PAMPA — Friday is the last day for in-person early voting for Tuesday's general election.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said the early voting polling place in Room 100 of the courthouse will close at 5 p.m. Friday. It will, however, be open until 7 p.m. Thursday.

New election judges for two of the county's precincts were appointed Tuesday by Gray County commissioners.

Commissioners declared an emergency and named two judges for Precinct 11, M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center, who live outside the precinct. H.V. Ballard, who lives in Precinct 15, was named presiding judge for Precinct 11, and Esta Lee Brogdon, who lives in Precinct 12, was named assistant.

They replace Lonnie and Teresa Johnson, who had to relinquish their duties as election judges because Lonnie Johnson is ill.

Carter told commissioners she was unable to find anyone living in Precinct 11 to serve as judges.

Commissioners appointed Bill Cofer to replace Howard Graham as assistant election judge in Precinct 14, Travis School.

PAMPA — Four Pampa youths are in a juvenile detention facility today charged with burglary of a habitation after an observant neighbor spotted them at a Gillespie Street mobile home.

The boys, ages 12 through 14 years of age, were detained by Pampa police officers about 5:35 p.m. Tuesday at Francis and Gillespie based on the call by Viola Mae Hulsey. They are accused of burglarizing the trailer owned by Don Reed at 317 Gillespie. Reed reported several items missing, including a case of peanut butter, though nothing has been recovered, police officials say.

They were taken to Moore County Detention Center, Dumas, by a Gray County deputy after they were charged with burglary of a habitation, said Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Albert Nichols.

PAMPA — St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church School will have its Fall Festival on Friday at the school, 23rd Street and the Perryton Parkway.

Scheduled from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., the festival will include a spaghetti dinner beginning at 5 p.m., as well as games and food booths, according to Jana Meyer, home and school president for St. Vincent's.

Raffle tickets for the Dallas Cowboys-Washington Redskins game will be available, she said.

Meyer said the school's festival is the big fund raiser for the fall.

STATE

CARROLLTON (AP) — The Carrollton City Council has rejected an "English-only" resolution that its sponsor called "a pro-America stance."

Council members in the Dallas suburb turned down the proposal Tuesday night. Tom Lenihan's resolution urged "state and national leaders to adopt English as the official language."

Hispanic leaders lobbied council members furiously Tuesday, calling the measure divisive and demeaning. They complained they were given no notice of its consideration.

Lenihan, who is spearheading the movement across Texas and the United States, acknowledged after the 5-2 vote that "we had a lot of pressure applied very quickly."

The measure was merely symbolic and would not have affected Carrollton residents or city business.

But if such a resolution were adopted in Texas, all state government transactions and documents would be allowed only in English. Spanish-language ballots would be eliminated.

The five who killed the measure said the council should be sending messages of inclusion.

"If it excludes and separates, it destroys this community," council member Stan Hampton said.

Lenihan said the proposal was not an anti-immigration measure. "This is a pro-America stance," he said.

Private property rights coalition forming

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

As environmentalists push for more species to be listed as endangered, a Texas cattlemen's group and a regional oil and gas producers organization announced what may be the first step in expanding an already growing private property rights coalition.

Chauncey Thompson of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association and Wayne Hughes of the Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association said two seminars held in the Texas Panhandle Tuesday may signal the first step of a coalition between the two groups to try to influence legislation they expect to be introduced next year concerning private property rights and the Endangered Species Act.

"Our next step is to come up with a joint agenda that both associations can agree upon and implement during the next legislative session," Hughes said today.

While the T&SCRA has already joined more than 40 other organizations nationwide including the National Cattlemen's Association and forest industry groups as well as Farmers and Ranchers for Property Rights, the working relationship with the PPROA may signal a broadening of support for the private property rights coalition.

"We're just one of four regional oil and gas associations," said Hughes, "whom we suspect will join together in this effort. We see a potential ground swell being played out in favor of private property rights."

The other oil and gas associations, he said, include organizations in the Permian Basin, Wichita Falls and Abilene.

"I think our goal today is to form this coalition that Wayne talked about," Thompson said. "We need to work to change the legislation to allow us to live with the Endangered Species Act because it's not going away. We need to understand where we have problems, how we can fix them, and we need to share that information with the people that represent us."

In Tuesday's meetings in Amarillo and Pampa, Thompson said environmental issues as well as most rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution were tied to private property rights.

"What are our rights as land owners?" Thompson said, addressing an assembled group of about three dozen at Pampa's M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building.

"The Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution says that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

"The Texas Constitution in Section 17 says no person's property shall be taken, damaged or destroyed or applied to public use without adequate compensation being made, unless by the consent of such a person, and when taken except for the use of the State, such compensation shall be first made or secured by the deposit of money."

"Private property is a real human right and the foundation of all freedom," he said. "If a church can't own its building, there can be no freedom of religion. If a newspaper can't own its newsprint, there can be no freedom of the press. If there is no private land, there can be no freedom of speech. Even citizens who don't own any real estate have a vested interest in land owners' rights. The domino theory strongly suggests that if we abandon land owner rights, the other rights guaranteed by the Constitution are at risk."

Tom Doughtie with Southwest Compliance Inc. of Amarillo, a consulting group for the PPROA, reviewed the regulations and regulatory agencies, both state and federal, that affected land owners, noting that the Endangered Species Act allowed the federal government to define and protect critical habitat.

"The key words here are 'critical habitat,'" Doughtie said, explaining that under the federal government's police powers, they can control private property through regulation.

"The federal government currently owns very little land in Texas," Thompson said, "but what it doesn't own, it can regulate. We're a nation managed by regulation."

"Dr. Milton Friedman, Noble laureate in economics, estimated that in 1990 that the federal government controlled either through direct appropriation or regulation considerably more than half of our nation's economic resources. The federal government already owns 30 percent of the land mass in the United States. How much land is that? That's 700 million acres, one million square miles or seven Californias," he said.

Leading indicators index unchanged

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity was unchanged in September after a strong advance the previous month and factory orders slipped after a big August jump.

The Index of Leading Economic Indicators turned in a mixed performance in September, with six of its 11 components advancing, the Commerce Department said today.

The Clinton administration, meanwhile, appeared to be trying to shore up the value of the dollar on world currency markets. An administration official declined comment on whether the government was intervening to buy dollars as Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen called for a stronger greenback.

"A stronger dollar will reduce inflation pressures, improve American living standards and promote investment," Bentsen said in a statement.

In another report, the Federal Reserve said its most recent survey of business activity shows the nation is experiencing a broad expansion with limited signs of inflation.

The survey, concluded last week, said the economy is growing in all parts of the nation — picking up steam in some areas while accelerating more slowly in New York. Labor markets are getting tighter in some sectors and, while retail prices are steady, there are signs inflation pressures are building, the Fed said.

The Commerce Department also reported that orders to U.S. factories fell 0.2 percent in September, the second decline in the last three months and a dramatic turnaround from a 4.7 percent jump in August.

Analysts said the economic data suggest growth, while still healthy, is moderating. They said the economy is still showing enough vigor to all but assure the Federal Reserve will boost short-term interest rates after next week's elections.

"The economy is slowing down and commodity inflation is slowing down. It's probably good news," said Michael Evans of Evans Economics Inc., an economic consulting service in Boca Raton, Fla.

Stock and bond prices declined in early trading, with the Dow Jones industrial average off nearly 10 points by late morning and the 30-year bond yielding 8.08 percent.

But analysts said the financial markets were reacting more to the declining dollar on international currency markets than to the economic data.

"It's a pure coincidence," Evans said of the market downturn following the government reports.

The Index of Leading Economic Indicators, which rose 0.5 percent in August, has advanced in 11 of the past 14 months as the economic expansion displays surprising staying power.

U.S. moves to prop up dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government moved today to prop up the dollar after Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said the greenback's slide on currency markets is "counterproductive for the United States and the world economy."

The dollar jumped from a postwar low against the Japanese yen this morning after the Federal Reserve intervened in the U.S. currency market, buying dollars and selling yen and German marks, traders said.

Neither the Fed nor the Treasury Department, which is responsible for directing such actions, would disclose whether there was an intervention. But currency dealers in New York reported several rounds of massive dollar buying.

"A stronger dollar will reduce inflation pressures, improve American living standards and promote investment," Bentsen said in a statement. "This administration is committed to sound economic policies that expand the economy's capacity and sustain recovery with low inflation."

Bentsen's remarks followed the dollar's latest fall against other major currencies in early European trading.

By late morning, the dollar traded in New York at 96.70 yen, up from 96.18 early in the session. In London, the dollar was quoted in late trading at 96.83 yen.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5025 marks, up from 1.4938 earlier.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 96.40 yen, down 0.42 yen from Tuesday's close.

Analysts said the dollar's decline was causing a drop in financial markets, as stock and bond prices headed lower on Wall Street in late-morning trading.

The government also released reports today that suggested moderating growth for the U.S. economy. Analysts said there is no reason for the data to contribute to any fears on Wall Street that the economy is overheating and inflation is increasing.

Bentsen said, "I believe that recent movements in the dollar are inconsistent with the fundamentals of a strong investment-led recovery in the United States and the greatly enhanced ability of U.S. firms to compete around the world."

"We will continue to monitor developments closely in cooperation with our G-7 partners," he said, referring to other leading industrial nations.

Property

Doughtie said that among the key concerns by the PPROA was the Spill Prevention Control and Countermeasure Plan (SPCC) required by the federal government.

"The main requirement of facilities subject to the regulation is the preparation and implementation of a plan to prevent any discharge of oil into water of the United States," Doughtie said.

The definition of "water of the United States" has been at times taken to include street gutters and sewage drainage ditches, he said. Other regulations which involve "navigable waters of the United States Coast Guard" have been taken to include streams, creeks, lakes and ponds connected to tributary systems in a river basin and also possibly playa lakes. He and Thompson noted that a firm navigable waters definition is still tied up in court.

"Oil and gas operators are facing stricter rules," Doughtie said.

West Point football players accused of groping females

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Military Academy, avoiding any comparisons to the Tailhook scandal, rushed to assure students it was taking sexual harassment allegations seriously.

"The situation is being dealt with. Nothing has been swept under the table. Whoever did it doesn't matter," said Deputy Brigade Commander Stephanie Arnold, the academy's top-ranking female cadet.

Eighteen women have told investigators they were brushed across the breasts as they and other cadets ran past of cordon of Army players during the Oct. 20 "spirit run," two days before the team played The Citadel.

Three of those women said they believed the touching was accidental.

