'abortion' should be eliminated from the Republican Party platform. I still feel that way," said Polly Orcutt, a delegate from Dallas.

"If we do not do this, we are once again going to lose a lot of the female votes," said Ms. Orcutt, a veteran Republican who said she hadn't voted for a Democrat since Harry Truman was president.

As many as 70 percent of the 6,000 convention delegates considered social-issue conservatives, a confederation of conservative Christian activists, abortion opponents, home school advocates and others.

On Wednesday, the party's platform committee tentatively reaffirmed the 1992 GOP platform position opposing abortion except to save the life of the mother.

At a news conference Thursday, various abortion rights groups contended that the GOP's abortion plank runs counter to the beliefs of a majority of Texans.

"Extremists have taken over my political party. They have made it clear that my pro-choice position has no place in the Republican Party. I am here to tell them that they are wrong about choice, and they are wrong about the Republican Party," said Nancy Machen of Plano, Republican Task Force chair of the Texas Women's Political Caucus.

Irving company to test aloe treatment on AIDS patients

IRVING (AP) — An aloe-based injection previously used to treat tumors in cats and dogs has been cleared for human trials to test its effectiveness in the treatment of AIDS.

Carrington Laboratories Inc. said the Food and Drug Administration has authorized study of the use of an injectable complex carbohydrate to treat complications from the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS.

In studies on AIDS patients who were given the drug orally, the drug showed promise for slowing "the onset and the intensity and the longevity of the disease" without harsh side effects, said Carlton

Turner, Carrington's executive vice president of scientific research.

"It is not a cure, but it shows promise as leading toward a therapeutic entity in the treatment of AIDS," Turner said.

The substance is derived from the aloe vera plant.

"What we have here is a unique chemical entity that is naturally derived and has been used by man for hundreds of years," Turner said.

The drug has been under development by Carrington for 10 years, Turner said. In its cruder form, it is used in a numerous Carrington products for the treatment of illness and wounds.

The injectable chemical already has been approved by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as an aid in the treatment of fibrosarcoma in cats and dogs.

Specifics of the human trial of the injection are not complete. Approval was based on a 48-week Canadian study of an oral dosage of Acemannan and a safety study of the injection at the University of Texas Health Science Center, he said.

The chemical, which Carrington has trademarked as Acemannan, "tunes up the body's immune system" and has shown signs of enhancing the immune system, which could be valuable in AIDS treatment, Turner said.

Space center contract employee indicted in FBI sting

HOUSTON (AP) — A contract project manager for the Johnson Space Center has been indicted on federal charges of accepting a bribe and computer to develop a phony device that could be taken aboard spaceflights.

David R. Proctor was indicted Wednesday on charges stemming from the FBI's sting operation at JSC. The charges include conspiracy, bribery and federal procurement integrity and gratuity violations.

Proctor, a project manager in the NASA-JSC Sciences Project Division, had asked that accusations filed against him in February in a federal information go before a grand jury, U.S. Attorney Gaynelle Griffin Jones said Thursday.

A federal information is an accusation filed in court.

Proctor is accused of accepting a $3,000 bribe and a computer valued at $10,000. In exchange, he allegedly agreed to develop a proposal for a phony kidney-stone smashing device small enough it could be taken on spaceflights.

In all, 10 individuals and one League City company have been charged with crimes ranging from fraud to bribery. The charges are the result of the undercover FBI sting called "Operation Lightning Strike."

Proctor, 34, of nearby League City, said the indictment was a surprise to him.

"I didn't even know anything about it until I opened up the paper and saw it. I haven't seen the indictment," Proctor said, declining to comment further until he and his attorney had seen the indictment.

Proctor is still employed as a contract project manager for NASA, he said.

Baptists feud over firing of seminary head

By TERRY WALLACE
 Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The governing board of the state Southern Baptist convention has taken a stand behind the ousted president of a Fort Worth seminary and ordered a study of seminary teaching statewide.

The 213-member executive board of the Baptist General Convention of Texas adopted a resolution condemning the firing of Russell Dilday as president of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, officials said Thursday.

The trustees of the 4,000-student seminary in Fort Worth "acted irresponsibly and unconscionably in the manner in which they removed Russell Dilday from the presidency of the seminary," the resolution stated.

The resolution noted that board members wished "to formally record our disapproval of the dismissal of Dr. Dilday, to remind Southwestern's trustees of their moral obligation to provide an equitable and generous severance package for the Dilday family, and to insist that the terms of the severance package neither infringe on Dr. Dilday's freedom to speak under the guidance of the Holy Spirit nor restrict his right to serve Christ according to the dictates of his own conscience."

There was no count of the show of hands at the quarterly board meeting in Dallas Tuesday, but the resolution had the support of "a clear majority" of the board, spokesman Orville Scott said.

The convention board also authorized the appointment of a 15-member committee to study the state of theological education in Texas' Southern Baptist seminaries.

The Baptist General Convention of Texas has about 5,500 congregations consisting of more than 2.5 million congregants, Scott said.

News of the resolution came as a surprise to Dilday on Thursday night.

"It's a very strong statement of affirmation," he said from his Fort Worth home.

He said he welcomed the convention board's support on the severance agreement, since progress has been slow on that front.

Dilday had served as the president of the seminary, the nation's largest, from August 1978 until his firing.

Quake survivors plead for help

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Survivors of an avalanche caused by an earthquake were growing impatient with the government's efforts to rescue them from a mountain jolted by aftershocks.

Hundreds of people have been spending nights in the open as the government struggles to cope with the cascade of ice, snow and rock down Nevado del Huila, an 18,975-foot-high volcano some 180 miles south of Bogota.

At least 269 people were killed and 13,000 left homeless by the landslide Monday.

"There are many people without shelter, a lot of misery, abandoned children and orphans, and the job that must be done is enormous," National Police Chief Gen. Octavio Vargas said Thursday.

The avalanche was caused by a 6.4-magnitude quake whose aftershocks were still being felt.

"We need the government to take us out of here! We are afraid the mountains will swallow us," an enraged Indian man shouted in Toez, one of dozens of Indian villages buried.

As many as 1,500 were missing, many of whom may be alive, officials said.

"There is immense confusion as to who is missing and who is not," Juan Manuel Uribe, assistant director of the National Disaster Office, told The Associated Press.

"There are many survivors who have simply gone up into the mountains. There are villages we haven't visited yet," he said.

Rescuers were hampered by the remoteness of the region — accessible now only by helicopter — and the sheer number of people needing help.

Homeowners have bigger school tax burden

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Homeowners are paying a bigger share of school property taxes, which have gone up nearly half a billion dollars under the latest education funding law.

The state comptroller has reported that the local taxes went up 6 percent — or $493 million — to give school districts a total of $8.67 billion to help fund their budgets this school year. The state kicked in another $7 billion.

Businesses paid more than half the local school taxes. Although their taxes went up, their share of the total declined by close to 2 percent, according to the comptroller.

Homeowners' share of the $8.67 billion was just over 40 percent. That's up from 37.7 percent of the previous year's $8.18 billion local tax bill.

The shift in the tax burden was due to rising home values and to the removal of homestead exemptions that had been granted under a previous school finance system, according to the comptroller's office.

The earlier system, which used county education districts to redistribute some local property tax money among school districts, was thrown out by the Texas Supreme Court.

Voters last year refused a ballot proposal that would have allowed continuation of the education districts. Those districts generally allowed a 20 percent homestead exemption on about two-thirds of school property taxes, a higher break than that granted by most school districts.

Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards said Thursday that local school districts have heard from taxpayers about the increase.

Hobart Baptist Church to hear gospel singer

Sharyn Morrow of Clarendon will sing at the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday at Hobart Baptist Church, 1100 W. Crawford. A nursery will be provided for infants through three years old.

Morrow has 27 years experience in gospel music with nine years in music evangelism using sacred, full gospel and contemporary music.

Her family travels with her to engagements. She is married to Earl Morrow, an employee of the Texas Highway Department. They are the parents of two, ages 22 and nine.

Hoechst Celanese employees celebrate safety award

Workers at Hoechst Celanese Corporation's Pampa Plant should be proud of the job they do and their record of safety.

That was the message from Plant Manager Jerry Moore to employees of the chemical company Thursday at a luncheon to celebrate the company winning the Lamot du Pont Safety Award from the Chemical Manufacturers Association.

"I think we have a lot to be proud of and I want to congratulate each and everyone of you for the effort. Keep up the good work, and I think everyone should feel real, real proud of the performance the Pampa plant has had over the past few years," Moore said at Thursday's gathering.

The Lamot du Pont Safety Award is given annually to three companies, in three different size categories, that have shown the greatest percentage reduction in occupational injuries, deaths and illnesses during the past five years.

In addition, a company's total recordable incident rates for the award year must not exceed the average for all companies in the same category.

Hoechst Celanese, a Fortune 100 company, is a member of the large company category which includes companies with more than 20 million employee-exposure hours.

Moore attributed the reduction in accidents at the plant to employees working together and watching each other's back.

During the past five years, Hoechst Celanese experienced improvement in the three measures CMA uses to evaluate companies for the award. From 1989, it reduced the Occupational Safety and Health Administrative's recordable incident rate by 57 percent, its lost workday rate by 58 percent and its lost time rate by 61 percent.

"Celanese had never won this award in the past. We had good safety records but we had never had an opportunity to make this big an improvement," Moore said.

At the Pampa Plant, specifically, safety improved drastically. During the past five in Pampa, the chemical company improved its OSHA recordable incident rate by 92 percent, its lost workday rate by 73 percent and its lost time rate by 69 percent.

"That is just unheard of performance and we should really be proud of that ... The Pampa plant is just doing a fantastic job in safety," Moore said.

In addition to the Lamot du Pont Safety Award, the Pampa

Plant also won the National Petroleum Refiners Association Meritorious Safety Award and Gold Award as well as the Texas Chemical Council's Distinguished Service Safety Award for 1993.

Among other things, the awards recognizes more than one million man-hours worked without a lost time injury.

The award was presented Thursday at the Chemical Manufacturer's meeting in White Sulphur Springs, W.Va.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Paris News on rising crime rate:

It fills our newspapers, our television and radio newscasts, and the fear of it dominates how we live our lives. It is violence, and it makes us ask the question, "What has happened to our society?"

A generation ago, people didn't bother to lock their doors at night. They weren't afraid to walk down the street after dark, and they weren't concerned letting their children play, unsupervised, in a public park.

