SANTA FE, Texas (AP) — The nude body of a Santa Fe woman has been found in a field two days after she was abducted from a bar parking lot by a man dressed as a rodeo clown.

Authorities said the body of Melissa Sue Cavender, 33, was found early Tuesday near Kiddo Tacquard Ranch Road in rural west Galveston County after the man charged in her death led authorities to the scene. Timothy John Smith, 25, of Santa Fe, was being held in the Galveston County Jail in lieu of $40,000 bond after he was charged with murder. The cause of death was not immediately determined, but officers said she had suffered a head injury. There were no knife or bullet wounds.

An autopsy was conducted by the Galveston County medical examiner's office.

HOUSTON (AP) — Thousands of inmates in the Harris County Jail will soon be transferred to state prison, a move that will bring the lockup's population below a federally mandated level for the first time in more than a year.

State prison officials, in a letter to Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay, said new prison capacity will allow more than 3,200 inmates to be moved by the end of September. An estimated 2,000 felons should be out this month.

"This is something that we have been waiting for for a long time," Donald Lee, a Lindsay aide, said in Wednesday's editions of the Houston Chronicle. "State officials need to be congratulated because without their emergency response and their significant drawdown, a summer disaster loomed."

Faced with its own constraints, the state has been taking only 500 to 700 felony inmates from the jail each month, while the county locks up an average of 900 more people during that time, Lee said.

Recently, the backlog had been growing at a rate of about 400 a month, and state officials managed to keep it under control by sending some prisoners to contract jails in other counties.

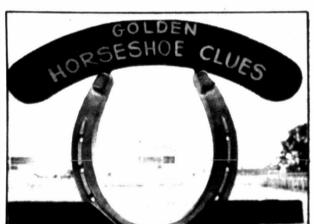

FORT WORTH (AP) — A judge has refused to grant a temporary injunction sought by a Texas Weslevan University law student to delay his graduation until the school receives provisional accredita-

Donald Brandt Jr. had asked in a lawsuit that the school be barred from graduating him until after Aug. 9, when the American Bar Association is expected to give the school provisional accreditation.

Visiting Judge Ted Akin refused to grant the injunction Tuesday following a court hearing at Dallas.

The judge said that ABA guidelines require the university to graduate students within a "reasonable" length of time after the student completes the courses.

Akin noted that Brandt completed the courses in May 1993. The student had argued that he hoped to someday practice law in Colorado and that it would be difficult to get licensed if his degree was from an unaccredited law school.

The hunt continues for the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association's Golden Horseshoe. Today's clue can be found at a western store. Wednesday's clue can be found at a jewelry store. Tuesday's clue is located at Gattis Appliance and Electronics. Previous clues are located at National Bank of Commerce, Larry Baker Plumbing, Watson's Feed and Garden, Northgate Inn, Alco Discount Store and C.J. Johnston Allstate Insurance. Persons seeking the horseshoe must enter the businesses to get the clues. The person finding the hidden horseshoe must bring it to the Top O' Texas Rodeo office, 200 N. Ballard, to claim the prize, a box seat to all three performances of the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

More firefighters die in Western blazes

SILVER CITY, N.M. (AP) — Spirits were down and flags at half staff at Gila National Forest firefighting headquarters after three people died in a helicopter crash in the rugged mountains of southwest New Mexico.

The crash also injured two. The dead apparently included the pilot, a California man ferrying four firefighters between blazes when the helicopter went down Tuesday, said Gila National Forest spokesman Chuck Tonn.

Authorities still weren't identifying the victims or survivors late this morning. The cause of the crash wasn't immediately known, but officials said the helicopter had been contracted from Briles Wings and Helicopter of California. The city wasn't immediately

Except for the California man, the victims were employees of the Gila National Forest, fire spokesman Jim Paxon said at a news conference

Paxon said the helicopter lost radio contact with the base around 3:30 p.m. Tuesday and crashed on a ridge of the Black Range crest at an altitude of about 10,000 "We have an aerial observation plane ... that passed

The two firefighters who survived the crash climbed up from the ridge, and another helicopter picked them up, he said.

Another area of concern has to do with funding the alternative project.

