Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA — People have been reported carrying off items from the site of the Friday morning fire at Archie's Aluminum Fab.

Theresa Maness said Monday that though the structure was damaged by the fire, the items still belong to the business. She said the business is trying to make a determination of the materials for insurance purposes, and people carrying off items make it difficult to determine an accurate assessment of damage.

She requested that people carrying off items should please return them to the site so the damage assessment can properly be made.

Mrs. Maness said when disasters like fires, storms and similar events occur, people should realize the contents of homes and buildings are still important to the owners and that the items still belong to the disaster victims and should not be removed.

PAMPA — The Pampa Area Cancer Support Group will meet Thursday from 7-8 p.m. at Coronado Hospital.

Guest speaker will be Larry V. Thomas, manager of Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Amarillo and the Plains area. His program will be on "Dollars and Sense" and will address financial management of medical expenses due to illness and other related expenses.

The Pampa Area Cancer Support Group is directed by area cancer survivors, with help from the American Cancer Society, Don & Sybil Harrington Center and Coronado Hospital.

Visitors from area communities are welcome to attend.

For more information, call 665-4742, 665-7916 or 665-8628.

LEFORS — The Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet at 7 p.m. today at the Lefors Elementary School library.

Items on the agenda include approval of monthly expenditures, approval of a tax rate for the 1994-1995 school year, discussion and approval of substitute school teachers, approval of a milk bid and approval of a school health plan.

In his report, Superintendent Joe Roper will discuss copy machines, repair of the gymnasium floor and the Chapter I reading program.

PAMPA — Southside Youth Program headed by Tim Woods, Charles King, Tommy Murry and the Rev. J.L. Patrick plans to offer school supplies to underprivileged children.

Donations may be forwarded to Woods at 1104 Varnon Dr., 665-1247; King at 1080 Varnon Dr., 665-7947, or Patrick at 1112 Duncan, 669-7616. Financial contributions may be sent to Macedonia Baptist Church, Box 2735, Pampa, TX 79066.

School supplies are to be distributed beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday at Southside Senior Citizens Center.

A flag football league for children six through 12-years old is to be organized. For more information, call Woods at 665-1247.

PAMPA — Pampa Economic Development Corp., 301 N. Ballard, plans to meet at 4 p.m. Thursday to consider an agenda of prospect requests and a preliminary operating budget for the next fiscal year.

An executive session is planned to discuss personnel matters and hear a report from the director of the agency.

WORLD

HAVANA (AP) — The remnants of a tropical storm helped hold down what was expected to be a last-minute surge of Cuban rafters today, the deadline for them to leave without interference from Fidel Castro's government.

Cuba has agreed to crack down on the illegal exodus, in return for a large increase in the number of legal immigrants to the United States.

No rafters were picked up by U.S. authorities in the first six hours today.

The Coast Guard said its ships picked up 283 Cuban refugees Monday, down considerably from a Sunday surge of 1,004.

McLean DPS trooper honored with Medal of Valor

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

A Department of Public Safety trooper honored for heroism looked like he wasn't too sure what all the fuss was about when he was awarded yet another medal for bravery Monday by the Highway Patrol Association.

Trooper Ron Shank of McLean was honored with the Medal of Valor and $1,000 by the association Monday for his part in the 1993 rescue of Mikail Barbarian, 32, of Glendale, Calif., from a flaming car despite Barbarian's resistance to Shank's efforts.

"It scares you to death. It terrifies you," Shank said. "Basically I did what any other officer or any other people would have done. You're just thrust in that situation ... You don't have time to think. You do what you have to do to get through it."

As a result of Shank's efforts, Barbarian was able to continue his trip after being treated and released from a local hospital.

The award was presented to Shank by John Flores, public relations director of the association, at McLean Fire Department where Shank has an office.

The Medal of Valor is presented to one trooper each year.

Shank explained he was trying to stop Barbarian from speeding along Interstate 40 on Jan. 27, 1993, when the driver halted in the lane rather than pulling to the shoulder of the road. A 1984 Toyota truck driven by James Ayers, 64, of Wasilla, Alaska, rear-ended Barbarian and both vehicles were immediately engulfed in flames.

Ayers backed out of the fire, Shank said, leaving Barbarian's 1979 Oldsmobile shooting flames 20 feet high. Barbarian was hysterical, Shank said, and wouldn't get out of the car. Shank said he had hold of Barbarian one time but the man's shirt tore and he was able to get back in the car. Three truckers stopped and assisted Shank in pulling Barbarian from the flames.

The trooper sustained first degree burns on his face, leg and arm while rescuing Barbarian.

While the rescue was a new experience for Shank, it does not change his view of life or his job, he said.

"It just makes you realize things could happen," he said.

In June, 1993, Shank was honored with the Director's Citation from DPS for heroic efforts on Barbarian's behalf. Sgt. Jim Powell of Pampa nominated Shank for the Director's Citation, the first to be awarded to a trooper in his area.

"I'm glad to see him get all the recognition he's due," said Powell. "That was a tremendous act of bravery. It's very seldom, I believe, that police get credit for what they do."

The truckers were also honored by DPS for their efforts. They are L.G. Riley, Amarillo, Thomas Webb, Guthrie, Okla., and Charles Malloy, San Diego, Calif.

Atlantic City bound

When the current Miss Texas competes in Atlantic City for the title of Miss America, there will be many residents in the Pampa area cheering for the Borger resident.

Arian Archer, 20, took the Miss Texas crown in Fort Worth in July. She is the daughter of Dickie and Crista Archer of Borger and the granddaughter of Howard and Virginia Archer of Lefors and Myrtice Evans of Friona.

The family will leave Wednesday to be with Arian in Atlantic City.

In addition, her mother, Crista, works in Pampa as a counselor at Horace Mann and Baker elementary schools. She also was a third grade teacher at Skellytown for the past four years.

Miss Texas attends Texas Tech University in Lubbock, where she is an education major in her senior year. During the Miss Texas pageant, her platform was on child abuse. In the national competition, she will sing "Almost Over You."

The Miss America pageant will be televised at 8 p.m. Saturday on KAMR-TV, Channel 4.

Former U.S. treasurer receives prison term

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former U.S. treasurer whose signature is on the paper money in practically every American's wallet was sentenced to four months in prison today for tax evasion and obstruction of justice.

Catalina Vasquez Villalpando was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan for her guilty plea to three felony counts, which also included conspiring to hide income from her former employer while she served as treasurer during the Bush administration.

"I can find no basis to excuse your conduct," Hogan told the woman whose signature appears on all U.S. paper money printed between December 1989 and April 1994.

Hogan said the high office Villalpando held imposed even more of a burden to obey the laws.

After she completes her prison term, Villalpando will be placed on supervised release for three years, including four months of home detention overseen by a probation officer.

Speaking in a tearful voice barely heard in the courtroom, Villalpando told Hogan "I'm embarrassed" to be there for sentencing. "I hope you will find it in your heart to take what I owe society in some sort of community service," she said.

The judge did order Villalpando to perform 200 hours of community service after her release.

Villalpando pleaded guilty in February, rather than stand trial.

She acknowledged obstructing an independent prosecutor's investigation of the Reagan-era influence-peddling scandal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

She could have been sentenced to five years of prison and a $250,000 fine on each of the three felony convictions.

Hogan was faced with conflicting views of the degree of her cooperation with the Justice Department and the Independent Counsel's Office. The Justice Department claimed she did "nothing to advance the ball" in their investigation.

Justice Department lawyer Jonathan P. Rusch said Ms. Villalpando lied repeatedly in all phases of the department's investigation. Only this year, he said, "did she finally admit wrongdoing."

But Robert P. Warren, of the office that is conducting a continuing investigation of the HUD scandal, said, "she has been entirely truthful ... she has not dissembled with us."

The woman admitted in court she reported 1989 taxable income of $161,983, while her real taxable income was $329,884 and that she thus evaded $47,013 in federal income taxes.

She also admitted conspiring to conceal during her confirmation proceedings, from the Senate, the Treasury and the Office of Government Ethics that she was continuing to receive financial benefits from her former employer, Communications International Inc.

