AMARILLO (AP) - A Florida man has been sentenced to life in prison for killing a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper last year.

County OKs funds for Lefors Volunteer Emergency Services

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS News Editor

Gray County commissioners today voted unanimously to transfer $26,000 from Highland General Hospital funds to Lefors Volunteer Emergency Services to cover about half the items on a list of emergency gear, radios and repairs costs which chief Eddie Joe Roberts deems essential for the service to continue its work in 1994.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business inventories rose 1.1 percent in May, the largest increase in nearly seven years, the government said today.

The larger-than-expected gain was the fourth advance in the first five months of the year and the biggest since inventories rose 1.3 percent in October 1987, the Commerce Department said.

Inventories were up 0.6 percent in April after falling 0.2 percent in March, their only decline this year.

The Commerce Department said inventories totaled a seasonally adjusted $884.8 billion, up from $875 billion in April.

The department also said business sales were up 0.2 percent after falling 0.4 percent in April.

Sales rose to a seasonally adjusted $626.4 billion from $625.1 billion a month earlier. The April decline had been only the second in the last 10 months.

The inventory-to-sales ratio was up 0.1 percent to 1.41, from 1.40 in April. That means it would take 1.41 months to exhaust stockpiles at the May sales rate. The increase in the ratio returned it to the same level as February.

The ratio is viewed as a positive sign, since further growth in sales likely would translate into new orders to replenish empty shelves and backlots.

Rodeo

Following the bull riding, the rodeo clowns took over the arena as the bull fighting portion of the program began.

The object of the competition between the three clowns in Thursday night's performance was to perform the most daring stunts as possible with a bull. Creativity by the clowns as well as fast feet are essential in scoring well.

Veteran rodeo clown Greg Rumohr, the first of the clowning competitors to compete Thursday night, scored 80 points, outdistancing his fellow clowns by four or less points.

Tonight's rodeo action begins at 8 p.m. and follows a free watermelon feed for all ticket holders which starts at 6 p.m. Parking at the rodeo arena, which is located at Recreation Park east of Pampa, is free and plentiful.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, in an address to American Medical Association leaders, rebuked the White House and its allies for the attack on Kansas-based Pizza Hut. Making the firm buy health insurance would drive prices up to $20 a pizza, he asserted.

Separately, Dole told reporters he may try to derail a new world trade agreement if Clinton keeps attacking the GOP on health care. He said Clinton's new chief of staff. Leon Panetta, had asked for a "political timeout" to push the new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade through Congress.

Man says he killed victims in self defense

HOUSTON (AP) - A Houston man arrested in Mexico in connection with the execution-style slayings of four people here told a San Antonio newspaper that he shot the victims in self-defense.

Jonathan Lee Wingate, 22, and Idolina Corkill Escamilla, 25, both of Houston, were arrested Thursday outside a hotel in Matamoros, Mexico, said Harris County Sheriff's Lt. Bert Diaz.

The pair are charged with capital murder in connection with the shooting deaths last Sunday of four people at a northeast Houston home.

Wingate, an ex-convict, and Ms. Escamilla knew the victims, Diaz said

Wingate sometimes worked for one of the victims, who was an electrical contractor.

Wingate, interviewed by the San Antonio Express-News in his jail cell, said he shot the four in selfdefense, in what he was quoted as saying was a "drug deal that went sour.'

But Wingate's story is full of inconsistencies because he was trying to protect Ms. Escamilla, his girlfriend, investigators said.

For instance, Wingate describes shooting three men and a woman. The victims were two women and two men.

Wingate said he worked for Rebecca "Dusty" Shepherd for about two months, and had made a deal to sell her a pound of marijuana

While Ms. Escamilla went into the house Sunday to make the delivery, Wingate said he waited outside where a man approached him and reached for his gun. The two struggled for it. "I got it first," Wingate said.

After shooting the first man, Wingate said, he went after Ms. Escamilla.

"I went into the house to get my cousin out, and then Dusty pulled a gun on me," he said. "I shot her.

"Then another one (man) came from behind a curtain, and I shot him.'

Wingate said the last victim, a man sitting on a sofa, "reached under a pillow like he was going for another gun, and I shot him." Authorities said two of the victims were found lying face down, shot in the back of the head. They said two were shot with a high-caliber rifle and two others with a small-caliber handgun. "They (victims) were definitely shot with two weapons," Diaz said in today's editions of the Houston Chronicle. "He's trying to take the rap for his girlfriend." Diaz also questioned another aspect of Wingate's story.