Of the five players under investigation, three came forward and said they inadvertently brushed against the women. The two others were turned in by their teammates. The women have not been able to identify the offending players.

The academy hasn't released the names of the players or their accusers. A decision on whether to punish the players may be handed down as early as Friday, and it could include a three-month suspension from the team, more than 90 hours of marching, 90 days restriction to the academy, or demerits.

Three women complained of the fondling immediately after the spirit run, and others began coming forward in the following days. Arnold, the second-highest-ranking cadet at West Point, said she was informed of the complaints within four hours of the rally's end.

"I was shocked," she said. "This is a very, very serious issue. It's not something anyone's taking lightly."

Arnold and West Point officials said there is no comparison between the academy's investigation and the Navy's Tailhook scandal, in which dozens of women were molested by drunken aviators who formed a gantlet in a hotel hallway during a 1991 convention in Las Vegas.

More SPCC requirements are to be adopted in 1995, according to Don Smith with EPA's Region 6 in Dallas, Doughtie said.

Doughtie noted that certification information for a SPCC plan is the same for cattle feeders as it is for oil and gas operators.

"This nation is unique among capitalist nations in that it takes an adversarial approach to regulating its citizens," Thompson said. "In this country, government establishes a highly specific standard. It frequently tries to impose legal penalties for non-compliance."

"This is the command control regulatory mind set, and this mind set has created administrative agencies at the federal and state levels that don't recognize or accept keeping governmental powers separate," he said. "Administrative agencies in Texas such as the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission set themselves up as judge and jury. Likewise, the EPA and Fish and Wildlife Service and other federal agencies are encouraged to be legislators, juries and penalty providers."

In addition to government regulations, Thompson said the TSCRA is also concerned about private environmental groups.

"Our second concern has to be with the environmental community's disrespect for landowner rights," Thompson said. "The so-called environmentalists reject the very concept of land ownership as an absolute. They see your land as our English common laws see water and air for public good. Everybody has the right to use them. The environmentalist says the same is true about land."

"Let's think about that for a minute. These groups have appointed themselves as society's environmental conscience, and they view land the same as the air in the city for everybody to use and nobody to own. They're very quick to point out that neither English common law nor continental civil law allows property owners to use their land in ways which harm others," Thompson said.

"Our U.S. Supreme Court recognizes this principal, and it's called the exercise of police power. Only when the state steps into your business, not to prevent harm, but to secure public benefit such as the building of a highway or dam is compensation due the land owner."

"Environmental activists, by labeling any action harmful and thus subject to prohibition under the police powers of the state, do not allow compensation to the land owner. They also argue that environmental regulations are designed to prevent harm to others. Even regulations governing activities restricted to your own land. I don't think this is what America was intended to be," he said.

Final preparations near for annual White Deer Polish Sausage Dinner

WHITE DEER — Preparations are nearing the final step for the annual White Deer Polish Sausage Dinner scheduled for Sunday.

The 56th annual dinner, with some 2,500 people expected to be served, will be at the Sacred Heart Parish Hall in White Deer, according to spokesman Carolyn Rapstine.

"Son, daughter, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of the original Polish families who settled in White Deer are preparing the Polish sausage which is served, grilled and steamed, with barbecue sauce, old-fashioned potato salad, sweet-sour cole slaw, beans and stewed apricots," Rapstine said.

Serving hours are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., she said. Take-out dinners and cooked or raw sausage will be available.

A display of Nativity scenes will be in the parish hall parlour, Rapstine said.

In addition, there will also be a showing of a video produced by the Carson County Square House Museum called A Place Called Home - Polish Settlement on the Plains, which tells the story of Polish settlers who came to Texas in 1854 and arrived in White Deer in 1909.

The Polish Sausage Dinner has become a traditional event for the central Texas Panhandle region, drawing many residents from the area around White Deer for the Sunday dinner.

Plane circled before crashing

By NANCY ARMOUR
Associated Press Writer

ROSELAWN, Ind. (AP) — After the doomed commuter plane flew in a holding pattern for 32 minutes, then descended to 8,000 feet in rough weather, air traffic controllers asked it to hold for another 10 minutes.

A pilot acknowledged the request with a "Thank you." Those were the last words controllers heard from the crew, federal officials said Tuesday.

Three minutes later, American Eagle Flight 4184 disappeared from radar screens. All 68 people aboard were killed Monday when the plane slammed into a muddy soybean field during a driving rainstorm.

Two in-flight weather advisories had been issued for turbulence and icing, said National Transportation Safety Board chairman Jim Hall. Investigators were checking the plane's voice data recorder to see if the pilot received the warnings.

It is not unusual for planes to fly in holding patterns for 32 minutes, said David Hinson, an administrator with Federal Aviation Administration. Planes are sometimes held for two to three hours, he said.

Hall, who described the last minutes of Flight 4184 at a news conference, said preliminary transcripts show there were no transmissions or distress signals after the pilots agreed to circle for another 10 minutes.

Corpus Christi adopts day curfew

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — City leaders have adopted a day curfew to cut down on school skipping and juvenile crime.

Police Chief Henry Garrett said the City Council's vote Tuesday night gave his officers another tool to crack down on juveniles who commit crimes when they should be in class.

Garrett said his officers already are enforcing the state truancy law, but the daytime curfew allows for swifter action against truants.

Under state law, students are considered truant if they have unexcused absences on 10 or more days within a six-month period, or three or more days within a four-week period.

"With the state law, we have to wait until the kid has skipped three or four times before we can do anything with him," Garrett said. "With this curfew, we can pick him up the first time and take immediate action."

The curfew will be in effect from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday through Friday during the school year. The city's night curfew already prohibits minors from being out in public from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Exceptions include school vacations, school-sponsored events, a doctor's appointment or when minors are accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Perot endorses Richards in her race for governor

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot threw his support Tuesday to Democratic Gov. Ann Richards in her tough reelection bid against the son of the former president whom Perot opposed as an independent two years ago.

Calling Richards "one of the greatest governors in the history of Texas," Perot said she was more qualified to govern Texas than George W. Bush, a wealthy Dallas businessman and managing general partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team.

"Running Texas as governor is big business. It is not an athletic event," Perot said.

"You need people in these very complex jobs who know how to get things done. You look at this governor's record, it is awesome."

Richards, locked in a neck and neck race with former President Bush's eldest son, told a news conference she asked Perot for his endorsement, but waited until her campaign had momentum.

"I had a feeling about 10 days ago that we began to turn the corner," Richards said at a joint news conference.

Perot denied there was any connection between his endorsement of the Democratic governor and the harsh criticism of the former president that led to his independent candidacy.

"No sour grapes. No basis for that conjecture," he said. "I'm a long-time Ann Richards fan. I voted for Ann the first time around."

Perot pulled an unprecedented 19 percent of the national vote in 1992 in the three-way race with the elder Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton.

Since then, Perot has been a harsh critic of the Clinton administration and fought hard to block passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which both Richards and her opponent supported. Perot said Richards' position on NAFTA didn't matter in this election.

"There are two horses in the race. Both of them are for NAFTA ... there's no contest who's the best horse," he said.

Perot, who in recent weeks had predicted a Richards' victory, said he planned to make radio commercials for the governor.

"She is smart, tough and principled," he said.

Perot also poked fun at the younger Bush's business record, likening the GOP challenger to a neighbor who has no experience as a plumber but would like to "fool with" your broken pipes.

Calling Richards "the steel magnolia of Texas," he said she was up to the job.

"When the tough, unsolvable challenges come in, Ann Richards does not run, duck and hide. She faces them head-on like a good Texas bulldog, and she wrestles them to the ground," he said.

A smiling Richards stood beside Perot as he pledged his support. "I'm really pleased to be endorsed by someone who is the personification of change in government," she said.

In a statement, the younger Bush discounted the endorsement.

"Ross Perot and Ann Richards are both interesting characters, but the people of Texas are not going to vote for governor based on personality or endorsements," he said.

United We Stand, the political group that supported Perot's presidential bid, said it planned to make its own endorsement later this week.

"It may be different, it may be the same," said Becky Bates, assistant to the executive director of the Texas office of United We Stand.

11 killed in helicopter crash

COZUMEL, Mexico (AP) — Authorities searched today for the bodies of three American tourists who disappeared when a helicopter plunged into the sea, apparently because of a mechanical failure. Ten other Americans and the pilot were killed.

The helicopter, carrying a pilot and 13 tourists, was one of two Bell 212s flying back to a cruise ship from Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula when it went down Tuesday afternoon in the Caribbean, police said. The other helicopter landed safely.

Brian Wilson, a volunteer for the U.S. Consulate involved in the search, said the helicopter reported mechanical failure shortly before it plunged into the 12-mile-wide channel separating Cozumel island from the Yucatan.

There was no evidence of a fierce storm as initially reported by authorities, he said.

The bodies of the Mexican pilot and the 10 passengers were recovered quickly by boats from a nearby naval base and taken to a Cozumel morgue, but three passengers had not been found by today, Wilson said they were presumed dead.

The helicopters, rented by a local travel agency, had taken the tourists on a daylong excursion from the ship to see Mayan Indian ruins.

"As they were flying back from a day at the ruins, the helicopter radioed the control tower at approximately 2:30 p.m. saying it had mechanical failure. Shortly after that, the helicopter plummeted into the ocean," Wilson told The Associated Press.

He said the bodies that had been recovered were still being identified and names would be released after families were notified. Only the pilot has been identified so far, he said.

Cozumel is about 50 miles from Cancun. Both the island and peninsula are favorite tourist haunts, par-

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings...

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveyng commandment.

Opinion

Simply befuddled in Washington, D.C.

It would be exaggerating the situation to suggest that the attitude of most of the prestige media can be summarized by the lead headline in a recent New York Times "Week In Review" section: "Washington Really Is In Touch: We're the Problem."

We're seeing an unusual number of "news stories" wondering rather openly how the voters can be so stupid, ill-informed and irrational as not to love the Democrats.

The headline above topped a piece about how the proliferation of communications media - faxes, media 800-number polls, cable, talk radio, groups urging people to call Congress about this and that - is in part responsible for the confusing morass that decision-making in Washington, D.C., has become.

You can hardly open a newspaper these days without finding a variation on the theme (again, from a recent New York Times headline): "Democrats Getting No Lift From a Rising Economy."

It's as if nobody had pointed out that the current uptick is weak compared to typical 20th-century economic recoveries, or that Clinton's tax increases haven't had much of a chance to do the damage they will ultimately do...

