Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA — The M.E. Moses variety store at 105 N. Cuyler is going out of business.

Manager Debbie McKinney said word to close the store came in a phone call Monday from the company's headquarters in Dallas.

"We were told to start liquidating the stock. We expect that will take six to eight weeks," she said.

The store's lunch counter was closed after business on Monday, but on Tuesday regular customers were offered free coffee.

"They sat back there and drank coffee and laughed and cried," McKinney said.

M.E. Moses, founded in Paducah, Texas, in 1924, opened the Pampa store in 1938, according to records at the White Deer Land Museum. It has been at the same address since.

WASHBURN — A baby girl was in critical condition today at an Amarillo hospital following an early morning truck rollover on U.S. 287.

Eighteen-month-old Keyle Revera was in critical condition at Northwest Texas Hospital today after the sport-utility vehicle in which she was riding flipped over near Washburn, about 12 miles northwest of Claude.

The driver of the vehicle was still being examined at the Amarillo Emergency Center late this morning. A woman and a girl who were passengers in the vehicle were released from the emergency room after treatment for minor cuts and bruises.

Thomas Anzoria, 35, was being treated at the emergency room late this morning for injuries suffered when the Izusu Trooper he was driving flipped about 3:30 a.m. today on U.S. 287 near Washburn.

Emyra Alfaro, 24, and Yassenia Hernandez, 9, who were riding in the vehicle at the time of the accident, were treated for minor injuries at the hospital.

Department of Public Safety officers said the vehicle was westbound on U.S. 287 when the driver apparently lost control of it. The four-wheel drive vehicle went off the northside of the highway and flipped four or five times, officers said.

CLARENDON — Clarendon fire units battled a truck fire early today near the Donley-Armstrong County line.

Claude and Clarendon fire units were called to the fire about 7 a.m. today when the dolly on a pup trailer caught on fire on U.S. 287 about 14 miles north of Clarendon.

Jim Hubbard, Claude fire chief, said the Clarendon fire department had the blaze under control when he arrived.

Delbert Robertson, Clarendon fire chief, said the dolly, the front wheels on a trailer being pulled behind another trailer in a tractor-trailer rig, was totally destroyed. The driver of the rig was able to disconnect the second trailer, Robertson said, to prevent the blaze from spreading.

"I imagine the brakes got hot on it," Robertson said.

The Clarendon fire department had the blaze under control in about 10 minutes, he said. The truck was owned by a Dallas firm.

PAMPA — If you want to vote early, you better hurry.

Early voting ends at 5 p.m. today except for those for whom there is death of an immediate family member or who become ill themselves, said County Clerk Wanda Carter. For those cases, provisions exist for a ballot to be hand-carried to them, she said.

Nearly 3,000 people have balloted as of 5 p.m. Thursday, she said.

She notes voters may mark the box for a straight party ticket, yet cross over for one or more candidates including write-ins.

LEFORS — The Lefors Crafts Fair will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Lefors Civic Center.

Sponsored by the Lefors Senior Citizens Center, the event will feature various arts and crafts items and a bake sale. Some of the proceeds will benefit the Lefors Senior Citizens Center.

PAMPA — A trust fund to help defray funeral expenses for Versie Brown has been opened by friends of the family at First National Bank in Pampa. Contact Estelle Malone for details.

Key Serb town falls to Bosnian troops

By HRVOJE HRANJSKI
Associated Press Writer

BUGOJNO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The key Serb-held town of Kupres, part of a plateau known as "the gates of Bosnia," has fallen to Muslim-led Bosnian government troops and their Bosnian Croat allies, U.N. officials said today.

The town's fall could be a turning point in Bosnia's 2 1/2-year civil war. Jubilant government officials said it is a sign that fortunes have shifted decisively away from the Serbs.

The strategic plateau on which Kupres sits links Serb-held territory in northwest Bosnia and neighboring Croatia with Serb land in central Bosnia. It was one of the first regions Bosnian Serbs captured after the war began in April 1992.

Muslim-Croat control of the plateau could allow their forces to push north and link up with government troops to try to cut Bosnian Serbs off from Serbia in Croatia.

"Kupres has fallen," said Lt. Col. Tim Spicer, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo. He said Bosnian Serb defenders appeared to have set up new defense lines about six miles to the northwest.

Bosnian Croat troops were believed to be in Kupres, with government troops on the heights overlooking the town of 3,500 people.

Part of the town had fallen Thursday in the first major combined offensive by government troops and an allied Bosnian Croat militia, the HVO, since the United States brought them together in a federation in March that ended a year of bitter fighting between them.

"We, together with HVO units, have achieved our goal," said Gen. Mehmed Alagic, commander of the Bosnian army's 7th Corps, which was fighting in the region.

"Kupres is liberated," he told the Sarajevo daily Oslobodjenje.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic sent a message to troops that they still were out-gunned by the Serbs, but that "you have been scoring victories thanks to your ability, courage and your love of Bosnia, of your people and freedom."

"Be convinced that your victory today illuminates the path for the further liberation of occupied parts of our country," he said.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic

acknowledged that his troops had pulled back.

"Our forces have tactically withdrawn to new positions and have prepared for defense and a counteroffensive," Karadzic, wearing military fatigues instead of his customary suit, told Bosnian Serb television.

Earlier, Karadzic had threatened to "break the spine of the Muslim army" if international mediators are unable to persuade the Bosnian government to stop its offensive.

U.N. military spokesman Maj. Herve Gourmelon in Sarajevo reported Serb shelling of Bugojno, 12 miles east of Kupres, and the Croat-held settlement of Sujica in retaliation for the attack on Kupres.

The assault on Kupres followed a surprise attack out of the Bihac pocket in northwest Bosnia that has reached the Serb-held town of Bosanska Krupa. The government has captured about 140 square miles of territory in recent fighting.

The Muslims may now feel confident enough to try to defeat the Serbs instead of accepting a peace plan that would divide Bosnia, giving the Serbs 49 percent instead of the 70 percent they have held.

Jimmy Massa

Jimmy Massa dies at age 91

James B. "Jimmy" Massa, 91, longtime Pampa civic leader and businessman, died Friday, Nov. 4, 1994.

Vigil services will be at 7 p.m. today in Carmichael-Whitley Colonial Chapel. Funeral Mass will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, with the Rev. Leroy Matthiesen, bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Amarillo; the Rev. Joe Bixenman, pastor, and the Rev. Phu Phan, associate pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors.

Mr. Massa was born Aug. 13, 1901 in St. Joseph, Mo. He lived as a child in Alabama and the Philippine Islands, and later attended St. Mary's College in Kansas. He worked as an engineer in the oil fields in Mexico and in Ranger, Texas, before moving to Pampa in 1929.

He married Lucille Hill on Aug. 5, 1930, in Ranger. She died in 1986.

Mr. Massa was a member of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church and served as president of the Joseph W. Gayden Foundation. He was a member of the Downtown Kiwanis Club and received an award in 1993 for a 57-year perfect attendance record. At that time he also received a 60-year Legion of Honor award.

In 1987, he established the Lucille and Jimmy Massa Scholarship Foundation with an annual Kiwanis scholarship for Pampa students. He worked with the Kiwanis Key Club and the American Field Service. He was past president of the Kiwanis Club, the Top O' Texas Knife and Fork Club and the Pampa Country Club.

Mr. Massa supervised construction of gasoline plants in and around Pampa and worked for the Texas Railroad Commission. He served on the Gray County rationing board during World War II and served as city engineer until he purchased Culligan Soft Water in 1945. He retired from that business in 1981.

Survivors include nieces and nephews.

Memorials may be in the form of contributions to St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, the Kiwanis Lucille and Jimmy Massa Scholarship Foundation or the American Diabetes Association.

Cold front expected to trigger more showers, storms

From AP and Staff Reports

Cool temperatures blanketed the eastern Texas Panhandle this morning with patches of light fog.

Brenda Turpin with the Carson County Sheriff's Office reported fog in Panhandle about sunrise today while a spokesman for the Wheeler County Sheriff's Office said it was trying to clear in Wheeler County. Canadian reported cool temperatures and overcast skies.

While Amarillo was clear and had a temperature of 51 degrees shortly before sunrise today, Pampa reported a light fog with visibility of about two miles and a downtown temperature of 39 degrees.

McLean reported a trace of rain overnight and light clouds this morning.

"It just kind of sprinkled," said Stella Lee in McLean.

A cold front located across the northern Texas Panhandle is expected to drop temperatures to near freezing in northwestern sections of the Panhandle and should trigger colder, windy and sometimes stormy conditions elsewhere across the state.

In West Texas, temperatures were expected to dip into the 40s as far south as the Big Bend area tonight. There is a chance of showers and thunderstorms across West Texas in area west of the mountains through tonight. Skies will be clearing across the entire area on Saturday.

A freeze warning is in effect for northwestern areas of the Panhandle tonight.

In North Texas, another stormy day and night appeared to be in store. Forecasts called for showers and thunderstorms through tonight. Forecasters warned that some of the thunderstorms could reach severe levels before ending on Saturday.

Voters cynical about whether election will make a difference

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The political party labels in Tuesday's election might as well be D for Disgusted and R for Revolted, based on a poll in which many said the vote outcome makes little difference.

The Associated Press poll taken Oct. 28 through Wednesday found 42 percent of all adults and 38 percent of voters think it wouldn't matter much which party controls Congress.

Among voters, 30 percent wanted the Republicans to take control and another 30 percent wanted the Democrats to keep their reign on Capitol Hill.

However, 45 percent said they personally would vote Democratic, compared with 38 percent who said Republican. This 7-point advantage is an improvement over a statistically insignificant 1-point edge for the Democrats in an AP poll taken three weeks earlier.

Democrats seem to have made strides too in some individual races where incumbents were in trouble. But if the GOP's share in a national poll is running close to the Democrats' among all registered voters, "the numbers suggest a historic opportunity for the Republican Party on Election Day," said Bill McInturff, a Republican pollster.

The reason, he said, is the profile of voters who turn out — older, more white, affluent and more Republican than the cross-section in a poll.

The AP poll of 1,006 adults, including 782 registered voters, is based on random sampling by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points overall, 4 points for voters.

Eight in 10 voters said they believe their individual vote makes a difference on Election Day. And asked to choose a priority for the next Congress among four issues, 98 percent of adults have an opinion.

The most popular priority is cutting government spending, at 35 percent, followed closely by health care reform at 30 percent.

Welfare reform runs third at 19 percent.

Many surveys indicate that crime is the issue Americans personally care about most. But this poll asked more specifically about which issues Congress should address. "Building more prisons and making sentences tougher," the sort of anti-crime action Congress has taken recently, ranked last at 15 percent.

Many analysts have observed that the public this year seems uninterested in what politicians claim to have accomplished, such as anti-crime legislation, and has fixated on unkept promises.

House Republican candidates have signed a contract that pledges a balanced budget amendment, increased defense spending and tax cuts. Only 18 percent of those polled said this platform sounds realistic and achievable. Fully 74 percent said it is "just another campaign promise."

"It is a very cynical electorate, and it does not surprise me that a plurality of Americans would answer that it doesn't make any difference" which party prevails, said Peter Hart, who is polling for Democrats in a dozen statewide races.

McInturff, who is polling for Republican candidates in 15 statewide races and 75 congressional contests, says there is cynicism and lack of enthusiasm for both parties, but it is hurting the Democrats more.

Smith, Hahn candidates for Gray County treasurer

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

Kay Smith is a political novice who decided after 23 years at Citizens' Bank and Trust that she is qualified to serve as Gray County's treasurer.

She is a write-in candidate with experience as teller operations officer, supervising up to 15 tellers. Job duties included internal audits, assignment to the bank's compliance committee which assured regulatory compliance, investing excess daily funds, reconciling statements with corresponding banks and budgeting.

"There's really not an issue at hand," Smith said.

so I decided to run against him," she said.

Smith declined to identify her party affiliation.

"I vote for the person. That's why I say 'know your candidate' ... on the local level we can know our candidates," she said.

She has been involved in the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce's Country Fair and the Pampa United Way. She served the past two years as treasurer for the Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club.