Senate panel OKs space station funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate appropriators have agreed to set aside $2.1 billion for the space station next year, providing the full amount sought by the Clinton administration.

Both the Senate Appropriations Committee and its subcommittee that allocates money for veterans, housing and space programs signed off Thursday on the full funding for the orbiting laboratory.

The two panels' actions cement what has become an increasingly smooth march through Congress for a program that came within one vote of termination last year.

The House last month issued a hearty endorsement of the $30 billion program, rejecting an attempt to terminate the program on a 278-155 vote.

"The Senate Appropriations Committee has given NASA and the space station program a vote of confidence today, propelling America forward on a quest to remain on the cutting edge in the development of science and technology," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who sits on the committee.

Said fellow Texas Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison: "I am thrilled that we are going to get the full amount that we need to move this project forward."

The Appropriations Committee set aside $14.4 billion next year to fund NASA - slightly higher than the $14.1 billion approved last month by the House.

Once the Senate has approved its version of the veterans, housing and space appropriations package, House and Senate negotiators will meet to iron out differences in both measures.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Greenville Herald Banner on O.J. Simpson case: Have the people in this country gone mad?

The next time you feel the urge to blame the media for something gone haywire, keep in mind just who really wants to keep a frenzy fed.

We refer to all who are paying to take Hollywood tours in limos to O.J. Simpson's neighborhood. We point to all the people who spent their July 4 holiday weekend in front of the Simpson grounds trying to take pictures and catch glimpses of family members.

We suggest you look at the numbers of people glued to their television sets watching the pretrial hearings.

And, how about those people buying and selling O.J. Simpson and Nicole Brown Simpson "trading cards" and memorabilia. (Yes, even Simpson's mug shot complete with jail numbers has been turned into a card.)

We won't even mention the people who stood on the overpass during the infamous "chase" cheering on their "hero."

What we might have here is a classic example of which came first Q the chicken or the egg. Did the media coverage blow the whole story out of proportion or did the demand for media coverage create the problem?

In all fairness, many of the major newspapers at first tried to downplay the murders. But as Simpson became a central figure in the investigation the headlines got bigger and the story made its way to the top of the front page and became the lead on the news programs. .

We'll share some of the blame, but we won't accept it all. Generally, across the country the coverage has been well done and fair. And, for the most part people have maintained some decorum in following and reacting to the story. ...

El Paso Times on questioning employees about drug use:

Questions about past and present use of drugs and alcohol in employment application forms are now considered an invasion of privacy.

But that may not be the case for long if the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals gets its way. A three-judge panel ruled recently that such questions do not infringe on the worker's rights. The court's response was to a challenge filed by 12,000 Internal Revenue Service employees in Austin represented by their union. The decision affects 128,000 federal employees in Texas and could have ramifications for state agencies and private businesses

The Plannpa Neturs People do tend to get excited

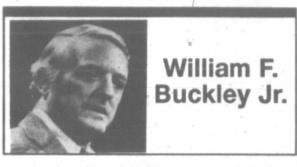

So the initial phase of the investigation into Whitewater tells us that indeed Vincent Foster died by his own hand. That ruling by investigator Robert Fiske was greeted with fireworks here and there, as if it were central to any serious questions involving Bill Clinton's behavior.

During the past year not one person has suggested in my presence that Foster was killed by someone else, though one doesn't dispute that the rumor floated about. So did the rumor that John F. Kennedy had already been married when he took Jackie, or that Lyndon Johnson sodomized his predecessor's corpse on Air Force One coming back ' from Dallas. Junk rumors were, are and will be, and the challenge is to develop an intelligent attitude toward them.

Anyone searching into the mystery of poor Vince Foster would be entitled merely to ask: Was his depression possibly related to any knowledge he had of White House affairs? That isn't an idle guestion

Clinton recently fired the Big Bertha against polemical irresponsibility. "They say," he said on Air Force One, referring specifically to Jerry Falwell and Rush Limbaugh, "that anybody that doesn't agree with them is godless, anybody who doesn't agree with them is fair game for any wild charge, no matter how false."

Compare: "Robert Bork's America is a land in which women would be forced into back-alley abortions, blacks would sit at segregated lunch counters, about evolution, writers and artists could be cen- and killed to hide the true story of Dallas 1963.

sored at the whim of the government, and the doors of the federal courts would be shut on the fingers of millions of citizens."