Officials blame paperwork for landfill expense has experienced unnecessary regulations and paperwork even on a relatively small project like getting a composting area approved.

Democratic criminal court candidate says public should care about crime

By JEFF CARRUTH Staff Writer

The Democratic candidate for a seat on the state's highest criminal court says the public needs to realize the significance of the Criminal Court of Appeals.

"It's really important if you care about crime ... It really affects our lives," Fort Worth prosecutor Betty Marshall said to a group of about 35 Gray County Democrats at a Tuesday evening covered-dish supper.

"I am and will be very tough on crime. But it also means I will be very fair, and I'm not going to judge someone on their religious convictions or the color of their skin," Marshall said. "We need a rule of law and

"If someone is convicted after a fair trial, it should stay that way ... Along with individual freedom comes individual responsibility."

Marshall said she has received numerous endorsements from Democratic and Republican district attorneys and sheriffs in this, her first political race. She has been endorsed by the Amarillo Police Officers Association and the conservative Women's Political Caucus.

Marshall's opponent in the race, Republican Sharon Keller of Dallas, even made a contribution to Marshall before she entered the race. "There's no way she can say I'm not qualified. She sent me money," Marshall said.

One way the Court of Criminal Appeals can make a difference is in upholding convictions which were previously thrown out based on a controversial interpretation of jury selection rules. In general, Breyer's first day went smoothly, with some of the most generous praise coming from Republicans, many of whom know him from his 1979-80 service as the committee's chief counsel.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said that when Breyer reaches the Supreme Court, "I am positive of one thing ... that you will not give our citizens mumbo jumbo, legal mumbo jumbo. You will give them justice."

At the close of the hearing, chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said, "I don't see anything - from the esoteric to the ethical - that has caused any red flags to go up" or would cause Breyer "difficult sledding" in the vote by the 18-member committee.

Breyer, chief judge of the First Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, surprised the committee Tuesday by including in his opening remarks an attempt to defuse allegations of a financial conflict of interest.

A millionaire, Breyer held substantial holdings in the Lloyd's of London insurance company in the 1980s while ruling in toxic waste cleanup cases in which Lloyd's and its investors, although not directly involved, potentially had a financial

"I am confident that my sitting on those cases did not represent any conflict of interest," said Breyer, 55. He said he was divesting himself of all insurance holdings and would try to expedite getting out of a contractual arrangement that would keep him a Lloyd's investor until 1995.

The hearing's most contentious moments came when Metzenbaum challenged Breyer's antitrust views, saying, "In too many cases, time after time ... you hold against the little guy, the small business person, the consumer. Breyer responded that "what antitrust is all about is getting low prices for consumers, not high prices, and getting better products for consumers, not worse products, and getting more efficient methods of production."

Grandmother says she'll return twins

HOUSTON (AP) - A woman who fled Texas with her orphaned twin granddaughters says she will return home with the girls as ordered, but she'll also continue fighting to gain legal custody of

A state judge had ordered Phyllis Schlaepfer Durichek to surrender the 6-year-old girls to a Minnesota couple last Friday, but she failed to make the deadline.

However, Mrs. Durichek contacted the Harris County District Attorney's office at noon Tuesday and said she would bring back Felicia and Natasha Schlaepfer within 24 hours.

"We anticipate that there will be a return," said prosecutor Cindy Merrill. If the girls are returned safely to Harris County, no charges are expected, she said.

Ms. Merrill would not say where Mrs. Durichek had called from or exactly when the children would be handed over.

But Houston television station KHOU reported Tuesday evening that the three were in West Memphis, Ark.