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

When it's time to make a choice for Gray County treasurer, Republican candidate Scott Hahn asks the voter to look at his track record which began in 1987.

"I think the main comment along those those lines would be experience," he said.

He claims to have earned $2.5 million for Gray County as its chief investment officer responsible for making a nickel on the county bucks, as well as computerizing the office which had used manual bookkeeping until he took office.

Investing county funds according to the commission-directed investment policy of purchasing certificates of deposit at First National Bank keeps money invested virtually 100 percent of the time, he said. This fall's tax collections will be invested until they are needed to fund the 1995 budget, he said.

Hahn says he has been working on a county personnel manual for three years. He handles payroll, insurance, retirement and credit union affairs for county employees. For retirees, the County Treasurer's Office is their contact for the pension system.

Hahn is a Certified County Treasurer with 140 hours of continuing education. He is on the board of directors of the County Treasurers Association of Texas, where he has served as treasurer and secretary and is now second vice president. He is projected to be president 1997-1998, subject to re-election.

Scott Hahn

"I think that's indicative that 247 treasurers around the state want me to lead them," he said.

What about national politics for local folks?

"I wish county politics was non-partisan. My personal feelings are that beliefs one holds about explosive issues in either party don't play a part in daily activities," he said.

He notes no laws are made by county government and daily activities are not impacted by the issues which divide Democrats and Republicans nationally. However, Hahn says he doesn't see county politics disappearing.

"We need some way to elect people and this has evolved," he said.

Former Kingsmill resident searches for missing doll to move," she said. "It just made me sick."

The story of the three biscuits would make anyone want to meet Audi Kendricks.

But biscuits are less important than Mrs. Kendricks' missing doll — the one with the china head that her mother made for her right after she was born 94 years ago.

The doll turned up missing after Mrs. Kendricks moved to Pampa Aug. 31 from Kingsmill. She was the last resident of Kingsmill to leave after Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group bought the property that once made up the Kingsmill community west of Pampa and resettled the residents.

"It was stored in an old wooden ice box," Mrs. Kendricks said. "It had a china head about this big." (She held up circled fingers to indicate a head about 2 1/2 inches in diameter.) "There were a lot of people helping me move and my grandson said they set that old ice box on the back porch. I hurt my leg while we were moving and wasn't able to go back in the house to see if anything was left behind."

The old ice box is gone from the back porch now, and also gone is the back to an antique walker, one used by both Mrs. Kendricks' father and her husband.

Mrs. Kendricks was relocated to a neat frame house in the 100 block of North Sumner Street. She doesn't really like the new house, but she said she's getting used to it.

"It's been just awful on me to have

She had, after all, lived in Kingsmill since 1929. She and her husband, Dave Kendricks, raised their three sons there. And the couple outlived all their children.

"All our sons had already passed on when Dave died in 1985," Mrs. Kendricks said. He was 90 when he died.

She said the doll she can't find was made by her mother, using the china doll head given to her by one of Audi Kendricks' aunts.

"It really means a lot to me," Mrs. Kendricks said.

She hopes somebody will have found it in the rubble left after Kingmill residents left their community.

Oh, yeah, the biscuits.

Is it true, a visitor recently asked Mrs. Kendricks, that you get up every morning and make three biscuits ...?

"That is true," she said before the question was finished.

... And that you eat two of them and give one to your cat? She laughed a hearty laugh.

"I don't have a cat," she said.

Oh, she did once, in Kingsmill, but it ran off, and she never let it in the house, anyway.

So why did she tell some people recently at lunch at the Salvation Army that she makes three biscuits every morning — two for herself and one for her cat?

"Well, they were asking all these questions and I just figured I'd tell them something funny," she said.

12 students injured when shell explodes in classroom

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

FOLKSTON, Ga. (AP) — A military shell that a teenager was showing off to schoolmates detonated inside a full classroom, spitting shrapnel into a dozen students in a blast that was felt a quarter-mile away.

Shannon Chesser, 16, was in critical condition today as doctors worked to save his leg. He had dropped the 60 mm shell that Gregory Douglas brought to their music class Thursday.

Douglas, 17, said moments before the explosion that the shell was harmless, said emergency worker Jed Norton.

Four students were in serious condition today and two, including Douglas, were in fair condition, said Gerri Lowe, a spokeswoman for University Medical Center in Jacksonville, Fla.

"Looking at the injuries, the force of the mortar tore up a lot of tissue and broke a lot of bones," said University surgeon Dr. Emran R. Imami.

"These are very serious, devastating military-type injuries. This is not the sort of thing you'd see on the streets of America," said Dr. David Vukich, chief of emergency medicine.

One student was in stable but guarded condition with a punctured lung and other injuries at another hospital. Four students were treated for shrapnel wounds and burns to the lower body, then released. All 12 injured students are either 16 or 17 years old.

Twenty-five students were in the band room at Charlton County High School when Chesser dropped the shell and it exploded, County School Superintendent Jack Mullis said. The teacher was not injured.

The shell, 2 1/2 inches in diameter and 8-10 inches long, is designed to be fired from a tube and fragment on impact. Police didn't know where Douglas got it.

The blast blew a 3 1/2-foot hole in the carpet and knocked over music stands and chairs. A pool of blood was outside the door.

Georgia Bureau of Investigation spokesman John Bankhead said the agency was trying to have military experts examine the wreckage to determine what type of shell it was.

Two police officers were stationed outside the Douglas home Thursday night. They were expected to search the house today for more explosives. Douglas' parents were with him at the hospital, where he was being treated for a broken foot.

Neighbor Jimmy Spurlock said Douglas is a quiet youth. "He isn't dumb. I don't believe he would have brought it to school if he had thought it was dangerous," he said.

Classes were scheduled today at the 800-student school. The town of about 2,300 residents is on the edge of the Okefenokee Swamp in south-east Georgia.

German satellite released

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A rookie astronaut gently released a telescope-laden German satellite from shuttle Atlantis today for eight days of free-flying atmospheric research.

French crew member Jean-Francois Clervoy, on his first spaceflight, hoisted the 3,000-pound satellite from the shuttle cargo bay with the 50-foot robot arm. He held it high overhead while ground controllers completed final checks.

Then, as the shuttle flew 190 miles above northern Europe, Clervoy set the satellite free and commander Donald McMonagle slowly backed Atlantis away. The German space agency's white and gold-colored craft drifted into its own orbit against a backdrop of bright blue Earth and pitch black space.

"That was an outstanding deploy," Mission Control told the crew.

Release and retrieval of the satellite is one of the astronauts' chief jobs during the 11-day mission that began Thursday.

To avoid contamination from shuttle exhaust, the satellite must fly free during its observations and will trail Atlantis by up to about 70 miles until astronaut Ellen Ochoa plucks it from orbit late next week.

The $35 million satellite is carrying three infrared telescopes and other instruments designed to create a three-dimensional map of the flow of gases in Earth's middle atmosphere, an area from 7 to 17 miles up.

Physicists hope to gather the first global information about medium- and small-scale disturbances in the middle atmosphere. Much is already known about such phenomena as the gaping ozone hole over the Antarctic, but only theories exist about smaller disruptions.

Satellite data will be matched against current computer models and could lead to a better understanding of atmospheric composition and how heat is distributed around the planet, scientists say.

Ground controllers detected increasing pressure in a satellite helium tank Thursday after astronauts locked onto the spacecraft with the robot arm for a system check. About 200 gallons of liquid helium are stored on board to cool the delicate science instruments.

Mission scientists watched the tank closely overnight and reported early today that pressure had leveled off and was expected to decline. The glitch was not expected to disrupt operations, NASA said.

Astronauts today activated secondary experiments aboard the shuttle, including a study of crystal growth in space. Atlantis' other primary cargo, seven instruments scouring the stratosphere from the shuttle cargo bay, were turned on hours after Thursday's launch.

Hijacker demands end to bloodshed in Bosnia

By DOUG MELLGREN
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Bosnian refugee, determined to call attention to the relentless slaughter in his country, hijacked an airliner only to surrender when he believed the world heard his plea.

The 25-year-old man, identified by the news media as Haris Kec, claimed to have a hand grenade Thursday when he commandeered an SAS airliner with 129 people aboard on a domestic flight between two towns north of the Arctic Circle.

After releasing women, children and older men, he forced the plane to fly south to an airport near the Norwegian capital of Oslo. He then surrendered peacefully after a standoff, saying his plea for help to Bosnia had been heard.

The hijacker said he wanted to bring world attention to Bosnia, where the Muslim-led government, Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Croats have been fighting a war for 2 1/2 years.

"The people in this plane have suffered as much as the people in Bosnia. I don't want to bother them anymore," the Norwegian news agency NTB quoted the hijacker as saying by radio just before he gave up.

He was being charged today with hijacking, a charge punishable by up to 21 years in prison, said Ragnar Ingeberg, assistant chief of police in the town of Romerike, near the airport. He refused to confirm the hijacker's name.

The man was among thousands of refugees from the war in the former Yugoslavia who have been streaming to Scandinavia for at least three years, forcing the governments to consider ways of stemming the flow.

Kec's attorney, Sigmund Oien, told the Oslo newspaper Verdens Gang that his client — who the newspaper said claimed to be a journalist in Bosnia — had been aware that he was likely to go to jail for the hijacking.

"The hijacking was a conscious act. He is sacrificing, in a way, part of his life to make the world aware of what through every day," he said.

NTB said the hijacker had spent several months at a refugee center in Sandesjoen, a northern town, and was granted a residence permit on humanitarian grounds in July. He had come to Norway a year ago.

"The hijacking was a desperate, isolated act," said Annette Thommessen of the Norwegian Organization for Asylum seekers. "I hope and believe that people will not generalize about refugees after what has happened."

After the hijacker surrendered, authorities quickly evacuated the plane at Gardermoen Airport, about 20 miles north of Oslo.

Jorgen Hoidahl, chief of police in Romerike, said no trace of a grenade or other weapons had been found.

While the twin-engine MD-80 was on the darkened runway at Gardermoen, police negotiated with the hijacker by radio.

His main demands were opening aid supply routes to besieged cities in Bosnia and for international action to stop the fighting.

Job for military recruiters getting harder

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's been a good year for military recruiting, but attracting qualified candidates may get tougher because young people aren't as interested in joining the ranks as in the past, Pentagon officials say.

"That's worrisome," Edwin Dorn, the undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, told reporters Thursday.

Dorn said that during the past fiscal year, the military recovered from a brief slide in the number and quality of recruits, but it may be difficult to sustain the improvement.

"We're concerned about the declining propensity of young men and women to join the force," he said. The percentage of young people 16 to 22 years old who say they are "very likely" or "likely" to enlist has dropped from around 30 percent to 25 percent over the past several years, Dorn said.

He cited several problems, among them:

— There is a general but erroneous perception among the public that, given recent cuts in the military, there is no need for recruits.

— Birth patterns mean there will be a smaller pool of young people from which to obtain enlistees in the coming years.

— The military must increase the numbers it recruits in the years 1995 through 1997 because the reductions in the military will have leveled off.

— And since the economy is picking up, military service is potentially less attractive to high-quality high school graduates.

Dorn, appearing with Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch, said the Pentagon was able to meet its recruiting goals for fiscal year 1994 and also scored the third-best year since 1972 in terms of high-quality recruits.

"It was a very good year," he said.

In the past fiscal year, the military enlisted 184,096 recruits. Ninety-six percent were high school graduates. And 68 percent were both high school graduates and scored in the top levels of the military's aptitude test, a designation the Pentagon considers high quality.

Waco Tribune-Herald on I.Q. test scores:

President Clinton has properly jumped into the controversy stirred up by The Bell Curve, a new book that uses data to say U.S. intelligence is declining, that America will become divided into classes based on IQ and that blacks consistently have lower tested IQ scores than whites.

The United States was founded on the principles of a free and open democracy fueled by spirited discussion of issues in an unfettered marketplace of ideas. Nothing should be done to impede those principles.