The company is an Atlanta-based, minority-owned firm that sold and leased telecommunications equipment to U.S. government agencies, state and local governments and commercial users. Villalpando was the firm's senior vice president from 1985 to 1989, the year she became treasurer.

"She knows she's done wrong," Villalpando's lawyer, Bradford Reynolds, told the judge. "I'm hard pressed to see any purpose that would be served by having this person serve some time."

Research: Age risk for cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists have long believed that people accumulate cancer-causing mutations of genes as they grow older. Now researchers have published the first direct evidence.

"This has never been directly demonstrated until now," said Gino A. Cortopassi, assistant professor of molecular pharmacology and toxicology at the University of Southern California School of Pharmacy.

"Age is the single most significant risk factor for cancer and the incidence of most cancers rises exponentially with age," he said.

His findings appear in today's edition of Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Cortopassi and colleagues from the USC School of Medicine magnified the DNA of 53 living patients and 31 people autopsied to detect rare changes in a gene called BCL2. The mutations are found in about half of all non-Hodgkin's lymphoma tumors.

On average, BCL2 mutations were 40 times higher in spleens and 13 times higher in the blood of people over age 60 than in those under 20.

Scientists believe it takes a series of mutations to cause cancer.

Philip Hanawalt, a biology professor at Stanford University, said it still isn't clear why the BCL2 mutations increase with age.

"The striking and important thing about the Cortopassi finding is that this is a known change in the gene, associated with a particular type of cancer, and it clearly is occurring as a function of age in normal humans that don't have the cancer," Hanawalt said. "It's a very important piece of work."

Additional blood tests on the living patients showed the mutations persisted for a year in cells that normally die in a few weeks. That supports previous research indicating the BCL2 mutation inhibits cell death.

Lions Club continues health care series

The president of the largest managed health care organization in the Texas Panhandle will be the featured speaker for the Pampa Lions Club noon meeting Thursday at the First United Methodist Church.

Elise D. Eiken, chief executive officer of Alliance Regional Health Plans Inc., will address the organization on preferred provider organizations (PPO's) and how they will affect the way health care is delivered in Pampa and the surrounding area.

Formerly known as the Panhandle Provider Organization, Alliance Regional Health Plans has more than 76,000 members and is sponsored by Northwest Texas Healthcare System and St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

ARHP has grown by 38 percent since Eiken joined the organization a year ago. She previously was director of operations for HealthLink, a 360,000-member hospital-sponsored PPO in the St. Louis, Mo., area.

Thursday's program is the second in a four-part series of programs on health care, according to Lions Club program chairman David Webster. Doug Gerner, administrator and chief executive officer of Coronado Hospital, will discuss physician hospital organizations (PHO's) on Sept. 22. He will detail how the Coronado Hospital-sponsored PHO will benefit the community and affect the quality and cost of health care in Pampa.

Elise D. Eiken

Marty Dale of Dallas will conclude the month-long series on Sept. 29. Dale is former president of Health Network of Southern California (HealthNet). This network recently made national news when it was handed down an $89 million judgment for refusing to provide a bone marrow transplant to a breast cancer patient.

Dale will present an analysis of the effect of national health care reform on our nation and our community. He will discuss what individuals and business owners can do to better benefit from the changes created by health care reform. Dale now serves as regional sales manager for American Medical Security, one of the nation's largest third-party administrators.

The Pampa Lions Club meets each Thursday at noon in the basement of First United Methodist Church and invites interested citizens to be their guest at these special meetings. For more information, contact any Lions Club member or call Webster at 669-2233.

Five students arraigned in gang rape of woman

HARLINGEN (AP) — Five high school students are charged with the gang rape and beating of a 46-year-old woman who was left for dead in a cornfield.

Acting on a tip Monday, police in Primera arrested Robert "Blitz" Contreras, 17; Jose E. Pesina, 18; Richard Villarreal, 18; a 16-year-old and a 15-year-old.

The victim received a fractured nose and leg and several abrasions and contusions during the attack on July 23, authorities said.

The youths, all students at Harlingen high schools, are members of the Westside Aquas gang, said Ernest Barajas, police chief in Primera, which is just outside Harlingen city limits.

Villarreal was arraigned Monday on charges of aggravated assault, kidnapping, aggravated sexual assault and attempted murder. Justice of the Peace Eloy Cano set his bond at $400,000.

Contreras, Pesina and the two juveniles were charged with two counts of with aggravated sexual assault, aggravated assault, kidnapping and attempted murder. Bonds for Contreras and Pesina totaled $500,000.

Barajas said the victim decided to walk home from a party on July 23 when five teenagers pulled up in a car behind her. Police reports said the youths took turns holding the victim down in the trunk of the car while the others raped her. The woman was beaten unconscious and left in a cornfield outside Combes.

Quebec separatists win provincial elections

MONTREAL (AP) — The separatist Parti Quebecois won a solid majority of seats in Quebec's provincial election, but its 45 percent share of the popular vote was hardly an ironclad mandate for independence.

The Parti Quebecois, led by hard-line separatist Jacques Parizeau, won 77 of the 125 seats in the Quebec legislature Monday. Provincial Premier Daniel Johnson's Liberal Party captured 47 seats and the small Democratic Action Party took one.

Many opinion polls had forecast a stronger showing by the separatists and a thorough thrashing of the Liberals for failing to deliver on economic prosperity.

Instead, voters in the French-speaking province opted only for change and indicated they would think about independence later. In the popular vote, the Parti Quebecois won only 45 percent, a single percentage point ahead of the Liberals, with 44 percent.

A 1980 referendum on independence failed 60 percent to 40 percent, and the lukewarm endorsement of the separatists Monday gave hope to many Canadians who would like to see the question of Quebec independence put to rest once and for all.

Parizeau has promised to hold another referendum on independence within a year. That doesn't give him much time to pump up more enthusiasm.

"Parizeau has no mandate to use government powers to promote independence," Montreal's English-language daily, The Gazette, wrote in an editorial today.

"There will not be an apocalypse," wrote the French-language newspaper La Presse. "The Parizeau government will be forced to act rapidly because it will have to prove it is capable of ruling alone in the affairs of state."

Frank McKenna, the premier of the neighboring province of New Brunswick, said "Quebeckers are our cousins and our neighbors; this has not changed. In issues relating to the separation of Canada, we will be firm."

U.N. conference delegates still bickering as they prepare to sign plan

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The U.N. population conference today wound up much as it began, with Muslim and Roman Catholic countries bickering over a 20-year plan to limit growth that focuses on abortion, sexual rights and other sensitive topics.

The conference, which began Sept. 5, went into its final session today to approve the plan. Delegates examined minute details of the nearly-100 page document, endorsing chapter after chapter. But they delayed formal action on the overall text until an afternoon session.

Delegates from 180 nations are expected to adopt it by consensus, but in speeches to the final session, several protested the wording of contentious sections.

The Vatican, which led the fight to water down abortion and reproductive health provisions, was the lone delegation to reject the reports of two previous U.N. population conferences in 1974 and 1984. The Holy See was not expected to sign the Cairo convention.

Monday night, negotiators approved chapters on migration and reproductive health that had been put off by squabbles over abortion that the Vatican led last week.

Fuzzing language to accommodate the Vatican and some Muslim nations brought complaints from some liberal Westerners who wanted stronger stands on sexual rights. Third World countries complained not enough time was given at the meeting for their concerns, especially development and debt.

Still, while not rejecting the document, nations with Muslim and Roman Catholic majorities expressed reservations to parts of the report. Delegates from at least eight Muslim countries, including the host nation Egypt, criticized parts of the report concerning sexual matters.

The leader of the Iranian delegation, Mohammed Ali Taskhiri, said some sections "seem to allow" sexual relationships outside matrimony, strictly forbidden under Islam.

Most of the objections were about inclusion of the word "individuals" in a section on sexual activity, which Muslims argue suggests approval for extramarital relations. El Salvador, with a Catholic majority, joined in the objection.

The conference's Plan of Action will be adopted by consensus and will not be binding on the nations that agree to it. But delegates say it carries a "moral weight" and gives new ammunition to politicians and private groups to lobby for change.

Franz Kroppenstedt, state secretary in the German Interior Ministry, told reporters today that he believed the conference had produced a workable plan that takes into account "the religious situation, cultural background, ethical values and legal systems in each country."

