LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nicole Brown Simpson lay in a fetal position, in a black dress with bare feet, blood on her legs, arms and face. Ronald Goldman slumped in the dirt, his back against a tree stump, blue jeans and sweater dark with blood. That is what a coroner's investigator saw on the morning of June 13.

A neighbor discovered their bloodied bodies near the gated entrance to Ms. Simpson's townhouse early that morning after seeing Ms. Simpson's dog wandering around the neighborhood, according to a report by the Los Angeles County coroner's investigator.

The report was obtained by TV's syndicated "American Journal" for broadcast today. The show gave The Associated Press a copy of the report Sunday.

Also Sunday, defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey warned against assuming that blood collected as evidence will implicate Ms. Simpson's ex-husband, O.J. Simpson. Bailey said DNA analysis of the blood could help clear him, and he will not plead insanity.

SEOUL (AP) — The United States will offer to exchange diplomatic liaison offices with North Korea if the Communist state agrees to open its secretive nuclear program, a newspaper reported today.

The offices would be the first step in a two-stage program that would eventually include formal diplomatic recognition of the North, the Dong-A Ilbo said.

The national daily, quoting an unidentified South Korean government official, said South Korea has been informed of the U.S. plan, to be presented at high-level talks with North Korea expected in early July.

There was no official government confirmation of the report.

The talks, suspended last July, will begin July 8 in Geneva, the White House confirmed today, but Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the report on liaison offices was premature.

WASHINGTON (AP) — One in four mothers on welfare abuses alcohol or drugs, according to a new study that says "getting them unhooked" must be the central element of welfare reform.

The report, released today by the Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University, also finds that mothers on welfare are three times more likely than other mothers to be substance abusers.

By the center's count, more than 1 million of the 4.2 million parents on the rolls of Aid to Families with Dependent Children in 1991 were alcohol and drug abusers or addicts.

Among the youngest parents on the AFDC — the group targeted for job training and work programs under the Clinton administration's new welfare reform proposal — the rate of addiction and abuse is 37 percent.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Cleared of blame for the Hebron mosque massacre, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is promising tighter security in the volatile city but warning that another massacre is possible.

"If there is a Jewish madman who decides to open fire at one of a thousand mosques," Rabin said Sunday, he could not guarantee security forces would stop him. "Theoretically it could happen. I hope it won't," he said.

An Israeli commission on Sunday had found that a Jewish settler acted alone Feb. 25 when he killed at least 29 Muslims in a mosque in Hebron, a West Bank town.

Rejecting Palestinian claims of conspiracy, the 338-page report blamed the attack solely on gunman Dr. Baruch Goldstein, an American-born physician. He was bludgeoned to death after the attack by angry worshippers.

HOUSTON (AP) — Democrats say the current alignment for the state's 30 congressional districts are just fine. Republicans heartily disagree and head to court today to seek to have the lines redrawn.

"It is our contention the districts were done solely by race, and we find that immoral and not within our understanding of what a colorblind Constitution is all about," said Edward Blum, one of six Republicans comprising Coalition for a Color Blind Texas. The group filed the redistricting lawsuit Jan. 26.

"The minority districts are so bizarre and unwieldy that they separate neighbor from neighbor, they bust up subdivisions and cities and counties in order to create districts for a racial outcome," Blum was quoted as saying in Sunday's editions of The Dallas Morning News.

Dollar tumbles below 100 Yen in Tokyo, stocks plunge

By KOZO MIZOGUCHI
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar tumbled today to its first close below 100 yen since World War II, prompting calls in Japan for stronger central bank action to halt the yen's climb.

The strong yen makes Japanese products more expensive abroad, and that discouraged traders on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, where one key market index sank 2.24 percent. Hong Kong's main stock index fell 2.6 percent, with brokers citing the effects of overseas stock and currency market turmoil.

The dollar closed at 99.93 yen in Tokyo, down 0.47 yen from its previous low of 100.40 yen set Friday in Tokyo.

Today's finish marked the first time the dollar had ended below 100 yen in Tokyo since modern exchange rates were established in the late 1940s.

The U.S. currency has fallen 5.45 yen, or 5.2 percent, in the last three weeks, closing at post-war lows on three of the last four trading days.

But the dollar inched higher against the yen as trading moved to Europe and was stabilizing against European currencies as well.

By early afternoon in London, the dollar was being quoted at 100.15 yen.

The dollar sank to a 13-month low of 1.5725 German marks in early European trading today, but it bounced off its morning lows and was trading at 1.5815 marks by early afternoon compared with 1.5865 marks late Friday.

The yen's rise has been seen as a setback for Japan's efforts to recover from a 3-year-old recession, and Japanese officials also say the sinking dollar can cause inflation in the United States.

A stronger yen hurts Japanese exporters by shrinking the value of the profits they bring back to Japan. It also forces them to raise prices overseas, making their products less competitive.

While it theoretically makes U.S. products less expensive in Japan, government surveys have found that these savings often are not passed on to consumers.

In addition, Japan's recession has discouraged buying.

In today's trading, the dollar ranged between 99.50 yen, its lowest intraday level ever, and 100.30 yen.

Toshihiro Nagata, deputy general manager of Sanwa Bank, said the dollar fell through the psychological barrier of 100 yen despite aggressive dollar-buying intervention by the Bank of Japan.

The central bank bought $2 billion in today's trading, the semi-public Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported. The central bank does not comment on its market activities.

There was an unconfirmed rumor in the market that Germany's central bank also stepped in by buying dollars, Nagata said.

A coordinated effort by 18 central banks Friday to prop up the dollar had limited results.

Traders said the dollar was sold by institutional investors fearful of inflation in the United States. The recent attack on the dollar has led to speculation that the U.S. Federal Reserve Board will soon boost interest rates for a fifth time this year.

"Sentiment toward the dollar remains very bearish," said Yasuhisa Ishida, a dealer with Mitsui Trust and Banking.

Hideaki Kumano, administrative vice minister in the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, said he the yen's series of record highs was unfavorable for the world economy and "does not reflect fundamental conditions of economies of Japan and the United States."

Shoichiro Toyoda, chairman of Toyota Motor Corp. and head of the powerful Federation of Economic Organizations, urged monetary authorities to strongly intervene in the market in concert with other nations' central banks.

It was Toyoda's second statement expressing worries about the yen in four trading days.

On the stock market, the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average shed 465.79 points.

Beating the heat

Searing heat wave bears down on Panhandle

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

As meteorologists predict area temperatures to soar as high as 107 degrees today, Pampans are looking for ways to stay cool and avoid heat-related illnesses.

A single heat stroke has been reported at Coronado Hospital, said Cathy Land, R.N., emergency room manager.

Heat stroke may be signaled by light-headedness, weakness and nausea, Land said. She advises staying indoors during the hottest part of the day, usually 1 to 4 p.m., and when outdoors, stay in the shade and drink water constantly. While one may recover from a light heat stroke in 24 to 48 hours, a serious attack may cause loss of consciousness or death, she explained.

Electrical service suffered some interruption Sunday.

"We had some minor outages due to overloaded transformers due to the heat this weekend," said Ernest Ramirez, manager of Southwestern Public Service.

A transformer was upgraded to accommodate greater air conditioning demand, while others blew a fuse, he said. With multiple days of intense heat, transformers are more likely to overload, Ramirez said. He does not anticipate undue problems with outages during the early season heat wave.

For a few businesses, heat means more revenue. At Culligan Water Conditioning, the demand for water and ice is on the upswing, according to president Weldon Holley. Because of June's heat, the business purchased a second ice machine 10 days ago to keep up with customer demand. Route sales are up, too, he said.

Bennie Horton of Hawaiian Shave Ice is tickled that hot, thirsty Pampans are choosing to cool off with flavored ice.

"It's getting a little better every day," Horton said.

City of Pampa employees are beating the heat by going to work early. Park employees start at 6 and 7 a.m., while other outdoor workers keep regular hours but look for shade and get plenty to drink, said director of public works Nathan Hopson.

Asphalt bleeding on area streets is an annoyance for motorists, although the bleeding actually revitalizes the asphalt, he said. City crews are sanding and graveling the worst spots to keep the stickiness to a minimum.

According to Associated Press reports, no relief was in sight for the heat that has gripped Texas since last week.

Forecasts called for continued clear to partly cloudy skies and hot temperatures tonight and Tuesday. Long range forecasts call for more of the same through the rest of the week.

A heat advisory was in effect through Tuesday for western and central portions of North Texas.

Wink had the state's highest reading on Sunday when the Mercury reached 115. It was 112 at El Paso and Midland, 111 at Lubbock, 108 at San Angelo and 100 at Dallas and Fort Worth. The 112 readings at El Paso and Midland tied all time high records for those cities and the 111-degree reading at Lubbock was an all-time high reading.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s in West Texas and in the 70s and 80s elsewhere.

Highs Tuesday will be in the 90s over most of West Texas, ranging upward to near 114 in the Big Bend area, from 96 to 104 in North Texas and in the 90s to near 105 in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were in the 70s and 80s. Extremes ranged from 70 at Amarillo to 82 at Palacios and Dallas.

Moynihan looks at insurance incentives to replace mandates

WASHINGTON (AP) — After finding few takers for a health reform plan with mandatory employer contributions, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan was testing the waters with a new proposal today that replaces workplace mandates with incentives to buy insurance.