That is Sen. Edward Kennedy, 1987. It would require some high-distillation Falwell to come up with its equivalent. Teddy did not alienate Bill Clinton with his extremism.

E.J. Dionne Jr. of The Washington Post advises us that Falwell's Liberty Alliance is circulating a video called Circle of Power. It apparently includes a statement from Larry Nichols, a longtime adversary of Clinton in Arkansas, who says: "You may also wonder what it's been like fighting Bill Clinton. People are dead in Arkansas. Yeah. When I started this, I knew that I might be one of the unsolved mysteries."

That's irresponsible stuff. (At least I hope it is, because every now and then I find myself in Arkansas.) But Falwell's over-the-counter films are not to be compared with Oliver Stone's productions, which are put up for Oscars. In JFK, Stone instructrogue police could break down citizens' doors in ed tens of millions of Americans that the executive, midnight raids, schoolchildren could not be taught the Justice Department and the Supreme Court lied

A few years ago I had a telephone call from President Reagan. "You know, I get a lot of stuff, and you just have to put up with it," he complained. "But how do you like this, which I think is just too much: 'President Reagan is the nearest thing we've ever come to in America to fascism.' It's published by something called the National Catholic Reporter and written by someone called Alden Whitman. Do you know anything about them?'

I told the president that the bishop in Kansas City was suing to deny the Reporter the right to advertise itself as a Catholic publication, and that Alden Whitman, who wrote obituaries for The New York Times, was truculently opposed to any conservative.

Well, that made him feel better. But to my knowledge, nobody with any muscle in the critical community stepped forward to give Whitman or the Reporter four strokes of the cane.

Dionne correctly discerns a problem. It is that liberal enterprises, from Bill Clinton to the Anti-Defamation League, are engaged in attempted amalgamations, the purpose of which is to discredit authentic movements of protest. The cry word is "Houston 1992?" Any sound that recalls the rhetoric of the Republican Convention in Houston is denounced as irresponsible.

But there are many Americans who suffer from frustrations that trace to liberal objectives. They include broken families, pornography, lawlessness and the secularization of the schools. The rap song of liberal America is so thunderous it becomes possible even to imagine a judicial exoneration of O.J. Simpson. In such a mood, af such a time, people do get excited.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, July 15, the 196th day of 1994. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On July 15th, 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union. On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch painter Rembrandt was born in Leiden, Netherlands.

In 1916, Boeing Company, originally known as Pacific Aero Products, was founded in Seattle by William Boeing.

In 1918, the Second Battle of the Marne began during World War I. In 1948, President Truman was nominated for another term of office by the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

In 1958, President Eisenhower ordered U.S. Marines to Lebanon, at the request of that country's president. Camille Chamoun, in the face of a perceived threat by Muslim rebels.

Those workers should take their challenge all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court. Questions that deal with past drug abuse or mental problems are an invasion of privacy and should not be posed in a job application. Too many people who are trying to rebuild their lives have been hurt by such questions. In the case of the IRS, refusal to respond could result in not being hired or in information being turned over to the police. Convictions of drug felonies are another matter and should be disclosed. ...

But past drug abuse should not be used against an individual applying for a job. Too many qualified people would be barred from a market that desperately needs their services. And too many people who want to rebuild their lives would be condemned without a chance to try again.

No cause yet for celebration

Americans of the 1980s, in their misguided zeal to standardize equality, took children from one side of town and carried them by bus across town to another school in the name of race mixing.

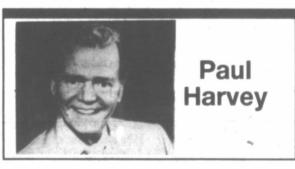

It didn't work. The busing was tedious, extravagant and dangerous. And those who could afford it just moved out of town. In Chicago alone, the system spent more than $1 billion "desegregating" schools, only to discover 10 years later that Chicago schools were more segregated than before.

Presently, after a decade of cross-town busing, barely 15 percent of Chicago students attend racially integrated schools.

A thousand new facilities could have been built with the wasted billion!

Magnet public schools, on the other hand, have been at least a partial step in the right direction. Although they are not all that their proponents would have you believe, they have offered an escape from the average "integrated" school by providing an enhanced curriculum for students who qualify.

Now, with President Clinton's backing, there's yet another movement at hand among the public educational system - charter schools.