What other explanation could there be for disillusionment with the ruling party?

The Knight-Ridder news service recently did a number on the congressional Republicans' program for milquetoast reform called the "Contract With America."

It all makes you wonder whether most journalists covering national politics identify rather closely with the establishment they cover, assuming the establishment viewpoint that objections to Washington's ways are at best a nuisance and almost certainly the result of ignorance or a deep-seated sickness.

They might be missing a larger story. Perhaps increasing numbers of Americans are justifiably fed up with big government, ready to give the Republicans a try this time around but to toss them out too if they do their usual Democrat-on-the-cheap, hand-out-the-goodies-to-our-guys act when they have power.

It's at least as defensible a hypothesis as that the voters are simply irrational and uninformed.

Does amendment protect us all?

In 1974, a student, Marco DeFumis Jr., claimed that his 14th Amendment rights had been violated because he had been denied entrance to the University of Washington Law School.

William O. Douglas, arguably the most liberal justice in the history of the Supreme Court, had very strong feelings about the case, as he told me one day.

"The Equal Protection Clause," he wrote, "commands the elimination of racial barriers, not their creation in order to satisfy our theory as to how society ought to be organized. ... A segregated admissions process created suggestions of stigma and caste no less than a segregated classroom. ... One other assumption must be clearly disproved: that blacks or browns cannot make it on their individual merit. That is a stamp of inferiority that a state is not permitted to place on any lawyer."

Except among some conservatives, little attention has been paid to Justice Douglas' clear reading of the 14th Amendment (equal protection of the laws). A reckless illustration of what happens these days when universities have discarded the 14th Amendment has been reported by Scott Jaschik in a recent Chronicle of Higher Education:

"At the University of Wisconsin at Madison ... minority and non-minority students do not compete for the same slots. Millard Storey, director of undergraduate admissions, said that all minority students who are capable of succeeding at Madison are admitted. White applicants then compete for the remaining places. Minority students, Mr. Storey said, 'are admitted at a somewhat lower level and on a noncompetitive basis.' Many white applicants who could succeed at Madison are rejected, he added."

Nat Hentoff

Largely forgotten at a number of universities and in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division is what Justice Lewis Powell said in the historic 1978 Bakke case. Powell, in his swing vote, did indeed rule that in admissions programs, race may be considered as one factor among many.

Powell added: "Preferring members of any one group for no reason other than race or ethnic origin is discrimination for its sake. This the Constitution forbids."

Yet the U.S. Attorney General, Janet Reno, has approved the decision of her civil rights chief, Deval Patrick, to change course and support a New Jersey School Board's firing of a white teacher solely to keep a black teacher on staff. (Both are equally qualified.)

Yet, as Malcolm Gladwell has reported in The Washington Post, "No one has ever claimed that the Piscataway school district discriminated against blacks in hiring or promoting teachers. These are the conditions under which the Supreme Court has consistently ruled that reverse discrimination is justifiable."

Furthermore, the Piscataway district has long hired a higher percentage of blacks than "the percentage of qualified blacks in the labor pool."

This way around the 14th Amendment is sometimes called "diversity." A plainer way of putting it in this case is that the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department is unabashedly playing the race card - with nary a word from that former professor of constitutional law, Bill Clinton, who did speak up vehemently when he disagreed with a politically perilous Justice Department decision in a pornography case.

Much of these bunco games about affirmative action could have been avoided if another William O. Douglas policy had been adopted - "making decisions on the basis of individual attributes, rather than according to a preference solely on the basis of race."

"Such a policy," Douglas emphasized, "would not be limited to blacks or Chicanos or Filipinos or American Indians - although undoubtedly groups such as these may in practice be the principal beneficiaries of it."

"But a poor Appalachian white, or a second generation Chinese in San Francisco, or some other American whose lineage is so diverse as to defy ethnic labels, may demonstrate similar potential and thus be accorded favorable consideration by the (Admissions) Committee."

By "potential," Douglas meant the ability to overcome barriers of poverty or other handicaps. For instance, he noted, "A black applicant who pulled himself out of the ghetto into a junior college may thereby demonstrate a level of motivation, perseverance and ability that shows an admissions committee more promise for law study than the son of a rich alumnus who achieved better grades at Harvard."

"That applicant would be offered admission not because he was black, but because as an individual he has shown the potential."

As Assistant Attorney General Deval Patrick has shown in his own career - until he surrendered to the politics of race.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 2, the 306th day of 1994. There are 59 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 2, 1783, Gen. George Washington issued his "Farewell Address to the Army" near Princeton, N.J.

On this date:

In 1795, the 11th president of the United States, James Knox Polk, was born in Mecklenburg County, N.C.

In 1865, the 29th president of the United States, Warren Gamaliel Harding, was born near Corsica, Ohio.

In 1889, North Dakota and South Dakota became the 39th and 40th states.

In 1917, British Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour expressed support for a "national home" for the Jews of Palestine in what came to be known as "The Balfour Declaration."

In 1930, Haile Selassie was crowned emperor of Ethiopia.

In 1947, Howard Hughes piloted his huge wooden airplane, known as the Spruce Goose, on its only flight, which lasted about a minute over Long Beach Harbor in California.

Illegal immigrants - a Trojan horse

In Los Angeles, California voters, two-to-one, are preparing to vote no to any further welfare for illegal immigrants. This should be of concern to you.

If and when California does cut out the free education, free medicine, free food and other welfare that has lured the border jumpers, it is a certain that the illegals will promptly head for other states until the backlash sets in there, also.

The best-built lifeboat, overloaded, will capsize. Triage demands selectivity.

In classical mythology, Greeks presented a huge wooden horse to the city of Troy "as a gift." But once the gift was taken inside the city, Greek soldiers emerged from inside and opened the city's gates to invaders who pillaged the city.

There is a Trojan Horse within our gates.

The United States is being invaded by alien plants, also. They are pernicious invaders, such as Japanese honey suckle, purple loosestrife, multiflora rose, autumn olive and Amur honeysuckle. These plant species can overwhelm and crowd out native farm crops.

Paul Harvey

Alien plants also threaten nature preserves. A Nature Conservancy spokesperson says wildlife that survives on specific home-grown plants are at risk when the "aliens" take over.

The parallel experience of uninvited plants and people is too obvious to require elaboration.

60 Minutes, on CBS, recently focused attention on Wausau, Wis., where well-intentioned hospitality to refugees from Laos has boomeranged. Ten invited families begat 10,000 as transplants encouraged relatives to join them.

Further, with an average of 10 children per family, they are overwhelming local schools, soaking up further tax increases every year.

Seventy-five percent of the refugee population is on welfare and pays no taxes.

One of them boldly told her interviewer, "Don't think we're going away. The United States is for everybody!"

Maybe it's time for somebody to remind the world that the Statue of Liberty did not come over on the Mayflower. That symbolic gangplank inviting the world's overflow was a gift from a foreign government.

Historically, Ellis Island filtered the world's "huddle masses yearning to breathe free" - including the ancestors of most of us. But then, our borders were breached by the sneak-ins seeking not freedom - but a free ride on our welfare gravy train.

And they brought with them morals, mores, manners and graffiti so foreign to our own that our own cities don't even look like us - the United States - anymore.

Government secrecy obsession is a sham

In keeping with my duty as a pundit to ponder serious stuff, I often wonder what it will take to awaken the American people to the fact that the system the government uses to protect official secrets is a sham and an unholy waste of money.

Expert after expert has said this. Commission after commission has concluded this. Scandal after scandal has shown this. Yet we continue to worship at the feet of the voodoo priests in the intelligence community who jiggle their amulets and chant their never-fail incantation "national security" and hypnotize us into believing it is their magic powers that keep the foe at bay.

It is worse than a sham. In a democratic system nourished by a free flow of information, it is an obscenity.

Now comes another incident so absurd it defies comprehension by rational minds. Terry Anderson, the former Associated Press reporter who was held hostage by Arab terrorists for nearly seven years, is writing a book on the experience. As part of his research, he submitted a request under the Freedom of Information Act for federal files about his captors and the government's efforts to secure his release.

Well, responded the government - your government - there is this problem. The information Anderson seeks is classified because the release of it might impair the national security. And then there are the privacy rights of the terrorists to think about. Anderson would have to get written permission from his captors before the government could release this information.

Are you getting the point now, America? The shamans who hold the secrets don't know national security from home plate. They don't really give a hoot about the privacy rights of terrorists. All the secrecy cultists care about is keeping the secrets, however inane and irrelevant they may be. It is the source of their power.

And what has this mindset wrought? The office of Management and Budget this year disclosed that the intelligence community is spending more than $16 billion annually just to protect their pile of secrets. Of this amount, nearly $14 billion is said to be spent by defense contractors adhering to federal rules. The CIA and related agencies estimated they are spending a mere $200 million to safeguard the secrets, so you can see how utterly farcical the $16 billion total figure is.

According to the OMB, more than 32,400 federal employees are assigned to keep the secrets safe.

The Defense Department, to cite just one example, spends $88 million a year to employ people to watch the people who guard the secrets.

Despite vows to curb government secrecy, the Clinton administration has done little about it. The Information Security Oversight Office, created to oversee the government's handling of secrets, reported that the bureaucrats created more than 64 million new secrets in 1993 - roughly the annual average of the Bush administration. Both were a big improvement over the Reagan regime, which hatched 15 million secrets in 1985 alone.

And why are these nuggets of knowledge so precious that the very survival of the nation depends upon their preservation? Well, there was the April 1917 file locked in the National Archives about U.S. troop movements in Europe. And the CIA's 1991 Openness Task Force report concerning ways of making information available to the public, which was stamped "Secret." And the National Reconnaissance Office, which operates spy satellites, whose very existence was a classified secret for 32 years. And the $310 million complex the Defense Department and CIA were building for the NRO without telling anyone about it.

And the 1947 Atomic Energy Commission order that classified "secret" all documents relating to radiation "experiments with humans" because they "might have adverse effect on public opinion."

Well, whaddya know? Another reason for keeping secrets.

The real threat

To the editor:
The biggest threat to our way of life in America is not us Demo-Liberals, as we have been labeled by the Republican extreme right. No, the threat is really from the ultra right-wingers who it seems have abdicated their minds and individual thinking to the political claptrap of such saintly individuals as Rush Limbaugh, Jerry Falwell, Newt Gingrich and Ross Perot, among others.

These people get on our airwaves, usually free, and preach racism, outright hatred through unsubstantiated and distorted accounts of all who do not embrace their political ideology. Using, ironically, supposedly Christian values. These people want all Americans to believe, think and act as they do, or we are labeled and ridiculed as unchristian liberals.

