Good Evening!

LOCAL

PAMPA - A local man is in city of Pampa jail today in lieu of $9,000 bond charged with possession of a controlled substance and possession of marijuana.

Cesarion Hernandez, 33, was arrested at 406 Warren shortly after midnight when a team of Pampa police officers seized about two grams of cocaine and four ounces of marijuana when executing a search warrant at the residence, officials said.

Execution of a second search warrant at an undisclosed address around 3:10 a.m. yielded no illicit drugs.

Seven officers of the local department plus a representative of the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Trafficking Task Force ran the search warrants.

Possession of a controlled substance is a third degree felony and possession of marijuana is a state jail felony.

AREA

McLEAN - The Devil's Rope Museum will host an area photography show starting Oct. 11 and ending with a reception on Oct. 30.

People's Choice certificates and cash prizes of $25, $15 and $10 will be awarded along with honorable mentions.

Rules for photo submissions are: Photographs must be matted or framed, ready to hang; size 11 inches by 14 inches and down; any subject, black and white, color, old or new (the museum reserves the right to reject any photo not in good taste). Individual photos or groups of photos are welcome.

Museum officials said entries are "first come, first hung" until the gallery is filled.

Deadline for submitting photo entries is Saturday, Oct. 8.

Call the museum at 779-2225 for further information. Photos may be picked up after the Oct. 30 reception.

HOOVER - The railroad crossing section of FM 2391 at Hoover will be closed Friday from approximately 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Texas Department of Transportation officials said.

The closing is for continuing work on the railroad lines in the area by Santa Fe Railway.

Traffic will be routed around the area during the construction time on Friday.

STATE

By The Associated Press

One ticket purchased in Houston correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, a state lottery official said. The jackpot is worth an estimated $28 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 4, 5, 7, 9, 15 and 28.

Lottery spokesman Steven Levine said Saturday's lotto jackpot now reverts to an estimated $3 million.

DALLAS (AP) - A federal grand jury in Austin reportedly has subpoenaed bid records for the company that was awarded the contract to operate the Texas lottery.

The Dallas Morning News reported in Thursday's editions that the grand jury issued an Aug. 3 subpoena for documents from the Texas Lottery Commission that were submitted by GTECH.

GTECH, the world's largest operator of state-sponsored lotteries, beat out Control Data Corp. for the Texas contract and has collected $203 million so far. Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Sievert of Austin refused to confirm or deny that an investigation is under way.

However, GTECH's July 12 quarterly report to the Securities and Exchange Commission says the company was aware of federal investigations in Texas, New Jersey and Kentucky.

GTECH spokesman Bob Rendine said such investigations are common in the gambling business and that GTECH had been cleared in each.

The Atlanta Journal and Constitution has reported the FBI was investigating allegations that J. David Smith, former GTECH national sales manager, paid Texas lawmakers to approve a constitutional amendment to legalize the lottery.

GOP senators block lobbying reform bill

SBY JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republicans today blocked a lobbying reform bill designed to curb the influence of special interests on Washington through increased disclosure and a virtual ban on gifts to lawmakers.

Senators voted 52 to 46 to keep alive a GOP filibuster against the bill, jeopardizing the only remaining major item on what had been an ambitious Democratic list of reform initiatives backed by President Clinton.

The vote fell well short of the two-thirds majority that would have been needed to cut off debate and turn to final consideration of the bill. The two-thirds margin was needed because the bill would amend Senate rules.

Opponents of the bill - which had originally passed the Senate last year by an overwhelming 95-2 vote - said they had become alarmed by a new interpretation of provisions that would require greater disclosure of grassroots lobbying activities.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, called those last-minute objections "fictional" and said they were a smokescreen for senators who objected to genuine reform.

To Democrats, the blockade appeared to be part of a larger GOP strategy to deny the majority party any new pre-election accomplishments in what has been an anemic congressional session.

In recent weeks, health care reform has been buried, campaign finance reform was killed off by a Republican filibuster and action on trade legislation has been delayed until after the Nov. 8 elections.

The lobbying bill had barely survived its passage through the House last week after lawmakers there were blitzed by telephone calls generated by conservative talk show hosts. Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., had activated the electronic network with faxes that called the bill a "gag rule on grassroots."

The campaign continued this week, with critics led by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the Christian Coalition, the National Restaurant Association and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Supporters of the bill, led by Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., accused those groups of waging a disinformation campaign. Religious groups are specifically exempted from the bill's disclosure requirements, they countered. And they said the bill would not require groups to divulge their membership lists or register phone-bank volunteers.

"We are being barraged by lobbying campaigns because we're trying to get them out in the sunshine," Levin said.

Levin and other sponsors said the bill was an effort to restore public trust in Congress through fuller disclosure of who is being paid by what interests to lobby Congress, and by curbing the gifts that appear to a cynical public as little more than bribes.

"This is an effort to block an egregious practice that should be ended, the acceptance of gifts and trips," said Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., a bill supporter.

The bill was designed to replace a confusing, loophole-riddled set of lobbying laws dating to 1946.

It would require paid professional lobbyists to register with a new regulatory office, including those who lobby the executive branch and congressional staff. And it would require reports of money spent on grassroots, the kind of lobbying waged by telephone, fax and broadcast and aimed at generating calls and letters to Congress.

Computers and reading

Wheeler seventh-grader Lauren Weaver, 12, left, turns to a computer for testing over books she is reading for language arts teacher Bechy Hardcastle. The computer program is new this year in Wheeler Junior High School. (Pampa News photo by David Bowser)

Wheeler students turn pages in books, and then they turn on their computers

WHEELER - Junior high students are turning pages then turning on computers in a new reading program at Wheeler.

"We have a lot more kids reading this year," said Becky Hardcastle, one of two Wheeler Junior High School language arts teachers involved in the project.

The accelerated reading program is a reading management program that tests students over books they've read, she said. Students read a book then take a test over it on a computer.

"You can't fool the computer," Hardcastle said. "The questions are constructed in such a manner that you have to have read the book to pass the tests."

In the past, she said, students were assigned books for book reports, but book reports were easy to fake. It is not as easy to get past the test on the computer. It also helps with the learning process, she said.

"The student gets immediate feedback," Hardcastle said. "It gives the student his score and tells him which questions he missed. It also handles all scoring and record keeping."

With the end of the first six weeks grading period, Hardcastle said she and the other language arts teacher in the project, Betty Rives, have used a reward system to encourage the students to read. Points are awarded for the books read and the test questions answered. The harder the book, the more points a student can earn.

"Most books are six to eight points," she said. "Dr. Dolittle is worth 26 points."

The top readers for the first six weeks period won Blizzards from the local Dairy Queen, Hardcastle said.

"We've encouraged all the businesses in Wheeler to get involved with the program," she said.

The mother of one of the students has Hyland Pharmacy in Wheeler and has offered a Sony Walkman as a prize for the second six weeks, she said.

The sixth, seventh and eighth grade students in the program are allowed to choose the book they wish to read from a selected list, then when they finish, they take a computerized test over the book. While the company that produces the program has tests available for some 5,000 titles, Hardcastle said the school has only 300 titles to date. The computer discs with the tests cost about $60 each, she said.

