Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA — A 1992 lawsuit filed by two former Pampa police officers against the city is being heard today in Austin's U.S. District Court for the Western District, according to city attorney Don Lane.

David Louis Wilkinson and Nicholas Fortner filed suit against the city June 11, 1992 alleging they were terminated because they reported wrongdoing by the city. City officials maintain the pair were discharged because an internal investigation showed the officers had committed "conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline."

Also named in the lawsuit is former city manager Glen Hackler, now assistant city manager of Midland.

A jury was picked Monday with plaintiffs' testimony scheduled to begin today, Lane said.

Wilkinson is asking for $7.8 million in damages. Fortner is asking for $7.6 million in damages. They both seek reinstatement, lost wages and payment of attorney fees. Wilkinson resides in Pampa. Fortner resides in Clay County, Mo.

PAMPA — Students attending Pampa High School and 44 other schools in central and western Texas, including the Lefors, White Deer and Allison school districts, will be the beneficiaries of a new program set up by Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Beginning Sept. 1, every time a customer in the program's selected area subscribes to a new call forwarding, call waiting, three-way calling or speed call-9 service, Southwestern Bell will donate $2 to the local high school. Each high school could receive as much as $1,500 from the program which ends April 28, 1995.

Purchases by customers will be continuously tracked during the program's eight months. In May 1995, final figures will be totaled and checks given to the board of education of each district.

"High schools have no shortage of worthy projects," said Gary Stevens, area manager of the telephone company. "We're glad that Southwestern Bell Telephone is in a position where we can have an impact on education. When high school students receive better educations, everyone in Texas benefits."

AMARILLO — A home-based business seminar designed to help people get small businesses started is scheduled to be held Wednesday at the Texas A&M Research Center.

Entrepreneurs will be sharing their secrets of success and provide strategies that have helped them prosper in business. In addition, marketing specialists will offer sessions on strategies to succeed in the food, apparel, computer, child and dependent care, bed and breakfast fields as well as with other products and services.

Beginning at 9 a.m., keynote speaker Cathy Bolton is scheduled to begin at 9:15 a.m. Following Bolton, a resource fair and general sessions will be held throughout the day.

The seminar is sponsored by the Potter-Randall County Extension Office as well as a number of area businesses, state agencies and West Texas A&M University's Small Business Development Center and the department of Management, Marketing and General Business.

The Texas A&M Research Center is located at 6500 Amarillo Blvd.

HOOVER — Texas Highway Department officials announced that FM 2391 at Hoover will be closed all day Wednesday and Thursday.

The closing is due to more work on the railroad tracks being conducted by Santa Fe Railway.

Traffic will be routed around the area for the two days as construction continues on the railroad tracks crossing FM 2391.

AMARILLO — Texas Railroad commissioners will be in Amarillo Tuesday, Sept. 6, from 2:30-4 p.m. in the Centennial Room of Boatmen's First National Bank, 701 S. Taylor.

U.S. cautiously optimistic about refugee crisis

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One week after more than 3,200 Cuban boat people headed for U.S. shores in a single chaotic day, a series of encouraging developments have Clinton administration officials breathing somewhat easier.

U.S. officials attribute a sharp drop in the numbers of boat people in the last few days to a combination of bad weather and round-the-clock appeals for Cubans to stay home.

"Growing numbers of Cubans understand that they will not come to the United States if they are picked up in the Straits (of Florida)," Undersecretary of State Peter Tarnoff said Monday night.

By then, only 118 Cubans had been intercepted by the U.S. Coast Guard throughout the day. The final tally for Monday was 295.

Tarnoff also said Cuban authorities have begun to take "some small steps" to counsel Cubans not to flee by boat. Until now, the authorities did nothing to dissuade Cubans from leaving so long as they did so in their own vessels.

In addition, President Fidel Castro has ordered that any vessel with minors aboard be prevented from leaving Cuban shores. The White House and State Department welcomed the move.

And Panama's incoming foreign minister, Gabriel Lewis Galindo, said his country is willing to receive up to 10,000 Cuban refugees for six months if the United States houses them at American military bases along the Panama Canal and takes responsibility for them.

Another encouraging sign, Tarnoff said, is that about 225 Cubans of the more than 13,000 taken to the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, have asked for permission to return home.

Tarnoff, interviewed on PBS' MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour, said arrangements for their return will be discussed with Cuban officials on Wednesday or Thursday when U.S.-Cuban migration talks resume in New York. The last such talks were held in December.

Michael Skol, the second-ranking official in the State Department's Latin America bureau, will head the U.S. delegation. He will be joined by Justice Department and immigration officials.

The administration hopes the talks will "facilitate safe and orderly and legal migration," said White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers.

Rafael Dauza, spokesman at the Cuban diplomatic mission, said today the Cuban delegation will be headed by Ricardo Alarcon, a former foreign minister who is president of the Cuban National Assembly, or parliament.

"You can be sure we will be free to talk about any subject," Dauza said.

Cuba wants wide-ranging talks with the United States but has agreed to limit the initial phase to immigration questions. The Clinton administration has said the talks will be restricted to that issue.

One administration goal is to expand opportunities for legal emigration from Cuba. The number of legal migrants is relatively small, partly because many Cuban exiles have not become U.S. citizens.

Non-citizens have fewer opportunities than citizens under U.S. immigration law to arrange for relatives abroad to join them in the United States.

With some 14,000 Haitian boat people remaining interned at Guantanamo Bay along with the inflow of Cubans, more than 2,200 dependents of American personnel on the base are to be flown back to the United States beginning Wednesday so water and electricity can be diverted to the refugees.

Navy officials said there also was concern that the refugees could pose a security problem in the future.

The fund-raiser will include an old-fashioned street dance, along with a buffet and a $3,000 giveaway for ticketholders. ## Gov. Richards to honor local firm during visit Creative Graphics of Pampa is to be recognized by Gov. Ann Richards at a luncheon at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday at M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center along with Lamar Elementary School.

The business is owned by Jerry and Nolene Hawk, who purchased Fugate Printing in June 1991.

"We believe in Pampa," Mrs. Hawk said. "We put everything we had into this business. It was a well-established, well-run business. We felt the opportunity to grow with Pampa was unlimited."

The business is to be honored as a Smart Jobs Fund grantee. They were awarded $13,000 to train workers in new technologies.

"As a result of the grant, we increased our payroll 122 percent and hired three new people," Mrs. Hawk said.

"The effect on our business has been immediate. One of our new employees, Traci Roda, brought in a $10,000 account her second day on the job. All of our new employees are working hard, learning the printing business and are doing well," she said.

Mr. Hawk is a 37-year veteran of the printing business. Mrs. Hawk is an elementary school teacher who serves on the advisory board of Grandview Hopkins Independent School District.

Creative Graphics has desk top publishing capabilities, recharging capabilities for laser printer, bubble jet and ink jet cartridges and re-inking for fabric typewriter ribbons.

In 1993, the business expanded by purchasing telecommunications capabilities. They print personalized children's books and offer an electronic monitoring service.

Tickets to the barbecue where Creative Graphics will be honored by Richards are available at the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, the Promote Pampa Committee or members of the Pampa/Gray County Citizens Activities Association.

New home sales up 8.3 percent in July, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — New home sales surged 8.3 percent in July, rebounding from the previous month's level that was the lowest in more than a year, the government said today.

All regions of the country except the Midwest took part in the expected recovery.

The housing industry has suffered recently from increased mortgage rates. Sales of existing homes slipped slightly in July but construction of new homes rebounded last month, the government previously said.

The Commerce Department said today that sales of new homes, which declined a revised 11.4 percent in June, totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 664,000 in July.

The June rate was revised to 613,000, up from an initial estimate of 591,000. The revised rate was still the lowest level since it was 600,000 in March 1993.

In advance of the report, many analysts had predicted sales would rebound sharply in July.

Fixed rate 30-year mortgages averaged 8.62 percent in July, up from 8.43 percent in June and 8.6 percent in May. Rates hit a 25-year low of 6.74 percent last October, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. Rates were 8.56 percent last week.

An increase in rates from 7 percent to 9 percent would add $209 to the monthly payment on a $150,000 mortgage.

Sales of homes during the first seven months of 1994 were 6.6 percent above the same period last year.

Tests identify people at risk for Alzheimer's, similar illness

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Testing memory and other mental abilities can help elderly people learn if they have a high risk of getting Alzheimer's or a similar disease within a few years, a study says.

The tests, given to outwardly healthy people, identified one group with an 85 percent rate of developing intellect-robbing dementia within four years.

Another group developed dementia at only a 5 percent rate over that time.

That means the tests can distinguish between those who should get a more detailed evaluation and make plans for their future care, and those who can be reassured they have little short-term risk, said the study's lead author, Dr. David Masur.

"If you score well on these tests, we can confidently say that over the next four years you probably won't be getting dementia," he said.

Dementia basically is a significant decline in intellectual abilities such as memory and reasoning. Alzheimer's disease is the most common kind of dementia. Most dementia is not curable.

Masur is an associate clinical professor of neurology at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine and the Montefiore Medical Center in New York. He and colleagues present the study in the August issue of the journal Neurology.

While other scientists are doing similar work, Masur's result "is probably the best in terms of predictive value so far," said Dr. Leonard Berg, chairman of the Alzheimer's Association Medical and Scientific Advisory Board.

"It's good work and it's important work," said Berg, a neurologist who directs the Alzheimer's Disease Research Center at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis.

Masur and Berg called the tests useful for people in their 70s and 80s who are generally healthy and free of multiple medications that could impair their performance on the tests.

The tests are given by neuropsychologists and should not be taken at home, Masur said. He said people who want to take the tests should discuss a referral to a neuropsychologist with their physician.

The study involved 317 healthy people with an average age of 79 who initially showed no sign of dementia. Researchers gave them a battery of psychological tests and then followed them for four years. Then they went back and identified four tests that best predicted dementia.

The two best-performing tests focused on memory for words and objects. Another called for rapidly naming as many items as possible from a category, such as vegetables. The fourth involved rapidly finding and copying a series of symbols.

In an interview, Masur noted that the tests did better at identifying people who would remain free of dementia than pointing out those who would develop it.

He noted that 202 of the 253 participants who avoided dementia had high test scores predicting that outcome, while of the 64 people who became demented only 11 had shown a high risk by getting low test scores.

Of the 212 people with high test scores, 202 remained free of dementia, for a 95 percent predictive accuracy, whereas 11 of the 13 with poor test scores developed the condition, for an accuracy of 85 percent.

The other 92 participants scored in a gray zone that did not allow a firm prediction of getting or avoiding dementia.

Early warning of dementia allows a person to plan for future care, get financial matters in order and prepare relatives for what may come, Masur said.

Saudi Arabia, Sudan, two others boycotting population conference

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Saudi Arabia and Sudan are boycotting next week's United Nations population conference in Cairo following criticism by Muslim clerics that the meeting violates the principles of Islam.

The Saudi representative at the United Nations in New York sent a message earlier this week "regretting they are not going to participate," an official at conference headquarters in Cairo said today.

Sudan's government announced Monday night it would boycott the meeting and urged other Muslim nations to also withdraw because the meeting would result in "the spread of immoral and irreligious values."

Saudi Arabia and Sudan are the first countries known to withdraw from the U.N.-sponsored International Conference on Population and Development, which is expected to draw some 15,000 people to Cairo beginning Sept. 5.