Moynihan's Senate Finance Committee could pass a bill by week's end, a key member, Sen. John Chafee, said today. "This is truly a crucial week," he added.

Moynihan was conferring with fellow Democrats today before presenting his ideas to the full committee in a closed-door session this afternoon. It was still being fine-tuned, but aides said the New York Democrat this time will eschew mandates on employers or individuals but dangle subsidies before businesses instead to entice them to pitch in.

A separate compromise advanced Friday by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., and a half-dozen Finance Committee moderates also avoided the Clinton path of mandatory contributions from all employers and aimed for 95 percent coverage by 2002.

Chafee said today that much of Moynihan's "package that is very, very similar to what we came up with."

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., a Finance Committee member and co-sponsor of the Chafee plan, said he believes he will find more similarities than differences.

"I think we're moving in the same direction," Breaux said as he made the rounds of morning talk shows. "We're not going to get a Democratic bill out or a Republican bill," he said. "If we try to get all or nothing, we might end up with nothing and that would be tragic."

The Moynihan plan sets a target of 95 percent coverage by 2000, with a national health commission then to recommend ways to close the rest of the gap, but with Congress under no obligation to follow its prescription, according to a Washington Post report based on a 139-page draft of the proposal.

Moynihan would offer subsidies to low-wage companies that pick up 80 percent of their workers' premiums and allow small businesses that pay at least 50 percent of the premiums to sign their staff up for the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program, the newspaper said.

The rodeo will feature kids' calf scramble at each performance. On Sunday, a rodeo spectator will have the opportunity to win a $500 jackpot. A rodeo queen will be crowned during the July 4 performance.

The history of the Canadian rodeo began 106 years ago when two cowboys, Ellison Carroll and Albert Phillips duelled with ropes on July 4, 1888 on Canadian's main street.

The pair also competed in steer roping, tying down, horse racing and tournament races. Carroll won and was proclaimed champion rodeo roper of the world since, Canadian citizens believed the first public performance rodeo had been held.

Carroll later recalled there were few rules, no grandstands, no pens and the rodeo was right in front of the Hemphill County courthouse. Early settlers lined the street.

According to Georgia King, executive director of the Canadian-Hemphill Chamber of Commerce, the town was created when the pioneering Kansas and Southern Railroad linked Chicago to the plains. The first settlement sat on the north side of the river as a construction camp for railroad workers called Hog Town.

The townsite was moved and began as Moulton. The name Canadian was agreed upon and developed as a cattle shipping center for the Panhandle.

Court: New York violated church-state separation

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York violated the required separation of church and state when lawmakers created a special public school district for a community of Hasidic Jews, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The creation of the Kiryas Joel school district for disabled children violates the Constitution's ban on government establishment of religion, the court said in a 6-3 ruling.

"We do not deny that the Constitution allows the state to accommodate religious needs by alleviating special burdens," Justice David H. Souter wrote for the court. However, he wrote, "accommodation is not a principle without limits."

"It is clear that neutrality as among religions must be honored," he said, adding that the creation of the Kiryas Joel district "fails the test of neutrality" because it "singles out a particular religious sect for special treatment."

Today's decision affirmed a ruling by New York's highest court, which said the special school district unconstitutionally created a "symbolic union" between the government and the Satmar Hasidic sect.

The Constitution's First Amendment says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Lawyers for the school district argued that state lawmakers, in establishing the district, were simply accommodating the Hasidic Jews' right to religious freedom.

The Supreme Court had allowed the Kiryas Joel district to keep operating until the justices issued their ruling. The district is in Orange County, about 40 miles north of New York City.

"We are pleased that the Supreme Court has upheld the 200-year-old separation of church and state," said Louis Grumet, executive director of the New York State School Boards Association, which brought the lawsuit.

Abraham Wieder, president of the Kiryas Joel Board of Education, said in a statement, "We have no choice but to continue our search for a suitable way to provide a quality education for the most vulnerable of our children. The Supreme Court decision is a setback, not the end of this most important pursuit."

Today's decision made little mention of the high court's 1971 landmark test for interpreting the separation of church and state, although

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote separately that "the slide away (from using the test) is well under way."

The test says government actions are unconstitutional if they have a religious purpose, primarily advance or promote religion or excessively entangle government and religion.

The court has used the 1971 test in deciding many church-state issues, such as what type of government aid can be given to parochial schools.

New York lawmakers created the Kiryas Joel district in 1989 after village residents withdrew their disabled children from other public schools, saying they were traumatized by having to attend class outside the village.

Virtually all of Kiryas Joel's 12,000 residents are members of the Satmar Hasidic sect, which maintains an insular community where people wear special clothing, follow a strict schedule of prayer and religious study and usually speak Yiddish.

Children who are not disabled attend private religious schools in the village where girls and boys are educated separately. At the public school, about 60 full-time disabled students and 140 part-time students are educated in mixed classes of boys and girls.

Local cowboys, cowgirls rodeo entry deadline this week

Local cowboys and cowgirls who live within a 60 mile radius of Pampa can enter the Top O' Texas Rodeo Tuesday through Thursday. Local contestants who wish to enter the P.R.C.A. show can do so by going by the rodeo office at 200 N. Ballard and seeing Jane Jacobs.

The Top O' Texas Rodeo is being sponsored in part by Robert Knowles Dodge of Pampa. As part of the Dodge Truck Rodeo Bull Challenge, each time Dodge Viper Junior or any of the 16 Dodge Truck Bulls go unriden, the bounty will increase $500. When the animal finally is successfully ridden, the contestant who stays aboard the full eight seconds will be awarded the Dodge Truck bounty.

Dodge Viper Junior replaces Dodge Viper RT, which was put on "injured reserve status" earlier this month after sustaining a minor injury at a rodeo in Texas. Dodge Viper Junior is scheduled for one outing in Greeley, Colo., and if the bull goes unriden, the bonus will pay $1,500 in Pampa.

Pampa is also included in the 1994 Dodge Truck Rodeo Series Sweepstakes, which is offering nearly $2,000 in prizes to some lucky contestant who has signed up for the sweepstakes at Robert Knowles Dodge or the rodeo arena.

If you have any questions regarding the local contestant entries or the Dodge Truck Series, please contact Jacobs at the Top O' Texas Rodeo office at 669-3241.

State agency execs get pay raises despite budget limits

AUSTIN (AP) — The executive directors of 13 state agencies received $91,292 in pay raises this year despite a salary freeze for rank-and-file employees and calls from lawmakers for fiscal restraint.

The raises were granted by the Legislative Budget Board, which is led by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney, both Democrats.

Twelve of the raises were approved in March, the same month Bullock urged the agencies to be fiscally responsible at a public board meeting, the Austin American-Statesman reported in Sunday's editions.

The directors' salaries are set by the Legislature in the appropriations bill. However, the budget board relied on an exemption that allows pay increases with the governor's recommendation, the newspaper said.

The raises — which averaged about $7,000 per executive director — drew harsh criticism from Republicans, who say Democrats have been running a costly state government.

"These increases are out of line," said George W. Bush, who is challenging Democratic Gov. Ann Richards in the November election.

"I am a fiscal conservative," he said in a statement. "We must make state government accountable and responsible."

Richards' spokesman, Bill Cryer, defended the increases, adding that several other raises were rejected.

"The governor has to approve them, and the LBB has to approve them — either one or the other can refuse to approve them," Cryer said.

Meanwhile, the head of a state-employees group said rank-and-file employees should be seeing raises, as well.

"What's good for the goose is good for the gander, and that's all there is to it," said Lane Zivley, executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association.

"None of the leadership is taking care of state employees, like they said they would when they ran for office," said Zivley, who added that worker morale is "the worst it's ever been in the history of state government."

The two-year budget approved by the Legislature in 1993 included a suspension of pay raises for rank-and-file state employees.

The executive directors' increases ranged from $1,818 to $25,580. John Paul Batiste of the Texas Commission on the Arts got the lowest raise; the largest went to Andy Collins, director of the state prison system.

Among those who received raises was Jane Hickie, the embattled director of the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations who has been criticized by Republicans over travel expenditures. Ms. Hickie received the second-highest raise, a 19.6 percent increase that elevated her salary from $68,958 to $82,500.

Democratic Rep. Rob Junell, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the board should return to the pre-1991 days when raises couldn't be granted between legislative sessions.

Junell said the agencies weren't given more money to fund the raises. He said they instead were granted more flexibility in using money that already had been appropriated.

Mujahedeen blamed for Iran Mosque blast

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian investigators today blamed the exiled Mujahedeen Khalq opposition group for a bombing that killed 26 people at a mosque.

Security forces' investigation implicated a fugitive known as Mahdi Nahvi in the June 20 explosion, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said. The report identified Nahvi as a member of the Mujahedeen.

The Mujahedeen Khalq, or Peoples' Holy Warriors, has denied any involvement in the blast, which ripped through the prayer hall of the Shiite Imam Reza shrine in Mashhad, 450 miles east of Tehran. Seventy worshipers were wounded.

A statement issued from its press office in Paris today called the identification of Nahvi as a Mujahedeen member a lie.

"At no time has the organization had a member by that name," it said.

The Mujahedeen, Iran's largest dissident group, has in the past carried out bombing attacks that have targeted mainly government installations and political personalities.

The Intelligence Ministry in Tehran released a picture of a man described as Nahvi, according to Tehran Radio, which said the ministry was calling on the public to help capture him.