"It's the result of a wide consensus," he said. "Agreement means ... they have committed themselves to take action."

Kroppenstedt spoke on behalf of the European Union. Germany currently holds the rotating chairmanship.

Timothy Wirth, a U.S. undersecretary of state and head of the American delegation, said he expected no problem getting final approval.

"I think that it is very clear that the nations have come together," he told The Associated Press.

The U.N. International Conference on Population and Development had a mandate to find ways of curbing world population, which is growing at a record rate of more than 90 million people a year.

The focus was on women — educating them, giving them health and family planning services, ensuring their economic security — and finding the money to do it.

The Plan of Action sets an agenda for the next two decades and calls for annual spending of $17 billion by the year 2000 for population control and development, or about triple the current expenditure.

The final conference compromises came on the issues of migration and reproductive health issues, including adolescent counseling.

On migration, the United States, Canada and the European Union overcame a demand from mostly poor Third World countries that migrants should have a "right" to have their families join them.

Instead, the final draft calls on countries to "recognize the vital importance of family unification" and push for laws making it easier.

The compromise on reproductive health took 28 hours of negotiations over three days in a small, windowless room.

A minor change in wording involved the phrase "fertility regulation," which the Vatican and several Islamic countries, including Iran, argued was a code for abortion.

The Vatican and Islamic countries also forced a change in wording on adolescent sex. The section was given a new introduction "recognizing the rights, duties and responsibilities of parents" in sex education.

Wildlife officials trying to block flap over plan for songbirds

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials are attempting to shoot down a growing flap over whether parts of Texas will be designated as critical habitat for an endangered songbird.

Lawmakers, meanwhile, grilled Fish and Wildlife Service Regional Director John Rogers Jr. on Monday, and Gov. Ann Richards told the federal government in a letter to "abandon all plans" to designate parts of Texas as critical habitat for the golden-cheeked warbler.

During a legislative hearing, Rogers told lawmakers that his agency has been the victim of "misinformation" and currently has no proposed plan to set aside parts of 33 Central Texas counties as safe haven for the songbird as has been reported.

"The Fish and Wildlife Service hasn't proposed to designate critical habitat for the golden-cheeked warbler in Texas, not in any single county, certainly not in 33 counties, not one acre, not one square inch," Rogers said.

Rogers said "incorrect information" was given to the press and then adopted by politicians looking to bolster their campaigns by inciting the issue of landowners' rights.

In a letter to Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt dated Monday, Richards said implementation of the Endangered Species Act "has become so overreaching that it undermines public support for protecting our wildlife."

Richards said a critical habitat designation would be an economic blow to the 33 Central Texas counties, which are considered the songbird's only habitat in the United States.

Last month, more than 3,000 landowners converged on the Capitol for a rally against any federal action that would infringe on private property rights.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has said he will sue the federal government if it carries out any plan to set aside land for the warbler.

Rogers said the effects of the Endangered Species Act on property have been misunderstood. He cited a General Accounting Office audit of private property projects developed in areas affected by the Endangered Species Act from 1988 to 1992 and said that 99 percent of 18,000 proposed projects went forward unhindered or with marginal changes.

Rogers acknowledged, however, that some criticism of the Fish and Wildlife Service's implementation of the act has been justified.

"We are trying to do things differently now," he said. "Secretary Babbitt has directed us to sit down at the table and hammer out the details with the people most affected by the law. We can then put together Habitat Conservation Plans that protect species, protect landowners and their development plans, and avoid more species listings."

Prison official wants total tobacco ban

HOUSTON (AP) — Felons who leave Texas prisons should leave behind all the addictions they brought in, including the craving to use tobacco, a top prison official says.

Carol Vance, chairman of the board of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said Monday that he is pushing for a ban on the use of all tobacco products in the vast prison system.

Board members will consider the proposed policy later this week. If it is adopted, roughly 47,000 prison employees and 92,000 felons, who spend about $5.4 million a year on tobacco and related products in prison commissaries would not be allowed to use the products.

"I think this (smoking ban) protects everyone ... from having to smoke other people's smoke," Vance told the Houston Chronicle.

The proposed ban already has some prisoners grumbling and one considering a possible legal challenge that would be assisted by a top tobacco industry lawyer.

William Spaulding, who's serving 35 years on aggravated rape and aggravated sexual assault convictions in Victoria and Jackson counties, has threatened to use the legal muscle of the tobacco industry against the prison system if it totally bans tobacco use.

Prison lawyers say Spaulding wrote them that he would call in attorney J. Kendrick Wells III, a corporate lawyer for Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. of Louisville, Ky., to help fight any ban.

Challenging prison officials would not be a new task for Spaulding.

Earlier this year, Spaulding complained to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice that prisoners had lost the use of softball fields when more prison dormitories were constructed.

Justice responded by ruling that the prison system had violated court orders in taking over the softball fields as construction sites, but he did not halt the prison expansion.

Jet plume test rattles shuttle — and astronauts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Discovery's astronauts have been rattled — literally — by an experiment measuring the damaging effects of space shuttle exhaust.

Shuttle pilots have spent parts of the last three days firing their steering jets toward engine-exhaust monitors on the end of an 82-foot boom extending from the cargo bay. NASA wants to determine whether jet plumes could damage a space station as a shuttle approaches for docking.

The plumes are strong enough to shake the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm, a 32-foot extension carrying the monitors, and the spacecraft itself.

"It's a pretty good force," astronaut Mark Lee said Monday. "It's kind of scary to see those jets fire and see them hit the arm and make it move. We're definitely worried about the forces that it could input to a structure up in space."

NASA wants to know as much as possible about jet plume properties before shuttle Atlantis docks with Russia's Mir space station next May. The experiment also could affect how NASA designs a planned international space station.

The experiment ran into the same snag Monday that it had the previous two days: trouble collecting data from the exhaust monitors. Crew members overcame the problem by flipping a circuit breaker.

The experiment was wrapped up Monday after more than 70 jet firings. Further tests might be conducted next weekend if NASA adds an extra day to the scheduled nine-day mission.

Today the crew was to release a $14 million sun-gazing satellite named Spartan. The satellite has two telescopes that will focus on the sun's corona, or outer atmosphere, for two days before astronauts retrieve it for the trip home.

Clinton prepares to sign $30 billion crime bill today

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton invited politicians of both parties today to the signing of an election-year crime bill he muscled through Congress. Pointedly uninvited, however, were those who opposed it, including Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, a potential presidential candidate.

The Democrats could not have passed the $30.2 billion measure without some Republicans who helped the majority party overcome GOP hurdles. Those obstacles were erected partly to wipe out some of the bill's $6.9 billion for crime-prevention programs and partly to deny Democrats a victory on the issue Republicans considered their own.

But when Congress finally passed it last month, Clinton praised what he called a bipartisan spirit that "overcame the ... divisions and false choices" that had blocked major anti-crime bills for the past six years.

"And because they did, children will be safer and parents will breathe a little easier," Clinton said. "Police officers will no longer be threatened by gangs and thugs with easy access to deadly assault weapons designed only for war."

However, Dole vowed to take revenge at the ballot box in November, saying the GOP would call attention to "all the ludicrous, ridiculous items in this bill."

One candidate taking that tack was Michigan GOP Senate nominee Spencer Abraham, who called it "just another one of the big-spending liberal programs that looks good on paper, but doesn't do anything."

His opponent, Democratic Rep. Bob Carr, voted for it.

Nevertheless, the White House acknowledged the support of Republican and Democratic mayors and members of Congress by inviting a bipartisan gathering of 2,000 to the signing ceremony today on the White House South Lawn, where a lone pilot crashed a plane and died early Monday. Also invited were representatives of the major law enforcement groups that lobbied hard for the bill.

The legislation fulfills a 1992 Clinton campaign pledge to help put 100,000 more police on the street. It also authorizes thousands of new state and local prison cells, life sentences for some three-time felons and a ban on assault-style firearms.

Attorney General Janet Reno has said 20,000 of the 100,000 new police officers should be on the streets in the next 16 months. By October 1996, she said last week, she expected 40,000 new officers to be on the job and 300,000 young people to be involved in crime-prevention programs.