It's possible that with the venomous mouthings of the so-called Christian conservatives, if Christ walked our earth today, he would also attract the "wrath" of the political Christian right — for Christ preached love, compassion, charity, forgiveness and reconciliation. These teachings the "ultra right" don't seem themselves to be able to comprehend or believe in! And no one else dare believe or practice these values unless we have their permission and we do it in their way!

These people have, for themselves, assumed ownership and interpretation of the Bible to suit their way of thinking, and most disgusting, to me, to further their own political agenda!

The U.S. is heading toward an "inquisition" of its own, if we allow these people to take control of our lives and minds using our political process as a hatchet! Frustration seems to have a grip on them, because they cannot accomplish from the pulpit what they aspire to change.

Let's not forget that this "nation under God" came into being through cruel and harsh repression (killing and imprisonment) of those people already here! Later we bartered in human beings — slaves! Our problem with the violence gripping America is values based on money and sex and power — practiced not only by Democrats; but by Republicans and independents and others, as well!

We seem to be more interested in our "worldly goods" and "politics" than coming together, falling on our knees and asking our Maker for forgiveness for past transgressions against ourselves and others of God's human race!

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

Let's keep religion out of our politics. It has been ordered. Perhaps the "Christian right" takes this to be for Democrats only.

Editor's Note: The letter below is a form letter received on postcards mailed in by 11 area residents (so far), listed at the end of the letter.

To the editor:
As a patriotic American and a member of the National Rifle Association, I'm extremely concerned about the way the media has blamed gun owners for the rising tide of crime in our country.

To counter the myths that have surrounded the gun control debate, the NRA's Wayne LaPierre has just written a book, Guns, Crime and Freedom. This book is available in local bookstores right now.

More than half of your readers are gun owners. I'm writing to ask you to give them the fair and equal treatment they deserve in the pages of your newspaper. And I urge you to begin carrying out this policy immediately, by publishing a review of Guns, Crime and Freedom. Thank you for your consideration.

Lyndon Craven, Dick Blain, Jim L. Ballew, Richard W. Coffman, Mrs. Brenda Madison, Randy Keller and Roy Finch, Pampa; Dean Signor, Fritch; Forrest G. Boydston, Allison; Hellen McLaughlin, Miami; and Ralph Nafzger, Plainview

Editor's Note: Regular readers of our Viewpoints page should be quite aware that our editorial stance supports the right of the people to own guns, and various editorials and regular columnists such as Walter Williams, Stephen Chapman, William A. Rusher and William F. Buckley Jr. have written against gun-control legislation and the misleading crime statistics used to justify gun-control measures.

Thanks for the help

To the editor:
I recently coordinated a reorganization of the children's section at Lovett Memorial Library. I hope that children and parents are enjoying how easy it is to find the many wonderful books there are in the collection. Please be sure to express your appreciation to the staff as they have the challenging task of keeping the books in alphabetical order.

I would like to say a special thanks to the following people who helped with the reorganization: Mary Beth Bingham, Brooks Ferguson, Melody Ferguson, Betty Henderson, Katrina Hildebrandt, Kim Hill, Daphne Jeffries, Cindy Lehmann, Ed Marshall, Michelle Mullican, Vera Plunk, April Roundy, Debra Roundy, Sandra Schunemann and Kim West. These enthusiastically supported the project. They eagerly became involved because they were convinced of the obvious benefits to Pampa's children and their parents.

Thanks also to Beverly Teague, who donated several hours of her time as an interior designer to give the library some ideas about how to enhance the visual appearance of the children's section.

I'd also like to thank Bill Hildebrandt for his support of the project on behalf of the City, and Dan Snider for accommodating the volunteers and assisting the night of the reorganization.

The new book display is complete, and there another display of easy reader books is planned. Labeling of the award-winning books will be underway soon. All of these changes are being made in the hopes of making the children's section an easier and more enjoyable experience for patrons. Please stop by and take advantage of it all.

Who's 'crying wolf'?

To the editor:
Talk about irony. The guy who's "crying wolf" is really the wolf in Bill Sarpalius' clothing.

Spending thousands of dollars on a vicious smear campaign falsely accusing Mac Thornberry of wanting to slice Social Security benefits for seniors, U.S. Representative Sarpalius actually cast the deciding vote to lower the hammer on the elderly only a year ago.

I should know. I'm one of those senior citizens being unfairly penalized. In 1994, my accountant projects the new law could cost me as much as $1,600 in additional taxes, revenue coming directly out of Social Security dividends and money that's been taxed once already.

Editor's Note

Any remaining letters to the editor of a political nature that come in for Sunday's edition must be issues-oriented, restricted to broad party matters and concerns without getting into specific candidates or bringing up allegations without allowing time for a response. In short, letters may tout a party's virtues and strengths but without resorting to negative aspersions on the other party or its candidates. Other letters to the editor policies still apply.

When Sarpalius betrayed his 13th District and handed Bill Clinton the key vote in the largest tax hike in history in August of 1993, it was bad news for everyone, but especially senior citizens. Few people can exist solely on Social Security benefits and the new tax law unfairly penalizes those earning outside revenue. In my case, installment payments I receive from the sale of my business will cause me to lose hard-earned Social Security retirement funds.

But what do you expect from a guy who hangs out with Clinton and his socialistic-minded cronies? Friends of a feather do flock together.

Thanks for Haiti aid

To the editor:
It is with great pride in our all-voluntary military service people who went into Haiti to restore democracy and their duly elected president to office once again, that I thank today.

President Clinton did not raise secret money to support Contras to hit and run — rather, he used the advisors in our military, men who have served under Republican and Democrat presidents, the finest minds in the world, to conduct a successful peaceful return of freedom to the Haitian people.

God bless our president, and our military for a job well done.

Man shot in San Francisco for holding boyfriend's hand

By ELIZABETH WEISE
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Just blocks from the Castro district, the very center of San Francisco's gay community, Victor Rohana was pinned to a wall with a four-wheel-drive vehicle and shot in the chest, apparently because he was holding hands with his boyfriend.

Civil rights advocates said the shooting, which left Rohana seriously wounded, was an example of the growing ferocity of attacks on homosexuals.

"Whereas in 1992, somebody may have just yelled, 'Faggot,' now they're yelling, 'Faggot' and clubbing you or raping you," said Leslie Addison of Community United Against Violence.

Police developed a composite sketch of the suspects, young men in their late teens or early 20s, and Mayor Frank Jordan offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible.

"It is dismaying to think that in a city that is known for acceptance of individual freedom that this senseless act of violence still occurs," he said.

On Sunday, 24-year-old Victor Rohana and Steven Damron were walking to their car after dining in a neighborhood restaurant. Just after 10 p.m., two men in a white Suzuki Samurai drove by and yelled at them, Damron said.

Rohana said something to the men before turning to catch up with his friend, Damron recalled. The driver backed up about 100 feet to block their path, jumped the curb onto the sidewalk and pinned Rohana against a wall.

Damron said the passenger stuck a pistol out a window and shot Rohana, who was in satisfactory condition Tuesday. The bullet pierced Rohana's lung, missing his heart by about an inch, Damron said. "Maybe they just thought it was macho to shoot a gay guy," Damron said. "They made a judgment that being gay was bad and their way of expressing that was to shoot Victor."

Officer Sandy Bargioni of the police Hate Crimes Unit spent Monday stuffing fliers and the drawing of the attacker into mailboxes near where the attack occurred.

THE CANDIDATES' RAP SHEET ON CRIME DON'T READ THEIR LIPS — READ THE RECORD

Ann Richards' Record on Criminal Justice

1990: Republican Gov. Bill Clements leaves office	38,041	49,157
1994: Improvement under Gov. Ann Richards	16,538	92,775

The record, not the rhetoric, best tells which candidate will fight crime most effectively. The last Republican Governor talked tough, but record numbers of prisoners were granted early release. Ann Richards is turning things around. We can't afford another Republican who talks tough but doesn't know how to do the job.

Cut the early release of prisoners by more than 50%, the release of violent criminals by 52%, and cut approval of parole requests by two-thirds to the lowest level in 10 years. The Texas crime rate dropped 9.7% from 1991 to 1992 and 8.7% from 1992 to 1993, the lowest level since 1985. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Clements vetoed prison construction, leading to prison overcrowding and the early release of prisoners. A Republican-sponsored bill let prisoners serve only 25% of their sentence before release. More than 16,000 prisoners released early and approval of parole requests increased, leading to an increase in the crime rate. Under Clements, the Texas crime rate rose. In 1990, the rate was 7,825 per 100,000 Texans; a figure that dropped to 6,400 per 100,000 by 1993.

Marta Greytok

Garry Mauro

Mauro, Greytok square off for land commissioner post

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Garry Mauro says he needs an even 16 years as Texas land commissioner to take care of "unfinished business."

Republican challenger Marta Greytok, a former Public Utility Commission member, says the three-term incumbent has overstayed his welcome.

The commissioner of the Texas General Land Office oversees 20.5 million acres of state-owned land and 18,000 oil and gas wells on state properties.

The office also administers the Permanent School Fund, which provides money for public schools, and oversees the Veterans Land Board, which uses bond money to help military veterans in Texas buy land and homes.

One of the key issues in the race is the implementation of the Texas Coastal Management Plan.

Mauro, 46, says the program attempts to coordinate a mixture of often conflicting environmental and economic regulations governing Texas' 370-mile Gulf Coast.

While some landowners have criticized the plan as intrusive, Mauro said it provides protection for private property rights.

"Basically, it says you can't use any regulation in the Coastal Management Plan to take any part of someone's private property rights," Mauro said.

Mrs. Greytok, 61, a retired nurse who lives in Taylor Lake Village near Houston, says the plan creates needless bureaucratic burdens on landowners in the 19 coastal counties affected.

"Out of 409 pages of rules and regulations, there are only 39 words dedicated to the protection of private property rights," Greytok said.

"Taken together with the open-ended language included in the plan, Texas landowners are about to be force-fed the prescription for federal regulation of their land."

Mauro said his unfinished business at the land office includes promoting the use of natural gas-powered vehicles, passing oil spill legislation and fine tuning recycling programs.

The Texas A&M graduate said he is proud of the record he has built over 12 years as land commissioner.

Mauro says that since taking office in 1983, the Veterans Land Board has loaned more than 55,000 Texas veterans over $1.5 billion and public lands have generated more than $2.7 billion for the Permanent School Fund. That's 43 percent of the total $6.4 billion in land office deposits since the fund was created in 1854.