Fires blacken parts of Southern California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fire crews from neighboring states converged on Southern California today to help battle brush fires that have already blackened more than 8,000 acres.

"They're coming in from everywhere," said Rita Nolan, a spokeswoman for Angeles National Forest. "They're from New Mexico and Oregon, all over."

The most devastating fire so far was a 2,000-acre blaze in the San Bernadino and Angeles national forests, about 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

It destroyed 10 homes and caused about $2 million in damage. Officials believe it sprang Saturday from a campfire near a Boy Scout camp.

"It's lucky we weren't killed," said a woman who lost her home, giving only her first name, Robin. "It looks like a war zone. It's unbelievable."

More than 800 firefighters battled to contain the blaze early today, Forest Service spokesman Robert Brady said.

Flames were visible in the resort community of Wrightwood, home to about 3,200 people, but only about 80 rural residences were ordered evacuated.

Another 600 firefighters tried to contain a 3,000-acre fire in the Soledad Canyon in the Angeles National Forest that had been burning since Saturday. The cause of the fire was not known.

A third blaze charred 1,500 acres south of Anza in Riverside County. State Investigators believe the blaze may have been started Saturday by a vehicle backfiring, Department of Forestry spokesman Will Donaldson said.

In San Diego County, a brush fire scorched 2,000 acres and headed toward the community of Mesa Grande, on an Indian reservation in the Cleveland National Forest about 20 miles northeast of downtown San Diego.

An undetermined number of people left their homes voluntarily. About 500 firefighters battled the flames, which began Sunday afternoon.

"It'll be daylight before we can see what's really burned," Forestry Department spokeswoman Audrey Hagen said Sunday night. "The bad news is our crews will be battling the same conditions: 105 degree temperatures, humidity so low, erratic winds. It won't be much different from the weekend."

Family blames voodoo for eye gouging

DALLAS (AP) — Friends and family of a woman whose eyes were gouged out say only voodoo can explain the act.

"What happened that day in Dallas is totally beyond understanding," said the Rev. Norah Banks Jr. of Pilgrim's Rest Baptist Church in the women's hometown of Arcadia, La. "It is the work of Satan."

Doretha Crawford, 34, and Beverly Johnson, 35, have been charged with blinding their sister, Myra Obasi, 30, in a religious frenzy. The sisters are accused of beating Ms. Obasi with their fists, then gouging out her eyes with their fingers during a prayer session March 18 at a church-home in south Dallas.

Although Ms. Obasi has asked that her sisters not be prosecuted, Dallas Assistant District Attorney George West said no decision has been made about whether to proceed to trial.

The family points to a "voodoo man" named Benny, while a Dallas prosecutor says witnesses' "fear of voodoo" is interfering with his investigation.

"We are confident in our position that my clients will be vindicated when the full facts are disclosed to a jury," said Lela Washington, the women's lawyer.

Their father Chester Crawford says his daughters' bizarre story began when he suggested that Ms. Johnson, suffering from headaches, visit a man named Benny, described by Arcadians as a "voodoo" or "hoodoo" man.

Benny told them the cause of the Crawfords' problems was a demonic attack. He even described the attackers, the Rev. Banks said.

Frightened, the Crawfords contacted the Arcadia police, who reported increasing patrols near the house but say they saw nothing unusual.

After the family awoke to reportedly find "BLOOD ROOM" traced into the morning dew on a car, the three sisters fled with their five children.

The solution was their father's, said Leticia Paul, the sisters' childhood friend.

"They believed and trusted their dad," Ms. Paul was quoted as saying in Sunday's editions of The Dallas Morning News.

"I should have gone to Jesus Christ instead," the patriarch said.

As Ms. Obasi neared Dallas, she began driving crazily, seemingly trying to steer in front of huge trucks, speeding along the edge of the road and threatening to drive off of bridges. Her sisters told friends they grappled with her and the steering wheel, pummeled her and prompted a visible demon to emerge.

By the time they calmed Ms. Obasi and the car had stopped, they were in Waxahachie and were spotted by police.

"There was some kind of demonic person that was the reason they had left Louisiana," Waxahachie police Chief Allwin Barrow said. "They felt he had put a curse on the car and that's why it quit."

Police said the women then hitchhiked into south Dallas.

The sisters wandered into a neighborhood, asking strangers to pray with them, according to residents in the neighborhood. After several hours, the sisters were directed to the church-home of Mattye Bradfield.

Ms. Paul said she was told Ms. Obasi began speaking in other voices. Shortly thereafter, Ms. Obasi was blinded.

Fighting continues to rage in northeast Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — U.N. peacekeepers came under fire several times around the Muslim enclave of Gorazde and fighting continued to rage in northeast Bosnia, U.N. officials said today.

The heaviest artillery exchanges in the northeast were around Gradacac, Gracanica, Ribnica and Serb-held Doboj, said U.N. spokesman Cmdr. David Chaperon. The towns are to the west and southwest of the government-held town of Tuzla.

Bosnian Serb artillery barrages of 10-15 rounds per minute rained down on the Mount Ozren area Sunday afternoon, he said.

After long being on the defensive as the better-armed Serbs took control of 70 percent of Bosnia, the government army has made some modest gains.

In interviews published over the weekend, Gen. Rasim Delic, commander of the Muslim-led government army, called for a major new Muslim-Croat effort to defeat the Serb foes.

"The only way is the military defeat of the Serb aggressor," the Croatian daily Vecernji List quoted him as saying.

Delic claimed progress regaining lost territory northwest of Sarajevo and in areas farther west in the past 10-15 days.

In an interview with Slovenian radio and TV, he said his army was strong enough to "embark on the liberation phase of armed struggle."

"Personally I think that the war has reached its peak," Delic said, adding that the Serbs were no longer able to reinforce their ranks.

He said the cease-fire was not being observed because "fundamental demands" of the Bosnian government had not been met. A cease-fire that began June 10 was to have helped prepare the ground for further talks on peace in Bosnia. Instead, fighting flared in the north and northeast throughout last week.

In Sarajevo, Chaperon reported increased attacks Sunday on U.N. peacekeepers in the eastern Gorazde pocket. One British peacekeeper was killed.

Early Sunday, a hand grenade was thrown at an observation post manned by Ukrainian peacekeepers northwest of the 1.9-mile exclusion zone around the capital that Serbs pulled out of in April under threat of NATO air strikes. It was not known which side the grenade came from.

Later in the day, 40-50 small-arms rounds from Serb positions were fired at another observation point northwest of the zone, and U.N. peacekeepers returned 70 small arms rounds.

One small arms round was fired at a British battalion observation post, killing the British soldier. A rifle grenade was fired as well, Chaperon said.

Pvt. Sean Richard Taylor was the sixth British peacekeeper to die in Bosnia.

Davidians dispute reports they're moving to Colorado

WACO (AP) — Surviving Branch Davidians dispute reports that they plan to rebuild in Colorado, and some say a home established by one sect member won't be the same without leader David Koresh.

Fire destroyed the group's Mount Carmel compound near Waco on April 19, 1993, following a standoff with federal authorities.

Sheila Martin, one of several Davidians still living in Waco, said few Davidians are likely to join what sect member Wally Kennett announced would be a new haven for as many as 30 Koresh followers. Even if a few of Koresh's followers relocate to the Baldwin, Colo., cabin, it would be nothing like Mount Carmel, she said.

"I don't think anyone expects it to be the same without David," Ms. Martin told the Waco Tribune-Herald in Sunday's editions. "He was the glue that kept us all together."

Most would just visit, she said. "I don't think anyone intended to go there and live like we did at Mount Carmel," she said.

Kennett and another man have rented the remote cabin, where authorities say only three people live. His landlord ordered the sect members to move out by July 4. They're looking for a new home, but want to stay in Colorado, Kennett said.

Kennett apparently has adopted some of Koresh's tenets, keeping semiautomatic weapons in his home and buying 3,000 rounds of ammunition.

The weapons are being bought and sold as a business, as Koresh did in Waco, he said.

"We're doing the same thing that was done at Mount Carmel," said Kennett, who added that the local sheriff's office was invited to inspect the weapons.

Four federal agents and six Davidians were killed in a Feb. 28, 1993, raid on Mount Carmel. After a 51-day standoff, Koresh and 78 others died in the fire, some from gunshots.

Earlier this month, eight Davidians received federal prison sentences ranging from five years to 40 years for charges stemming from the initial raid.

Clive Doyle, one of three sect members acquitted of all charges, said Davidians have no plans to build a "second Mount Carmel" in Colorado.

"Wally probably means well, but he doesn't have any backing from us or authorization to speak on our behalf," Doyle said.

Hospital to begin locking doors at night

As of today, Coronado Hospital will begin locking all entrances to the hospital from 9 p.m. until 6 a.m. with the exception of the emergency room, according to an announcement made by Bill O'Brien, assistant administrator.

"We are enforcing the policy for the comfort and safety of our patients and employees; however, it is important to remember you can exit the building through any of the doors," O'Brien said. "With the emergency room being the only entrance open after 9 p.m., it will be easier to monitor visitors throughout the night."

The system that will automatically lock and unlock the doors is tied in with the time clock system used by the employees. This system will also allow limited access to certain areas of the hospital. For example, only employees involved in infant care will be allowed in the nursery.

The new policy will be in effect beginning at 9 p.m. today.