"We encourage them to read the classics," she said, "but some of the older students want John Grisham books."

Grisham is a popular author whose works include The Firm, The Pelican Brief and The Client, all best-sellers recently made into movies.

"We assign one book every six weeks," Hardcastle said. "The kids that are in the program are reading more than the kids that are not. Even during tutor time, we've noticed that they are reading. In my English class, they'll finish with the grammar and then go read. We really can tell a difference."

While the tests on hand this year deal with books on the third to eighth grade reading level, Hardcastle said she hopes to expand the number of titles and raise the levels.

"We really have a good group of eighth graders," Hardcastle said. "We need to get harder books."

Hardcastle said she hopes to see the program grow so that it's available for the whole school.

"The students really get enthused about it," she said.

Former minister first to be convicted under new abortion clinic law

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) - A former minister accused of killing an abortion doctor and an escort has been convicted in the first trial using a new federal law guaranteeing access to abortion clinics.

Abortion supporters and opponents said Paul Hill's conviction Wednesday would set a national precedent in the ongoing battles outside abortion clinics.

"It sends a very clear message that this extreme terrorist activity in the name of religion will not be tolerated," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation in Arlington, Va.

The Rev. Flip Benham, director of Operation Rescue, denounced the killings but said the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances law was "not about violence, it's about silence."

Abortion rights advocates are "just in glee over the fact they've won this case because they know that they have set a precedent," he said.

The jury deliberated just over two hours before finding Hill - who represented himself - guilty of three counts of violating the new law and one firearms charge. He showed no emotion as the verdict was read, but after the jury left he smiled broadly and shook hands with two court-appointed lawyers who had been asked to advise him.

Hill, 40, could receive up to life in prison when he is sentenced Dec. 9. He also faces the electric chair if convicted of murder in his Jan. 30 state trial.

Hill presented no evidence, called no witnesses and cross-examined none of his accusers during the three-day trial. He plans to represent himself at his murder trial.

He also didn't deny killing Dr. John Britton and his escort, retired Air Force Lt. Col. James Barrett, and wounding Barrett's wife, June, outside the the Ladies Center on July 29.

Mrs. Barrett testified Wednesday that Hill fired his shotgun into their pickup truck as they arrived at the clinic, paused to reload, and then fired again, hitting her in the breast and left arm as she dived for cover.

When she opened her eyes, she said, blood was dripping between the seats and her husband and friend were dying. She had no comment after the verdict.

Hill wanted to argue that the shootings were justifiable because they prevented the greater harm of abortion, but U.S. District Judge Roger Vinson barred the "necessity defense."

Bid offered for Santa Fe rail

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Union Pacific Corp. has offered $3.4 billion for Santa Fe Pacific Corp., hoping to foil a rival bid and strengthen its position as the nation's biggest railroad company.

Santa Fe agreed four months ago to merge with Burlington Northern Inc. Union Pacific claimed its offer - Santa Fe stockholders would get 0.344 share of Union Pacific stock for each of their own shares - was 33 percent higher than Burlington's.

Santa Fe's board met Wednesday night to consider the offer, and the company said it would make a statement today.

Union Pacific ranks as the nation's largest railroad company by revenue. Burlington has more track than any other railroad.

"This is an unprecedented opportunity for the entire rail industry to make a quantum leap towards a 21st century transportation system," Union Pacific chairman and chief executive Drew Lewis said in a statement.

Union Pacific said a merger with Santa Fe would produce a company with annual revenue of approximately $7.4 billion and more than 43,000 employees. Its assets would include 26,371 miles of track, 4,887 locomotives and 97,654 freight cars.

Friday is last day for voter registration for Nov. 8 general elections

Friday is the last opportunity to register to vote for people wishing to cast ballots in the Nov. 8 election, said County Clerk Wanda Carter.

For those needing to change their address from one precinct to another, Friday is the last day to do so in person, she said.

To change an address by mail, the request must be postmarked by Oct. 9 and sent to Gray County Tax Assessor/Collector Sammie Morris at Box 382, Pampa, said Elaine Cooper, voter registrar.

One may register to vote by mail if the application is postmarked by Oct. 11. Applications may be obtained at Lovett Memorial Library, Gray County Courthouse, Department of Public Safety driver's license office and Democratic and Republican campaign headquarters, Cooper said.

Voters may register in the tax assessor/collector's office near the elevator on the first floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

Mandela highlights suffering in Africa

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — South African President Nelson Mandela called on the United States today to seize the opportunity offered by the end of the Cold War to promote "democracy, peace and prosperity" throughout the world.

Speaking to a joint meeting of Congress, Mandela said the time has come to move away from the ideological battles of the Cold War and toward the more positive goal of making it possible "for all peoples to enjoy the right to full human dignity."

Mandela entered the House chamber to the cheers of the assembled gathering eager to pay tribute to the principal force behind the establishment of a new South Africa no longer afflicted by white supremacist rule.

"I come out of a continent with whose travails and suffering you are very familiar," Mandela said in his prepared remarks. "You will therefore understand it easily why I stand up to say that for such a powerful country as yours, democracy, peace and prosperity are as much in your interest as ours.

"Because I am an African, you will, I am certain, understand why I should stand here and say that it is our deeply held belief that the new world order that is in the making must focus on the creation of a world of democracy, peace and prosperity for all humanity."

Wednesday night, Mandela offered a sober analysis of the humanitarian crises facing not only his country but all of predominantly black sub-Saharan Africa.

"Africa faces a terrible food crisis," Mandela said after receiving a $100,000 prize for his leadership in the fight against hunger in Africa.

He said about 34 million people in the sub-Saharan region suffer from food shortages, mostly as a result of civil strife. He called it "the worst humanitarian crisis in modern times."

Addressing a crowd of more than 1,300 at a local hotel, Mandela said international food assistance does not provide long-term answers.

"The only sustained solution lies in an end to conflict, a commitment to democracy, sustained economic growth and effective agricultural policies," he said. At home, Mandela noted that he has established food programs designed to wipe out malnutrition and hunger within three years.

His remarks provided a solemn conclusion to an otherwise festive evening that featured a joint entrance by Mandela and President Clinton.

Mindful of the enthusiasm with which Mandela has been received here, Clinton remarked, "I've had a great two days. I like being on Nelson Mandela's coattails."

Mandela was the 14th recipient of the Africa Prize, which is sponsored by The Hunger Project, an international organization working to end hunger.

Smooth Gill, cantankerous Haggard win CMA awards

By JIM PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Merle Haggard did some straight talkin' and Vince Gill some sweet talkin' while sweeping top honors at the 28th Annual Country Music Association Awards.

As the industry paid tribute to its rough-edged past and mainstream present, Gill won a second consecutive entertainer of the year award and was named top male vocalist for the fourth year running.

"I'm so thankful to be a part of it. I won't take it lightly. I'll treat you with class," he said Wednesday as he accepted the entertainer of the year award, the evening's highest honor.