He takes credit for a program called Adopt-a-Beach, which has removed more than 2,500 tons of garbage from Texas beaches. He also cites the Texas Corporate Recycling Council, which has involved more than 800 businesses in recycling.

Greytok said the land office needs to focus on basic duties prescribed by the Legislature, such as land management. She said beach cleanups and recycling should be left to private organizations.

"Cleaning up beaches is a responsibility of all citizens; it is not a mandated function (of the land office)," Greytok said.

She said she would consider working to reduce fees charged to oil and gas companies drilling on state land. She said such a cut would likely encourage more drilling and boost revenues, which are contributed to the Permanent School Fund.

Greytok has targeted several personal issues involving Mauro, including his role as President Clinton's Texas campaign director in 1992 and his filing personal bankruptcy the same year.

Most recently, Greytok criticized Mauro for using campaign funds in 1987 to pay off a $25,000 personal bank loan used to invest in a pistachio farm.

"If you like Bill Clinton, you're going to love this commissioner," she says.

Mauro said Greytok has tried to attack him to cover up her record as a member of the Public Utility Commission.

"She voted for every electrical rate increase request that came before her, costing Texas consumers $1.7 billion, and her constant bickering and contentiousness with other board members and the PUC staff were an embarrassment to the state," Mauro said.

Also running is Libertarian David C. Chow, 31, a Houston geophysicist, who says he would focus on privatizing land office functions.

GOP challenger closes in on Sarpalius

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO (AP) - Someone tacked a photocopy of a broadly publicized quote up on the wall at the campaign headquarters of U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius.

A Baptist preacher, in an episode later recounted by national news organizations, reproached Sarpalius at a 1993 town hall meeting for casting a vote in support of President Clinton's budget.

"We didn't send you to Washington to make intelligent decisions," he scolded the Amarillo Democrat. "We sent you to represent us."

Such sentiment captures the discontent brewing in the Panhandle-Red River region Sarpalius represents. And in a year when incumbents feel particularly vulnerable, some Democrats fear Sarpalius may be the most jeopardized of any Texan running for re-election to Congress.

After all, the 13th Congressional District - a beast sprawling from the Northeastern tip of the Panhandle, down to Lubbock, east to Denton - teems with conservative tendencies.

William "Mac" Thornberry, a Republican in his first race for elected office, appears to have closed in on Sarpalius by attacking big government and entrenched politicians.

"We're neck and neck right now," said Jacque Allen, GOP county chairwoman in Wichita Falls. "It's a tossup."

Democrats, however, aren't giving an inch. "We think the signs are very positive for Bill," said Texas Democratic Party spokesman Joe Cutbirth.

Thornberry, a 36-year-old Amarillo attorney, says Sarpalius is out of touch and too mindful of Bill Clinton.

Sarpalius, 46, insists he votes independently of the president and points to his chairmanship of a House agriculture subcommittee. He says that seniority could deliver the clout Texas will need when Congress rewrites its massive agricultural policy next year.

On one hand, he's an anti-abortion Democrat who voted against gun control and Clinton's crime bill. But his support for other issues - namely the 1994 budget and a deficit-reduction package that included $241 billion in taxes - proved unpopular back home.

"Bill Sarpalius has given mixed messages," said Jerry Yeric, professor of political science at the University of North Texas.

"It depends on the issues. He hasn't been in the Clinton camp," Yeric said. "To that degree, he does represent what I would perceive to be the beliefs and attitudes of West Texas."

Some striking parallels characterize the two campaigns.

Their headquarters are two blocks apart on 9th Street in Amarillo. Each indulges in accusations that the other candidate distorts the truth. And the advertisements for both sides play up their ranching backgrounds.

Rep. Bill Sarpalius

That rural emphasis likely won't alienate city voters, Yeric says. But others think the rustic appeals seem irrelevant.

"That's not what the race is about: Who can stick their toe in the dirt the deepest," said Harold White Jr., Democratic party chairman for Wichita County.

When it comes to campaign contributions, Sarpalius holds a very narrow edge in fund-raising.

Federal Election Commission reports show the incumbent had raised $260,465 this year through Sept. 30, compared to $256,731 for his rival. Over half of Sarpalius' money - $140,850 - came from special-interest groups. All but $8,341 of Thornberry's money came from individuals.

But as the race entered the final five weeks, Sarpalius held a significant lead in money left to spend. As of Sept. 30th, Sarpalius had $154,444 in cash on hand, compared to $41,230 for his opponent.

Thornberry won 75 percent of the vote in a three-way contest for the Republican nomination in March.

His 13-point platform would cut capital gains taxes, restrict welfare and freeze all federal spending for one year. Ironically, his district's biggest employers are federal entities: Amarillo's Pantex nuclear weapons plant and Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls.

Thornberry says he is running for Congress because citizens are fed-up with federal officials who levy high taxes and usurp local control.

"Common sense, the basic outlook of the people, is not being translated in Washington," he said. "People don't trust their government any more."

Sarpalius touts his own experience, in particular his chairmanship of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on General Farm Commodities.

His fliers highlight the federal funds he helped win for various projects: a research lab at Pantex, housing in Plainview, a brine lake in Crowell and a new runway at Sheppard air base.

"I'm in a position now with the seniority that I've gained, where I can accomplish even more for my constituents," Sarpalius said. Of the race, he observed: "We're in good shape."

Sarpalius has been dogged by reports in recent weeks that the FBI was investigating his ties to indicted San Antonio businessman Leslie Alfred Taber. Sarpalius dismisses the reports as politics and has distributed documents to prove he didn't take improper honoraria from Taber.

Meanwhile, the Texas Democratic Party filed a complaint with the FEC accusing Thornberry of accepting an illegal loan from his law firm. Thornberry disputed the charge that he received his entire 1994 salary in January.

"I never ever had an opponent that was as dishonest as he has been," Sarpalius said.

"There's no limit to the amount of mudslinging, because he can't afford to talk about taxes and spending," Thornberry said.

Bullock, Lezar vie for lieutenant governor

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Tired of cookie-cutter politicians trading worn-out charges and counter-charges? Come to the lieutenant governor's race.

Republican Tex Lezar opened the campaign with commercials attacking President Clinton.

Democratic incumbent Bob Bullock, a political warhorse, took off from campaigning from late September through October to recover from heart bypass surgery.

Despite the odd turns in the race, the job of lieutenant governor is one of the most important in Texas.

The lieutenant governor presides over the Senate, makes committee appointments, sits on several key boards and committees and controls the flow of legislation in that chamber.

Bullock, 65, is seeking his second four-year term as lieutenant governor after a 16-year stint as state comptroller. He is arguably the most powerful officeholder in Texas. Lezar, 46, has worked in the administrations of former presidents Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan. In 1990, he finished a distant third in the GOP primary for attorney general.

Lezar has said he is counting on a Republican sweep prompted by dissatisfaction with the policies of Clinton and Gov. Ann Richards.

In March, he aired radio commercials attacking Clinton, primarily during the Rush Limbaugh show.

Bullock refused to take the bait. "His (Lezar's) extremist views won't appeal to Texans any more than they did the last time he ran and lost. For any further comment, I'd say you need to call Bill Clinton."

Lezar has criticized Bullock over taxes, reminding voters that the Democrat advocated a state income tax in 1991.

"Bullock is the father of taxation and the father of the income tax in this state. This man will say anything to get elected. I don't think Bob Bullock knows the difference between the truth and a lie," Lezar said.

But Bullock abandoned his income tax stand and was instrumental in pushing through a constitutional ban on such a levy unless approved by the voters. Bullock also says he held the line on taxes in the 1993 legislative session, and he promises there won't be a tax increase in next year's session.

Bullock has won numerous endorsements, even from Republicans, and in one recent poll held a 40-point lead over Lezar.

Bullock

Lezar

Lezar's campaign was further complicated by Bullock's recent surgery and subsequent decision to end campaigning until November.

Bullock said he was confident of his lead and would mostly rest for the balance of the campaign on doctors' orders.

Lezar supports giving Texas voters the right to citizens' initiatives, referendums and recalls.

The Texas Constitution would have to be amended to give voters such rights, and that requires two-thirds approval in the Legislature and statewide voter approval. Lezar also advocates limits, not only on the number of terms officials may serve in one office but on the aggregate terms they can serve in successive offices.

Starting as a speech writer for Nixon, he served as chief of staff to Attorney General William French Smith under Reagan and as an aide to former Texas Secretary of State George Strake.

Last year, Bullock oversaw legislation that included school finance and criminal justice reforms and compromises on several long-running disputes.

And when lawmakers start the regular legislative session next year, he said he is considering giving Texans the chance to vote on term limits.

Bullock first was elected to office in 1957, when he served one term in the Texas House. He then went into private law practice but returned to state government in 1967 as an assistant attorney general and as an aide to the governor in 1969. He was secretary of state in 1971 and 1972.

In 1974, he was elected to his first of four terms as state comptroller, the state's chief tax collector.

Court of Criminal Appeals candidate accused of misstating legal experience

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Allegations that a candidate overstated his legal experience has enlivened a race for the state's highest criminal appeals court.

Texas Lawyer, a legal industry newspaper, reported that Republican Steve Mansfield, 42, of Houston cited criminal law experience he doesn't have in his bid to unseat Democratic incumbent Charles Campbell in the Nov. 8 General Election.

Campbell, 50, is seeking his third six-year term on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in the Place 1 race.

Two veteran assistant prosecutors, Democrat Betty Marshall, 48, of Fort Worth and Republican Sharon Keller, 42, of Dallas, are vying for the Place 2 seat being vacated by Judge Chuck Miller. The winner will become the court's first female judge.

In the third slot, Judge Mike McCormick, a Democrat and the Democrats expect to keep control of Texas Legislature

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The race for governor may be getting all the attention this fall. But the decisions on who winds up with most of the real power at the Texas Capitol will be made in 181 smaller races Nov. 8.

Those are elections for seats in the Legislature.

Because the Texas Constitution limits gubernatorial powers mostly to vetoing bills and appointing state board members, much of the real clout falls to the 150 members of the House and 31 state senators.

Due to long-running redistricting battles, all Senate seats are up for election this year. All House seats also are up, as they are every two years.

Democrats currently control both chambers, and officials of each party say that seems unlikely to change this time around.

In the Senate, Democrats have a 18-13 edge over Republicans. In the House, Democrats enjoy a 90-60 majority.