The leaders of two other predominantly Muslim nations canceled plans to attend the conference. Prime Minister Tansu Ciller of Turkey announced today that a lower-level official would head her country's delegation. Bangladesh's prime minister, Khaleda Zia, made a similar announcement Saturday.

Also today, an Egyptian court rejected a suit by Muslim fundamentalists aimed at blocking the conference.

The suit argued that Egypt, which says its legal code is based largely on Islamic law, could not hold a conference which runs counter to Islamic principles. But the court said the matter was outside its jurisdiction because President Hosni Mubarak had the right to invite the conference to be held in Egypt.

The meeting is intended to set guidelines for the next 20 years for halting the growth in world population and encouraging economic development, particularly in the Third World.

The conference official who revealed the Saudi decision would not disclose details of why the oil-rich nation was withdrawing. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

Sudan's minister of social planning, Ali Osman Mohamed Taha, said in announcing the boycott that Sudan was trying to organize a forum for opponents of the meeting.

He also complained that the conference reflects the views of the United States, telling reporters "a considerable number" of conference resolutions reflect the policies that brought President Clinton to office.

Abdul Basit Sabadrat, minister of culture and information, said that opposing the conference was "a kind of jihad (holy war) against corruption and the new hegemony which some seek to impose on us."

The complaints about the United States echoed statements by some Muslim radicals who have charged the U.S. government wants to spread what they regard as immoral Western values into the Islamic world.

Muslim fundamentalists criticizing the conference have charged that its draft proposal advocates abortion and sex education and will encourage sex outside marriage.

Conference officials have denied this and noted that the proposal is only a draft which will be debated at the Cairo meeting. They also say that no country will be under obligation to adopt whatever policies come out of the meeting.

In the conference draft proposal, anything that even hints at controversy is put in parentheses to indicate it is subject to debate.

Pope John Paul II has vigorously criticized the conference for several months, mostly on the basis of its potential for promoting abortion and artificial contraception.

Manges loses appeal over Duval County ranch

DALLAS (AP) — South Texas oilman and rancher Clinton Manges has lost his latest effort to regain control of the 100,000-acre Duval County Ranch.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Monday rejected an appeal by Manges, who had challenged a Chapter 11 bankruptcy agreement that allows a Seattle bank to operate what once was his ranch.

Manges, 70, had hoped to overturn the 1991 bankruptcy agreement that permits Seattle-First National Bank and Seafirst American Corp. to operate the ranch.

Manges and his company, Man-Gas Transmission, had filed the appeal.

The bank had foreclosed on the ranch, which Manges had called his Magic Kingdom and is located about 100 miles south of San Antonio. It foreclosed because Manges and his ranching company had defaulted on a 1980 loan taken out from Seafirst.

Armed federal marshals evicted Manges from the ranch in 1991, because he owed $55 million to Seafirst and about $34 million to some 150 other creditors.

Seafirst has said the seizure was a justified way to end years of legal wrangling.

Monday's defeat ended one of several legal battles

Manges is waging against Seafirst. He's filed a lawsuit claiming the bank wrongfully took his personal belongings, and he has appealed a court injunction prohibiting him from filing legal notices that claim he has a stake in the ranch.

Manges was born to a migrant farm family in Chickasha, Okla., and eventually settled in Texas' Rio Grande Valley and began dealing in land with the help of Lloyd Bensten Sr., father of the U.S. Treasury secretary.

In 1965, Manges pleaded guilty to filing a false statement to secure a Small Business Administration loan. He bought the Duval County Ranch in 1971 for about $5 million, and soon became a reputed ally of political boss George Parr.

Manges later became a frequent political donor, claiming to have given a total of $3 million in the 1982 elections. He gave notable contributions to former Attorney General Jim Mattox and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro in their successful campaigns.

In 1983, Manges won a settlement in the $1.7 billion mineral-rights lawsuits he had filed against Mobil Oil Co., which surrendered oil and gas leases for 64,000 acres on the ranch.

Man agrees to pay child support for his long-lost son

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man who recently discovered through DNA testing that he fathered a son with a woman he dated briefly nearly 20 years ago has agreed to pay $395 a month in child support.

Herman Jimenez, 38, will pay child support for his 17 1/2-year-old son until the boy finishes high school or gets a general equivalency diploma, Jimenez' lawyer, Patrick Guerra said Monday.

In addition, Jimenez will pay the state $7,163 for welfare payments made to the boy's mother during the boy's life.

The Texas attorney general's office notified Jimenez last year that he would be taken to court. At the time, Jimenez said he couldn't believe it.

Jimenez, who has since married, said he remembered having dated the boy's mother, Martha Bertha Pena, for a short period after he got out of the military in 1975.

But he said there was no way he fathered a child.

However, on Friday Jimenez' lawyer said he found out that DNA results proved that Jimenez was the father.

Pena said there was never any doubt in her mind Jimenez was her son's father, and that she's glad the issue has been resolved.

Coal mine explosion kills 79 in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An explosion in a coal mine owned by the state-run Philippine National Oil Co. killed at least 79 workers in the country's worst mine disaster, officials said today.

The explosion took place Monday evening at the mine near Malangas in Zamboanga del Sur province, a remote area with poor communications about 500 miles south of Manila.

In a telephone interview from the provincial capital of Pagadian, Gov. Isidoro Real Jr. said 79 bodies had been counted by this evening. He said an estimated 20 to 30 more workers were believed missing.

The Philippines' worst previous mining disaster occurred in 1983, when 27 workers died in a coal mine on Cebu.

Real said relatives of the miners crowded the site waiting for word on the workers.

"They were crying, specially those who were near the tunnel waiting for their loved ones who are still inside. It was a pitiful sight," he said.

At least nine workers were flown to Cebu City for treatment of burns.

Nazario Vasquez, president of PNOCC Energy Corp., which operates the mine, said about 170 miners were thought to be working at the time of explosion.

He said 11 miners were injured by a similar explosion last March.

Vasquez said the blast occurred when workers, who were about 500 feet underground, hit a pocket of water and methane.

But Mayor Cecilio Tura quoted miners as saying the accident was caused by a dynamite explosion that mixed with gases.

"I interviewed the miners and they said there was a blast of dynamite," Tura said in a radio interview.

"There was an open fire and methane gas, carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide mixed."

Tropical depression forms in Gulf of Mexico

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical storm warnings were posted along the eastern coast of Mexico today as a tropical depression in the Gulf of Mexico showed signs of gaining strength and coming ashore there. There was no immediate threat to the United States.

At 10 a.m. CDT, the depression was at 21.0 degrees north latitude and 96.4 degrees west longitude, or about 130 miles southeast of Tampico, Mexico, according to the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

"If it were to hit the United States, it would be the southern part of Texas, but that is very improbable" judging by the direction and strength of the system, forecaster Bob Ebaugh said early today.

The system's maximum sustained winds were about 35 mph and it was moving west at 8 mph. Winds were expected to strengthen past the 39 mph minimum threshold required for a tropical storm by the time it hits the coast, forecasters said.

The system could become Debby, the fourth named storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, later today before moving across the Mexican coast between Tuxpan and Cabo Rojo.

The depression began several days ago as a tropical wave in the Caribbean.

Congressman: Cut trees to stop wildfires

By NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Wally Herger wants to save tinder-dry California forests by logging them.

The California Republican demanded Monday that Congress declare a state of emergency in federal forests to permit quick removal of dead trees, fallen branches and other debris that fuels fires.

The state of emergency would include the suspension of requirements for archaeological studies and environmental impact statements before logging.

"Our forests are detonating like napalm bombs," Herger said. "We need to remove dead and dying bug-killed timber."

But Sami Yassa, a spokesman for the Natural Resources Defense Council in San Francisco, called the bill Herger has introduced "a pretext for accelerated logging in the Sierra Nevada."

"It has very little to do with forest health," Yassa said.

Logging would create additional debris and require new roads, and the vast majority of forest fires are caused by humans who travel deep into forests on logging roads, Yassa said.

The NRDC prefers a long-term strategy for reducing fire threats that includes non-commercial thinning of trees and removal of debris.

Some 23,000 firefighters are still battling 29 major fires that have burned more than 452,000 acres in five Western states, according to the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho.

The 3 million acres burned by all Western wildfires this year is double the amount that had burned by this time last year, the center said.

In other states: — Full containment was predicted for Thursday for an 8,000-acre fire that burned eight homes near Sams Valley, Ore., and threatened hundreds more.

— In California, firefighters expected to contain a 4,700-acre fire about 50 miles west of Fresno by tonight. The fire started Wednesday when a squirrel short-circuited an electric company powerhouse.

— Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, a certified firefighter, spent Monday with a crew attacking a fire near Libby, Mont., that had burned about 12,110 acres.

More than 1,500 firefighters battled the blaze.

— Fires still burning in Idaho had covered more than 306,000 acres, in Idaho.

A 4-week-old, 77,000-acre fire in north-central Idaho's Payette National Forest was threatening today to jump the main Salmon River into the Nez Perce National Forest.

Two Texas women charged in shoplifting spree

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Two Texas women suspected of shoplifting $60,000 worth of merchandise in several states have been charged with felony theft after police say they were caught on videotape stealing clothes at the Mall of America.

A search of the women's motel room turned up phony identification cards listing at least 12 different names, and addresses in at least six states, according to a criminal complaint.

The two, who were charged Monday, are identified in Hennepin County jail records as Dana Anne Novak, 37, and Gloria Marie McLean, 54, both of Spring, Texas.

Bloomington Police Sgt. Cliff Bluml said that, following a tip from authorities elsewhere, detectives have shadowed the women since they arrived in the Twin Cities on Friday.

Police said they videotaped the women Friday as they tried on — and allegedly stole — women's outfits valued at $75 to $400.

Bluml said the women would take an outfit to a dressing room, stuff it into a purse or shopping bag, then leave the mall.

They were observed taking clothes from Macy's, Nordstrom and Bloomingdale's, Bluml said.

Dollar General Store plans grand opening in Pampa

A new Dollar General Store will be opening in Pampa on Thursday in its location at 2211 Perryton Parkway.

The discount store will be having its grand opening activities Thursday in its 7,000 square-foot building. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Dollar General Chairman and CEO Cal Turner Jr. said, "We don't spend money on chrome and glass fixtures or expensive signs and lights. Our stores are plain, and for some people that's a problem. But Dollar General customers could care less about that. They'd rather save money than pay extra to support our overhead."

Dollar General Corporation is headquartered in Nashville, Tenn., with administrative offices and a distribution center in Scottsville, Ky., and a second distribution center in Homerville, Ga.

Turner said an aggressive new store development program has enabled the company to increase its size from 1,300 stores in 23 states in 1989 to its current 1,808 stores located in 24 states, with new stores opening weekly. For the fiscal year 1994, the company will post annual sales in excess of $1 billion.

"We've come a long way since my father, Cal Turner Sr., started the company in 1939 in Scottsville, Kentucky," Turner said. "He'd buy overstocked merchandise from other retailers, then turn around and sell it in small towns around Appalachia for a fraction of the original price. It was the last days of the Depression, and people needed every bargain they could get, so Dad found plenty of customers."

Turner attributes much of his company's success to its small-town roots.

"Travelers who stop in Scottsville are amazed that a company as large as Dollar General works out of such a small town," he said. "Small towns are the heart of America."

He added that for many years Dollar General operated only in small towns, but now the company has stores in many major cities as well, but even the big city stores retain a "small town feel."

"When you walk into a Dollar General Store," Turner said, "no matter where it is, you know you're going to find two things: down-to-earth, friendly people and top quality merchandise at bottom dollar prices, every day."