The billions of dollars in the bill is to be appropriated over six years. Some already has been appropriated.

An immediate impact of the legislation will be the ban on the manufacture of new assault-style firearms and ammunition magazines that carry more than 10 rounds.

Sales have exploded since it appeared the ban might become law, because it exempted all the guns and magazines made before the bill was signed.

"The whole industry has been in a back-order situation since last October," said Bob Lesmeister of the National Association of Federally Licensed Firearms Dealers, based in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He said the price on some guns doubled and tripled.

"If I could get everything I wanted, I would have sold during this rush probably 50 a week," said Ron English of Olde English Gun Shoppe in Tipp City near Dayton, Ohio.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenant commandment.

Solution: Privatize our Social Security

The futility of the nation's Social Security system is by now a given — so much so that few people earnestly attempt to defend the program anymore. Its indicators of doom are virtual truisms:

- As the Cato Institute's Edward Crane recently said, the system's own admitted insolvency date had, at last word, been moved up to the year 2029.
- Anyone who was born much after 1950 likely won't recoup in retirement checks even 1 percent of the money they had to pay into the fund while working.
- The system's inevitable diminishing returns (on the 7.65 percent of pay that each worker and each employer must contribute) have earned it the dubious distinction as the nation's biggest Ponzi scheme; it serves largely as a slush fund by which Congress can "borrow," through Treasury bonds, toward its latest schemes for enlarging yet other areas of the federal government.

The bottom line is that Social Security as it now stands is, by and large, indefensible. But, for political and practical reasons, there's little serious talk of scrapping it.

Politically, Social Security is a political "third rail" (you know — you touch it and you die) in the eyes of elected officials. They don't want to alienate senior citizen voters with talk of tampering with what, for many, is a major means of sustenance. And practically, policy makers in Congress and elsewhere aren't sure what would replace it, anyway.

Why not look south, to Chile? That South American nation's once-moribund, Third World economy has been nothing less than resurrected over the past two decades by a variety of free-market reforms, including, in 1981, the wholesale privatization of its state pension system.

Recently The Wall Street Journal noted that economists from around the world are visiting Chile to learn from the successes of this key reform. Several other Latin American nations including Mexico and Argentina have adopted versions of this approach.

Before the change, Chile had faced the same problem confronting this country's FDR-vintage federal retirement system: A graying population and a shrinking proportion of wage earnings footing the retirement bill of their elders through taxation. Once Chilean workers began paying into private funds under the new system (which relies on government chiefly to mandate their participation), any apprehensions they had were overcome by eye-popping returns to their accounts on the order of 14 percent a year.

Now, Chileans are in greater control of their financial future by being able to choose from a wide range of lower-risk or higher-yield investment opportunities through the private sector, much as many Americans already do through private 401(k) and IRA retirement plans.

Ideally, citizens, especially in so advanced a society as ours, should be responsible for their own pensions through free-market options without even a government mandate.

Meanwhile, it makes eminent sense to nudge the federal behemoth of Social Security toward the free market, too.

U.S. currency no longer current

Editors note: Stephen Chapman is on vacation. The following column was originally published in November 1991.

If you're rash enough to set out in search of a parking place on the street in downtown Chicago, you should make sure you have plenty of time — and lots of change. One quarter will buy you just 10 minutes from a parking meter, meaning that for two hours you'll have to come up with an even dozen coins.

If you plan to pick up a copy of The Wall Street Journal while you're out, you'll need three more quarters. Maybe you'll want to get something to drink from a vending machine. Add another three or four coins to your pocket, if it hasn't burst yet. If you'll need to make a phone call or two, put in some more. And then contemplate what you'll need for an outing like this in five or 10 years, assuming prices continue their upward march.

If you're not charmed by the prospect of someday having to lug a backpack full of 25-cent pieces every time you leave the house, you may be pleased to know that someone is trying to spare you this fate.

Let others try to solve cosmic problems like Middle East peace or urban poverty. The Dollar Coin Coalition would be content with the mundane but real achievement of restoring some reason to our currency. On this question, groups as various as the National Soft Drink Association, the American Council for the Blind, the National Council of Chain Restaurants and the Sierra Club speak as one.

Thanks to inflation, a dollar bill today has the buying power a quarter had in 1960. A quarter has lost about 19 cents of its value in that time. A penny has become as useless as an appendix.

Coins and bills are called upon for different functions as their value erodes, but ours haven't changed to meet the new tasks. Paper money is poorly suited to many transactions, especially those involving coin-operated machines. Either the machines have to be adapted at great expense to handle it or people have to carry around lots of coins to appease machines that refuse bills.

The remedy is simple: replacing the dollar bill with a dollar coin. It would be far more convenient for vending machines, pay phones, parking meters and mass transit fare boxes. It would reduce the size and weight of coin stashes in pockets and purses. It would make life simpler for the blind, who have problems using bills. And it would save taxpayers and private businesses handsome sums of money.

The United States is not exactly a world leader in adapting its money to fit modern needs. Most of our trading partners mint coins with values far higher than that of the quarter — from Canada, whose largest coin is worth about $2, to Spain, which circulates a $5.45 coin. They do so because they know coins have uses that bills don't.

By now you may be fumbling through your brain's attic for a memory of the Susan B. Anthony dollar, which was to currency what the Hindenburg was to aviation. Unveiled in 1979, it flopped because it looked, felt and probably tasted like a quarter, generating confusion, and because the dollar bill remained, allowing consumers and businesses to stick with the familiar. It was soon withdrawn.

But all innovations aren't doomed to failure. Canada avoided the errors of the Anthony dollar by introducing a dollar coin that could be easily distinguished by sight and feel from existing coins. It also retired the paper dollar to encourage acceptance of the new coin. And Canada's dollar has been a success. The Dollar Coin Coalition proposed a coin slightly larger than a quarter but smooth-edged and gold-colored to minimize confusion.

There would be several savings to the economy. Since coins last longer than bills, the government saves in the long run on production costs. Its "profit" on coins (the difference between the cost of making them and their face value) is bigger than on dollar bills, and the money saved automatically goes to reduce the national debt and thus the interest portion of the federal budget.

Another savings is to any industry that relies on coin-operated purchases — everything from laundromats to video games. It's cheaper to make or alter a machine to accept a dollar coin than a dollar bill. Handling coins is less expensive than handling bills.

University of Chicago economist George McCandless Jr. estimates that the new coin would save the government and the private sector at least $1.4 billion a year. That would accrue to taxpayers and consumers, who also would benefit from the greater convenience.

The economist Ludwig von Mises once said that government is the only institution that can take a useful commodity like paper, slap some ink on it and render it worthless. The dollar coin is a rare chance for the government to do something beneficial to our money.

Today's highlight in history:
On Sept. 13, 1788, the Congress of the Confederation authorized the first national election, and declared New York City the temporary national capital.

On this date:
In 1759, during the final French and Indian War, the British defeated the French on the Plains of Abraham overlooking Quebec City.

In 1803, Commodore John Barry, considered by many the father of the American Navy, died in Philadelphia.

In 1851, American medical pioneer Walter Reed was born in Gloucester County, Va.

In 1894, 100 years ago, British novelist J.B. Priestley was born in Bradford, England.

In 1922, the highest shade temperature on the Earth's surface was recorded in El Azizia, Libya, which reached 136.4 degrees Fahrenheit.

We face greater plagues to come

Charley Reese

The scariest books are always nonfiction. The Plague Makers by Dr. Jeffrey A. Fisher (Simon and Schuster) is a scary book. It's also fascinating.

The thesis is simple: indiscriminate use of antibiotics is creating catastrophic new epidemics of untreatable diseases. There is growing evidence that AIDS may be one of them. Worse diseases may be on the way.

We live in a sea of bacteria. There are billions of them in our bodies, on our bodies, in the air and on the things we touch. Most are harmless. The harmful ones can usually be killed by antibiotics — the miracle drugs of the post World War II era. But not always.

Unfortunately, bacteria turn out to be Nietzschean critters. What doesn't kill them, makes them stronger. The origin of bacterial life remains a mystery, but after life begins there is no question that biological evolution takes place. Since for bacteria a generation is about 20 minutes, it's an observable phenomenon.