"I think the 1995 Texas Legislature will look very much like the 1993 Legislature," said Joe Cutbirth, a spokesman for the Texas Democratic Party.

Cutbirth noted that although both chambers are run by Democrats, Republican lawmakers have been given committee chairmanships on both sides of the roundtable.

When it comes to legislative races, Cutbirth said he doesn't find the anti-incumbent sentiment that has national GOP officials hoping to take control of the Congress.

"The element of anger that's in the electorate is Washington- and Congress-specific," he said. "I don't think there is going to be any significant change of balance in the Texas Legislature. I don't see any looming upheaval."

Tom Pauken, the new state Republican Party chairman, said Democratic control of the redistricting process and the number of incumbent Democrats given a free ride without opposition mean the House and Senate margins aren't likely to change "substantially."

"In the Senate, we have 13 (seats) and they took two away from us in redistricting, and we've got to win those back. On the House side, my hope is a gain of five or six," Pauken said.

"One problem is that there are a lot of races where we didn't field candidates and we should have," he said. According to the secretary of state's office, 12 incumbent senators or Senate candidates face no opponent Nov. 8.

Three Senate incumbents face Libertarian, independent or write-in opponents. Sixteen Senate districts list both Republican and Democratic candidates.

On the House side, the secretary of state's records shows 89 of the 150 races are uncontested.

In the remaining House districts, 51 list both Republican and Democratic candidates. In 10 others, a major party candidate faces either minor party, independent or write-in opposition.

court's presiding judge, is running unopposed. Three of the court's nine seats are up for election every two years.

Texas Lawyer called Mansfield "the stealth candidate" and said he has "a remarkably weak pedigree."

Mansfield has claimed to have handled about 100 cases of various types, but Texas Lawyer said his experience appears limited to in-house insurance cases and a few misdemeanor cases.

Also, Mansfield, when asked, failed to disclose previous political races and also misstated his birthplace, the publication said.

In a statement issued through Republican Party headquarters in Austin, Mansfield apologized for saying he was born in Houston when actually he was born in Brookline, Mass., and for not disclosing two races for Congress in New Hampshire in 1978 and 1980.

But he said, "I have never misrepresented my legal experience."

He conceded in an interview with The Dallas Morning News that he has never handled a felony case in Texas. And, in response to a question about trial experience, he cited a two-hour trial in Bellaire municipal court regarding traffic tickets.

Mansfield's statement, said Campbell "has more experience. However, I believe that philosophy is equally as important and that my conservative, pro-victim orientation is what is required to reverse what most Texans believe is a pro-defendant bias on the court."

Before being elected to the Court of Criminal Appeals, Campbell was an assistant district attorney in Houston, county attorney and district attorney in Hillsboro, and chief of the state attorney general's prosecution assistance division in Austin.

Campbell said his 13 years' experience as a prosecutor and 12 years on the court better qualify him to decide cases.

Mansfield said most of his legal experience occurred in Boston from 1978 to 1980. He also acquired some criminal experience as a corporate attorney in Houston, he said.

Mansfield beat Houston criminal lawyer John Cossum in the Republican primary. Cossum said he ran at the urging of GOP leaders who were concerned about Mansfield. Former state Republican chairman Fred Meyer of Dallas confirmed the account.

His fellow Republican "is not competent to sit as a Court of Criminal Appeals judge," Cossum said.

Ms. Marshall began her legal career at age 38. All her work has been in the appellate arena. After assisting Judge John G. Hill of the Fort Worth Court of Appeals, she joined the Tarrant County district attorney's office.

Her husband, Chris, who also was an assistant district attorney, was killed in 1992 in George Loti's 1992 courtroom shooting rampage in Fort Worth.

Ms. Keller's 16 years of experience include criminal defense, family law, juvenile law and some trial work, as well as appellate law. Before resigning to run for the court, she worked in the appellate section of the Dallas County district attorney's office.

"Betty and I don't have any great philosophical differences as far as the criminal law," Ms. Keller said.

"I would just say our difference is qualifications," Ms. Marshall said.

Pumpkin pie — without the crust

Looks like a pie, but it's Pumpkin Flan. Top with sweetened whipped cream and a dash of ground nutmeg. (AP photo/ Better Homes and Gardens)

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine

This luscious, satin-smooth custard tastes like pumpkin pie, without the fuss and fat that comes with making your own pastry crust. In place of the crust, caramelized sugar poured into the pan before baking makes its own silky sauce. When you invert the cooled custard onto a serving platter, the sauce glazes the top and sides.

- Pumpkin Flan
1 cup sugar
4 beaten eggs
16-ounce can pumpkin
12-ounce can evaporated milk
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
Sweetened whipped cream (optional)
Ground nutmeg (optional)

In a large heavy skillet cook the 1 cup sugar over medium-high heat until it begins to melt. Do not stir; just shake the skillet occasionally. When the sugar starts to melt, reduce heat to low. Cook, stirring frequently, until the sugar is golden brown. Quickly pour the sugar into a 10-inch deep pie plate or quiche dish. Tilt to evenly coat the bottom. Place the pie plate or quiche dish in a large roasting pan. Place on a rack in the oven.

In a large mixing bowl stir together eggs, pumpkin, milk, the 1/2 cup sugar, cinnamon, vanilla, ginger, nutmeg and salt. Pour the pumpkin mixture atop the melted sugar in the pie plate or quiche dish.

Pour boiling water into the roasting pan around the pie plate or quiche dish to a depth of 1/2 inch. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 50 to 55 minutes for pie plate or 45 to 50 minutes for a quiche dish or until a knife inserted near the center comes out clean. Cool.

Cover and chill the flan for 4 to 24 hours. To serve, loosen edges of flan with a knife, slipping the point of the knife down the sides of the flan to let air in. Invert the flan onto a serving platter. Top with sweetened whipped cream and nutmeg, if desired. Makes 10 servings.

Turning cane into molasses

PARK HILLS, Mo. (AP) — It's a taste of autumn.

Sorghum molasses, made from scratch the way great-grandma used to cook it is well worth the wait and the work, especially in cool autumn days.

One might say it "runs thick" in the Jess Skaggs family, going back at least four or five generations.

For the first time in 23 years, the family's homemade recipe was dusted off and put to practical use in time for a family reunion held at the end of September.

A smoke as sweet as cotton candy swirled from the top of the evaporator pans. Patient skimmers stirred the bubbling green juice toward a hand-carved spigot at the far end. Clay oven walls kept flames that sizzled and popped the seasoned wood. Nearby, a mare named Sugar clip-clopped slow revolutions around the antique press.

Bill Skaggs kept a watchful eye over the process. "... A lot of the younger folks haven't seen it made. That's why we're doing this now — to pass on that information to the newer generations and, for those of us who haven't done it in 20 years or so, to rehash old memories."

Planted in June, the seed cane was carefully tended so it would grow as straight and tall as stalks of corn.

In early September, once the field crop had ripened fully, the blades and tops were carefully stripped off. This chore done, the remaining stalks were cut and hauled into the mill.

"You have to start grinding it immediately," Skaggs said. "If the sorghum lays in the stalk it will turn sour. And the tops and blades will absorb too much juice if you don't strip down the cane."

The cane stalks were fed into the horse-harnessed press. For each hour Sugar plodded a trail in the dirt, 10 gallons of sorghum were squeezed into a canvas-lined barrel.

Thoroughly strained and pressed through a second layer of cotton, the naturally sweet concoction then was poured into the first of five evaporator bins separated by a small wooden gate.

Over the course of the next four hours, the sorghum slowly boiled from a bright green juice into a darker, thicker molasses, all the while flowing through each gate, from one end of the open-air cooker to the other.

"Depending on the sugar content of the cane, it will probably cook off 10 to 15 gallons in juice for each gallon of molasses," Skaggs explained. "What we are doing is ridding the sorghum of sugar and water."

To aid the process along, the Skaggs family "skimmers" toiled long hours over the flat smoky cauldron, separating the good molasses from the bad liquid.

On the first of a four-day harvest, nearly 100 visitors stopped by to see the "sorghum makings" in progress. For many, the sight was slightly akin to returning to a simpler age. For others, the fascination was of timeless curiosity.

Bulgur: The fast-cooking whole grain

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine
For AP Special Features

Perhaps you've tasted a salad called tabbouleh at your local deli or favorite lunch stop. Then you've also tried bulgur, the tan-colored grain that's the basis for tabbouleh. Bulgur is a cracked wheat product that is popular in Mideastern cuisines. This nutty flavored grain is also gaining ground in United States because it fits recommendations that we eat more whole grains.

Bulgur is simply whole-wheat kernels that have been soaked, cooked and dried. After some of the bran has been removed from the dried wheat kernels, the remaining kernels are cracked into small pieces.

Scholarship deadline extended

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The IACP Foundation is extending the deadline for accepting applications to its Culinary Scholarship Program for the 1995-96 academic year. Completed applications must be postmarked by Dec. 1.

The IACP Foundation's 1994-95 scholarships amounted to over $175,000 in student aid. Seventy-nine scholarships to cooking schools in the United States and Europe were awarded.

for up to six months. Or, store it indefinitely in the freezer.

Bulgur cooks quickly. Add 1 cup bulgur to 2 cups cold water. Bring to boiling. Cover and simmer for 12 to 15 minutes or until tender. Cook a big batch of bulgur, then freeze it in smaller portions to use in cooking.

10 Tasty Ways to Serve Bulgur

1. Toss chilled cooked bulgur with a vinaigrette salad dressing, cucumber, mint and tomato for a garden fresh-tasting tabbouleh salad.
2. Combine hot cooked bulgur, oatmeal and dried fruit for breakfast.
3. Make a pilaf by tossing hot cooked bulgur with rice, parsley, herbs and butter.

4. Cook bulgur with a little onion, celery and poultry seasoning for a stuffing for chicken, turkey or vegetables.

5. Add a small amount of cooked bulgur (about 1/4 cup for 3 cups of flour) to your favorite whole-grain yeast bread recipe.

6. Mix some cooked bulgur into ground meat for burgers or meatloaf.

7. Stir some cooked bulgur into muffin or pancake batter.

8. Toss cooked bulgur with a sprinkle of cheese and melted butter for a crunchy casserole topping.

9. Combine hot, cooked bulgur and a spoonful of pesto for a quick side dish.

10. Serve a spoonful of cooked bulgur atop a steaming bowl of chili.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: A faithful reader for more than 30 years who requested anonymity wrote the following:

DEAR ABBY: Around holiday time, you print suggestions about useful gifts for seniors. May I add mine?