Very few items in a Dollar General Store cost more than $25, and 90 percent of the merchandise is priced under $10.

"We carry the basics," Turner explained, "household items, cleaning supplies, health and beauty aids, clothes, shoes — things every home and family needs. The expensive stuff we leave to more expensive stores."

As part of their service to the community, Dollar General Stores serve as a place where anyone can go to find out where to learn to read; where to take GED classes and the GED test; or where a person can sign up to become a tutor.

In-store customer brochures feature a perforated reply card, pre-addressed and pre-stamped to the Dollar General offices in Scottsville. Spaces are provided for customers to indicate their need or area of interest. Upon receiving the cards, Dollar General distributes the referrals to the appropriate adult education office in each state. To date, more than 27,000 customers have responded, Turner said.

The Pampa store will employ five to eight persons.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

IRS agents speak coercive language

America's most beloved government agency, the Internal Revenue Service, is sending out pamphlets titled "It's Never Too Late!" — to pay extortion money to the IRS mob, that is.

The pamphlet notes: "As many as ten million people who should have filed tax returns in recent years failed to do so." That means about 10 percent of the 100 million taxpayers are delinquent, quite a figure.

Items from the pamphlet include:

"Will I go to jail?" is the question the IRS itself asks, posing as a taxpayer. But it never answers "No." So, that means you might.

The equivocal response: "Our long-standing practice has been not to recommend criminal prosecution of individuals for failure to file tax returns — provided they voluntarily file, or make arrangements to file, before being notified they are under criminal investigation."

Don't you love that phrase, "our long-standing practice," coming from an agency as mercurial as any in an increasingly mercurial government.

In the IRS' Orwellian tone, one is given a wonderful reason to file: "If you are self-employed and do not file a return, you may lose credits toward Social Security retirement or disability benefits. If you do not file, we cannot report your self-employment income to the Social Security Administration."

If Social Security were such a great program, people would be begging to join, instead of having to be coerced by the IRS.

Self-employed taxpayers are held up for a whopping 15.3 percent of income. And many realize the system is headed for bankruptcy.

The IRS just loves you and wants to help: "Our effort to get people back into the system" — the system of coercion and waste — "is part of a long-term plan to improve tax compliance." They want your money and they want it all — now. "We want to get people back into the system, not prosecute ordinary people who make a mistake."

And remember to say, "I love Big Brother."

"However, we will continue to investigate flagrant cases involving criminal violations of tax laws" — as determined by capricious IRS apparatchiks.

Another question the IRS' mock taxpayer asks: "What if I don't file voluntarily?"

Ah, the old "voluntary compliance" ruse the IRS has been using for years.

If it's voluntary, why does the pamphlet add: "We are taking enforcement steps for those who choose repeatedly not to comply with the law . . .?"

Well, if the IRS seizes all your money and jams you in jail, at least you won't have to file tax forms. Will you?

Just promising more goodies

The four-letter word in the health care debate is "cost." One of President Clinton's stated goals when he unveiled his blueprint was to restrain the expenditures of what he called "the costliest and most wasteful system on the face of the earth." But his emphasis has always been on giving everything to everyone. Dessert first, then we'll eat our broccoli.

His allies on Capitol Hill, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, have followed his lead in their "compromise" proposals, emphasizing the goodies citizens will enjoy, not the burden they will bear. So-called reformers are laboring to convince the American people that under these measures, they will get more and pay less.

The American people, however, are suspicious when anyone not identifiable as Jesus Christ claims to be able to multiply loaves and fishes. They assume that if Congress takes ambitious action on health care, they will get less or pay more, or most likely both.

Honest experts are not cooperating in the ruse. Says Martin Feldstein, the former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, "The tax cost for this largest-ever welfare expansion would top $100 billion a year at today's prices."

Part of the tab comes from sheltering those 37 million uninsured Americans that Hillary Rodham Clinton is always telling us about. The administration pretends that universal coverage will save money, since people will get cheap treatment in doctor's offices instead of expensive services in hospital emergency rooms.

Any savings, however, will pale next to the other effect. Insuring people means making it less costly for them to obtain medical care, which means they will soon feel a powerful urge to get more of it. The main reason health care bills have risen so fast in recent years is that Americans don't pay most of them directly — insurance companies and government agencies have that responsibility.

But Clinton and his congressional supporters don't want to just widen access to health insurance. They also insist on gold-plated policies.

It's no fun to merely guarantee protection against major illness and ruinous expense. The vast majority already has that. You can't get the support of insured, middle-class Americans without giving them something they want. The optimal political strategy is to shower everyone with presents.

The new benefits come in several forms. The least generous insurance policy allowed by the administration proposal has low annual deductibles — $200 for an individual, $400 for a family — which would be waived for some preventive services. It also covers a liberal array of expenses, including mental illness, drug and alcohol abuse, abortion, hospices, dental care and eye exams. Mitchell and Gephardt offer similar packages.

The administration says this is equivalent to a typical policy today, but many of the provisions are far from universal. Even if it were the norm, the consequence would still be to ratchet up benefits and costs. Companies with below-average policies would have to upgrade, but most companies with above-average policies would not be in a position to scale back. Many people, perhaps most, will have better coverage; very few will have worse.

Some of the extras could burn up a lot of dollars. Unlimited coverage of mental health and substance abuse treatment, which the three Democratic plans all agree on, would be a break from the practice of virtually all private policies today. The Congressional Budget Office says the price tag is anyone's guess, because there isn't much experience with such generous coverage.

Helen Darling, manager of health care strategy and programs at Xerox Corp., told The Washington Post that "if you combine the blank-check capability of a well-meaning federal government with a system that is unmanaged and still out of control, the bill for mental health care will be just unbelievable."

The extravagance goes further. All three plans expand Medicare to cover all prescription drugs. All three include new home-care services for the elderly and disabled.

The party won't end there. The political incentives in the future will always be to add new treats. Federal entitlements, once established, are politically dangerous to cut back. But for any politician intent on putting voters in a congenial mood for the next election, they are easy to expand.

That, however, doesn't make them easy to pay for. The lesson of entitlements over the last generation, in fact, is that they grow much faster than our ability to pay for them. These health care plans might give us all a warm glow for the moment. But the hangover could be murder.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, August 30, the 242nd day of 1994. There are 123 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Aug. 30, 1862, Union forces were defeated by the Confederates at the Second Battle of Bull Run in Manassas, Va.

On this date:
In 30 B.C. (on August 30th, by some estimates), the seventh and most famous queen of ancient Egypt known as Cleopatra committed suicide.

In 1797, the creator of Frankenstein, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, was born in London.

In 1893, Huey P. Long, "The Kingfish" of Louisiana politics, was born in Winn Parish, La.

In 1905, Ty Cobb made his major league batting debut, playing for the Detroit Tigers.

In 1941, the World War II siege of Leningrad began as Nazi forces took Mga.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur arrived in Japan, and set up Allied occupation headquarters.

How about some doctor control?

Mis-diagnosis is not uncommon in the medical profession these days, so it is no surprise the American Medical Association, the doctors union, and federal medical bureaucrats have mis-diagnosed a civil liberties issue — gun control — as a public health problem.

They claim gun violence is an epidemic. Heck, statistics show medical malpractices kill an estimated 80,000 Americans per year — and that's a low-ball number. That figures to about four times the number of people done in by criminals armed with guns. So the real public health epidemic is medical incompetence and the real need is for doctor control, not gun control.

In the meantime, the doctors union is trying to make it harder for victims, or their survivors, to sue the incompetent butchers. They want to cap damages. Heck, in old Cuba, they used to cap doctors.

A physician-friend said some years ago that was the system in pre-Castro Cuba.

"In those days in Cuba," he said, "doctors, patients and their families had personal relationships. If you made an honest mistake, the patient and family would understand and wouldn't sue you. Even if you really screwed up, they wouldn't sue you. Of course, they'd kill you."

Now that, it seems to me, is a much better system than the one we have. As reasonable and prudent persons, let us think this out.

For one thing, the method of killing could be adapted to the circumstances. A gastroenterologist, for example, who mis-diagnosed a colon cancer could receive a shotgun enema. An incompetent orthopedic surgeon could get a power drill in the kneecaps prior to a bullet. If you are an environmentalist, you could stake your incompetent doctor over an ant hill and have your own picnic while the ants have theirs.

So what are the pluses and minuses of capping, as opposed to suing, incompetent doctors? First of all, the present system of quantifying a death or injury in U.S. dollars in an amount to be negotiated by two sets of lawyers is arbitrary, capricious, artificial and zany. What's a human life worth? What about a child? Is there to be a discount — so much for pain and suffering but with 20 percent off? A politically determined cap? You mean a person will only suffer up to a point? It's not a very rational system.

Secondly, the Cuban method would not increase the cost of medical care and would probably reduce it. The cost of medical malpractice insurance is passed along to the patients. Using the Cuban system, doctors wouldn't even need malpractice insurance — just life insurance. And that's cheap, because life insurance pays only one claim one time.

Thirdly, it would correct the unconscionable and inexcusable failure of the medical unions and government agencies to weed out the incompetents. Under the litigation system, malpractitioners can kill and injure a number of people. Not so in the Cuban system. As I've always argued in defending capital punishment, the recidivism rate for dead miscreants is zero.

Now for the minuses. Some Americans might be too soft-hearted to do unto a doctor as he did unto them. Well, are we or are we not the cradle of free enterprise? Create a market and entrepreneurs will appear like baseball players in a field of dreams. In fact, there is already an existing industry of contract killers. And even the best of them are less expensive than lawyers.

What do you think? Can we get an amendment to the health care reform bill to adopt the old Cuban system? Probably not. Both the docs and the lawyers would oppose it. Well, hire a mean lawyer and leave justice to God.

That's the best remedy after all.

Congressmen keep playing those games

Ever wonder why Congress has been in such a hurry to pass a health-care reform bill? After all, what motivation could lawmakers possibly have for rushing headlong into a measure that will completely transform one-seventh of the U.S. economy, with untold consequences for their constituents? Why not just wait until we're sure what we want and how to go about getting it?

Politics, of course. Surprised? I didn't think so. You see, the congressional leadership knows that after the elections in November it's going to be much more difficult — if not completely impossible — to pass the kind of government-takeover bill President Clinton and liberals in Congress want. So, they're rushing to pass some big-government bill — any big-government bill — before anyone (even many members of Congress) can get a good look at what the bill would actually do, or what it will cost. And if you think Congress can't get away with this, you don't know how it conducts its business.

A recent book, The Ruling Class: Inside the Imperial Congress, by Eric Felten exposes how Congress routinely breaks its own rules when it's convenient to do so; the proliferation of committees and subcommittees with overlapping jurisdictions; the huge permanent staff and the fiefdoms they create; the stacked-deck "made for TV" hearings; and many other legislative devices used to give the appearance that Congress is being responsible when it is really just playing politics.

For example, did you know that when Congress votes to cut spending, spending really doesn't go down? Instead, the money "saved" is referred to this, that or the other congressional committee, which goes ahead and spends it on something else! Your congressman gets to brag to the folks back home — truthfully — that he voted to cut spending, even though the money wasn't saved.

That isn't Congress' only underhanded gimmick. To save members from having to vote on certain things every year — such as pay raises for themselves or hikes in entitlement spending — some bills put spending on autopilot. That's right: Congress builds automatic spending increases into many bills so they can vote just once and forget about them.