But in a free marketplace of ideas and speech, Americans must be sophisticated enough to separate the wheat from the chaff. Is the information presented as fact true? If true, is it complete? Are the conclusions logical? In general, Americans do a good job spotting charlatans and snake-oil snow jobs. But not always.

That's why Clinton's blast of one of the book's conclusions was praiseworthy. The president should use his bully pulpit to speak out when it appears an issue has the potential for public harm. Asked by a reporter about the book, Clinton said, "I have to say I disagree with the proposition that there are inherent, racially based differences in the capacity of the American people to reach their full potential."

Well said. The book uses the fact of a consistent black-white IQ difference in the United States to infer that the cause is genetic and that an entire class of cognitively challenged Americans will be doomed to a lower caste status. ...

Temple Daily Telegram on deficit:

In the midst of a campaign in which many people are displaying sheer hatred toward both President Bill Clinton and Congress, an important fact has come to light that unhappy citizens should carefully consider. One of their great grievances - that government is spending itself into oblivion - has just been contradicted by the numbers.

In fiscal 1994, ending Sept. 30, the deficit was $203 billion, down from 1993's $255 billion, which in turn was down from 1992's $290 billion. That's two years of steady decline, the first time in 20 years. And the deficit is projected to fall to $167 billion in 1995.

True, many factors affect the deficit other than government policy - an economy growing faster than expected and, until recently, very low interest rates, which cut the costs of financing the federal debt. But the president's 1993 tax hikes and spending cuts, plus the bipartisan congressional pact of 1990 requiring new spending to be compensated for by cuts elsewhere, are yielding impressive results.

A deficit-conscious public that complains Washington isn't listening may not be right. People should consider that before reflexively voting against incumbents. ...

San Antonio Express-News on domestic violence:

Domestic violence costs U.S. businesses between $3 billion and $5 billion every year, according to the Bureau of National Affairs. ...

But too few U.S. companies are willing to acknowledge (a correlation between battering at home and performance at the workplace) and address it. ... Because spousal abuse is so widespread in this country, few U.S. workplaces are immune to its costly effects.

Companies that refuse, for whatever reason, to recognize this sad reality compound its tragedy.

But recognizing the problem is not enough. Taking concrete steps to address it, as too few businesses are doing, is the necessary next step. ...

Until more U.S. companies take a stand against domestic violence, they - and too many of their employees - will continue to pay a very high price.

Berry's World

"Unemployed, actually!"

Kemp and Bennett vs. the right

The dispute on immigration policy within the ranks of the conservative right had up until just now exercised itself.

What happened was Proposition 187. It is a very hot ticket in the state of California, where it is known as the "Save Our State" initiative. What it says, among other things, is that California should not contribute to the maintenance of illegal immigrants. P. 187 is very hotly supported and by no means only by Republicans - even Dianne Feinstein has yet to denounce it, and it is expected to pass, as a register of the frustration of Californians swamped by illegals.

The other side - Don't Raise Barriers, because to do so is untraditional and nativist - is taken by the usual ideological conglomerate, the ACLU-Amnesty-American Way types, alongside the pure libertarians (who don't believe in any immigration laws). But the shock came on Oct. 19 when Jack Kemp and William Bennett issued a joint-statement urging Californians to vote no on 187. Here are two rightwing Republican presidential contenders who suddenly seemed to be saying that illegal immigrants should continue to be subsidized.

Actually, Kemp and Bennett went to some pains to say that this was not what they were saying. Under existing law, they stressed, illegals do not qualify for welfare - indeed, neither do freshly inducted citizens (the technical ban against welfare for them is for five years). What the Supreme Court has held (1982) is that it is unconstitutional to deny any child access to public schooling. And that court ruling presumably would be invoked the day after 187 entered the California Constitution, in effect making the proposition a dead letter.

The Kemp-Bennett position says: Look, there shouldn't be illegal immigrants in California, but it is the business of the federal government to keep them away. But to pass such a measure as 187 situates the GOP with a strain of xenophobia that will very quickly (California will be more than 50 percent Asian/Hispanic at the turn of the century, whatever happens to illegals) evolve into massive anti-GOP candidates who were slow in boarding the civil rights crusade.

Now there are fascinating personal aspects to the controversy. One of them is that Bill Bennett began by endorsing 187. But, he now explains, what he meant by doing this was to stress his agreement with existing law, mainly that illegals had no claim on federal bounties. And then Jack Kemp, who while opposing 187 heartily endorses existing bans against federal support of illegals, as recently as 1990, when he served as secretary of housing and urban development, was writing letters defending federal bounties to illegals using the conventional language of Mother Welfare ("all persons residing within this country are entitled to the equal protection of the laws. ... Our attorneys are now drafting a departmental regulation which will bar discrimination on the basis of alienage ...").

Forget it; sanity lies in respecting the long accreditation of Kemp and Bennett as opponents of imperial welfarism. But they are making a point - namely, that to back a proposition that will not in fact change anything (only the federal government can secure the frontiers; only the courts can modify constitutional welfarist asseverations), and to encourage a vigilante mood among Californians to report on suspicious foreigners seeking welfare is to discourage a very solid body of political Republican voters.

But backers of 187, aware that it faces constitutional hurdles, are eager to back the government in Washington up against the wall. It is all very well, they are saying, to tolerate 4 million illegals and then ask Californians to school them, look after their health, and pay them unemployment benefits - because that is what we are being forced to do, notwithstanding platonic restrictions against doing so.

So: Get up off your bureaucratic arse and do something. Because the burden of immigration is greater than our resources to cope with it.

A reasonable position, and the position likeliest to prevail among conservative analysts and Republican voters.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Nov. 4, the 308th day of 1994. There are 57 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 4, 1942, during World War II, Axis forces retreated from El Alamein in North Africa in a major victory for British forces commanded by Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery.

On this date:

In 1842, Abraham Lincoln married Mary Todd in Springfield, Ill.

In 1879, humorist Will Rogers was born in Oologah, Okla.

In 1884, Democrat Grover Cleveland was elected to his first term as president, defeating Republican James G. Blaine.

In 1922, the entrance to King Tutankhamen's tomb was discovered in Egypt.

In 1924, Nellie T. Ross of Wyoming was elected the nation's first female governor so she could serve out the remaining term of her late husband, William B. Ross.

In 1939, the United States modified its neutrality stance in World War II, allowing "cash and carry" purchases of arms by belligerents, a policy favoring Britain and France.

Look what you made me do ...

The National Law Journal asked 311 lawyers, "Will O.J. Simpson be convicted?"

Sixty-one percent of them - that's almost two to one - said no way. They predicted either an acquittal or a hung jury, but two to one, they figure Simpson will walk.

Among criminal defense lawyers, only one in five expects a conviction. Partly, these lawyers are remembering the trials of Lyle and Erik Menendez, who were charged with murdering their parents. For all the evidence against them, there was still a hung jury.

It is that easy to get at least one juror to doubt.

Each year, the Jewish Theological Seminary of America issues a High Holy Days message on a current social issue of significance. This year, the message was keyed to Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, when Jews face "the ultimate acceptance of responsibility."

The seminary recently produced some ads headlined: "Look What You Made Me Do!" The ads are mocking society for blaming itself for the monsters among us.

Paul Harvey

You and I have recognized that self-government won't work without self-discipline. Among Jews, this "ultimate acceptance of responsibility" would lack credibility except for the salutary results.

With agonizing frequency, we are finding thieves, addicts and sex criminals among Boy Scout leaders, school teachers, Catholic priests and Protestant clergy.

Almost none are found among rabbis.

Traditional Jewish respect for family - and the reluctance to disgrace or even embarrass the family - imposes self-discipline.

This regard for family has led this respected seminary to urge all people to take responsibility for what they do and to urge appropriate punishment for those who don't. This relates to petty misconduct, abusive talk, drunk driving, family violence and mass murder.

When an American boy vandalized cars in Singapore and was punished with a whipping, the resultant uproar among sociologists and media in the United States blamed Singapore. Now, the same lad, back home, has been involved with further crimes, violence and drugs.

Society was not his problem. He was and remains his own problem.

Were his father a Jew, I dare say that the lad would have been disciplined 15 years earlier.

Rabbi Ismar Schorsch, chancellor of the seminary, explained that the ideal of Judaism is focused on the here - not the hereafter. The distilled essence of all High Holy Days sermons is a re-dedication to one more year of making this world better.

Most of those raising so much hell in this world wouldn't be happy in heaven anyway.

Old issue - what to do with Social Security?

WASHINGTON - The TV campaign ad was simple, succinct, devastating: a pair of hands, slowly tearing a Social Security card into pieces. It was the symbol of a venerable issue, revived by Democrats striving to curb their midterm election losses.

Never mind that the ad would qualify as a political antique, broadcast 30 years ago in grainy black and white. The issue is an aged one too. But no less potent for it.

"Say no to this radical attack on Social Security," President Clinton is telling his late campaign rallies, accusing Republicans of cutback plans they insist are outright lies, none of their doing.

"It is something he just made up," said Republican National Chairman Haley Barbour. "It has no basis in fact. ... They're trying to change the subject."

Perhaps. But it was Republicans who provided the gist. Two of their Senate candidates raised the subject. The White House already was trying to stir the issue by claiming that Republican promises would force cuts in Social Security.

"You're put in a position of having to defend," Barbour lamented in an interview Wednesday, acknowledging it could hurt.

Clinton certainly believes it can be a cutting issue and he's made it part of every stump speech.

Hard to believe, he said in Pawtucket, R.I., that anyone would propose a plan that would cut benefits. "After all, Social Security is a solemn contract," he said. "But it's true. It's true."

"They have one Senate candidate saying Social Security ought to be voluntary, which means bankrupt the system," Clinton said. That would be Oliver North, challenging Sen. Charles Robb in

Walter Mears AP Special Correspondent

Virginia, in trouble but edging up, boosted in part by this very controversy.

"They have another saying that he wishes the retirement age were above 70 - above 70," Clinton said, meaning Rep. Rick Santorum in Pennsylvania, where Sen. Harris Wofford was in dire jeopardy but is showing comeback signs.

North quickly backed away from the idea of making it voluntary. Santorum said he'd only been talking options for the long term, and was taken out of context.

Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican leader, chimed in from a Denver campaign swing: "The Clinton administration has proven that the only certainties in life are death, taxes and the Democrats' phony last-minute attacks on Republicans and Social Security."

The wonder is that the Republicans have walked straight into their ancient nemesis again. The late House Speaker Tip O'Neill called Social Security the third rail of American politics - touch it and you die. But Republicans can't stop touching it.

That's not to suggest that the program be left alone. The trustees of Social Security have said Congress will need to act to insure the long range financial soundness of the program.

By 2013, they warn, benefit payments will exceed tax revenues, and in 2029, the Social Security trust fund is projected to run out of money unless there are revenue or benefit changes. It is solid now; reforms in 1983 insured that.

Those changes grew out of a commission Ronald Reagan created to get off his own Social Security hook. He'd made his debut in national politics as a campaigner for Barry Goldwater in 1964; that was the year the Republican presidential nominee said Social Security should be made voluntary - prompting that Democratic TV commercial ripping the card apart. Reagan signed on to the voluntary idea, a position he later disowned and then denied.

Early in his administration, Reagan recommended restrictions on some ancillary benefits and a delay in cost of living increases. Congress balked, he retreated, and Senate Republicans, who had voted to do it, were left to pay the political dues. Dole always said that was a major factor in the GOP loss of Senate control in 1986.

Trying to fend it off now, the Republicans point out that the Clinton economic program - passed with only Democratic votes in 1993 - effectively cut Social Security benefits for 25 million people by increasing income taxes on middle- and upper-income recipients. Dole said there may be more to come next year if Clinton has the votes.

Hypocrisy, said Barbour, and the president is getting away with it because the networks broadcast his accusations nightly, unchallenged by the Republican rebuttal.

"They made it an issue and it's a fight we're happy to have," Clinton pollster Stan Greenberg said.

Again.