In simple language, antibiotics, if used improperly, don't always kill all the bacteria because some can survive it. Since those which can't survive the antibiotic die, the survivable ones have space to grow and multiply and spread. The bad news for humans is that when these bacteria make you sick, your doctor can't help you. The mortality rate for new drug-resistant tuberculosis is 40 to 60 percent, just about the same killing rate TB had before the discovery of antibiotics, Dr. Fisher says.

"All told, approximately one-third of the world's population, more than one and half billion people, harbors mycobacterium tuberculosis," Dr. Fisher writes. "Should drug-resistant strains come to prevail in this enormous reservoir, tuberculosis has the potential to sow death on a truly millennial scale."

And guess what. We're creating incubators for drug-resistant TB in our prisons and jails, where the TB bacteria, which is airborne, can take root in the HIV-infected prisoners. Prisoners eventually get out. Guards go home to their families. Already, Dr. Fisher says, TB outbreaks are occurring in elementary schools and day-care centers in some American cities, and it can be a quick killer of children.

The irony is that we thought TB was a thing of the past. We even thought infectious diseases had been "conquered."

In 1969, U.S. Surgeon General William Stewart told Congress it was time "to close the book on infectious disease." In short, not to worry, they are all defeated. This was another case of human optimism triumphing over human intelligence and knowledge.

Dr. Fisher lays the blame for the "epidemic of microbial resistance" on doctors and pharmaceutical companies, the very creators and dispensers of modern antibiotics. Doctors carelessly and excessively prescribe them and pharmaceuticals have flooded the global market with them. Especially in the Third World, Dr. Fisher says, antibiotics are recklessly used and dispensed by everybody from street kids to drugstores and pimps.

He has a whole chapter on the miseducation of doctors, detailing the unhealthy influence of the pharmaceutical industry's aggressive marketing on the physician from the day he enters medical school until he closes his practice to retire. As evidence of physician abuse of antibiotics, he cites one study that showed 900,000 antibiotic prescriptions were written when the diagnosis was the common cold. "You don't need a medical degree to know antibiotics are completely ineffective against viral infections such as colds..." Dr. Fisher writes.

Antibiotics have saved millions of lives and made heroes of doctors and pharmaceuticals, but Dr. Fisher warns that if they continue to be used irresponsibly, "... the consequences will be too horrible to contemplate."

CNN's standards debase news industry

Take out a piece of paper and number from one to five. We're going to have a little quiz.

Ready? List the most egregious trespasses routinely engaged in by the broadcast press.

Where in the world would you start? With the fact that television news shows have taken a startling turn toward sensationalism? With the fact that foreign correspondents are so few these days that they usually present their stories as voiceovers of someone else's film? With the fact that television has lowered journalistic standards so dramatically that you wonder which is news and which is hokum?

The latter is the sin that most irritates me, and CNN is the worst perpetrator of it. No news organization has been more adept at cheapening professional standards than CNN, and no critic has been more courageous at pointing it out than Tom Rosentiel, media reporter for the Los Angeles Times and author of Strange Bedfellows: How Television and the Presidential Candidates Changed American Politics, published last year.

Writing in the Aug. 22 and 29 edition of the New Republic, Rosentiel lists what he considers to be CNN's worst traits: It has broken considerable technological ground but no journalistic ground; it has served as a mouthpiece for tinpot dictators, from Ferdinand Marcos to Muammar Qaddafi; it has lessened journalistic standards across the board.

Here are some of Rosentiel's specific comments: — "The network has even had a pernicious effect on the rest of journalism; it has accelerated the loss of control-news organizations have over content, which in turn has bred a rush to sensationalism and an emphasis on punditry and interpretation at the expense of old-fashioned reporting."

— CNN has "hastened the trend among news organizations toward opinion and interpretation over hard reportage."

— "The network still has a mentality of airing everything, occasionally without adequate reporting."

Notice how the phrase "without adequate reporting" or words to that effect keeps popping up. CNN is boldly taking us where journalism has never gone before — into a spinning, whirling world where fairness and balance and responsibility are utterly irrelevant. Pictures matter. Sensational stories matter. Big names and hot celebs matter. But truth? Truth is irrelevant and a pain in the posterior.

The story that pulverized the dam of journalistic prudence was the tale Jennifer Flowers told during the 1992 campaign of her alleged dalliances with Bill Clinton. Most of the networks sensed something wrong with her story, but not CNN, which covered her sobby press conference live.

She played tape recordings of telephone chats with Clinton; they were heavily edited. She said she was a former Miss Teenage America; it was not true. She said she was a former Hee Haw actor; it was not true. She said she was a former University of Arkansas student; no evidence to support the claim was ever turned up.

All of this could have been verified with a little old-fashioned reporting. CNN did not do it. When the Arkansas state troopers came forward with their salacious tales of Clinton's liaisons, they had no evidence to back up their story, were hazy on specifics and had a history of lying. CNN turned on the cameras and told them to talk.

Said CNN executive vice president Ed Turner: "The fact the troopers were willing to go on camera was what made us decide to do a story. ... You never know if something is altogether truthful."

I am here to tell you that that is undiluted sludge: There is no reason why people making outrageous charges can't be checked out before putting them on the air. There is no reason a responsible network cannot provide context by informing viewers when people making charges have a personal interest in the fortunes of the person they accuse.

It used to be a standard journalistic practice, before CNN debased the business.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, you printed a letter from a young man who had been expecting a new car for his high school graduation gift. To his great disappointment, he received a Bible instead. Out of anger, he stormed out of the house and never spoke to his father again. After his father's funeral, the young man located the Bible his father had given him, only to find a key to a new car taped in the back.

That column was so moved that my husband, who manages a very busy restaurant, overheard many customers talking about it. Our pastor would like a copy of that column for a future sermon.

I would be most grateful if you would please send me that column.

VALERIE BOSSELMAN,
OMAHA

DEAR VALERIE: That column is a long-time favorite of mine. However, as is often the case, a few details are somewhat different from the story your husband recalled. Here's the original:

DEAR ABBY: A young man from a wealthy family was about to graduate from high school. It was the custom in that affluent neighborhood for the parents to give the graduate an automobile. "Bill" and his father had spent months looking at cars, and the week before graduation, they found the perfect car.

On the eve of his graduation, his father handed him a gift-wrapped Bible. Bill was so angry that he threw the Bible down and stormed out of the house. He and his father never saw each other again. It was the news of his father's death that brought Bill home again.

As he sat one night going through his father's possessions that he was to inherit, he came across the Bible his father had given him. He brushed away the dust and opened it to find a cashier's check, dated the day of his graduation — in the exact amount of the car they had chosen together.

BECKAH FINK, TEXAS

DEAR BECKAH: I hope Bill read the Bible cover to cover, for it contains much that he needed to learn: "A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her who bore him." (Proverbs 17:25)

DEAR ABBY: For years I have read your column; now I am finally writing with a question.

Every week a group of us "old bowlers" gets together for lunch, gossip, etc. About three times a year, someone asks me how old I am. (I look a lot younger than I actually am — and I have worked hard at it.) Frankly, that information is none of their business, and the question irritates me to no end.

So far, I've kept my cool. Should I just wear a number of my back to avoid future questions? How do you handle that situation?

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: I would smile and tell them the year of my birth, and let them figure it out.

YOUR CHUCKLE FOR TODAY: "Apple has announced that it is developing a computer small enough to be carried in a fanny pack. It will be called the Macintosh."

The latest to come in pet tricks

By AMY WALTON
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas — What's black and white, spiny all over, a sucker for dry cat food and becoming the pet of choice for animal lovers with a penchant for something different?

Hedgehogs. That's right, hedgehogs, which resemble miniature porcupines, have joined the ranks of Vietnamese pot-bellied pigs and flightless birds in taking the exotic pet scene by storm.

They're selling like hot cakes to people who want to breed them for a quick buck, as well as to families who want a conversation piece in the form of a prickly, softball-sized, nocturnal insectivore with an attitude.

"They're really cute and they're definitely something different," said Linda LaFrenz, a hedgehog breeder in Levi in McLennan County. "Each one of them is unique, and they have their own personalities."

LaFrenz has 21 hedgehogs, most of which are the "salt-and-pepper" variety, which means they have black and white quills. She bought the first pair, "Flo" and "Pop," in November and has since bought more and traded some of their offspring for different bloodlines.