Worse, congressional leaders use tricky parliamentary techniques to render many votes meaningless. For example, "king-of-the-hill" rules allow members to vote in favor of contradictory proposals — one to cut spending and another to raise it, for example — and the last bill approved is what becomes law. Thus, a member can brag that he voted to cut spending, when in fact he turned right around and voted to hike it later that same day.

Congress also deceives the public by making many of its tax and spending decisions in secret. The two House committees that meet most frequently behind closed doors are the ones that decide (a) how much taxes you will pay: Ways and Means; and (b) how those taxes will be spent: Appropriations.

Congressional leaders can stall legislation they oppose or ram through legislation they favor. We saw this when the vote was taken on President Clinton's 1993 tax bill — the largest tax increase in U.S. history. House and Senate rules require waiting periods before members vote on spending. Not this time: The waiting periods were set aside, and lawmakers had fewer than 12 hours to consider the 3,000-page package. Look for a similar tactic on health care.

So, if you have a chance to talk with your representative during the current recess, maybe you can find out where he or she stands on all this institutional chicanery. Of course, your representative probably would never, ever play any of these games. No way. It's always those other guys.

TABC again delays action on ban for happy hours

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The state chairman of Mothers Against Drunk Driving says the group may not achieve a ban on happy hours, but he hopes the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission will tighten restrictions on the drink promotion.

"Perhaps we'll get, not the whole potato, but a couple of french fries," said Kirk Brown, who heads Texas' MADD chapter.

The commission for a second time Monday put off action on proposed happy hour restrictions after hearing testimony from people including Marty Paul, who is with MADD and who carried a framed photograph of her dead son.

He died in a one-car crash in 1987 after going to an Austin bar for reduced-price drinks, said Ms. Paul. His blood alcohol was more than twice the legal limit.

The 19-year-old was buried on his own son's first birthday.

"I know that if he had not drunk so much that night, he would have made it home alive," Ms. Paul told the commission.

She spoke Brown continued his push for the commission to take the appeal out of "happy hour" promotions by prohibiting bars and restaurants from offering reduced-price drinks during specific hours on a particular day.

If an establishment wanted to sell cut-rate drinks, it would have to maintain the lower price for a week at a time under the proposal.

Brown said this idea would make it less likely that people would "go in and try to get as drunk as they can" during the limited hours of the drink special.

The proposal was first presented to the commission in June. MADD then met with bar and restaurant industry representatives to try to find a compromise, Brown said, but they still have some differences.

Texas Restaurant Association spokeswoman Julie Sherrier said her group has been willing to do away with promotions in which people pay a cover charge and then drink all they want for a tiny amount per drink.

But her group opposes a ban on happy hours because it believes restaurant owners should be allowed discretion in running their own businesses, she said.

Nightclub owners who testified Monday said they make sure their servers are trained to deal with intoxicated patrons, who cannot legally be served alcoholic beverages.

The owners said they also offer rides home to drunken patrons.

TABC Administrator Doyno Bailey told the three commission members that the industry has recommended the elimination of happy hour specials that offer a drink for as little as a penny. Bailey said the industry also wants servers to receive mandatory training in dealing with intoxicated patrons.

Commission members said more work is needed on the issue.

Judge OKs order for exhumations in deaths of elderly

CHICKASHA, Okla. (AP) — A Grady County judge has approved the exhumations of three bodies to allow authorities to determine if the elderly people died of anything other than natural causes.

The request came after a nurse at Grady Memorial Hospital in Chickasha attempted to commit suicide Wednesday and told those trying to save her that she was remorseful over her role in four deaths at the hospital from Aug. 19 through 21.

Assistant District Attorney Richard Van Dyck said the families of all three consented to the exhumations. He said the exhumations could take place as early as Wednesday.

The exhumations must be coordinated with the funeral director for each and with the people who open and close the graves at cemeteries. The funeral director must be present for the exhumation.

Prosecutors also asked for a similar exhumation ruling from the state Health Department.

"We're just covering all the bases," Van Dyck said.

The four patients whose deaths are being investigated are Darrell Edwin Richie, 31, of Chickasha; Irene Mullins, 73, of Chickasha; Goldie Crumm, 83, of Rush Springs; and Flossie Fair, 88, of Cyril.

Ms. Mullins, Ms. Crumm and Ms. Fair all were buried before questions were raised. Family members announced at Richie's funeral Thursday that his burial was being delayed so an autopsy could be conducted. The autopsy began Friday at the state medical examiner's office in Oklahoma City.

Choir Boosters hold annual Hole-In-One Shootout

Despite hot temperatures, gusty winds and extra adrenaline, the Pampa High School Choir Boosters' Hole-In-One Shootout was completed Sunday afternoon at Hidden Hills Golf Course.

During Friday and Saturday's preliminary rounds, more than 250 golfers and choir supporters hit golf balls at Pampa Middle School for the chance to drive away in a new Buick from Culberson-Stowers Inc.

By Saturday evening, the field was reduced to the 10 finalists. These finalists gave their best shots at Hidden Hills' challenging, par three No. 12 hole.

Even though no one made a hole-in-one this year, each top 10 finalist could select a prize package worth in excess of $200 worth of merchandise, food and gift certificates.

The prizes were all donated by local merchants and individuals.

Pampa Choir Boosters said they were pleased with the community-wide support of the high school choir program by those competing in and otherwise supporting the annual Hole-In-One Shootout, the major fund-raiser sponsored by the boosters.

The top 10 finalists, in order of the final distances from the pin, were Carolyn Quarles, Barry Terrell, Craig Davis, David Turner, Roy Chick, Ted Jett, Dale Haynes, Miles Cook, Jim Baker and Jess Whitson.

CBO: GOP plan could drive up insurance costs

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health reform plan offered by House Republicans could make standard health insurance so expensive that many people would be driven into minimal-coverage catastrophic plans, congressional analysts say.

House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois proposes expanding the availability of catastrophic health insurance plans that would kick in after an individual had spent $1,800, or a family, $3,600, on medical expenses in a year.

To cover out-of-pocket expenses, Michel's plan, developed with Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., would allow individuals to establish tax-sheltered medical savings accounts, similar to Individual Retirement Accounts.

But, in a 10-page analysis released Monday, the Congressional Budget Office cautioned: "In the long run, the existence of any type of catastrophic-plus-MSA (medical savings account) option that would be attractive to a large number of people could threaten the existence of standard health insurance."

Michel is pressing Democrats to use his plan as the basis for congressional action, now that House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., has conceded Congress is unlikely to pass the kind of broad plan proposed by President Clinton.

However, the CBO said the catastrophic option pushed by Michel could prove attractive not just to the uninsured employees of small businesses but also to relatively healthy individuals, who expect few out-of-pocket expenses.

If that happened, the people left in standard plans would be those who are sicker and older, driving standard-plan premiums so high that even sick people would find it cheaper to opt for catastrophic plans, the CBO said.

The agency said Michel's plan would reduce the budget deficit by $11.3 billion over 10 years, but said it would do almost nothing to curb growing health care expenditures and would do little to expand insurance coverage, currently at about 85 percent of Americans.

It said an additional 2 percent of the population — 5 million poor children and 2 million poor adults — could acquire coverage as a result of subsidies Michel proposes.

Michel's plan also would allow self-employed people to fully deduct their health premiums. It would limit awards for medical malpractice, require employers to offer — but not pay for — insurance, and restrict the ability of insurance companies to deny coverage to sick people.

It would pay for the subsidies and tax benefits by increasing the Medicare premium for high-income elderly people, making about 1 million legal aliens ineligible for Social Security and Medicaid and limiting Social Security benefits to drug and alcohol abusers.

In a letter to Foley, Michel said the CBO report supports his contention that his bill "is the most reasonable, straightforward and realistic health reform proposal on the table."

"We still have the most appropriate bill to undertake the reforms that can be enacted this year. ... (It) should be the basis for action in the House and Senate in September," he wrote.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Monday he remains optimistic Congress will pass significant health care reform. But he acknowledged it would fall short of the administration's goal of full coverage for all Americans.

"I think we can make a substantial amount of progress toward that goal and set us on the right path, and that's what I'm going to try to do," he told a news conference in Portland, Maine.

Clinton's spokeswoman, Dee Dee Myers, said the president is "still hopeful that some sort of health reform will be passed this year."

Administration collecting troop pledges from Caribbean nations for possible invasion of Haiti

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Seven Caribbean nations have agreed to join an American-led military coalition to remove Haiti's ruling elite, senior U.S. government officials said today.

The seven were to announce their participation today at a meeting here of defense and foreign ministers from members of the 13-nation Caribbean Community.

The seven are Barbados, Trinidad, Antigua, Bahamas, Guyana, Jamaica and Belize, according to a U.S. official who spoke to reporters enroute from Washington on grounds that he not be identified.

Barbados, Jamaica and Belize already had indicated they would contribute to the coalition, which would consist mainly of American troops. The Caribbean forces would perform mainly police functions in the immediate aftermath of an invasion, should President Clinton decide to launch the attack.

"We are very close to exhausting all peaceful means" of restoring democracy in Haiti, the official said. He said the administration was not yet ready to issue a final ultimatum for Haiti's ruling military elite to leave the island.

The planned U.S.-led force would include thousands of troops, supplemented by police, civilian technicians and administrators. Its mission would be to forcibly remove Haitian army chief Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and the rest of the military leadership if they do not quit the country first. If the junta leaves, the coalition's task is to restore order.

President Clinton has said the use of military force remains an option, but international efforts are continuing to achieve a peaceful transition. U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali is attempting to lay the groundwork to persuade Haiti's leaders to surrender peacefully, but the results appear highly uncertain.

The administration on Monday sought to dispel the notion that its plans for a possible invasion to oust Cedras had taken a back seat to the crisis in Cuba.

"The planning is proceeding and it is incorrect to say that the timetable has been set back because of Cuba," said a senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Michael McCurry, a State Department spokesman, said, "We prefer to see a peaceful resolution to this crisis." But several administration officials also emphasized that Clinton was getting closer to using "all necessary means" — as authorized by a U.N. resolution that in July demanded Cedras step down to allow for the return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was ousted in a military coup nearly three years ago.

A contingent of about 2,000 U.S. Marines has been aboard warships off the Haitian coast for more than a month.

The U.S. delegation to today's meeting in Jamaica was headed by Strobe Talbott, the deputy secretary of state, and John M. Deutch, the deputy defense secretary. They were invited by the Caribbean Community, a grouping of 13 countries in the region.

Deutch and Talbott after the Kingston meeting were heading to the north coast of the Dominican Republic for a helicopter tour of portions of the border with Haiti. They were to get a briefing on efforts to stop the flow of goods across the border in violation of the U.N.-sanctioned embargo against Haiti.

The U.S. officials were to see U.S. Army Col. William McDonough, commander of a multinational observer group that is being assembled to monitor the main border crossings. A total of 88 military people from several countries are to form the monitoring team; they include 18 U.S. Army soldiers. The operation is expected to cost the U.S. government about $1.1 million a month once it gets going.

A small advance team of U.S. military personnel already are in the border area.

A U.S. official in Washington called the Deutch-Talbott mission to the border area "a last effort to settle the issue peacefully." This official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the aim is to "give the sanctions screw the last tightening."

FDA approves blood testing for prostate cancer detection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says a blood test for prostate cancer, the second leading cancer killer of American men, can increase early detection of the disease when teamed with the traditional prostate exam.

The FDA approved the prostate-specific antigen, or PSA, Monday as a blood test for men over 50 when used along with the digital rectal exam, the clinical test for enlarged prostate that has been used for decades.