Somehow, somewhere, the rules changed. We used to give fellow drivers a friendly wave, but now we're scared to make eye contact in fear of becoming a drive-by shooting victim. We don't dare let our kids play, or do anything else for that matter, without some sort of supervision.

We invest in the latest security technology to protect ourselves, our families, our cars and our homes. And now we've become armed.

Violence is spreading, almost unchecked, throughout this country, and it doesn't discriminate by race, sex, or age. In Dallas, six children have been gunshot victims this year, including a 9-year-old boy killed by a stray bullet late last month while sitting on his porch eating ice cream.

But big cities aren't alone. In Red River County there are six capital murder cases pending. Even Jack Herrington, the county's district attorney, said he can't remember a capital murder case in Red River County in "40 or 50 years."

County investigators are still searching for the culprit in the slayings of Amanda Proby and Willie Mae Dockins. Both were found in Mrs. Dockins' home two weeks ago dead of multiple gunshot wounds.

While we seem to be long on questions, answers are few and far between. Perhaps it's time we change the rules again.

Pecos Enterprise on separation of church and state:

The U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled that a listing of the "Ten Commandments" on the wall of a courthouse in Georgia violates the separation of church and state provisions of the constitution.

This ruling is ludicrous, indicative of just how out of hand our judicial system has gotten. There are many examples of just how ridiculous the courts are, including banning prayer from school, providing criminals more rights than victims and the list could go on and on.

While the Constitution does dictate that church and state be separated, it must be remembered that this country was founded on the precept of religious freedom and majority rule. ...

This is a Christian nation and that needs to be remembered by those on court benches. We are not favoring a position to force prayer or religion on anyone but the right to freely exercise those rights are paramount to our country and the beliefs on which it was founded.

Corruption here, everywhere

William F. Buckley Jr.

Even those of us who thought President Clinton made the correct move on the China question cringe at how he did it, the words he spoke, and the words in particular of Secretary of State Warren Christopher. What Christopher said was that we need to look at American interests "as a whole," and to that end he suggested a fungibility that simply doesn't work.

If in Shanghai they are torturing political prisoners and buying American ball bearings, you can't put the two on a single scale, weigh them, and announce gravely that the 3.2 anti-grams of the torture are outweighed by the 3.6 grams of jobs created in our ball-bearing factories.

What you say is: On the whole, we have determined that economic sanctions of a kind we'd be willing to employ aren't going to advance human rights in China. And on the other hand, ball-bearing sales in a free market slightly open up shutters closed to individual freedom: If in Shanghai purchasers are at liberty to decide whose ball bearings to buy, that means they are at liberty in an area in which up until yesterday there was no liberty.

But the tone of government seems everywhere to be burdened down with hypocrisy and cant. Over the judicial world, Clinton gives retiring Justice Blackmun a paean President Andrew Jackson would have been embarrassed to pronounce at the funeral of John Marshall — and this only weeks after Blackmun announced in court that he would never again under any circumstances endorse an opinion that countenanced capital punishment.

Wouldn't it have been more correct for an associate justice to say that, feeling as he does about capital punishment, he would recuse himself from any case coming before the court that dealt with the subject? And oughtn't a president, delivering a eulogy to a retiring justice, gently remind him that the division of powers bequeathed us by the Constitution makes absolutely irrelevant what Blackmun's views are on capital punishment?

Where does one go for relief? Not to the House of Representatives, whose towering figure we learn is about ready to go to jail. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski evidently treated the House Post Office as a kind of personal exchequer, and the point finally came when the people who inspect such matters, perhaps after lunching with the people who track presidential helicopters taking staff to golf courses in verdant Maryland, decided they had really better get into the act. And in making a deal with Rosty, it is suggested that one term of that deal will close off further investigations into how others are dealing with the post office and other governmental amenities. [Such deal, however, fell apart, and Rostenkowski was indicted on 17 counts.]

Jim Wright, former speaker of the House, and Tony Coelho, a former House majority whip, decided a little while ago to skip town rather than sit around while further exploration of their activity went on. Smart moves.

Whose fault is it? When the S&L scandals came up a few years ago, we heard from the Democrats that, after all, it all happened on Ronald Reagan's watch and therefore it was primarily a Republican scandal. From the Republicans we heard that the critical legislative steps — releasing the S&Ls from Regulation Q restraints and extending coverage even to savings accounts of $100,000 — had been done by Democrats.

Well, both are true; both were true. Without the Democratic legislation, the scandals could not have happened. And yes, the president should have reminded the Congress of its regulatory responsibilities.

But in the last analysis, it is the voters who, in a self-governing republic, are responsible for endemic corruption and hypocrisy. Many years ago the poet William Butler Yeats wrote a letter to the Irish Times in Dublin that sticks in the memory. He said (as memory serves): "Many have written recently to ask what, lately, has the Lord Mayor done to commend himself to the people of Dublin? I write to ask, What lately have the people of Dublin done to commend themselves to the Lord Mayor?"

Is there any reason for politicians to fail to take advantage held open to them? As recently reported, one murderer in 1,400 is executed, which is pretty good odds, if murder is on your mind. And if larceny is on your mind, grand or petit, and the chances are such as infest government, then reality begins to change.

Language doesn't mean what it says. George Orwell spotted it as the critical sign of corruption: When President Clinton, 1994, flatly contradicts President Clinton, 1993 and 1992, and then boasts about it, language and logic are forfeit, and these are the basic human rights of self-governing societies.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 10, the 161st day of 1994. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 10, 1935, Alcoholics Anonymous was founded in Akron, Ohio, by William G. Wilson and Dr. Robert Smith.

On this date:

In 1801, the North African state of Tripoli declared war on the United States in a dispute over safe passage of merchant vessels through the Mediterranean.

In 1865, the opera Tristan and Isolde by Richard Wagner premiered in Munich, Germany.

In 1892, the Republican National Convention in Minneapolis nominated President Harrison for re-election and Whitelaw Reid for vice president. (Harrison lost the election to former President Cleveland.)

In 1922, singer-actress Judy Garland was born Frances Gumm in Grand Rapids, Minn.

In 1940, Italy declared war on France and Britain; Canada declared war on Italy.

Black Tuesday at the White House

Tuesday, May 24, 1994, was not a good day at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Early election returns were unsettling. Then, by midnight, the returns were devastating.

And in the dawn's early light of May 25, it was apparent there'd been an 8-point political earthquake in two states.

James McDougal, involved with the Clintons in the Whitewater deal, sought nomination to Congress. In a field of three, he came in third.

Meanwhile, one of the president's most vociferous home-state critics was winning; Sheffield Nelson was nominated governor of Arkansas.

The president's best friend in the Senate is Arkansas' David Pryor. His son, Mark Pryor, tried to get elected attorney general in Arkansas and failed.

And Democrats elsewhere suffered even more disturbing rebuffs.

Kentucky has sent nothing but Democrats to Congress for 129 years. Never had a Republican been elected in that western district — until now. Ron Lewis. CONSERVATIVE Republican.

Paul Harvey

Compounding the Democrats' most difficult day to date was the imminent ignominy of Danny Rostenkowski and a Massachusetts survey indicating that Sen. Ted Kennedy is defeatable this year.

Coming right on the heels of the Democrats' loss of a House seat in Oklahoma, can one assume that the president's personal problems are impacting his party's chances in November?

In a word: yes.

Kentucky, specifically, voted for "righteousness." Democrat Joe Prather should have won in a walk. Former legislator, state party chairman, he had much political clout. But during the campaign, he identified himself as a Clinton clone.

Meanwhile, he dismissed his opponent as "a political neophyte" and "a Baptist preacher."

Prather supporters implied that such people are somehow dangerous because of their religious affiliation.

He represented "the radical right," it was said. But voters who have sampled "the liberal left" were not turned off by such rhetoric.

Indeed, the Rev. Lewis proved to be a candidate clearly supporting the separation of church and state.

And he swept 17 of 21 counties, including all the suburbs.

It was a sobering day for Democrats in Congress who have been counting on White House coattails. It was a day of jubilation for Republicans.

History has demonstrated again that politicians both come and go.

Tom Blair said it: "Politicians, like diapers, should be changed often." "And," he said, "for the same reason."

Clinton, doughty doctor of 'impeditissimas'

OXFORD, England — Standing on ceremony, Bill Clinton is a doctor, a doughty, gridlock-busting doctor. So much for "impeditissimas," as they put it in Latin at Oxford.

It's right there in the degree citation.

He's an honorary doctor, of course. Clinton conceded to the academic crowd at Oxford University that he couldn't have done it on his own. "I had to be elected president to do it," he said, after being dubbed Doctor of Civil Laws by the ancient university where he spent two years as a graduate student but went home without a diploma.

The degree citation, read in Latin by the Public Orator of Oxford, had a decidedly British flavor. Where an American might have said plucky or brave, it commended Clinton as a "doughty" champion of peace, and resolver of budget gridlock.

Curiously, his presidential aides — spin doctors themselves — had tried for a time to portray the degree as one he'd earned, suggesting, while not quite saying, that it would be the fruition of his studies of 25 years ago.

Describing it in advance, anonymously, as usual, a White House official said it would be not an honorary degree but a real degree. That defied reality, since Clinton hadn't been back for finals or anything of the sort even though Dee Dee Myers, the White House press secretary, had said there had been something of an exam. He'd completed a particularly difficult crossword puzzle, she joked at a White House briefing.

When the incongruity was pointed out, the anonymous official said it was all an academic question and besides, Clinton has had "a very significant life experience that applies to a degree."

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

It certainly does to this one. The degree in question is reserved for heads of state and royalty. Clinton is the fifth American president to get one, the first to do so in person, while in office.

That's all trivial history now, but it does have a point. At times, the Clinton people give things the old college spin, even when it's pointless.

Indeed, Clinton has been known to do it himself. On his draft record and his attitude toward the military, for example. As a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, in 1969, he wrote a letter that would come back long afterward to haunt him politically. It was a letter thanking an ROTC colonel for saving him from the Vietnam draft. He said he wanted to explain why people who love their country could loathe the military.

A quarter-century later, he is commander in chief; the European journey that ended Wednesday night was to commemorate the 50th anniversary of D-Day. On the way across the English Channel, he told TV interviewers how he'd grown up a child of World War II, born two years after it ended, and had loved the military.