As a reminder, hospital visiting hours are 2 p.m.-4 p.m. and 7 p.m.-9 p.m. daily. In addition, there are special limitations regarding visitation to intensive care patients posted at the entrance of the unit, O'Brien noted.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Clinton's welfare plan really a scam

President Bill Clinton's bold campaign promise to "end welfare as we know it" is finally being introduced as a whimper. It took more imagination to decide to introduce the proposal in "America's heartland" in Kansas City than to devise the paltry set of reforms designed not so much to end the tragic cycle of dependency as to perpetuate it.

If you think the PR decision to go to Kansas City was an obvious no-brainer, you understand just how bold and innovative the reform proposal is.

Since President Lyndon Johnson vowed to conduct war on poverty and end welfare as he knew it back in 1965, taxpayers have spent more than it took to conduct World War II (in inflation-corrected dollars) to fight poverty and end welfare. The result? Poverty levels, after some years of dramatic decline, have stayed about the same, the number of people on various kinds of welfare has increased, and those on welfare feel more trapped than ever by a system that doesn't provide enough money to live with dignity, but is full of incentives not to work.

Welfare reform worthy of the name, if not so radical as the suggestion that all forms of public assistance be abolished, should envision less spending on welfare and fewer people on it. But Clinton's proposal involves spending $9.3 billion more during five years.

That's because it seeks to "replace" welfare - or a small portion of the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program, which is only a small piece of the federal welfare picture - with federal job-training programs and eventually with federal make-work jobs.

The centerpiece of the proposal is to target welfare mothers born in 1971 or later for job-training programs and to stop payments to those who don't participate in these programs. If a recipient in this age category doesn't have a bona-fide job after two years, she would be placed in a government "job." Government childcare programs would be expanded, and families leaving welfare for jobs could still get government medical benefits.

Less than one third of those on AFDC would be affected by this proposal. And rather than encourage genuine independence, it would promote continuing dependence on government - indeed, an expansion of childcare programs and "job-training" programs with a history of inefficacy and corruption.

The popularity of Clinton's tough-sounding rhetoric during the campaign indicated a window of opportunity for genuinely far-reaching reform. Instead, Clinton has given us a gesture or two, wrapped in the assumption that government "help" of the kind that has failed so often before, rather than independence and self-help, is the only way people will ever get out of poverty.

The pundits say Clinton hasn't concentrated his full powers on welfare reform because he's so wrapped up in health care and allegations about scandal. That's no excuse for such a pitiful performance.

Berry's World

"Kim Il-Sung says, 'We have talked the talk - now, we walk the walk.'"

McCarthy now seen as enemy

On Wednesday night, June 15, CBS gave us a special documentary, Edward R. Murrow vs. Joseph R. McCarthy. I cannot imagine that a documentary on Joseph Goebbels vs. Mother Teresa would be weighted more distinctly.

One of the mortifying things about the anti-McCarthy legend is what it is actually telling us about the American people - namely that during the '50s we were fools, cowards and sadists. That isn't my memory of the McCarthy era, about which I was at one point a serious student, having written (with L. Brent Bozell) a book on the subject, McCarthy and His Enemies.

It was, on the whole, a defensive book about McCarthy, though one critic counted more than 50 criticisms of the senator, and McCarthy himself, though friendly, declined to endorse it. The purpose of which is to say in handling that chapter in American history, it is possible to make some distinctions. There aren't many in the CBS documentary.

The tone of it is well cast early on when Edward Dmytryk comes on screen. Dmytryk was one of the Hollywood Ten. It is fashionable to lionize these 10, who went to jail for refusing to cooperate with congressional committees, but it is a fact, for instance, that Dmytryk was a member of the Communist Party.

How do we know? Because he acknowledged that he was (April 25, 1951).

Dmytryk says for CBS, "Being dubbed a communist was worse than being dubbed a rapist, a wife killer or anything else in those days." But that doesn't really clarify the point. Everybody knows that in every society there are rapists and murderers. But the great shock of the '50s was that 250 million people in eastern Europe were living lives indistinguishable from life under Adolf Hitler, to end whose reign we had fought a very bloody and costly world war.

The idea that there were Americans around who defended, indeed applauded - in some cases spied for

William F. Buckley Jr.

- Josef Stalin and his gulag was thought of as aberrational in a sense entirely different from such people as encouraged - as Dmytryk did - a bloody, expansionist slave empire.

The narrator (Dan Rather) tells the audience that "events at home were making them (Americans) uneasy, like Alger Hiss - a former U.S. State Department official - accused of spying for the Soviets."

"Accused" of spying for the Soviets? That's on the order of saying that Hugh Hefner has been accused of favoring sexual freedom. Hiss was tried and convicted.

Time is given to Bartley Crum, identified as "an attorney who paid a terribly high price for legally representing Communists. ... Bartley Crum committed suicide in 1959. ... 'I think he did it,' his daughter recites, "because he was exhausted by the harassment. ... I don't think he ever got over that, the shock of what happened, the evils that were perpetrated by McCarthy."

Oh lordy, lordy. Bartley Crum was a prominent fellow traveler who ardently defended the Communists, in print and in court. He was a tragically mixed-up man who, before the end of his life, rejoined the Catholic Church. His suicide, two years after McCarthy's death, was unrelated to McCarthy, but might have been related to Crum's past.

Fred Friendly, one of the most idealistic men in public life and one of the brightest, produced the famous attack on McCarthy by Ed Murrow and now tells us, "I was scared in 1954."

I hate to say it about an old friend, but I don't believe him. I find it easier to believe the answer given during the McCarthy years by the late John Roche, much more conspicuously liberal than Fred Friendly in that he served as national chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action, when asked if he was scared of McCarthy. He answered that McCarthy came in approximately 27th on the list of what scared John Roche, between Roche's fear of college presidents and his fear of being eaten alive by piranhas.

The reviewer for The New Yorker in 1954 commented on CBS' treatment of McCarthy that it was a moral profanation. If you aim a camera at someone for an entire week, you can assume that at one point he will belch. Open your documentary with its subject belching, and you set the tone for your treatment of it. During the '80s an assistant film editor for Ed Murrow confessed that such flagrant bite-manipulation had been done; indeed, he reports that CBS chairman of the board William Paley was infuriated on hearing of it.

I swear (as previously noted), nothing McCarthy ever did - and he did many indefensible things - can ever compare with the lengths to which his enemies went and continue to go. Lord Bertrand Russell actually said that McCarthy had made it unsafe for Americans to read Thomas Jefferson. Robert Hutchins actually said that so cowed were we all by McCarthy that it took courage to contribute support to Harvard University. And now there are those who, like The New York Times' Tom Wicker, defending Owen Lattimore, conclude that the Cold War was itself a delusion.

McCarthyism gradually emerges as a threat that displaces communism.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, June 27, the 178th day of 1994. There are 187 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 27, 1950, President Truman ordered the Air Force and Navy into the Korean conflict following a call from the United Nations Security Council for member nations to help South Korea repel an invasion from the North.

On this date:
In 1847, New York and Boston were linked by telegraph wires.

In 1880, author-lecturer Helen Keller, who lived most of her life without sight and hearing, was born in Tuscumbia, Ala.

In 1942, the FBI announced the capture of eight Nazi saboteurs who had been put ashore from a submarine on New York's Long Island.

In 1944, 50 years ago, during World War II, American forces completed their capture of the French port of Cherbourg from the Germans.

Holy cow! Look at those home runs!

Never in baseball history have home-run balls been landing so deep in the outfield bleachers.

This year's baseball season is barely one-third over, and big-league batters are already ahead of the paces set by Hack Wilson and Rogers Hornsby, Roger Maris and Lou Gehrig.

Their records for home runs, runs batted in and season batting average are being challenged by Joe Carter and Paul O'Neill, Ken Griffey Jr. and Cal Ripken Jr. and Frank Thomas.

Griffey, the first two months of this season, stroked 22 home runs for Seattle's Mariners. At this pace, he'd have 70 by October - eclipsing Babe Ruth and Roger Maris' records.

It can be argued that today's athletes are improved over any previous. After all, today's high schoolers are besting Mark Spitz's Olympic swimming records.

But why so many more long balls JUST THIS YEAR? That question invites suspicion that the big leagues are suddenly playing with a livelier ball. After all, hitting is what makes baseball exciting, and baseball, recently taking a backseat to basketball, has needed more excitement.

Paul Harvey

Oakland Athletics manager Tony LaRussa thinks the ball has been "juiced."

"You can squeeze a 1994 production baseball and feel that it's wound tighter!"

Baseball's hierarchy officially denies it.

Sportscaster John Rooney: "The ball is definitely juiced up; infielders and outfielders know the ball is jumping off the bat."

Sportscaster Wayne Hagin: "Yes, the ball is hotter this year. Count the triples this year!"

Earlier this year, an MIT scientist patented "the dimpled bat."

As a dimpled golf ball flies farther, a dimpled bat with reduced drag is said to increase swing speed three percent to five percent. This would propel the ball some 10 feet farther, on a humid day perhaps 20 feet.

Baseball's Rules Committee has not yet approved the dimpled bat, but hitters might achieve almost the same results by nicking their bats.

It can be argued that the new ballparks are "easier" for the hitters. Mark Starr, for Newsweek, writes, "Today's batters confront a host of disadvantages that did not exist for the old-time record-setters: night baseball, cross-country travel, relief specialists, television and preoccupation with Wall Street portfolios."

But those factors would seem to work more against pitchers.