Haggard, who did prison time for burglary, swaggered up to the podium and proceeded to thank his plumber and exterminator before any industry figures as he was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

The 57-year-old singer and composer of classics like "Okie From Muskogee," and "Today I Started Loving You Again" later said that today's music relies too much on electronic gadgetry.

"I think we're experiencing some sort of perfected music right now — not to put it down ... I think it's going to come back to what it used to be: bare talent."

Gill, who hosted the show at the Grand Ole Opry House, said he was shocked by the honors, "even more so for male vocalist then entertainer."

Stars like Randy Travis, George Strait, Lee Greenwood, Ronnie Milsap and Charley Pride all had two-year reigns as best male vocalist at the height of their commercial success.

Second-generation country star Pam Tillis won female vocalist of the year, denying Mary Chapin Carpenter a third straight honor in that category.

John Michael Montgomery won single of the year for his pop crossover tune "I Swear" and the Horizon Award for most promising newcomer. He dedicated the latter award to his late father, whom he credited with instilling his dedication to country music.

Singer Alan Jackson, along with co-writer Jim McBride, won song of the year for "Chattahoochee." Brooks & Dunn took honors for vocal duo for the third straight year, as did Diamond Rio in the vocal group category.

Reba McEntire, who led the nominations with six, won for vocal event of the year with Linda Davis for "Does He Love You."

Martina McBride was awarded video of the year for "Independence Day," and fiddler Mark O'Connor was voted musician of the year for the fourth straight year.

Gill also shared the album of the year award for Common Thread: The Songs of the Eagles. He sang "I Can't Tell You Why" on the tribute.

The winners were chosen by 7,000 country music singers, musicians, songwriters, disc jockeys and other professionals.

Haggard said he was notified about his Hall of Fame induction 30 days ago.

"I'm not used to getting notices for such things," he said. "I've had notices for evictions. I had a guy call me up one time on a Monday and tell me he was going to whip me on Friday."

He predicted he would continue long enough for a second induction.

"People are living longer these years," he said, "even country music artists."

Astronauts study deliberate fuel spill

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — German oceanographers dumped 106 gallons of diesel oil into the sea today to find out if the powerful radar aboard shuttle Endeavour could detect slicks from orbit. At first glance, it seemed the answer was yes.

The oil was spilled into the North Sea from a ship about 18 miles west of Sylt, a German island near Denmark's southern border, two hours before the shuttle passed 138 miles overhead. Twenty-six gallons of algae products were dumped nearby to see if the radar could detect the difference.

In televised radar images beamed to the ground, the spill showed up as dark, oblong spots in a sepia-toned images. Scientists enhanced the images and said they were able to see seven distinct spots of oil and algae.

"We could see it brilliantly clear," said German space agency spokesman Franz Spaunhorst, who watched the arriving images with scientists in Houston. "There was great applause."

 EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
 TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that man have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covering commandment.

Opinion

Now the hard part — remaking Haiti

For a moment, let us all savor the last-minute agreement that averted a hostile invasion of Haiti. The agreement, brokered by former President Carter, probably saved a number of American soldiers from becoming casualties.

On paper, the accord meets the objective President Clinton had set: the removal of Haiti's military leaders and the restoration of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power. Its most immediate benefit to Haitians will be the lifting of the trade embargo that made Haiti, already the poorest nation in the hemisphere, an even meaner and more miserable place to live.

That said, our occupation of Haiti is still fraught with danger and moral ambiguity. The invasion itself was never the major problem — Haiti's ragtag army would have been no match for the 82nd Airborne Division. All the agreement assured for our troops was that the initial invasion would not be met with organized resistance from Haiti's government.

Now the hard part begins of occupying one of the most economically and politically troubled countries on the face of the earth. Even after President Aristide returns to power, Haiti will remain a deeply divided country. Aristide's political opposition still controls the country's parliament and political violence can be expected to flare as Aristide's supporters seek vengeance on those who supported the coup. U.S. troops may be caught in the middle.

The parallels with Somalia can't be ignored. There, too, our troops entered the country with virtually no initial resistance. But as weeks turned into months, our troops became the target of hostile forces within the country. The same scenario could unfold in Haiti.

For historical reasons, Haiti has proven to be rocky soil for elected government. In the almost two centuries that Haiti has been independent, coups and assassinations, not elections, have been the norm.

A three- or six-month occupation by American troops will probably not be enough to reverse 200 years of Haitian history. American troops occupied Haiti once before, from 1915 to 1934, and left no discernible mark on Haiti's political culture. Will this occupation be any different?

It was a mistake for President Clinton to make the return of Aristide the focus of his foreign policy. We were brought to the brink of a hostile invasion; not by any compelling national security interest, but by domestic politics and the president's own misguided rhetoric.

Our entanglement in Haiti didn't end with this agreement; it has only begun.

U.S. more allergic to blood now

On the eve of the U.S. invasion of Somalia, public opinion was overwhelmingly favorable. Seventy-five percent of Americans endorsed sending troops, and 63 percent heartily agreed that "they should stay until a new and effective government is put in place, even if that takes a long time."

Did the pollsters think to ask if our soldiers ought to remain even if some of them got killed? That possibility seems to have come as a shock to most people. As soon as the first genuine bloodshed took place 10 months later, public sentiment flipped like a weathervane in a gale. The loss of just 18 men in one firefight was so traumatic that within days, only 34 percent of Americans supported staying in Somalia.

Anyone wondering why President Clinton accepted a vague and potentially messy deal with Haiti's rulers, negotiated by a former president famous mostly for his naivete, should not overlook the simplest explanation: He didn't want to get any-one killed.

As a president facing midterm elections and looking forward to a formidable re-election battle of his own, he could not afford to ignore the general American aversion to combat casualties — or the particular resistance to losing men and women in a place as inconsequential as Haiti. The real question is not why Clinton veered away from an invasion at the last moment, but why he came so close.

It is hard to overstate the public allergy to blood. Since World War II, we have built our defense strategy on the desire to minimize our own casualties. That is why we have always been entranced by strategic air power, which promised victory without sacrifice. That is why we made nuclear deterrence the foundation of our defense of Western Europe against the Soviets — preferring the risk of nuclear apocalypse to the risk of a conventional war on the ground.

Political scientist Harvey Sapolsky, director of the Defense and Arms Control Studies program at MIT, suggests that this is just one facet of an ever-growing American intolerance for avoidable deaths of any sort. Accidents of all kinds, he writes, account for only about 5 percent of annual deaths in the United States. But they are regarded as especially objectionable because they strike the relatively young, making them "the major cause of loss of years of life before the age of 70." Since 1950, accidental fatalities are down by 40 percent — reflecting such assorted factors as safer workplaces, seat belts in cars and smoke detectors in homes.

The safer we get, the more we value each individual life and the less danger we are willing to accept in our commitments abroad. Our regard for GIs missing in action, says Sapolsky, illustrated the changing attitude. In World War II, the 78,750 soldiers who were never accounted for were quickly forgotten by everyone except their loved ones. But the 2,273 MIAs in the Vietnam War are still a concern 20 years later.