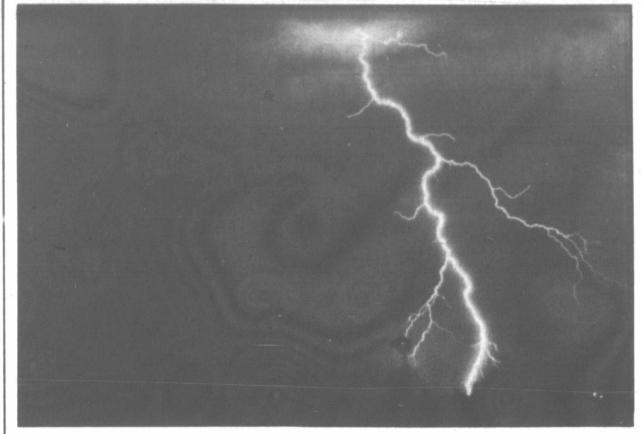

"For right now, I plan to take them on back," Mrs. Durichek told a KHOU reporter who interviewed her in West Memphis. "I love them, they love me and that's the only reason I'm bringing them back, because I don't want to do anything against the law." Although she plans to return with the children, Mrs. Durichek said she will keep trying to gain legal custody of them through the Minnesota

"They're blood of my blood, flesh of my flesh, my son's children," she said. "I'm going to fight because this can't be this way, turning them over to strangers."

Art doesn't require government funds

It is of course easy to pick on that deservedly maligned government sideshow called the National Endowment for the Arts. In case the name doesn't ring a bell, it's the federal sponsor of assorted fine arts as well as not-so-fine "art," like the nowinfamous crucifix that was immersed in a jar of urine, riling some lawmakers on Capitol Hill a few years back.

And lest we should forget just how galling it is that our tax dollars go to fund such stuff, the endowment has continued to oblige the public's indignation with more recent subsidies to oddities like a "performance" in Minneapolis last March by an HIV-infected man whose act involved slashing himself open, dabbing the blood with towels and then dangling the drippings over the audience.

Yet such federally funded pretensions toward "culture," however offensive to some and just plain idiotic to most of us, are really only symptoms of something much more fundamentally wrong with the endowment. As easy as it is to quibble with this cultural commissariat's taste, the real problem here is that there is such a thing as a government art endowment.

Accordingly, some of the more sensible members of Congress deserve credit for trying to eliminate the endowment's $171 million budget altogether. Needless to say, in a subculture like Washington that, by definition, leeches off of the rest of the country, the proposal to kill the NEA pork didn't get far. Perhaps it should cheer taxpayers that the House finally voted 222-204 simply to reduce the endowment's bloated budget by 2 percent in an apparent attempt to mollify endowment foes like conservative Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif.

Dornan certainly can be forgiven his frustration in exclaiming, "I can't comprehend the mystery of how these porno freaks keep getting this money."

But the underlying issue here isn't just that "porno freaks" get our money against our will; it's that the federal government is mixed up at all in funding art with our money when that isn't one of the government's limited duties.

There certainly are more conventional endeavors funded by the endowment and some of them likely enjoy broader acceptance as bona fide art. But it's simply not government's rightful place to anoint for all of society something as inherently subjective as its cultural standards. That should be left to the free marketplace of ideas - where demand is the best arbiter of

A bitter lesson in Americanism

At the June graduation exercises of Riverdale High School in Murfreesboro, Tenn., 18-year-old Kathryn Sinclair was one of four valedictorians. In addition to her 4.0 average, she had been accepted in the honors program in pre-med studies at East Tennessee State University - with a full scholar-

In recent months, Kathryn Sinclair had shown how to do that. In April, she was told that as a valedictorian, she would have to submit her speech to her if she took legal action. school officials for approval. It had to meet their ate area have such a policy.)

One afternoon, I was talking on the phone to reporter Amy Sutton, and she said that Dan Sinclair, Kathryn's father, had just told her he had received a threat to firebomb their home. And Kathryn heard from students that someone might stab her at the graduation.

The students were angry at her particularly because they were afraid she would spoil their graduation by saying something negative about the school. "And no one on the faculty," Kathryn Sinclair said, "has come out in my support." A number of them said she was making the school

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, July 13, the 194th day of 1994. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 13th, 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean Paul Marat was stabbed to death in his bath by Charlotte Corday. (The assassination inspired the famous painting by Jacques Louis David; Corday was executed four days after slaying Marat.) On this date:

In 1787, Congress enacted an ordinance governing the Northwest Territory.