Anyone looking to buy a hedgehog can find breeders listed in the backs of exotic animal magazines or in the classified sections of newspapers, breeders said.

"I haven't sold any yet because I'm trying to build up my breeder stock," said LaFrenz, 51. "I want to raise them and eventually sell them."

LaFrenz's hedgehogs are kept in "the critter house," a building outside her home where she used to raise exotic birds. Inside the converted aviary, the hedgehogs live in pet carriers lined with wood chips and equipped with pieces of plastic pipe where they sleep during the day.

"They like a place to hide. At night is when they come out and play," she said.

Hedgehogs, which are native to northern Europe and Asia, New Zealand and parts of Africa, are about 9 inches long when fully grown. They have short ears and legs, a short tail and a long, pointed nose.

When they are afraid, they tuck in their head and feet and roll themselves into a spiny ball.

"The older ones can get a little bit huffy," LaFrenz said. "I have one mama that will cross her quills and even jump at you and try to stick you. But, generally, they are pretty good natured if you spend time with them."

For a while, the price of a pair of these critters soared to $2,500 or $3,000, LaFrenz said. But now that they are more common, the price of a pair has dropped to around $500, she said.

"Most people buy them in pairs because, right now, it's a breeder's market," said Debbie Wood, a breeder in El Campo in Wharton

County who has about 40 pairs of hedgehogs. "It's been a real money-maker for us."

Hedgehogs are old enough to breed at about three and a half months, and their gestation period is only about 35 days, she said. Most females will have four litters a year with an average of four "pups" a litter.

"When they're born, they are about the size of the end of your thumb, and they look kind of like a cocklebur," Wood said. "They don't really get the quills on their backs until about an hour or so after they're born."

Wood also raises Rheas, large, flightless birds that resemble ostriches. She said many hedgehog breeders also raise large birds or other exotics.

Hedgehogs aren't very compatible, however, with household pets like dogs and cats, she said.

"They don't get along with other animals, especially cats, because they just get scared and roll up into a ball," Wood said. "The cat likes to paw at them and roll them around, but that doesn't do a lot for the hedgehog."

But by themselves, they make great pets, she said. They are easy to take care of and have few diseases.

Hedgehogs can be kept in small cages or aquariums inside, and most eat regular dry catfood, she said.

Wood expects that once the price of hedgehogs stabilizes, they will become common in pet stores.

"It's hard to have most exotic animals in an apartment, but for a hedgehog, that's fine," she said. "It's great because they're nocturnal, so when you come home from work they're ready to play."

"They'll run around on your shoulder and crawl up your sleeve. When they get scared, they curl up and all you have is this little ball of quills," she said. "And when they first open up, all you see is these little black eyes and this little nose wiggling. The more you're around them, the cuter they get."

Pampans end summer with various activities

Regardless of what the calendar says, Labor Day weekend marks the end of summer for most people. A weekend of gala activities added to the finality.

The "Evening Under the Stars" held Sept. 3 to benefit the White Deer Land Museum Foundation brought people from Pampa and surrounding areas and from as far away as Fort Worth. More than 350 tickets were sold. Sandra Waters is president of the Foundation's board.

Kay Bailey Hutchinson was one of the big hits of the evening. Special entertainment was provided by Eric Kline and Steve Fromholz and Pampa's Bill Arrington. After Bill and Steve exchanged a few words, Bill suddenly became a vocalist for a big cowboy number. The crowd went wild, roared with laughter and gave him a rip snorting standing ovation for a superb performance.

There were those who thought he made his vocal debut then and there. Greta, his wife, played several important roles behind the scenes from arrangements for a catered dinner from Marty's of Amarillo to making decisions about custom-made T-shirts and caps. Loralie Cooley, an almost new Pampan, had gobs of fun selling the T-shirts and caps. You might say that Greta was quiet and Bill was vocal! Lora Baggerman played several roles, usually wherever needed.

The large crowd was kept in suspense for the $3,000 drawing when 60 tickets were removed from the hopper every 30 minutes. Soon the big question of whether to split it six ways or draw to the last ticket was settled by single drawings. Bill Stockstill was fifth and Raymond Reid was the final winner.

Sandra Waters' mother made the afghan that was raffled. An auctioneer from Perryton auctioned off the centerpieces.

Pleased as punch, Bill and Sandra Waters left the next day for a few days of rest and relaxation. Maybe the affair will be an annual one.

Christi Higgs, president of the Pampa Fine Arts Association, is ecstatic over the success of this year's Chautauqua held in Central Park on Labor Day. Throughout the day crowds stayed large and responsive to all the activities offered.

Everyone involved deserves a

Steve and Bobbie Thomas had had some memorable events happen to them within the last few weeks. They attended the game between the Texas Tech University Raiders and New Mexico Lobos of Albuquerque last Saturday in Lubbock. Their son Zach was named Southwest Conference Player of the Week. Zach is the middle linebacker and his brother Bart is a strong safety for the Raiders.

The yelling was too much to measure when Zach made the big play of the game when he intercepted a pass and ran the ball back for a touchdown and did his famous flip in the end zone. Bobbie and Steve, Katina, now a freshman at Tech, Bart's wife Jill and Bobbie's mom and step-dad Mary Nan and Dwaine Mercer were in the grandstand. A few others seen there were Jay and Linda Johnson, Roselle Collingsworth, whose son Justin suited out, Jessie Brantwein, who had attended a workshop first, Paula and Don Whitney and family and Paula's mom Pauline Daugherty,

He is bright, alert and in great physical shape. He shares the products of his woodmaking talent with friends along the way. Eulless and Ruth drove, yes, by car, from Paris to West Cliffe, where the weather has been perfect, and where they lived for a number of years.

Descendants of S.E. and Frances Massengale Cole of the Wheeler area gather in Pampa last Friday and all day Saturday for their every-other-year family reunion. Of the original 13 children, five children survive: They are Pete Cole, who at 86 is still regularly employed; Amy Turcotte, 95; Lucille Burns, whose 88th birthday was celebrated; Velma Johnson, 80; and Annie Ruth Lee, 83 of Wheeler. Mrs. Joe (Juanita) Massengale represented the Massengale side. A first cousin Howard McGuire came from Louisiana as one of the 60 who came from Pampa, Wheeler, Oklahoma, Colorado, Canyon, Lubbock, Stratford and Perryton. Pete's great, great granddaughter Leeanne Bowser of Denver celebrated her eighth birthday on Saturday. Activities included Bingo, an auction of arts and crafts made by the relatives, viewing of past videos, lots of visiting and snapping of pictures. Organizing the reunion were Joan Nail and Peggy Summers of Pampa, Delphia Biggers of Lubbock, Bobbie Ehmann of Miami, and Orna Fay Davis of Sweetwater, Okla.

Snooks and Leora Sparks of Little Seminole Ranch and Mr. and Mrs. Elvis Wyant who live north of Pampa were dinner guests of Evelyn and Tooter Henry last week.

Evelyn Henry met her sister, Eunice Ratliff of Fort Worth at her other sister's place, Marble Province of Pampa, for a little reunion.

Crista and Dickie Archer and sons Matt and Cody, plus Virginia and Howard Archer of Lefors are all geared up for their trip to Atlantic City to see Arian Archer, Miss Texas, vie for the title of Miss America. Howard and Virginia, at least Virginia, will go to Dallas earlier where all of the hopefuls will meet for instructions, etc., before going to Atlantic City for the big event. Virginia and Howard have had signs on the back of their trailer about Arian for some time. Good Luck, Arian!

See you next week, Katie.

Those hot days are still here, so how about a salad for a meal?

By DANA JACOBI
For AP Special Features

On days when it's so hot that a cool salad is all I want for dinner, I've discovered an unexpected way to turn a bowl of crisp greens into a full-flavored meal. The secret is in the dressing.

Using canned broth and little or no oil, it's possible to make intensely flavored, thick, creamy dressings by combining the ingredients in a blender or food processor.

Here are four zesty, reduced-fat dressings that prove how well this works. Plus ideas on how to make a nutritious mix of greens, with a balance of flavors and textures, that you can happily serve to your family as a main course or enjoy a big bowl when you dine solo.