The American distaste for casualties, he notes, is not limited to our own. With each succeeding conflict, Americans have gotten more sensitive to the fate of non-combatants on the other side. During World War II, we thought little of raining bombs on cities; today, targets that could produce civilian deaths are off-limits.

This change may seem unremarkable. But Sapolsky says that in the Gulf War, we went beyond worrying about enemy civilians to worrying about enemy soldiers. The Pentagon kept reporters away from the battlefield and declined to provide photos of dead Iraqis. No one even wanted to estimate how many men the enemy had lost, for fear of public revulsion back home.

In justifying his decision to end the war, President Bush said, "We weren't in the business of slaughter." As if anyone would ever think of war as a business of slaughter.

Our squeamishness about spilling blood provokes despair and disgust in global crusaders. Conservative military theorist Edward Luttwak mourns the day when "to lose a few hundred soldiers in some minor probing operations or a few thousand in a small war were routine events for the great powers." The United States, he warns, cannot be a great power because it is too stingy with the lives of its fighting men and women.

What he means by a great power is a nation willing to routinely sacrifice substantial quantities of blood and treasure in places of piddling importance. But a country built on respect for the value of every individual was bound to come to the view eventually that even professional soldiers should not be sacrificed except for truly important national interests.

Making the case for an invasion of Haiti, President Clinton tried his best to persuade the American people that such interests were at stake. In the end, even he seemed unconvinced.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Oct. 6, the 279th day of 1994. There are 86 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Oct. 6, 1927, the era of talking pictures arrived with the opening of The Jazz Singer, starring Al Jolson, a movie which featured both silent and sound-synchronized scenes.

On this date: In 1683, 13 families from Krefeld, Germany, arrived in present-day Philadelphia to begin Germantown, one of America's oldest settlements.

In 1889, the Moulin Rouge in Paris first opened its doors to the public.

In 1892, poet Alfred, Lord Tennyson died in Haslemere, England, at age 83.

In 1939, in an address to the Reichstag, Adolf Hitler denied having any intention of war against France and Britain.

In 1949, President Truman signed the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, totaling $1.3 billion dollars in military aid to NATO countries.

Clinton likes Adopt-A-Country plan

President William Clinton has apparently decided on a new strategy for the post-Cold War era — Adopt a Country.

Now that the Haitian dictators have cut the best last-minute deal they could — amnesty and not having to leave the country — the Clinton administration is apparently intent on dumping about $500 million into Haiti and using Americans to govern it for an interim period.

Pardon my pessimism, but I don't think Clinton will find Haiti easy to govern, even by proxy.

And, of course, the same objections to a military invasion apply to a military occupation, even if the landing was negotiated. Haiti's internal affairs are simply none of our business. All of Clinton's attempts to justify it founder on the rocks of reality. And since when did the American taxpayers authorize Clinton to squander their funds in Haiti?

Human rights abuse? Ten times worse in China and worse even in Cuba. No intervention there. Stability? It is impossible for a country as small and poor as Haiti to create instability anywhere. Cuba, on the other hand, has for decades done quite a good job of creating instability. The separatists in Quebec may well create instability in Canada.

Guarantee democracy? Since when? The CIA has supported more dictators than most British monarchs. Does this mean that every time there is a coup in the world the United States will intervene? Someone should whisper into Mr. Clinton's ears to remind him that when they had free and fair elections in Algeria about two years ago, the Army tossed out the results and imposed a military dictatorship. The United States has supported and continues to support the dictatorship.

Furthermore, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who Clinton says must serve out his term as president, is about as anti-American an individual as you can find. The Haitian military deposed him for the same reason the Catholic Church defrocked him — his advocacy of violence made them nervous. Some CIA officials have said he's unstable.

It's ironic that a man who used to make speeches vilifying people who "kissed America's (expletive)" ran straight to America and kissed its you know what.

No, all the heifer dust notwithstanding, U.S. military personnel are in Haiti because Clinton's runaway mouth painted him into a corner box where he had — finally — to fish or cut bait. Wise presidents do not paint themselves into corners by running off at the mouth in a rash manner.

I don't know how long this occupation will last. Months for sure. But I predict Haiti will not be much better off after it is over. The U.S. Treasury will be deeper in the red. America's young men and women in uniform will have been separated from their families for no good reason.

That's what galls most Americans. If some good were going to come from it all, that would be one thing, but Haiti under any rule is not, never has been and never will be of any vital or strategic interest to the United States. And Haiti has no tradition of democracy. If Mr. Clinton has taken it upon himself to guarantee a democratic government, then he might as well resign himself to permanent occupation.

May we assume, now that St. Clinton has slain the dragon of the evil dictators, that all the Haitian refugees will be sent home to rebuild their country? After all, the reason for their refugee status has now expired.

My guess is that most of them will stay right here, probably because they have a more realistic view of Haiti's potential and future than Mr. Clinton.

I never thought I'd see a president worse than Jimmy Carter. Not only was I wrong, but Clinton has twice had his chestnuts pulled out of the fire by Mr. Carter. Carter has proven to be a better ex-president than he was a president. He's a better ex-president than Clinton is a president.

Revenge best with a little redemption

The face staring out at me from the front-page newspaper photo, a receptionist at a local business, was strangely familiar yet unsettling. "I think I remember that face," I thought, "but not quite."

I glanced at the headline and saw the first name and instantly knew who she was. "Rita, of course! After all these years, what's she doing back in town?" Still, the face wasn't quite right.

A few days later I had an occasion to stop in the business where Rita worked. I introduced myself. "Oh, sure, Sarah, of course I remember you!" she said, and we began to talk about being freshmen in high school together 30 years ago. She had been a foster child whom everyone liked, and if I had one memory of her it was of someone who persevered above all odds. When I last saw her she was about to enter the military.

I was totally absorbed as she told me of a successful Army career and her search for a new profession post-retirement. She sounded like the Rita I knew and recounted stories I remembered, but still I was aware there was something different about her.

Finally my eyes caught the two perfect bones of her finely chiseled nose: She's had plastic surgery! Wow, what a big difference one little operation can make, I thought. I'd always thought of her as plain but attractive 30 years ago, because of her delicious giggle, engaging personality and bright brown eyes. But now, she was clearly a knockout.

A few weeks later I had the opportunity to talk with her again, and she told me she'd just gone to her 25th high-school class reunion. I asked if she'd enjoyed herself.

"Yes, I did, but not for any of the reasons I thought I would," she told me. "I healed a 25-year-old wound that caused me to have three nose jobs and a chin implant over the years, and ended up feeling better about myself than I thought possible." I listened as an amazing story unfolded.

"When I was a junior and senior in high school there was a boy who used to tease me about my looks and call me things like 'Olive Oyl' and 'banana nose,'" she said. "My self-esteem had already been pretty low when I went to live with my foster parents, but his constant ridicule sent it into the cellar. I resolved that as soon as I could do something about my looks, I would. While I was in the military I had two bad nose jobs, but I kept at it until they got it right."