Portrait painter

Local artist Larry Love shows one of his portrait paintings during a demonstration earlier this week to students in Barbara Bigham's sixth and seventh grade art classes at Pampa Middle School. The portrait is of Bigham. Love, who does portraits on commission, has been painting portraits for three years and has been painting off and on for the past 20 years. He took lessons from Marlin Adams at Frank Phillips College in Borger and from Bob Luplace at Clarendon College. Love said he does portraits only in oils, but he paints other pictures in other mediums. Love has lived in Pampa since 1976; his son Brad Love is a Pampa police officer. Investigation ordered after astronaut collapses during test

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA has ordered a safety investigation of a medical experiment scheduled for spaceflight next year after an astronaut collapsed and required emergency treatment during a test of a chemical used in the research.

Jeff Carr, a spokesman at the Johnson Space Center, confirmed that an incident occurred and that the astronaut involved is now in good health, but he declined to give further details.

However, Aerospace Daily reports in its Friday editions that the astronaut involved was Bonnie Dunbar, a veteran spacefarer who is to fly aboard space shuttle Atlantis next May. The craft is to rendezvous and dock with the Russian space station, Mir.

Aerospace Daily said that Dunbar, 45, collapsed during an Oct. 16 laboratory test of an experiment that measures the effect of weightlessness on fluids in the body.

The publication said that she was injected with two chemical tracers — polyfructosan and para-amino-hippuric acid — and sank into anaphylactic shock, a life-threatening condition in which the body has a overwhelming allergic reaction to a foreign substance.

Medical personnel at the scene revived her with injections of epinephrine, the Daily said, and Dunbar suffered no lasting effect. Epinephrine is often used to combat a serious allergic reaction to such things as insect stings.

In a telephone interview with the Daily, Dunbar said the incident "really, really got blown out of proportion," but admitted, "anytime you have an allergic reaction it's a big deal."

Carr said that a mishap investigation board has been named to study the incident and, as a result, he could not give further details.

The experiment involved in the incident is an effort to study how the weightlessness of space causes fluids in the body to redistribute themselves. Since early in the space program, it has been known that microgravity causes the body to reduce fluid volume and that the fluid levels in the lower limbs are reduced while there is a pooling of fluids in the head, often causing a more rounded face.

There has been concern that the loss of fluid volume could disable astronauts during the shuttle's return to Earth, when pilots have to perform a series of critical maneuvers to make a runway landing with the vehicle.

Dunbar was scheduled to be one of the test subjects for the experiment during the Atlantis flight next year.

Court denies whistleblower rehearing

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has rejected a motion for rehearing in a case in which a government whistleblower is trying to make the state pay him a multimillion-dollar court judgment.

The routine Supreme Court action on Thursday followed its September decision that the state comptroller would not have to pay George Green.

Green, 46, said he was unhappy with the court's decision.

"I'm at the point as a citizen that I want to get on the highest mountain in Texas and scream there is no justice for the simple, little people of Texas," he said.

Green was awarded $13.6 million in a lawsuit against the Texas Department of Human Services, but so far has been unable to collect.

Green was a DHS architect when he told his supervisors about alleged kickbacks and other violations and then threatened to go to law enforcement authorities. He was fired by the agency in 1989 and later indicted, but the charges were dismissed. Green alleged the firing and charges were in retaliation for his threat to tell authorities about his allegations.

He sued the state under the Texas Whistleblowers Act, which gives safeguards to government employees who report wrongdoing.

We were very saddened by the unexpected death of your County Tax Assessor-Collector, Margie Gray, in April of this year. Margie loved her job and had the Gray County Residents interests at heart.

It appears the Gray County Commissioners also have your interest at heart in appointing Sammie Morris as Margie's Successor. An employer knows their employees and their abilities and the court apparently recognized this in honoring Margie's wishes.

As "Co-Workers" with Sammie Morris, we feel she is very capable of handling the duties of the County Tax Office in a responsible manner. Your vote for Sammie in this election will assure the continued efficiency of the Gray County Tax Office.

Banquet set for spring Jay Strack crusade

Tickets are available for the Jay Strack Crusade kick off banquet set for 7 p.m. Thursday at M.K. Brown Auditorium. They may be purchased through Tuesday at the Jay Strack Crusade Office located in First Baptist Church building.

Participants will have the opportunity to help underwrite the $30,000 crusade budget with gifts and pledges.

The dinner is to be catered by Danny's Market.

The crusade to be led by evangelist Jay Strack, is set for April 2 - 7, 1995, and is sponsored by the Pampa Ministerial Alliance. Twenty area churches are scheduled to participate in the crusade.

The kick off banquet speaker will be Dr. John Bisagno of pastor of the 22,000 member First Baptist Church of Houston. He is also author of "The Power of Positive Praying." Bisagno began his ministry in music evangelism then extended to preaching and evangelism. He is featured in a weekly television program and has spoken at the World Evangelism Conference and conducted major overseas crusades.

Others "Harvest of Souls" banquet speakers include welcome by the Rev. Roger Hubbard, invocation by the Rev. Merle Houska, special recognition by the Rev. Mike Ruth, introduction of speaker by Dr. Darrel Rains, challenge of budget by Phil Vanderpool and benediction by the Rev. Lonny Robbins.

The administrative committee for the crusade includes co-chairmen Rains and Robbins; members, the Rev. Jake Clemmens, the Rev. Jim Davenport, the Rev. Merle Houska, the Rev. Nathan Hopson, the Rev. Hubert Kelly, the Rev. Ken Metzger and the Rev. Norma Rushing; office manager, Donna Sumpter; and treasurer, Randy Watson.

Working committee chairmen include arrangements chairman, the Rev. Mark Stripling; counseling/follow up, the Rev. Lynn Hancock, the Rev. Lyndon Glaesman; finance, Phil Vanderpool, Jerry Foote; music, the Rev. John Glover, Fred Mays; personal evangelism, the Rev. Loren Gardner, Lee Cornelison; prayer, the Rev. David Schlewitz, Jack Eddins; publicity, David Fatheree, David Webster; telephone, Sandra Schuneman; usher, Jack Gindorf; youth, the Rev. Zan Walker, Mike Shannon.

Mystery video at FBC tonight

First Baptist Church of Pampa is hosting Family Fun Night at 7 p.m. today in their fellowship hall.

The public is invited to watch the Focus on the Family video, "Mystery Lights of Navajo Mesa." It is scheduled for showing on an 8 ft.-by-8 ft. screen.

The church plans to offer monthly family movies and refreshments to the community. Dale Moreland, minister of preschool and children, along with other young adults, felt the need for the church to provide a place for Pampa families to come enjoy activities for all ages without worry about abusive language or content.

Filed in the Arizona desert, the film is about a small desert town where a B-17 sits next to an old diner. The mystery unfolds with a strange voice on an old radio then an unexplainable disappearance in town. Mystery lights begin to appear in Navajo Mesa and the local sheriff becomes strangely silent in the adventure movie.

Forgiveness is the theme of the video.

The church asks children be accompanied by an adult.

Camp videos Thursday

Summer videos made at Kanakom - Kanakomo Christian Sports Camp are scheduled to be shown at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 10 at the Bible Church of Pampa, 300 W. Browning. Enrollment forms for prospective campers will be available. The public is invited.

Hospital chaplain: Ministering in crises

By JEN SANBURY
Killeen Daily Herald

KILLEEN — Something about the way ink flows so smoothly from the nib of old-fashioned-type fountain pens appeals to Kirk Brown. It's a fascination that's hard to explain.

So is his ascent to the chaplaincy at Metroplex Hospital. Unlike the effortful fluency of his handful of fountain pens, his career path has been a little rough.

Brown, 36, moved to Killeen from Illinois nearly three years ago to become Metroplex's full-time chaplain. Before that, he spent nine years pastoring in Midwestern Seventh-day Adventist churches.

In his first assignment, he worked in four "teeny little dying churches" in separate counties in Kansas. He "rode the circuit" on Saturdays, though he didn't go to all churches each Saturday. If he had, it would have been a 275-mile round trip. After about a year, he said he started to feel burned out, but continued for another year and a half.

"I was young, energetic, all fired up and worked real hard, but didn't think I had much to show for it," Brown said. "In the ministry — at least in the area where I was working — when you're starting out green and that kind of thing, they ... throw you in and see if you can swim."

So he moved back to Lincoln, Neb., where he had attended Union College, and pastored two churches: one in town and another small one out in the country. From there he moved to a church in Illinois, where he stayed only a year and a half before resigning out of frustration.

"In ministry, what I always wanted to do was just to pastor a church," said Brown. "I didn't want to pastor the largest church in the state. Not four churches. Just a church. Finally, there I am ... and it kind of turned out a mess."

The church had a history of congregational conflict, which Brown said wore him down.

"I was so angry and disillusioned that I just said, 'I need to do something else for awhile,'" he recalled.

(AP Photo) Metroplex Hospital Chaplain Kirk Brown of Killeen, who stand by the opened pages of the Bible, once looked through the yellow pages for a direction in life during his own career crisis.

"I resigned, and I didn't have a job. What do you do with a master of divinity if you're not going to be a pastor? So you just sit-down with the yellow pages and think, 'What can I do to make a living?'"

In hindsight, the bad experiences and the despair he felt because his career didn't seem to be working out the way he had planned turned out to be the best growing experiences of his life, Brown said.

His resignation was in August 1991 and in September he began working on the clinical pastoral training required to become a chaplain. By November, he was under consideration for the Metroplex position, thanks to a mutual friend he shared with Ernie Sadau, president/CEO of the hospital, whom he didn't know.

By January 1992, Brown's occupation — and his outlook — had changed.

"I had it all figured out," he said. "Now I'm going to take it as it comes. That's what frustrates me about life. Out of those devastating, painful, 'what feels like I'm being torn apart' experiences, very often emerge the good things in life. I can say I feel like God's hand has been there guiding me — which has been terrifying. I kind of had this cold war with God going for awhile."

"There was that side of me that said, 'This is it. I'm finished. Let's go do something else,'" he continued. "It wasn't that serious ... it was just because of the anger and frustration. How can I turn my back on myself?"

At Metroplex, Brown is responsible for promoting the spiritual atmosphere in the hospital and visiting patients and families. "Most of them are happy that somebody's come by to see them, and they're not here to draw blood," he said. "For me, it's helped make me more well-rounded in that I'm working with all kinds of people — different faith groups, people who are unchurched, different religions."

"I'm a Seventh-day Adventist. That's who and what I am. But more importantly I'm a Christian, so there's more I have in common with others than I don't have in common," said Brown. "My role, my job here is not to make me feel good and do what I believe, but I'm here for the patients and their families."

Sometimes the task gets awkward, he said, citing two instances where Catholic families wanted a dying family member to have last rites. One family allowed him to do what he could, the other insisted upon having a priest.

He calls his work at the hospital "crisis ministry" — which has its share of ups and downs.

"A lot of what I do, in contrast to parish work, is that when someone's in the hospital, they're in a crisis. They're confronted with a major change in their health. It can be so rewarding to help someone when they really feel like the sky is falling and their life's unraveling," he said. "The downside of it is you do all this work and then they're gone."

In May, Brown finished his required 1,600 hours of clinical training. He is working on a doctor of ministry in pastoral counseling and psychotherapy. No longer a "dog with just one trick," he wants to keep his options for the future open.

Teaching and counseling are possibilities, but for now, he is content in his corner of Metroplex Hospital. The animated father of two is also a fan of the "Far Side" cartoon. Not unlike Gary Larson, "I think I've developed a knack for short little observations on life," he said.

He has rechanneled the creative side of himself that found an outlet in preaching into "Chaplain's Corner," a column that runs in the Metroplex in-house newsletter. He has folders full of ideas for columns that sometimes incubate for several months before reaching print. He's also toying with the idea of combining his pieces into a book.

"I love being able to share myself with people," he said. "It's nice to have an audience again — something to say and somebody listening."

Walker to speak at Hiland

Hiland Pentecostal Holiness Church, 18th and Banks, is hosting the Rev. Arnold Walker in a series of meetings at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, Nov. 6 through 9.

Walker, now pastor of First Assembly of God, Cameron, has pastored churches in Texas and Arkansas. He is a graduate of Southwestern Assemblies of God College where he earned a bachelor of science degree. He has served in several capacities in the North Texas District of the Assemblies of God on a sectional level and is now secretary/treasurer of the Bryan Section of the North Texas District.