First for the greens. I love the succulence of iceberg lettuce and think it's a perfect ingredient to include when making a refreshing summer salad. But I always combine it with two or three more kinds of lettuce, including assertively flavored romaine and soft-textured sweet lettuces such as Boston, red leaf or green leaf. I also add other greens, such as arugula, escarole, spinach or radicchio. These various lettuces and darker greens provide more color and flavor; they are rich in nutrients, too. Romaine, for example, has 10 times as much vitamin A, seven times as much vitamin C and twice as much calcium as iceberg lettuce.

While I personally avoid putting sliced mushrooms, zucchini, carrots, tomatoes or croutons in a green salad, I always include one ingredient I can sink my teeth into. Depending on the dressing I plan to use, this "crunchy" might be diced cucumber, sliced onion, jicama, some other vegetable — or a bit of fruit.

When buying, storing and preparing greens, keep these points in mind:

— Select lively looking, bright greens. Avoid any that are wilted or have blemishes. Store lettuce in plastic bags in the vegetable bin of your refrigerator.

— Store lettuce away from ripening fruit such as apples and pears. The ethylene gas given off by these fruits can cause brown spots on the greens.

— Wash lettuce just before using it. Washed greens wilt more quickly unless they are thoroughly dried.

— Remove the grit from spinach, arugula and other greens grown in sandy soil by soaking them in several changes of cold water.

Recipes

Tonnato is an Italian sauce made from tuna. The sweetness of diced apple added to a salad goes well with this dressing.

Tonnato Dressing

- 6 1/2-ounce can water-packed tuna, drained
- 3 to 4 anchovy fillets, drained and rinsed
- 1/2 cup chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1 tablespoon red-wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- Freshly ground pepper
- 1/2 cup Italian parsley leaves

In a blender, combine the tuna, anchovies, chicken broth, mustard, vinegar, olive oil and garlic. Blend until the mixture has the consistency of thin mayonnaise. Season to taste with freshly ground black pepper. Add the parsley and blend just until it is chopped. This dressing can be stored in the refrigerator up to 3 days. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

Spicy Salsa Dressing combines the zing of a frosty Margarita with the sunny flavor of ripe tomatoes. Add diced cucumber, either from a firm Kirby or the European seedless variety, to your greens for a cooling contrast to this dressing.

Spicy Salsa Dressing

- 1 large, ripe tomato, seeded and chopped
- 1-3rd cup cilantro leaves
- 1/2 small white onion, coarsely chopped
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- 1 small jalapeno pepper, seeded, or 1 canned green chili pepper
- 1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lime juice
- 1 tablespoon canola oil
- 1 tablespoon tequila (optional)

Combine all ingredients in a food processor; pulse until they are finely chopped. Season to taste with salt and pepper. This dressing should be used the day it is made, while the flavors are bright and fresh. Makes 1 cup.

Roasted Beet Dressing is an intensely-flavored dressing that contains virtually no fat. Romaine and escarole go especially well with this dressing. When using it, I also like thin slices of red onion scattered on top.

Roasted Beet Dressing

- 2-inch fresh beet, well scrubbed
- 2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- 2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
- 1/4 cup chicken or vegetable broth

Roast the beet in a 375-degree F oven for 1 hour.

When cool enough to handle, trim off the ends of the beet. With your fingers, peel off the skin. (If it's too hot to use the oven, peel the beet, cut into 1/4-inch slices and steam until tender, 5 to 10 minutes. This method does not caramelize the sugar in the beet but you still get a flavorful dressing, and keep the kitchen cool.)

Coarsely chop the cooked beet. Place in a blender with the mustard and vinegar. With the blender running, gradually add the broth. Season to taste with salt and pepper. This dressing can be stored in the refrigerator up to three days. Makes about 1 cup.

Be sure to include spinach in the mix of greens you use with the following recipe for Creamy Sesame Dressing. And top each serving with a generous sprinkling of sesame seeds.

Creamy Sesame Dressing

- 1/4 cup tahini (roasted sesame paste)
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1 tablespoon fresh oregano, or 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- Juice of half a lemon
- 1/2 cup water

In a blender, combine the tahini, mustard, oregano and garlic. With the blender running, gradually add the lemon juice and the water. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

When first made, this dressing is quite thin; it thickens on standing. To thin it out, add water or lemon juice, a tablespoon at a time, until you have the desired consistency. This dressing keeps in the refrigerator for three or four days. Makes about 1 cup dressing.

Chocolate cake goes low fat — with prunes

By The Associated Press

A rich, decadent dessert may not be the first thing that comes to mind when you think of prunes. But in the following recipe, chocolate fudge cake is made with prune puree in place of butter and oil. The cake is rich and moist and contains only 4 grams of fat per serving.

A unique combination of pectin, malic acid and sorbitol found in prunes allows a simple mixture of prunes and water to simulate a full-fat texture and taste. When used as an ingredient in baked goods, prune puree reduces fat in cookies, brownies, quick breads, muffins and cakes.

Black forest chocolate fudge cake is topped with fresh, red sweet cherries during the summer or frozen cherries year-round. The recipe is adapted from Mani of Mani's Bakery in Los Angeles.

Black Forest Chocolate Fudge Cake

- 1 cup Prune Puree (recipe below)
- 2 cups cake flour
- 1 cup unsweetened cocoa powder

- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 egg white
- 3/4 cup nonfat milk
- 4 teaspoons vanilla
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 tablespoons instant espresso powder
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 cups frozen pitted, unsweetened dark sweet cherries, coarsely chopped, thawed and well drained
- 1/2 cup chopped toasted walnuts

Powdered sugar, for dusting (optional)

Fresh cherries or additional frozen cherries, for garnish

Prepare prune puree. Set aside.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Coat a 3- to 4-quart bundt or other tube pan with vegetable cooking spray; set aside. Into a large bowl sift together flour, cocoa, baking powder and salt; mix in brown sugar. Set aside.

In another bowl, whisk eggs with the prune puree, milk and vanilla; set aside.

Pour boiling water in measuring cup; stir in espresso powder and baking soda. Stir egg and water mixtures into flour mixture; mix just until blended. Pour half the batter into prepared pan; sprinkle cherries and walnuts evenly over batter. Evenly pour in remaining batter.

Bake in a 350-degree F oven about 45 minutes until pick inserted into cake comes out clean. Cool in pan on rack for 15 minutes; invert onto rack, remove pan and cool completely. Dust with powdered sugar; place on serving plate. Fill cake center with additional cherries. Makes 16 servings.

Prune Puree

- 2 and 2-3rds cups (1 pound) pitted prunes
- 3/4 cup water

Combine prunes and water in container of food processor. Process about 1 minute until pureed. Puree may be covered and refrigerated up to 2 months. Makes 2 cups.

VOLLEYBALL

PAMPA — Pampa defeated Borger, 15-6, 15-7, Monday in a ninth-grade volleyball match.

Detra Williams scored 12 points and Heather Petty added 8 to lead the Pampa offense. Strong defense by Tiffany McCullough and Jamie Wells along with strong setting by April Lopez helped get the win.

Pampa also won the B game, 15-9, with Kelli Calhoun serving up eight points for the winners. Coach Mike Lopez said the entire team played outstanding defense.

The Pampa ninth-graders have a 7-1 record and their next home match is at 6 p.m. next Monday against Canyon. It will be an A team match only.

FOOTBALL

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The finish line seemed to be moving further away from the Philadelphia Eagles as the Chicago Bears got closer and closer to them.

The Eagles were sensational for three quarters Monday night, then held on for a 30-22 victory that never should have been so close. Without the superb work of Randall Cunningham in the first half, they might not have broken a seven-game losing string against Chicago.

Cunningham threw for three first-half touchdowns and had his second successive 300-yard passing performance. Instead of getting a well-earned rest in the fourth quarter, though, he had to come back with two key completions on Philadelphia's final series to clinch it.

"I wasn't worried," said Cunningham, who was 24-for-36 for 311 yards, including 250 yards in the opening half. "You've got to have faith."