For Christmas, I don't want another crystal bud vase; I have four under my kitchen sink. Besides, nobody brings me flowers anyway. I don't want a sausage and cheese tray; that's too much cholesterol for this old lady. I don't want another music box to find a place for — I have too many now. I don't want a silk nightgown, perfumed soap, a fancy bed jacket, dusting powder or a bird feeder.

What do I want? Ask me; I'm not shy! I have told you before what I really want for Christmas, but I never got it. Maybe this time I will.

I want you to give me a few hours. Take me and my cumbersome wheelchair to the mall so I can see the lights and hear the music. I would also like to be driven around town to see the Christmas decorations — then maybe stop for hot cocoa.

I would like a book of postage stamps, a writing tablet with lines and some plain envelopes. I would appreciate a ballpoint pen that works, and some telephone coupons so I can make a few long-distance calls to people I will probably never see again.

I would also appreciate a visit from you and other family members, especially my grandchildren who call and say: "Hi, Grandma. How are you? I love you. Gotta go. See you later. Bye!"

I would like someone to offer to pay my heating bill for one month. (With five sons, six daughters and 42 grandchildren, that shouldn't be so hard to do.) And I sure wish someone would come over here and test my smoke alarm.

I dearly love all of you; that's why I can tell you what I really want for Christmas.

A 91-YEAR-OLD GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: I admire your honesty. Although it may seem a little early to be thinking about Christmas immediately after Halloween, the pumpkins and witches have already been taken out of the merchants' windows and been replaced by Santa, artificial snow, nativity scenes, and all the trappings of the holiday season.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter signed "Bugged," who resented having to chip in every year for an expensive Christmas present for the big boss, who is probably a rich man and has more than he needs.

Why don't the employees get together and make a contribution to charity in the boss's name? It may even be tax-deductible.

CATHY C. IN BRADENTON, FLA.

DEAR CATHY: A great idea. Not only would your suggestion save the employees the hassle of coming up with a costly gift that the boss neither needs nor wants, it would provide food, shelter or clothing for the needy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are going to an elegant evening wedding in Los Angeles. My husband is the best man. Is it OK if I wear black to the wedding, since the wedding is at 5 p.m.?

NAME WITHHELD IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NAME WITHHELD: Ten or 15 years ago, I would have said no; but in recent years, the rules have become more flexible. Today I say, black is permissible, but brighten the outfit a bit with accessories in silver, gold or a lively color.

Older people can control life — and health

By DR. MICHAEL FREEDMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur M. Sackler, physician and publisher, once wrote that how long we live, how well we live, how much fun we will have and how much pain we will be spared are matters that rest largely in our own hands.

To have a good grip on your life and health, he said, there are certain things you need, such as:

—Feeling and understanding: The feeling that you are not alone, that your family, physician, and others are with you and sensitive to how you feel, both at home and on the job. This is important in both keeping you well or getting you well.

—Communication: Good communication between you and your physician, between those responsible for your health and your family is essential for good diagnosis and treatment.

—Time: Time is needed to get the facts and understand their meaning. Time is needed for medicines and treatments to do their work.

Physicians worry at times that their patients often fail to ask questions that are important to them, or that some patients do not grasp the importance of what they have been told — or that much of what is told is forgotten.

—Medicine not taken or neglect of advice given can only harm one's health and harm one's quality of life.

The cold and flu season is just around the corner, and the question of the day is: can chicken soup cure?

The answer, of course, is no, but chicken soup — or any hot liquids — do just as well as many drugs for most colds in helping clear up congestion and loosening mucus.

If you are going to take an over-the-counter medication to make you feel better while the virus runs its course, use it intelligently. Take decongestants during the day and save the antihistamine preparations for nighttime when it doesn't matter if you feel a bit drowsy.

And if you have any questions about what you can take, check with your family doctor first.

For people with elevated blood pressure, be aware that certain over-the-counter medications that contain a combination of drugs labeled as "plus" or "with decongestants" can cause problems.

Decongestants in cold medication shrink the size of enlarged blood vessels in nasal passages. But they can also affect blood vessels elsewhere in the body and cause a rise in blood pressure.

People who take these medications and who already have high blood pressure can experience an exaggerated response or dangerously high pressure levels.

To temporarily stop a runny nose, try an antihistamine or a decongestant nasal spray, but use them no longer than two or three days because some of the spray's medication can still be absorbed and affect blood pressure.

As they age, most people become less physically active and lose a certain amount of muscle and organ tissue. The basal metabolic rate — the number of calories needed to simply stay alive — decreases by about 2 percent per decade of adult life.

A man of 80, for example, would need about 200 fewer calories than a man of 20. However, with a normal drop in physical weight, the older person actually will need 600 fewer calories — and will gain weight if he doesn't cut his intake.

If a person is overweight and also has a case of late-onset diabetes, losing weight not only might eliminate the need to take insulin or oral hypoglycemic drugs, but also can reduce his or her blood pressure, cholesterol levels and tryglyceride levels — all of which, like diabetes, can increase the risk of arterial heart disease.

Helping with reading and writing skills

NEW YORK (AP) — One way to help children conquer their math and reading deficiencies is for parents and children to do things together like reading the comics, grocery shopping or baking cookies, according to some educators.

In learning the mathematics of cooking, for example, children can help measure the specific ingredient amounts in a recipe, researchers point out. Or money skills can be practiced while shopping, by comparing prices of different brands.

Copies of a free booklet, "20 Math and Reading Tips To Pave the Way to an 'A,'" are available from Math-Made-Easy and Reading-Is-Easy by calling toll-free, 1-800-MY-20-TIPS.

CROSS COUNTRY

KELTON — Elissa Ray will represent Kelton High School at the Class 1A regional cross country meet Saturday in Lubbock.

Ray qualified for regionals by finishing second at the District 6-A meet last weekend in Amarillo. She is the daughter of Jerry and Kim Ray of Kelton and the granddaughter of James and Mary Ray of Pampa and W.W. Wheeler of Kelton.

David Helton of Fort Elliott came in first in the boys' division. Fort Elliott won both the boys' and girls' team titles.

The top two teams and top five individuals from the district meet advanced to regional.

BASKETBALL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs want star forward Dennis Rodman on their team. They also want him on their own terms.

Rodman's latest outburst got him suspended for the first three games of the regular season.

"This action is not taken lightly," Spurs General Manager Gregg Popovich said today in announcing the length of Rodman's unpaid suspension.

"It is my sincere hope that Dennis will decide to become a productive part of this basketball team."

Popovich and coach Bob Hill announced an indefinite suspension against Rodman Tuesday afternoon, following an outburst in a preseason game Monday night with the Charlotte Hornets.

"We care about Dennis a lot," Hill said. "We want him to be a part of this, but we want him to be a part of it our way."

"We're just trying to get his attention as best we can. We've pretty much planted our feet on the kind of team we want to have. He needs to become a part of that."

Rodman, 33, who led the league in rebounding last season with an average of 17.3 a game, earns a reported $2.4 million per year. Popovich wouldn't say how much money Rodman will lose.

"He's suspended without pay," Popovich said. "If you were suspended without pay, just subtract your paycheck from yourself and you come to a total. I'm not an accountant, but it seems pretty simplistic to me. No pay."

Rodman did not attend the annual "Spurs Tip-off Luncheon" with the rest of the players Tuesday, and his segment was missing from a video at the luncheon that introduced the players.

On Monday night, Rodman was ejected from a game in San Antonio against the Charlotte Hornets, picking up his second technical with 2:22 left in the third quarter.

Hill removed Rodman after the first technical. It appeared he received the second one as he continued to argue the call. Hill said Rodman threw a bag of ice toward him and one of the officials.

"I thought it was directed at me, the official thought it was directed at him and they threw him out," Hill said.

"It's not that it was going to hurt anybody. It was a bag of ice. But those are the kind of things we've just got to try and stay away from — those kind of outbursts. We're just not going to tolerate it."

KENS-TV in San Antonio reported Tuesday that its videotape from the game shows after the ice was thrown Hill told official Joe Derosa, "Throw him out of here. Throw him out," just before Rodman was ejected.

KENS hired a professional lip reader to decipher the words. KENS said it asked Hill about the comment on Tuesday, and Hill said he was only asking the official if he was going to toss Rodman from the game.

The suspension comes after a series of incidents during preseason that angered team executives.

Rodman, who led the league in technical fouls last year with 34, missed a bus to nearby Kerrville and a team meeting the opening day of training camp Oct. 6.

He was fined $15,000 for not showing up on time for an exhibition game against Milwaukee on Oct. 20. Rodman had not been expected to play in that game because of back trouble.

Rodman said he considered the fine excessive and told a national television reporter, "If they want to trade me they can. That's just business."

Hill was hired this summer to replace John Lucas, who left to coach at Philadelphia. Popovich also joined the Spurs as general manager over the summer.

Forward Sean Elliott said the Spurs are adjusting to the idea of playing without Rodman.

"It was a family decision," Elliott said. "I think management feels that he's got to take care of things in his life first and then become part of the team."

Elliott said the players hope Rodman returns.

"I think all the guys on the team care about Dennis," he said. "We're really going to miss him being around us. But I think we're more concerned about Dennis personally than him as a basketball player."

TENNIS

PARIS (AP) — Mark Woodforde added another loss to Jim Courier's slump by eliminating the American in the second round of the $2.25 million Paris Open today 7-6 (7-3), 6-3.

Currently ranked 14th, Courier will finish the year outside the top 10 for the first time since he was 25th at the end of 1990. He has not won a tournament since August 1993 and is not scheduled for any more tournaments this year.

"It has been rather an up-and-down year; mostly down for me," Courier said. "Hopefully it will be character building and I will come back strong next year."

Boris Becker, fresh from a tournament victory in Stockholm, had a first-set scare but advanced over Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In other second round matches two-time French Open champion Sergi Bruguera of Spain eliminated Bernd Karbacher of Germany, 6-4, 6-3 and Yevgeny Kafelnikov, who will lead Russia in the Davis Cup final next month, downed Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland, 6-3, 6-4.

Also Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands fired 17 aces to beat Italian Renzo Furlan, 6-3, 6-3.

Woodforde has now beaten Courier three of the four times they have met, including once when Courier was No. 1 in the world in March 1993.

Woodforde took the first set behind a new rule allowing fans to shout and move during points.

At 6-3 in the opening set tiebreaker, a fan yelled when Woodforde served. Courier didn't move but chair umpire, Rudi Berger, ruled that it was a ace and the set was over.