"When I got the invitation to my high-school reunion, I decided that if that boy was there, I was going to go up to him and ask him if he had any idea how much pain he had caused me. I thought that might help me purge some of the bad feelings, might bring some kind of closure. But when I got there and saw him standing over by the wall with his own huge schnoz — something I'd never even noticed in high school, by the way — and his fat, dumphy wife, everything I was feeling just sort of melted away. I felt free for the first time in a quarter of a century."

I was no stranger to the kind of suffering Rita was talking about, and hung on her every word in fascination. In my early teens I was one of the girls who didn't look quite right to a group of teenage boys and was extremely unhappy about my looks, especially my frizzy hair in an era when "good" hair was long and straight. I was dying to know what she finally said to him.

"Well, I just went up, looked him squarely in the eye and said, 'Hello, Jim,' and nothing else," she said. "I already had what I'd come for: I'm OK whether I had a nose job or not. But the darndest thing happened later. I was standing at the bar and he walked up and said, 'Rita, I want to buy you a drink.' I said, 'Jim, you don't have to do that,' and he said, 'Yes, I do. I need to buy you a drink,' and I let him."

Ah, Rita was a class act, just as I remembered. In the same instant that Jim realized the gravity of what he'd done 25 years ago, she allowed him to redeem himself.

Lifestyles

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Help! I am involved in a sticky situation and need your opinion. I recently received an invitation in the mail titled "Shower By Mail."

The shower was being given by the mother of the bride who lives in a distant state. Knowing that I would not attend, I was asked to send a gift to the bride's mother to be opened at the shower.

I had never met the bride-to-be. She happens to be engaged to the son of the woman my widowed father has been dating for years. I've met the son — but only for a few holiday dinners.

When I received this shower invitation, my initial reaction was one of disbelief. There was no R.S.V.P. indicated, simply an address to where the gift should be sent.

I was so offended by the whole thing that I sent nothing. The shower has come and gone. Unfortunately, it has not been forgotten by my father's "friend," who has made it clear that she noticed I had not sent a gift — she has been acting very standoffish.

Abby, should I have sent a gift, even though I had never met the bride-to-be and was not really invited to the shower?

SHOWERED WITH CONFUSION

DEAR SHOWERED: You need feel no remorse nor guilt. You were not actually invited to anything; you were simply given the "privilege" of contributing a gift to a shower.

However, in view of the fact that the groom's mother had been dating your father for a number of years, you might have handled the situation more generously, and sent a token gift with a note offering congratulations and best wishes to the bride and groom. For the record, it is improper for the mother of the bride to give a shower for her own daughter.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle an argument between my husband and me. Should a man's socks match his shoes — or his suit? My husband has two pairs of dress shoes; one is a tannish color and the other is black.

Which pair of shoes should he wear with a gray suit? And what color socks should he wear? Should his socks match his suit or his shoes?

THE BATTLEING BERNSTEINS

DEAR BATTLEING BERNSTEINS: Although the sky wouldn't fall if Mr. B. wore the tan shoes with the gray suit, a well-dressed man would wear black shoes and gray socks with a gray suit. (His socks should match either his suit or his trousers; and he should save the tan shoes for tan or brown clothing.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a faithful reader of your column, and this is my first letter to you. I have no problem or gripe. However, re: the letter from the old bowler who didn't want to tell her age: When someone asks me how old I am, I smile and say, "I'm somewhere between the age of consent and collapse."

Abby, I'm actually 74, and have no wrinkles; so most people think I'm younger. You may print my name.

PEGGY O'NEIL, PUYALLUP, WASH.

DEAR PEGGY: Congratulations. That's what I call "the luck of the Irish!"

The Tiny Lynn Band is scheduled to play at this year's 10th Annual Country Fair Saturday, Oct. 15 at the M.K. Brown Civic Center. The dance is set to begin at 9 p.m. The fair, sponsored by the Pampa Greater Chamber of Commerce, is the annual fund raising event for the chamber. In addition to the dance, the event will also include a silent auction, live auction, cash drawings and bingo. Tickets are $15 and the door opens at 5 p.m. The price does not include bingo. Girl Scout registration and volunteer recruiting underway

Texas Plains Girl Scout Council is now registering girls ages 5-17 and recruiting adult volunteers for the Girl Scout programs.

Girl Scout membership dues are $6 annually, and financial assistance is available.

Girl Scouting offers a number of activities, including troop camping, career exploration, art adventures and community service projects. The Girl Scout program aims at helping girls develop self-esteem, make new friends and become a vital part of their community.

"Pampa Girl Scouts have so much fun learning about the world around them," said Paula Goff, membership specialist. "We encourage every girl in Pampa to join."

Adult leaders also are encouraged to register as Girl Scout members and to serve Girl Scouting in several capacities, Goff said. Girl Scout troop leaders, consultants and guest speakers are just some of the volunteer positions available to both women and men.

For additional information about Girl Scouting, contact Goff in Pampa at 669-6862, Molly Turpin in LeFors at 835-2295 or the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council at 1-800-687-GIRL.

With nearly 3.5 million members, Girl Scouts of the USA is the largest voluntary organization for girls in the world. Texas Plains Council serves more than 3,000 girls in 17 counties of the Texas Panhandle area.

Genealogical society set to present workshop

AMARILLO — The Amarillo Genealogical Society will present a workshop on Saturday, Oct. 29, at 9:30 a.m. in the Centennial Room of the First National Bank in Amarillo.

Registration will start at 8:30 a.m., and the workshop is scheduled to end at 4:30 p.m.

Jo White Linn of Salisbury, N.C., will be conducting the study on "Problem Solving" in genealogical research.

The pros and cons of airline partnerships

By JENNIFER MERIN For AP Special Features

NEW YORK (AP) — Partnerships between domestic and foreign airlines make it easier for travelers to fly abroad from mid-sized U.S. cities by offering shared routes and coordinated schedules.

These partnerships, called code sharing, also are cost-effective for the airlines. In effect, they allow airlines to expand their routes without paying for the rights or laying out big bucks for landing facilities and additional aircraft and personnel.

"The partnership goal is to provide passengers with seamless service, facilitating transfers from smaller cities to an international gateway and onward to an overseas destination," says John Lampl, a spokesman for British Airways, which is in partnership with USAir.

In addition, airline partnerships often offer frequent flyer bonus miles on specified shared routes.

The British Airways-USAir partnership began in March 1993 with three shared routes. It has expanded to 63 shared routes, including service from Phoenix to London. USAir also partners with Alitalia and All Nippon Airways.

Other partnerships include American with British Midland, Gulf Air, Qantas and South African; Continental with SAS, Air Canada and Air France; Delta with Singapore, Swissair, Sabena, Malev, Varig, Vietnam and Aeroflot;

Northwest with KLM; United with Lufthansa, Thai International, Transbrasil, British Midland, Sunair Express and ALM Antilles.

An example of how the system works: Phoenix passengers on the shared route to London, for example, fly USAir to either Pittsburgh or Philadelphia — both cities are British Airways gateways and USAir hubs — and then board British Airways to London.

Partner flights differ from connecting flights in that the airlines work together on schedules so there is less layover time, which is good. But they often are called "direct" flights, a term usually reserved for flights with a stop but no change of planes. So beware when booking. And even the best intentions on scheduling can go awry, leaving passengers with unduly long layovers.