Started in Minnesota in 1991, charter schools are institutions created by reform-minded teachers, parents and businesses seemingly in response to the private-voucher system proposed by conservatives. Originally designed to teach students and subjects cational arena. normally overlooked by our present system, charter school target those children who are better suited to child's education. a less conventional program. was established to reach dropouts, others were created to teach low-income students, one services the deaf, another encourages entrepreneurship and a recently proposed school in Morton, Minn., will teach Dakota Indians their native language.

And every child that attends a charter school carries with him $4,000 of state funding.

Understandably, that loss of money - coupled with the stipulation that unions and local school boards have no control over the new schools - has left administrators, local politicians and teachers' unions radically opposed to the "Johnny Come Latelys."

Despite President Clinton's support of the project, despite local opposition to the project, what should we think of charter schools?

Now it's the Democrats' turn to be hawks

WASHINGTON - This time, the hawks tend to be Democrats and liberals, ready for U.S. military intervention now or soon to oust the generals running Haiti. What's more, they're arguing that President Clinton should act on his own, one Democrat saying he need not be guided by Congress or public opinion.

That is no small-role reversal after two decades of congressional efforts to rein the war-making power of presidents.

On Haiti, Republicans tried, unsuccessfully, to require that Clinton get congressional clearance GOP attempt to require advance congressional before any military action. Now their leaders argue that the military option shouldn't be foreclosed, but it shouldn't be used either.

While that's a switch, there is political logic to it with a Democrat in the White House. And the inconsistency is bipartisan anyhow. When William Gray III, Clinton's special envoy on Haiti, was reminded on a TV talk show that he and other liberal House members once opposed U.S. action against leftist dictatorships in Central America, he said his advice to the president is "based upon where we are in the Western Hemisphere in 1994, not '84, not '74."

The broader war powers issue went beyond party lines when Congress tried to define its role in the era of undeclared conflicts. That hasn't been done yet; the war powers resolution, enacted 21 years ago overriding a Republican veto, was meant to create a workable system, but it hasn't.

Walter Mears AP Special Correspondent

Clinton was as firm as his Republican predecessors in telling Congress not to unduly infringe on his presidential power to use U.S. forces when American interests are threatened.

He did so nine months ago, in blunting a Senate approval should he decide to send troops to Haiti.

Successive administrations have found it critical in world affairs to be able to state that no option has been ruled out," he wrote at the time.

Translated out of the diplomatic, that means presidents want to be able to threaten military action and make it believable. Clinton has been trying to do so on Haiti since 1993 as the administration seeks to oust the military regime there and restore the elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

He still is. "It certainly validates the position we've taken so far that that's an option we shouldn't rule out," Clinton said Monday after the Haitian regime ordered international human rights monitors out of the country.

Intervention ought to be Clinton's call alone, according to two leaders of the Congressional Black Caucus, which has been pressing for tougher steps. "I don't think that the Congress or popularity polls of people in the United States should guide what the president does," Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said in a TV interview. In another, he said invasion should not be a subject on which "we take polls and ask whether Americans or whether the Congress wants to put our boys and girls in harm's way.

The caucus chairman, Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., said invasion should be the last option, and one left "fully up to the president." Mfume said other options include a naval blockade or air strikes.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said the administration should try to push the military government out with economic sanctions for another 30 days and then either admit that it can't be done or move to the threat and possible use of military force. He said he doubted the sanctions would suffice.

In Florida, there's concern about a possible refugee flood that would worsen an already costly problem.

Rangel pointed to Grenada, Panama and Iraq as precedents for the use of U.S. force in recent times.

Those earlier invasions were under Republican presidents. The Persian Gulf War against Iraq was fought with the congressional approval George Bush sought but said he didn't really need because he had the power to act as commander in chief.

Democratic leaders disagreed then, as Republicans do now.

Keep the military option open in Haiti, said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind. Just don't use it. S 1. A.

Study: Virus causes blood vessels to close after treatment

By PAUL RECER AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some blood vessels treated with coronary angioplasty may become blocked again because of the action of a common human virus against a gene that normally prevents the formation of cancers, a new study suggests.

Scientists at the National Institutes of Health report today in the journal Science that cytomegalovirus may deactivate the cancerdefense gene and allow an overgrowth of smooth muscle cells inside arteries that have been opened by angioplasty, a procedure that uses an inserted balloon to clear clogged arteries.

Earlier studies have identified the gene, called p53, as one of the body's defenses against cancer. Studies have shown that the gene's normal function is to limit the growth of cells. Missing or deactivated p53 has been linked to many human cancers

Dr. Stephen E. Epstein, an NIH researcher, said the study in his lab should be considered only preliminary and not proof that the cytomegalovirus, or CMV, is the culprit in closing the treated arteries mechanism for restenosis (the re-closing of arteries) after angioplasty.'