It was Vietnam that had soured him, he said, and he doesn't regret opposing that war. That opposition led him to organize protests against the war at Oxford; during the 1992 presidential campaign, George Bush questioned the patriotism of anyone who would do that on foreign soil.

Back at Oxford on Wednesday, Clinton had another generation of demonstrators to cope with; they chanted and shouted outside the historic hall where he got his degree, and he noted the noise in accepting. "Just listen outside here," he said. "Everything from disputes over battles to the nature of the Italian government to the character of the word 'skinhead.'"

It was indeed an eclectic demonstration — small, noisy and hardly threatening. Much of the noise came from students who are angry because room and board at Oxford are going up next year.

But it led Clinton to drop a planned walk down the road he knew as a student; instead, he and his wife made the trip in the security of a White House limousine, behind motorcycle police, with mounted Oxford bobbies summoned in for crowd control.

And most in the crowd were friendly, curious, and disappointed not to see him.

There's no way to compare the anti-Vietnam demonstrations Clinton helped muster in 1969, but if they weren't stiffer than that one, he was a flop as a protester.

No matter. It's Doctor Clinton now.

As his citation put it, "CVMque pecuniam publicam aerarie rationae diu impeditissimas omnium plausu primus expeditit." Which means, "And whereas he has won general applause for his achievement of resolving the gridlock which prevented an agreed budget ..."

It goes on. But the bottom line is, he's a doctor. And a doughty one at that.

House budget writers fund space station

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space station has emerged unscathed under a budget blueprint unveiled by House appropriators, but its parent agency, NASA, is in line to take a $240 million hit next year.

Members of the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee emerged from a two-hour, closed-door session Thursday with an agreement to fund $2.1 billion for the space station next year — the amount sought by the Clinton administration.

They also agreed to $14 billion overall for NASA, down from the administration's request for $14.3 billion. The subcommittee's action is only the first step in what's sure to be a fractious fight later this month over the $30 billion space station's future.

"On balance, I think there is much more good news out of the mark today than bad news," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, one of two Texans on the subcommittee.

Panel members deplored the tough choices they had to make in parceling out $72.9 billion among a variety of agencies.

The subcommittee's pot of money to fund NASA, the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Environmental Protection Agency and other agencies fell $377 million short of what the administration is seeking.

"It was very painful," said Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Sugar Land, the other Texan on the subcommittee.

But, with a fight looming over the space station when the appropriations package reaches the House floor later this month, DeLay added: "I think it's going to be very hard to argue that NASA hasn't done its part for deficit reduction."

Chapman and DeLay said NASA and the space station did as well as could be expected in a difficult budget climate.

The space agency's $14 billion figure remained in doubt as late as Thursday morning. Chapman met twice Wednesday with the subcommittee's chairman, Ohio Democrat Louis Stokes, seeking to boost the funding.

Chapman declined to say which programs had to take a last-minute hit to bring NASA's share up to $14 billion.

China announces latest nuclear test

BEIJING (AP) — China conducted its second nuclear test in less than a year today, rejecting appeals from the United States and other nations to agree to a testing moratorium.

The action demonstrated China's sense of insecurity in the predominantly non-Communist post-Cold War world and its determination to build strong defenses against perceived Western bullying.

The Foreign Ministry announced the test in a statement issued by the official Xinhua News Agency, but did not provide details about the size of the underground explosion.

Anticipating international criticism, the ministry issued another statement pledging China's readiness to negotiate a "comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty" that would be a "step towards the complete prohibition and thorough destruction of nuclear weapons."

Until such a treaty is concluded, China refuses to take part in the two-year-old moratorium adopted by the world's other declared nuclear powers — the United States, Russia, Britain and France.

"China has all along exercised great restraint in conducting nuclear tests and the number of nuclear tests it has conducted is extremely limited," the ministry said.

Western experts had detected signs of preparation for the test weeks earlier at the Lop Nor testing site in China's far western Xinjiang province. It was believed that China delayed the test until after U.S. President Clinton decided to renew China's low-tariff trade status.

China last detonated a test device in October. Both then and now, it ignored appeals from Japan, the United States and other governments to refrain.

"History has shown that a conditional moratorium, designed to maintain nuclear superiority while refusing to renounce nuclear deterrence ... is of extremely limited significance," the government said in a self-defense issued after the October test.

Rural health care needs debated on Capitol Hill

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health care needs of rural Americans must not be ignored as Congress debates reform of the nation's health system, say lawmakers from rural areas.

Texas Congressman Charles Stenholm and Kansas Congressman Pat Roberts used an appearance Thursday before the House Agriculture Committee to unveil a package of reforms they have drafted to improve health care delivery in rural communities.

"Recognizing that we are just one small piece of the larger health reform picture, we nonetheless have felt that during this period of reform it is absolutely critical that the concerns and needs of rural America be heard, respected and responded to," said Stenholm.

Regardless of which health care plan ultimately is approved by Congress, the rural provisions should be included, he and Roberts stressed.

"We cannot afford to pass a national health care reform plan that does not take into account the special needs of the rural health delivery system," Roberts said. "Rural folks deserve access to the same quality health care as those living in urban areas."

Stenholm and Roberts, who are leaders in the 151-member House Rural Health Care Coalition, said their blueprint would help communities find their own solutions to the rural health care crisis.

Many rural communities nationwide face shortages of health care providers, hospitals and clinics, with many residents having to drive long distances in search of medical care.

At an afternoon hearing of the Senate Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee, Vermont Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy said the current debate over health care reform means little to those who lack access to a regular health care services.

"Having a great prenatal care benefit is meaningless to a woman living in an area without a provider trained in obstetrical care," he said.

The Stenholm-Roberts plan would: — Help rural hospitals and health clinics, in part by increasing funding for community and migrant health center programs; developing regional emergency care networks; and improving air transport to specialized facilities in medical emergencies.

The bill would also give rural hospitals greater access to specialists in other areas, by expanding the rural facilities' use of telecommunications.

— Seek to increase the number of physicians practicing in rural areas by increasing funding for the National Health Service Corps, and broadening the definitions used by the Corps to determine which areas are most deserving of health care personnel.

— Boost the number of primary care physicians by deferring student loans for interns and residents who enter primary care training programs; and increasing the federal reimbursement for rural physicians' services.

The legislation would be funded by making affluent senior citizens pay more for some of their Medicare premiums, generating more than $4 billion over five years. Stenholm said the affluence test would apply to two percent of those receiving Medicare.

San Angelo woman wants to skate after 156-pound tumor is removed DALLAS (AP) — A San Angelo woman wants to learn to roller-skate with her grandchildren, now that surgeons have cut her weight in half by removing a 156-pound tumor from her abdomen.

Evelyn Geffers, 63, underwent surgery May 25 at Parkland Memorial Hospital to have the ovarian tumor removed after years of beseeching by her family.

"She had that tumor for at least 15 years," said Dr. Thelma Hurd, a Parkland cancer surgeon and assistant professor of surgery at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

Dr. David Miller, chief of gynecologic oncology at Southwestern Medical Center, estimated that only four or five tumors in medical history have been larger than Mrs. Geffers'.

The Guinness Book of World Records lists a 328-pound ovarian cyst removed from a woman in Galveston in 1905 as the record.

Doctors predict Mrs. Geffers will fully recover. However, she still faces plastic surgery and other adjustments caused by skin and abdominal stretching.

"I'm going to have a life," Mrs. Geffers told The Dallas Morning News on Thursday.

She said she hopes to return home in a week.

Mrs. Geffers said from her hospital bed that she glanced in a mirror about 12 years ago and thought, "Gosh, I look like I'm pregnant."

However, she said she was petrified of hospitals and thought she could ignore the situation, until the weight of the tumor grew to equal her normal weight.

For the last three years, as the tumor swelled to become bigger than a beanbag chair, Mrs. Geffers had barely left home except to go to church.

"The last five years, we begged and cried" to get her to go to the hospital, said her son, Kevin Geffers, 34.

By early last month, she was having trouble breathing and her legs hurt from the pressure on her circulation.

The 5-foot-4 woman developed sores on her legs from the diminished circulation, and she could not lie flat on her back for fear her lungs would be crushed.

Greytok pays back taxes, lashes out at Mauro

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican land commissioner candidate Marta Greytok paid off an 8-year-old tax debt connected to a construction company she has headed for more than a decade, then took aim at Democrat incumbent Garry Mauro.

On Thursday, Mrs. Greytok paid $129.77 in back taxes, penalties and interest to account for a missed $68 franchise tax payment by Greytok Construction Corp. in 1986.

After paying off her debt, Mrs. Greytok attacked Mauro, saying her liability is tiny compared to the "$3.5 million in bad debts he walked away from" when he filed for personal bankruptcy in December of 1992.

"Garry Mauro should make good on his obligations and repay the taxpayers for what he stuck them for," Greytok said. "The people of Texas deserve a land commissioner who is financially responsible and honors their commitments."

Mauro put his assets into a blind trust in 1985. He said investment decisions on assets in the trust were made by his cousin, attorney Don Mauro. Garry Mauro filed for protection under Chapter 7 of the bankruptcy code in 1992, leaving $3.4 million in debts.

Andres Gonzalez, campaign manager for Mauro, said, "All of Garry's bankruptcy has been told and retold. All of his assets were in a blind trust. He had no say over the business deals and got caught holding the bag. The bottom line is that Garry has always paid his taxes, and only after the public scrutiny was Mrs. Greytok willing to pay hers."

State records show Greytok Construction had its charter revoked in 1986 for failing to pay the taxes. But Greytok, a former member of the Public Utility Commission and former chairwoman of the Harris County Appraisal District, said she never received any warning from the state that the money was owed.

Tipton Ross, Greytok's campaign manager said Greytok first learned about the problem after a reporter pointed it out to her on Wednesday.

"To our knowledge, she never received any communication that she owed any money," Ross said.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for the state comptroller's office, confirmed Greytok paid off her tax debt on Thursday. He said records show the company hasn't been active in the past eight years, thus avoiding any violations of state business laws.

Welch, however, said it is unlikely Greytok Construction was never informed of its missed payment.

"The day after the taxes are due, a corporation is declared delinquent and that is why every corporation must have a registered agent," Welch said. "The agent is the person to whom delinquent tax notices must be delivered. If she (Mrs. Greytok) is saying she didn't know, either the registered agent for Greytok Construction was not informing her of her personal liability or she is not informed on how the corporate franchise tax laws in this state are written and administered."