"The code share system is still evolving," Lampl says. "We do our best to educate reservationists and travel agents, but it still takes time for everyone to adjust to new codes and routing patterns."

So when you're booking a flight yourself or through your travel agent, do your homework:

—On long-haul itineraries, ask whether routes are code shared, then double-check schedules with both partner airlines.

—On shared routes, book with the carrier operating the route's longest leg.

—Before booking, check the competition. American Airlines has a Phoenix to London route, for example, changing planes in Chicago. With a 1-hour, 36-minute layover, the trip takes 12 hours, 30 minutes.

In contrast, for the Phoenix-London route via Philadelphia shared by USAir-British Airways, USAir quoted a travel time of 15 hours, 55 minutes, while British Airways quoted 12 hours, 40 minutes. Round-trip ticket prices quoted at this writing were $796 for American and $917 for British Airways-USAir. Quotes were based on 21-day advance purchase, seven-night minimum stay, Monday through Thursday travel.

—Frequent travelers should also invest in an Official Airlines Guide (OAG) detailing airline routes worldwide, or assemble a collection of schedules for carriers they most often use.

The Country Peddler Show comes to Amarillo

AMARILLO — The Country Peddler Show, sponsored by American Country Shows Inc., will be at the Amarillo Civic Center on Oct. 14-16.

The show will be open from 1-9 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're still in a very favorable cycle for doing well commercially or financially. This is a good time to start storing hay in the barn. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your inherent charm and warmth can be utilized to your advantage today. You'll be able to get what you want by being constructive and assertive instead of aggressive and demanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're a go-getter who likes to stir things up. Today, however, your chart indicates good things may come your way without too much effort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Being able to stand out in a crowd is one of your best assets today. You will not go unnoticed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not deliberately seek challenging situations today. However, remember you're capable of circumventing obstacles and subduing adversaries.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You will have a very pleasant way of making your point today. Even if you are critical, your comments will be accepted as constructive counsel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Go with the flow today. Altered circumstances and shifting conditions could be beneficial. Changes may reveal opportunities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you have a high reserve of energy, but today you won't find it necessary to use much of it to be productive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Harmonious relationships with fellow workers could be inspirational today. Together you may revive previously dull assignments with new dynamics and enthusiasm.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're very charismatic today and you'll serve as a benevolent catalyst. Action will follow you wherever you go, producing friendly responses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you feel creative, imaginative and artistic today, use your inclinations to beautify your surroundings. What you buy, make or rearrange will have a pleasing effect.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Others will recall your actions more than your words today. Fortunately, your deeds will leave favorable impressions.

HARVESTER GOLF SCRAMBLE

PAMPA — The Harvester basketball golf scramble has been scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 22 at Hidden Hills Golf Course.
Tee times are 9:30 a.m. Cost per team is $130, which includes green fee, carts and lunch.
This year's scramble will have a super shooter division with no handicap requirements. A team can put together the best shooters and go for the team title.

The second division will be for those teams who prefer the regular format and have a team total handicap of at least 35. Three places will be paid to winners in each division.

There will be an opportunity to win a vehicle from Bill Allison Auto for a hole-in-one on No. 11. Also, there will be drawings for other prizes, such as green fee passes, merchandise and other gifts.

Call Hidden Hills at 669-5866 to get on the list. The fee is limited to 36 teams.
Proceeds go to the high school basketball programs.

VOLLEYBALL

BRISCOE — Fort Elliott went 2-0 in the District 1-5A volleyball standings with a 15-1, 15-2 win over Kelton Tuesday night.

Fort Elliott, 13-4 overall, was led by the service attack of Andrea Dukes, who scored the first 10 points of the opening game. Lintsey Fillingim and Jamey James combined for some good hits and sets.

"The girls are playing with a lot of confidence right now," said Fort Elliott coach Dave Johnson. "They're coming out every game ready to play."

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

GROOM — Groom hosts Booker at 7:30 Friday night to open the District 1-1A season.
The Tigers, who moved from six-man to 11-man this season, finished the non-district season with a 3-2 record.
The Harris Rating System has Booker (1-2-1) favored by 13 points.

PRO BASKETBALL

DALLAS (AP) — Roy Tarpley says he considered committing suicide after being kicked out of the NBA three years ago for violating the league drug policy.
"I thought about all of the people that I had let down again," Tarpley was quoted as saying in today's Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I thought about killing myself. I thought my wife might leave me. I thought I had lost everything else too."

But the 7-foot forward is coming back to the NBA, most likely with the Mavericks. He is certified drug free and ready to resume his career after a three-year exile.

"It feels a little weird," he said. "It's kind of a trip. But I just thank God for giving me another chance to prove myself."

Tarpley spent more than an hour at the Dallas Mavericks' practice facility in Addison Wednesday, talking with coach Dick Motta and player personnel director Keith Grant, and getting acquainted with other Mavericks.
He said he expects to sign a three-year, $10 million contract today in order to be on the court for the start of training camp Friday at Southern Methodist University.

Tarpley said his past troubles resulted from being "young and dumb and living on the edge."
Tarpley, 29, spent the past two seasons playing professionally in Greece. He and his wife, Dawn, have had a daughter since his banishment. Harmoni Tarpley is now 2.
Tarpley said he has remained clean of drugs.

"This was not easy," Tarpley told The Dallas Morning News. "That's what people need to realize and understand. It was not easy to go through all the adversity and turmoil and embarrassment and humiliation, and be able to suck it up and come back. The NBA would not have reinstated me if they did not feel I deserved another chance."

The presence of the 7-foot forward has raised hopes and expectations for the Mavericks, who have gone 24-140 the past two seasons.
"He's accepted the fact that he's got to do it here, and I think that's a real positive," Motta said. "We didn't put any pressure on him, either."
But that does not mean the pressure is not there, Tarpley said.

"I'm just nervous because I want to go out there and do well," he said. "I want to help the team."

Switzer versus Ryan — No feud yet.

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — Don't look for a Jimmy Johnson-style feud between Buddy Ryan and Barry Switzer.
When he was at Philadelphia, Ryan had a running exchange of verbal needles with Johnson that heated up the series between the Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys.

Rookie coach Switzer drew praise from Arizona coach Ryan on Wednesday in a telephone exchange with area media, saying, "Barry paid his dues. He also was the most successful college coach. Every time I saw him play he won. His players always respected him."
Ryan said Switzer called him during the summer "to apologize for something he had been quoted as saying in a magazine. I wasn't sure what it was all about but we had a good conversation. He's a highly successful coach."

Switzer said he's not going to get into any exchanges with Ryan, although the Cowboys have been promised "an old-fashioned woodshed situation."

"It serves no purpose and has no effect on the players," Switzer said. "I've never gotten into anything like that. I like Buddy."

Switzer did have his moments at Oklahoma when he got into some word fights with then Texas coach Darrell Royal that made the annual meeting between the Sooners and Longhorns even more bitter.

Ryan was 8-2 against the Cowboys when he was at Philadelphia. Asked his formula to success, he said, "at Philadelphia we had to make a special game out of it. It was the only way we could turn things around. We had to have a change of attitude."
He added, "You can usually beat anybody if you decide to beat 'em."