"but the evidence does suggest this as a possible action.

However, Baylor College of Medicine virologist Dr. Joseph Melnick called the NIH study "fascinating" because it indicates a possible link between cancer and heart disease.

Patients with blocked arteries are treated with coronary angioplasty. In this procedure, a tube is threaded up an artery until it comes to a site that is healthy immune systems. blocked by a heart disease process. A collapsed balloon is then threaded up the tube and positioned at the blockage. The balloon is inflated and closed after angioplasty. In 23 of the patients, compresses the plaque material that caused the there was evidence that p53 had been inactivated, blockage. This allows blood to flow freely.

But in more than 25 percent of angioplasty patients, a blockage reforms at the treated site, often leading to the need for coronary artery bypass surgery.

The NIH team reasoned that the new blockage may be caused by an uncontrolled growth of smooth muscle cells like those in the artery wall. Angioplasty often causes a slight injury to the artery and the vessel then heals itself by growing new cells.

It is possible, said Epstein, that the injury somehow activates CMV particles that are present, but latent, in the artery. This wirus, he said, could "We aren't there yet (with proof)," he said, attach to p53 and then shut down the gene's nal of the American Association for the Advance-

When p53 is deactivated, said Epstein, smooth muscle cells repairing the artery are allowed to grow without restraint, forming a new blockage.

"There are a lot of theories about what causes this restenosis and ours is just one of them," said Epstein

CMV is a widespread and common virus that seldom causes disease in people with mature and

The researchers also looked for evidence of CMV. In 11 of 13 patients who had inactivated p53, the scientists found traces of the virus. This was true in only three of 11 patients who did not have inactivated p53, Epstein said.

Epstein said the study had too few patients to draw final conclusions. But the work "gives a hint" that CMV and p53 could play a role in atherosclerosis, a common type of heart disease that leads to narrowing and blockages of coronary arteries, he said.

Rwandan refugees sweeping into Zaire

By PAUL ALEXANDER Associated Press Writer

GOMA, Zaire (AP) - A tidal wave of Hutu refugees from Rwanda's civil war flooded across the border Thursday, swamping relief organizations and Zairean authorities in instant chaos.

An estimated 200,000 to 250,000 people poured past three overwhelmed checkpoints along the border by late afternoon. They balanced bundles of possessions and mattresses on their heads, carried babies on their backs and herded along reluctant goats and cattle.

Up to 1 million Hutus have been reported on the road to Zaire. They are fleeing advancing Tutsi rebels in fear the rebels want to avenge widespread massacres of minority Tutsis by extremist supporters of Rwanda's Hutu-dominated government.

There has been no evidence of reprisals for the massacres, which have been blamed for most of the estimated 200,000 to 500,000 deaths in the latest round of the civil war.

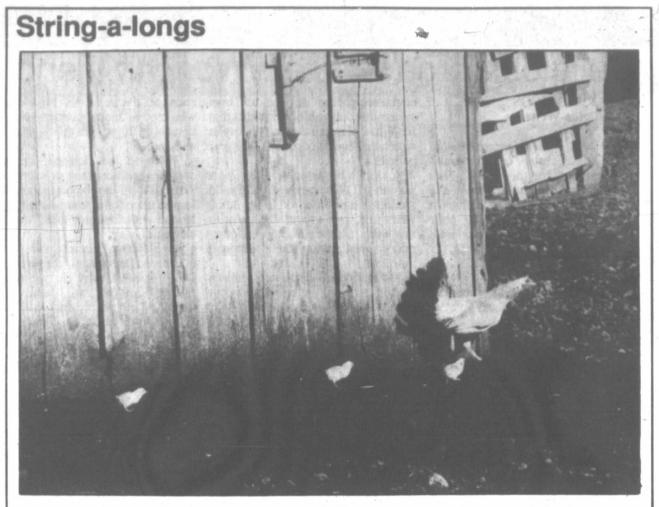

In what could be the largest exodus in history, 600 refugees crossed into Goma each minute at the peak of the flood Thursday, relief officials said. In the next few days, the number of refugees around Goma alone could reach 900,000, they said.

Goma was a dusty city of 20,000 people before Rwanda's war resumed in April, but now is home to more than 150,000 with scant water supplies despite being on the shore of Lake Kivu.