According to records from the state comptroller's office, Greytok Construction also was delinquent on its franchise payment in 1985. The records show, however, that the 1985 debt was paid in 1989. The amount of the 1985 debt is not disclosed in the records.

Ross said he "didn't know anything about a debt from 1985."

Texas Democratic Party spokesman Joe Cutbirth blasted Greytok as irresponsible and as having "lost all credibility."

"She is a day late and $129 short," Cutbirth said. "She was not willing to meet her tax obligation until she was caught red-handed. Her claim to have run a business and meet a payroll was a facade."

Ross said Greytok Construction was started in the 1970s and was incorporated in 1984 with its most significant project the construction of a house for Greytok. Ross said the company was created with the intention of building other houses, but that Greytok's political career took off, leaving the company idle for more than a decade.

Voters show they still love books; library tax passes

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California voters rejected higher taxes and more borrowing for everything from earthquake repairs to wildlife preservation. But when it came to local libraries — that was a different story.

Across the state, tax measures to benefit libraries passed by overwhelming margins Tuesday.

"You can be dirt-poor Abraham Lincoln or dirt-poor Alex Haley, go to the library and get books for free and educate yourself. That's the cornerstone of the American system," said Tom Biesek, who fought a higher tax for the 99-year-old library in South Pasadena. "It's an apple pie, motherhood and flag issue. That's why it passed."

Despite such high-tech distractions as video games and cable TV, librarians found people still seem to love a good book.

"It's extremely satisfying," said librarian William Tema in suburban Altadena, where residents voted to pay $29 more a year in property taxes to raise $433,000 for their two branches.

"We had people come in and say they never in their life voted yes on a tax increase, but that they were pushing that little pin in that slot because they love their library."

Across California, voters defeated a number of other measures, including a pair of $2 billion statewide bond issues to reinforce quake-damaged highways and bridges and to protect wildlife by such means as wetlands preservation.

In the last few years, strapped local governments sacrificed library budgets for police and fire needs. Libraries had to cut back hours, stop buying books and lay off employees.

Readers in South Pasadena were planning their library's 100th anniversary bash when they heard budget cuts were in the works.

"We found out we were not going to have a major centennial celebration — we were going to be kicked in the butt," said Janvier Wetzel, head of the Committee to Protect the Library.

They used fliers, precinct walkers, lawn signs and even a cable TV ad to generate support for a property tax of $24 to $36 a year to raise money for the library. Biesek said the taxpayers association opposed the measure only because cash was going through the City Council instead of straight to libraries.

In Northern California's El Dorado County, library supporters were so sure a property tax would pass they didn't bother crusading for it.

"In a six-county area, this was the only assessment that passed. Public safety, schools, all that didn't get approved. It's amazing," said county library services director Marilyn Crouch.

Clinton-style health plan passes first Senate test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses would be forced to buy health insurance for workers and their families beginning in 1998 under a version of President Clinton's troubled health care plan approved by a Senate committee.

But the measure attracted only one Republican vote Thursday in the Senate Labor Committee, and it was likely to encounter stiff opposition elsewhere in Congress.

At the same time, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, toed the Democratic party line and offered a blueprint for health insurance as a basic benefit on the job.

Clinton called it "an historic day," saying, "While much work remains, today's actions prove that the job will be done."

But Republicans and some Democrats said there was little appetite in Congress for making employers pay, and they predicted that Clinton and Democratic leaders would have to scale back their ambitions or risk passage of nothing at all.

In the House, Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., made some hasty changes in his health bill after a dispute with the Congressional Budget Office over what it would cost. Gibbons wants to open Medicare up to the poor, the uninsured and businesses with 50 or fewer workers. His plan would raise tens of billions of dollars a year by making all employers pay health premiums.

And a House Education and Labor subcommittee, which earlier backed a Clinton-style health plan, also endorsed a single-payer, Canadian-style bill by voice vote. It would supplant private insurance premiums with payroll taxes and have the government pay most health bills.

The outcome Thursday in the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee was never in doubt, but it still represented a triumph for the panel's chairman, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who offered his first national health insurance bill a quarter-century ago.

Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt., the sole Republican co-sponsor of the original Clinton plan, joined the Democrats in the 11-6 vote for Kennedy's bill.

It would make insurance community-rated, outlaw exclusions for pre-existing conditions, create voluntary, private purchasing pools, and let any American sign up for the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan — which covers the president, members of Congress and 9 million other federal workers and dependents.

"This really isn't the end. It's really the beginning," said Kennedy, who boasted that his panel was "securing the base camp for the final ascent."

But Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas, the Labor Committee's top Republican, declared that Kennedy's bill "has reached the end of its trail because it fails to offer a middle ground upon which the public or the majority of the Senate can comfortably stand."

Kennedy's committee hashed out compromises on some contentious issues, including a unanimous decision to let a National Health Board recommend changes in the benefit package to stay within budget targets.

Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, the top Republican on Finance, said that if that panel winds up with a plan like Moynihan's, then "all of health reform is dead, everything is dead."

Another Finance Committee member, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said "a much more moderate" bill was needed.

Both Democratic proposals would require employers to pick up 80 percent of the premiums for workers and their families, with the smallest businesses allowed to pay a 1 or 2 percent payroll tax instead.

Kennedy's panel included a $1.50 increase in cigarette taxes, now 24 cents a pack, and a 1 percent payroll tax on firms with more than 1,000 employees.

Moynihan proposed a $2-a-pack cigarette tax, a 1 percent payroll tax on all businesses with 500 or more workers and a 2.5 percent tax on health insurance premiums to help pay for medical research and training. It would also levy a 50 percent excise tax on all handgun ammunition except .22 caliber.

Packwood called it "a whopper" with $190 billion in tax increases over five years. He quipped that the plan would command "three or four votes" on Finance.

The Kennedy bill would require all employers with more than 10 employees to buy private insurance or enroll workers in the federal employees' health plan. There would be a 1 percent to 2 percent payroll tax on firms with 10 or fewer employees.

Moynihan would allow small businesses with up to 20 workers to avoid buying insurance by paying a payroll tax of 1 percent to 2 percent.

But if small businesses failed to cover 97 percent of their workers and dependents by the end of 1998 and 98.5 percent by the end of 2000, they would have to buy insurance for all.

FDA closes Lubbock blood bank

LUBBOCK (AP) — Federal authorities say they will move to revoke United Blood Services' license in Lubbock after an inspection uncovered problems with collection methods.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration this week shut down the blood bank — the only one in Lubbock. No blood was contaminated, the FDA said.

But inspectors who interviewed donors, employees and former employees were told of various problems:

— People under the influence of alcohol were accepted as donors.

— Employees sometimes improperly drained excess blood or exposed blood to air.

— Some donors weren't questioned about behaviors that pose a high risk for contracting AIDS.

"The nature of the deficiencies ... leads us to conclude that they are a direct consequence of management's disregard for the applicable regulations and standards," said Ronald D. Cheesmore, the FDA's associate commissioner for regulatory affairs.

"It is our view that the corporate incentive program, which rewards management for high levels of production and low numbers of errors, has caused or contributed to an environment of non-compliance," Cheesmore wrote in a letter dated Monday.

The inspection found no flaws in the blood tests used to detect Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, FDA spokeswoman Monica Revelle said.

Pampa's Church of the Brethren remembered on centennial

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

LaVerne Rose can't remember not attending Church of the Brethren. Her home church - her heritage - was also the worship place of her parents, grandparents and great-grandparents.

She is a great-granddaughter of one of the organizers of the Gray County church, Solomon Stump, of Laketon who met with other Brethren organizers in a dug out one mile south of Laketon.

"It's been my life. We raised our children here," Rose said.

The oldest denominational church in Gray County is set to celebrate its 100th anniversary on Sunday with services including Sunday School at 9:30 a.m., worship at 10:30 a.m., fellowship dinner at noon, special ceremonies at 2 p.m. and a come and go fellowship from 3 to 5 p.m.

Rose prepared a history of the Brethren in America and the founding of the local church organized in July, 1894 at Laketon. The group was organized in a dugout on the Sam Stump farm one mile south of Laketon in Gray County. They later met at "High Windy" school on the Paris farm two miles west and one mile north of Laketon near the Gillis farm.

On Dec. 31, 1929, the Pampa Church purchased a dance hall at 637 N. Nelson and remodelled it into a church house. Eight years later they purchased their present site at 600 N. Frost, where Rose and her two brothers were baptized, and built a sanctuary and full basement. It was dedicated in 1937. It was remodeled in 1948 to include activity rooms.

Rose believes she is a direct descendent of Peter Becker who organized a Brethren migration to American in 1719 which settled in Germantown, Pa.

The creedless church professes doctrines of New Testament sacraments including the love feast with communion and foot washing, trine baptism, anointing with oil for healing.

"My earliest memories are the love feast table with my mother," she said.

Rose said the church joins Quakers and Mennonites in their anti-war stance. While her father and two brothers served in World War I and II and Korea, they did not serve in combat because of the Brethren admonition to aid friends and enemies alike.

"We have somewhat gotten away from that and I hate that we did," Rose said.

Rose is proud of the Brethren as simple people. Women eschew jewelry though watches, wedding ring and simple adornments are acceptable. Old time Brethren members didn't believe in buying items that were unnecessary, she said.

During the Civil War, Brethren slave owners freed their slaves when they were able to give them a start toward freedom, Rose said. Politically, Brethren were neutral in the conflict because they did not believe in war.

Brethren do not believe they have the only ticket to heaven, she said.

"I'm Brethren through and through. We do believe there are redeemed people in every church," Rose explained.

"I'm so grateful for my heritage. I wish we could pass it down to a lot of young people," she said.

About 75 people are members of the local assembly which meets at 600 N. Frost.

Religion briefs

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — A gang has asked for community support to help it change its ways, promising a month's peace in return for "jobs, education and a chance to communicate."

Three members of the Black Gangster Disciples announced their "peace-in-June" plans at a recent news conference at Mount Pilgrim Baptist Church. The gang, which has 200 to 300 members, will cease recruiting members and commit no more crimes, said a gang member named Raashon, who declined to disclose his last name.

The gang also wants to change its name to Better Growth Development.

The promise follows efforts of a church-based coalition led by the Rev. Clayton Smith of the Mount Pilgrim church. Smith requested a meeting with gang leaders at a Mother's Day forum and was surprised when he met members.

"I expected gold jewelry, knuckle rings and missing teeth," he said. "But these are intelligent, polite young men. They can achieve."