Ryan brings his Cardinals to Texas Stadium on Sunday after his first victory in Phoenix, 17-7 over the Minnesota Vikings.
He said the Cowboys still look tough to him without Johnson.

"You can't tell they miss Jimmy by looking at film," Ryan said. "You don't know how things are going in the lockerroom."
He said he doesn't get any more pleasure out of beating the Cowboys than any other team.

"We've dug ourselves a hole and the Cowboys are in the way," Ryan said.
Ryan expects his usual warm greeting from the Dallas fans.
"One year they threw pork chops and another time it was water balloons," Ryan said.

It beat what happened to Johnson in Philadelphia. He was peppered once by snowballs, including one that had a battery inside.
Switzer said controversy is Ryan's lifeblood.
"It's his style, it's his life, and his personality," Switzer said. "It's kind of the way he's always done things."

Cowboys' Smith still sore

IRVING (AP) — Emmitt Smith jogged around on his pulled hamstring on Wednesday but if it was a game he couldn't have played.
The Dallas Cowboys running back said, "It's still up in the air whether I'll play on Sunday. The hamstring is still sore."

The Cowboys host the Arizona Cardinals on Sunday in Texas Stadium.
"I still have some work to do before I can get there," Smith said. "I think I've got a good shot. It has to be good enough that I can run fullspeed."
Smith pulled the hamstring in the first half of Sunday's 34-7 victory over the Washington Redskins.

Cougars camp

Tailback Beno Bryant is clocked in the 40-yard dash during the first workout camp held by the Carolina Panthers on Wednesday at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina. Bryant, who was cut by the Los Angeles Rams on Aug. 22, was among six players invited to the workout session at the Panthers' training facility. The Cougars, along with the Jacksonville Jaguars, open play in the NFL next season. About 50 spectators and as many reporters and photographers watched the Cougars' first workout camp. (AP photo)

Florida State favored

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

The sound of trash talk is in the air. It must be time for Florida State-Miami.
Already, Miami linebacker Ray Lewis has predicted a blowout and Hurricanes defensive tackle Warren Sapp has ripped Tallahassee as a second-rate city.

The verbal volleys have become a traditional part of the Sunshine State rivalry, which resumes Saturday night when the third-ranked Seminoles (4-0) play the No. 13 Hurricanes (3-1) at the Orange Bowl.

Although the game could once again have an impact on the national championship, it's the first time since 1987 that at least one of the teams won't be ranked No. 1 or No. 2 at kickoff. It's also the first contest since 1986 that won't feature two Top 10 teams.

But this game is about more than rankings.
"There's not a day I don't think about it," Sapp said. "It's what you live for."

Florida State has lost four straight to Miami in the Orange Bowl, but the Hurricanes' aura of invincibility there was shattered last month when Washington ended their record, 58-game home winning streak.

In fact, the Miami mystique may be a thing of the past. After winning four national championships in nine years, the Hurricanes are only 12-5 since losing to Alabama in the 1993 Sugar Bowl.

Penn State displays flashy offense

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Under those plain blue and white uniforms, Penn State has gone flashy with a high-voltage offense that may turn into the most productive in school history.
The fourth-ranked Nittany Lions have averaged 51.6 points per game in going undefeated in their first five games, outscoring opponents 258-86.

Seems like a pretty big change for a team so identified with defense that it long ago earned the nickname Linebacker U.
Not so, coach Joe Paterno says.
"We've never wined away from the idea that we want a two running back lineup," Paterno said in a telephone interview as Penn State took a week off before facing No. 7 Michigan at Ann Arbor Oct. 15. "We've always had a good tailback and good fullback. We haven't changed much, we just have better execution and better people."

Three seniors — tailback Ki-Jana Carter, quarterback Kerry Collins, and wide receiver Bobby Engram — are leading the way, but Penn State has quality backups in the event of injuries.

Carter won't catch Curt Warner, whose 3,398 yards are the most ever by a Penn State runner. And he won't break Warner's school record of 18 100-yard games.

But he has a shot at eclipsing the school record for best seasonal rushing average, 8.4 yards per carry, set by Blair Thomas in 1986. With 601 yards on 72 carries, Carter is averaging 8.3 yards per run.

Carter suffered a dislocated right thumb in Penn State's 48-21 victory over Temple Oct. 1 but Paterno was optimistic he will be ready for Michigan.

If Carter can't go, the Nittany Lions still have Mike Archie and Stephen Pitts. In addition to his three rushing touchdowns this season, Archie has caught one touchdown pass and has thrown another.

Collins has the country's best pass efficiency rating at 204.9, is completing nearly 70 percent of his passes and is averaging 12.45 yards per pass attempt.

Tiger League football

Mr. Gattis Packers remain unbeaten in the Optimist Tiger Football League with a 3-0 record.

The Packers defeated the White Deer Mean Machine, 38-6. Terrence Lemons carried the ball only two times, but both resulted in touchdowns of 91 and 57 yards. Randy Tice rushed for 103 yards on eight carries and had a 51-yard touchdown.

Brandon ALbus rushed for 87 yards on five carries and scored on a 43-yard touchdown. Albus also threw a four-yard TD pass to Lemons and ran back a kickoff 73 yards for a touchdown.

The Packers had 388 yards in total offense.
Defensively, Albus had 12 tackles, Tanner Dyer, nine tackles, including five for losses; Scyler Danner, nine tackles and Ryan Ferrel, seven tackles.

The Packers also had a recent win over the Bowers Ranch Raiders by the score of 24-6.
Lemons was the Packers' leading rusher with 167 yards on seven carries, scoring three touchdowns on 35, 45 and 57-yard runs. Albus had a 70-yard kickoff return. The Packers had 252 yards in total offense.

Albus had 13 tackles and Lemons nine to lead the defense. Jarret Woodington and Taylor Harris each had a pass interception.

Nebraska's Frazier may miss rest of season

Nebraska head coach Tom Osborne talks to reporters Wednesday about quarterback Tommie Frazier, who may miss the remainder of the season. (AP photo)

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Associated Press Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska, likely to lose quarterback Tommie Frazier for the season to a recurring blood clot in his right leg, is turning its attention to preparations for Oklahoma State.

"It's a little bit of a distraction for getting ready for Saturday's game," coach Tom Osborne said Wednesday. "They're alright. I didn't notice any difference during practice."

Osborne said No. 2 Nebraska (5-0) plans to be good, with or without Frazier.

"When you lose a player like that it's not good, but we're planning on having a great football team," he said. "Hopefully, everybody will pick it up a notch."

Dr. Deepak Gangahar, a cardiovascular surgeon, said Frazier is probably finished for the season. He said the 20-year-old junior from Bradenton, Fla., should remain in the hospital for a week to 10 days for surgery to correct the problem.

Frazier should not have physical contact for the next three to six months, Gangahar said.

"He's a brave man, a strong man and he's taking it very well," Gangahar said. "His health is his prime importance right now."

Osborne admitted the doctor was probably right, but said he wasn't ready to give up yet.