Studies show the combination of the blood test and digital exam was at least 25 percent more accurate in detecting early prostate cancer than either test alone, FDA's Dr. Susan Alpert said.

About 50 percent of those whose results are positive on both tests have cancer, she said.

The FDA action will permit Hybritech Corp. of San Diego to market its Tandem PSA Assay kit as a diagnostic aid.

Many doctors have been using the PSA test as a prostate diagnostic aid even though it was approved in 1986 only as a means to monitor the progress of patients already receiving prostate cancer therapy.

In January, the American Urological Association issued a policy statement saying the digital rectal exam and the PSA measurement "substantially increase the early detection of prostate cancer." The AUA said the combination tests were most appropriate for men aged 50 or older and for those 40 and older who have added risk factors. These risk factors would include blacks and men who have a family history of prostate cancer.

Use of the PSA test as a prostate cancer screening technique has been controversial because the blood test gives many false positives. Alpert said the FDA action confirms that the PSA is only valuable as a diagnostic when used with the digital exam.

But even these two tests do not give the final word on prostate cancer.

The PSA test is able to detect a very small rise in the level of an antigen, or protein, that is produced only by the prostate.

"This antigen is present in the blood of most men," said Alpert. The level increases, however, as a result of a number of conditions, including prostate cancer, she said.

A positive result from both the digital exam and the PSA is usually followed by an ultrasound test, which makes an image of the prostate. A positive ultrasound test is followed by a needle biopsy, which Alpert said is the defining test for prostate cancer.

Prostate cancer kills more American men than any form of the disease except lung cancer.

A year into peace, Middle East embarks on slow transformation

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Three Palestinians, their travel permit expired, approached the checkpoint. Israeli soldiers at first were gruff, but then offered the Palestinians a deal: Beat them at arm wrestling and they could go.

Three lively bouts later the Palestinians were on their way, allowed to head back to Hebron.

The encounter would have been unthinkable before the Israel-PLO negotiations that became public a year ago Tuesday with the electrifying announcement that secret talks in Oslo, Norway, had produced a rough deal.

The results of those talks have so far altered the dynamics of the Middle East, its senior architects front-runners for this year's Nobel Peace Prize.

But the gradual accommodation between Israel and its neighbors has yet to involve any painful sacrifices in land or principles.

Peace between the Israelis and Jordanians is incomplete, while talks with Lebanon and Syria have not really started. No Arab state wants to get too close to Israel, but no one wants to be left out, either.

"We are beginning to solve the Palestinian problem, to neutralize the main crux of the conflict between Israel and the Arab states," said Jacques Neria, until recently a key negotiating strategist for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

"It is a newborn with lots of disease. But like any newborn it has a will to live, and its parents want it to live. No one can afford the alternative," he added.

Starting with the uneasy handshake between Rabin and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat on the White House lawn last September, a year of bargaining produced a workable, if churlish, relationship and a growing list of accomplishments.

Arafat, penniless and isolated after supporting Iraq in the Gulf War, agreed to transform the Palestine Liberation Organization from an exiled movement to a self-rule government that started running the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho last May.

The 800,000 Gazans are relieved to be rid of the bullets, tear gas, jailing and interrogations of the Israeli occupation which began in 1967.

Beaches are packed and streets once left to the rats after the nightly 8 p.m. curfew stay alive into the wee hours.

"I don't think they have felt the kind of peace of mind they are enjoying now during the past 27 years," said Khalil Shikaki, a Gaza native and head of the Center for Palestine Research and Studies in the West Bank.

The push to extend Palestinian control beyond Gaza and Jericho is diminishing the sense among the one million West Bank residents that peace ignored them. The two sides signed an agreement Monday to extend Palestinian control to education, health, welfare, tourism and taxation and the school system handed over this week.

For Israel, peace offered economic benefits and better relations with scores of countries, including major powers such as China and India, who had long backed the Arab cause.

Israeli men heaved a collective sigh of relief that they no longer have to spend their military duty chasing Palestinian children through Gaza's fetid alleyways.

This week Nissan Morad, the brother of a girl who was among 22 students killed in Maalot when PLO forces attacked a school in 1974, went and shook Arafat's hand.

"My mother said, 'If need be — shake Arafat's hand. The time has come to make peace,'" he said, making front-page headlines.

Palestinians are snapping up weekend bus trips to Israeli resorts like Tiberias. Israeli and Palestinian businessmen have combined forces to churn out tourist trinkets.

Still, future bloodshed will determine how far and how fast peace spreads.

There is disappointment by Palestinians who thought they would never see another Israeli soldier and Israelis who expected attacks to stop. Violence over the year claimed the lives of 54 Israelis and 178 Palestinians.

The most dangerous fault line lies between the self-rule areas in Gaza and the enclave where 4,000 Israeli settlers live.

"One serious incident could develop into a major crisis that would ignite a fire between the two sides and endanger the peace process," Brig. Doron Almog, commander of Israeli forces in Gaza, told the Maariv daily.

But he gave Palestinian police high marks for their performance, noting that there were 113 incidents of violence in the three months before self-rule and only 48 afterwards.

The Israeli government, by delaying some provisions of the self-rule agreement, is trying to put pressure on Arafat to rein in extremists.

Palestinians still have no passes to drive across Israel between Gaza and Jericho. Palestinian police have not been deployed at the border crossings with Egypt and Jordan and the release of Palestinian prisoners is slow.

With Arafat's administration in chaos and permits for jobs in Israel available only through a maze of red tape, Arab workers have twice erupted in violent riots.

The Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, claimed most of the killings and vows to continue attacks until Jews are expelled from all Israel. Should Arafat fail to bring improved lives to Gazans, the Hamas appeal will grow.

The year also brought a formal end to the state of war with Jordan, whose urbane King Hussein charmed Israelis by being everything Arafat is not.

Full regional peace will probably have to await progress in talks with Syria, as well as the spread of Palestinian autonomy throughout the West Bank.

Judge denies fed request to limit scope of Brady ruling

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A federal judge who struck down police enforcement of background checks required by the Brady handgun law affirmed that his ruling applies nationally, denying a government request to limit its scope.

Lawyers for the Justice Department and the U.S. Attorney's office in Arizona had asked U.S. District Judge John M. Roll to alter his ruling so that it applied only to Graham County Sheriff Richard Mack.

"A permanent injunction directed against a party — the defendant United States of America — that incidentally benefits similarly situated chief law enforcement officers, is not impermissibly broad," Roll said.

The government had argued that Roll's June 28 injunction was too broad because it potentially affected the rights of non-parties and instead should have been confined to Mack.

The government also contended that the court had erred in its judgment because Mack could only gain such an injunction as part of a class action — and no class action had been brought.

"Not so," Roll said in his ruling, dated Aug. 23.

He cited a 1987 case in which the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in part, "There is no general requirement that an injunction affect only the parties in the suit."

He also noted that that same decision, Bresgal v. Brock, said an injunction can be extended to people not in a suit, "even if it is not a class action — if such breadth is necessary to give prevailing parties the relief to which they are entitled."

In his June ruling, Roll ruled unconstitutional the congressionally imposed requirement that local chief law enforcement officials such as Mack must conduct background checks of potential handgun purchasers. He said it impermissibly encroached on the powers retained by the states under the 10th Amendment.

He also found that the law subjecting Mack to criminal sanctions for failing to perform the background checks was an unconstitutionally vague violation of the Fifth Amendment's protection of legal due process.

The law was named for James Brady, a press secretary shot during the 1981 attempted assassination of President Reagan. The law has been challenged in five other states by local-level law enforcement officials.

A Texas judge upheld the law; one in Mississippi ruled against the government but limited the injunction only to the sheriff suing.

In Montana, a judge ruled similarly to Roll, and the government also has asked that the scope of his injunction be limited to the sheriff who sued in that state. There has been no ruling.

Roll's June ruling said, "The defendant United States of America and its agents are permanently enjoined from further enforcing" the requirement.

Study: Poor have trouble getting homes insured

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — People in low-income areas have a harder time getting homeowners insurance than those in wealthy areas, according to a study released Monday by the state agency that represents the interests of insurance consumers.

While stopping short of accusing insurance companies of discrimination, Public Counsel Mark Kincaid of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel, called on insurance companies to explain the disparities found in the study.

"If you are poor, non-Anglo, or live in a house that is worth less than $50,000, you may have trouble getting standard homeowners insurance in Texas ... which amounts to insurance redlining," Kincaid said.

Rick Gentry, regional vice president for the Insurance Information Institute, said the study is vague and unfounded.

"Mark Kincaid made an outright assertion that the insurance industry seeks out only white customers in affluent suburbs. That is absolutely not true," Gentry said.

"Redlining is illegal in every state and we as an industry do not arbitrarily turn down good business. We try as best we can to base our decisions on the level of risk that is posed by a home or a business or a consumer's driving record."

A task force created by Texas Insurance Commissioner J. Robert Hunter is looking into whether insurance is unaffordable or unavailable in some areas of the state. Kincaid is a member of the task force.

Jerry Johns, president of Southwestern Insurance Information Services Inc., accused Kincaid of "trying the insurance industry in the press" rather than working within the task force to come up with solutions to any possible problems.

The study released Monday used zip codes to locate homeowners policies in six Texas cities: Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Lubbock and San Antonio.

Kincaid said the study looked for any correlation between residents who don't have homeowners insurance and factors such as race, income and home value.

The study concluded that anywhere from 40 percent to 80 percent of the residents in the six cities who didn't have insurance were either minorities, low-income families or lived in low-value homes.

Kincaid said the study doesn't determine if the people without insurance were denied coverage or had simply never sought to purchase coverage.

Marchers protest nuke waste dump

RUIDOSO, N.M. (AP) — Dangers of nuclear radiation need to be emphasized to people living in Mescalero Apache country, where a storage facility for radioactive waste is planned, protesters say.

"We want to speak to the people of Mescalero and let them know big business and the government care about nothing but the dollar," said Don Campbell of Tijeras, N.M. "We want to tell them they can stop this."

He was among some 30 demonstrators who chanted anti-nuclear slogans and marched to the Mescalero Apache reservation to protest the proposed Monitored Retrievable Storage facility.

Several dozen U.S. utilities have joined a proposal to store spent nuclear fuel from nuclear power plants at a private storage facility on Mescalero Apache land in south-central New Mexico.

Gov. Bruce King, communities near the reservation and New Mexico's congressional delegation oppose the storage facility.

Protesters marched Saturday from Ruidoso to the reservation entrance.

"We did it so people don't think we are only just standing by and watching," said Dave Dale, a Ruidoso environmentalist.

Eleven U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs officers watched and blocked the reservation entrance with two squad cars while speakers shouted chants and vowed to fight nuclear waste storage.

"Nuclear waste is the most dangerous thing and I know they have to do something with the spent fuel rods," Dale said. "They have got to find a solution, but this is not it."

The protesters carried signs criticizing Mescalero Tribal President Wendell Chino: "Chino sold his people," "Deliver us from 'Chino-Byl'" and "No nukes is good nukes."

Tribal officials have said the operation would bring in badly needed technical jobs and provide an economic boost to the area.

Unemployment on the reservation is between 15 percent and 30 percent, Tribal Councilor Silas Cochise said.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from the early 1970's).

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because I am terribly frustrated and am too ashamed to talk to anyone else about the problem. I am married to a basically wonderful guy, except for one problem. He is totally uninterested in sex. He's 28, handsome, and in apparent good health, so don't tell me to send him to a doctor. He loathes them.