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Roman Catholic Archbishop Rember Weakland said that he would obey Pope John Paul II's declaration against the ordination of women, but said the pope's stand would cause problems in the church here.

House joins Senate in approving an end to arms embargo in Bosnia

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Thursday overrode Clinton administration objections and voted to unilaterally lift the arms embargo on Bosnia, signaling bipartisan discontent with the president's policy in the Balkans.

The measure passed in a 244-178 vote. The House then rejected an amendment that would have supported the White House policy of seeking international support for lifting the U.N.-imposed embargo. Clinton himself supports lifting the embargo, but wants the international community to make the decision to allow arms to flow again to the besieged Muslims.

While opponents of the move invoked images of the United States sinking into a Vietnam-like quagmire, supporters said the true analogy was the world's failure to respond to the Holocaust.

Turning the vote into law will require further votes and negotiations between the House and Senate. But with both branches now on record in support of unilaterally lifting the embargo, the administration is under increasing pressure.

"Let us not stand silent. Let us not dissemble. That's what we said in the 1930s," said Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md. "Let us say clearly ... We will not stand aside while Bosnian Muslims stand defenseless."

Top Clinton administration officials tried to ward off the vote earlier today, telling lawmakers that unilaterally lifting the arms embargo in Bosnia would "fracture" the NATO alliance and widen the war in the former Yugoslavia.

Emerging from a closed-door meeting with more than 100 House members, Defense Secretary William Perry said he, Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott "all took very strong positions" against a House proposal to lift the embargo without the agreement of Western allies.

Clinton dispatched the three top military and foreign policy advisers to Capitol Hill today to fight the proposal by two influential House Democrats to unilaterally lift the arms embargo on Bosnia.

Although Clinton supports lifting the embargo in the war-torn region, he fears doing so without international support would scuttle peace negotiations.

"U.S. action to lift the embargo would bring the peace process to an end, destroying the unified approach we, our allies and the Russians have been working to achieve," Clinton wrote in a letter to Rep.

Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

In a joint statement presented to the lawmakers in today's meeting, Perry, Shalikashvili and Talbott were even more explicit: "Unilateral U.S. actions will fracture the NATO alliance and put us at odds with Russia."

Leading the move to lift the embargo were Hoyer, the Democratic Caucus chairman, and David Bonior, the majority whip. They joined forces behind an amendment written by Reps. Frank McCloskey, D-Ind. and Ben Gilman, R-N.Y., arguing that the current embargo works to the advantage of Serb forces, who can still obtain arms, and prevents Bosnians from defending themselves.

The measure also would give Clinton the option of sending up to $200 million worth of armaments to the Bosnian government on its request.

"This can hardly be called a war at all," Hoyer wrote to his colleagues on the eve of the vote. "Aggression and genocide are more accurate descriptions."

Hamilton sponsored a substitute amendment supported by Clinton urging the administration to lobby the international community on behalf of an end to the embargo. Under the rules adopted for today's debate, a vote for Hamilton's amendment would have negated the proposal supported by Bonior and Hoyer.

The move to unilaterally lift the embargo came to the floor with solid Republican support, meaning that only about a third of the Democrats were needed to pass the measure.

Flying to Istanbul, Turkey, for a NATO meeting, a senior U.S. official accompanying Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Wednesday the administration was weeks away from completing work on a "reasonable solution" to the Bosnian conflict. He said the plan would be based on a division of territory.

Clinton, in talks Wednesday in Paris with French President Francois Mitterrand and Prime Minister Edouard Balladur, endorsed a U.N. proposal for a renewable four-month cease-fire.

Thursday's debate was to have taken place two weeks ago. But Clinton aides, sensing defeat, pressed for a delay, arguing that the action would have embarrassed Clinton just as he was about to depart on his European trip.

But the Senate voted 50-49 last month to lift the U.N. embargo unilaterally to help Bosnia's outgunned Muslim-led government. In a contradictory step, however, the Senate also voted 50-49 to require Clinton to seek U.N. and NATO support before lifting the arms sanctions.

Group files suit against abortion clinic access law

By CASSANDRA BURRELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An anti-abortion group filed a lawsuit challenging a new law restricting protests at abortion clinics Thursday, saying it's so vague anyone could be arrested for simply speaking out.

The two-week-old law unconstitutionally limits First Amendment rights and will have a chilling effect on peaceful, nonviolent protest, said Beverly LaHaye, president of Concerned Women for America.

"It is clearly an effort to stop the right to free speech and the right to religious expression," LaHaye said. "The current administration as well as some members of Congress have tried every way they know to silence our ideological positions on important issues like the rights of unborn children."

The federal government and Attorney General Janet Reno, the nation's top law enforcement official, were named as defendants in the suit, filed in U.S. District Court in nearby Alexandria, Va. It was filed on behalf of Joyce Woodall, 66, of Jamestown, Calif., who was arrested Tuesday for refusing police orders that she stop kneeling in prayer on the steps of a Falls Church, Va., clinic.

The suit asks the court to invalidate the law, award unspecified damages, and award attorneys fees and litigation costs.

Abortion-rights groups applauded President Clinton when he signed the act May 26. It makes it a federal crime to block access to abortion clinics. Violators face prison terms of six months to life and fines of up to $250,000.

Clinton said the law was designed to eliminate violence, coercion and harassment of women entering clinics.

Two anti-abortion groups went to court the same day to block the law. The American Life League of Stafford, Va., is scheduled to argue its position at a court hearing Friday in Alexandria.

A hearing has not yet been scheduled for the American Center for Law and Justice, a law firm that sued on behalf of the group Operation Rescue and its leader, Randall Terry.

The center also has filed challenges against the law in Phoenix, Ariz., and against a similar state law in Charlotte, N.C., said Gene Kapp, spokesman for the group.

Early Father's Day gift ends in tragedy

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A Father's Day gift of a parachuting lesson resulted in a man plummeting to his death while the people who had given the present — his wife and three children — watched.

Seebren Reeves, a sales manager for a coffee distribution chain, had earned for years to sky-dive, said his widow, Brenda Reeves.

The family chose a certain sky-diving school for Reeves' first jump on the advice of a friend who had jumped there at least four times. "He was not one to take risks and he wouldn't do something without checking it all out," Mrs. Reeves said.

She said she was nervous before the flight, which she watched over the weekend with their 10- and 11-year-old sons and an 8-year-old daughter.

"I asked him, 'Are you sure you're OK with this?'" she recalled. "He said that he was and I said, 'OK, don't make me a widow now.'"

After Reeves, 33, jumped at 2,800 feet, Reeves' primary chute failed, Mrs. Reeves said. Then a reserve chute also failed.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I vacationed in Europe last July, and we did all the things tourists do — lots of sightseeing, etc.

It's very warm in Europe that time of year, so my husband insisted on wearing shorts. His came about four inches above the knee. I thought it was in poor taste—that a pair of trousers would have been more appropriate.

Well, Abby, we are still arguing about whether shorts are appropriate for sight-seeing in Europe. He said your advice will rule for future trips to Europe, and I agreed to go along with your advice. So?

DEAR ELLEN: I don't know who wears the pants in your family, but if your husband does, they should be long. (Most churches and museums in Europe will not admit people in shorts.)

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I are very much in love and want to get married, but there are several problems. The first is, her mother does not like me.

The next problem is my age. I won't be 18 until this October. My girlfriend won't be 18 until December, which means her mom can prevent our getting married—which is what she has done so far. By the way, I'm in jail right now—but I will be out in September.

I am now in the process of starting a new life. A minister came by recently and he "saved" me. You see, I took Jesus Christ as my personal savior, which means now I am born again and delivered from sin. My girlfriend's mother is not convinced. What should I do?

DEAR SAVED: You will have to wait until you and your girlfriend are both of legal age before you can marry without parental consent. However, I suggest that you both have counseling from your clergy person before you consider anything as permanent as a marriage.

DEAR ABBY: A 17-year-old neighbor girl baby-sits our 3-year-old when we go out for an evening.

Her boyfriend (he's 18) comes over to keep her company. I imagine they do a certain amount of necking and petting because all the lights are out when we come home; they look embarrassed and their clothes are in disarray. My husband doesn't think our sitter should have company while she's baby-sitting. I say, it's none of our business.

What do you say, Abby?
THE LADY OF THE HOUSE

DEAR LADY: I say, since it's your house, it's your business.

Your sitter is paid to take care of your child, and she should not have her boyfriend there to keep her company.

A jubilee starts in Pampa

The opry is coming to Pampa. Members of a local band plan to start The Pampa All-Star Jubilee featuring area talent at the Act I Theatre from the Pampa Mall beginning July 9 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

"They started doing this in other towns. It's an up and coming thing," said Bob Jeffers of Lefors' Keith Roberson and the North Fort Band.

"There are several opry shows opening in Clarendon and Memphis," he explained.

For about six years, he and several others have wanted to bring an opry to Pampa.

"I've been wanting to bring something like this to Pampa," he said, since it provides family entertainment.

The opry will feature country western and gospel musicians. He said that there is a lot of local area talent who perform at the Big Texan in Amarillo.

He and the band talked with the people of the Act I Theater about starting an opry and they thought it was a good idea.

Act I is planning on providing character actors for the show.

Right now they are looking for musicians to help start the opry which will perform every other Saturday starting July 9. Each will need to audition before the performing.

"A lot will be singing to prerecorded tapes," said Jeffers, adding that a piano and a band will also provide back up.

All musicians will have to provide their own prerecorded music and the house band will provide the sound system.

For more information call Bob Jeffers at 665-2213 or Keith Roberson at 835-2302.

Tech medical school representatives visit to inform Pampans about services of medical school

Two Texas Tech representatives were in town recently to inform various groups and individuals about the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Spencer T. Yantis, director of development, and William G. Wehner, vice president of institutional advancement, said they were in town to meet people and inform them about the scholarship opportunities that the school has and wants to provide for students.

Students and residents of the school work in the surrounding communities and receive experience in living and practicing in an underserved area.

"We feel that if students train in the area, they will stay," said Yantis.

He explained that 60 percent of the medical school residents who study family medicine, internal medicine, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatrics and surgery will stay in the region.

Through rotation and clinics offered in the Panhandle communities, students and residents gain experience living and working in an under-served area.

Yantis added that they cover an area larger than the New England states and New York combined.

He said the Texas Tech medical school is unique in that it has four distinct campuses in Amarillo, Lubbock, Odessa and El Paso.