In 1821, Confederate cavalry commander Nathan Bedford Forrest was born in Bedford County, Tenn. In 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City the violence resulted in about 1,000 deaths over three days. In 1878, the Treaty of Berlin amended the terms of the Treaty of

San Stefano, which had ended the Russo-Turkish War of 1877-78. In 1960, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy won the Democratic presidential nomination at his party's convention in Los Angeles.

Owen's Rhino Removal Service

If I introduce you to Owen Blickensderfer, it will be a memorable experience for you both.

Owen Blickensderfer quit his job as an airplane mechanic in Oklahoma to return to the family farm in Mott, N.D.

Fellow workers in Oklahoma reminded him that wheat farming in dryland North Dakota can be a hungry business, but Blickensderfer (yes, that is his name) explained that he intended to open a small business on the side.

He'd heard that a rhinoceros in the wild, coming upon a fire, will seek to trample and extinguish the fire. He imagined that a pet rhino attempting to trample an in-house fireplace might get himself stuck in

Since he was having to buy a trailer to move his furnishings, that trailer, he explained, would be adaptable to his new business: Owen's Rhinoceros

Removal Service. So much for the background of Blickensderfer's new business, now advertised regularly in the local paper in Mott. 'Should your pet rhino get stuck in the fireplace or chimney, we have the expertise

without a wrecking crew."

The ad notes that the Rhino Removal Service is equipped with block and tackle, especially designed harnesses, a five-gallon container of petroleum jelly and a customized rhino trailer.

(That's the trailer that moved the family furniture from Oklahoma.)

It was one of those grim days in the newsroom dominated by death, destruction and disputes when I saw Blickensderfer's ad and telephoned Mott. He was just getting his tractor out of the shed when his wife called him to the phone.

booming so far."

His newspaper ad has elicited some inquiries. One family wanted him to remove a cat lodged between interior walls, but Owen had explained that cats are not his specialty.

Local reaction?

"Some people who see me coming move to the other side of the street."

But worse, he says, are the people who keep asking, "How's business?" Because while the exotic pet craze seems to be mushrooming elsewhere, it has not yet swept North Dakota.

"It will," he is confident. "Rhinos, neutered and housebroken, are good companions for children, and they'll eat almost anything."

Meanwhile, he'll keep growing wheat, barley, oats - some sunflowers - to keep the family fed while he waits for his new business to take off.

Awaiting the future, the name of the business has been modified. Modestly, it is now called Owen's Pretty Good Rhino Removal Service.

While it is not yet what The Wall Street Journal would call a financially dynamic company, when "Oh, sure, Mr. Harvey, I have to keep farming the exotic pet craze gets to Mott, Owen Does price-controlled health care work?

Sometimes when I read The Washington Post, I just shake my head in disbelief. Other times, I just chuckle. And yes, there are even times when they get things right.

The got it right recently in an article about Canada's health-care system. For decades, liberals have been touting the Canadian "single-payer" system, with its price controls and health-care rationing, as a perfect model for the United States. Canada, after all, is similar to the United States in many ways: types of diseases contracted, the proportion of elderly within the total population, types of medical treatments and levels of medical technology.

By adopting a Canadian-style national healthinsurance plan, liberals have argued, the United States could cut costs and still retain our high quality of health care, which everyone agrees is the world's best. But as Paul Harvey might say, there's more to the story. We are asked, for example, to believe that price controls - a cornerstone of Canada's health-care system - can successfully cap runaway medical costs. But guess what? After 30 years of price controls, our neighbor to the north has the world's second most expensive health-care sys-

Thanks to rising health-care costs, Canada's federal deficit as a proportion of its annual budget is far based on Canada's failed system. They have greater than even our own. prices? As The Washington Post recently proclaimed, "Canada's Vaunted Health Care System Limiting Coverage, Reducing Services."

Even before they were reduced, those services were given to patients on the basis of quotas - not on the basis of need. This is why Canada's citizens face ever-longer waits for needed surgery. For example, in 1992, some 260,000 Canadians had to wait months for major surgery. If a similar proportion of our own population were on such waiting lists, we'd be talking about 2.6 million people, greater than the population of San Diego.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) Sex in space has proved successful for the Japanese Medaka fish aboard shuttle Columbia.