The Eagles had faith and everything else going for them for 45 minutes. Cunningham hit Calvin Williams for touchdowns of nine and 14 yards and Maurice Johnson for a 7-yard score and Eddie Murray kicked the first of his three field goals for a 24-0 halftime edge. Murray added two field goals in the third period.

"It was pretty obvious in all areas, Philadelphia made the plays and we didn't," said Bears coach Dave Wannstedt, whose defense gave up more than two touchdowns for the first time in his 18-game regime. "We felt we were ready to play, but we didn't do it. We had plenty of opportunities, but we just were out of sync."

Philadelphia kept the Bears punchless until the fourth quarter, with newcomers William Fuller (two sacks), Burt Grossman (one) and Greg Jackson (an interception and 31-yard return) making the big plays. Then, suddenly, second-year receiver Curtis Conway went wild.

Conway, who finished with seven catches for 148 yards, had a 22-yard TD catch and a 75-yard bomb, plus a two-point conversion reception. When Marv Cook scored on a 16-yarder with 3:35 remaining, the Bears stunningly were within eight points.

"I never had a feeling of, 'We are in trouble,'" Fuller said. "I always thought we were going to make the play and win the ballgame. Obviously, you don't want to finish like that ... they are not going to worry about how you won the game when they are passing out playoff invitations at the end of the year."

Cunningham completed two more passes on the Eagles' final series, enabling Philadelphia to run out the clock.

"We were able to play smart, and if we would have played smart last week, we wouldn't have been in the situation that we were in," Cunningham said of an opening loss to the New York Giants. "It's a tough league, and a lot of teams are going to be 8-8 this year. Hopefully, we can be one of the teams that has a better record than that."

If they repeat their performance early in Monday night's game, the Eagles can think about a lot more than 8-8, which was how they finished last year despite having Cunningham for only the first four games, all victories.

Williams made a reaching catch of a 9-yard pass on a fade pattern for Philadelphia's first score, concluding an 83-yard drive on which Cunningham was 6-for-8. Williams then beat Mark Carrier to the back left corner of the end zone for a 14-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter.

The Eagles' third touchdown was set up by Jeff Sydnor's 47-yard gallop on a punt return. He was stopped at the Bears' 19, and Cunningham found Johnson at the 1 five plays later and he back-crawled into the end zone for a 21-0 lead.

Chicago lost for the first time this summer. The Bears were 4-0 in preseason and beat Tampa Bay in their opener. They've lost only five of 31 meetings with the Eagles.

After being victimized by the relentless Eagles for three periods, Erik Kramer's passing rallied the Bears.

"But we got behind too far and we really did well just to make it close," Kramer said. "We just got outplayed completely before that."

Baseball season close to being canceled

World Series would be wiped out for first time in 90 years

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The unthinkable now appears inevitable. The World Series is likely to be canceled by Wednesday.

"We're either very close to the end or within a day or two," acting commissioner Bud Selig said Monday night when he was interviewed at halftime on ABC's "Monday Night Football."

Negotiators on both sides said there was little hope for an agreement that would allow the season to resume.

"It's unreal. I can't believe it," Atlanta Braves president Stan Kasten said. "We're about to lose the World Series."

Selig, during a conference call with reporters, repeated an earlier statement that teams would not play the postseason unless the regular season was resumed. That means the World Series would be wiped out for the first time in 90 years.

"That would be an amazing day, the day that there was no World Series," Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser said after the executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association met for about 4 1/2 hours.

Selig announced Sept. 2 the deadline for making a decision on the season — and the World Series — would be Sept. 9. Eugene Orza, the union's No. 2 official, said Monday he thinks the sides have until Sept. 15-17 to reach an agreement that would allow regular-season games to resume and until "eight or nine days after that" to save the World Series.

"I can't give you a specific date because I don't know myself," Selig said. "We're just going to play it day by day."

He said there was no harm in delaying a decision.

"It's sort of like taking chicken soup when you have a cold," he said. "Nothing bad can come from it. You keep trying because you hope there's some triggering mechanism that nobody's thought about."

But even Selig admitted, "We know it's a longshot." Players said they were prepared for Selig to say the season is over.

"Given the way things have gone, I think it's just a matter of time before Mr. Selig makes his announcement," Paul Molitor of the Toronto Blue Jays said.

"I think both sides will regret it if it happens," Hershiser said. "There will be extensive damage to the game, extensive damage to the season. It's a sobering thought."

There was no bargaining Monday as the strike passed its 32nd day, matching the 1990 lockout as the second-longest work stoppage in major league history.

Even the level of telephone activity dropped. Owners conducted conference calls at midday and early evening, and the players' board met at night.

Union head Donald Fehr said he did not talk to Selig or owners' negotiator Richard Ravitch on Monday.

"Unless or until the owners show a willingness to negotiate, there's little else to do," Fehr said.

The only news came from Washington, where the House Judiciary Committee said its subcommittee on economic and commercial law will hold a hearing into baseball's antitrust exemption on Sept. 22. Fehr said he probably would testify at the hearing.

"There's nothing productive happening," Boston Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington said.

Harrington and Kasten, who along with Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris tried to fashion a compromise last week, were back in their offices. Owners rejected the players' new "tax" plan last Friday, a day after it was proposed. According to Harrington and Kasten, the union said Saturday that it would not accept any "tax" that would restrain salaries.

"They made it real clear they wouldn't entertain any such discussion," Kasten said. "Once it has real impact on salaries, they wouldn't discuss it."

Orza said that the union's statement didn't go as far as Kasten characterized it.

"The players' association is not interested in discussing any proposal that had a pronounced or profound impact on the salary structure that exists in baseball," Orza said.

McMorris, checking his notes from the meetings, said he told him: "The owners will not get this union artificially hold down payrolls."

Before entering their board meeting, players said they were upset that management negotiators went home Saturday. "You can't negotiate if there's one here to do it with," Hershiser said.

Big plays helped Amarillo High get past Harvesters

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

The subject wasn't pleasant for PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier to think about, much less discuss. It was the Pampa-Amarillo High game on a sunny Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo. When the final buzzer sounded, the day had turned dismal for the Harvesters and much brighter for the Sandies.

"In my opinion we were outplayed and outcoached. The Sandies have an excellent football team and we knew it was in the realm of possibility that we could get beat bad if we weren't at the top of our game," said Cavalier, whose Harvesters lost, 34-10. "We didn't take advantage of our opportunities and they did."

Pampa did take a 3-0 lead on a booming 55-yard field goal by junior Todd Finney with 4:06 to go in the first quarter. By the time the first half ended, however, the Sandies had zipped to a 24-3 lead.

"Sometimes the biggest play of the game is who wins the toss and gets the wind," Cavalier said.

With Amarillo High on the receiving end of a stiff south wind to open the game, the Harvesters had things in their favor, but the Sandies' offense refused to fold.

Near the end of the first quarter and Pampa ahead, 3-0, the Sandies were in trouble when Sandie back T.J. Jones fumbled and fell on the loose ball eight yards behind the line of scrimmage on the AHS 25. On the next play, though, quarterback Clay Aderholt completed a 23-yard pass for a first down.

"That was a big play for them," Cavalier said. "They weren't able to score, but it got them out of the hole."

A costly fumble by the Harvesters late in the second quarter with Amarillo High ahead, 17-3, was a big play for the Sandies' defense that resulted in a score.

Clay Aderholt's 39-yard TD pass to Todd Friant came with just 31 seconds left in the half.

Despite the 21-point halftime deficit, Pampa came out strong the third quarter in an effort to keep the score from getting out of hand. J.J. Mathis 12-yard TD run and Finney's PAT at the end of a five-play drive narrowed the gap to 14 points with 7:22 left in the third quarter.

"We came out the second half and regained some of what we had lost, up to and including the bad punt snap," Cavalier said. "That hurt when we couldn't get it in and they recovered the ball."

That bad snap came late in the third quarter when the Amarillo High punter was swarmed under by the Harvesters on the AHS four-yard line. On the next play, however, Pampa fumbled and Amarillo High recovered. The Sandies were able to add 10 more points on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter.

Pampa, now 1-1, goes against Plainview (2-0) at 7:30 Friday in Harvester Stadium.

"Plainview is certainly up there with Amarillo High when it comes to talent," Cavalier said. "If we're not ready, we're going to absorb another licking."