Only a residency program is offered in Odessa.

Migraines have profound impact on lives says survey

Although people who have never suffered from migraine may mistakenly perceive it as "just a bad headache," a recent survey of migraine sufferers indicates it is far more serious than that and that 70 percent of people surveyed who suffer from the disease believe that migraine brings their lives to a standstill.

The nationwide survey, which consisted of phone interviews with a nationally projectable sample of 1,007 migraine sufferers, was conducted by The Gallup Organization for Cerenex Pharmaceuticals, a division of Glaxo Inc. To qualify for inclusion, individuals were screened using International Headache Society screening criteria.

The survey illustrates the severe pain that migraineurs suffer during an attack. In addition, a significant number of sufferers rated migraine as being more painful than a number of other conditions, including childbirth (19 percent).

The survey also showed that 93 percent of migraine sufferers have used over-the-counter (OTC) or nonprescription pain relievers to treat their migraine.

Migraine is a severe, debilitating disease that is not well understood and is often undiagnosed or confused with other types of headache conditions.

According to current estimates, more than 11 million Americans suffer from migraine with moderate to severe disability. Migraine is usually characterized by a recurrent pain on one side of the head and is usually accompanied by nausea, vomiting and sensitivity to light and sound. Migraine attacks generally last from four to 72 hours.

Survey respondents indicate that migraine has a profound impact on their lives. Approximately 57 percent of respondents say that migraine makes them feel "out of control."

In addition, substantial numbers of migraine sufferers say that a number of their daily activities are limited or impaired due to migraine. Nearly three-quarters (73 percent) reported impairment of at least one type of activity.

Fifty-eight percent of respondents claim that migraine has reduced their ability to enjoy life, and approximately half have feelings of anxiety (54 percent) and helplessness (48 percent). Forty-one percent say they experience depression with their migraine.

"Migraine often impacts the entire family," says Dr. Margaret Abernathy, director, Headache Treatment Center at Georgetown University Medical Center.

"If sufferers are not seeking proper help to manage migraine, they often find themselves retreating to a dark room for the duration of the attack. This obviously has an effect on the sufferer's ability to function normally in family and social situations."

Eighty-two percent say that a migraine has kept them from doing their work as well as they usually would on an average of nearly 12 days in the past year.

Migraine was found to be a frequent cause of employee absenteeism—survey respondents reported missing work due to migraine an average of nearly five days in the past year.

A third (33 percent) of respondents who missed work due to migraine say that they do not mention migraine when they call in sick.

One reason that some migraineurs do not tell other people about their migraine is because of the way they believe other people will respond. Nearly a third (31 percent) say friends, family or co-workers have been resentful when they were incapacitated due to migraine.

According to Dr. Abernathy, "The first and most important step is to see a doctor about your migraine. Find one you are comfortable with—it is important to have open, two-way communication with your doctor. By working together, you can establish an effective treatment plan that will help you manage your migraine. My best advice to migraineurs is not to suffer in silence. Seek help."

Alzheimer's disease Hypothesis proposed

An unexpected discovery by researchers at the National Institutes of Health may help to explain how Alzheimer's disease causes memory loss.

The research shows that beta amyloid, a common protein in the brain, can make cell membranes leak choline and thus reduce production of acetylcholine in cells.

Choline, an essential ingredient in acetylcholine, has been known for many years to help store and retrieve memories. Two hallmarks of Alzheimer's disease are accumulation in the brain of beta amyloid and reduction of the concentration of acetylcholine.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your charm and good humor will make a favorable impression upon others today, so just be yourself. Affections or extravagant gestures won't have the same impact.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Let compassion govern your behavior today. Do things out of the goodness of your heart, even if persons with whom you're involved think they are foolish and ineffective.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will not be easily deceived by others today, because you'll be well aware of their frailties and shortcomings. However, much to your credit, you'll focus only on their virtues.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not let insignificant matters distract you today if you have your sights set upon something that could add to your material well-being. Personal gains are probable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you're trying to promote something today, desirable results are likely if you use a "there's what it can do for you" presentation, instead of a hard sell.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Others won't mind doing favors for you today if you don't outline what you want them to do and how they should do it. Sow the seed, and let their response come spontaneously.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — John Lucas, who questioned his future with the San Antonio Spurs after an early playoff exit, resigned as coach and may be heading for the Philadelphia 76ers.

Spurs president Jack Diller announced that Lucas was released from his contract at his request. Lucas reportedly had at least two years remaining and Diller said there was no monetary settlement.

Houston television station KPRC-TV reported that Lucas would become coach of Philadelphia. Lucas told KRIV-TV in Houston he still wants to coach in the NBA and hopes there will be opportunities. Lucas was 55-27 with the Spurs this past season, his first full year as coach.

RACING

NEW YORK (AP) — Good things come in small packages, and Nick Zito expects them to come at his Kentucky Derby winner in waves.

Seven 3-year-old colts, including Go for Gin, were entered for the Belmont Stakes on Thursday, the smallest field since eight ran in 1988 and only half the number that ran in the Kentucky Derby five weeks ago at Churchill Downs.

"This is a quality Belmont," Zito said. "You've got the Derby winner, the Preakness winner in Tabasco Cat, the Santa Anita Derby winner, Brocco, and Charlie Whittingham's horse, Strodes Creek."

"It's a very, very good Belmont."

BASEBALL

CINCINNATI (AP) — The percentage of minorities in front offices of the 28 major league teams remained unchanged in the last year, baseball owners said, as they concluded their quarterly meetings.

Owners also announced they will continue exploring the possibility of expansion, with 1998 the likely date new teams would start play. Boston Red Sox owner John Harrington, the expansion committee chairman, said a decision wasn't likely in the next three months and also said he would speak with cities in the United States, Canada and — for the first time — Mexico.

The possibility that players will go on strike the second half of this season was still prominent. Owners will propose a salary cap to the Major League Baseball Players Association on Tuesday, and the union executive board is expected to set a strike date at its meeting on July 11 in order to force an agreement.

AUSTIN (AP) — Jose Luis Lopez's winning streak is alive and well, and because of it, so is Corpus Christi Moody.

Lopez remained undefeated, improving to 16-0 to send Moody into today's Class 5A final against Houston Bellaire with a 13-3 victory over Lubbock Monterey.

Bellaire reached the finals pretty easily, too, getting two runs in the second to begin an easy 7-1 victory over Lufkin, which scored its only run with two outs in the ninth.

In Class 4A, Belton will play Big Spring for the title. Belton beat Carthage 9-5 and Big Spring eliminated Brenham 3-2.

Hooks and Orange Grove advanced to the 3A finals as Hooks beat Alpine 4-2 and Orange Grove slammed Waco Robinson 11-1.

The 2A title game pits Pineland West Sabine, a 5-1 winner over Holliday, against East Bernard, a 5-3 winner over Palmer.

Gunter knocked D'Hanis out of the 1A race 13-3 and Gunter will meet Trinidad, a 7-6 winner over Gorman, for the title.

GOLF

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Mike Reid, returning from a wrist injury he sustained playing ping pong in 1992, made eagle on his last hole for the lead after the opening round of the $1.2 million Buick Classic.

Reid's 6-under-par 65 put him a stroke ahead of Dillard Pruitt, Steve Brodie, Steve Pate, Bob Estes and Wayne Levi. David Frost was another shot back at 67 on the Westchester Country Club.

Reid needed only 20 putts in his one-eagle, four-birdie, no-bogey round. Tom Kite, Ernie Els and Jay Haas were among seven players at 3-under 68, and seven others were at 2-under 69, including Fred Funk and Mark McCumber.

Fred Couples, in his first tournament in three months since throwing his back out, shot a 1-under 70. Defending champion Vijay Singh left after 12 holes with a sore back. Seve Ballesteros shot a 71, as did Tom Watson, Hal Sutton and Craig Stadler.

FOOTBALL

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Chicago Bears veteran defensive end Richard Dent joins the San Francisco 49ers after agreeing to a two-year, $3 million contract.

The 49ers gave Dent a $600,000 signing bonus and base salary of $750,000. Dent, a four-time Pro Bowl defensive end, spent 11 years with Bears and was the team's all-time sack leader with 112.

ALPHARETTA, Ga. (AP) — A fire destroyed the home of Atlanta Falcons receiver Andre Rison, and authorities issued an arson warrant for his hip-hop singer girlfriend, Lisa Lopes.

The fire began at 6:30 a.m. at Rison's house in an exclusive neighborhood home to several sports and entertainment people.

Fulton County police spokesman Barry Batson said the fire followed an "altercation" at the house, but declined any details.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported witnesses said Rison was seen walking along a nearby highway before the fire and Lopes was seen outside the house as the fire burned.

TENNIS

LONDON (AP) — Defending champion and second-seeded Michael Stich was upset by 15th-seeded Jaime Morgan of Australia 7-6 (8-6), 6-3, and fourth-seeded Goran Ivanisevic lost to Sweden's Jan Apell 7-6 (11-9), 7-6 (7-2) in the third round of the Queen's Club tournament.

In other third-round action, top-seeded Pete Sampras advanced with a 7-6 (7-2), 6-2 victory over Shuzo Matsuoka of Japan; 10th-seeded Mali-Vai Washington lost 2-6, 6-2, 6-4 to South African qualifier Christo van Rensburg.

Sooners boom past ASU, reach CWS finals

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — After reading his favorite Bible verse, Oklahoma pitcher Mark Redman tossed a seven-hitter Thursday to lead the Sooners to a 6-1 victory over Arizona State and into Saturday's title match at the College World Series.

Redman carries the verse — Philippians 4:13: "I can do all things through Him who strengthens me" — in his hat.

"That's the saying I go by just to know that God's there for me and He gives me strength," said the 6-foot-5 sophomore, who struck out six in collecting his second victory of the tournament. "I don't have to go out there and pitch for anyone else. God would be happy with whatever I do, and He gave me the talent to be out there today."

Fourth-seeded Oklahoma (49-17) will play No. 2 Georgia Tech (50-16) for the championship.

The loss denied the Sun Devils a chance to win another title for ailing coach Jim Brock.

"Redman pitched as good a ball as anyone we've seen all year against us," said ASU assistant coach Bill Kinneberg, who filled in for the absent Brock. "I think he was a little better today than he was Saturday on his off-speed stuff. He kept us off-balance pretty well."