Whatever the explanation - perhaps explanations - New York Yankee Paul O'Neill, a lifetime .268 hitter, suddenly this year is batting closer to .500!

And each of the old hitting records is in jeopardy. Unless this baseball season is ended at the halfway mark with a strike. And right now, a strike, on or about July 15, appears likely.

Isn't it refreshing that the world is so between acute crises that we can concern ourselves with such as this?

Russia eagerly edges toward democracy

SARATOV, Russia - It wasn't homesickness as much as a stubborn assertion of cultural sublimity. Barbra Streisand and Nancy Wilson occasionally flitted through my mind during my 10 exhilarating - and exhausting - days here.

Myths die hard, but the ubiquitous Russkaya dusha (Russian Soul) has never yielded to mortality. It's as many-splendored as Walt Whitman's varied carols of America - in the Russian people's rambunctious humor, their overpowering warmth, their authoritative knowledge of their literary heroes, and in the sun-wrinkled faces of old Russian women, wearing their platoks (babushkas) and heavy stockings, walking alongside fashionable young women in thigh-high skirts. And, always, that blessed binding everpresence ... food!

Russian families don't merely serve you a meal. They conduct a gastronomical symphony. You're lucky if you can escape with just the tantalizing national dish of borscht. Zdorava! (Great!)

Their affinity for vodka is legendary. I didn't mind toasting the populations of Moscow, Saratov and St. Petersburg. But when my hosts decided to pay tribute to Washington, D.C., Cheyenne, Wyo., and Chapel Hill N.C., my cup had runneth over. I wasn't about to abuse the 23rd Psalm.

In the Marquis de Custine's epochal Empire of the Czar (published only four years after his fellow Frenchman, de Tocqueville, had published the definitive Democracy in America), de Custine lamented the Russian "tyranny of gostaprimstvo (hospitality)." Some 155 years later, it is alive and well.

Chuck Stone

So is the vibrancy of Russian life. In classrooms where English-speaking students engage you in dialogue about American journalism; on the streets where thousands of capitalist-minded vendors are selling everything but kitchen sinks; in the vast markets housed in city-block-long buildings; in the wooden, ramshackle houses that seem to be leaning back toward a prouder time; and in the eye-boggling number of apartment houses that march endlessly over Saratov's landscape.

Streisand summed it up: "People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

Democracy is on a roll in Russia. Daily and weekly newspapers are springing up. An ad agency, which was founded by three young people a year ago, is now publishing a shopper's guide and a weekly newspaper for Saratov's "decision-makers." A radio station is in the works.

After decades of a centralized tyranny, Russians are decentralizing with a passion. Recently, elections were held and the publisher of a weekly newspaper, Mirror of Russia, and owner of a television station, Motophin, ran for a regional deputy. "Your friend won," Galena Lashkov, my interpreter, told me when I telephoned for the results.

Russians are fascinated with America. My host, Dr. Konstantin Ryabinin, named his giant shaggy dog Phil - in honor of Phil Donahue!

Both countries have the mentality of gromadnost (vastness), but also share the quest for knowledge. In a hand-delivered letter from Valery V. Prozorov, dean of Saratov State University's faculty of philology, to University of North Carolina Journalism School Dean Richard R. Cole, Prozorov enthusiastically endorsed a student exchange in journalism. "For our part," he wrote, "we propose courses on the history of Russia's criticism and journalism, analysis of the present day mass media conditions in this country and region. We are sure our cooperation will be fruitful in all respects."

Democracy thrives on such ecumenical exchanges. Our small delegation was part of a far more compelling tableau of ecumenicity. In the Orthodox Church of "Soothe My Sorrows," Rosa Bazyleva, a professor of English and a Russian Jew, stood regally in a church historically hostile to Jews and interpreted for our group (white, black, Jewish, Baptist and Mormon) the welcoming remarks of the genial Archpriest Lasa V. Novoreshcheny. Change is in the Russian air.

Three days later, on the comfortable overnight train ride from Saratov to Moscow, I drifted off to a contented sleep, Nancy Wilson's lilting voice in my head. "The things we did last summer, I'll remember all winter long."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to you, but your reply to "Secondhand Smoker" really had smoke coming out of my ears!

In this letter, "Secondhand Smoker" stated that he had quit chain-smoking two years before he met his wife. Obviously, she must have been smoking at the time. If her smoking was so offensive to him, why did he marry her? If he didn't tell her before their wedding that he didn't want smoking in their home, he has no right to change the rules now. After all, he accepted her for better or worse, knowing that she was a smoker.

The only real option he has now is to live with it, or leave. And if he chooses to leave, then she should sue him for everything he has for breach of contract! Sign me...

SMOKERS HAVE RIGHTS, TOO,
VIRGINIA CITY, NEV.

DEAR SMOKERS, ETC:
Meet Leland Moody, who backs you up all the way:

DEAR ABBY: Like you, I have no affection for secondhand smoke. Also, like you, I have no affection for hysterical or deliberate falsehoods, such as the EPA's report that secondhand tobacco smoke is a Class A carcinogen.

In a recent column, Robert Scheer (L.A. Times) describes in chilling detail how the EPA concocted its conclusion.

I'm sure you do not want to be party to this deception, especially since so many people seek your advice on such matters. The truth is, secondhand smoke may be a public nuisance, but it is hardly a deadly killer.

Quoting Scheer, "One can make the case for smoke-free public spaces on the basis of civility alone, without piling on the false guilt about killing people with secondhand smoke."

My point is that each individual must deal with this annoyance on his own terms, but not on the basis that secondhand smoke is a lethal threat. To do otherwise is to be at least ignorant of the facts, if not deliberately dishonest.

LELAND MOODY, A NON-SMOKER
IN NIPOMO, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: About that man who complained because his wife was a chain-smoker, my question: Did he know while he was dating his wife 16 years ago that she was a smoker? If so, why did he marry her if smoke bothered him?

He reminds me of the man who built his house beside the railroad tracks, then complained because the train went by and blew its whistle; or the man who built his house next to the city dump, then groused about the stink.

M.P. IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: My sister is getting married in August. As maid of honor, I'm hosting a shower for her.

I had planned on asking each person who will be invited to bring a dish of her choice (or even something specific) and making the shower "potluck." But my mother doesn't like the idea. She says it would be in poor taste.

What do you think?
CINDY IN WEST ALLIS, WIS.

DEAR CINDY: Local customs may vary, but I'll cast my vote with your mother. If your budget is tight, give the shower in the mid-afternoon — and serve tea, sandwiches, and an assortment of cookies and cake. Perhaps your mother would assist you in some of the preparations. A shower requires guests to bring a gift for the bride (or couple), but to ask guests to provide refreshments is too much!

Keeping clothes simple for summer travels

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features

It's summertime, and traveling should be easy, sartorially speaking, at least.

Space-age fabrics for pragmatic jet-age travelers, from knits in natural fabrics to wrinkle-resistant cottons and lightweight wools to high-tech polyester and other synthetics, help make the going great. In easy-to-wear styles, these fabrics can be scrunched into a small suitcase and emerge to perfection hours later.

Wrinkle-resistant collections are available from Eddie Hagggar, Jantzen and Cherokee, among others. Or, for a new wrinkle, consider Issey Miyake's Pleats Please collection.

Pleats Please is a travel-friendly micro-pleated polyester collection. Terri Howard, divisional merchandise manager at I. Magnin in San Francisco, says it did particularly well in the first two weeks after it was introduced in I. Magnin stores in San Francisco and Phoenix and in the I. Magnin catalog.

"You roll the merchandise right up, and you don't ever have to worry about its condition in your luggage," Howard says. "The pleats are permanently set, so you have an elegant look as soon as you take the clothes out of your suitcase."

Each garment weighs only a few ounces and is made of fabric that drips dry in less than an hour. The perfect candidate for hotel sink laundry.

Miyake's line consists of turtle-necks, shells, T-shirts, shorts, pants and skirts, ranging from brights to neutrals and priced from $95 to $290.

If your junket calls for more business than pleasure, suit up in 100 percent wool. But not just any wool. Make it midweight, says Tony Krohn, sales manager for Brooks Brothers.

"For both men and women, what you want in wool is a year-round weight, which is 9 ounces," he says. "It's not too hot in summer or too cold in winter, so it'll take you from Miami to Minneapolis."

"Besides, it's a resilient fiber that performs well. More than cotton, linen or even wool blends, it recovers well from abuse. So when you hang it up in your hotel room, the fibers recover."

Brooks Brothers midweight wool suits range from $300 to $1,000, for men or women.

Don't let a clothes crease or two put a wrinkle in your brow. Expect them on natural fabrics such as linen, cotton and washed silk. Even embrace them.

Wear your linen loose and unpressed — and pack it in a hard-sided suitcase if you're really bent on minimizing wrinkles.

"If it's a slouchy silhouette, wrinkling is certainly acceptable," says Deirdre Corcoran, marketing director for Episode stores in New York. "Linen in particular is a good, breathable fabric that is easy to travel with — if you're the kind of person who understands that that's what linen does."

Los Angeles designer David Dart seconds that notion.

"With the wrinkles in it is really the way it's supposed to be. You simply roll the clothing and stick it in your suitcase," he says. "And when you arrive, pull it out, throw it on a hanger and hang it in the bathroom so steam can get at it while you shower."