Special music will be provided in services. The public is invited.

Religion briefs

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Many people cannot imagine how not being able to hear could affect their lives, severing even spiritual ties when deaf people cannot listen to their minister.

"What deafness does is it cuts off communication," said the Rev. Marty Price of the First Baptist Mission of the Deaf.

"You can go without sight, you can go without limbs, you can go without just about anything except for interaction," Price said. "Deafness isolates."

Most of the 80 members of Price's church are deaf. The rest are people who can hear who come with deaf family members or friends. It's one of only a handful of churches of its kind in South Carolina, said Price, who can hear and is fluent in sign language.

There are a few differences from church meetings for those who can hear. People don't bow their heads during public prayer, so they can watch the person who is signing. During private prayer, someone flashes the lights to signify it is time for something else.

The deaf church opens opportunities, said member Frances Smith.

"In a hearing church, deaf people can't teach and can't do any jobs, they just kind of sit there," she said

Unemployment rate at four-year low; average hourly wages up

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR.
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's unemployment rate dropped to a four-year low of 5.8 percent in October. Today's report also showed the average hourly wage posting the biggest gain in 11 years, an increase likely to trigger a new round of interest rate hikes.

The Labor Department said non-farm payrolls posted a moderate 194,000 gain last month, smaller than the 230,000 to 250,000 most economists were expecting. The numbers are adjusted to account for seasonal hiring fluctuations.

A figure so far below expectations would normally be calming news on Wall Street. But the report noted also that the average hourly wage was up eight cents, the biggest increase since September 1983.

Bond traders, who worry at the slightest sign of inflation, were likely to react negatively to the increase and the news likely will provide further impetus for the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates.

Economists no longer doubt whether the Fed will raise interest rates a sixth time this year. Speculation now centers on when and by how much.

The report is the last major piece of economic news before Tuesday's elections. Democrats, expected to suffer sizable losses in Congress, need rosy economic news, like the lower unemployment rate and the higher average hourly wage.

But other reports this week have provided indications that inflation could be looming, leaving the Fed with little option but to push up interest rates to calm already jittery investors and to keep the faltering dollar from sliding further.

"There have been just too many numbers crying out for the Fed to move," said Robert G. Dederick, chief economist with Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "The markets would be very disappointed if they didn't."

A jobs report is the latest piece of news suggesting that the economy is still growing robustly despite five increases this year in short-term interest rates.

A report Monday showed personal income up 0.6 percent in September, the eighth consecutive monthly gain and the largest increase in five months. The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that construction spending surged 1.6 percent in September, posting the biggest gain in six months.

In its monthly appraisal of the nation's industrial health, the National Association of Purchasing Management said Tuesday that U.S. manufacturing posted its 14th straight expansion in October to the best level in nearly seven years. The bad news was that prices rose, bottlenecks grew and shortages surfaced for supplies ranging from wood chips to truck axles.

"The economic momentum is pretty strong," said Sung Wop Sohn, chief economist with Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "I don't think the issue is whether to raise interest rates. I think the issue is going to be how much."

The average work week was 34.9 hours, the highest level since February 1987. In the manufacturing sector, which posted a healthy gain of 40,000 jobs, the average work week was 42.1 hours, the highest level since April.

The unemployment rate declined from 5.9 percent last month, which was the lowest level since October 1990.

But the number of jobs added to the nation's nonfarm payrolls was the smallest increase since January, when 101,000 new hires were reported. At that time, the Midwest and East were besieged by bitter winter weather.

The Labor Department said 5,000 new construction jobs were created. As expected, most of the new jobs were in the service sector, where 153,000 new hires were reported. That included 51,000 retail positions. Hiring at various levels of government was down by 4,000.

Economists prefer that most new jobs come in the private sector.

Bureau of Labor Statistics Commissioner Katharine Abraham said 1.2 million jobs have been created this year, with the number of out-of-work people declining from 1.1 million to 7.6 million. The jobless rate has declined from 6.7 percent in January.

Dederick and Sohn said they both expected the Federal Open Market Committee to push rates up when it meets Nov. 15. Dederick said a particularly strong employment number might prompt quicker action.

Dederick said regulators can't afford not to act.

"If you sit around and do nothing in view of the recent data and inflation gets out of hand, you will be deemed a considerable failure," Dederick said.

Conversely, both men noted, regulators must be careful about raising interest rates so late in the year, when most projections suggest economic growth will slow next year anyway.

Dederick said there is "always the danger that you'll do too much" and "a danger that you'll do too little."

"You have to balance the risks," he said. "The problem is complicated by the fact that there is a lag between action and reaction. But given what we know now, the safest thing would be for the Fed to take another step."

Twelve jurors selected in Simpson trial

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They look more like his fans than his peers.

One juror in the O.J. Simpson trial drives a Pepsi truck. Two others work for the post office. There is an insurance claim adjuster, a flight attendant, a courier, a job counselor, a teacher and an Amtrak manager.

About the closest any of the 12 jurors come to being a peer of the millionaire football star and actor is a man who works in quality control for Hertz Corp., the company for which Simpson was a spokesman.

Legal analysts said Simpson should be pleased with the panel selected Thursday after a tense, grueling day in which attorneys exercised their peremptory challenges. Fifteen alternates still must be chosen.

"I think he's got a great jury," said Southwestern University law professor Robert Pugsley, who, like many experts, defines a great jury as a future hung jury.

Eight jurors are women, four are men. Eight are black, one white, one Hispanic and two of mixed race. Their ages range from 22 to 52. Two have college degrees, nine have high school diplomas and one made it through 11th grade with some vocational classes.

The racial makeup favors Simpson. Public opinion polls show blacks are more likely than whites to believe Simpson is innocent.

The wild card, analysts said, is gender. Prosecutors are expected to introduce evidence that Simpson stalked and beat his ex-wife.

"Given the domestic abuse scenario in this case, it remains to be seen how this will play with (the women)," said UCLA law professor Peter Arenella.

Only one juror witnessed domestic violence first-hand — a half-white, half American Indian railroad employee who said he saw his father beat his mother and it had a "profound" effect on him.

Simpson is accused of murdering his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Opening arguments probably won't begin until January.

The task of finding 15 alternates begins Tuesday with in-depth questioning of another group of prospects. These selections are considered critical; the expected six-month duration of the trial and the chance of jurors being exposed to media coverage virtually ensures that some jurors will be lost.

After the jurors were chosen, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito welcomed them to what he called the "league of judges" and said, "I believe you can rise to the occasion despite the unusual circumstances."

But after weeks of media deprivation and questioning by high-powered lawyers — and faced with the prospect of spending several months housed in a hotel — the jurors looked as if they could barely raise their hands to take the oath. One woman who had repeatedly expressed reservations about sequestration buried her head in her hands.

Simpson didn't look much better. After being very involved in the selection process, he appeared dazed and glum when the panel was finally seated. Later, he hugged his attorneys.

Both sides agreed on a jury on the first day of peremptory challenges — the final stage of jury selection in which lawyers can dismiss prospects without giving a reason. Each side exercised 10 of their 20 challenges.

Lawyers aren't allowed to dismiss jurors because of race or gender, however. After nearly every challenge, lawyers gathered privately with the judge to complain the other side was bouncing panelists for race reasons. The judge didn't agree.

Of the 10 prospects challenged by the prosecution, eight were black and two were white.

The defense challenged five whites, one black, one Hispanic, two American Indians and one person of mixed race. The final word on who stayed and who was excused appeared to fall to Simpson, who would nod in agreement before each move.

A CBS News poll of 1,264 people released Sept. 26, the day jury selection began, showed 30 percent thought Simpson was guilty. But only 6 percent of the blacks polled thought he was guilty, compared with 39 percent of the whites. The poll had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Abortion doctor's killer sentenced to death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The killer of an abortion doctor and an escort remained calm and defiant as a jury recommended that he die in the electric chair.

"You have a responsibility to protect your neighbor's life and to use force if necessary to do so," a subdued Paul Hill told the jury Thursday before they began considering his fate. "In an effort to suppress this truth, you may mix my blood with the blood of the unborn and those who have fought to defend the oppressed."

"However, truth and righteousness will prevail. May God help you to protect the unborn as you would want to be protected."

The jury then deliberated nearly four hours before choosing the death sentence instead of life in prison for Hill. It took just 20 minutes Wednesday to convict him of murder.

Hill showed no emotion as the recommendation was read. Circuit Judge Frank Bell is not bound by it and could give Hill a life sentence. A sentencing date was not immediately set. Death sentences are automatically appealed in Florida.

Leaders of the National Organization for Women and the Feminist Majority had said Hill shouldn't be executed and called on the government to do more to round up anti-abortion terrorists.

Some anti-abortion activists said Hill's execution would help their cause. "The hope is that it will cause people to open their eyes to what is happening in our country and act, finally, like abortion is murder," said Donna Bray, director of Defenders of the Defenders of Life in Bowie, Md.

Another Hill supporter, the Rev. David Trosch, said an execution could lead to more anti-abortion violence.

"In time it will motivate people," said Trosch, a Roman Catholic priest from Mobile, Ala., who has been removed from the priesthood for advocating murder. "Particularly when Paul has actually been executed, it will motivate people to become very active, to take action, violent action if necessary."

Hill, who represented himself, offered no defense after the judge barred him from arguing that the slayings were justifiable to save fetuses. He called no witnesses and asked no questions of those who testified against him.

Wielding a 12-gauge shotgun, Hill ambushed Dr. John Bayard Britton, 69, retired Air Force Lt. Col. James H. Barrett, 74, and Barrett's wife, June, 68, as the three arrived at the Ladies Center clinic July 29.

Hill was convicted of attempted murder for wounding Mrs. Barrett.

Russia's economics minister, deputy prime minister resigns

MOSCOW (AP) — Alexander Shokhin announced his resignation today as Russia's economics minister and deputy prime minister, making him the latest victim of last month's "Black Tuesday" ruble crisis.

Three officials already have been fired in a continuing government shakeup that resulted from the Oct. 11 financial panic.

Shokhin had suggested a day earlier that he might lose his job after a member of a top-level Security Council commission investigating the ruble crash said more dismissals could be expected.

Earlier today, there was more fallout from the crisis that raised widespread doubt about Russia's reforms. President Boris Yeltsin named as finance minister a top budget official who spent five months in jail last year on charges of bribe-taking.

Vladimir Panskov replaces acting Finance Minister Andrei Vavilov, who spent only three weeks in the post after stepping in for the fired Sergei Dubinin in the wake of the ruble collapse.

Panskov, 50, who has held high positions in the Finance Ministry and State Tax Service, was cleared of corruption allegations earlier this year.

Shokhin said at a press conference that he decided to quit after hearing about the Panskov appointment.

"It's the first time I've had the sense that I won't be able to do what I want in the government," he said of the continuing shakeup.

He said he also would quit his deputy prime minister's job because "I don't leave in parts."

Shokhin will remain a deputy in the State Duma, or lower house of parliament.

"I'll have a chance to think while I'm in the Duma," he said.

Shokhin becomes the fourth official to lose his job as the result of the one-day collapse of the ruble, which has regained much of its losses since the sudden 21 percent drop of three weeks ago.

Yeltsin fired Russia's top foreign-currency regulator, Viktor Krunya, on Thursday. Besides also ousting Dubinin, Yeltsin pressured Viktor Gerashchenko to resign as Central Bank chairman.

It became clear that Vavilov would not retain the finance minister's post this week when he was reprimanded for his role in the ruble crisis.

According to the ITAR-Tass news agency, the government charged Vavilov with "allowing a critical situation on the financial market, which created a threat to the economic security of the Russian Federation."

Panskov has been deputy head of the finance and budget directorate in Yeltsin's office since March.

Court says jilted spouses can't sue company over extramarital affair case

AUSTIN (AP) — The jilted spouses of a boss and secretary who had an affair say the company should have done something to stop it.

The Texas Supreme Court, however, ruled Thursday that the company wasn't liable.