Arizona State (45-18) goes home after its second loss to Oklahoma. The Sooners needed 11 innings to beat the Sun Devils 4-3 on Monday, when two-time champion Brock returned to Arizona to be hospitalized in his battle with cancer.

There was little mention of Brock and his battle among the disappointed Sun Devils and their coaches.

"We lost. The season's over now. We gave it a run but we came up empty, so we sort of have a sour taste," said All-American third baseman Antone Williamson, who had three of ASU's seven hits.

Kinneberg said he didn't talk before the game with Brock, who is resting in a Mesa, Ariz., hospital after his departure from Omaha Tuesday.

Redman (14-3), who struck out 11 in the Sooners' series-opening victory against Auburn, fanned seven and silenced the same Sun Devil bats that tied a CWS record with five homers in eliminating top-seeded Miami 9-5 Tuesday.

"Today I went out with the same tone of mind I did Saturday. I just wanted to give a strong performance and put us in the championship," Redman said.

OU'S Rich Hill goes flying at home after being tagged out by ASU catcher Todd Cady after Hill tried to score from second base on a fifth inning single Thursday at the College World Series. (AP photo)

The only run Arizona State managed against the sophomore left-hander came on Billy McGonigle's third homer of the season to lead off the fifth.

The Sooners gave Redman all the runs he needed off ASU starter Billy Neal (9-5). Darwin Traylor singled and scored on a groundout in the first, Chip Glass homered to lead off the second and Glass singled in Rick Gutierrez in the third before he came home on M.J. Miriani's single.

Traylor capped the scoring with a two-run homer in the ninth.

The victory sets up a second meeting of the year between Georgia Tech and Oklahoma. Redman beat Tech ace Brad Rigby 8-6 in a tournament in California in February.

Rockets hope the kinks are out

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Because they won the opener of the NBA Finals, the Houston Rockets had no problem admitting they were fatigued and rusty after an eight-day layoff.

The way the players and coaches were talking, the media arriving at the Summit on Thursday were half-expecting cleanup crews to be removing the last remnants of all the sand, mud and grime that seemed to be slowing everyone down.

"Vernon Maxwell told me the ball felt like a beach ball," Kenny Smith said. "It just didn't feel the same, and I think the layoff had a lot to do with that."

Smith and Maxwell are Houston's starting guards, and they combined for 14 points on 5-for-20 shooting in the Rockets' series-opening 85-78 victory over New York Wednesday night. No more effective was the Knicks' backcourt of John Starks and Derek Harper, with 19 points on 6-for-28 shooting.

Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich, who compared the opener with a football game played in mud, reiterated Thursday that he tried to push the team in practice for a week.

"But there was no adrenalin rush, no pressure," Tomjanovich said. "You might get 70 percent of what you get in a game, but you have to compete to stay sharp."

The Rockets' 31 points in the second half was one more than the poorest offensive performance in any half at the Finals, and Tomjanovich said he was proud that his team's defense, which limited the Knicks to 32 second-half points, held up.

"Defense takes guts, hard work, concentration and teamwork," he said.

Tomjanovich scoffed at basketball purists who say the defensive dominance of the playoffs is ruining the beauty of the sport.

"I think just the opposite," he said. "Last night's game is what it's all about. Hard work and sweat. You've got to appreciate how the best athletes in the world are being held down."

In Game 2 tonight, however, those same athletes are promising they won't be handcuffed again.

"There was something in the air, I guess," Starks said of Game 1. "It won't happen (tonight). It's imperative that we all have a good game, not just me."

"We know we won't play any worse," Smith said. "That's the worst we've played offensively. Guys missed shots they normally knock down, so it didn't open things up for anyone else. I don't think we can play any worse offensively."

Tomjanovich predicted that both Starks and Maxwell will shoot the ball better tonight.

"They both have a fire inside, and you just don't keep guys like that down for too long," he said.

"He'll bounce back and so will I," Maxwell said of Starks.

The Knicks said Thursday they were disappointed with their first-half defense, but hopeful that they can continue their second-half defense. They were especially tough in the fourth quarter, holding Houston to 13 points on 2-for-13 shooting.

"I think we can win games if we can hold people to 13 points in the fourth quarter," Harper said. "When we've been able to contain people in the fourth quarter, we have been able to win games."

The Rockets, however, managed 54 points on 53 percent shooting in the first half, taking a lead they never surrendered. Houston also made 14 layups in the first two periods.

"We can't wait until so late in the game to play defense," Knicks forward Anthony Mason said. "We've got to get in their face and not give them open lanes. We've all got to go with more intensity."

"If we allow them to get into the 50s in a half, we're not going to be able to win," New York coach Pat Riley said. "We've got to slow it down more the whole game."

But Tomjanovich said the tempo of Game 1 did not scare him.

"I'd like us to run more, but we're comfortable at that pace," the Houston coach said. "Our goal always has been to get the other team in a halfcourt game."

Hakeem Olajuwon, who scored 28 points in the first game but missed eight of nine shots in the second half, called tonight's game pivotal to the Rockets' chances of winning their first NBA title in their third trip to the Finals.

"This is the biggest game of the year," Olajuwon said. "If we win this game, we know that regardless of what happens in New York, we will keep the homecourt advantage."

With a victory, Houston would take a 2-0 lead into the next three games at New York, which is 9-1 at home but 2-7 on the road in the playoffs.

'Future of American soccer' on U.S. World Cup team

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Reporters clamored for interviews and he obliged them, seamlessly switching from Spanish to English and back to answer the same old question: How does it feel to be the youngest player on the U.S. World Cup team?

"Muy contento," said 20-year-old midfielder Claudio Reyna.

He was a college soccer phenom — 21 goals and 22 assists in three seasons — who led Virginia to three straight NCAA titles and won the Hermann Trophy twice before leaving after his junior year.

He already was the youngest member of a U.S. Olympic soccer team, playing all the games at Barcelona in 1992 and getting two assists. The year before that, he played for the gold-medal team in the Pan American Games.

Reyna's father played in his native Argentina before moving to North America, and Claudio said he himself began to play soccer just about as soon as he could walk.

Certainly no new kid on the block in the sport, Reyna is mature on and off the field.

Recently, at a media day for the U.S. team at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, he skillfully juggled the tasks of talking into a microphone, signing autographs and walking backwards from a throne toward the locker room to change for practice — but not before redoing an interview with a Spanish-language TV reporter who lost the audio the first time around.

"I'm very excited. I'm glad to be part of the team," Reyna said. "Just this opportunity I can't take for granted. I've been playing since I could walk and it has continued to be my life."

"He's a great player," teammate Cle Kooiman said. "He's been called the future of American Soccer, and I can see it."

Reyna, a fleet and fluid 5-foot-10, 160-pounder who is a native of New Jersey, said when he dreamed of sports as a kid, he dreamed of the World Cup and wondered if he'd be good enough to make it.

Although he's still learning, Reyna already has polished technique befitting players who have been in the game much longer.

And his quickness, ability to sustain speed and his stamina often make the game look easy for him.

In the United States' 1-0 victory over Mexico last weekend, Reyna was one of the better ballhandlers on the field, frequently making agile moves with the ball, then accurately passing off to teammates.

Rangers rock Royals; Rogers extends streak

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — After an 0-2 start with a 9.28 ERA, Kenny Rogers has gotten his act together.

Rogers won his sixth straight decision and Juan Gonzalez broke a streak of 26-game homerless drought, leading the Texas Rangers to their ninth victory in 11 games with a 7-4 win Thursday night over the Kansas City Royals.

Rogers extended his scoreless streak against the Royals to 25 2-3 consecutive innings before giving up a run in the seventh and went on to match the longest winning streak of his career.

And he's still learning how to be a smarter pitcher. "Until the last two years, I didn't know how to pitch," said Rogers, who initially was drafted as an outfielder and spent the early part of his career as a reliever.

"Now I don't try to get strikeouts. You don't want to throw seven or eight pitches to get a batter out when you can throw three or four and do the job."

Rogers (8-3) has also benefited from enviable offensive support. The Rangers have scored an average of 8.8 runs during Rogers' winning streak.

"It's easy to win when you have the run support," Rogers said. "It always helps getting seven or eight runs a game when you're on the mound. I know our offense can get runs. When you get a big lead you're able to get guys out without having my best stuff."

Rogers escaped a two-out, bases-loaded jam in the fifth and went on to improve to 8-1 in his last 11 starts.

He allowed two runs and eight hits over eight innings, striking out five with two walks to help the AL West-leading Rangers to their third straight victory.

Texas went over .500 for the first time this season and took a five-game lead over Seattle, the largest in club history.

Reverse psychology helps Canucks past Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Rangers fans were in a party mood, which was just what the Vancouver Canucks needed.

With a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 Stanley Cup finals and playing at home in friendly Madison Square Garden, the Rangers were primed to capture their first title in 54 years. And their fans were ready to celebrate.

Instead, just as Vancouver coach Pat Quinn had promised, the Canucks seemed to feed off the energy provided by the crowd Thursday night and took a 6-3 victory, sending the series back to Vancouver for Game 6.

"It was a motivating factor for us," Canucks captain Trevor Linden said of the Garden atmosphere. "The party doesn't start until we have our say."

"All the talk about the party and the parade that was going to go on, that was enough. It was what we needed. We knew that from hearing it on the news so we bonded together. It really brought our team closer."

The stage had been set for a party at boisterous Madison Square Garden, where the Rangers aimed to win their first Stanley Cup since 1940 before their charged-up fans.

The Canucks had other plans, though.

"There are a lot of things that motivate you," Vancouver's Sergio Momesso said. "You don't want to go down in five (games) or lose."

"You're still playing for the Cup. A lot of people wrote us off. Fan-wise or media-wise, here they had the party going. We had a lot of things to prove, we have a lot of character. We weren't going to give up."

"We were happy to spoil their parade," Vancouver Canucks defenseman Jeff Brown said.

The Rangers, on the other hand, tried not to get caught up in all the local frenzy.

"We were removed from it," goaltender Mike Richter said. "We came in late (Wednesday) night (from Vancouver) and we were pretty much up in Rye (N.Y.) practicing and weren't in New York City) until today.

"You try to keep yourself a little bit sheltered from the distractions because there are many of them at this time of year."

If the Rangers weren't affected by the atmosphere, they might have been affected by a lack of focus, according to coach Mike Keenan.

"I don't think (the team) was tight or over-excited," Keenan said, "but it certainly had something to do with looking into the future."

It was more than that, though. It seemed if anything could go wrong for the Rangers Thursday night, it did.