If you like linen but can't abide by rumples, pick a linen blended with viscose, cotton, silk or wool. It's a bit heavier and crushes much less than all-linen.

Whatever you choose to take along, keep packing to a minimum.

"It's very important not to introduce too many concepts when packing for an excursion," Corcoran says. "Everything that's in your suitcase — with the possible exception of a black evening gown — should really mix and match with everything else."

"For a weekend, limit yourself to three colors. You can enjoy your travels and not think too much about what you're wearing."

Don't jettison the essentials. Make a list of basics. For the beach, it'll include a crushable sun hat, sunglasses, sunscreen, waterproof beach shoes, beach bag and two swimsuits, one for a quick change.

The more you organize, the less you'll take, and the less you'll have to pack, unpack and tote around. So fight the urge to pack everything you love. You'll hate it when you have to lug it everywhere — and you'll have nothing fresh to come home to.

If you didn't pack enough, the worst that can happen is that you might have to buy something on the road. Keep in mind that the size and cut of European clothing differ from American standards. For size-conversion charts, consult travelers' guidebooks. Some European department stores offer charts at their information desks.

Baking, songwriting, and poetry — her hand is in a bit of each

Cinnamon rolls baked with heart by a woman who has a song in hers. "I have always liked to cook," said Gladys Stewart, 67.

"I always thought it was the duty of a wife to have three meals a day and make them interesting."

The recipe she uses for her cinnamon rolls is one that she has taken time to revise to make it into a recipe that worked well for her and one her family liked.

"The secret was to use not too terribly fattening things," she said.

The icing, said Stewart, is made with powdered sugar, sour cream, butter and a little bit of vanilla. It appears to be the best part of the roll.

"It proved to be the best icing," she said, that her family liked and what the people who ate at a tea shop she ran several years ago called "The Loft," appeared to like.

And for her children and her grandchildren, she likes to make them extra especially big birthday cinnamon rolls, which are usually expected.

Stewart also makes them for her neighbors, gatherings and hospitals.

Her recipe has appeared in a cookbook that the Mary and Martha Missionaries group at Briarwood Church put together.

In order to encourage students to attend Sunday school at the church, she has also made them her rolls and has also shown students in a home economics class how to make them.

Aside from the cook book the church group had, she has thought of writing her own recipe book. And, in addition to that, she would like to write a book about her life.

"I've seen a lot of miracles and a lot of hard times," said Stewart.

"I have a lot of good messages to give out."

She has written several poems and being a religious person, she usually writes on a religious note. Stewart wrote a song which is also a poem called, "The Hem of His garment," which is based on the Biblical character who touched Jesus' robe and through her faith was healed.

"I write poetry but I put it to music," she explained.

"I felt the Lord wanted to tell me something," she said. "Nobody knew I read those words day and night."

Gladys Stewart with her cinnamon rolls

The song originally came to her in 1964 during some trials in her life but it wasn't until 1973 that she actually sat down to write it. God, she feels, gave her the experiences first before the writing of the song.

A music teacher helped her write the notes and the song was later copyrighted.

Stewart said she like to sing this particular song to encourage others in her life about God.

"It let's them know He's real." She also wrote a poem about Desert Storm called "On the Desert Sand."

"I wake up with words going through my head," said Stewart about her poetry which she feels is God given and which she likes to write for her children and grandchildren.

"To me, my children are the greatest blessing He (God) sent to me," said Stewart.

Stewart does not consider herself an accomplished musician though she sang in a few church choirs and once was a member for a couple of years of the Marie Hettick Orchestra in Amarillo.

She usually get a little help writing music for her poetry from her son-in-law who is band director and her daughter who is an educated musician.

Wartime deciphering helped us nip Nippon

By NORMAN N. BROWN
Associated Press Writer

"Ultra in the Pacific" is John Winton's thrilling true adventure that tells how the breaking of Japanese codes influenced the fighting in the Pacific during World War II.

Although history's greatest naval war has been chronicled exhaustively, as has the subject of wartime cryptography, "Ultra in the Pacific" is not a tedious reiteration of either.

Winton, a British naval veteran, historian and novelist, provides an excellent account of how U.S. and British naval operations were affected by foreknowledge of Japanese plans.

Such foreknowledge was acquired through painstaking efforts over a number of years by a group of dedicated individuals whose story has been told fully elsewhere and is only briefly mentioned here.

Since mid-1941, the capability to read Japanese radio traffic, specifically that of the army and navy, was given the code name "Ultra."

Winton mentions early on that the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor was not so much a result of a lack of clues to Japanese intentions to go to war as it was a failure to evaluate and properly disseminate this information to the appropriate naval and military commands.

Winton describes how the interception and interpretation of enemy radio traffic was organized and quickly unified, and how it improved during the war years to achieve an extremely high degree of efficiency.

Though the different naval actions may be familiar subjects to many readers, several details of extreme interest are brought to the fore: how the U.S. Navy identified the Midway Islands as the intended target of a Japanese naval attack through a clever intelligence ruse; how many thrusts intended by the Japanese as diversionary moves were ignored by the Americans, who knew where the main blow was really going to fall; and how three Japanese submarines were sunk on consecutive days and nights because radio intercepts had revealed their intended positions to their U.S. and British counterparts.

"Ultra in the Pacific" will appeal to military buffs and also provides an entertaining and informative introduction for readers not well acquainted with its subject.

Despite probation, Slocum optimistic

HOUSTON (AP)—Even though Texas A&M is on NCAA probation and can't play in televised games and bowls, coach R.C. Slocum remains optimistic about the upcoming season.

"We've got 25 highly recruited guys coming here (this fall). This is not a program with a cloud," Slocum said.

Last year, the NCAA imposed the sanctions for the 1994-95 season, punishment stemming from 1992 reports that A&M booster Warren Gilbert of Dallas had paid several A&M players for work not performed at his apartment complexes.

And even though no one will see them on television, the Aggies will look much different than last year's 10-2 team. They lost their entire defensive line, and guard Calvin Collins is the only returning starter on the offensive line.

"We probably have more rebuilding to do than at any time since I've been here," said Slocum, 49-12-1 in five years.

Last year's coaching staff also has been shaken up.

U.S. in waiting game for second-round World Cup berth

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

After losing its biggest World Cup game, the United States was left to play a waiting game.

It could end as early as Tuesday or as late as Thursday. It could have been much easier.

Romania beat the Americans 1-0 Sunday, winning Group A and leaving the U.S. team in third place. Only the four best third-place teams will advance to the second round. While the United States still is in good shape to get a berth, it figures to find tournament favorite Brazil or defending champion Germany as its opponent.

"We wanted to play a team like Brazil or Germany," U.S. goalkeeper Tony Meola said, "but wanted it to be in the semifinal."

Teammate Tab Ramos thought the Americans got carried away with their success after tying Switzerland and beating Colombia. He said overconfidence did them in at the Rose Bowl as much as Romania, which got a goal from Dan Petrescu in the 18th minute and held the lead.

"We thought we were going to go forward and beat this team, forgetting they're a better team than we are," Ramos said.

Switzerland got second place despite losing 2-0 to Colombia, which became the first team eliminated from the tournament.

"A draw or a loss, we still finish second in the group," Switzerland coach Roy Hodgson said. "There's no use crying too much over that..." Bulgarians were crying tears of joy after their first World Cup victory in six trips to the soccer championship. Star Hristo Stoichkov had two goals on penalty kicks as Bulgaria routed Greece 4-0, the second loss by that score for the Greeks in the event.

Today, Group C concludes with Germany against South Korea at Dallas and Spain vs. Bolivia at Chicago.

At Pasadena, Calif., in temperatures that reached 120 degrees on the field, Romania seemed comfortable enough. Petrescu finished off a terrific series of passes after the U.S. defense overplayed toward left wing. Meola appeared out of position as Petrescu put the ball between the goalie and the post on the near side in the 18th minute.

"From that angle, I don't think anybody thought he would shoot," Paul Caligiuri said. "I don't think anybody got on to Tony at all after that goal. All we talked about at halftime was how we were going to score."

But they never did. The Americans will be without midfielder John Harkes, who received his second yellow card of the first round and will be suspended for the second round. If there is a second round for them.

It will take a series of improbable results in the other five groups to keep them from advancing.

"Before the World Cup began, if anyone had predicted we'd get four points, no one would have believed them," defender Fernando Clavijo said. "So we have something to be very happy about."

So, of course, do the Swiss. And every team should be relieved that Colombia, a pre-tournament favorite, didn't get things going in time.

"Yes, unfortunately," agreed Colombian forward Faustino Asprilla. "We played very poorly in the first two games. However, we played very well (Sunday) and demonstrated that we are a good team. And that's why our sorrow is greater."

Herman Gaviria and Harold Lozano scored for Colombia in the game at Stanford, Calif.

At Chicago, Bulgaria moved into contention for the next round and Greece made fans wonder how it became the only European team to go unbeaten in qualifying.

"In Bulgaria there is probably talk on the streets that we're going to the finals," said Zlatko Ivanov, who set up the third goal, by Jordan Letchkov. Daniel Borimirov added a last-minute goal on a rebound off a free kick.

Also, Cameroon goalkeeper Joseph-Antoine Bell, the leader of a players' rebellion that shook the team, quit the squad Sunday. Cam. room, whose players claim they have not been paid salaries or bonuses by the soccer federation, plays Russia on Tuesday.

"I decided it might give the team more peace if I don't play anymore," Bell said. "There are too many people who have nothing to do with the team around it."