Scientists expect the experiment to help them design spaceborne fish farms, which one day might provide astronauts with an alternative to freeze-dried food on long trips, such as to Mars.

Four adult Medaka – two male and two female - were sent into space for Columbia's two-week laboratory research mission to see if they would mate successfully in weightlessness.

They have, producing at least a dozen eggs in the first four days of the flight. The eggs are expected to hatch late this week or early next.

The shuttle also brought 340 Medaka eggs on board before blasting into orbit. At least four of them have since hatched, and one tiny newborn is already swimming.

Meanwhile, six Japanese goldfish are being studied for clues to motion-sickness in space. Five of them have had gravity-sensing organs in their inner ears removed in hopes of clarify the relationship between the organs and the malady suffered by about half of all astronauts.

Columbia, set to return home July 22, also is swimming with red-bellied newts, 126 jellyfish and 11,200 baby sea urchins. In all, the seven astronauts are helping researchers back on Earth with more than 80 experiments.

Most aren't very glamorous. "We cannot possibly hope to compete with the goldfish and the Medaka, but we will try," joked Julian Szekely, a Massac Institute of Technology researcher studying the viscosity and surface tension of molten metals.

Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater, who last year proposed lifting the military's ban on homosexuals, is urging Congress to approve legislation protecting gays against job discrimination.

Associated Press Writer

"Job discrimination excludes qualified individuals, lowers workforce productivity and eventually hurts us all," the former Arizona senator said in a column published today by The Washington Post.

"Topping the new world order means attracting the best and creating a workplace environment where everyone can excel," he wrote.

Goldwater, one of the country's and state. most conspicuous conservatives, surprised some when he urged the government to lift the ban against gays in the military in a June 1993 Post opinion piece.

"You don't need to be 'straight' to fight and die for your country," he said then. "You just need to shoot

In today's article, Goldwater, the 1964 Republican presidential candidate against Lyndon Johnson, argues in support of a bipartisan coalition in Congress that has proposed legislation outlawing job discrimination against homosexuals.

*Congress is waking up to a reality already recognized by a host of Fortune 500 companies, including AT&T, Marriott and General Motors, he said. "These business have adopted policies prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation because

"It's not just bad - it's bad business," he said.

It also adds to the welfare rolls,

Goldwater said. "In urban and rural communities, hatred and fear force good people from productive employment to the public dole - wasting their talents and the taxpayers' money.' In the essay, Goldwater speaks out against the radical right, but assures the public he's still a conservative Republican who believes in democracy and the separation of church

'The conservative movement is founded on the simple tenet that people have the right to live life as they please, as long as they don't hurt anyone else in the process," he said.

"No one has ever shown me how being gay or lesbian harms anyone

Goldwater, who has publicly discussed his grandson's homosexuality, also challenged the consistency of those who support booting gays out of the military but say they're opposed to discrimination.

'Last year, many who opposed lifting the ban on gays in the military gave lip service to the American ideal that employment opportunities should be based on skill and performance. In civilian life, they'd never condone discrimination," he said.

"Well, now's their chance to put up or shut up."

DEAR ABBY: I am an intelligent 30-year-old woman. My husband's 26-year-old sister, Susan, and I are equal partners in a small dress shop.

-Two young boys — no older than 14 — came into our shop. One pointed a gun at us. The gun did not look real, but who wants to take a chance? We had only $35 and some change in the cash register. Had it not been for the gun, Susan and I would have been a match for them. One of the boys dangled two shoelaces and wanted to tie our hands. I figured it would take about two minutes to break the laces, and nobody would get hurt — in case the gun was real.

Well, Susan got real steamed and was ready to crown them, but I told her to relax. They tied our hands behind our backs and told us to wait five minutes. Boy, was I suckered! Two seconds later, these kids whipped out two rolls of duct tape, and, before we could pop the shoelaces binding our hands, our mouths were taped and we were bound hand-andfoot, then dragged into a dressing room. It was two hours before a customer came and released us.

Abby, Susan is furious with me. She says we were patsies to allow a couple of punks to humiliate us; we should never have let them tie our hands in the first place, etc. I didn't enjoy being tied up either, but I think my judgment was