He is very intelligent, has a Ph.D. in history, and his work is his life. He says people who are interested in sex are insecure and so intellectually dead that sex is all they have left. He always has an excuse for avoiding it. He's either too tired, it's too late, or he's too preoccupied with something he's reading.

I am 27 and I won several beauty contests in college. I'm cheerful, educated, mentally and physically healthy, and all I want is a decent sex life. I've tried all the gimmicks: sexy nightgowns, discussing it with him, leaving good books and magazine articles around for him to see. Even crying. Nothing helps.

We have one child (a miracle), and my husband didn't come near me for six months after that. I feel rejected. I've considered having an affair, but I'd feel too guilty to enjoy it. I don't want to divorce him because outside of this one failing, I love him.

How can I turn him on?

ABANDONED IN BED IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR ABANDONED: If he's physically healthy (and don't be so sure he is), his problem could be in his head. But no matter where it is, unless he regards it as a problem that he wants to solve, you're fighting a losing battle. So you can either continue in a marriage that's sexually inadequate, or call it quits. It's up to you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I do not get along very well. In fact, if it weren't for the kids, I wouldn't live within 1,000 of this idiot.

We are both artists. My husband now specializes in Western art and has been selling his paintings before the oil is dry on the canvas. I don't mean to put him down, but my work is much better than his even if it doesn't sell half as well. The public just happens to be going for gimmick art.

I can hardly stand it when my husband sells a painting. For one thing, he has a way of gloating that makes me want to put my fist right through his face. I wish I knew how to get over this envious attitude. Can you help me?

ENVIIOUS IN MONTANA

DEAR ENVIIOUS: Of all the emotions, envy is most difficult to control. Since you don't even like your husband and are competing with him professionally to boot, it will be doubly difficult to curb your envy. Keep telling yourself that your envy is an acid which does more damage to the container (you) than to the object (him).

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I went on a trip last year, he hired a woman to stay in our home and look after our three children. We thought we knew this woman quite well, as she was sort of in our social circle and belongs to our club.

After we came home and several weeks later, I couldn't find a pair of earrings and a pin to match, which had been a birthday gift from another friend of mine. I would know this jewelry anywhere, as it is quite unusual.

Last evening my husband and I went to our club, and there was this friend who stayed at our home last year, wearing my jewelry! Up until that time, I wanted to believe that I had just misplaced it. Needless to say, I was shocked. Shall I confront her with the facts as I know them, or should I just wait and hope she reads your column?

PORT ANGELES, WASH.

DEAR PORT: Confront her with the facts. But don't expect her to hand them over. Anyone who would steal, would probably lie.

New floors from old bed quilt designs

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Features

Early American patchwork quilts were made of necessity from scraps of cloth. Then patchwork was elevated to an art as wall hangings. Now, century-old patchwork designs are being translated onto modern countertops, walls and floors.

"Quilt patterns are graphically interesting, and they mix well with so many periods of furnishings," Lili Lihh says, noting that there are more than 4,000 documented patterns to work from.

Lihh, a consultant in New York, came up with an idea for a kitchen island countertop with traditional patchwork patterns at the corners. The counter is made of Avonite, an acrylic solid-surfacing material.

The patchwork patterns, in black and almond on a white ground, include the nine bells and the fan.

Although Lihh's work was intricate with expensive round cuts, simpler and less expensive patterns of squares and triangles could be equally effective on any solid surfacing material. Since most materials come in a wide range of colors, the variety of effects is almost infinite.

The secret of a good pattern, Lihh says, is a mix of light, medium and dark colors. As with quilts, the most dramatic effects come with simple shapes, interesting color contrasts and pattern repetition.

Crossville Ceramics of Crossville, Tenn., designs traditional American quilting patterns in porcelain tile for floors and walls.

"Patchwork motifs are warm and friendly," says Barbara Schirmeister of New York, a design consultant who originated the patchwork idea for Crossville. Working through a local distributor, a homeowner can have a border or a complete floor made by Crossville from one of 17 American quilt patterns and 33 color choices. Or the client may order a custom pattern, including his own patchwork design if the pattern is simple.

Jim Dougherty, Crossville's vice president of sales and marketing, says patchwork tile patterns are being used in kitchens, family rooms and entryways.

As with the Avonite countertop, round cuts are significantly more expensive.

Schirmeister says an "area rug" set within a solid color tile floor is highly effective. Patterned porcelain tiles can also be used as a center motif on a kitchen counter or as a border on a wall or floor. More unusual is a patchwork border around a fireplace or a center motif cut into a butcher block countertop.

Color can drastically affect the pattern.

"A monochromatic scheme is more subdued, great for a bathroom," Schirmeister says. "The same pattern in an entryway with three bold colors or with two highly contrasting colors such as red and white would be more dramatic."

Simple geometric patterns such as the star, log cabin and diamond quilt patterns, translate best for floor and counter. Others, such as the wedding ring and Sunbonnet Sue, can be used but are more complicated.

Armstrong's Color Passion vinyl sheet flooring, available in 30 solid colors, can be worked by professional installers into many quilt patterns, Thomas Hills Cook, the company's interior designer, says.

Patchwork has even spread to commercial settings. Interior designer Barbara Lazaroff used Italian ceramic tiles for patchwork floor patterns at Wolfgang Puck cafes in the Los Angeles area.

Lazaroff, a k a Mrs. Wolfgang Puck, says she was looking for a pattern that wasn't too commercial and appealed to a broad spectrum of customers. She says patchwork quilts are an indigenous art form in the United States so they represent "roots" for many Americans.

"And they are very comforting," she says, "like mashed potatoes and ice cream."

The English print room is making a comeback

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Features

The print room is sort of an 18th-century version of a vacation photo album. As an expert-level decoupage project, it's more labor intensive than an album. But from an artistic standpoint, it's far more interesting. And with today's quality color copiers, it doesn't have to be expensive.

The print room is just what it says it is: works on paper, such as engravings in paper frames, pasted onto the walls of a small room. This trompe l'oeil is further enhanced by pasting cutouts of bows, hooks, rosettes and ribbons between the prints.

Print rooms were popular among English upper classes in the 18th and 19th centuries as a byproduct of their grand tours of Italy and France. Travelers would buy prints of famous places visited and hang them in a small room as a memento. Some sought professional help, others installed their own. London printers catered to the trade by selling sheets of paper frames and ornaments that could be cut out and glued around the prints.

Although none is known to have survived, print rooms are believed to have been popular in the United States. The evidence is a newspaper advertisement of 1784 in which a Philadelphia decorator offers to create print rooms and to "superintend the business of hanging rooms," according to Catherine Lynn, author of "Wallpaper in America," published by Norton.

"As practiced in the 18th century, putting up a print room was a laborious process," author Donna Lang says. "I can't imagine anyone today being willing to sacrifice fine engravings. But the idea is too good not to be revived."

Thus, in her book, "Decorating With Paper," she suggests using color laser prints of original artwork. Copy shops can reproduce print sizes up to 11 by 17 inches and can enlarge or reduce the image.

Travers & Co. in New York, through designers, sells paper borders and friezes that can be used for frames. Additionally, there's "print room sheet" of decorative paper ornaments.

Originally, walls were glazed to create an antique surface before the prints were adhered. Hanging textured wallpaper is an easier way to create a suitable surface.

"If you get tired of the look, you can strip the wallpaper," Lang says.

Dee Davis, a decoupage specialist in New York City, designed several print rooms as magazine projects and now sells print room kits. One kit features 18th- and 19th-century botanical illustrations and another has scenes of chinoiserie drawn from "The Ladies Amusement," a book published in England in 1762.

Davis' kits include prints, frames, garlands, swags and rosettes plus instructions, adhesives and preservatives. There are enough materials to fill a 6-foot by 8-foot surface lavishly or a larger area more sparingly.

The prints can be applied to any painted surface. In lieu of a print room, Davis suggests using the decorative technique in a small powder room, dressing room, bath or foyer. It also can be used on a headboard, table or folding screen.

Even simpler than pasting up prints is to buy print room wallpaper. Fashion's "Framed Botanical" wallpaper imitates a print room with botanical illustrations. Other companies such as Brunschwig & Fils also offer print room looks. However, wallpaper removes one of the main charms of the look — its personality.

"The beauty of the print room is that it is unique," Lang says, "totally original and very personal."

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

PAMPA — Pampa is ranked No. 35 in Class 4A in the first Harris Rating System pre-season poll. Garden City, Kan. is Pampa's opening opponent and the Buffaloes probably aren't ranked in Kansas' top 20 Class 6A pre-season poll, according to their coach, Dave Meadows.

"I haven't seen any rankings, but I bet we're not up there," Meadows said. "We don't have that many starters back to be ranked."

A year ago, Garden City, which lost to Pampa, 21-0, was ranked among the top Kansas teams.

The outcome of the Pampa-Garden City tilt was not predicted by Harris.

The Harvesters are the top-ranked team in District 1-4A, followed by Randall (No. 36 overall), Borger (No. 85), Hereford (No. 109), Dumas (No. 148), Amarillo Caprock (167) and Canyon (183).

Cowboys going after former Rams' back

Gary offered one-year contract to back up Smith

FORT WORTH (AP) — Reserve running back Lincoln Coleman, who reported to camp out of shape and had fumbling problems throughout the preseason, says he'll attend the Dallas Cowboys' annual Kickoff Luncheon today.

However, he may not stick around.

"I'm going to try and find out if Cleveland Gary's going to be there, because if he is, I might as well slip out the back," Coleman said.

The Cowboys on Monday offered Gary a one-year contract worth less than $200,000, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today. The deal reportedly includes an incentive package that would at least double Gary's income if he becomes the Cowboys' full-time running back.

The Cowboys are hoping they can convince Gary to take a sizeable pay cut.

"It's almost two different salaries for two different scenarios," owner Jerry Jones said. "There would be incentives that aren't likely to be earned if he sits, but the money would jump right up there if Emmitt (Smith) goes down and (Gary) has to play."

Gary was waived this week by the Los Angeles Rams, and there are no other proven veterans on the Cowboys' wish list for a runner to back up Smith and replace Coleman on the roster.

"We looked at the waiver wire and said, 'Cleveland Gary is the best one out there in that final cut,'" coach Barry Switzer said.

Gary is considerably more accomplished than Coleman. The 6-foot, 220-pound Gary was the Rams' No.1 draft choice in 1989 out of the University of Miami.

In Los Angeles he worked under offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese, who now holds that post with the Cowboys. Gary was a part-time starter until 1992, when he played with the first team for all 16 games.

That season, he rushed for 1,125 yards and scored 10 touchdowns while battling fumbling problems. Last year, Jerome Bettis was the National Football League's rookie of the year while assuming Gary's position as the featured back.

Meanwhile, Coleman says his days in Dallas are numbered.

"I'm only here until they can find a way to get rid of me, and really, getting out of my hometown would help me," said Coleman, a Dallas native.

Coleman became a sort of local folk hero last season after gaining 57 yards against Miami. Dallasites couldn't resist his story: a local guy who had worked his way from the loading docks of a department store to the Arena Football League and finally made good with the NFL champion Cowboys.

However, Coleman knows a good story doesn't matter much in the NFL.

"And since I haven't done the same thing every game since (the Miami game), I'm a bust," he said.

Bucks expected to make playoffs again

Most pre-season football publications figure White Deer will show up in the playoffs once again. The pollsters should be even more convinced now, especially after the Bucks' scrimmage with Wellington last week.