The dispute stemmed from a 1991 extramarital affair between Joe Golias and Pam Snyder, according to court records.

Golias was vice president of Helena Laboratories Corp.; Ms. Snyder, his executive secretary.

Golias and his wife Allison separated in March 1991, the court documents said. A month later, Golias and Ms. Snyder had an affair, which lasted about six weeks.

Ms. Snyder's husband, Robert, and Golias' wife, Allison, found out about the affair and sued Helena Laboratories, saying the company had a duty to prevent its employees from engaging in extramarital affairs.

Add into the mix that Joe's parents, Tipton and Ann Golias, were principals in the company. Tipton was the president and board chairman.

But company officials said they knew nothing about the affair between Joe and Pam.

A district court in Beaumont ruled in favor of Helena Laboratories, but the 9th Court of Appeals reversed that decision saying there were numerous questions that had to be resolved.

Those questions included: What were Joe and Pam doing on corporate property and corporate time? What did Tipton know about the relationship and when did he know it? And what should Tipton or Ann have done about it?

But the Texas Supreme Court overturned the appeals court and affirmed the trial court's summary judgment in favor of Helena Laboratories.

"This court has never recognized an independent cause of action for negligent interference with the familial relationship," the Supreme Court said in its opinion.

Joe and Allison Golias were divorced in March 1992; Robert and Pam Snyder obtained a divorce in November 1991.

To the Independent Voters of Texas

NEXT TUESDAY I URGE YOU TO VOTE FOR ANN RICHARDS FOR GOVERNOR OF TEXAS.

Governor Richards is clearly the most qualified candidate.

She is one of the greatest governors in the history of Texas.

She is smart, tough, and principled.

Ann Richards is NOT FOR SALE AT ANY PRICE.

Ann Richards is a true independent. She listens to the people of Texas, and does not hesitate to disagree with the Democratic Party, or the President of the United States when the interests of the people of Texas are involved. Washington understands that you DON'T MESS WITH TEXAS with Ann Richards as Governor.

When Governor Richards took office, the Texas economy was in a slump.

- Texas was facing a six billion dollar budget shortfall.
- Today, three and one-half years later, Texas has a 2.2 billion dollar surplus.

Governor Richards works night and day to build and improve Texas.

- She has traveled all over the United States, urging companies to move to Texas.
- The jobs are pouring in.
- For the past three years, Texas has created more private sector jobs than any other state.
- Here's one for the Guinness Book of Records — Last year Texas created more new jobs than California, Florida and New York combined.

November 1, 1994
Page Two

Governor Richards is a former school teacher. She is focused on improving the Texas education system. The result is that SAT scores are the highest they have been in fourteen years, and the drop-out rate is at an all time low.

HOW'S THAT FOR RESULTS!

Governor Ann Richards obviously knows how to run this thirty-five billion dollar a year business we call Texas. She knows how to get people from all different walks of life to work together as a team to prepare Texas for the 21st Century.

NEVER FORGET, THE STATE OF TEXAS IS BIG BUSINESS — NOT A SPORT.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ARE A LOT TALK — BUT THE WINNER MUST KNOW HOW TO GET RESULTS!

When you go to the polling booth next Tuesday, it is your turn at bat. Drive one out of the park for Texas — vote for a proven, all-star player who has been knocking the ball out of the park for the people of Texas.

Ann Richards has earned our vote. We need more people like her in public office.

Texas has a great future. Why put it at risk?

As you think about who to vote for next Tuesday, remember that you own this thirty-five billion dollar a year business. You are getting ready to hire somebody to run Texas. The choice is clear.

Hire the person with a proven record of performance in running this massive operation — ANN RICHARDS.

Sincerely,
Ross Perot

Vote for Ann Richards

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, married and have four daughters. Two months ago, I discovered a lump in my breast, so I made an appointment with my doctor. He examined me and sent me to see a surgeon, who did a needle biopsy.

A week later, I learned it was a malignant tumor (cancer), so I'm scheduled to have my breast removed in two weeks.

Abby, I am so sick of hearing doctors say that women under the age of 35 are not at risk for breast cancer. Although there is no history of breast cancer in my family, I am living proof that cancer can strike anyone at any age.

If it weren't for doing monthly breast exams on myself, I never would have discovered the lump.

Please tell your readers to feel for "lumps" in their breasts regularly. (Men, too. Although breast cancer is rare in men — it does occur.

TEENA

DEAR TEENA: There are going to be a lot of prayers for you — mine included. Thank you for writing to warn my readers. Early detection has saved many a life.

Readers: For more information on breast cancer, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having a disagreement, which I hope you can settle. He says I'm overreacting, but I think I have every right to be upset.

Ever since I married "Norm" three years ago, I have supported him and his children from a previous marriage on a teacher's salary. Needless to say, we live from paycheck to paycheck. Our credit cards are maxed out, and we have had to borrow money from our parents to live.

Nine months ago, Norm's sister "Emily" asked him to install heating and air conditioning in her new home. He did, but she hasn't paid Norm one dime! I estimated the total amount to be somewhere between $7,000 and $10,000. With this, we could have paid off almost all we owe on our credit cards, and also for the repairs to our house and car.

I fell used. It's one thing for Norm to expect me to support our family, but for Emily to take advantage of me too is a bit much! I know she has no intention of paying him, and he has no intention of asking her for the money.

Emily's income is three times greater than ours, and she just came into a substantial inheritance, so she can well afford to pay Norm for his work.

The financial strain has taken a toll on our marriage. Am I wrong to be upset?

FED UP IN ILLINOIS

DEAR FED UP: You are well within your rights to be upset. I suggest that you speak candidly with your sister-in-law and explain that you desperately need the money Norm earned for working on her home. Taking this situation into your own hands may create some friction between you and your husband, but, as I see it, it's the most sensible solution.

Officials break ground memorial of Holocaust

NEW YORK (AP) — On a dusty, windblown lot within view of the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island, survivors of Nazi death camps joined government officials recently to break ground for a museum honoring victims of the Holocaust.

When completed in late 1996, the $15 million structure will become the metropolitan region's principal memorial to the 6 million people who died during the Holocaust. The 85-foot-high granite building, with bronze doors and a steeped-louvre roof, will house photographs, documents and other artifacts.

Fall Festival this Saturday

St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church School will have its Fall Festival on Saturday at the school, 23rd Street and Perryton Parkway.

Scheduled from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., the festival will include a spaghetti dinner beginning at 5 p.m., as well as games and food booths, according to Jana Meyer, home and school president for St. Vincent's.

Raffle tickets for the Dallas Cowboys-Washington Redskins game will be available, she said.

Meyer said the school's festival is the big fund raiser for the fall.

Center recognizes institutions involved with matching contributions program

The Harrington Cancer Center has recognized the area financial institutions involved with the area bank matching contribution program once again. 1993's recognition came at the Cancer Center's "The Stars At Night" special event on Oct. 8. The following institutions were recognized in four categories:

Largest Annual Contribution: First National Bank, Panhandle; Eugene Phillips, president

Largest Account Balance: First National Bank, Perryton-Booker Branch; Carl Ellis, president

Account Fund Balance — Dec. 31, 1993: $432,497.13

Banks Raising Over $500.00 in 1993 Deposits: First State Bank, Canadian; First National Bank, Panhandle; First National Bank Perryton — Booker Branch; Perryton National Bank

Banks Participating in the 1993 Area Bank Matching Contribution Program: Citizens State Bank, Dalhart; Western National Bank, Amarillo; First National Bank, Borger; First National Bank, Canadian; First State Bank, Canadian; First State Bank, Dimmitt; Boatmen's First National Bank of Amarillo, Dumas Branch;

Friona State Bank, Friona; Fritch State Bank, Fritch; First National Bank, Hereford; First National Bank, Canadian — Higgins Branch; Kress National Bank, Kress; First Bank & Trust, Memphis; Memphis State Bank, Memphis; First State Bank, Miami; Citizens Bank and Trust, Pampa; National Bank of Commerce, Pampa; First National Bank, Panhandle; First National Bank Perryton — Booker Branch; Perryton National Bank, Perryton; First National Bank, Spearman; First State Bank, Stratford; Wellington State Bank, Wellington; First National Bank, Wheeler.

Area financial institutions actively support the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center by encouraging citizen gifts and support to the cancer center. Active customer donor accounts are those which receive gifts at least quarterly. Each institution receives a plaque honoring its trustee status and a traveling loving cup is presented annually at the center's special event to honor the most donation — productive trustee for the year. The Harrington Cancer Center matches funds raised in each bank on an annual basis. As the accounts increase, the center uses only the interest for patient care operations. Chrysanthemum colors are wide ranging

By JAMES E. WALTERS
For AP Special Features

It wasn't too long ago that chrysanthemums were mainly yellow in coloration and known as the "golden flower of the Orient." Now you can have them in just about any color except blue.

The transition has accelerated over the past 10 years, says Edward Higgins, product manager for Yoder Brothers of Barborton, Ohio, the world's largest producer of garden mums.

"The colors of the No. 1-, No. 2- and No. 3-selling mums last year were red, lavender and yellow," says Higgins. "No telling what we will have this year."

Early in this decade, yellow still was the top choice.

Since Yoder, like other producers, is in the business of developing plants that consumers will want to buy, it tries to stay abreast of color trends in its plant-breeding program.

Yoder's introduction this year include variations of yellow, red, bronze, pink, orange, purple and mahogany.

Later-blooming varieties are another major change in mums in recent years. Yoder calls them "season extenders." The normal flowering time for garden mums runs from early to late September while "season-extenders" flower into late October, says Higgins.

He lists them as autumn Denise, a red-bronze decorative type; deviness, pastel-bronze decorative; Julia, yellow daisy; Kimberly, pink daisy; Sarah, bronze-quilled decorative; sunny Denise, yellow decorative; Valerie, purple decorative, and yellow Sarah, yellow-quilled decorative.

As for flower form, decoratives and daisy types lead the sales chart, followed by spiders, anemones, buttons and pompons. A rounded and mounded habit is the most desired plant shape.

Higgins favors spring planting in a sunny location to better establish roots before winter but says already flowering plants may be placed in any location or container where a splash of color is desired. Plant in fertile, well-drained soil. Rainfall in many areas is sufficient, but keep plants from wilting.

During the growing season, work a general fertilizer such as 5-10-5 into the soil at the rate of 0.5 to 1 pound per 100 square feet. Repeat monthly until August. Spring planted mums will need pinching but this should be stopped around July 10 in northern states and Aug. 1 in southern areas.

Space plants 15 to 20 inches from the center of one plant to the center of the next.

Some other recommendations: Keep soil moist as winter approaches. Don't prune back plants until the following spring except in warmer climates, where they are likely to continue growing.

In cooler climates, wait to mulch plants until the ground begins to freeze. Remove the mulch in the spring. Always thoroughly water a freshly planted mum. Select plants with dark green leaf color, absence of flower and leaf damage, and strong stems.

"It is important to choose the best varieties for your region," according to Higgins. "Mums do best at temperatures ranging from 70 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit during the day and 55 to 65 degrees F at night. Excessively high day and night temperatures can cause loss of a variety's characteristic color."

For those who live in hot climates, he recommends Sarah and yellow Sarah in the season-extender group.

Garden mums are classified as perennials, plants that die back to the roots in the fall and grow back in the spring. For generations they were known as short-day plants, because they flowered in the fall when there was less than 12 hours of daylight per day.

Scientists in this century learned how to trick them into flowering by artificially reducing daylight to simulate fall.