Harvesters ranked No. 1 in scoring and team defense

Pampa and Hereford could keep the scoreboard lit up when the two teams meet at 7:30 Friday night in a District 1-4A contest at Hereford.

In team statistics released Tuesday by the Amarillo Globe-News, Pampa ranks No. 2 in total offense per game (367.0) and Hereford is right behind at 358.0.

The whopping 680 yards gained in whipping Dumas, 62-8, last week gave Pampa a boost in offensive production. However, Borger still reigns as the total offense leader, averaging 383 yards per outing.

Pampa ranks No. 1 in points scored (246) and Hereford is third (190).

Much like Pampa's double threat of tailback Matt Archibald and fullback Matt Garvin, the Whitefaces have quarterback Michael Brown and tailback Marquise Brown doing damage to opposing defenses. Michael and Marquise rank sixth and seventh, respectively, among the district rushers. Archibald ranks third and Garvin, fifth. Based on a minimum of 90 carries, Archibald's 6.7 yards per carry is No. 1 and his 10 touchdowns put him in a two-day tie for third.

While Pampa has a definite advantage on the ground, Hereford has the edge through the airways. Brown (Michael) has thrown for 970 yards and seven touchdowns, ranking him second in the district.

"The Browns are definite offensive threats and so is receiver Marc Haney," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier. "They've got other good receivers, but he's probably their best."

Haney has caught 12 passes for 299 yards and three touchdowns. His 25 yards per catch ranks him No. 1 in that category.

Pampa's passing offense, which is ranked fifth in the district, is starting to come around. Quarterback Joel Ferland tossed two touchdowns in Pampa's 62-8 romp over Dumas last week and now ranks third in touchdown passes with five on the season.

In Todd Finney, the district has no equal in the kick-scoring department. Finney is a perfect five for five in field goals and is 25 of 29 in extra point conversions.

"Todd is an outstanding kicker and the best part is that he's just a junior," said Dennis Cavalier.

Finney's 40 points puts him 15 ahead of second-place Mark Ladd of Randall. Hereford's Terance High ranks third with 23 points.

The defense continues to shine for Pampa. The Harvesters are ranked No. 1 in yards given up (148.6) and second in points allowed. Hereford is fourth in yards give up (273.1) and fourth in points allowed (132).

Chicago bids Jordan farewell

By RICK GANO
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan on center stage? Of course.

Where else would he be in a city that reveres his every move and will forever savor the memories of the greatest basketball player the world has ever seen?

Thirteen months after his stunning retirement from the Chicago Bulls, Jordan found himself surrounded on a basketball court Tuesday night by friends, fellow celebrities, former coaches, one-time adversaries, teammates, fans and family during an orchestrated-for-TV farewell bash.

He was roasted. He was toasted.

The glitzy celebration on TNT was a little much at times — for instance, Sinbad, the comedian, sharing the stage with Dean Smith, the college coach — but provided a sense of closure to a basketball career that began 15 years ago after Jordan was cut from his high school team.

So much followed. A game-winning shot in the NCAA championship game for North Carolina, two Olympic gold medals, three NBA titles, a 32.3-point NBA scoring average, three regular-season Most Valuable Player Awards, three more MVPs in the NBA Finals.

Mind-boggling dunks, midair body shifts that still leave viewers and defenders shaking their heads, an incomparable style of play, a tongue-wagging competitiveness that will never be forgotten.

Jordan, as he has done numerous times, reiterated that his basketball career was over and his baseball career is still in the making. The Bulls perhaps believe it.

They unveiled a bronze 11 1/2-foot statue of Jordan outside the United Center on Tuesday night and also raised his familiar No. 23 to the ceiling. They showered him with gifts, some from the old Chicago Stadium that he personally rocked so many times.

"When I made the decision I was fixed with that, pretty firm with it," Jordan said. "A lot of things lingered on, certain expectations maintained the possibility that I might come back."

"With that number hanging up, that puts that to rest. I've got to move on. There's a new team here. I'm playing baseball."

Indiana's Bob Knight, who coached Jordan on the 1984 Olympic team, said Jordan might have been more than the best basketball player to ever step on the court.

"He may have been the best player who's played anything," Knight said.

Jordan, whose face is familiar worldwide with a series of endorsements that has made him one of the richest athletes of all time, ended the festivities by hoisting his number to the ceiling as his three children stood by.

"My kids helped me raise the banner. That's something I will treasure and remember forever," Jordan said.

Before his number was raised, Jordan was left alone on the stage, listening to a familiar refrain — a thunderous standing ovation that lasted nearly three minutes.

"I was able to excel through every stage to get to this point," said Jordan, who became emotional as he mentioned his father, who was murdered in 1993.

"I'm very happy I had the opportunity to play the game of basketball for the length of time I played it."

Now it's baseball that has Jordan's fancy. He spent last season in Double-A, is now in the Arizona Fall League and could start next season in Triple-A, said Jerry Reisdorf, owner of the Bulls and the Chicago White Sox.

Switzer's son quits college football team

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Doug Switzer, son of Dallas Cowboys coach Barry Switzer, apparently has quit the Missouri Southern football team after losing his starting quarterback job.

Coach Jon Lantz said he had not seen or heard from Switzer, a sophomore, since last Thursday's practice. Switzer did not show up for the Lions' 38-16 victory over Washburn on Saturday.

Canadian earns third consecutive playoff trip

CANADIAN — Canadian, which earned its third consecutive trip to the playoffs by beating Panhandle, 14-6, last week, can win its second consecutive District 2-2A title outright by defeating Wellington Friday night.

Against Panhandle, Canadian took a 7-0 lead in the second quarter on a two-yard run by Kevin Flowers. Canadian made it 14-0 in the fourth quarter on a two-yard by Jyari Jaco.

Panhandle's only touchdown, a 62-yard pass from Brady Shadid to Andy Atchley, came with 8:06 left to play.

With 40 seconds remaining, Canadian defensive end Cecilo Sanchez put the win away for the Wildcats when he recovered a Panhandle fumble near the Panthers' 30.

Flowers was Canadian's leading rusher with 88 yards and 41 carries. The Wildcats led in total offense, 208-152, on hand more first downs, 16-7, than Panhandle.

Canadian, 7-2 overall, is the district's No. 1 seed. The Wildcats are 4-0 in district play. Panhandle is 3-1 in district and 6-3 for the season.

Oilers could be due for coaching changes

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams isn't ruling out the possibility of making coaching changes during the season, although he'd prefer playing out the season with coach Jack Pardee and his staff.

"If they are playing hard, you can't fault them because they are doing the best they can," Adams said. "But I will make changes if the players start to lose confidence and give up."

"I'm going to blame the staff for that, and I will think about doing something. You can't sit around and let that continue."

"You would have to think about making some kind of change. But I've always felt it is usually counterproductive to change coaches in the middle of a season."

The Oilers will take a 1-7 record into Sunday's game against Pittsburgh in the Astrodome. They've lost four games in a row and rank last in the NFL in scoring.

"I'm not committed to anything," Adams said. "I don't know what you do if you get rid of them. You go into a lame-duck coaching situation."

"Certainly I would like to see them get more offense, but so far the team is still playing hard. They haven't given up."

Adams is particularly unhappy with the run-and-shoot offense and with assistant head coach Kevin Gilbride. Adams has pushed Gilbride, who is in charge of the offense, to move away from the run-and-shoot.

"We can't do the same things we did in the past. We don't have the personnel to run it," Adams said. "I just don't think the run-and-shoot offense works anymore. Teams are able to defend it now. They have figured out what to do against it."

"It's no secret to what we are doing. You put four guys out there and try to find one open."

Adams met with Pardee and Gilbride three weeks ago and insisted they use more of their tight end alignment but the Oilers have remained primarily with the four-wide receiver offense.

"I think Kevin has his mind made up on that (using run-and-shoot) and I told him I thought it was wrong," Adams said. "I talked to Kevin that one time with Jack. I told him we had to do something different."

Texas Tech's Wickware named Defensive Player of the Week

FORT WORTH (AP) — With Texas rotating quarterbacks Shea Morenz and James Brown, the only constant in the Longhorns backfield last weekend was Texas Tech defensive tackle Damon Wickware.

Wickware made himself right at home, throwing down the UT quarterbacks for 2 1/2 sacks as the Red Raiders stunned the then-No. 19 Longhorns and jerked themselves to the fore of the Cotton Bowl chase with a 33-9 victory.

"We're not supposed to be thinking about the Cotton Bowl yet," Wickware said. "But it's hard not to after a game like this. It definitely entered my mind out there."

Wickware's outing earned him Defensive Player of the Week honors, making him the second straight Tech defender to be recognized by The Associated Press.

Texas Christian quarterback Max Knake, who led the Horned Frogs past Rice to really throw open the SWC race, was the Offensive Player of the Week.

The wacky weekend that left five conference teams with two losses may have left a clear path for Wickware and Tech to Dallas on New Year's Day.

It also showed that the Red Raiders are a quality team as they stuffed the Texas offense to 213 yards.

"I've been here when Texas was killing us," said Wickware, a fifth-year senior. "I never thought something like this would happen ... where we totally dominated them."

Knake also was dominating against Rice. The SWC leader in passing efficiency set a school record for accuracy by completing 13-of-16 passes with no interceptions.

He had 170 yards and four touchdowns, giving him 19 on the season and tying another TCU mark for TDs in a year in a 27-25 victory over the Owls.

"Max made some great plays," Horned Frogs coach Pat Sullivan said. "It seems that every time someone makes a defensive mistake, Max finds it."

Andre Davis made things easier on Knake by putting the Rice defense on its heels early as he bolted for 101 of his 221 yards in the first quarter.

Knake took advantage of the defense looking for Davis and threw two first-quarter touchdown passes.

Tarpley says he wasn't involved in wreck

DALLAS (AP) — The vehicle of Dallas Mavericks center Roy Tarpley was found wrecked and abandoned last weekend in north Dallas, but the player says he wasn't involved.

Tarpley, in a statement released by the Mavericks, said he lent his car to an unidentified friend, who left the scene of the early Saturday morning accident but later called police.

"I just thank God no one was hurt," he said. "That's the important thing. I notified Keith Grant (club's director of player personnel) as soon as I found out. That's all there is to it."

The accident involving a Mercedes registered to Tarpley was first reported by Dallas television station KDFW on its 10 p.m. newscast Tuesday. Police confirmed the account.

"The car was discovered about 4 a.m. after we got two anonymous calls that a car had been wrecked," police spokesman Ed Spencer said.