"I was real pleased with the way we looked. I felt like we improved a whole lot from our first scrimmage to the last one," said Bucks' coach Stan Caffey. "We had good play from our defense and we moved the ball better on offense."

Mitch Ford, a 245-pound tackle, did a thorough job of shutting down Wellington in the middle. "Mitch was the highlight of the scrimmage. He also looked good at offensive tackle," Caffey said.

Other defensive standouts were Duane Coffey and Jeff Caffey at the safety positions and Ricky Captain at end. The offensive line of Benji Woods, Andy Phillips, Jeremy Savage and J.W. Lanham also drew praise from Caffey.

Captain, a freshman filling in for the injured Justin Back, rushed for over 100 yards and 10 yards per carry in the controlled scrimmage. Caffey, at quarterback, averaged over eight yards per carry.

Back, a starting at defensive back last season, had a knee injury and is expected to be out for two weeks. He was also expected to start in the offensive backfield this year.

"Ricky (Captain) took Justin's place at running back last week. Both are good runners and it looks like I'm going to have to figure out how I'm going to get both of them in the ballgame when Justin gets back," Caffey said.

White Deer opens the season against Vega Friday night at Vega.

Lady Harvesters take second in Wichita Falls Rider Tournament

Volleyball

The Pampa High volleyball team sent three teams to early exits while placing second in the Wichita Falls Rider Tournament last weekend.

The Lady Harvesters posted a 4-2 record in pool play and then dispatched Graham, 15-3, 15-9, Burk Burnett, 15-11, 15-11 and Windthorst, 15-8, 3-15, 15-12 in the semifinals.

"Beating Windthorst was a big win for us. They've won the state championship in Class 1A the last two years and they have a tough team again," said Pampa head coach Brad Borden.

Pampa lost to Vernon, 11-15, 15-7, 9-15 in the finals.

"I felt like we had a reasonable chance to beat Vernon, but we just ran out of gas. There wasn't any air conditioning in the gym and we played four matches in a row,"

Borden said.

Tammy Chesher, Candi Atwood and Serenity King of Pampa were named to the all-tournament team. Atwood was named the tournament's outstanding setter and King was named the tournament's outstanding defensive player. Borden said Michelle Abbott, Jane Brown and Jennifer Jones for the Lady Harvesters also made outstanding contributions to the Lady Harvesters' success.

Pampa's record is now 3-3. The Lady Harvesters host Perryton on Saturday with the junior varsity match starting at 2 p.m.

The Pampa 9th grade team won the consolation title at the Amarillo Invitational last weekend. The Pampa freshmen lost to Amarillo High, but came back to beat Palo Duro White, Palo Duro Blue and Tascosa in the 9th grade portion of the tournament.

Kelton kept its unbeaten streak going, defeating San Jacinto Christian, 15-9, 15-8, last weekend.

The Lady Lions, now 3-0, got outstanding play from experienced players Kelly Crockett and Brandi Conner.

"Kelly is our only senior and she's really been playing well. Brandi is making some unreturnable serves against San Jacinto," said Kelton coach Brad Slatton.

Crockett has started four years and Connor three years at Kelton.

"This was the best match we've played so far," Slatton said. "We just want to keep things going in the right direction."

Becker knocked out of U.S. Open

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Boris Becker could only come up with a long list of excuses after losing to Richey Reneberg, a player more accustomed to success in doubles than singles.

On the opening day of the U.S. Open, which didn't end until shortly after 12:30 this morning, Becker and several other seeded players were knocked out of the year's final Grand Slam tournament.

"They made the court extremely slow this year, especially center court and the Grandstand, and they changed the balls," Becker moaned. "They made them very heavy and very soft, and that is very bad for my game."

What was worst for his game was the play of Reneberg.

"Basically the fifth set was the best set I've ever played in my life," Reneberg said after upsetting the seventh-seeded Becker 6-1, 6-4, 4-6, 1-6, 7-6 (7-5). "I had nothing to lose. I could go for my shots."

"There was no way I could play any better. I was making just about everything."

It took six match points, but Reneberg finally prevailed, the winning point coming on a smash that sent the winner's arms skyward and Becker packing.

But he wasn't the only one ousted.

Markus Zoccke of Germany ousted No. 2 Goran Ivanisevic 6-2, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 in the men's singles, while Gigi Fernandez, a Wimbledon semifinalist in July, bumped No. 12 Sabine Hack of Germany from the 128-player women's field. And 16th-seeded Petr Korda of the Czech Republic withdrew from the tournament with a pulled groin muscle.

Defending women's champion Steffi Graf was to test her ailing back today in a first-round match against Anne Mall of La Mesa, Calif. Jim Courier, who was ranked No. 1 in the world and top-seeded here a year ago, is seeded 11th this year and took on dangerous veteran Aaron Krickstein.

Among others seeing action today were Stefan Edberg, 1988 winner Mats Wilander and 1990 women's champion Gabriela Sabatini.

Not every seeded player had problems Monday, however.

Among the men, No. 3 Sergi Bruguera stopped Bryan Shelton 6-0, 6-2, 7-5; No. 6 Michael Chang defeated Andrei Cherkasov 6-4, 6-2, 6-2; No. 12 Wayne Ferreira ousted

Wade McGuire 7-5, 6-2, 6-2, and No. 13 Thomas Muster beat Daniele Musa 6-3, 6-2, 6-0.

The women were led by French Open champion Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, seeded second, who eliminated Linda Ferrando 7-5, 6-1, and Wimbledon winner Conchita Martinez, seeded third, who defeated Veronika Martinek 6-1, 6-0.

No. 4 Mary Pierce stopped Andrea Temesvari 6-3, 6-2; No. 9 Mary Joe Fernandez defeated Sabine Appelmans 6-4, 6-3, and No. 16 Amy Frazier beat Rachel McQuillan 6-0, 6-3.

No one, however, complained as bitterly as Becker did following his three-hour, three-minute marathon.

"I thought I had a very good chance, but this tournament is playing completely different than all the other tournaments I have played over the summer," he said. "Usually the hardcourt tennis is very quick and you can relay serve and volley; you don't have to rally so much from the baseline."

"But with these slow conditions here, it makes it very difficult, and it is almost like I didn't need to play all the hardcourt tournaments to prepare for this because it is two completely different circuits."

Tech quarterback still undecided

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes knows one thing about his starting quarterback: Whoever he is, two other people want his job.

The Tech quarterback's identity has yet to be announced as the Red Raiders approach their season opener at 1 p.m. Saturday against New Mexico. When the teams played in 1990, Tech won, 34-32.

"It'll be interesting, to say the least," Dykes said Monday. "They've got a heck of a football team. They're going to come in here with fire in their eyes."

All three of Tech's contenders for quarterback will probably play, Dykes predicted.

He described each one's specialty: Weslaco redshirt sophomore Sone Cavazos brings the most experience; San Antonio Holmes redshirt freshman Tony Darden has a particularly nice touch; and Lubbock Estacado redshirt freshman Zebbie Lethridge is fast and strong.

Dykes said he doesn't know when the starter will be selected.

"Believe me, there's nothing magic about waiting," he said. "But it's just not an easy call."

Both New Mexico and Tech are coming off 6-5 records last year. It was their first winning season in 11 years for the Lobos.

The Red Raiders' scoring ability has hemorrhaged, though, with the departures of I-back Byron "Bam" Morris, receiver Lloyd Hill and quarterback Robert Hall.

New Mexico, meanwhile, boasts former Odessa Permian quarterback Stoney Case.

Dykes lauded the athleticism and passing skill of Case, who threw 17 touchdown passes last year and ran for 14 more scores for the Lobos.

Furthermore, players on New Mexico's offensive line average 309 pounds.

"You listen to this," Dykes warned as he read off size statistics on tackles like 6-7, 363-pound Calvin Allen, and 6-4, 344-pound Aaron Saavedra.

"Big means a lot of things," he said. "Big is hard to move and big is hard to run over."

Dykes described New Mexico as unpredictable, versatile and well coached.

Hill named new Spurs' coach

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — After going 2 1/2 months without a head coach, the San Antonio Spurs finally hired one.

Orlando Magic assistant Bob Hill was named to the post Monday, ending the team's search for a successor to John Lucas, who resigned June 9.

"This is the best opportunity I have had in my career and my life," said Hill, who coached the New York Knicks in the 1986-87 season and the Indiana Pacers from 1990-93. Hill's record as an NBA head coach is 133-154.

"He is one of the most highly regarded technicians in our league, and his expertise will be paramount to this team's success," said Gregg Popovich, the Spurs' executive vice president of basketball operations.

Hill said he'll focus on team speed and defense in order to help the Spurs win in the postseason, where they've struggled in recent years.

Fresno State's Adrian Callborne loses a fumble under the defense of Ohio State's Craig Powell in the third quarter

Buckeyes win Pigskin Classic

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Joey Galloway caught a record 67-yard touchdown pass and scored on a showy reverse Monday night as No. 20 Ohio State beat Fresno State 34-10 in the Pigskin Classic.

It was college football's second rout in as many days. Fourth-ranked Nebraska beat No. 24 West Virginia 31-0 Sunday in the Kickoff Classic, the first game of the season.

Galloway, a wide receiver who is one of four returning starters on offense, starred in the second half after teammate Eddie George dominated the game's opening 30 minutes with two 1-yard TD runs.

George was impressive in his first game as the replacement for Raymont Harris, who graduated as Ohio State's leading rusher last season with 1,344 yards and 12 touchdowns.

George, a 230-pound junior tailback, finished with 90 yards on 24 carries and the two touchdowns. He carried seven straight times on the Buckeyes' opening drive, culminating in a 1-yard plunge over the middle for his first touchdown.

The Buckeyes, 10-1 last season with a victory over Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl, scored on three of their first four possessions.

Tim Patillo intercepted Adrian Claiborne's pass at the Ohio State 33 and 11 seconds later, Bobby Hoying connected with Galloway for the record 67-yard scoring pass for a 14-0 lead with 2:03 remaining in the first quarter.

On Ohio State's previous possession, Scott Terna set a game record with a 54-yard punt.

Hoying was 10-for-16 for 194 yards and the long touchdown.

Fresno State managed just three plays on its next possession before Jon Williams was forced to punt from the Ohio State 42.

George took over the ball, running on seven of Ohio State's next nine plays en route to another 1-yard charge up the middle and a 21-0 lead. Josh Jackson's 24-yard field goal increased Ohio State's lead to 24-7 in the opening minutes of the third quarter.

Galloway showed off his running ability on his second TD. He started left, then reversed his field around the right end for an 8-yard score and a 31-10 lead at 12:00 in the third. Jackson added a 33-yard field goal to make it 34-10 with 6:17 to play.

Fresno State, co-champion of the Western Athletic Conference last season, was no match for the Buckeyes in its first game against a Big Ten Conference opponent.

The Bulldogs, 8-4 last season, had to replace quarterback Trent Diller, a first-round draft pick of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Claiborne, a redshirt sophomore, completed a 4-yard pass to Michael Pittman for Fresno State's only TD at 5:49 of the second quarter.

Claiborne finished 12-for-22 for 139 yards. Pittman had 97 yards on 26 carries.

Moments before halftime, Johan Lyssand barely missed a 55-yard field-goal attempt for the Bulldogs.

The second half started just as poorly for Fresno State, with Williams taking a bad snap and kicking the ball out of bounds after just three running plays and an incomplete pass.