There was fear of trouble with local residents, who lined streets to watch the procession. Some shouted obscenities at the newcomers. Zairean soldiers confiscated machetes and knives from the refugees and confiscated the film of news photographers.

By afternoon the refugees filled four fields and a soccer stadium set aside for them, then started laying down mattresses, mats and tattered blankets anywhere they could find space. Smoke from cooking fires obscured the sky. A U.N. jeep led a column of refugees north toward open fields near the airport 2 1/2 miles outside town. An estimated 3 million people, out of a prewar population of about 7.5 million, have fled their homes in Rwanda, a mountainous Central African nation about twice the size of Connecticut. U.N. officials estimate 1.5 million to 2 million refugees are in western Rwanda alone. More than 500,000 have fled east into Tanzania, south into Burundi and north into Uganda. France said Thursday that 1 million refugees are crowded in the southwestern corner of Rwanda where its troops set up a sanctuary for civilians. It repeated its plea for urgent international help in caring for them.

The government in Paris also called for an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council to bring pressure for a cease-fire in Rwanda.

"It appears evident that no military solution will permit a durable reconciliation in Rwanda," a Foreign Ministry statement said.

But France also said it would not protect the Hutu government, whose troops have been pushed into a stretch of territory along Rwanda's western border. The statement said "it is not desirable" for the government to move its headquarters to the security zone to escape the rebels.

The Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front has said its troops will stop fighting once a new multi-ethnic government is set up and the leaders responsible for the massacres are captured.

Faustin Twagiramungu, a moderate Hutu picked by the rebels as prime minister of the new government, arrived in the capital, Kigali, on Thursday, but it was not yet clear how much authority the rebels would give him. He said his first mission was to meet with rebel leaders.

Twagiramungu was named prime minister in a peace accord signed last August to end three years of war. He was to govern for 18 months until elections, but the plan was thwarted when President Juvenal Habyarimana, a Hutu, died in a suspicious April 6 plane crash that rekindled the war.

The Hutu-led government remained holed up in Gisenyi, just across the border from Goma. Government ministers said the rebels were only 15 1/2 miles away.

Augustin Ngirabatware, minister of planning in the Hutu regime, said the government's top leaders remained in Gisenyi. "But we think the final result will be to flee," he

In remembrance of a woman barrel racer Dear

By MELINDA MARTINEZ Lifestyles Editor

In honor of the late professional rodeo barrel racer Nancy Keahey Frasier, her husband Merle O. Frasier and the Frasier family will present a buckle to the winner of the woman's barrel race at the Top O' Texas Rodeo this Saturday.

This year, the Top O' Texas women's barrel race is being held in Nancy's memory.

"She was a great person," said Frasier. "She was known for her smile and she was a fun gal." "She was my life."

The reason he and his family are presenting this buckle, said Frasier, is "Because this is Nancy's town, it's been her home."

It is also a way for him, he explained, to express his loss to people and remember and honor his wife during the rodeo.

In addition, he said they also wanted to, "make it nice for the other kids," and promote the Women's Professional Rodeo Association.

The silver buckle was made by Jim Custer, the father of world champion bull rider, Cody Custer, of Wickenburg, Ariz.

As a young girl growing up in Canadian, Nancy grew up around horses and had been riding since she was five years old, said Frasier.

Frasier about his wife's early career. "And it just blossomed out."

who was her pride and joy, according to Frasier.

"Horses and dogs were her life," said Frasier. "And friends."

He said their house was always open to those in the rodeo.

"Rodeo people are like one big family," said Frasier.

"The Rodeo is a different world." he said. "You're competing against one another but you look out for each other."

"It's work but yet it's fun," he said and added, "Had a talent, might, as well use it."

Frasier said his wife said his wife stopped rodeoing for awhile after her parents died but he was able to get her back to rodeoing in the early 1980s:

"I knew that's what she liked," he said.

"She needed something to fulfill her life. I knew...," he said about knowing that rodeoing made his wife happy. "I can't express it in words.

Later on, said Frasier, Nancy began holding clinics in barrel rac-

They had also lived on a ranch in Nebraska for awhile as well.

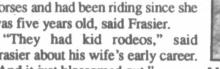

"It's been quite a full life with all we've done," he said. "Ranching, rodeo...'

Shane Kennedy is trying to break into the clowning business.

Known as "Catfish," the 20year old Pampan is trying to combine two of his loves, rodeo and humor, into a paying proposition.