Karen Keyes, a stained glass artist, will be among the exhibitors at the Crafts Fair Sale set for Saturday at the Lefors Civic Center. Among the various other crafts for sale will be ceramics, woodworking and dolls. A bake sale is also set for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Some of the proceeds will go towards the Lefors Senior Citizens Center.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your financial aspects look very good at this time, but you'll have to earn what you hope to receive. If you don't look at this as the hard way, you'll have fun prospering. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Whether teaching, selling or merely conveying information, you will be very effective today at getting your points across. The bits of wisdom you have to offer are helpful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might experience some unexpected changes that buffet you about a bit. However, when the turbulence subsides, the going should be smooth as silk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're likely to fare better today in a partnership than operating independently. The results could be exceptional if you have a dynamic ally.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Objectives you establish for yourself today are achievable, because you'll not wane or waffle, regardless of the obstacles you may have to overcome.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Challenges are apt to stimulate you today. You'll take pride and pleasure in doing what you have to do well. Your example could inspire others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be content with things as they are today if you think you can make them better. Make improvements even if they are difficult.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your attitude and behavior today can earn you the respect of others. Live up to your word even if you feel it benefits the other guy more than you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your financial position will be enhanced if you focus on ways to add to your earnings today. Chances are you already know of something with good potential.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Some collaborative project is not being managed properly. Everyone knows this, but no one knows how to correct it except you. It's time to volunteer your services.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be optimistic today; you're likely to finish stronger than you started. Focus on victory and don't blink.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Listen to what others say today, but don't be overwhelmed by their suggestions and comments. When you stop and think about it, you'll see you're on the same wavelength.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Glenn Robinson agreed to terms with the Milwaukee Bucks on a 10-year guaranteed deal worth approximately $68 million. Robinson, the top pick in the NBA draft after averaging 30.3 points as a junior at Purdue, had hoped to become the first $100 million athlete in professional sports. The pact is the biggest guaranteed deal ever for a rookie.

The Bucks said "the signing is expected to take place as soon as a final draft of the contract is reviewed by both parties, results of physical examinations are received and insurance is finalized."

PHOENIX (AP) — Charles Barkley burned his corneas when he rubbed body lotion into his eyes during an Eric Clapton concert Wednesday night. Barkley, who will miss Phoenix's opener tonight at Sacramento, was already questionable because of a strained stomach muscle.

NEW YORK (AP) — A meeting of the NCAA Men's Division I Basketball Committee will decide if an attempt will be made to deny tournament credentials to newspapers that print daily betting lines on college games.

The committee, chaired by Kansas athletic director Bob Frederick, will hear a report from NCAA legal counsel during a meeting at East Rutherford, N.J., Nov. 30-Dec. 1. Members of the Associated Press Sports Editors and the United States Basketball Writers Association will attend the session and have indicated they will fight any such action legally.

BASEBALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for players and owners held a secret lunch meeting with mediator W.J. Utery and agreed to resume talks next week.

Utery, appointed by the Clinton administration Oct. 14, said the sides will negotiate from next Thursday through Sunday, probably in Washington.

NEW YORK (AP) — Four season-ticket holders sued major league baseball, its 28 teams and owners and acting commissioner Bud Selig, accusing them of fraud for selling tickets worth less than advertised.

In papers filed in Manhattan's state Supreme Court, the ticket holders asked for class-action status on behalf of all season-ticket holders, that they get their money back and the teams be forced to give up unjust profits.

DALLAS (AP) — Mickey Mantle has filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against The Upper Deck Co., claiming the trading-card maker wouldn't fulfill its contract with him because of his alcohol problems.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati unconditionally released catcher Joe Oliver, who had a $2.5 million contract last season. Oliver, 29, played in only six games because of an arthritic condition in his ankles.

FOOTBALL

BOSTON (AP) — New England coach Bill Parcells was hospitalized in good condition after complaining of lightheadedness.

Parcells, 53, who had heart bypass surgery in February 1992, checked himself into Massachusetts General Hospital about 7 p.m., hospital spokeswoman Michelle Marcella said.

DALLAS (AP) — A subpoena for results of blood-alcohol tests on Dallas offensive lineman Erik Williams was served on Parkland Memorial Hospital, said Mike Gillett, assistant Dallas county district attorney.

Gillett said it was not clear when the tests would be turned over to the Dallas County grand jury investigating Williams' Oct. 24 traffic accident.

Meanwhile, Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith escaped injury in a two-car collision near the team's training facility.

NEW YORK (AP) — Detroit's Barry Sanders, who leads the NFL in rushing with 1,035 yards, was selected the NFC offensive player for October.

Minnesota cornerback Anthony Parker, the first defensive player with touchdowns in three straight games, and New Orleans kick returner Tyrone Hughes were also honored in the NFC. San Diego running back Natrone Means and kicker John Carney and Pittsburgh linebacker Greg Lloyd are the AFC selections.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cincinnati linebacker James Francis was fined $12,500 by the NFL for a late hit on Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman last Sunday.

New York Jets defensive lineman New Donald Evans was fined $10,000 for an altercation with referee Bernie Kukar in Sunday's game with Indianapolis.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State coach Jim Walden said he will resign after the season. The Cyclones are 0-7-1 this season and 28-54-3 in eight seasons under Walden.

TENNIS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jennifer Capriati, who has not played competitively since the 1993 U.S. Open, accepted a wild-card invitation for next week's Virginia Slims of Philadelphia.

Capriati, 18, went through a 28-day drug rehabilitation program after she was charged with misdemeanor drug possession last May.

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras beat No. 16 Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands 6-4, 7-6 (7-3) in the $2.25 million Paris Open to advance to a quarterfinal match with U.S. Open champion Andre Agassi.

Agassi, seeded eighth, defeated ninth-seeded Todd Martin 6-2, 7-5 to qualify for the ATP World Championships.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Martina Navratilova, playing in her next to last tournament, beat Amy Frazier 2-6, 6-4, 6-1 to reach the semifinals of the Bank of the West Classic.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Top-seeded Alberto Berasategui of Spain beat countryman Jordi Arrese 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) in the third round of the Topper Open.

QUEBEC (AP) — Top-seeded Amanda Coetzer of South Africa routed Mercedes Paz of Argentina 6-3, 6-1 to reach the quarterfinals of the Bell Challenge.

Rushing title slipping away from Cowboys' Smith

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — Emmitt Smith sees his fourth consecutive rushing title starting to run away from him on the fleet feet of Barry Sanders.

"I never say never but the first half of the season was very difficult and it's probably going to get harder," Smith said. "All the defenses we play are keyed to stop the run. They are trying to shut it down and sometimes they do. But we're still winning ball games."

The defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys have rolled to a 7-1 start, best in the NFL along with San Diego, but Smith has drifted 287 yards behind Detroit's Sanders in the battle for the coveted rushing title.

Sanders has 1,035 yards to 748 yards for Smith, who is seeking to become the only runner besides Jim Brown to win the title four consecutive seasons.

"I think even more than in the past teams are looking to stop the run," Smith. "They are selling out to get that done."

"Am I the only guy in the league teams are out to stop? Everybody else seems to have an easier go. Maybe it's a compliment. I don't know whether to pat myself on the back or be mad about it."

Smith quickly pointed out he didn't want to be construed as whining.

"I'm happy we're winning," Smith said. "I'm having a pretty good season but it's not what people are used to seeing. I'm not giving up on the title. Anything's possible."

Smith meets the New York

Giants on Monday Night Football and he had two big days against them in 1993. After gaining 117 yards in the first game, Smith, playing with a separated shoulder, gained 168 yards on 32 carries in an overtime win that gave Dallas the NFC East championship.

"This might be one of those years I'll be happy to get a grand (1,000 yards)," Smith said. "It's been a little frustrating. I'm struggling a little."

Then Smith looked over to the locker next to him where fullback Daryl Johnston was dressing. Johnston is one of the best blockers in the NFL and a prime reason why Smith has won three consecutive NFL rushing titles.

"We're getting our bleep stuffed," Smith joked.

Johnston joked back

bleep stuffed."

Center Mark Stepnoski said the answer to the jammed lines of scrimmage was the victories the Cowboys are getting.

"Everytime other teams load up to stop Emmitt we have to keep making them pay," Stepnoski said. "We'll make 'em pay until they come out of it."

Emmitt escapes injury

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith was in a car wreck on his way to practice Thursday but escaped injury.

Smith's car and another vehicle collided at an intersection about two miles from Valley Ranch, where the Cowboys practice.

The accident occurred about 9:15 a.m. A motorist turned left in front Smith and their vehicles collided, police Lt. Richard Bailey said.

Neither driver was ticketed, Bailey said.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones drove to the scene and picked up Smith after the accident.

Smith was taken to Baylor University Medical Center for tests and observation but was released within a few hours and was doing fine, the team said.

"Things happen when there's traffic on the road in the morning," Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said. "He seemed fine."

Cowboys offensive lineman Erik Williams is out for the season with a serious knee injury from an Oct. 24 accident in which his Mercedes-Benz hit a concrete retaining wall. A Dallas County grand jury has been reviewing the Williams accident.

Pampa senior Marcy Leal leads a group of runners around Central Park during a Thursday workout. Leal competes in the regional cross country meet Saturday in Lubbock. (Pampa News photo)

Pampa senior Marcy Leal competes in the Region 1-4A cross country meet Saturday at Mae Simmons Park in Lubbock.

Leal qualified for regionals by winning the District 1-4A meet last weekend at Amarillo's Thompson Park. She edged Canyon freshman Stacey Stone, turning in a time of 12:44.

An icy wind that gusted up to more than 30 miles an hour didn't seem to bother Leal, who won by about 30 meters.

"It was nippy and breezy at Amarillo and that helped Marcy," said Pampa cross country coach Mark Elms. "She's right at home when it's cold and we're hoping that's the way it is in Lubbock."

Regional competition is nothing new for Leal, who is an outstanding distance runner on the high school track team. This will be her third trip to regionals. She won the district meet last season, placed third in regionals and 33rd at the state meet in Georgetown. As a freshman she was fifth in district, ninth at regionals and 29th at state.

Elms believes Leal has an excellent chance of bringing home the first-place medal.

"The two girls who beat her last year have graduated. Looking at some of the times from around the Fort Worth area this year, Marcy's times were better. Of course you don't know what the weather was like, but if there are 10 girls who can beat her, they're going to have to convince me, because I don't think there is," Elms said.

The top 10 individuals advance to the state meet later this month in Georgetown.

UH football program may be put on probation

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston has admitted committing at least one major NCAA rules violation and proposed that its football program be placed on two years probation, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

The Chronicle reported that the infraction stems from John Jenkins' tenure as UH's football coach, according to an unidentified source close to the case.

UH has informed the NCAA that it believes there is sufficient evidence to warrant a finding that members of Jenkins' staff arranged for Cougars running back Ostell Miles to receive furniture for his off-campus apartment in 1991, the Chronicle source said.

The inquiries stemmed from allegations of impropriety in Jenkins' program made by former Cougars Assistant Coach Steve Staggs.

The newspaper reported UH has suggested that its football program be placed on two years' probation with sanctions that include a loss of two scholarships and a reduction in practice time. UH did not propose bans on bowls or television appearances.

The Committee on Infractions can approve the proposed penalties or seek harsher sanctions.

The infraction involving Miles, a highly recruited player who spent less than one season with the Cougars, occurred less than three years after the university's football program had been placed on NCAA probation for a series of similar violations under Coach Bill Yeoman.

The timing of the violation means UH is technically eligible to receive the NCAA's so-called "death penalty" for repeat violators. However, the NCAA committee been reluctant to impose that penalty in recent cases.

College polls could be headed for another spilt decision

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

For 11 straight seasons, from 1979-1989, the two major college football polls crowned the same national champion.

The streak stopped in 1990, when the media picked Colorado and the coaches selected Georgia Tech. The following year, the title was shared by Miami (media) and Washington (coaches).

Now, for the third time in five years, the polls could be headed for a split decision.

Nebraska is No. 1 with The Associated Press media and Penn State is No. 1 with the USA Today-CNN coaches. Since they can't play in a bowl due to conference commitments, there could be co-champs again if they both go undefeated.

"That would be the only fair way to do it," ESPN commentator

Lee Corso said. "Right now, they're head and shoulders above the rest."

That's certainly the way it seemed last Saturday when Nebraska (9-0) dominated then-No. 2 Colorado 24-7 and Penn State (7-0) pulverized then-No. 21 Ohio State 63-14.

Despite handing Ohio State its worst defeat in 48 years, Penn State lost ground in both polls.

The Nittany Lions remained No. 1 with the coaches, but their lead over Nebraska was cut to two points. The Cornhuskers jumped over Penn State in the media poll, edging the Lions by six points.