While Norman gets attention, Frost gets win at Hartford

By CHRISTINE HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — After being paired with Greg Norman in the first round of the Greater Hartford Open, David Frost said he felt he was being overlooked by the fans.

He was the center of attention Sunday when he edged Norman by a stroke to capture the tournament.

Still, Frost, who played behind the PGA Tour's top moneywinner in the final round, said he understood why the crowd was pulling for Norman.

"He's the number one player in the world. He's the kind of guy people love to come out and see. He draws the crowds, whether he's in the United States, Australia or Japan," Frost said.

"I have a lot of respect for him to be able to play as much good golf as he does year in and year out."

Frost, who shot a final-round 69 for a 72-hole record 12-under-par 268, is the 24th different winner in 25 tournaments this year, with Nick Price being the only two-time winner.

Frost's 268 was the lowest score in the three years since the course at the Tournament Players Club at River Highlands was renovated. Price won with a 271 last year.

Frost's ninth career victory also frustrated Dave Stockton Jr.'s bid to make history with his father. Stockton Jr., who entered the final round tied for the lead at 11-under, shot a 72 and finished in a four-way tie for third at 271.

Dave Stockton won the Senior Players Championship at Dearborn, Mich., earlier Sunday by six strokes. The Stocktons were trying to become the first father-son combination to win PGA events on the same weekend, and the first to win the same tournament. The elder Stockton won the GHO in 1974.

"I haven't talked to him yet," the PGA Tour rookie said. "I heard he won by six strokes. I don't know what hole I was at, but I had a smile from ear to ear."

Frost's smile wasn't nearly as wide as he left the 17th tee. He lost a stroke after finding the pond with his 3-wood. After a drop, he hit an 8-iron to the green and two-putted for bogey.

"I made a bad swing on the tee," Frost said. "But there's not much else to say. I had a lot of shots to play with, and that was the worst that was going to happen."

After Norman's birdie-birdie finish, Frost's lead was down to one, but he made it stand up when he two-putted for par on 18.

Norman, who had dropped out of tie with Frost when he double-bogeyed 12, blamed the conditions at the hole for part of his problems there. He needed two extra strokes after a shot from a fairway bunker that he said was not raked properly landed in a greenside trap.

"I played 71 pretty good holes overall, but as far as I'm concerned, whoever raked the bunker at 12 should be fined, suspended or whatever it is," Norman said. "My ball ended up in a rut and was half-submerged."

"With this standard of golf, with everyone in agronomy doing a wonderful job of preparing the golf course, grass-wise, to leave a bunker in that state is disgraceful as far as I'm concerned."

Frost was then ahead by two strokes, but lost one when he followed with a bogey of his own at 12 when his shot from the sand caught the lip of the trap and left him in the rough. Frost said he lucked out with just a bogey, leaving him with a lead he never relinquished.

"That was big," Frost said. "I got a good lie in the rough and hit a 7-iron to about five feet. I could have so easily double-bogeyed. I just lucked out with the lie. But when you win a golf tournament, you get the breaks."

Corey Pavin, Steve Stricker and Dave Barr shared third with Stockton.

In the early going, it was mostly a three-way race involving Stockton, Frost and Norman. Stockton and Frost were both at 12-under until Stockton bogeyed No. 6 to fall a stroke back.

Rangers' lead slips in West

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — It's two weeks until the All-Star break, but all the Texas Rangers and California Angels could talk about is the pennant race.

"We're facing our biggest test now," said manager Kevin Kennedy of the Rangers, whose American League West lead was reduced to 1 1/2 games by a 4-3 loss Sunday. It was the Rangers' 10th defeat in 12 games.

"This was real big for us. It meant a two-game swing in the standings," said California left-hander Mark Langston, whose seven innings of solid work set up the victory.

"We knew this was an important series going in," Angels manager Marcel Lachemann said after his club took 2-of-3 from Texas. The pennant-race talk sounded proper until you look at the records. Texas is 33-40 and the Angels, just 1 1/2 games out, are 33-43.

At seven games below .500, the Rangers set a new low for a first-place team in major-league history. The previous low of six games below .500 was set earlier this season on several occasions by the Rangers.

"It's still a four-team race, and every game we play against a team in the division is important," Lachemann said.

On that count, the Angels are faring much better, with a record of 9-7 against the other AL West teams. Texas is 6-14.

The threesome of Jose Canseco, Will Clark and Juan Gonzalez lead the majors with 188 RBIs among them. However, Canseco (5-for-37), Clark (2-for-25) and Gonzalez (5-for-39) are all in a slump.

Clark's 0-for-4 performance occurred with men on base in each of his at-bats.

"We do miss him," Kennedy said. "If he goes into a slump like he has been, it hurts. But we know he'll come out of it."

Langston got tougher after being homer, his 10th, drew Dettmer into a 3-3 tie, which was undone when Tim Salmon led off the bottom of the eighth with his 16th homer.

Dettmer (0-2) remained winless in three major-league starts after he had posted a 34-6 record in three minor-league seasons.

Mark Leiter (4-4) retired all three men he faced in the eighth for the victory, with Joe Grahe pitching the ninth for his 12th save.

Despite the no-decision, Langston turned in his best effort of the season. He allowed seven hits and three runs, two earned, in seven innings while walking three and striking out nine, his season-high. Leiter added two strikeouts in his one inning, and Grahe ended the game by fanning Ortiz.

Giants, Bonds use Rockies as tune-up for return to L.A.

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The last time Barry Bonds and the San Francisco Giants played at Dodger Stadium, they lost the NL West race.

When they return to Los Angeles tonight, they get a chance to get back into the chase.

Bonds hit two homers and drove in five runs Sunday as the Giants beat the Colorado Rockies 8-1. Robby Thompson added three hits and scored three times in his first game back from the disabled list.

The victory left the Giants, expected by most experts to easily win the realigned NL West this season, in third place and 6 1/2 games behind Los Angeles. The Giants, struggling at 32-43, open a three-game set this evening in Los Angeles. They have not played at Dodger Stadium since they lost 12-1 on the final day of the 1993 regular season, costing them a chance to tie Atlanta for the division title.

"I was pushing to get back for the LA series," Thompson said. "It really didn't matter what I did. I would have taken an 0-for-4. It worked out that I got three hits."

In other games, Los Angeles topped Houston 5-4, Philadelphia held off Atlanta 9-8, Cincinnati routed San Diego 12-4, Florida downed Montreal 6-1, Pittsburgh defeated New York 7-3 and St. Louis beat Chicago 3-1.

Bonds hit a pair of two-run homers, connecting in the first and fifth innings against Greg Harris (3-8). Bonds, who has 19 home runs, also had an RBI single in the third.

"We won a game we had to," Bonds said.

Thompson, playing for the first time since he injured his right shoulder on May 8, hit the first pitch he saw for a double off the center-field wall. He hit the next pitch he saw for a double off the top of the fence in right-center.

"Barry is starting to swing good again," Giants manager Dusty Baker said, "and it's good to have Robby back. He gets three hits in his first game. It helps to have all the parts back."

John Burkett (5-6) shut out the Rockies on five hits for eight innings. Only three runners reached second base before Rod Beck relieved to start the ninth.

The game at Mile High Stadium drew 73,171. The Rockies set another major-league attendance record by drawing 217,009 for the three-game series, 105 more than Cleveland attracted for the final series at their old ballpark last season.

It was 97 degrees at game time and the temperature went to 104 by the sixth inning, breaking the previous record for the date in Denver of 98 degrees.

"The heat didn't bother us," Rockies manager Don Baylor said. "That was not the problem. Barry Bonds was the problem, along with Robby Thompson. At one time, they were 6-for-6, and that was pretty much the story."

Dodgers 5, Astros 4
Brett Butler hit a tiebreaking home run with two outs in the seventh inning, lifting Los Angeles over Houston.

Butler homered for the second straight day and has five this season, his most since hitting six for San Francisco in 1988. He also had two singles, making him 25-for-55 (.455) lifetime against Doug Drabek.

Drabek (10-4) was foiled in his bid to become the NL's first 11-game winner. Kevin Gross (7-4) got the victory and Todd Worrell went two innings for his sixth save in 11 chances.

Mike Piazza also homered for the second straight game for the Dodgers, giving him 17.

Phillies 9, Braves 8

Darren Daulton went 3-for-3 with a three-run homer and scored four times as Philadelphia beat visiting Atlanta.

Ryan Klesko hit his second home run of the game and David Justice hit a two-run shot in the eighth inning for the Braves.

Doug Jones got the last out of eighth and pitched the ninth for his league-leading 19th save. He has pitched 20 1-3 scoreless innings.

Toby Borland (1-0) went three scoreless innings for his first win in the majors. Steve Avery (5-2) had gotten no-decisions in his previous six starts.

Reds 12, Padres 4

Hal Morris had four hits and Kevin Mitchell hit his 19th home run, leading Cincinnati to its seventh win in eight games.

Morris' RBI single put the Reds ahead 5-4 and keyed a five-run sixth inning. Mitchell earlier matched his home run total from 1993, when he played only 93 games because of injuries.

John Roper (4-0) left for a pinch-hitter during the Reds' rally in the sixth off Jeff Tabaka (1-1) and a reliever. Tony Gwynn had two hits and scored twice for visiting San Diego.

Marlins 6, Expos 1

team and tied a club mark with 10 strikeouts as Florida won in Montreal.