Even when the Buckeyes committed penalties, Fresno State managed only a field goal. A facemask penalty brought the Bulldogs to the Ohio State 16 in the third, but the drive stalled on Claiborne's fumble and incomplete pass. Lyssand came on to kick a 28-yard field goal, making it 24-10.

Bono once again No. 2 quarterback behind Chiefs' Montana

By ADAM NAZIMOWITZ
AP Sports Writer

Steve Bono, who proved himself a capable backup to Joe Montana in 1991, will play that role again this season for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Bono found out Monday he had beaten out Matt Blundin to be the No. 2 quarterback for the Chiefs. Blundin will backup Bono.

"The bottom line of it was the experience that Steve Bono has in actual competition," coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "When you look at Matt, one full season as a quarterback ... he's still in the process of thinking his way through this stuff.

As Montana's backup in 1991, Bono led the San Francisco 49ers to a 5-1 record after Montana was sidelined.

On most teams, backup quarterbacks don't get on the field much. But that's not always the case when backing up Montana, 37, who has been injury-prone the last few years.

Schottenheimer decided on Bono, who didn't throw an interception in the preseason, over Blundin, a third-year player who was picked off four times in exhibition games.

In preseason games, Blundin was 31-for-47 for 372 yards and one TD. Bono was 20-for-43 for 211 yards and one TD.

"I'm sure Matt's disappointed, but he can look to the 70 percent completion and over seven yards per attempt as positives. I have no question he'll continue to improve at quarterback," Schottenheimer said.

Bono, acquired this year from the 49ers, figured his experience would be beneficial in the competition.

"It's all helpful. It all helps," he said. "Every bit you can get is a benefit."

Deion Sanders

There was still no decision as of early this morning on where the free agent cornerback will play this season.

Although Sanders said he would make up his mind on Monday, he didn't. The Miami Dolphins and at least two other teams have offered Sanders a contract, with reports putting the bidding around $3 million a year.

"I don't know what's going on — how many teams are involved, or who's doing what," Dolphins general manager Eddie Jones said. "As far as I know, he hasn't decided to go anywhere."

49ers

San Francisco received some unexpected good news when running back Dexter Carter, thought to be out for the season with a knee injury, returned to practice. He expects to play in the opener against the Los Angeles Raiders.

Team physician Dr. Michael Dillingham initially believed Carter tore his anterior cruciate ligament at the end of a 46-yard kickoff return in an Aug. 18 exhibition at San Diego.

But an additional examination showed the ligament had been stretched, not torn.

"I said from the beginning it wasn't what everybody thought, so I'm not really surprised," Carter said. "Two days after it happened, it calmed down. I could come out here and run and feel like I could play in the first game. That's why I was telling you guys, it would be sooner than later, because I knew how my body felt. The end result is we're all happy."

Carter, a return specialist and backup to halfback Ricky Watters, said he would wear a knee brace during practice as a precaution.

Surgeon general's son gets 10 years for sale of cocaine

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders's son was sentenced to the minimum 10 years in prison for his first offense: selling an eighth of an ounce of cocaine to an undercover officer.

Mrs. Elders fought back tears as Kevin Elders was led away Monday. His father, Oliver, slammed his hands into a steel door in frustration and repeated, "They never even gave him a shot!"

Elders, 28, had claimed entrapment, saying the informant who set up the July 29, 1993, deal had threatened to expose his drug addiction and embarrass his mother at her confirmation hearing.

Circuit Judge John Pleggio said the law forced him to impose the minimum 10-year term. Elders could have been sentenced to life for the $275 sale.

Elders wasn't arrested until Dec. 19. The warrant was issued a week after his mother suggested at a Dec. 7 National Press Club luncheon that the government should study legalizing drugs as a means of reducing the crime rate.

Defense attorney Les Hollingsworth said he would appeal.

Elders has acknowledged having a decade-long drug problem, including a three-year cocaine addiction. He said at his trial that his parents were aware of his drug problems, yet never discussed it.

"They really didn't know how bad it really is," he said.

Schools to use metal detectors at football games

FORT WORTH (AP) — Citing an increase of weapons on campus, the Fort Worth school district says it will use metal detectors at football games this fall.

"There are some crazy people out there, and you don't know what to expect anymore," Ronny White, athletics director of the Fort Worth school system, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Monday's editions. "We have to protect our children and fans."

White said at least two walk-through detectors will be placed at the gates at each of the district's three stadiums — Handley, Farrington and Clark fields.

Each detector will be manned by an attendant with a hand-held scanner and security officer. Four detectors are available to handle larger crowds.

During the 1992-93 school year, the last available yearly reporting date, 246 weapons were confiscated at Fort Worth schools. Thirty-nine were guns.

Last fall, 145 weapons were confiscated — including 30 guns. Officials said they don't know how many were seized at games.

The school district used metal detectors at basketball games last year.

Fans won't be the only ones screened. District policy requires players, coaches, trainers, managers, game officials and concession workers to pass the screening process.

Using scanners may mean fans have to arrive at games earlier, but Bobby Whiteside, security officer for Fort Worth schools, said their safety is worth the wait.

Coach Ronnie Gage of defending Class 5A Division II state champ Lewisville remembers complaints from fans attending last year's title game against Aldine MacArthur at the Astrodome.

"Our fans weren't real crazy about having to wait, but they understood the reason," Gage said. "We don't have (scanners), and I hope it doesn't get to the point where we have to."

Fort Worth will be one of only a few Texas school districts using metal detectors at games. Dallas has used them occasionally since 1990, but made them mandatory for big crowds at such cross-town rivalries as Carter-Kimball and Roosevelt-Hillcrest.

Kathy Billingsley of the Texas Education Agency said the federal government is not comfortable with school districts purchasing metal detectors.

"They were really hot a few years ago, and they're successful to some degree. But kids are still finding ways to get weapons into schools," she said.

However, Fort Worth superintendent Thomas Tocco says the detectors are effective. They were used where he last worked, in St. Charles Parish, near New Orleans.

"Granted, it doesn't solve the problem of school violence, but it's effective in slowing it," Tocco said. "It's one of the most significant weapons in our arsenal, no pun intended."

Pacific war exhibit added to show on bombing of Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution, bending to pressure from lawmakers, announced Monday it will add an exhibit on World War II in the Pacific to its planned show on the atomic bombing of Japan.

The Smithsonian said it was responding to complaints from veterans' groups and military historians that the atomic bomb exhibit was unbalanced because it failed to provide adequate justification for the bombing.

The exhibit, which will include the front fuselage of the Enola Gay, the B-29 that dropped the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945, had already been revised once in response to the criticism.

But earlier this month, two dozen members of Congress wrote Robert McCormick Adams, the Smithsonian's secretary, complaining that the Enola Gay exhibit wrongly portrays Japan as an innocent victim of the atomic bomb. They asked that the exhibit be altered before it opens.

The exhibit is scheduled to open in about nine months at the popular National Air and Space Museum.

Now, to get to the main exhibit, "The Last Act: The Atomic Bomb and the End of World War II," visitors first will pass through the Pacific War show, consisting of about 50 photographs covering 4,000 square feet.

The addition, tentatively titled "The War in the Pacific: An American Perspective," will focus on the ways that Americans experienced the Pacific War, both on the battlefield and on the home front, the Smithsonian said in a statement.

Census Bureau report says millions of youngsters live in 'blended' families

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 10 million American children live in families in which there is a stepparent or siblings who are less than full brothers and sisters, the Census Bureau reports.

On the other hand, 33.4 million children live in "nuclear families" — that is, with both biological parents and any full brothers or sisters.

Those youngsters under age 18 in nuclear families accounted for 50.8 percent of all young people, according to the report, "The Diverse Living Arrangements of Children, Summer 1991."

While many past studies have reported the relationship of children to the head of a household, Census officials said this was the first to relate children to all members of their household.

The bureau noted that the "decline of the American family continues to be a controversial topic," with many people considering the nuclear family the traditional unit. Census researchers limited their study to reporting the numbers of various family and household arrangements, however.

The study disclosed sharp differences in children's living arrangements by race and Hispanic origin.

For example, 56.4 percent of white children resided in nuclear families with both parents, while just 25.9 percent of black youngsters lived in such households.

For Hispanics the figure was 37.8 percent of youngsters. Hispanics can be of any race and thus are also counted among blacks and whites.

One-parent families were the next largest component, accounting for 24.0 percent of all children. Mom was the parent in 21.2 percent.

Among white youngsters, 19.1 percent lived in one-parent families, with mothers accounting for 16.4 percent. Some 49.2 percent of black youths were in one-parent families, 46.7 percent with their mother. And 31.1 percent of Hispanic youths lived with one parent, 28.5 percent with mother.

Just 1.7 percent of all youngsters live with their grandparents, 0.9 percent of whites, 5.4 percent of blacks and 1.3 percent of Hispanics.

Among the 9.8 million children in "blended families" — those with a stepparent or a stepsibling or half-sibling — the most common situation was for a child to have a half-brother or half-sister. This was the case for nearly 5 million youngsters, or 50.6 percent of young people in blended families.

There were 21.1 percent in families with a stepparent and 18.3 percent living with a stepparent and a half-sibling.

The study also found 7.9 million youngsters living in extended families, that is with the addition of other people in the household.

Having grandmother live in was the most common, 25.2 percent of the cases, followed by 16.6 percent with both grandparents but only 3.9 percent with just granddad on hand.

Having a cousin live in the household was the case for 21.1 percent of the youths in extended families, while living with an aunt was the case for 19.7 percent and 18.9 percent had an uncle on hand.

There was also a scattering of youngsters whose households included nephews, nieces and in-laws.

Two fraternity members plead guilty to hazing death

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two Southeast Missouri State University students pleaded guilty Monday to involuntary manslaughter and hazing in the death of a fraternity pledge.

Mikel Giles, 22, of Dallas, and Cedric Murphy, 22, of Memphis, Tenn., appeared in St. Louis Circuit Court before Judge Margaret Neill. They are among 16 fraternity members charged in the hazing of five Kappa Alpha Psi pledges last February that ended with the death of 25-year-old Michael Davis.

Neill sentenced the two to five years' probation and 500 hours of community service on the involuntary manslaughter charge and 30 days in the Cape Girardeau County jail on the hazing charge.

Prosecutor Morley Swingle recommended that the community service involve traveling to colleges and universities to warn other students about the dangers of hazing. At the request of Davis' family, he also asked that it include work in a morgue "so that they would constantly be reminded what they had done to Michael Davis."

Swingle said it was the first time as prosecutor he had recommended probation in a homicide case. But he said he felt justice was being served.

"I felt in this situation that nobody in this case intentionally killed anybody," he said. "What they did was reckless and stupid and criminal."

Giles and Murphy were remorseful, Swingle said, and had turned themselves in and given complete confessions.

In exchange for their pleas, one count of hazing against Giles was dropped and four counts of hazing against Murphy were dropped, Swingle said.

Both men agreed to testify in other cases stemming from the week of hazing in February, in which prosecutors say five pledges were repeatedly slapped and punched by fraternity members. A third fraternity member, Carlos Turner, has reached a similar agreement with prosecutors.

All 16 defendants were charged with hazing; seven were also charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Last week, fraternity member Keith Allen, 22, of St. Louis, was convicted by a jury of five counts of hazing. Jurors recommended he be sentenced to six months in jail on each count.

The cases were moved to St. Louis on a change of venue after a judge said there was not a large enough jury pool of blacks in Cape Girardeau for all of the trials. The victim was black, as are all of the defendants.