When Esa Tikkanen scored from the blue line at 10:06 of the first period, it sparked a swelling roar from the fans. The roar soon turned to groans, however, when linesman Randy Mitton called an offside on Stephane Matteau and negated the goal.

What happened thereafter hurt the Rangers even more. Jeff Beukeboom, their toughest defenseman, was thrown out for being third man in a fight.

"That might have hurt," Vancouver's Geoff Courtnall said. "He's a big, strong kind of guy. He's tough to get by. I think (defenseman Brian) Leetch feeds off of playing with him and maybe missed him the rest of the game."

Beukeboom's absence was especially noticeable in the wide-open third period when the Canucks scored five goals to tie a Stanley Cup finals record for most goals in one period. The Rangers scored three times and the combined total of eight goals also tied a finals record.

The celebratory mood in the Garden was quieted again when Brown scored at 8:10 of the second period on a slap shot from the right circle, snapping a scoreless tie.

The Canucks then went up 3-0 in the third when Courtnall scored on a rebound 26 seconds in and Pavel Bure from the right point on a shot that Richter kicked out and Leetch accidentally kicked in.

Optimist Roundup VFW gets fifth win

VFW squeaked by FotoTime 10-9 in a Babe Ruth league game Thursday at Optimist Park.

VFW trailed 6-0 after two innings but rallied to score all ten runs in the following four innings.

Eric Green worked two innings and picked up the win for VFW, striking out three and allowing only one hit. Aaron Whitney pitched the first four innings for VFW.

Clint Curtis lead VFW's hitting as he went 2-3 on the evening.

Other hitters for VFW were Marquis Long, Aaron Hayden, Josh Brookshire and Carey Knutson.

Jerren Miller struck out four from the mound for FotoTime as he picked up the loss.

Hitting for FotoTime were Miller, Augie Larson, who went three for three on the evening, Aaron Davis and Josh Blackmon.

VFW's record is 5-1-1 on the year. The team trails Triangle by a half a game in the division standings.

Capriati's dad says he pressured her

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Jennifer Capriati's father says he put too much pressure on his daughter when she was starting on the tennis tour and predicted that she will "return to play tennis again and will be stronger than before."

Jennifer Capriati, who turned pro just before her 14th birthday, left the tour last year after losing in the first round of the U.S. Open. Now 18, she was arrested May 16 on marijuana possession charges and is undergoing treatment at a rehabilitation clinic in Miami.

Her father, Stefano Capriati, said she will be released next week.

"She's getting better," he said. "She entered the clinic by her own choice. She'll get out on the 16th. Once she gets out, she'll rejoin the family and we will leave Saddlebrook and Florida forever. Maybe we'll move to Italy."

Capriati made his comments in an interview with the daily La Gazzetta.

"I should have given her more room. Instead, I cooked for her and lived with her 24 hours a day. Sometimes she would say, 'I don't want to practice this week.' But I would insist that she prepare for the next tournament."

"When she was 15, I shouldn't have made her play all those exhibitions, but I didn't know how good she was and wanted to see how she did against stronger players. Maybe I made a mistake. And then I wouldn't let her practice other sports like skiing and parachuting."

Capriati blamed his daughter's current troubles on outside factors.

"Tennis has nothing to do with it," he said. "It's the friends, the acquaintances, the fact that Jennifer wanted to be a normal kid and didn't know when to say no."

Capriati said he regretted that Jennifer saw him "more as a manager and coach than a father."

Separated Siamese twin Angela Lakeberg dead 10 months after surgery

By TED ANTHONY
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Angela Lakeberg struggled for 10 months to capture the slim chance at life offered by the surgery that sacrificed her conjoined sister. On Thursday, she finally stopped fighting.

The separated Siamese twin died of a heart-lung problem at 1 a.m. in the intensive care unit of The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, surrounded by members of her surgical team. No relatives were present.

The red-haired, blue-eyed baby weighed 21 pounds and was three weeks shy of her first birthday.

"Angela Lakeberg was a sweet little girl," said Dr. Russell C. Raphael, director of the hospital's division of critical care medicine. "We're quite sad. All of us kind of consider ourselves surrogate parents for Angela."

Of the months-long saga, he said: "In my opinion and my judgment, it was certainly worth it."

Angela had been on a ventilator since shortly after birth and had been listed in serious but stable condition. Oxygen levels in her blood dropped abruptly in her last days, and the problems with her lungs "dramatically deteriorated" during the last 24 hours of her life, the hospital said.

She was resuscitated three times in the 3 1/2 hours before her heart finally stopped, said Dr. James A. O'Neill Jr., who headed Angela's surgical team.

"When you've been personally involved as a member of a team with a child and you lose that child, you don't feel good. I don't know how else to say it," O'Neill said. "By this time, we're all kind of part of the same family."

Mary Gallagher, a nurse who helped care for the baby, said Angela was good-natured, curious and popular with the nursing staff. "She learned how to give kisses and she had a great smile," she said.

The baby's father, Kenneth Lakeberg, was briefly jailed Thursday after a series of legal problems. Angela's mother, Reitha "Joey" Lakeberg, posted $500 bond to secure his release. As the couple left the Jasper County Jail in Rensselaer, Ind., Mrs. Lakeberg was asked how she felt.

"Not good," she said. "I would just like to thank everybody who has helped us."

Mrs. Lakeberg has been staying with her parents near Roselawn in rural northwest Indiana. Lakeberg has been living elsewhere.

"It's going to be a bad time for a while," said her mother, Reitha Studer. "We can't handle this right now."

Angela and her twin, Amy, were born June 29, 1993, at Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood, Ill. They shared a malformed heart and fused liver tissue.

Doctors at the Illinois hospital opposed separation, saying there was no reason to put the twins through the ordeal when there was little chance either would survive.

Doctors said separation would result in the death of one child and leave the other with less than a 1 percent chance of survival. Without surgery, both probably would have died within months, Loyola doctors said. The Lakebergs decided to pursue separation.

The babies were transferred to Children's for a 5 1/2-hour operation on Aug. 20.

The bill for Angela's medical care topped $1 million at Children's alone, spokeswoman Sarah Jarvis said. The Indiana Medicaid program has agreed to pay $600,000 for Angela's post-surgical care, she said.

"What is not covered by public assistance, the hospital will absorb," Jarvis said.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in bills for the twins' care at Loyola remain in dispute.

During surgery, doctors first separated the twins' fused liver tissue, then moved on to heart surgery. The six-chambered heart was larger than a normal four-chambered one but insufficient to support both girls, doctors said.

The heart sewn into Angela incorporated elements of both twins' hearts.

Family members initially had said they were surprised doctors chose Angela to live because Amy had always seemed the stronger. The hospital said the choice was based on anatomy.

The operation was the fourth on conjoined twins with shared hearts at Children's. Before Angela, the longest survivor at the hospital, separated in 1977, died of liver failure after three months.

Days after the operation, stories surfaced that Kenneth Lakeberg used donated money to buy cocaine.

Court upholds child porno conviction

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal appeals court Thursday reaffirmed a conviction in a child pornography case that produced an uproar in Congress over the Clinton administration's view of federal child pornography law.

The U.S. Supreme Court had sent the case back to the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals after the Justice Department argued videotapes Stephen A. Knox had received in the mail were not obscene.

The three tapes showed pre-teen and teenage girls in bathing suits, leotards or underwear. The camera focused on their genital areas.

Knox had argued he couldn't be convicted because the girls were clothed.

"We hold that the federal child pornography statute ... contains no nudity or discernibility requirement," the 3rd Circuit ruled, but depictions such as those in the videotapes can qualify as "lascivious exhibitions."

Government lawyers told the Supreme Court that nudity is not required to prove obscenity, but that the genitals or pubic area must be discernible through tight or transparent clothing.

In March, 234 members of Congress — saying the Clinton administration's effort would weaken the nation's child pornography law — asked the appeals court to deny the Justice Department's request for a new District Court trial. On Thursday, the appeals court did just that.

Edward W. Warren, a Washington lawyer for the 194 representatives and 40 senators, said he was happy with the ruling. "I think we feel that our position was vindicated," he said.

Newsman charged in plot to kill story subject's husband

By DUNCAN MANSFIELD
Associated Press Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A journalist, he wrote the wrenching story of her struggle to raise a daughter with Down syndrome. Now there's more to the story. Police say they were lovers, and that he tried to kill her sleeping husband as she watched, a baseball bat in her hands.

Michael Frazier was charged in a plot with Lisa Whedbee to kill John Whedbee with a butcher knife early Wednesday. Later in the day, Whedbee filed for divorce and a restraining order against his wife.

"This is just so sordid," said Dwight Van de Vate, a Knox County Sheriff's Department spokesman.

Frazier, lifestyles editor at The Oak Ridger in Oak Ridge, won an award for his 1993 Mother's Day story about the Whedbees and their 4-year-old daughter, Brittany, mentally retarded and bedridden since suffering a stroke in 1991.

Frazier and the Whedbees attended Trinity United Methodist Church. She sang in the choir. Frazier, himself married, played the organ.

Authorities also say she was apparently trapped in an abusive marriage and turned to Frazier for help.

Police say Mrs. Whedbee let Frazier into her Knoxville-area home and the two waited until her husband came home and went to sleep.

Whedbee, 33, an insurance agent, said he awoke to find a man standing over him with a butcher knife and struggled with him. Mrs. Whedbee stood by with a baseball bat and did nothing when her husband called for help, police said.

Whedbee broke free, grabbed the bat and ran. Police say he later identified his attacker as Frazier.

Frazier, 32, was charged with attempted murder and remained in custody Thursday in lieu of $50,000 bond. Mrs. Whedbee, 31, was charged with conspiracy to commit murder and released on $50,000 bond Thursday.

Less than a week ago, Mrs. Whedbee obtained a protective order against her husband that allowed him to remain in the house. She claimed her husband of nearly 12 years had threatened and beaten her, but they agreed to try to work out their differences.

"If you have an abusive relationship, you've got two options — you stay or you leave," said Detective Dan Stewart said. "In her case, she stayed and she sought an option that some people end up doing."

Frazier told police he knew nothing about the attack, Van de Vate said. But Mrs. Whedbee "has been willing to talk to authorities," Van de Vate said, without elaborating.

Peter Esser, publisher of The Oak Ridger, a small afternoon newspaper 25 miles west of Knoxville, had no comment except to confirm Frazier is still an employee.