Nebraska benefited by beating an undefeated team in a much-hyped, nationally televised game. While Penn State was overpowering, it came against a team that had already lost to Washington and Illinois.

Colorado and they didn't think Ohio State was that good," said AP voter Mark Blandschun of the Boston Globe, who has picked Nebraska No. 1 the past three weeks.

In first-place votes, Nebraska leads Penn State 33-28 in AP and 32-30 in USA Today-CNN. The other AP first-place vote went to third-ranked Auburn (8-0), which is barred from the coaches' poll because the school is on NCAA probation and can't play in a bowl.

Auburn has won 19 straight games over two seasons, but the Tigers probably can't finish first in AP unless Nebraska and Penn State lose.

"They need help," said ESPN's Beano Cook. "As long as Nebraska and Penn State are undefeated, they don't have a chance."

With neither team facing a Top

25 opponent before the bowls, there's a good chance Nebraska and Penn State will remain atop the polls at the end of the regular season. So it's likely to come down to their bowl games, where Nebraska would face a good news-bad news situation.

The bad news is Nebraska would probably play No. 5 Miami or No. 8 Florida State in the Orange Bowl, where the Huskers are a combined 0-5 against those teams since 1984. The good news is a Nebraska victory would impress voters more than Penn State beating a lower ranked Pac-10 team in the Rose Bowl.

"That's Nebraska's ace in the hole," Blandschun said. "If they beat a top 5 team in the Orange Bowl, they could win both polls."

A split championship would once again lead to calls for a playoff system, an idea rejected in June by an NCAA committee and school presidents.

"The window was open for a playoff and they had every opportunity to go through it, but they chose not to," said AP voter Ivan Maisel of Newsday. "If anything, we're further away from a playoff than we were before."

A new bowl alliance next season will increase the chances of a No. 1 vs. No. 2 postseason game. But a clear-cut championship isn't guaranteed because the Rose Bowl isn't part of the alliance. The Rose's contract with the Big Ten and Pac-10 runs through the 2001 game.

"The real bad guys in this are the Rose Bowl, the Big Ten and the Pac-10," Blandschun said. "If they would join the 20th century and make their bowl open, we wouldn't need a playoff because the two best teams could play every year."

Breeders' Cup

Lukas' stable is back on top of thoroughbred world

By HARRY KING
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Having his son Jeff by his side again would alone make Breeders' Cup day a success for D. Wayne Lukas.

He has eight horses entered in four of Saturday's races and three — Tabasco Cat in the $3 million Classic, Flanders in the $1 million Juvenile Fillies and Timber Country in the $1 million Juvenile — are morning line favorites.

"We could win 'em all and it'd be a great year, and we could lose 'em all and it'd still be great," Lukas said. "When the sun sets Nov. 5, we'll have had a great year, no matter what."

His stable is back on top of the thoroughbred world, but more importantly, his son and No. 1 assistant is working again.

Last December, Jeff was run over by Tabasco Cat. For more than a month, he was in a coma. Every time the phone rang, Lukas' stomach was in a knot.

"But I made a commitment then that we'd ride this out and put it back to No. 1," he said. "Maybe it was naive, but I never doubted he'd come back. Just his presence here means we have come full-cycle."

Jeff, 36, is not 100 percent, but he's back at the track in the mornings, sometimes on a pony beside his dad.

"I'm being patient and it's going in the right direction," Jeff said. "Little by little, it's coming together."

He has to use a handrail to climb two steps to an observation platform on the Churchill Downs backstretch. Vision is blurred in his right eye.

"My desire is to be on a full schedule," Jeff said. "I have to take it one step at a time. The people who are taking care of that obviously don't want to overload me. So far it's gone OK, and I've definitely been ready to take each step."

Whatever Jeff's input, Lukas said, "We're a team again."

Team Lukas led the money standings for 10 straight years, but dropped to ninth last year. This year, with Preknash and Belmont winner Tabasco Cat leading the way, Lukas is in position for another title.

Lukas has saddled a record 10 Breeders' Cup winners, including three in 1988 — Gulch in the Sprint, Open Mind in the Juvenile Fillies and Is It True in the Juvenile. That year, Steinlen was second in the Mile and Winning Colors was nipped a nose by Personal Ensign in the Distaff.

"On paper, we're in better shape than '88," he said. "We're not going to win four obviously, but we are going to be competitive."

He has not saddled a Breeders' Cup winner since Steinlen in 1989, a streak of 18 straight losers.

Even though Flanders is the shortest-price morning line favorite at 6-5, Lukas gushes about Timber Country.

"I feel better about him than any other horse I've ever run in it," said the man who has saddled three Juvenile winners. "I think he's better than any of them. I think he's got more dimensions to him."

Timber Country has won three of his last four, including a half-length victory in the Champagne. Evansville Slew, unbeaten in five starts, is the second choice. A close third is Tejano Run, who won the Breeders Futurity by two lengths and comes from off the pace.

Flanders is unbeaten in four races, including a 21-length victory in the Frizette on Oct. 8. She has won three Grade I races by a total of 29 lengths.

"She's as good as any of them, but greatness comes in time," Lukas said.

Stormy Blues, beaten 3 1/4 lengths by Flanders in the Matron, is the second choice at 6-1 along with the Lukas-trained Serena's Song.

Devil His Due was to be favored in the Classic, but he drew the No. 14 post position and was made the second choice at 4-1. He has finished second in three straight Grade I races. Tabasco Cat, fourth behind Devil His Due in his last start, will break from No. 4.

Oddly, the favorites in the turf races will start from the outside. That is a much more difficult task for Lure in the Mile than it is for Paradise Creek in the $2 million Turf because of the extra half-mile. Mike Smith will not have much time before Lure, seeking an unprecedented third straight Breeders' Cup championship, reaches the first turn. Pat Day will have the entire backstretch to sort things out aboard Paradise Creek, who has won eight of nine starts this year.

The $1 million Sprint is the most difficult to handicap because it's a one-turn race with a bulky field. No favorite has won since Eillo in 1984. Soviet Problem is 7-2 because of a seven-race winning streak.

Sky Beauty and Hollywood Wildcat are co-favorites in the $1 million Distaff. Sky Beauty is perfect in five starts this year and Hollywood Wildcat has taken the same route as last year when she won the Distaff.

Attorney General Dan Morales faces opposition in his bid for re-election

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Criminal law enforcement is a small part of the state attorney general's job, but the issue looms large when election time rolls around.

Democratic incumbent Dan Morales, 38, even credits his 1990 election to his promise to bring a greater criminal justice emphasis to the office.

"Texans want their attorney general's office to be the chief law enforcement agency in the state," says Morales, a former Bexar County assistant district attorney and state legislator. "We have delivered, and now I would like to build on those successes."

Republican challenger Don Wittig, a state district judge in Houston, emphasized early in his campaign that the attorney general's office is

"the state's largest civil law firm."

But in a September campaign mailout featuring a convicted murderer's photo, Wittig accused Morales of having "caved in" to prison inmates in settling a federal prison lawsuit.

Wittig, 53, also has aired radio ads touting his experience as a military prosecutor in Vietnam.

"What does the public want to hear about? They want to hear about the death-row cases and they want to hear about the crime statistics, so that keeps us talking about it," Wittig says.

The third candidate on the ballot is different: Libertarian Vicki Flores of Dallas not only can't cite a background as a prosecutor, she isn't even a lawyer.

"The attorney general's office doesn't have a lot to do with crime out on the streets," said Mrs. Flores, 36. "I want to take a whole different look at the way the office has been running."

Flores, who has been an insurance underwriter and financial consultant, says she'd like a chance to apply her business skills to make the attorney general's office operate more efficiently.

The attorney general's office is mainly focused on civil matters, such as collecting delinquent child support payments, bringing consumer protection and environmental lawsuits, giving legal opinions and defending state laws when they are challenged in court.

But it also deals with appeals in death-penalty cases and other criminal justice matters, such as assisting local prosecutors and investigating local law enforcement officials accused of criminal activity.

There are 75 agency lawyers involved in criminal law enforcement under Morales, more than double the number before he took office, according to his staff.

That's out of 570 lawyers, including 209 in child support enforcement and the rest handling other civil matters.

Morales proudly cites settlement of the long-running federal lawsuit against the state prison system. Wittig says the agreement gave away too much and that he wants to reopen it as part of an effort to protect Texas against "federal encroachment."

"The sovereignty of Texas is the issue of the next decade and we're going to start by retaking the prisons," says Wittig.

In protecting the state's sovereignty, Wittig says the attorney general also should stand up for landowners in conflicts with the federal government over environmental matters.

Morales has filed a lawsuit accusing the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service of overstepping its authority in enforcing the federal Endangered Species Act.

But that move that drew criticism from some environmentalists and prompted an angry letter to the editor from one man who asked, "With Democrats like that, who needs Republicans?"

Wittig also has attacked Morales over his child-support collection efforts, saying the incumbent hasn't done enough to locate delinquent parents and garnish their paychecks.

Morales cites $1.3 billion-plus his office has collected in support payments during his tenure, compared with $18 million the first year the program was instituted in 1983.

The two also have tangled over campaign contributions.

Wittig first blasted Morales for accepting $75,000 from a man who wants to open a casino while considering whether a constitutional amendment is needed to legalize casino gambling in Texas.

Morales ended up ruling that an amendment is needed, making it more difficult for casino backers. Such an amendment requires two-thirds approval of the Legislature and voters' endorsement in a statewide election, rather than just a majority vote of lawmakers like other legislation.

In turn, Morales said Wittig has received more than half his political donations from lawyers with cases pending in his courtroom and that he should resign his judicial post to stay in the race. Wittig called that idea "ridiculous."

Mother to face murder charges for two sons in carjacking case

UNION, S.C. (AP) — The mother who said a carjacker dumped her on a lonely road and drove off with her two young sons in the back seat was arrested Thursday when the car was found in a lake with two bodies in it, police said.

Susan V. Smith, who had made tearful pleas on national television for the boys' return, is in custody and will be charged with two counts of murder, Union County Sheriff Howard Wells said.

The nine-day search for 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex, which stretched from Georgia to Seattle, ended where it began, in John D. Long Lake near where Smith told police a gunman forced her from the car Oct. 25 and drove away with the boys.

Hundreds of volunteers from the small town torn by the disappearances had combed the area. Divers had searched the lake several times during the past few days, and police cordoned off the area Thursday.

The identities of the bodies in the burgundy 1990 Mazda would have to be confirmed through an autopsy, Wells said, and Mrs. Smith was scheduled to be arraigned Friday.

He would not take questions and did not discuss a possible motive nor how investigators were led to the lake where the car was found. However, there had been several reports before the news conference that Mrs. Smith confessed.

Dozens of people crowded around the outside of the county courthouse and many gasped as Wells said she would be charged with murder. Several sobbed.

"If she didn't want those children, she could have given them to me or any other mother in Union. We would have taken them," said Karen Huss, the mother of two sons, ages 2 and 4.

On Wednesday, investigators searched Mrs. Smith's home and took away several bags. Authorities had refused to comment on what they were looking for. There also had been reports that Mrs. Smith had taken a lie-detector test and that the results were inconclusive.

Mrs. Smith told authorities an armed man jumped into her car at a stoplight in a sparsely populated area at the edge of town, ordered her to drive several miles, then forced her out and took off with her two sons still strapped in their safety seats.

"Our lives have been torn apart by this tragic event," she said earlier this week, her estranged husband, David, by her side. "I can't express how much they are wanted back home." David Smith asked people to pray for the boys.

The couple filed for divorce in September.

Mrs. Smith had been on her way to visit her friend, Mitch Sinclair, the night the children disappeared. Wells said earlier in the week that he was not a suspect.

The boys' disappearance prompted an outpouring of community sympathy in the northwestern South Carolina mill town. Hundreds of volunteers helped look for the boys and staged prayer vigils.

"No one asked the two babies whether they wanted to live or die," said Rose Marie Savage, the mother of a 3-year-old daughter. "Union used to be a close-knit town. Now things will never be the same around here."