"I get to be funny and get to be around cattle. Well, I try to be funny anyhow," he said.

Kennedy said he got his start four or five years ago while working for Donald Maul.

"He just got me in it one year, and I've been in it ever since," he said.

Vic Laramore dubbed him "Catfish" and the monicker stuck. Kennedy, an apprentice oilfield electrician, started clowning at 4-H rodeos, a hobby he plans to continue.

"I'd like to stay around the rodeo. It's hard to say with the economy what I'll do. Mainly I like to be out here to entertain the kids," he said.

TOT rodeo schedules steer roping

The steer roping competition at this year's Top O' Texas Rodeo has attracted the world's best in the event for the third consecutive year. Of the 49 cowboys entered, 19 are former national finalists.

The competition gets started at 1 p.m. Saturday with two go-arounds scheduled at the rodeo arena next to Recreation Park.

"We feel like this is a good thing for the rodeo because it adds to the purse money. There will be around $10,000 offered," said Steve Hall of Pampa, who has been responsible for directing the steer roping event the past three years. "We held the steer roping in the morning last year and we thought we could get more people out to watch if it was in the afternoon. We'll have contestants from as far away as California."

Guy Allen of Lovington, N.M. and an 8-time world steer roping champion, will be one of the favorites. He's currently the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association points leader. Another contender is defending champion Bucky Hefner of Chesea, Okla. Hefner is currently ranked third in the world and recorded a 20.7 time on two steers last year. Jim Davis of Abilene, a two-time world champion, and Arnold Fets of Sonora, Calif., a former world champion, are among the other top ropers entered. Fets set a record at last year's national finals when he won six go-arounds in a row. Admission is four dollars for adults and two dollars for youngsters. Curt Robbins of Pendleton, Ore. will be announcing the event.

Earlier in the day, Jim Courier, back in the punishing form of two years ago, made short work of an out-of-form Richard Krajicek, winning 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 in just under two hours.

Eltingh, ranked 51, made an impressive start against the world's top-ranked player, winning his first two service points with aces to take the second game.

But every game won was a triumph for the Dutch underdog, and Sampras's returns consistently beat Eltingh as he rushed fruitlessly to the set behind his serve.

Sampras never looked extended on his own serve and broke Eltingh in the fourth game to take a 3-1 lead. The Wimbledon champion finished off the set in a lighting-quick 24 minutes with a second service break.

The second set was more of the same. Eltingh was broken twice.

As Eltingh's hope of making a match of it quickly disappeared, the 12,000-strong orange-clad Dutch crowd's enthusiasm turned to whistles and hand claps.

Sampras's play seemed to grow even more flawless as he shut out the Dutchman in the third set, closing out the match with a majestic backhand pass. The match took just 1 hour, 21 minutes.

Earlier in the day, the 11th-ranked Courier was almost as strong against Krajicek.

"I played well from the start and I never really let up," said Courier. "If that's the Courier of old, then I hope its the Courier of now."

The United States has never lost a Davis Cup tie with Courier playing, and his performance was a model of accuracy. He faltered only once, losing a third-set service game.

Even 15 aces from the big-serving Dutchman, ranked 26th in the world, couldn't save him, and he conceded after the match that Courier in top form was "just too good."

The aces aside, Krajicek found it almost impossible to pass the hard-running American.

"I'm feeling fast and strong now," said Courier, "so I can run down a lot of balls other guys can't get."

Both players started nervously and made unforced errors. But the 11th-ranked American was the first to assert himself, winning the first seven points of the match. An excited punch in the air after he made a tight volley showed how keyed-up the normally expressionless Courier was.

The players agreed after the match that the crucial turning point came in the third game of the second set.

Krajicek missed an easy overhead which would have given him 0-30 on Courier's served. Courier then won 12 consecutive points to take a 4-1 lead.

In the sixth game of the third set, Krajicek finally began to show resistance. He came back to 4-2 after breaking the American's serve with an accurate backhand lob following one of Courier's rare excursions to the net.

But at 5-3 down, Krajicek missed an easy backhand half-volley and then double-faulted to hand Courier the match in two minutes under two hours. The situation looks bleak for the Dutch with only their world champion doubles pairing of Eltingh and Paul Haarhuis favored to prevent a United States shutout in this best-of-5 match.

Parnevik takes British Open lead

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) -Jesper Parnevik, playing with a turned-up cap, scored an eagle on the way to the early second-round lead today in the 123rd British Open Championship. "The dream of a lifetime," the 29-year-old Parnevik said after reaching the tournament halfway point in 6-under 134, "leading the British Open and playing with Jack Nicklaus."