"The doctors have indicated he won't play, but you never say never in athletics," he said. "But I wouldn't hold out that hope (that Frazier will return) to anybody. The main concern now is down the road ... to get him healthy."

Frazier is all but certain to undergo surgery to tie off a surface vein that had a smaller blood clot, Gangahar said. That smaller vein, he said, likely rubbed against the larger inner vein, causing the second blood clot in two weeks.

The larger second clot discovered Tuesday has been dissolved, Gangahar said. Doctors now want Frazier's blood to gradually thicken so they can operate to tie off the smaller vein.

Doctors discovered a 6- to 8-inch-long clot Sept. 25 behind Frazier's right knee. Gangahar said then Frazier would be out for the season if the clot re-formed.

College basketball coaches have goal to develop freshmen eligibility plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Recruiting is as much a part of college basketball as the bands, shot clock and loud TV announcers.

It doesn't take much to imagine coaches having to promise starting berths, or at least plenty of playing time, to high school wunderkinds who have been rated, evaluated and through a mill of all-star games coast to coast.

That's why it seemed improbable when the National Association of Basketball Coaches closed its two-day summit Wednesday by reiterating a long-term goal of the abolition of freshmen eligibility.

"For the betterment of the student-athlete and as a possible solution to the problems of initial eligibility standards, the NABC Board of Directors will work with the NCAA, the NABC Congress and other groups to develop a freshmen ineligibility plan," the written position said.

Keeping all freshmen from playing would end the debate surrounding the banishment of only those who failed to meet the initial eligibility requirements. Those standards, known as Prop 48, have been a 2.0 grade-point average in 11 core courses and at least 700 on the standardized SAT which has been characterized as biased toward minorities.

Those numbers are scheduled to change in the fall of 1995 as Prop 16, voted in by the NCAA membership in 1992, takes effect. Prop 16 increases the number of core courses to 13 and would call for a student-athlete to have at least a 900 on the SAT with a 2.0 average or a 700 with a 2.5. Not meeting those standards would mean no athletic financial aid and no practice for the first year.

"Today we are faced with finding a cure for initial eligibility so that we as coaches and administrators can continue to provide opportunities for the many young people that want to attend college, play athletics, graduate and become productive citizens in our society," said George Washington coach Mike Jarvis, a member of the NABC board.

The Black Coaches Association boycotted the inaugural issues summit last year in favor of meeting with the Black Congressional Caucus. This year, the BCA was represented by about one-third of the 62 black Division I head coaches, the same percentage for overall attendance among all 300 Division I head coaches.

"The black coaches, myself being one, decided not attend to the issues summit last year so more attention could be brought and focused on the issues facing intercollegiate and so we could do it on a social level," Jarvis said. "We are here to continue the fight on a different battlefield, the field of athletics."

The NABC said it would support a one-year postponement of Prop 16 while it readies its plan on freshmen ineligibility.

Changes abound in Classes 5A, 4A

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

High school football

DALLAS (AP) — The best way to sum up the first half of this year's high school football season is to consider this tidbit: Southlake Carroll has been shut out and Houston Davis won by a shutout.

Things haven't been so out-of-control wacky that Carroll, holder of the state's longest regular-season winning streak, was shut out by Davis, holder of the nation's longest losing streak.

Still, some interesting things have happened the last five weeks. And district play, which has a tendency to bring out all sorts of craziness, hasn't even hit full swing.

Classes 5A and 4A already have provided the most headlines and seen the biggest changes in their top 10s. The top-ranked teams in the lower three classes have not changed.

Actually, Aldine MacArthur relinquished its 5A top spot just this week to Abilene Cooper and defending 4A champion Stephenville replaced Sulphur Springs at No. 1 after two games.

The 5A poll changed so much each week since the preseason, you'd need a chart to track it:

Five new teams after the first week, five more after the second (although two had been in the preseason poll), three more after week three and two each of the last two weeks (although one had been in before).

The only two teams to have remained in the poll all season are Cooper and MacArthur, which was a 16-3 winner over Willowridge in the first-ever No. 1 vs. No. 2 season opener.

Cooper may be the best story thus far. Coach Randy Allen was a star player on the school's 1967 state finalist and now he's back as their coach and his son, Zac, is the star quarterback. The Cougars are No. 1 for the first time since 1979.

Another nice story is the success of No. 10 A&M Consolidated, a Class 4A powerhouse until realignment forced it into 5A.

Coach Ross Rogers' crew hasn't missed a beat. They knocked off then-No. 8 Odessa Permian in Week Two, then were upset themselves before regrouping and rejoining the rankings this week.

Permian, as usual, also has been in the news. Under new coach Randy Mayes, the Panthers are a disappointing 2-3 with wipe-out losses to Consolidated, Amarillo and Dallas Carter.

At least they beat crosstown rival Odessa High, extended that winning streak to 30 years.

The two most surprising results of the first half of the season have to be Southlake Carroll's 36-0 loss to Mesquite Potect and Houston Davis' 32-0 shutout of Houston Reagan.

Carroll's shutout loss came the week after the Dragons' state-record regular-season winning streak ended at 72 games with a 43-21 loss to Class 3A's No. 5 Gainesville.

Davis' big victory came the week after Carroll's washout. A victory was a good step for a team still rebounding from the horrendous 80-game losing streak it snapped last year; a shutout was a tremendous ego boost.

Shutouts have come in bunches for several other, very talented teams.

Class 4A's third-ranked La Marque, which traditionally has one of the state's best defenses, already has three shutouts.

Most of the points the Cougars have allowed come with asterisks. In the two games they allowed touchdowns, the first came against the second-team defense and only one of Crosby's three TDs against La Marque last weekend was scored by the offense.

Marlin, the No. 10 team in 3A, has given up only three touchdowns per game and 2A's unranked Clifton has allowed only one touchdown and it came in the third quarter of the season opener.

Another stingy unranked team is The Colony in 5A, which has given up only 15 points all year — and nine of them came last weekend.

Despite all those great efforts, there was a six-man game this season where the offense totally dominated. Covington prevailed, beating Allen Academy 102-72. Imagine scoring 72 points — and losing by 30!

With all those teams getting well-earned recognition, there's really been no player getting all the attention this year as a Jerod Douglas the last two seasons.

Elgin's Tyron McFarlin began the season with a blast by rushing for 409 yards, and plenty of other guys have had 300-yard weeks.

Burkeville's Jeff Spikes has been the most consistent big-game runner. Spikes, who led all classes in rushing last year, already has 977 yards on only 53 carries in four games. That's an average of 18.4 yards per carry.

Three guys already over 1,000 yards are Linden-Kildare's Lamont Zachery (1,123 yards), Aubrey's Jeremy Greenway (1,191) and Corsicana's Ketric Sanford (1,072).

Another player worth noting is Greg Ray of Groesbeck, who already has had three 250-yard games.

No quarterback has made much of a splash this season, but a receiver has. Stanley Johnson of Fort Worth Paschal burned Crowley for 11 catches and 354 yards, including touchdown grabs of 70, 63 and 58 yards.