Gardner (2-2) was activated from the disabled list before the game, having missed more than two weeks because of an injured groin. He gave up seven hits and walked one against the team that traded him after the 1992 season.

Gary Sheffield hit his 14th homer and scored twice and Chuck Carr doubled twice and singled. The Marlins stopped a five-game winning streak by Pedro Martinez (6-4). Wil Cordero homered for the Expos.

Pirates 7, Mets 3

Paul Wagner blanked New York before tiring in the ninth inning and visiting Pittsburgh won its sixth in a row.

Wagner (5-5) took a four-hitter into the ninth, then gave up four hits and three runs.

Brian Hunter and Al Martin homered off Bobby Jones (7-7). Jay Bell, Keff King and Dave Clark each had three of the Pirates' 16 hits.

Cardinals 3, Cubs 1

Rick Sutcliffe, who won the Cy

Young Award for the Cubs in 1984, won in his first game back at Wrigley Field in three seasons.

Sutcliffe (4-3) gave up one run on four hits in six innings. It was his first win against Chicago since 1979, when he pitched for Los Angeles.

Rene Arocha, the fourth St. Louis pitcher, worked the ninth for his sixth save.

Luis Alicea hit a two-run homer in the fourth off Steve Trachsel (6-5). Alicea singled in the seventh and scored on a wild pitch by Jim Bullinger.

Yankees disrupt Indians' dream summer; Twins continue streak

By TOM WITHERS
Associated Press Writer

The biggest baseball weekend Cleveland has seen in 40 years looked like most of the others — it rained and the Indians lost.

This was supposed to be the weekend the Indians showed off their new ballpark to the dreaded New York Yankees, the last AL team to visit Jacobs Field.

Cleveland came into the three-game series riding a club record 18-game winning streak at home and had their fans reminiscing of 1954 when the Indians won 111 games and played in the World Series.

Two wins by the Yankees and the weekend-long rain took care of that. New York blew most of an eight-run lead Sunday but held on for a 12-11 victory over the Indians, the Yankees' sixth straight over Cleveland this season and their eighth in a row, dating back to last year.

On Friday night, the Yankees built a 9-5 lead before the game was suspended following nearly three hours of rain delays. The two teams finished up Saturday — an 11-6 New York victory — before the regularly scheduled game was rained out.

The battle of the AL East and Central division leaders was fairly one-sided to the Yankees, although the Indians did make things interesting by scoring seven runs in the from a couple of deficits and had a chance to win. It makes me proud to be a part of this," said Indians manager Mike Hargrove, who was ejected in the third inning after Cleveland starter Jack Morris got upset with the work of home plate umpire Rick Reed.

Jim Leyritz and Mike Stanley homered for New York. Elsewhere in the American League, it was Chicago 8, Seattle 7; and Baltimore 7, Toronto 1.

Twins 11, Royals 4
At Minneapolis, Kirby Puckett surpassed Rod Carew as Minnesota's career hits leader and drove in three runs for the Twins. Puckett had three hits, giving him 2,088 in 11 seasons with the Twins. He moved past Carew, who had 2,085 hits in 12 seasons with Minnesota.

Puckett passed Carew with a two-run homer, his 12th, in the first inning, a 438-foot shot over the center-field fence.

The Twins have won 19 of their last 23 at home.

Scott Erickson (7-5) improved to 5-0 in the Metrodome this season. Mike Magnante (2-3) was the loser.

hits, giving him 2,088 in 11 seasons with the Twins. He moved past Carew, who had 2,085 hits in 12 seasons with Minnesota.

Puckett passed Carew with a two-run homer, his 12th, in the first inning, a 438-foot shot over the center-field fence.

The Twins have won 19 of their last 23 at home.

Scott Erickson (7-5) improved to 5-0 in the Metrodome this season. Mike Magnante (2-3) was the loser.

Nilsson's two-out single off reliever Chris Howard drove in B.J. Surhoff.

Jamie Navarro (3-6) struck out the only batter he faced for the victory. Mike Fetters pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Tim Vanegmond (0-1) gave up five earned runs and five hits in 7 2-3 innings in his major league debut.

Athletics 10, Tigers 5

At Oakland, Calif., Troy Neel hit a two-run single and Mike Bordick's two-run double highlighted Oakland's seven-run first inning.

The A's swept the three-game series and have won 10 of their last 12.

Agassi gone, four U.S. women advance in Wimbledon play

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras, yet to lose a set in four matches, powered his way into the Wimbledon quarterfinals today, and Todd Martin thwarted a comeback bid by former champion Andre Agassi.

Michael Chang routed French Open champion Sergi Bruguera in a battle of baseliners, and four American women — led by Martina Navratilova — also charged into the quarterfinals. Navratilova, in her farewell Wimbledon at age 37, beat Helena Sukova 6-1, 6-2, slamming an ace on match point to move a step closer to her 10th title.

Sampras defeated Daniel Vacek of the Czech Republic 6-4, 6-1, 7-6 (7-5) in only 87 minutes, the third time the defending champion was able to win a match in less than an hour and a half.

Martin, the No. 6 seed, reached the quarterfinals for the second straight year by beating Boris Becker 6-4, 7-6 (7-0), 4-6, 6-1 victory over Agassi, the No. 12 seed. Agassi, who won the title in 1992, had the crowd on its feet as he won the fourth set. But Martin bore down in the fifth, winning the last game at love.

Chang, a former French Open champion seeded 10th, dominated the eighth-seeded Bruguera 6-4, 7-6 (9-7), 6-0 to get past the fourth round for the first time in seven Wimbledon.

Chang will play Sampras in the quarterfinals, and Martin will play unseeded Wayne Ferreira of South Africa, who beat Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden 6-3, 6-7 (7-2), 6-4, 6-3.

American Bryan Shelton, playing his third consecutive five-setter, finally ran out of magic and lost to Sweden's Christian Bergstrom 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 10-8. Shelton's only easy match was his first, a straight-sets upset of second-seeded Michael Stich.

Lori McNeil, who upset top-seeded Steff Graf in women's first-round play, outlasted Florenca Labat of Argentina 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-4) to make the quarterfinals here for the first time since 1986.

Two other American women reached the quarterfinals for the first time. Ninth-seeded Lindsay Davenport, playing only her second Wimbledon, routed No. 10 Gabriela Sabatini 6-1, 6-3; and Gigi Fernandez, in her 10th try here, beat Yayuk Basuki of Indonesia 6-4, 6-1.

Sapras hammered 18 aces against the 51st-ranked Vacek, raising his four-match total to 89.

Asked if he was a notch above the rest of the competition, Sampras didn't retreat into modesty.

"I've been very consistent this year," he said. "I feel whenever I step out on the court, if I play my tennis, I'm very tough to beat."

In another men's fourth-rounder, unseeded Wayne Ferreira of South Africa became a first-time Wimbledon quarterfinalist, beating Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden 6-3, 6-7 (7-2), 6-4, 6-3.

In a late match, three-time champion Boris Becker faced No. 9 seed Andrei Medvedev.

Jana Novota, tearful loser to Graf in last year's final, advanced with a 6-3, 6-3 win over Naoko Sawamatsu of Japan.

Larisa Neiland, playing in her 11th Wimbledon, joined Davenport and Fernandez as a first-time quarterfinalist. The 27-year-old Latvian rallied past Amanda Coetzer of South Africa 1-6, 6-3, 6-4, and will play McNeil in the quarterfinals.

McNeil lost her first three service games in the 62-minute first set against Labat and was on the verge of being broken a fourth straight time to fall behind 2-5, but rallied from 0-40 to save the game.

"That was a big game, a big boost for me to come back and win," McNeil said. "It was a real fight out there."

McNeil, 30, is playing in her 11th Wimbledon. She lost to Hana Mandlikova in her only previous quarterfinal here in 1986.

Fernandez had advanced past the fourth round only once before in 36 Grand Slams, losing in the 1991 U.S. Open quarterfinals.

Davenport kept Sabatini on the defensive as the Argentine extended a two-year drought with no tournament titles.

Report: Space junk imperils space station

NEW YORK (AP) - Space junk - some the size of a school bus - could destroy a planned international space station, The New York Times reported today.

But the National Aeronautics and Space Administration says it can reduce the odds of a space station crash with junk that's circling the earth.

The overall risk of a disaster that would end in death or the destruction of a space station is estimated at roughly one chance in 10 over the station's construction and expected 10-year life, the Times said.

"We'll do whatever is necessary to get adequate safety," NASA Administrator Daniel S. Goldin said. "If we need more shielding, we'll put more up."

But he added: "We'll never be able to guarantee total safety."

Discarded space junk, including shattered rocket stages, dead satellites and other discarded objects placed in space over the years, is rising at the rate of 2 percent to 5 percent a year.

About 7,000 such objects, some about the size of a baseball, others as big as a school bus, have been tracked by the U.S. military.

A design engineer told the Times that the problem was being played down by bureaucrats. The engineer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that under traditional design philosophy standards, the chance for a catastrophic risk should be a few percent, not 10 percent.

The United States, Canada, Europe and Japan have long been partners in the project, and Russia joined recently. Washington's share of the cost would be $43 billion.

The station's six-member international crew will study the heavens, Earth and human reaction to weightlessness to prepare for long trips to Mars and even farther.

Assemble flights are to begin in 1997, and the station is scheduled to be in operation in 2002.