But the son of well-known Swedish comic and impersonator Bo Parnevik recognized that it was a fleeting thing.

He was unlikely to play with Nicklaus again in this tournament — the Golden Bear is almost certain to miss the cut for the final two<sup>b</sup>rounds — and Parnevik himself predicted that his lead would not stand against the late finishers.

"I think (Tom) Watson will finish 8" under par, he said.

Watson, 44, a five-time winner of this title, was 6-under for the tournament through 14 holes.

Parnevik, a former European Ryder Cup member who now plays the American tour, had Nicklaus in his threesome in their journey over Turnberry's windswept links.

But it was an unhappy trip for the 54year-old Nicklaus, who could do no better than a 73. With a 145 total, 5 over par, he was almost certain to miss when the field is trimmed to the low 70 scorers and all within 10 shots of the lead at the conclusion of second-round play. It appeared a score of about 143 woild be necessary to make it.

And Nick Faldo appeared certain to make it.

Open appearances. But the British ace rallied, putting a birdie-birdie finish on a round of 66 that put him through 36 holes at 141.

"It took me 17 holes to undo what I did yesterday, and I made one for myself on the last," Faldo said.

A Pampa connection

Greg Turner, who was the firstround leader, played twice in Pampa's Top O' Texas Tournament in the mid 1980's. He's still among the leaders with a two-round total of 138.

attended Oklahoma University on a golf scholarship.

Defending champion Greg Norman and first-round leader Greg Turner of New Zealand also mounted rallies.

Norman followed an opening 71 with a 67 and was among the leaders at 138. Turner had to come back from a double bogey-bogey lapse just before the turn to salvage a 71-138. Veteran Fuzzy Zoeller dominated the short holes in a round of 66 that left him three shots behind Parnevik.

"It's an entirely different golf course out there today," Zoeller said. "The wind has turned around. You have to hit good shots, but the golf course is there for the taking."

He did most of his taking on the par-3 holes, making birdie on all four of 17th.

After playing the wrong ball, taking an them. It set up an unusual card for the 8 on the 17th hole of the opening round veteran, a score of 66 and a scorecard

Mark Brooks, on the other hand, had nine 3's in a bogey-free round of 64 that put him in a tie at 138 with Norman, Davis Love III, U.S. Open winner Ernie Els of South Africa, Brian Watts of Canada and Vijay Singh of Fiji.

Love had a second-round 67, Singh 68, Els 69 and Watts 70.

John Daly also had a place among the leaders - until he blew it on two dreadful holes just after the turn.

Daly hooked his drive on No. 10 onto the beach and about 100 heavily-bundled spectators immediately poured onto the sands near the Firth of Clyde in search of the ball. They never found

The disgusted Daly eventually declared it lost, went back to the tee, reached the green with his fourth shot and then three-putted for triple bogey-7. His troubles had only started.

He was just short of the green on the par-3 11th, putted up to about 7 feet, missed that one, then lipped out a 12inch tap-in. It was a four-putt and a double bogey. The triple-double disaster dropped him from 5-under par to even in two holes.

He finished with a 72 and a 140 total. Parnevik hit two drivers to the back of the green on the par-5 seventh hole, then ran in a 60-foot eagle putt as the centerpiece of his round.

He pulled in front with a string of three consecutive birdies, beginning with a 10-foot putt on the 15th, followed by a 3-iron to 5 feet on the next and a two-putt birdie-4 on the

Indurain extends Tour de France lead today

LUZ ARDIDEN, France (AP) ----Richard Virenque claimed France's third consecutive stage win in the Tour de France and Miguel Indurain extended his overall lead today, while another top cyclist dropped out

Claudio Chiappucci of Italy, who has finished in the top six of the Tour since 1990, dropped out because of an intestinal virus before the start of the 12th stage.

The stage of 127 miles had two major climbs, the renowned Tourmalet, 6,937 feet, and Luz Ardiden, 5,625 feet.

Virenque pulled far ahead of the pack, and only Marco Pantani of Italy stayed within five minutes of him starting the final climb to Luz Ardiden. Pantani ended up 4 minutes, 34 seconds, behind.

Indurain and his Banesto teammates allowed Virengue and Pantani to gain the advantage because they trailed Indurain by more than 15 minutes each entering the day's leg.

Indurain finished more than seven minutes back but ahead of the main pack.
